"WHAT?" the Raikage roared, upon hearing the news. "Killer B has been kidnapped!? Who!? How!? It was Akatsuki again!?"

K, the kumo Jonin delivering the news, was kneeling in front of the Raikage, his whole body trembling with fear, which became bigger as the Raikage's rage grew.

"Y-Yes, Raikage-sama," K confirmed. "We identified them as Deidara, from Iwagakure, and Kisame, from Kirigakure. My partner, J, stayed behind in order to follow them to their lair."

The third person present in the office, a dark skinned woman with pale blond hair, wearing a formal green kimono, while holding a few folders, spoke up.

"Kisame and Deidara... our spies told us those two were also behind the abduction of the Fourth Mizukage," the woman said.

"Who cares who did it, Mabui!" the Raikage roared, as he split his desk table in a single chop, sending several stack of papers flying, making K flinch, but the woman remained unfazed. "I want to know HOW THE HELL did they find Killer B's hiding place! That's after we rescue him! Mabui, gather a rescue team immediately! Put the best ninjas we have! Every other mission is secondary!"

Mabui merely sighed, and started to pick up all the papers her boss had scattered around the room.

"I shall do so as soon as we have word of J-san from Akatsuki's location," Mabui agreed with a nod, before turning at the quivering ninja. "K-san, is that all you have to report?"

"Yes, Mabui-san, Raikage-sama," the Jonin replied.

"In that case, you're dismissed," Mabui said, much to the Jonin's relief, who wasted no time and left the office as fast as he could. She then turned around, and saw her boss looking through the window at the village before him. His burst of rage appeared to have subsided. "Appeared" being the key word. "Raikage-sama... at the risk of sounding defeatist, there's a high chance that, by the time we track Killer B-san's location, it may be too late."

She could hear the Raikage sighing heavily. "I'm aware of that, Mabui. But I have to do everything in my hand to bring him home safe. Besides, it's not impossible. We know the Kazekage's brat was rescued from their grasp."

"Yes, but they did so at the cost of the Tailed Beast inside him," Mabui countered. "How the host managed to survive the extraction process is beyond me."

"I don't care about the Eight Tails in the slightest," the Raikage stated, as his hands clenched into fists. "I'm also going to make sure those bastards paid for what they did. For both B and Yugito!"

"Does that mean...?"

The Raikage turned around, and nodded. "Once you're done forming B's rescue team, summon other four teams and send them to each of the other four Great Villages. I'm going to summon a Kage Summit."

...

Konoha, Hokage's Office.

"Hey there."

The door of Jiraiya's office opened as somebody entered. Normally, nobody would be able to enter the office without Jiraiya's explicit approval. The Sannin only had to give the order, and the ANBU hidden around him would spring to action and either kick out the intruder, or if the situation demand it, swiftly remove their head from the rest of their body.

Naturally, all the people named Tsunade were exempt from such thing.

"Hey there," Jiraya echoed, though his greeting carried far less energy. The Hokage was now swamped in paperwork, due the chaos that Danzo's stunt had created in the village.

Tsunade pulled out a bottle of sake and a couple of small cups from under her haori.

"You look stressed," Tsunade observed, as she placed the bottle and cups in the desk, before moving a couple of stack of papers in order to make some room. "Do you want to take a break over a drink?"

"Yes. Yes please," Jiraiya sounded almost desperate.

Tsunade chuckled, as she poured some sake into the cups. "That bad?" the Slug Sannin asked.

"Even worse," Jiraiya said, groaning. "We managed to capture a lot of Danzo's cronies, but just as many escaped. We managed to follow his trail to Orochimaru's old lair in the Land of Sound just as Shisui said, but they had moved from there by the time the combat teams arrived. Danzo still has a moderate force under his command, and his alliance with Orochimaru and the Akatsuki exposed, he now presents a huge threat to the village."

"Boy, no wonder you're so stressed," Tsunade said, as she was about to pick her cup, but Jiraiya was faster and picked it first alongside his, before downing both of them in two big gulps. "Whoa, there! One was for me, you know!" Tsunade protested, as she went to refill the cups.

"Sorry, but like I said before, this is a goddamn nightmare," Jiraiya replied. "I know that guy was shady, but to think that his manipulations reached so far..."

"Why did you keep him running the black ops, then?" Tsunade asked. "Because, as far as I remember, not even sensei trusted him much."

"The main reason? Because after the Uchiha Insurrection, he was pretty much untouchable," Jiraiya told her. "He was the most vocal and distrustful of the Uchiha, so when they rebelled, they proved him right. If it wasn't for our fame, as well as sensei's former teammates not supporting him, he had a good shot at becoming Hokage."

"But then again, I should have kept him under a shorter leash. I was so focused on keeping Naruto safe and dealing with the Akatsuki that the thought that Danzo might have been overstepping his boundaries never crossed my mind," Jiraiya admitted, before he poured himself another cup of sake.

"You know, drinking on the job is not very Hokage-like."

"Yeah, as if you wouldn't do the same should you got the hat instead," Jiraiya said, as he downed the second cup. This time, however, he drank it slowly.

"I have to admit you got a point," Tsunade agreed with a shrug, as she drank from her cup as well. "Though I admit Shizune would have confiscated any alcohol I hid here."

Jiraiya shot his wife a knowing smirk. "Why do you think I decided to make her a Jonin-sensei? I don't think I'd be able to write my novels with her around all the time. Even if I do use clones to work faster on the paperwork."

"You cheeky bastard," Tsunade laughed.

"But yeah, thanks for this. These past couple of days have been a nightmare," Jiraiya said. "By the way, shouldn't you be in the hospital?"

"I should," Tsunade admitted. "But it's kind of a slow day, and I had the feeling that you needed some company."

"Bless your intuition," Jiraiya thanked, before downing another cup of sake. "How is Hagane? Any signs of improvement?"

Tsunade shook her head. "His constants are stable, and doesn't appear to be in any immediate risk. But he's still in a coma. Not even I know when he'll wake up."

Jiraiya sighed in resignation. "I see."

"What are you going to do with his team? Have you thought in placing a substitute?" Tsunade asked.

"For the time being, I put the team on stand-by, just in case Hagane wakes up.," Jiraiya said. "Plus I don't think Kaida and Hanabi would take kindly to a replacement so soon."

"Replacements are rarely welcomed, unless the team in question was unbelievably dysfunctional," Tsunade agreed. "Especially with Hanabi's kidnapping attempt still so recent. Thank goodness neither she nor the others were taken away for good."

"Man, that team is cursed. With Hanabi, now all three of them had been kidnapped at one point or another for their Bloodline Limits," Jiraiya observed.

"Not to mention what they did with their Jonin-sensei," Tsunade added. "Maybe we should have put them on different teams? Because so many powerful Bloodlimits on a single team is inviting for disaster..."

"If we spread them, we would only increase the number of targets on the back of our teams," Jiraiya countered, before changing the topic. "Also, how are the kidnapping victims? Are they okay?" Jiraiya asked.

"Rin and Hanabi are fine, thank goodness, as well as Shizune's kids," Tsunade said, her hand clenching into a fist when the still recent memory of her grandkids being abducted resurfaced.

"It seems Danzo instructed his drones not to harm the victims in any way, and lucky for us, they followed those orders as best as they could," Jiraiya said.

"Still, that makes little to soften their crimes," Tsunade replied, her face turning a little red. "The next time Danzo shows his face, I'm going to beat it so hard, not even the best surgeon will be able to rebuild it."

"I hope you don't mind if I join you, Hime," Jiraiya agreed. "First our kids, now our grandkids... man, given that he's with a Hyuga, I'm afraid to think what's going to happen when Naruto has kids of his own."

"Let's worry about that in the future," Tsunade said with a hand wave. "I'd be more worried if Naruto knocked up Hinata right now."

...

Naruto watched as Hinata held the baby in her arms, gently rocking her into a peaceful sleep. It was indeed, a really beautiful image.

"Boy, you're a natural," Naruto praised her.

"Well, given that my mom was busy running the clan, I had to help her a lot with raising Hanabi-chan," Hinata replied. "Though she wasn't this little when I got more involved in her upbringing."

"Still, seeing you like that makes me think you'd make an awesome mother," Naruto praised again.

"M-Mother?" Hinata stuttered, as her cheeks turned pink. "Naruto-kun, it's too soon for-"

"Haha, calm down! I don't mean now!" the blond laughed. "I mean in the far future, once we're done with all this shit."

"Oh. I guess I got carried away. Again," Hinata admitted, his blush receding, but not completely disappearing. "Yes, it would be wonderful if we had kids of our own one day. I think you'd also make for a great father, Naruto-kun."

"You think so? Thanks!" Naruto replied, grinning at her.

"Of course, you made a wonderful job taking care of your little siblings as well. They pretty much kiss the ground you walk on," Hinata said.

That moment, Haku entered the room. The Ice Ninja looked a bit exhausted.

"Okay, it took some time, but I managed to get Shiro-kun to sleep," Haku said, sounding a bit tired. "Did you guys expect to go back to do D-Rank missions after being promoted?"

Because that was exactly what they were doing. Not a personal favor to Naruto's surrogate sister, but an actual remunerated mission sanctioned by the Hokage. Shizune had insisted vehemently for a team of Jonin or Special Jonin to take care of her children from now onwards, and if possible, somebody who had her complete trust, such as Naruto and his friends. Despite the fact that Danzo's goons coming back for a second kidnapping attempt were pretty much minimal, Jiraiya was unable to make her change her mind.

"Let's hope Shizune-nee-chan doesn't get all overprotective of them now," Naruto said, shaking her head.

"Give her some time. It's only natural that she feels apprehensive right now given what happened," Haku replied. "Her and Shisui-san's failure in bringing down Danzo had to exacerbate her fear for her children."

"You know, I'm kind of happy that Shisui and Shizune-nee-chan failed to kill Danzo," Naruto said, much to Hinata and Haku's surprise.

"That way, I'll be able to do that myself. The bastard was leaking information on the jinchuriki to the Akatsuki. Not only Uta-kata and Rōshi could be very much alive right now, but you two almost died fighting against Pain, and Hagane is in a coma because of Toneri. Danzo's hands are stained by not only the blood of the jinchuriki, but of all the people who were wounded or killed by the Akatsuki he helped."

"I can't believe one of Konoha's esteemed elders was a traitor," Hinata murmured. "What does that say about us? About our village? To let such a monumental betrayal to happen?"

"You'd think that, after the Uchiha Insurrection was suppressed, other potential traitors would take the hint," Naruto grumbled. "Apparently, that wasn't enough."

"Given that he escaped, it's obvious that that man will come back to finish the job. Even if he might not try to kidnap Bloodline Limit possessing individuals, that man had a plan, and we better get prepared for when he comes back," Haku interceded, before he looked at Naruto. "Naruto-kun, did Hokage-sama told you anything about that man?"

Naruto shrugged, and slumped his shoulders. "Not much, dad hated his guts and didn't like to talk about him. All I know is that he and the Old Man Hokage used to be rivals, and always opposed any initiative that involved allying with another village, or strengthening the bonds we had with an already allied village. He was of the belief that alliances shouldn't be trusted, and that a friend today can become tomorrow's foe."

"What a jaded outlook on life," Hinata lamented. "Wonder what kind of experiences he went through to develop such a pessimistic view on humanity as a whole."

"Hearing that, it's a miracle that all of our alliances managed to survive like they did," Haku said.

"Hey, I'm remembering something," Hinata said. "Sakura-san and Ino-san talked about a socially awkward pale boy who was in ANBU and came with us to help Mei-san win the Civil War. Said boy turned out to be a Root agent working for Danzo. It is possible that Danzo sent him to sabotage any future relationship between both villages."

"Though it seems he didn't find the opportunity to do so," Haku concluded. "Fortunately for us."

"Wait... you mean that guy that hanged out with Ino all the time?" Naruto asked. "He was a Root agent? Did Ino know about that?"

"It appears that she did. I talked with Ino-san, and the reason they appeared to be so close is because Hokage-sama knew that boy worked for Danzo, and thought he could use Ino as a counter-spy," Hinata recounted. "Though I do believe Ino-san did develop feelings for that boy."

"Boy, now I understand why Ino met with dad on her own so often," Naruto said in realization. "It would have been another thing if it was her whole team, but Ino alone? And dad didn't tell me anything."

"He probably didn't want to risk any leaks," Haku interceded. "The less people know about a mission, the less chances the enemy has to learn about it."

"Guess that makes some sense..." Naruto grumbled in resignation, as he crossed his arms. After the Pain fiasco, he didn't take very kind to his adoptive father keeping secrets for him. Though he had to admit that in this case it was necessary. "I guess he's in jail right now?"

...

Torture & Interrogation Department, Underground Cells

Indeed, Sai was now locked inside a cell. While other people might have gone over all sort of emotions upon finding in such predicament, it wasn't Sai's case. He was a Root agent, he had long accepted that his life could end at any moment, and that it was preferable for him to die than let his enemies capture him and be interrogated.

"Yet I let Ino capture me," Sai mumbled aloud. "Why? Why did I do it? Was because I afraid to die? Or it was something else?"

Not that it mattered anymore. A team of Yamanaka, Ino among them, had already scanned every second of his memory in order to look information on Danzo. Not that they found much, since Sai, young as it was, wasn't exactly high in the Root hierarchy.

"Hey!"

Sai was snapped from his thoughts by the harsh voice of a lizard masked ANBU, who was standing in front of his cell door.

"Yes?" Sai asked.

"You have visit, traitor," the ANBU said, much to the pale boy'd surprise, before he opened the cell door, and Ino walked in.

"Whenever you're done, call for us, Yamanaka-san. And if he tries to attempt anything funny, shout and we will be here in an instant."

"That won't be necessary," Ino told the ANBU. "I already proven whose the stronger of the two. Besides, he's wearing chakra-suppressing manacles, right?"

"Even then, being cautious won't hurt," the ANBU said, before locking the door once Ino was inside. "I'll return in half an hour."

"Very well then," Ino said, before turning her eyes towards the prisoner. "Hello, Sai. How are you?"

"Good, I guess," the Root agent replied, sounding as calm as usual. He raised his head, and looked at Ino in the eyes. "Why are you here?"

"I wanted to talk with you," Ino replied, crossed his arms. "I thought you could figure as much?"

"I asked because every corner of my mind had already been scanned by both you and your clansmen working at T&I," Sai explained. "So you aren't going to learn anything new with a further interrogation."

Ino rolled her eyes, and let out a small groan. "I said I came here to talk, not to interrogate you."

"You wish to make small talk with me?" Sai asked, sounding genuinely curious.

"Not small talk," Ino said, growing exasperated.

"Then what?" Sai asked again.

"I want to understand you better. I want to know how somebody who went through the Root brainwashing thinks," Ino said. "So when the time comes, we will be able to undo it."

"So, you don't plan to execute me, nor any of my fellow Root agents?" Sai asked, genuinely surprised.

"No. We do know that your complicity with Danzo wasn't voluntary, at least for most of you," Ino explained. "Hokage-sama thinks that executing a ninja for the crimes of another is something morally reprehensible to do. And frankly, I agree."

"See? This is why Jiraiya isn't fit to be Hokage," Sai retorted. "Instead of disposing of his enemies, he lets them live, allowing them another chance to strike him down again."

"Or maybe allowing them a chance to see the error of their ways and turn a new leaf," Ino countered, as she crossed her arms.

"Sentimentalism has no room in a ninja village. A Hokage must do what's best for Konoha," Sai retorted.

"So that's it? That's how Danzo justifies acting behind the Hokage's back?" Ino asked.

"Yes. If the Hokage doesn't act in the interest of the village-

"And who decides that? You? Danzo? Does he know better than the Hokage?" Ino asked in rapid fashion. "Because that would be quite rich coming from a man that had always been passed over for the position when it had been vacant. Not to mention his alliances with sworn enemies of the village, like Orochimaru or the Akatsuki."

"Orochimaru and the Akatsuki were merely pawns in Danzo's plan. They would have been disposed once they no longer were of any use," Sai told her.

Ino rolled her eyes once again. "Yeah, Shisui learned as much from your boss. On top of being power-hungry, Danzo is also a fool that underestimates our enemies."

"Why are you here, Ino?" Sai asked, seemingly growing bored of the back and forth. "What are you planning to do? I won't change my mind."

"Yes. Yes you will," Ino replied, sure of herself. "Danzo didn't strip you of your whole humanity. There's still something there, buried between layers of brainwashing and mental conditioning. And I plan to bring it to the surface."

"How are you so sure?" Sai asked.

"Because if you were as much as a drone as Danzo hoped to make you, you wouldn't be alive," Ino replied. "Remember our fight? I littered the ground with explosive tags. You could have stepped on any of them, and end it. Hell, you could have tried to trigger as many as possible with the hope of taking me down with you."

Sai didn't say anything. He merely lowered his head, averting his gaze.

"You yourself told me that you didn't want to die, even if it's what Danzo would have expected out of you in such situation," Ino continued. "How does that make you feel, Sai? The fact that a man ordered your death against your wishes, simply because you failed your task?"

Sai remained silent. Ino then decided to play her last card.

"I know about Shin," she replied. This appeared to elicit some sort of reaction from Sai, but he quickly masked it.

"Of course you do. You scanned my mind," Sai dryly said.

"I know that you loved him like a brother," Ino continued. "And I know that you didn't take kindly when Danzo ordered the two of you to kill each other. Shin's illness solved the dilemma. But even then, without Danzo, the two of you could have lived. Tsunade-sama could have treated him. You must know that, and there's no way you can't not resent Danzo for it."

Once again, silence was Sai's response. Ino decided that that was enough.

"I see you're no longer in the mood for talking," Ino concluded. "I'll leave now. Though don't think for a second that I'm not coming back."

Ino called the ANBU outside to open the cell door, allowing her out before being closed again, leaving Sai alone with his thoughts.

...

Konoha Hospital

Despite the kidnapping attempt, Rin declined the Hokage's offer of a few spare days in order to recover from the experience, and decided to dutifully continue her job at the hospital. While being kidnapped is indeed a distressing experience, it kind of loses impact when you have been literally killed. Though then again, it wasn't even the first time Rin was kidnapped. She felt happy that this time she didn't end with a Tailed Beast sealed inside.

Then again, for Rin her job at the hospital was therapeutic, as the sheer monotony filled her with nothing but calmness, something she desperately craved after coming back to life.

The hours went by as she checked on the patients she had assigned with. She then noticed that the door of the patient she was about to check next was ajar. She knew that room, it was where the Hokage's youngest son was. Opening the door a little, she was relieved that the white haired boy was still there. There was also a brown haired man wearing the standard Konoha uniform sitting in a chair besides the bed.

"Um, hello," Rin said, as she entered.

The man turned around, and smiled a little. "Oh, hello there."

"I came here to check on Hagane-kun," Rin stated.

"Understood," the man said, as he stood up, and walked towards the door. "I'll come back later."

"You don't need to leave, you know," Rin said, as she walked towards the unconscious Hagane. "I'm not going to take that long."

"Oh, I see," the brown haired man said. "I'll make sure not to get in the way of your job."

"Thanks for your consideration," Rin said, as she started checking Hagane.

Just like the medic-nin promised, she didn't take long. Hagane didn't show any change. At the very least, he was stable. Hopefully he would wake up in some time. After that, she changed the intravenous drip bag for a new one, and updated the report on his status.

"Okay, done," Rin said.

"How is he?" the man asked.

"Same as yesterday, and as the past week," Rin replied. The man looked downcast. "At the very least, he isn't getting any worse."

"No. Guess that's something to be grateful about," the man agreed.

"By the way, may I ask you something?" Rin asked. The man nodded. "What are you to this boy? I don't think you're his family."

"You're right. I'm his Jonin-sensei. Name's Tenzo, by the way," the man, Tenzo, introduced himself.

"Rin Nohara," the medic-nin replied, bowing her head a little. "I see. It has to be hard seeing your student in such a state."

"You have no idea," Tenzo sorrowfully replied. "There's no day in which I don't wonder what could have I done to save him. Because you have no idea what this kid went through. How he survived, I'll never understand."

Rin wondered how Minato-sensei felt when he heard about what happened to Obito and later herself. She was there when Kakashi told him the outcome of the mission of Kanabi Bridge. When he heard the news, the man merely smiled, and told them: "Obito's death is indeed tragic, but I'm glad that you two came out alive."

At first, Rin thought that reaction was cold. But then he realized that Minato was merely masking his emotions in order not to upset them any further. Only Kushina knew how he truly reacted: spending the next night crying, and blaming himself for Obito's death.

"You said your name was Rin Nohara?" Tenzo asked. "As in, Kakashi-senpai's teammate?"

"The one who came back from the dead, yes," Rin replied. It seems like that was becoming her most prominent identity trait, regardless how much she liked it. It wasn't until a few seconds that Rin noticed the way the man addressed Kakashi. "You said 'Kakashi-sempai'?"

"Yes, from our days at ANBU," the man replied. "I don't know if Kakashi-sempai told you, but he became an ANBU for a few years after your tragic loss."

"I see," Rin said. "And no, he didn't tell me anything. I think talking about that period of his life causes him pain, and honestly, I can see why."

"Say, this may sound a bit sudden but, do you have a moment to talk with me?" Tenzo asked. "I've been wanting to talk with you about certain topics, but I never had the chance."

"Well, you have me here. Now's your chance," Rin said, smiling.

"I'd prefer if we went to talk somewhere else," Tenzo said. "Say, care to join me for a walk? The park behind the hospital would be a perfect place for a little talk."

"Okay. I think I could use a break," Rin said, as she and Tenzo left the room together.

A few minutes later, they arrived at the park. Given the time of the day, it was mostly deserted. And quiet, very quiet, with only the chirping of the birds filling the air. Maybe that's why Tenzo chose it. Something Rin deeply appreciated. Tenzo then started to walk towards the grass, and much to her confusion, started to make hand seals.

Then, to her even greater confusion and now shock, a bench of wood emerged from the ground. Tenzo took a seat, and motioned Rin to sit as well.

"As you can see, Rin-san, we have something in common that make us... few of a kind," Tenzo said.

Rin didn't say anything, and merely sat besides him, her eyes still wide open.

"I guess you're probably wonder how I got Wood Release," Tenzo said.

"Y-Yes," Rin replied, stammering a little.

"Do you know Orochimaru of the Sannin?" Tenzo asked.

"Yes, Jiraiya-sama and Tsunade-sama's other teammate," Rin explained. "I know he's a missing-nin now. Did he have something to do with your Wood Release?"

"It was thanks to him that I got this power," Tenzo said. "Orochimaru gathered sixty small children, orphans all of them so nobody would miss them, and tried to splice their genes with the First Hokage's cells. Of the sixty babies, fifty nine died. I'm the only lucky one who not only survived, but developed Wood Release."

Rin brought her hands to her mouth in horror. "That's... terryfing..."

"And that was only the beginning," Tenzo said with a nod. "Shortly before the Third and his forces could dismantle Orochimaru's secret lab, Danzo arrived first, found that I was alive, and took me under his wing, in order to train my power."

"So... you were a member of Root?" Rin asked.

"Yes. It wasn't a part of my life I cherished the most," Tenzo replied.
"Thankfully, Kakashi managed to rescue me from that life."

Tenzo told Rin how his team clashed with Kakashi and other ANBU a few times, and Kakashi found about Tenzo's Bloodline Limit. Kakashi was able to convince Tenzo to abandon Root and join actual ANBU under his guidance.

"I wondered why Danzo never bothered to send any agents to take me back," Tenzo said, as his gaze fixed into the blue sky above. "But then again, given that both your and Kaida's Wood Release is far more refined than mine, I can see why he decided to pass me over. Not that I'm complaining."

"I knew that Danzo had spies following my moves," Rin revealed.
"But I didn't know he'd be bold enough to kidnap me like they did."

Tenzo opened his eyes wide in surprise. "Come again? How did you know that?"

"Ino Yamanaka warned me," Rin replied. "During the wedding, she took me to give a short walk. Using her telepathy, she warned me that Danzo had several agents shadowing me, in hopes to acquire some of my DNA."

"While many people in Konoha wanted to replicate the First's Wood Release, Danzo was especially fixated with the ability," Tenzo mentioned. "And given what Shisui-san and Shizune-san told us, now we know why."

"There's something I don't understand," Rin said, as she grabbed the hem of her skirt. "Why did the Hokages let this happen? Why did they let Danzo do as he pleases? Why did they let him have his own army not loyal to Konoha or the Hokage, but him?"

"Because Root is Konoha's Black Ops division," Tenzo replied. "Root carried missions that were beneficial to the village, but that the Hokage couldn't be seen approving. That's why Root members hide their identity, and don't wear headbands or any other symbol that may trace them here."

"But why?" Rin repeated.

"Imagine this," Tenzo replied. "The Fire Lord has a new councilor. Said councilor has a very poor view of ninjas, and is trying to convince the Fire Lord to cut our budget. All our attempts at swaying the Lord to our side fail. That's where Root enters. A few agents would infiltrate him, and kill the councilor. However, they would also make it sure the death was an accident, or frame a third party in order to deflect suspicions."

"That's... awful," Rin said, grimacing in disgust. "I can see why our budget is important, but resorting to assassination of a Lord's councilor..."

"It's the dark side of the ninja world, Rin," Tenzo said, sighing a little. "That's why Danzo was called the Darkness of the Ninja. Because he took the duty of carrying all that darkness on his back. That's why the Hokages never bothered him much and let him do his thing as long as he brought results. Danzo's job was something nobody else wanted to do, and it benefitted the village, so the Hokages were eager to turn a blind eye on him."

Rin's opinions of the past Hokage quickly plummeted. Even if his reign was short lived, she even wondered if Minato-sensei was aware of all the shady stuff Danzo did, and if he purposefully ignored it, or worse, approved of it.

"Albeit, in the light of these past events, that was a mistake," Tenzo continued. "I'm sure that Jiraiya-sama will close Konoha's Black Ops branch for sure."

"At least something good is coming out from this debacle," Rin replied. As a realization dawned upon her, she turned her gaze at Tenzo once again. "By the way, you worked under Danzo, right? You must know about his lust for power and all the stuff he was doing behind the Hokages' back."

"I did," Tenzo admitted. "But who was going to believe me? Danzo was one of Konoha's elders, and a personal friend of the Third. And given his open distrust of the Uchiha, his reputation only grew after the failed insurrection. He used it as a way to criticize the Third's way to rule the village, but thankfully he didn't gather enough support to claim the Hokage's hat. And thank goodness, Jiraiya-sama proved to be a popular and competent Kage."

"Still, given that Danzo is out there, I don't think he's going to give up his ambition of a Konoha under his rule," Rin stated.

Tenzo nodded. "That's for sure. Let's hope Jiraiya-sama makes his priority his capture and execution."

"Let's hope," Rin echoed, before standing up. "Sorry to end out chat here, but I need to go back to work. It was nice to meet you, Tenzo."

"The feeling's mutual, Rin-san," Tenzo said, standing up as well. "If you ever want to talk, I'm always willing to listen."

...

Downtown Konoha, Afternoon

After spending the whole day with training with her students, and bidding them goodbye as each other returned to their respective homes, the black haired medic-nin did the same. She couldn't wait to arrive home and spend some quality time with Shisui and their children. The training had left her legs a little sore, and she hoped that Shisui would be eager to give her a massage. Then again, Shisui was always eager to do anything if it involved touching a part of her body.

"Though, if she does a good job, I'll give him a little reward," Shizune said, as she smiled to herself. "Maybe I could be the one handcuffed to the bed this time around..."

Shizune's kinky thoughts were dispelled when she saw something from the corner of her eye that caught her attention. Looking to the side, she saw her friend Kurenai, sitting alone in a bar, drinking and looking miserable. As the red eyed woman's friend, Shizune's conscience insisted in seeing what was wrong with the Genjutsu Mistress.

"I guess Shisui is home already, so no harm if I arrive a little late," Shizune decided, as she stepped inside the bar, and sat near Kurenai. If Kurenai noticed her presence, the raven haired woman didn't make it evident. "Hey."

"Hey," Kurenai weakly replied, as she emptied her glass.

"So..." Shizune began, as she fidgeted with her fingers, hoping to board the topic with a modicum of tact. "I saw you here all by yourself, and decided that you could use some company."

"Guess I could," Kurenai said, her voice carrying a little slur. "Another-"

Shizune grabbed Kurenai's hand, interrupting her, and shook her head. "Better not. Whatever's the problem you're having, I'm sure drinking won't be the solution."

"I'm not drinking to solve the problem," Kurenai retorted. "Mostly because this problem has no solution at all."

"Come on, I'm sure it's not that bad," Shizune insisted. "A few hours ago, my babies were in the hands of Root ninjas, yet now they're safe at home. So come on, tell me."

"If you insist," the dejected Kurenai replied. "Do you remember that, before Naruto and the others, I used to have another student? A girl with a Bloodline Limit related to genjutsu?"

"Yes. The one who descended from this ancient clan, right?" Shizune said, as she remembered. "She died in a fire some years ago, didn't she?"

"No, she didn't," Kurenai dryly stated.

"Wait, what?"

"She was there, during the raid," Kurenai said. "One of Danzo's goons. It was her. I would recognize that kind of genjutsu anywhere... the one capable of fooling even an Uchiha..."

Shizune brought her hands to her mouth. "Oh my god... I'm... I'm so sorry, Kurenai..."

"Here I thought that since they didn't find her body, Yakumo was okay," Kurenai slurred, sounding depressed. "That she started over somewhere else... because, hey, if Rin came back after having her chest impaled, then anybody can come back from the dead! And now I got my wish. And now I wish she had died during that fire. Because anything's better than being one of Danzo's slave drones."

"Come on, don't say that," Shizune said, placing a hand on Kurenai's shoulder. "I'm sure we can rescue her, and undo whatever brainwashing Danzo put her through."

"You're quite the optimist, aren't you, Shizune-chan?" Kurenai asked, her lips forming a sad smile.

"I have to, if you ever want to survive living with Tsunade-sama," Shizune replied, as she stood up, and forced Kurenai to do the same. "Now come on. First, we'll get you out of here and back home with your family. And tomorrow, we will talk with Hokage-sama about that Yakumo girl, okay?"

...

Senju Residence, Nighttime

"So, how was your day, Naruto?" Tsunade asked.

Tsunade, Jiraiya, Naruto and Kaida were having dinner together. They've been eating in silence for quite some time, until the blonde Sannin decided to start a conversation in order to lighten the mood a little.

"Kind of peaceful, may I said. Back then I used to hate D-Rank missions," Naruto replied. "But taking care of Shizune-neechan's kids was rather relaxing."

"Yes. After putting your life on the line against the Akatsuki so many times, it's only natural that you appreciate something far less nerve-wracking," Jiraiya said. "And speaking of nerves, I need to find a way to calm Shizune down. I don't want her to blow her money hiring Jonin every day she needs a babysitter."

"Jiraiya, somebody tried to kidnap her children. Be a little more understanding," Tsunade chastised her husband. He should know better than anybody how does that feel. "Plus her children are way too little now. It's not like our kids, who can defend themselves now."

"Just give her time, dad," Kaida chimed in. "I'm sure she'll get better over time."

"Guess that's the only thing I can do, until a better idea presents itself," Jiraiya admitted. "Though, I do hope that you don't get used to doing D-Rank missions much. There's still one jinchuriki left besides Fu and yourself that needs to be saved from Akatsuki."

"You can bet I didn't forget about that," Naruto replied. "In fact, the babysitting mission gave me some time to think, and I came up with an idea to strengthen our forces."

"Really? I'm all ears then, son," Jiraiya said, visibly interested. He also got Tsunade's attention as well.

"Given how powerful Sage Mode is, is there a chance to teach it to more people?" Naruto asked. "I'm sure there are quite a few Jonin on Konoha with good chakra control and large chakra pools."

Jiraiya's interest was instantly replaced with mild disappointment. "Naruto, if it was that easy, don't you think I wouldn't have tried to do that already?"

"Senjutsu can only be learned from the summoned animal tribes. Humans are naturally incapable of feeling nature chakra," Tsunade explained. "However, the animals have a way to make humans receptive to nature energy. The toads have their special oil, the slugs have their springs."

"How do you know that, mom?" Naruto asked.

"Because I'm a Sage too," Tsunade replied, much to Naruto's shock. The Sannin frowned upon seeing Naruto's surprised expression. "What? Sure, at first I wasn't very interested in learning it given that senjutsu is not that useful in a hospital, but after your father returned to Mount Myoboku to complete his training... I wasn't going to fall behind him!"

"So you went and learned an incredibly ancient difficult art to master, just to one-up dad?" an incredulous Kaida asked, before she smiled approvingly. "Yeah, I would have done the same."

"But you still don't have a way to make my idea possible, do you?" Naruto asked.

"The hardest part of your idea would be to give the new apprentices a taste of nature energy. That's what the oil or the springs are for," Tsunade replied. "Once done, the human body can sense and gather nature energy without any external help."

"Damn," the blond cursed, as he slumped into his chair, dejected. "Guess that this isn't as easy as when Hinata-hime and I did that..."

Naruto trailed off, as an idea formed inside his mind. His eyes grew wide, and his lips curved into a huge smile. "Of course, that's it!"

"What is it?" Jiraiya asked.

"Quick, dad, summon Pa right here! I know how my idea can work!" an excited Naruto said, almost in a shout.

...

Kumogakure, Raikage's Office, Next Day

As expected, the news of Killer B's capture by the Akatsuki hit every ninja in Kumogakure like a sledgehammer to their hearts, especially so soon after Yugito's own abduction. Still, other than the Raikage himself, nobody took it worse than Karui, Omoi and T, Killer B's students.

"No, it can't be..." Karui cried, her hands flying to her mouth. T quickly went to comfort her.

"This is terrible. Way more terrible than any scenario I can imagine..." Omoi said, also shedding some tears as well.

"W-What are we going to do now, Raikage-sama?" T asked.

"For the time being, the only thing we can. While I have my best Hunter-nin tracking Killer B's whereabouts, I'm going to summon a Kage Summit in order to deal with the threat of Akatsuki," the Raikage stated. He then walked towards Karui and handed her a scroll. "You three shall go to Konoha, and give this to the Hokage personally."

"We won't fail you, Raikage-sama," Karui said with a nod. She wiped her tears, put the scroll inside a pocket on her skirt, and turned towards her two teammates. "Raikage-sama tasked us with a mission of utmost importance. We shall not fail him. To Konoha, now!"

Omoi and T nodded, and followed their now unofficial leader out of the Raikage's office.

...

Akatsuki Lair, Unknown Location

Turns out, even with Orochimaru's absence, the sealing ritual had ended way sooner than any of the Akatsuki had anticipated.

"Hehe, funny," White Zatsu laughed.

Because while they were sealing the Eight Tails, "Killer B" burst into smoke, leaving an octopus tentacle in his place. Zetsu's laugh was followed by a deadly silence, as everybody tried to make sense of what just happened. Pain looked into Kisame and Deidara's general direction.

"What's the meaning of this?" the Akatsuki leader asked. He didn't raise his voice, but they could tell that it was full of anger.

Again, neither the Kiri nor Iwa missing-nin replied, at least not immediately. Kisame appeared to be just as amused as Zetsu, while Deidara seemed to be frozen in place.

"Well, it seems that that cheeky bastard pulled our legs," Kisame replied, letting out a chuckle.

"That... that..." Deidara said, his voice trembling.

"Hm? Did you say something, Deidara-san?" Kisame asked, looking at the blond artist.

"That... THAT SON OF A BITCH!" Deidara's scream echoed through the underground cavern. "How dare that scumbag mock me! How dare he mock my art! When I find him again, I'm going to BLOW HIS ASS TO KINGDOM COME!"

"Unfortunately, Deidara, your revenge will have to wait," Pain interceded.

"What are we going to do now, Pain? Do you have a plan?" Konan asked. "Because the jinchuriki could be pretty much anywhere now."

"Zetsu," Pain said, looking at the plant-man. "Your task will be to track the jinchuriki of the Eight Tails. Everything else is secondary."

"Including finding Orochimaru?" the black half asked, just to be sure.

"Yes. We can afford to ignore Orochimaru for the time being, but we can't do the same with the remaining jinchuriki," Pain explained.

"Alright. The trail might be a bit cold, but I'll do my best to find him," the white half said, as his astral projection vanished.

"What about us?" Toneri asked. "What we should we do until Zetsu-san finds the Eight Tails?"

"I was planning to capture the jinchuriki of the Seven and the Nine Tails once we were done with the Eight Tails, but we can't wait any longer," Pain said. "We must capture them, and seal them as soon as possible."

"Konoha is very protective of their jinchuriki, especially in the eyes of our recent actions," Kisame said. "Who are going to be the lucky ones to infiltrate Konoha?"

"All of us," Pain replied. "And it won't be an infiltration. We will launch an open attack on Konoha, crush anybody who stand in our way, and take the jinchuriki by force."

"Yes. The time of being subtle has passed," Obito agreed, speaking for the first time. "We'll attack Konoha in two days. I'll pick you up when the time for the attack comes. Make sure you're ready by then."

And one by one, all the Akatsuki astral projections vanished, leaving Deidara and Kisame alone with the Eight Tails' tentacle.

Author's Note: Yep, the Pain Invasion comes next! Though it should be named Akatsuki Invasion, given that the entire organization is taking part.

I already knew from quite some time that I couldn't have just Pain storm Konoha alone. Konoha in this fic has three Sages, three Wood Release users, three Mangekyo Sharingan wielders and two Tenseigan wielders. Pain is going to need the entirety of Akatsuki behind his back if he wants to make a dent on this Konoha. And originally, the attack was also going to include Orochimaru as well, though I had to remove him from Akatsuki earlier than intended due plot related reasons.

Not that I complain, since I always wanted to see while maybe not all, at least a good chunk of Akatsuki operating in a large group. And while I can understand why the manga never did such a thing, I never read a fanfic in which something like that happened. And following the very first writiding advice I got, "write a story you'd like to read", I decided to do that myself. It was an herculean task, but I'm quite content with the end result.

Also, despite the fact that, in my opinion, I made it pretty obvious, this chapter does finally confirms that no, Killer B hasn't been captured, and pulled the same stunt he did in canon.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

The entirety of Akatsuki is gunning down for Naruto and Fu. Will they add another victory to their winning streak? Or will Konoha win this time around? Share your thoughts on both this chapter and the arc to come in a review. Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Sage Training

Author's Note: So, a more relaxing chapter before hell is unleashed upon Konoha. Still, despite being a breather, this chapter has some important plot developments. Enjoy:

Chapter 82:

Sage Training

or

Becoming a Sage is such a headache

Training Ground Twenty Five

Naruto inspected expectantly the small group of people his father had gathered for his little project. All of them people with very large chakra reserves, as well as minute chakra control. Interestingly, the majority of the group were girls: Shizune, Hinata, Hanabi, Fu, Karin and Rin. The only men present were Asuma and Shisui.

Besides Naruto was Fukasaku, who was also eyeing the group with a critical eye, silently judging if these apprentices had the potential to become Sages. When Jiraiya summoned him, and Naruto told him his plan to teach other people Senjutsu without having to sign the Toad Summoning Contract (or any other contract for that matter) the elder toad was skeptical, but decided to help the blond with his endeavor.

Only time will tell if Naruto was right or not.

"Alright, is everybody here? I think so," Naruto said, as he cracked his knuckles. "Hello, and welcome to 'Learning Senjutsu like a Pro'! I'm Naruto Uzumaki, your sensei!" Naruto said, as he grinned widely, and gave the group a thumbs up.

"Um... Naruto-kun?" Hinata spoke. "I think everybody here knows you."

"Yeah, can we start with the Sage thing already?" Hanabi impatiently asked.

"Agreed. I mean, I was so happy when you said that you could teach us in the end, after telling us first that you couldn't" Fu chimed in.

"What changed your mind?"

"You'll see soon," Naruto said. "Now, everybody sit down, forming an horizontal line!"

Everybody nodded and did so. Once they were all sat on the ground, Naruto started to walk around them.

"You see, Senjutsu consists in gathering the energy of nature. Energy from the air, the earth, the grass, trees, plants, mountains... you get the gist," Naruto started to explain. "And mixing it with your own chakra. To do so, you must feel the nature energy around you, and pull it inside your body. Once you do it, your bodies will be stronger and far more resilient, your jutsu will pack more power, and you'll be able to sense your surroundings as if you were a sensor. Now, let's do a small demonstration."

Naruto sat down and started to gather nature energy. Meanwhile, much to everybody else's confusion, Fukasaku grabbed a rather large sealing scroll, and unsealed its contents: several large toad statues, thrice as tall as a human being, with a weigh of a couple tons each. In a few minutes, Naruto entered Sage Mode, and walked towards one of the statues.

"Now, behold!" Naruto said, as he placed his hands under the statue. With a mighty heave, the blond lifted the massive statue above his head as if it weight nothing. "See? And this is nothing but the tip of the iceberg!" he said, before letting the statue down again.

There was a chorus of "ohhh" and "whoa!", except Fu, who grumbled something that sounded like "I can do that too."

"So, now that you see what Sage Mode can do, let's get to work!" Naruto enthusasitically said. "First, you must learn to sense and gather nature energy!"

Shisui raised his hand. "Naruto-sensei? How do we do that? Because I'm not feeling anything."

"Yeah, me neither, and I'm a sensor!" Karin agreed.

"That's why I was unable to teach you Sage Mode at first. You can only feel nature energy once it has been inside your body," Naruto explained.

"But in order to do so, you must feel it to begin with," Rin concluded. "It's a circular problem."

"In order to solve that problem, we Myoboku Toads use a special oil that, when anointed on the skin, makes the body to draw nature energy on its own. It's used to both give a human a first taste of nature energy, as well as to help the body keep it under control. Unfortunately, said oil can't be taken out of Mount Myoboku, as it instantly evaporates outside of it."

"However, my brilliant mind developed a solution!" Naruto proudly boasted, and clapped twice. Two clones landed besides him. Said clones were in Sage Mode, given the golden eyes and orange pigmentation around them. "Given that I'm an universal chakra donnor, I can gather nature energy, then pass it to anybody."

"That's a pretty clever idea, Naruto-kun!" Hinata praised. Naruto beamed with pride.

"Yeah, why didn't you think about it earlier? We could all be Sages by now!" Hanabi protested. Naruto instantly deflated, his triumphant smile replaced by a grimace of embarrassment.

"However, nature energy, if left uncontrolled, can be extremely dangerous!" Fukasaku said, bringing the topic back in track. "If not properly mixed with your own chakra, you'll suffer horrible mutations!"

"M-Mutations?" Shizune stuttered. "What kind of mutations?"

"You'll turn into a toad," Naruto casually say.

"WHAT!?" everybody yelled in unison.

"And that's not the worst part. Then, you'll turn into a statue," Naruto continued. "Permanently."

Suddenly, everybody's eyes drifted towards the bunch of toad statues that Fikasaku had brought for the training. Everybody thought that they were just to test their newfound strength, but suddenly their presence took a very sinister meaning. Guessing what they were thinking, Naruto and Fukasaku nodded at them, much to their chagrin.

"This isn't worth it!" Karin said, as she stood up, ready to leave. "I'm not going to risk being turned into a statue! Or worse, a toad!"

Naruto quickly cut Karin's escape, placing himself in front of her. "Whoa, there, calm down!" Naruto reassured, holding his hands up defensively. "We do have the means to stop that from happening. Pa?"

The old toad nodded, and produced a large black staff from under his cloak.

"This special staff here can force somebody to release all their gathered nature energy at once," Fukasaku said. "So the moment I see one of you starts to mutate, I'll reverse it before it's too late."

"Now, that's convenient," Asuma observed. "But I'm not going to complain. How does it work?"

"He hits you in the head with it," Naruto said, as he instinctively rubbed his head. Asuma raised an eyebrow. "Really, really hard."

"Now that we've covered the basics, let's begin the training!" Fukasaku stated. "First, Naruto-chan will transfer you some nature energy, so you can experience how it feels firsthand!"

The clones nodded, and they started to do what Fukasaku said, one by one. As the nature energy was transferred, small marks started to appear around their eyes. The amount transferred was enough to let them feel the energy around them, but not that much as to risk turned into a toad.

"Can you feel it now?" Fukasaku asked. "All the energy around you. In the air you breathe, the grass you're sitting on, the ground below it, the trees around us..."

"Yes... YES! Now I can feel it!" Shizune said. "This sensation is amazing!"

"Whoa, this is nothing I've ever felt before!" Karin said. "I can feel my sensorial abilities growing even stronger!"

"Yes, Senjutsu grants its user sensorial abilities by default, so it's normal that it would increase those of sensors," Naruto said, nodded.

"Good! Now that you have a taste of nature energy, try to draw it yourselves!" Fukasaku instructed. "In order to do so, you need to be perfectly still!"

"You can speed the process with Shadow Clones," Naruto helpfully added. "Though for the time being, use just one. Alright, let's see how well you guys mix nature energy with your chakra!"

...

Training Ground Eight

Since Naruto and Hinata were busy doing Senjutsu training, Kurenai and Haku continued their team's usual training routine on their own. Given that they were just the two of them, they decided it was a good opportunity for them to continue Haku's genjutsu training. Right now, sensei and student were engaged in a battle of illusions, creating images inside the other's mind until one of them would give up. Though for an external observer, it would just look like Haku and Kurenai were merely standing in front of each other with their hands forming a seal.

The battle finally came to an end when Haku fell to one knee. Even if their duel only lasted a couple minutes, it felt like hours for them.

"Not bad, Haku," Kurenai praised the Ice Ninja. "You're getting better each day. I think that you're only a few months away from beating me."

"It didn't feel like that," Haku said, heaving a little, before standing up once again.

"Well, I do have more experience than you," Kurenai said. "But trust my word. You're both talented and a fast learner. The time in which I will have nothing left to teach you draws near."

"I'll try to measure up to our expectations then, sensei," Haku said with a nod.

Kurenai walked to a nearby tree, and sat under the shadow of its canopy.

"Come on, let's take a rest here before we continue, okay?" the Genjutsu Mistress said.

Haku just nodded, and sat besides her. They spent a few minutes in comfortable silence, with only the chirps of the birds and the sound of a cool breeze filling the air. Even if Haku hated to interrupt such peaceful calm, he felt the need to ask something to the red eyed woman.

"Say, Kurenai-sensei... I see that you've been pushing yourself a lot lately," Haku observed. "Your genjutsu were far more intense than usual."

"Why, of course," Kurenai replied with a nod, as if Haku had stated something obvious. "Just because I'm a sensei doesn't mean there's no more room for improvement. Especially with what's going to come in the near future."

"Root?" Haku asked. Kurenai merely nodded with a soft grunt. "Is this also because of... Yakumo Kurama?"

Even if Haku couldn't see it, the light from Kurenai's eyes dimmed a little. The raven haired woman closed her eyes and nodded sadly. After the raid had ended, Kurenai had told Naruto, Hinata and Haku that the masked genjutsu user working for Danzo was Yakumo. Or a member of her clan, but given that she was the only one alive who manifested such brand of genjutsu, there were no other options.

"Do you feel it's your responsibility to take her down, sensei?" Haku asked.

"It's my fault that she is in such predicament to begin with," Kurenai replied. "I was her sensei. I should have protected her. Yet I let Danzo fool me into thinking she was dead, and poor Yakumo ended the paying the price."

"Sensei, what happened to her, while tragic, can't be your fault," Haku rebutted. "You told us that the fire happened in her house at night. You weren't there to protect her. There was nothing you could have done."

"Maybe I could have insisted more in searching her, given that her body was never found, with good reason," Kurenai said. "But I do know that wallowing in past mistakes solves nothing. What matters is what I can do now. And what I can do is rescue her from Danzo's clutches."

"Remember that you're part of the Assault Squad, Kurenai-sensei," Haku reminded her. "Don't doubt for a second that Hinata-san, Naruto-kun and myself won't hesitate to be at your side when the time to face Yakumo arrives."

Kurenai chuckled softly at Haku's eagerness to help.

"I'd say this is something that I have to do myself, but I've been your sensei for far too long to know that you're going to get involved, no matter what," Kurenai replied, leaning her head back against the tree's trunk.

"Given what we plan to do, it should be wise if you told us about Yakumo's abilities," Haku said. "And most importantly, how to counter them."

"Sure. Though keep in mind that Danzo has been training her for more years than I've been training you," Kurenai warned. "Her abilities had probably grown way beyond what I remember of them."

"Still, it's better than nothing," Haku insisted. "It will give us a base to fight her, and we'll know what to expect."

"Alright," Kurenai nodded. She cleared her throat, before starting her explanation. "The Kurama Clan were ninjas specialized in genjutsu, thanks to a Bloodline Limit of theirs. Said Bloodline only manifested once every few generations, but once it did, it was extremely easy to recognize it. One of the hints is such a prowess in genjutsu so absolute, training is barely needed to..."

...

Training Ground Twenty Five

Back with Naruto, the blond jinchuriki and Fukasaku continued to oversee the Sage trainees. As expected, they were having a lot of trouble properly keeping the nature energy under control, and mutations were common.

TWACK!

"OW!" Shizune whined, as she rubbed her head. "Naruto-kun, I think you're enjoying this too much!"

"Hey, I'm doing this for your own good!" Naruto replied, with a cheeky grin, as he tapped the anti-senjutsu staff against the palm of his other hand. Thankfully, Fukasaku had more than one, so Naruto could use several clones to keep watch over the trainees. "You don't want to be a toad, do you?"

Shizune grumbled, and went back to the exercise.

TWACK!

"OUCH!" Karin shouted. "Do you need to hit that hard?"

"Hey, if you want to stay a toad for the rest of your life, just tell me," another Naruto replied.

TWACK!

TWACK!

TWACK!

Soon, the air was filled by loud protest of the indignant -and very sore in the head- trainees, complaining about Naruto's forceful methods, while the blond and his clones tried to justify their actions. The argument was silenced by Fukasaku loudly whistling.

"Enough!" the old toad shouted. "Okay, I think it's time to take a break. You won't make much progress if you aren't calm down. Let's resume the training in half an hour."

The trainees nodded, and started to grumble among themselves as they got up and scattered across the nearby surroundings in order to find a good place to rest, and nurse their pained skulls. Naruto, meanwhile, dispelled all his clones.

"And you, Naruto-chan, should be more careful with the staff," Fukasaku advised in a firm tone. "A little tap on the head is enough to release all the nature energy gathered."

"A little tap on the head?" Naruto asked, now him being the one sounding indignant. "During my Senjutsu training, I'm sure you almost broke my skull!"

"Come on Naruto-chan, don't be such a complainer. A frail old toad like me lacks the strength to cause so much damage," Fukasaku said, shaking his head.

"Frail old toad my ass!" Naruto protested. "You showed me the power of Senjutsu by lifting a giant-ass statue!"

While Naruto and the elder toad argued about the latter's strength or lack thereof, Shisui and Shizune decided to rest together.

"Man, Naruto really needs another way to release that pent up energy," Shisui complained, as he rubbed his head. "Care to lend me your magic hands?"

The black haired medic-nin frowned. "Shisui... do not call them by that name out of the bedroom, understood?" Shizune asked, as she started to heal Shisui's sore head. "What if somebody heard you?"

"Oh come on, if they don't know the context, there's no way they can reach such conclusion," Shisui said, his grin being not so different from Naruto's when he was whacking them with the toad's staff.

As Shizune healed Shisui, she started to wonder how much more she'll have to endure Naruto hitting her in the head with that staff. While she never give much thought over never signing the Slug Summoning Contract, she was now regretting it. Tsunade had learned senjutsu under them, so it was possible. Plus it was probably much less painful.

It was then than a realization dawned upon her.

"Uh, Shisui?" Shizune asked. "Don't you have a summoning contract yourself?"

"Yeah. With crows," Shisui replied. "What about it?"

"Couldn't the crows teach you Senjutsu?" Shizune asked.

Shisui's eyes opened wide, and looked at Shizune as if she had confessed being unfaithful to him.

"Wait... the crows can do that!?" Shisui asked in shock.

"I mean, all summoned tribes can use senjutsu, and teach it to humans," Shizune explained. "That's how human Sages came to be. Didn't you know that?"

"No! Of course not!" Shisui shouted, completely indignant. His expression of shock was replaced by a mask of fury, as he clenched both fists, which were vigorously shaking. "They could have taught me Senjutsu all this time, and here I am, letting Naruto break my head open! Oh, those carrion gobblers have so much explaining to do!"

"Now, now, don't jump to conclusions, I'm sure they had their reasons," Shizune reassured. "Or maybe they can't teach senjutsu? Who knows."

As Shisui continued to complain about his summoned tribe, Rin was sitting by herself on the grass, looking at the clouds in the sky, hoping that the calm environment would relax her little. She needed to be relaxed in order to master Sage Mode. Too bad for her, she was about to meet somebody who was the complete opposite of "relaxing".

"Hello!" a loud, cheerful female voice said behind her.

Rin looked up, and saw a rather tall and muscular girl dressed in revealing white clothes, with tan skin and green hair, smiling brightly at her. Rin stood up, and turned to face the newcomer. While she knew who she was, she had never met the girl in person.

"Um, hi," Rin replied, as he wiped a strand of hair from her face.

"You're Rin Nohara, right?" the green haired girl said, as she extended her hand. "My name is Fu! Pleased to meet you!"

Rin smiled back, and shook her hand. Fu's handshake was as powerful as her muscular frame suggested. Fortunately, the medic-nin didn't end up with any broken fingers.

"I know who you are as well," Rin replied. "Shino told me about you. You're his girlfriend, right?"

"Damn right I am!" Fu proudly stated. "And hey, glad to see that Shino tells his friends about me, hehe! How do you know Shino, by the way? He mentioned you a few times, but he didn't specify how are you connected to him."

"I used to be his sensei's former teammate," Rin replied. "Until, well, I died. And then came back from the death."

"Yeah, they told me that. At first I thought that they were playing a prank of me, but they were really serious," Fu solemnly said, before her face brightened up again. "So, what did my little Shino told you about me? Good stuff, I hope!"

Rin chuckled lightly. "Nothing to worry about, that's for sure," Rin reassured. "So, you're from Taki, right?"

"Yep!" Fu replied again, turning aside so Rin could see the Takigakure forehead protector she had tied to her bicep. "Sadly, I need to be here until the whole Akatsuki threat passes. Then I can go back home."

"I guess that you may feel a little homesick, but at the very least, I hope you're enjoying your stay at Konoha," Rin gently said.

"Oh, sure! Konoha is awesome! Plus here I can be with my boyfriend and friends!" Fu beamed. "But there's no place like home, you know?"

"Oh, I can relate to that," Rin replied. "Though unlike you, I can't go back to my home."

Fu raised an eyebrow, and scratched a temple in confusion. "Wait, I thought you were from here?"

"It's less a matter of where, and more a matter of when," Rin punctualized. "I've been dead for more than fifteen years. During that time, Konoha and its people continued moving forward, and when I returned... the place I once called home was hardly recognizable."

"I see. Man, that has to suck. And here I am complaining for having to stay here for a few months," Fu said, shaking her head.

"No, you have right to complain, Your village was nearly destroyed, for Kami's sake!" Rin insisted. "Besides, even if it was kind of hard at the beginning, I'm getting used to it."

"Really?" Fu asked.

"The hardest part was to accept that the friends I used to know who were my age are now grown adults, while I'm still a teen," Rin told her. "Making new friends helped easing it. That's why I tried to befriend Kakashi's students. They've been really helpful with all this adapting to the future stuff."

"Any friend of Kiba, Tamaki and my Shino are friends of mine as well!" Fu loudly stated. "So if you ever need anything, or do you want to talk about something, don't be afraid to ask me, okay?"

"Sure. You seem like a pretty nice girl," Rin praised.

Fu giggled in return. "I want to have a hundred friends! And you can't make friends if you aren't nice, can you?"

"Guess there's no arguing against that logic," Rin replied, chuckling a little.

"It's always great to have one more person I can call a friend! So, now that introductions are out of the way... how are you going with this Senjutsu training?" Fu asked. "I was so happy when Naruto said that he could teach me Senjutsu after he told me first that he couldn't, but man, this is much harder than I expected!"

"It has to be. There's a reason as for why there are so few Sages," Rin replied. "I wonder if all of us here will be able to master it."

"Well, I won't rest until I master it, that's for sure! If Naruto can do it, then so can I!" Fu energetically declared. "That way, when those Akatsuki idiots come for me, I'll give them an even bigger ass whooping I gave to Kakuzu!"

"You seem determined. That's good," Rin praised, giggling as well.

"What about you, Rin?" Fu asked. "Any reason as for why you want to become a Sage?"

"Well... I'm mostly here because Hokage-sama asked me. I do have the requisites of large chakra reserves and good chakra control to become a Sage, and hey, whatever helps Konoha," Rin said with a weak smile, before her expression turned more solemn. "Though then, I realized that I also need this power to take down a certain somebody from Akatsuki."

"Akatsuki are after you too?" Fu asked, sounding even more interested. "Are you a jinchuriki as well?"

"No, I'm not a jinchuriki," she told Fu. "It's just... one of the Akatsuki used to be a friend of mine."

"Oh," was all what Fu could say. "That... has to suck a lot..."

"That's putting it lightly," Rin replied, shaking her head. "It was my death what pushed him into the group to begin with. And it was him who brought me back to life. That's why I feel... that I'm the one who has to take him down. Not to just stop him from harming others but... to stop his suffering as well."

"I hope you make him see reason," Fu replied. "Seeing one of my friends turning bad like that... I can't even imagine it..."

...

One of Orochimaru's Lairs, Undisclosed Location

"So, are you and your men ready to go?" Orochimaru asked.

The Snake Sannin was walking through his latest lair alongside somebody who had become a fellow missing-nin of Konoha, Danzo Shimura, whom Orochimaru was giving shelter for the time being.

"Indeed. Soon both me and my men we'll be out of your mind," Danzo promised the Sannin. "I guess I should thank you for your assistance before leaving."

"There's something you can do for me before you leave, if you're feeling as grateful as you say," Orochimaru replied, licking his lips.

"If it's within my power, I shall do it," Danzo said. "But keep in mind that my forces are still recovering. It will be a while before-"

"It's not something that requires physical effort," Orochimaru cut him. "Just a little information gathering."

Danzo didn't reply immediately, and shoot Orochimaru a scrutinizing stare. "What kind of information?"

"It came to my knowledge that you managed to acquire a substantial piece of DNA of a girl named Rin Nohara," Orochimaru began. "The girl Obito-kun resurrected, who was reborn with Wood Release, among other perks. Even if I held her in one of my hideouts for a short time, I was unable to get any DNA sample from her, as those annoying Zetsus never left her side. So tell me, Danzo, what did you find about that?"

"I see. It's only logical that such thing also drew your interest as well," Danzo replied, his tone remaining neutral. "It seems that the girl had her DNA spliced with one of those Zetsu things. That's where her Wood Release and regenerative powers come from. The way their DNA was combined surpasses anything either your or my scientists did so far."

Orochimaru's expression darkened. Danzo knew that it wasn't because of his jab, but because the Sannin couldn't stand that somebody was able to surpass him in a scientific field of his interest, and having no idea of how they did it.

"And were your scientists able to replicate the process?" Orochimaru asked, trying to hide his admittedly small frustration behind a veil of calmness.

Danzo shook his head. "They managed to use it as a base for some improvements over your work, but that's about it. Like I said before, whatever Obito did goes beyond you and me."

"Obito never had any background in human biology, am I right?" Orochimaru inquired. "And not just him. Neither his sensei nor teammates possessed such advanced knowledge of both biology and Hashirama's DNA to attempt something like that."

"You worked under him. I should be the one asking you that," Danzo shot back. "Though, I'm curious about the Zetsu creatures. You say that they follow Obito's orders?"

"Every single one of them," Orochimaru confirmed.

"It's safe to assume that those creatures are artificial beings, probably man-made using the same technology," Danzo concluded.

"And that whatever he used to resurrect the dead girl, was the same, or similar process to create those monsters."

Orochimaru rolled his eyes in annoyance. "I reached that conclusion as soon as I laid my eyes upon one of them. Your conclusion is that Obito is working for somebody else who provided him with such means, right? I reached that conclusion as well."

"Yet you seem to be at an impasse, right?" Danzo asked. The question was irritating by itself, and Danzo's neutral tone only made it worse. "The reason you're not finding the answers you seek is because you aren't making the right questions."

"And what questions would those be, then?" Orochimaru asked.

"First of all, if those creatures were created from Hashirama's DNA, then you should ask yourself first: how did Obito managed to acquire it?" Danzo asked.

"He probably stole it from Konoha. That's no mystery," Orochimaru said, rolling his eyes again.

"Yet had such thing happened, we would have learned about it," Danzo countered. "It was because of your unauthorized use of Hashirama's DNA in your experiments that Hiruzen was able to uncover them. After such incident, security measures towards the remaining samples were increased tenfold, and we know Obito's fall from grace happened after your defection."

"Where are you going with this?" Orochimaru asked.

"This leads us to the second question: is it possible for somebody out of Konoha to possess samples of Hashirama's DNA?" Danzo asked.

"God of Ninja or not, Hashirama was a ninja and took part in battles. I'm sure somebody could make him bleed, take a piece of skin, anything," Orochimaru said in a dismissive way.

This time, it was Danzo who shook his head. "No, no normal man could make Hashirama bleed. Unlike you, I saw him fight during the First Ninja War, and there was absolutely no one who could push him to fight to his fullest."

"Yet Hashirama died during that very war," Orochimaru rebutted.

"Yes, he did. But the reason behind his fall was extreme exhaustion after his duel against Madara," Danzo explained. "He refused to take any time to recover, and rejoined the war as soon as possible, as he thought his power was necessary to end it. However, the ninja who killed him was quickly killed afterwards by our forces, and many measures were taken to ensure not a single piece of his DNA ended in the enemy's hands."

"And again I need to ask, what is your point?" Orochimaru asked.

"The answer to this second question is the only man who could make Hashirama bleed: Madara Uchiha," Danzo replied. "It's obvious it's him the one who instructed young Obito. And it's obvious that, just like he resurrected Rin, is planning to do the same with his former master."

"That doesn't make any sense," Orochimaru retorted. "Madara was killed by Hashirama. His body was brought to Konoha, where its death was confirmed once again, and was subjected to extensive autopsy. And after several months, it was finally buried in a secret place. Trust me, Danzo, I had many people over the years looking for Madara's place of final rest."

"And once again, Orochimaru, you're blinded by your own arrogance," Danzo said. "You're possibly, the most gifted and intelligent man I worked with, but there are things that even you don't know."

"And what things would be?" Orochimaru asked, sounding irritated.

Danzo allowed himself to smirk. "Do you know about a forbidden jutsu named Izanagi?"

...

One Orochimaru's Former Lairs, Undisclosed Location

While Orochimaru was with Danzo in one of his main bases, Kabuto was tasked with overseeing the evacuation of the old bases.

One of the many downsides that Orochimaru's betrayal of Akatsuki brought was that they needed to evacuate and relocate all their bases, since Akatsuki didn't tolerate traitors, and their revenge would come sooner or later.

Then again, Orochimaru had assured that Pain and Obito were so worried with capturing the remaining Tailed Beasts as soon as possible, that they would take some time to retaliate. And they would use that time to prepare for the inevitable backlash.

"That is, if the backlash comes," Orochimaru had said, followed by a confident chuckle. "I have the feeling that Akatsuki is going to have their hands full in the foreseeable future."

Kabuto had been tempted to ask what did Orochimaru know that he didn't, but decided to trust his master's judgement. While the Snake Sannin prepared the final part of his plan, the silver haired medic-nin was tasked with evacuating one of the lairs. A masked Oto ninja then walked to him.

"Kabuto-sama, all the labs have already been emptied," the Oto ninja informed. "Everything essential has been moved out, while everything else has been left here, to be claimed by the flames when we destroy the base."

"Good job," Kabuto replied with a nod. "Remember that the boxes with the red marks are to be destroyed, while the boxes with the black marks should be safely stored and taken away."

"Understood, sir," the Oto ninja replied. "Everybody has left already. Do you want to check the base one last time, or should I give the order to bring the base down?"

"One last check won't hurt. I'd hate if because of one man's incompetence, Orochimaru-sama lost something irreplaceable," Kabuto said.

The Oto ninja nodded. "As you wish, sir. I'll be waiting for you outside," he said, before vanishing.

Kabuto went to check the lair one last time, to make sure everything was in order. He knew that, if somebody was amiss, Orochimaru would lay the blame on him, and he didn't want to take any risks. The last part of the plan was the most delicate so far, and a single mistake could ruin it. Fortunately, every room that he checked only had red marked boxes.

"Okay, everything seems to be fine," Kabuto said, as he walked towards the last storage room. "If everything's fine, we can finally say goodbye to this lair."

He opened the door, and entered the room, and the moment he did, the silver haired man loudly gasped in shock. The reason was that he saw a black marked box. As if that wasn't bad enough, the box was opened, and one could see its contents had been emptied. This was distressing enough, but what made it such a shocking sight was the bloodied corpses of Otogakure ninjas scattered around the room.

"I wish I didn't have to kill them," a voice said behind Kabuto. A voice he recognized. "They were good men. But they needed to die, since they would stop me in my endeavor."

Kabuto immediately turned around, as his hands started to glow with a blue light of chakra, as he activated his chakra scalpels. However, the moment he turned around to face his enemy, said enemy dropped a flashbang, filling the whole room with blinding white light.

A light Kabuto was unable to shield his eyes against, and was promptly blinded.

"AAAAARGH!" the medic-nin cried, as he instinctively took his hands to his pained eyes, the chakra scalpels dispelling.

"Wood Release: Wood Binding Jutsu!"

Thick wooden roots emerged from around Kabuto and tightly wrapped around his body, leaving him completely immobilized.

"You, on the other hand... I'm going to enjoy killing you..." the person said, as a kunai appeared in their hand. Kabuto felt an intense pain as the kunai pierced his gut. "I can't wait to see Orochimaru's reaction when I throw your decapitated head at his feet."

"Ack..." Kabuto coughed, spraying some blood. "Orochimaru-sama... you won't be able to... he has powers now that... that you can't..."

"You think I'm too weak to kill your beloved master?" the attacker said, as Kabuto was stabbed two more times.

This time, Kabuto didn't reply, and focused his chakra into the wounded spots, in order to heal them with the Wound Destruction, a jutsu he had developed that allowed him to heal any part of his body without having to use his hands. Hopefully, he could fool his assailant into thinking that he was dead. He knew there were some medical supplies in some of the boxes ready to be discarded. Once his would-be assassin went away, he could use some of them to heal himself properly.

But it seems that his assassin wasn't going to give him the chance, as Kabuto felt another onslaught of stabbings. As more and more blood poured from his body, his vision was starting to blur, and his head felt lighter.

"Maybe you're right," the assassin said. "Even if I catch that traitor... even with the First Hokage's power, it might not be enough to end his miserable life. But hey, as long as he dies, I don't care if I'm not the one who kills him."

And with that, the assassin left. The Wooden bindings quickly vanished, and Kabuto's body dropped to the ground. Kabuto knew this was his chance. As he continued healing his wounds as best as he could, he crawled towards one of the boxes, leaving a trail of blood behind.

It was then when he heard several sizzling sounds. The kind of sizzles that explosive tags make. The sound came from his very back.

Kabuto didn't have time to react before he was engulfed by a chain of explosions, putting an end to his life.

...

Training Ground Twenty Five, the Next Day

When the Sage trainees arrived to the training ground to continue their instruction, they noticed that there was something different. Namely, that there were multiple long stalagmites emerging from the ground, most likely being the result of one or several Earth Release jutsu. Besides the stalagmites was a pile of thin stone slabs.

Naruto and Fukasaku were already there, with Naruto grinning in anticipation, as if expecting the trainees to ask what those stalagmites were for.

"Hey there! Good to see you back!" Naruto cheerfully said. "I'm sure you're wondering what these stalagmites and stone slabs are for, don't you?"

"Yeah," Shisui said, before his expression became contrite. "You don't plan to hit us with those slabs in the head, do you?"

"Come on guys, I don't hit you THAT hard, do I?" Naruto protested. He was met with several angry glares that told him otherwise. The blond then frowned and crossed his arms. "Anyway, too bad, because the smacks in the head won't stop until you learn to mix nature energy properly."

"Naruto-kun, you didn't told us what those things are for," Hinata pointed out.

"You'll use them for today's exercise," Fukasaku stated. "So far, you seem to get the hang of sensing and collecting nature energy. But you have troubles with both collecting it at a greater speed, and keeping them under control in order to properly mix them with your chakra. The key for both things is to learn how to be completely still."

"We already know that," Karin said, as she placed both hands on her hips.

"You do, yet you're unable to remain completely still! You won't be Sages until you learn how!" Fukasaku replied, sounding like he was reprimanding a child.

"If somebody like Naruto, who oozes energy from every pore of his skin, is able to do it, I think all of us here can do it as well," Asuma replied, before giving Naruto a conciliatory smile. "No offense, kid."

"No worries. It took me a while to get that part done," Naruto replied, smiling back. "Thanks to the exercise we're going to show you now!"

"Yes. In order to attain the stillness you lack, you'll be put into a position that will force you to stay completely immobile," Fukasaku began. "Naruto-chan, care to show them?"

Naruto nodded, grabbed a stone slab, and after climbing the one of the stalagmites, he placed the slab on its tip, before sitting on it in the lotus position. While both the slab and Naruto wobbled a little bit and threatened to fall down, the blond quickly found balance, and stood completely still atop it.

"See? In order to avoid falling down, Naruto-chan had learned to stay completely still. And once you attain that level of balance, you'll be able to gather and mold nature energy much easier!" Fukasaku told them.

"Now, time for you to do it!" Naruto said, as he jumped down from the stalagmite. "It will take you some time at first, but with effort and perseverance, you will do it!"

"Naruto-sensei, how long did you take it to remain completely still?" Hanabi asked, as she raised her hand.

"About four days," Naruto replied. "But don't get discouraged if you take longer than-"

"Heh, I bet I can do it in just two!" the youngest Hyuga said, as she telekinetically pulled a slab to her hands, before flying towards one of the stalagmites. "The Gentle Fist puts a lot of emphasis on footwork and balance, so this will be piece of cake!"

Hinata just sighed, as she followed her sister, while shaking her head. "Guess Naruto-kun isn't the only one who oozes energy from every pore of their skin..."

Naruto and Fukasaku watched as everybody placed the slab at the tip of one of the stalagmites, and tried to sit on it. "Tried" being the key word, since many of them couldn't find the proper balance at first, and were unable to stay at the top for more than once second, and fell to the ground.

"AAAAAAAAHHHHH!" Rin screamed, before her body hit the ground. "Ouch... I thought that Naruto-kun hitting us with that staff was bad, but this appears to be even worse!"

"AAAAAAAAAAAAHHHH!" another one screamed. This time, it was Hanabi, who fell to the ground. "Ouch... my strategy to use the tenseigan to keep the slab still didn't work..."

"Of course it didn't!" Fukasaku chided the youngest Hyuga. "Being completely still also means not channeling any other jutsu either! If such thing was possible, this exercise wouldn't have a reason to be! Now come on, get back up there!"

On top of having to endure Naruto and Fukasaku's smacking their heads, the Sage trainees had to add falling from several meters high to the ground to the list of hazards they had to suffer in order to master the power of Senjutsu.

And, unfortunately, those hazards were nothing but a minor inconvenience compared to what they, along with the rest of Konoha's population, were about to face.

...

Outside of Konoha, a couple hours later

"So, are we all here?"

Just like Orochimaru had used the thick forests around Konoha to cover his army, Akatsuki was using the same strategy before launching their attack. They were all carried to that spot by Obito, one by one, until the six Akatsuki members were present.

However, half of their members found that there were more than six Akatsuki members present.

"Uh, question," Deidara said, raising his hand. "Who the hell are those guys?"

Behind Pain stood his other five bodies, looking as stoic and emotionless as the man the Akatsuki called their leader.

"They're Pain," Konan answered, as if that solved everything.

"And what's that supposed to mean!?" Deidara asked again.

"Enough! You can ask about Pain later, now we have a job to do," Obito cut the Explosion Release user. He then turned at Toneri. "Are they in the village?"

Toneri, whose Tenseigan was gleaming with a teal light, had his eyes fixed on the village, scanning every centimeter of it.

"Yes, I see all of them. The jinchuriki of the Nine Tails is inside a large house, I presume it's his home. The jinchuriki of the Seven Tails is in another large building. I believe it's a clan compound." Toneri informed. "My Byakugan Princess and her sister are also in the village. This will be a golden opportunity to secure her as well.""

"That means we will have to deal with her as swiftly as possible. We don't know how much their powers had grown since the last time," Obito guessed, a hand under his chin, before looking at Toneri again. "However, I must ask you to focus on the jinchuriki first and foremost. If we fail here, we won't have any other chances," Obito told him in a mild reprimanding tone.

"Worry not, Obito. Have I not served the organization faithfully and competently?" Toneri asked the Uchiha. "I shall capture the jinchuriki myself if the situation demands it."

"We'll see about that," Konan said, as she narrowed her eyes at the Otsutsuki.

"Are our main forces ready?" Pain asked, as he looked at both Toneri and Obito.

"Five thousand Zetsu clones are buried under our very feet," Obito told him. "They are all waiting my orders to attack."

"My puppet army is in position as well," Toneri followed. "They will also provide some additional air support."

"In that case, there should be no more waiting," Konan said.

"Haha, yes! I can't wait to begin!" Kisame said in great delight. "The last time I got to fight in another village was Kiri, and my fun was cut short too soon."

"Worry not, Kisame, for you will have plenty of fun," Pain replied. "Your job will be to cause as much mayhem and destruction as possible, in order to weaken Konoha's defenses. Obito, Konan and I will take care of the jinchuriki."

"Deidara, Toneri, given that you can fly, besides attacking from the sky, your job will be to make sure the jinchuriki of the Seven Tails doesn't escape again through the air," Obito ordered.

"Now, let's commence," Pain declared.

"Alright, given that this is a major invasion, I'll break out the C2 Dragon from the get go!" Deidara claimed, as he fed some explosive clay to one of his hand mouths. The mouth chewed the clay, until it shaped it like a tiny dragon. Tossing the dragon forward, it increased its size a hundredfold, before Deidara jumped on its back. "I'm ready to go!"

"Before you do, take this Path with you," Pain said, as the Animal Path jumped onto the dragon's back as well.

"Yeah, whatever. Let's go!" Deidara said, as his dragon started to flap its wings, gaining attitude as it raised gusts of wind, before it took off into the sky above Konoha. Toneri was quick to follow.

"Kisame, you go and attack the main gate. Try to draw as much attention as possible," Konan told the shark ninja.

"You can count on that, hehe!" Kisame said, as he leaped forward, ready to wreak havoc.

"Now all we have to do is wait," Pain finally declared. "This day, this village shall know the meaning of pain."

Author's Note: Despite the chapter not being that long, there's a lot to unpack here. Let's begin!

First of all, what I think was the most impactful moment of the chapter: Kabuto's death. Truth be told, I've been wanting to kill Kabuto for some time since I didn't know what to do with him anymore. I originally planned to have him killed two chapters ago; he would die fighting against Shisui and Shizune while buying Danzo time to escape. However, I ended up discarding it because there's no way the Uchiha couple, exhausted as they were, could have been able to kill Kabuto when he had so much backup. So I came up with this scene instead. Speaking of which, now the identity of the killer has been narrowed down considerably, since there aren't that many people who can use Wood Release.

You know, while I'm mostly indifferent to him, Kabuto was one of the characters I was planning to kill before I even started writing this story. Like, after all the shit he did during the Fourth Ninja War, all the people he died because of him (and I'm not talking about the war itself; he had to kill a shitton of people just to create his Edo Tensei army) he gets away scot free? Like, are you fucking kidding me, Kishimoto? So yeah, even if Kabuto on this story hasn't done that, I believe that helping Orochimaru was enough to warrant a karmic death.

As for the main plot of this chapter, just like Hinata getting a Tenseigan, more people besides Naruto and Jiraiya getting Sage Mode was on my list of things I wanted to do. Though, unfortunately, they won't be able to master Sage Mode in time for the Akatsuki invasion.

And speaking of which, yeah, the Akatsuki already arrived Konoha, and the invasion will begin the next chapter. This will be a very battle-heavy arc, one not seen since the last time Konoha was invaded. Though you can tell that now it's going to be much worse than when Orochimaru did it. Still, Konoha is also much stronger now, but it's strong enough to weather the red and black storm that's about to fall upon them?

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

So, the Akatsuki Invasion begins next chapter! What are your expectations? Tell me about them, as well as your thoughts on this chapter, in your reviews! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Akatsuki Invasion, Part I

Author's Note: After quite some time, Son of the Sannin's Spinoff "The Two Twisted Timelines", by Shinobi420 and Animephilosopher1, has been updated. So you should go and read it once you're done reading this new chapter. Now, enjoy the beginning of the Akatsuki invasion:

Chapter 83:

The Akatsuki Invasion, Part I

or

Konoha Under Attack!... again

Senju Residence

"I'm home!" Tsunade announced, as she entered in the house.

"Hey there, mom," Naruto's voice replied.

When Tsunade entered her house, she found that Naruto was sitting in the living couch, reading a book. While the blond wasn't averse to such activity, he often preferred to spend his spare time doing something to burn his constant overflow of energy, rather than such a quiet and calm activity.

"Hello, Naruto," Tsunade greeted him as she entered the living room. "Your dad and sister aren't here yet?"

"Nope. Dad's still at the office, and Kaida must be training," Naruto told the blonde Sannin. "In fact, I wasn't expecting you to be home so early."

"There was a slow day at the hospital, and for once, I managed to end all my daily work with some time in advance," Tsunade said, as she sat besides Naruto. "I was hoping to spend some quality time with the whole family, but guess that you'll have to do for the time being. So, how's the Sage Training going?"

"We're progressing. I think," Naruto told Tsunade. "I mean, I'm new to this teaching thing, so I don't really know. But they're getting the hang of nature energy and the like."

"Senjutsu isn't something anybody can attempt to master," Tsunade said. "Even if one fits the requirements, it is possible that you're not fit to master it after all. There's a reason as for there are only a couple Sages every few generations."

"Well, we've been only training for two days. I needed more than a week to master it," Naruto pointed out. "Maybe in a few weeks, the others will be able to master it as well."

"Having multiple Sages would give Konoha a huge edge not only against other villages, but against Akatsuki as well," Tsunade mentioned.

"Yeah," Naruto sadly agreed. "Maybe with more Sages, we could have saved more jinchuriki."

Tsunade bit her lip, instantly regretting bringing that topic. Looking around the room, she tried to find something to change the topic, until she found it on Naruto's hands. "Say, what are you reading?" Tsunade asked, as she took a peek at Naruto's book. "That doesn't look like something your father wrote."

"Because it isn't," Naruto replied, as he handed the book to her. "It's old man Roshi's."

"The jinchuriki?" Tsunade asked, as she took a look at the pages.

Naruto nodded. "He kept several journals of his journeys. He visited multiple countries and villages, and wrote about his experiences there. Did you know that he's been on Konoha twice?"

"Really? How is that we never noticed him?" Tsunade asked.

"Well, both times were before I was even born and both you and dad returned for good," Naruto explained. "Let's say, Roshi was really good at keeping a low profile."

"I see," Tsunade replied. "He sounded like an interesting man."

"You can bet he was. Now, thanks to Akatsuki, all of us missed a chance to meet somebody great," Naruto said, shaking his head. "He was planning to publish his books once he felt he had finished his journey, so he could share his experiences with the others, as well as what it feels to be a jinchuriki."

"Well... maybe you can publish those books yourself?" Tsunade suggested.

Naruto looked at her with his eyes wide open. "It's... it's that okay? I mean, I didn't write those books."

"So? It's not that you want to appropriate them, right? You can still say those are Roshi's journeys," Tsunade continued. "That way, Roshi's memories will be alive even long after his death."

"Hmmm... I think you may have a point," Naruto replied. "Problem is, the books doesn't have an end, given what happened with-"

Suddenly, mother and son heard a chain of explosions, followed by the house lightly trembling. A feeling of dread washed upon them.

"What... what the hell was that!?" Naruto asked.

"Nothing good, that's what is," Tsunade said, as she bolted from the couch. "Naruto, go and gather your teammates! I need to go to the hospital and see if Hagane is okay!"

Naruto nodded, and the two blondes quickly left their home.

...

Skies above Konoha, a few minutes earlier

Deidara and Toneri were flying above the village, at an altitude high enough to be mistaken for actual birds, and not be detected by the sensors or the ninjas managing the barrier. Thankfully, the time for stealth would soon come to an end.

"I'll be getting down here," Ponytail Pain told Deidara. "Delay your bombardment so it splits Konoha's forces."

Without further ado, Pain jumped from the bird, allowing himself to fall into the village. Deidara wondered how did he plan to survive such a fall, but his leader had shown that he had way more tricks under his sleeve that it appeared at first glance. Deidara just shrugged, and decided that Pain knew what he was doing. Smiling wickedly, he grabbed a handful of explosive clay, and feed it to the mouths inside his hands.

"Not every day I have the chance to show my art to a village, so I'll make sure to use my very best, hn!" Deidara said, as several clay figurines appeared on his hands. "Down you go!"

A chain of powerful explosions rocked Konoha, drawing everybody's attention to the point of origin. That momentary distraction was all what Pain needed.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

After a burst of smoke, Ponytail Pain was surrounded by the other five paths, as well as Konan.

"Scatter!" the Main Pain ordered. "Create as much chaos and destruction as possible! That will draw the jinchuriki to us!"

Wordlessly, all of them leaped in different directions, while most Konoha ninja were heading towards the explosions Deidara had caused.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Animal Pain used his only jutsu once again, this time summoning a large, multi-headed dog that went on a mad rampage the instant it was summoned. Not far away from there, puppet Pain deployed his whole arsenal, raining missiles on ninja, civilians and buildings alike, attacking nearby people with his flamethrower and chakra beam cannon. Meanwhile, the main Pain, assisted by the chakra-absorbing one as well as Konan, engaged the few ninjas left that were still in the area.

...

Hokage Tower, that very moment

Even if Deidara's explosions didn't happen in a place close to the Hokage's tower, the explosions were loud and visible enough to be seen and heard from there. Jiraiya, who was working as usual, was startled by the explosions, and quickly opened his window to see what was going on. Not only it was followed by even more explosions, but several gigantic animals were wrecking the village.

Undeterred, Jiraiya bit his thumb, and made five hand seals.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Fukasaku and Shima appeared from a burst of smoke, looking around, noticing where they were.

"Jiraiya-chan? Why did you summon us here?" Fukasaku asked, noticing the Sannin's distress.

"Yeah, it better be important! We were about to have lunch!" Shima protested.

"I don't know. Would you call Akatsuki invading the village important?" Jiraiya sarcastically asked.

"WHAT!?" the two elder toads asked in unison, both equally shocked.

As if to answer their question, another chain of explosions made the tower tremble. These ones happened much closer.

"The day I've been fearing so much is finally here. That means that Akatsuki have captured the other seven jinchuriki. They only need Naruto and Fu for their plan to succeed," Jiraiya explained. More explosions rocked the tower. "And with their targets in a single village, guess they decided to toss subtlety out of the window and launch an invasion on the village."

"You can count on us, Jiraiya-chan!" Shima, whose attitude had gone a complete twist, energetically offered. "What do you need us to do?"

"Ma, I need you with me for Sage Mode," Jiraiya said. The female toad nodded, and jumped into his shoulder. "Pa, look for Naruto and Fu, and protect them with everything you have."

The male toad nodded as well.

"Those kids won't fall into Akatsuki's grasp as long as I breathe!" Fukasaku declared, as he leaped out of the window.

Jiraiya then walked towards the right wall of the office, and started to feel it until he found what he was looking for: a hidden switch he had installed a couple years ago. Pressing the switch, a rectangular section of the wall opened with a clicking sound as if it was a door. Jiraiya pushed the door, and entered the room.

"Jiraiya-chan, what are you doing?" Shima protested. "We should head outside to the battle!"

"I know!" Jiraiya replied, as he walked towards the wall in front of the door. On said wall there was a complex sealing pattern. He placed his hand in the center of the pattern, and sent a pulse of chakra. "But I need to do this first."

The seals started to glow with a blue light, and more seals started to spread, first across the room, then the office, and beyond that.

"What is this seal, Jiraiya-chan?" Shima asked.

"A little defense mechanism we implemented after our war against Yagura," Jiraiya said, with a confident smirk. "This will increase our chances of victory even further!"

...

Gates of Konoha

With all the chaos that was going in the village, it didn't take much effort for Kisame to break into the village through the main gates. That's not to say that he didn't find any resistance, though said resistance was hardly an obstacle for him. By summoning a gigantic tsunami, he crushed the gates of Konoha, as well as the ninjas manning it. Naturally, many more Konoha ninjas arrived to see what was going on.

"Fire Release: Dragon Fire Jutsu!"

A Konoha ninja exhaled a stream of fire from his mouth at Kisame. The shark ninja, however, merely laughed and blocked the attack with Samehada. His trusty sword quickly absorbed the jutsu.

"I thought I was famous enough to know that you aren't supposed to use ninjutsu against me," Kisame chuckled, as he shook his head. "Oh well, guess I'll have to work harder."

"No... no ninjutsu?" the Konoha ninja stammered, as he struggled to pull a couple of kunai from his ninja tool pouch.

"Sorry, it's too late for you to learn that lesson!" Kisame shouted.

The shark ninja dashed forward and delivered a horizontal swing, separating the man's upper half of his body from his lower half, killing him instantly. More Konoha ninja landed besides him.

"That's Kisame Hoshigake!" the most veteran of the newcomers said. "Beware of that sword! It can absorb ninjutsu!"

"Oh, so somebody in this disgrace of a village knows who I am after all," Kisame laughed, as he stabbed his sword into the ground, as he started to make hand seals. "Then again, you're about to find that there's much more to me than Samehada. Water Release: Exploding Water Colliding Wave!"

Much to the Konoha ninja's shock, Kisame expelled a massive amount of water from his mouth, quickly drowning the Konoha ninjas, and completely flooding that section of the village. Kisame, standing atop of the colossal mass of water, watched as his victims tried to swim to the surface. His smirk widened, as he bit his thumb.

"Dinner's served, my pets!" Kisame said, as he made five hand seals. "Summoning Jutsu!"

Slamming his palm into the surface of the water, a fourths of sharks were summoned. The sharks quickly swam towards the hapless Konoha ninjas, and tore them to shreds, dying the water mass dark red.

"Ah, there's nothing like a taste of foreign cuisine to broaden your experience," Kisame laughed, mostly to himself.

"DOUBLE KONOHA WHIRLWIND!"

Kisame had barely any time to react before two green blurs dashed at him from different directions. By stopping the release of chakra through his feet, the Akatsuki sank into the water, barely avoiding the double flying kick. The duo landed in opposite directions, revealing to be a man and a young teen, both clad in green with ridiculous bowl haircuts and extremely thick eyebrows.

"Tenten! Now!" the younger one said.

Still underwater, Kisame's eyes drifted towards a girl with brown hair styled in a pair of buns, who dashed towards the water. He didn't know what she wanted to do, but there was no way she could harm him.

"Gate of Opening, Open! Gate of Healing, Open!" Tenten shouted, as chakra burst from her body in the form of a green aura. She then pulled out a small sealing scroll from under her clothes, and unsealed a kusarigama. "Okay, time to fish some Akatsuki!"

Tenten channeled her boosted chakra into the kusarigama, which started to glow with a blue light. She then threw the weighted chain of the weapon at Kisame, who watched in shock how the water failed to sap it of any momentum.

" What the hell?" the Shark ninja thought, as the chain wrapped around his body.

"Neji, get ready!" Tenten said.

Displaying her enhanced strength, Tenten violently pulled Kisame out of the water construct, and threw it at an Hyuga, placed a few meters behind her.

"Heavenly Spin!"

Neji turned into a spinning dome of chakra just seconds before Kisame was slammed against him. The spinning force was great enough to knock Kisame back as soon as he touched the chakra dome, before crashing against a nearby building.

"Did that get him?" Tenten asked, as Gai and Lee landed besides her.

Kisame, however, not only managed to pull himself back, but he looked completely unharmed.

"Now... that was sure something," Kisame said, laughing a little, as he rested his sword onto his shoulder. "You made me feel pain! Heh, it seems that I found myself some worthy adversaries!"

"He... he doesn't have any wounds!" the black haired teen said in shock.

"He does, but they're healing," the adult said, as he noticed how a couple cuts on Kisame's face closed and disappeared.

"It's that sword," Neji pointed out. "That sword it's alive and has chakra. It's supplying the Akatsuki with chakra, which also heals him. I believe this man is Kisame Hoshigake. Karin's team fought against him not long ago. Beware that sword, it can also absorb ninjutsu."

"It can absorb ninjutsu, you say? Ha!" the adult roared. "Then it's such a luck that all of us are mostly taijutsu specialists! Neji, Lee, Tenten, we must take this Akatsuki down, for we're the best suited to fight him!"

"You think you lot are the first taijutsu specialists I face? Pitiful," Kisame said, shaking his head. "Maybe you aren't as worthy as I thought."

"Let us prove you wrong then, for you're now against Maito Gai, Konoha's Noble Blue Beast, and his three youthful students!" Gai said in an overly theatrical matter.

"Maito Gai...?" Kisame asked, narrowing a single eye at the green clad Jonin. "Oh, I think I know who you are! A ninja named Maito Dai made a name on the Seven Swordsmen of the Mist during the latest war! If you're related to him, then you must be pretty strong! Very well then, you managed to draw my interest!"

Both Team Gai and Kisame rushed towards each other, ready to fight without holding back.

...

Unfortunately for Konoha, the Akatsuki members weren't the only ones who were attacking it. A multitude of Zetsu clones climbed the walls and poured into the village, attacking every human they saw, either be ninja or civilian, children or adults, like a voracious locust swarm devouring a crop.

And joining them were Toneri's puppets. Even if fewer in number, they proved to be far more deathly than the Zetsu thanks to their resilience combined with their ability to mold and use chakra, which they used in the form of deadly golden blasts. And the threat wasn't tied to the ground: multiple puppets, riding huge winged mechanical constructs covered in tattered clothes -which gave the illusion of looking like birds- bombarded the village from above.

"Fire Release: Ash Pile Burning!"

Asuma exhaled a huge cloud of dusty gunpowder at the incoming White Zetsu, before igniting it with the sparks produced by quickly hitting his trench knives against each other, resulting in a chain of explosions that obliterated the clones. However, from the resulting cloud of smoke, three puppets emerged, their hands cupped around a spehere of golden chakra that they launched at Asuma.

"Shit!" the Jonin cursed, as he did his best in order to avoid the attacks.

As Asuma fought against the incoming invaders, his students escorted a large group of civilians towards the underground bunkers, task which was no easy given the Zetsus' penchant for attacking them.

"Don't stray from the main group!" Shikamaru shouted. "We can protect you better if you stay together!"

"Shikamaru, watch out!" Ino warned, as she made several hand seals. "Water Release: Water Gun!"

Ino expelled a stream of water from her mouth that sailed just above Shikamaru's head, hitting in the chest a leaping Zetsu, whose intentions were rather predictable.

"Guys, I need some help over here!" Choji cried.

Shikamaru and Ino turned around, and saw that their teammate was pretty much buried under a pile of White Zetsu clones.

"Don't worry, I'll take care of them!" Ino replied, as she formed a rectangle with her thumb and index fingers. "Multiple Mind Disturbance Jutsu!"

The Yamanaka heiress took control of three of the White Zetsu that were suffocating Choji, not only relieving him of their weight, but also attacking the other White Zetsu, forcing them to drop from the Akimichi, who quickly rejoined his teammates.

"Thank you, Ino," the breathless Akimichi said.

"Don't thank me yet, more of those things are coming!" Ino shouted, pointing to a nearby street, which was crowded with more Zetsus.

"Damn, where is everybody else? We can't protect the civilians ourselves!" Shikamaru protested.

That moment, several circular sealing patterns suddenly appeared in the ground. Not just in that street, but across all of Konoha as well. Many Konoha ninjas knew the meaning behind those seals.

"Shikamaru, are those seals...?" Ino asked.

"I think so," Shikamaru said, his distress disappearing, as a confident smirk formed in his face. "It seems that Hokage-sama knew that something like this could happen, and planned accordingly."

"What do you mean?" Choji asked.

Ino smiled at her rotund teammate.

"That means that we're about to get reinforcements really soon," Ino told him.

The seals then burst into small explosions of smoke, and from those clouds of smoke, emerged a Chakra Golem each. Unlike the red golems used by Yagura or the black golems used by Root, these golems had a green body, blue arms and legs, a red spiral on their back, and were even wearing actual forehead protectors around their small heads, to the point that they looked like they were wearing Konoha's standard uniform.

With several metallic hums, the golems became operative as the sealing patterns around their bodies started to glow with the same blue light. The mechanical constructs quickly identified the White Zetsu clones and the puppets as the invaders, and immediately went to face them. Their armored exterior rendered them almost impervious to the White Zetsus' physical attacks, while the chakra-absorbing seals made them immune to the puppets' golden blasts. Soon, the battle began to not quite turn in Konoha's favor, but give the defenders a much better chance to breathe and fight back.

"Oh yes, after fighting these things so many times, it feels so good to finally have them on our side!" Ino gushed.

"Come on guys, don't get distracted! Don't drop your guard just because those fancy machines are helping us now!" Asuma called out, as he engaged a couple of puppets.

"Yes, sir!" the three of them chorused, as they rejoined the battle with renewed strength.

...

Aburame Estate

After the initial surprise attack, the Aburame Clan found its home besieged by a horde of White Zetsu Clones supported by a few of Toneri's puppets, who fiercely tried to get inside the place. It was obvious what they were looking for: thanks to Toneri's Tenseigan, they had realized that was where Fu was staying for the time being.

"Aburame Secret Art: Insect Tornado!"

With a giant gesture, Shino commanded his swarm to attack a group of incoming Zetsu. The insects started to fly in circles around them, trapping the artificial creatures inside a tornado. The insects then proceeded to eat them as fast as they could.

However, as Shino did this, he was too late to notice two more White Zetsu emerging from below, the closest one delivering a swipe with his sharp fingers, slashing Shino's arms, and making him tumble backwards, while the other lunged at him.

"Aburame Secret Art: Swarm Armor!"

A second swarm appeared before Shino and the White Zetsu, compressing itself into a thick wall of carapace, successfully repelling the White Zetsu's attack. Taking advantage of this, Shino pulled a kunai, lunged forward, and stabbed it into the now defenseless Zetsu's throat, while his savior also dispatched the other assailant with a powerful kick to the head.

"Thank you, father. That was a close one," Shino said, sounding as calm as ever despite the ongoing situation.

"Stay close. These things are pretty dangerous," the Aburame Jonin told his son, as more Aburame clansmen started to gather. "Where is Fu-san?"

Shino pointed out into Fu's direction, and Shibi saw how the green haired jinchuriki was using a White Zetsu clone as a weapon to maul his brethren to death.

"Fu-san!" Shibi called. "Return here at once!"

Fu nodded before launching the White Zetsu in her grasp into the sky.

"These things won't stop coming," Fu observed, as more White Zetsu broke into the compound. "Any ideas?"

"First, we need to leave the compound and go into the village," Shibi told them. "And find a larger group so we can form an unified front in order to repel the invaders."

"Such thing won't be hard to accomplish. The sound of multiple battles happening around us can be heard from pretty much any direction," Shino stated.

"Though some of us will need to create a distraction in order to allow Fu-san a safe escape route," Shibi stated. "Shino, I trust her safety to-"

"Whoa there, time out!" Fu cut the Aburame patriarch. "I'm not going anywhere!"

"Fu-san, these Akatsuki are here for you. Each second you stay in the village is a second you are in danger of being captured," Shibi calmly told her.

"I know how you feel, but my father is right," Shino added. "We will be able to fight against the enemy better if we know you're safe."

"Absolutely not!" Fu loudly protested. "I already lost my home village to these monsters! I won't lose my adoptive home as well!"

"Please, be reasonable," Shibi insisted. "With your ability to fly, escaping won't be-"

"Father, Fu, watch out!" Shino called.

The arguing duo saw too late one of Toneri's puppets throwing a particularly large golden sphere of chakra at them, resulting in a huge explosion that send Fu and the Aburames alongside her flying in different directions.

"Ugh..." Fu groaned, as she tried to get back on her feet. She blinked a few times, trying to locate her boyfriend. "Shino? Are you okay? Shino...?"

However, there was no trace of Shino. Fu's field of vision was quickly filled with white and green, as more White Zetsu clones rushed to her.

"You have nowhere to go, jinchuriki!" one of the White Zetsu cried, as he and some of his brethren charged at her.

"Fire Release: Blistering Firecat!"

However, the Zetsu's charge was interrupted by an incoming giant cat made of fire, resulting in an explosion that engulfed them in a mass of flames, bruning them down to ashes almost instantly. The remaining White Zetsu stopped on their tracks, trying to look for the new enemy, but this moment of hesitation was all what the newcomers needed.

"Fang Passing Fang!"

"Cat Claw Dash!"

Almost appearing out of nowhere, two living tornadoes skewered the group of White Zetsu, followed by a green and brown blur that slashed to pieces those who avoided the initial attack. Kiba, Akamaru and Tamaki landed besides the green haired jinchuriki.

"Guys, you came!" Fu squealed in joy. "Your timing couldn't have been better!"

"Yeah, we were pretty quick. Nobody surpasses the Animal Squad when it comes to speed," Kiba boasted, with Akamaru barking in agreement.

"Are you okay, Fu?" Tamaki asked. "Where is Shino?"

"Yeah, I'm fine," Fu said, before she bit her lip. "As for Shino..."

"I'm alright as well," Shino's voice said, as the Aburame joined his teammates. "While I suffered some injuries, there's nothing my medical ninjutsu can't heal. While I appreciate your presence, why did you decide to come here?"

"Well, obviously those Akatsuki are here for both Fu and Naruto, so it was a no brainer that they would attack the place she lives in," Kiba explained. "And we were right-"

This time, it was Akamaru who interrupted his master, when he tensed up and started to bark loudly. Kiba immediately realized what this meant.

"Guys, watch out! More enemies incoming!" Kiba pointed out to the direction from which three puppets came from.

The puppets were ready to fire their golden chakra orbs at the Konoha ninja and Taki jinchuriki, but before they could multiple wooden roots emerged from underground, wrapping themselves around the mechanical humanoids, immobilizing them completely.

"Lightning Blade!"

The Chunin of the Animal Squad saw Kakashi appearing pretty much out of nowhere and cutting down all three puppets in less than a second with his signature ability. Once done, Rin landed besides him.

"Look at that, it seems that just for once, I wasn't late," Kakashi nonchalantly said. "Is everybody okay?"

Kakashi got several affirmative responses in return, much to the Jonin's relief

"Alright, we now have two priorities: we need to drive Akatsuki out of the village, while at the same time stopping them from getting their hands on Fu and Naruto," Kakashi explained. Such thing should have been obvious, but he wasn't going to leave anything to chance.

"We know. We suggested Fu that she should evacuate the village while we keep the enemy busy, but she refused," Shibi explained.

"I told you I'm not going anywhere!" Fu fired back, stomping her foot. She then looked into the sky, and pointed upwards. "Besides, it's not that I can escape as easily this time around. It seems that Akatsuki learned from what happened in Taki, and they brought an air force to make sure I won't leave."

Looking into the sky, the rest of the group could tell Fu was right. The moment Fu left the ground, those flying puppets would be drawn to her like moths to a candle.

"Those things are going to be a problem," Kakashi said, as he studied the flying puppets. "But without an air force of our own, we won't be able to deal them in an effective manner."

"I'm afraid you're right," Shibi conceded. "That means we will have to smuggle Fu out of the village through other means."

"Ugh, you're impossible, you know that!?" Fu shouted, as her wings appeared from her exposed back. "I have your air force right here!"

Before anybody could stop her, the green haired kunoichi shot into the sky like a rocket, and, as expected, a group of flying puppets was immediately drawn to her. Not that Fu cared, since she was also flying towards them.

"Shino," Shibi called his son. "Go and make sure she's safe."

Shino wordlessly nodded, before biting his thumb, and making five specific hand seals.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Shino slammed his palm into the ground, and after the initial burst of smoke dispelled, he found himself at the top of a gigantic rhinoceros beetle.

"You called me, Aburame-san, and I responded," the beetle said in a low, guttural voice. "Your command?"

"I need you to take me into the sky, and help me defeat the enemies on it, Mushikoehi-sama," Shino asked the giant beetle. "I also need you to help me protect a special someone."

"Understood," the beetle laconically replied, before its carapace opened up, revealing a pair of translucent wings, which started to flap, rising several gusts of wind, before finally taking off. "You can count on me, Aburame-san. After all, not every day I have the pleasure to meet Nanabi-sama."

The rest of Shino's teammates and the Aburame clan watched how Shino joined his girlfriend in the fight against the flying puppets.

"It all rests on Shino now," Kakashi said with a bit of resignation. "We can't afford to stay idle! Tamaki, Kiba, Akamaru, the village is under attack! Let's track the nearest Akatsuki member and dispose of them!"

"Yes, Kakashi-sensei!" Kiba and Tamaki said in unison, with Akamaru barking energetically.

...

Konoha Hospital

It took very little for the village's hospital to get flooded by a constant income of injured people, both ninjas and civilians, and in no time, there was no more room inside, and had to put the newcomers in the reception and the halls due the lack of space. Those with less grave injuries were placed outside, not just to avoid filling more space, but so they could return to the battle once they were healed.

And, as if it wasn't bad enough, the enemy considered the hospital a point of interest to take out, so the White Zetsu clones and the puppets were relentlessly attacking it, regardless if the jinchuriki weren't there. So far, the ninjas that were defending the hospital managed to keep the attackers at bay, but couldn't help but wonder how long could they resist.

"Lightning Release: Thunder Blade!"

Sasuke's blade crackled with electricity, and as the Uchiha dashed towards a group of incoming White Zetsu clones, delivered a swift motion with his blade, instantly splitting them in half, ending their lives.

"Sasuke, don't move!" Shisui shouted, as he tossed several shuriken in his direction.

Sasuke's Sharigan told him that, given their trajectory, none of the steel stars would hit him. And indeed, the weapons flew past him, before embedding into the heads of more White Zetsu.

"Thanks," Sasuke muttered, before his eyes located the next enemy. "Above us!"

Looking into the sky, they saw a trio of puppets riding those bird-shaped mechanical constructs, ready to bombard the hospital with their golden chakra blast.

"Everybody, don't let them attack! Force them to retreat!" Shisui ordered, as his hands flew through hand seals. "Sasuke, let's use wide range attacks! Use the same jutsu I'm going to cast!"

"You don't have to tell me twice!" Sasuke replied, already doing those same hand seals.

"Fire Release: Phoenix Sage Fire Jutsu!"

Sasuke and Shisui breathed a volley of fireballs upwards, which, alongside other elemental jutsu fired by the rest of the Konoha and ANBU guarding the hospital, managed to take down one of the aerial raiders, while forcing the other two into retreat.

"That was close," Sasuke said, panting a little. "You okay, cousin?"

Shisui merely smiled and gave him a thumbs up, before turning to a group of medic-nin, his wife among them, treating wounded ninjas. "Shizune-chan! How is it going there?"

"We're working as fast as we can, but the injured come faster than we can treat them!" the black haired woman protested, while trying to heal a dislocated arm from a Konoha Chunin.

"Mom and I are even letting them bite us so we can heal them faster!" Karin added.

"Sadly, there's nothing much we can do," Sasuke said, shaking his head. "Continue with your job, and we'll try to keep you safe as much as possible."

The sky started to darken as clouds turned black. Lightning bolts started to jump from one cloud to another, while several distant thunders could be heard.

Sakura's eyes suddenly grew wide while her iris shrunk, and her face turned several shades paler. "Uh, Sasuke-kun... do you think you can protect us from THAT?"

Sasuke and Shisui turned around, and much to their shock, they saw a gigantic ox charging at them, demolishing any building that it came in contact with, and trampling White Zetsu and Konoha ninja alike in its mad charge.

"Shit, we can't allow that thing to get to the hospital!" Shisui exclaimed, as he rushed forward. "Sasuke, we need to divert its attention to us!"

"On it!" Sasuke agreed, as his hands flew through hand seals. "Fire Release: Great Fireball Jutsu!"

Sasuke breathed a massive fireball, aiming directly at the ox's head. The ox plowed through the fireball as it was a ball of haystack, though it left several burn marks in its head. Letting out a bellow of pain, the giant summon focused its Rinnegan eyes on Sasuke, before charging at him.

"Good one, Sasuke!" Shisui praised, as his hands continued to fly through hand seals. "I'll stop it on its tracks with a genjutsu! Demonic Illusion: Cold Hands of Winter!"

Suddenly, the giant ox stopped in its tracks before it could trample Sasuke. In its mind, a blizzard started to blow, quickly covering it in snow and frost. The ox tried to break free, but was unable to, and was soon encased inside a mountain of ice. In the real world, the ox merely dropped on its belly.

"Let's hope this guy won't give us anymore trouble," Shisui said, as he walked towards the downed animal. "There has to be a way to undo the summon-"

That moment, the ox quickly got back on its hooves, and slammed Shisui with a hit of its snout, sending him flying against a nearby building.

"SHISUI!" Shizune screamed in horror. The young woman dropped what she was doing, and rushed towards her husband.

"Shizune-sensei, wait!" Sakura called out. "Watch out!"

In her distress, Shizune didn't realize that the giant ox was charging towards her. The medic-nin turned at the incoming animal in horror, now regretting being so rash and wondering what she could do to avoid being trampled to death.

Fortunately, just seconds before the giant ox could stomp on Shizune, a dragon-shaped lightning bolt fell from the skies into the ox, like the divine punishment of a wrathful god. The lightning attack carried so much power, the Ox was instantly unsummoned. The ox dealt with, Sasuke landed besides his sensei.

"Thank goodness I had prepared that Kirin a moment ago," Sasuke mentioned. "Are you okay, Shizune-sensei?"

"I could be worse if it wasn't for you," Shizune thanked the Uchiha. "Now come on, we need to get Shisui some help."

Suddenly, there was a huge tremor, and a building near them collapsed just as a massive red and black centipede emerged under it, sending several pieces of debris falling at the medic-nin and the Uchiha, forcing them to jump in different directions. Taking advantage of their predicament, the centipede lunged at Sasuke, who struggled to get back on his feet.

"SASUKE-KUN!" Shizune shouted.

But just like how Sasuke had saved Shizune at the last possible moment, Karma repaid Sasuke in full when Tsunade, leaping out of nowhere, landed on the centipede's head with a powerful kick, sinking the giant arthropod into the ground, before it was finally dispelled.

"Tsunade-sama!" Shizune cried, as she ran towards her master. "Oh, thank goodness that you're here!"

Tsunade nodded, and after helping Sasuke on his feet, both she and Shizune went to retrieve the wounded Shisui.

"How is the situation here?" Tsunade asked.

"Catastrophic," Shizune told her, sounding exhausted. "Not only are the wounded pretty much piling up, but we will quickly run out of medicines, bandages and other essentials if the flow of injured continues like this."

"Not to mention the constant attacks on the hospital," Sasuke added. "We repelled this wave, but I'm sure another one will be coming in less than five minutes."

Tsunade nodded once again, and wordlessly, she bit her thumb, before making five hand seals.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Tsunade slammed her palm into the ground, summoning Katsuyu the giant slug. Said slug looked around, as if assessing the situation.

"Tsunade-sama, what can I do for you?" Katsuyu asked. "It seems that Konoha is under another invasion."

"That's correct, old friend," Tsunade sadly confirmed. "I need you to split and heal as many Konoha ninjas as possible. I'll transfer you as much chakra as possible."

"Consider it done, Tsunade-sama!" Katsuyu said, before splitting in multiple, much smaller clones of herself, one of them small enough to ride on Tsunade's shoulder.

"This should alleviate some of our forces," Tsunade said, before her eyes rested on Shizune again. "Shizune, continue treating the wounded while the other ninjas protect the hospital. I need to go to the hospital to check something."

"Very well, Tsunade-sama," Shizune replied with a nod. "You can count on us!"

Tsunade nodded, and she rushed towards the hospital. People there greeted her warmly, praising how that, now that she was here, their jobs would be much easier, but Tsunade ignored them, for there was only one thing in her mind. She climbed the stairs as fast as she could, until she reached the floor she was looking for.

Once there, not going any slower, moved towards a certain door, before opening it. She gasped in horror to see the room empty.

"NO!" she screamed.

Her son was nowhere to be found.

...

"Ice Release: Certain Kill Ice Spears!"

Frost and snowflakes started to gather in a whirlwind around Haku, before condensing for a single moment, and exploding into a mass of large ice spikes. A group of charging White Zetsu clones were unlucky enough to be skewered by said spikes, ending their lives in an instant.

"Haku, watch out!" the Ice Ninja heard Kurenai warning him. Turning around, he saw even more Zetsus charging at him. Fortunately for Haku, his sensei was already making the next move.

"Earth Release: Earth Dome Jutsu!"

Sand, pebbles and dirt started to gather around Haku, forming a whirlwind not unlike his previous attack, before condensing and compressing into a dome around the Land of Water native. The White Zetsu clones slammed their faces against the sudden barrier.

"Lightning Release: Thunder Arrow!"

Using her chakra bow, Hinata fired several arrows made of pure lightning at the momentarily dazed White Zetsus with utmost accuracy, piercing spots the Hyuga Clan Head had correctly guessed were vital, guesses that were proven correct when the Zetsu clones dropped dead.

The earth dome quickly dissolved into sand and dirt that was quickly blown away by an incoming breeze.

"Thank you, Kurenai-sensei, Hinata-san," the Ice Ninja said, as he pulled out his own chakra bow as well. "This is insane. Not even Orochimaru's invasion was this brutal."

"It seems that Akatsuki is throwing everything they have at us," Kurenai replied, as she looked at the destruction that was happening around them, and frowned. "They won't stop at anything until they get their hands on the remaining jinchuriki."

"Speaking of which, Hinata-san, where is Naruto-kun?" Haku asked the Hyuga.

"I... I don't know," Hinata said, shaking her head. "When the Akatsuki attacked I met a clone of him, he said that the real one needed to go to his house to do something, but I didn't see him since then."

"We can't take any risks. Check his house and see if he's still there," Kurenai ordered the Hyuga. "We need both to keep Naruto safe, and his power as well if we want to repel this invasion."

Hinata nodded, and directed her expanded sight towards the Senju Residence. But much to Hinata's shock, Naruto was nowhere to be seen.

"He isn't there!" Hinata panicked. She then started to scan the rest of the village, but with all the fights going on, it was going to be quite the task to find her boyfriend. "I... I can't find him!"

"There's no way Akatsuki had captured him already," Haku firmly stated.

"No. they're clearly looking for him, or else they would be focusing all their efforts on Fu," Kurenai pointed out. "And there's no way Naruto decided to leave the village. He has to be somewhere."

"Speaking of Fu, is she alright? The Akatsuki didn't capture her already, did they?" Haku asked.

Pausing her search for Naruto, Hinata quickly found Fu, fighting in the sky above the village against the airborne puppets. However, that wasn't going to be the only enemy she was going to face.

"I see her," Hinata said, before her eyes grew wide. "And I see Toneri too! She's going after her! There's no way Fu can defeat that man on her own! Not after unlocking so much power of the Tenseigan!"

"Go and help her, Hinata," Kurenai told the Hyuga. She placed a comforting hand on her shoulder. "Don't worry, leave Naruto to Haku and I. I promise you we'll find him and keep him safe."

A bit hesitantly, Hinata nodded, before flying into the sky, ready to fight Toneri one more time.

...

If there was one good thing that Fu's rash decision of shooting into the sky in order to fight the airborne puppets, was that she managed to draw their attention, and thus they were no longer bombarding the village from above. On top of that, Fu made sure to fly above them so their chakra blasts wouldn't hit the village below.

"Come on, you plastic-brained idiots! Let's see if you can catch me!" Fu taunted, as she flew around them as fast as she could.

The taunt's reply came in the form of a barrage of golden chakra bolts aimed at her. Still, none of them found their mark, as Fu made an astounding display of agility, moving from side to side at an almost imperceptible speed, expertly dodging the incoming projectiles, while she got close to them.

"Drop dead!" Fu yelled, as he smashed both the puppet and the mechanical bird he was riding with a single, devastating punch.

Following this, Fu would move to the next flying puppet, which she would smash to bits in one punch again, then to the next, and the next, and the next.

"Fu, watch out, from both above and below!" Shino warned her, as the Aburame flew close to her atop his beetle summon.

Quickly looking up and down, Fu realized the flying puppets were trying to surround them. She would have fell prey to an ambush if she didn't got a heads up from her boyfriend.

"Very well then, I'll create an opening," Fu said, as she made a hand seal. "I'll deal with the guys above, you get the guys below!"

"Understood," Shino agreed, as he maneuvered the beetle down.

Fu then clapped her hands together, as she opened her mouth as wide as possible.

"Hiding In Scale Powder Jutsu!"

Fu exhaled from her mouth a huge cloud of glittering powder, and after a few seconds, produced such a bright flash of light that it blinded pretty much all of those caught between them. Besides Fu, who was immune to her own jutsu, the only one unaffected was Shino, thanks to the shades he was wearing -and Mushikoehi, whose eyes were closed as instructed by Shino-, leaving them an open field to attack.

"Let's end them in one single blow," Shino said, as he spread his arms, and a cloud of beetles emerged from under his sleeves, quickly covering the blinded puppets. Shino then made a hand seal. "Aburame Secret Art: Giant Beetle Growth!"

The designated beetles for the jutsu quickly grew to the size of a large dog. And since said beetles had been placed inside the puppets, the sudden growth destroyed the mechanical construct from the inside out almost immediately, while leaving Shino now with a squad of gigantic insects.

The flying puppets above didn't fare much better against Fu. It seemed the jinchuriki was bored of tearing them apart with her bare hands, so she resorted to ninjutsu in order to accelerate things. She flew towards one of the puppets as tornadoes started to form around her arms.

"Hurricane Punch!"

The wind-enhanced punch destroyed the puppet even faster than her normal punches, reducing it to even smaller shards of scrap. The punch also produced an air shockwave that shattered the other puppets flying close to him.

"Good, soon there won't be any of these guys bothering us anymore," Fu said, as she proceeded to trash the last remaining airborne puppets.

It was that moment that she saw a golden light from the corner of her eyes. Her instincts pretty much screamed at her to move aside, and thankfully she did.

"Golden Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

Fu moved just in time before a golden beam of chakra coming from below could hit her. The Taki kunoichi could feel the heat and sheer power that radiated from the beam of chakra. Had it hit her, she wasn't sure she could have survived that.

"You have keen senses, jinchuriki, " a new voice said.

Fu turned around, and saw a pale skinned man with white hair, and the same eyes as Hinata and Hanabi, wearing an Akatsuki robe, floating in front of her.

"Arent you supposed to capture me alive?" Fu asked, a bit indignant.

"I am. I'm positive you would have survived that blast," the man replied. "I'm usually very good at gauging my opponent's strength and choosing how much power should I use to end the fight."

"You are Toneri, aren't you?" Shino said, as he and his giant beetle appeared besides Fu. "Naruto told us about you. The Otsutsuki Clan member who wanted to abduct Hinata."

"I'm sure that truant said nothing but lies about me. Oh, who cares," Toneri said, shaking his head. "Soon he will be out of the picture, and no one shall stop me from claiming Hinata as my wife. Unfortunately, Akatsuki also wants you as well. Nothing personal, girl, we just do what needs to be done."

"Toneri!" a female voice shouted.

"Ah, Hinata," Toneri said in delight, without turning at her. Hinata could sense his Tenseigan focusing on her. "Such impeccable timing. Fear not, I'll be with you once I'm done with the jinchuriki."

"Just for once, I agree with you," Hinata replied, as she scowled at the Otsutsuki. "It was good that I arrived before you could hurt Fu-san or Shino-kun!."

"You plan to fight against me, Hinata?" Toneri asked, almost in a mocking tone. "I'm afraid it won't do you any good. I'm sure your sister must have told you how much my powers have grown since our last meeting."

Hinata gritted her teeth, as she was forced to admit that he was right. Hanabi had told her how Toneri had evolved the Tenseigan Chakra Cloak to the next level, giving him and his abilities a considerable boost. Chief among them being doubling the number of Truth Seeking Balls he could summon.

"She won't fight you alone!" a third voice said.

Hinata's eyes opened in shock as Hanabi appeared besides her.

"Hanabi-chan! What are you doing here?" an alarmed Hinata asked.
"This man is dangerous!"

"I know. But you won't be able to beat him alone," Hanabi replied. "If we join forces, our powers might be able to match his."

"Your naivete is adorable, Hanabi," Toneri chuckled, shaking his head. "You know, I've been thinking what I could do with you. Given that you also have a Tenseigan as well, it would be a waste to kill you. Then it hit me... there's nothing that stops me from marrying you as well! Between the three of us, we could produce the greatest dynasty that shall rule the Earth once Akatsuki purifies this decadent world."

"If you think I'm going to let you touch any of them," Fu hissed, her fists clenching, as red chakra started to form around her body. "Then you're way dumber than you think."

"Fu..." Shino said.

"Shino, things are going to get really ugly, and I have the feeling this guy is on a completely different level," Fu said, without turning her head to look at him. "I can't fight and protect you at the same time."

Shino wanted nothing but protest, to say that he didn't need protecting, and that the two of them would fight together. But alas, logic has always been a huge part of the Aburame psyche, so Shino didn't say any of that.

"I understand," was what he said. "Please be careful."

"I will," Fu replied, her body now covered in Tailed Beast chakra, looking how Shino returned to the village. Her eyes then landed on Hinata and Hanabi. "Hey, sky sisters, ready to give this idiot the beating of his life?"

"I'm more than ready," Hinata replied.

"You're going to pay for what you did to Hagane," Hanabi hissed at him.

Toneri merely smiled, and chuckled in a condescending manner.

"Very well then! Come at me with all you have!" Toneri said in a taunting fashion. "I want to see what my future wives are capable of!"

...

Meanwhile, in another part of Konoha, a gigantic rhino with Rinnegan eyes plowed through the streets, trampling both ninja, civilians and White Zetsu alike, while also taking down any building that so much graced it with its skin. Fortunately, there was somebody who was about to stop that beast.

"Alright brats, that's our target!" Anko said, pointing out at the charging Rhino.

"You want us to fight that thing!?" a shocked and justifiably terrified Zaku asked.

Anko shook her head. "No, I know you wouldn't be able to do a thing about that. Leave that to me, just make sure the civilians are okay and that no white naked guys gets in the way."

"Yes, ma'am!" her three students said, as they went to fight the nearby White Zetsu clones.

Anko, meanwhile, bit her thumb, while making five hand seals.

"Summoning jutsu!"

Anko slammed her hand into the ground, producing a huge burst of smoke, and from said cloud of smoke, a gigantic snake with dark blue skin appeared.

"Anko-sama, your orders?" the giant snake asked.

"See that rhino over there, Aoda?" Anko asked, pointing at the charging animal. "I need you to help me send it where it came from."

"Understood," Aoda laconically replied. "Hold on."

The giant snake swiftly lunged at the incoming rhino. The rhino, in return, tried to skewer Aoda, but the snake was much limber and managed to dodge the attack. Anko decided to use that moment to make her attack, and jumped from the snake's head, while making several hand seals.

"Fire Release: Blazing Snake!"

Anko fired a stream of fire that, like the name implied, took the shape of a snake. The fire snake zigzagged its way towards the rhino, before blasting against one of its eyes, making the summoned animal to bellow in pain.

"Now the other one!" Anko said, while landing on the animal's forehead, just between the eyes. "Hidden Shadow Snake Hands!"

Multiple snakes shot from under Anko's sleeve, aiming for the other, still unhurt eye. The rhino was forced to close its other eye before the snakes could damage it, but even then it could still feel the pain as dozens of venomous fangs dig into its eyelid. Blinded and in pain, the giant rhino started to trash wildly.

"Aoda, now!" Anko commanded.

Swiftly slithering towards the rhino, Aoda wrapped his body against the Rinnegan-wielding animal, immobilizing it completely.

"Good job, Aoda! Squeeze it until it dies or the summon it's undone, whatever comes first!" Anko cheered the giant snake.

"I shall do as you say," the snake said, as he tried to increase the pressure as much as he could. Something then caught his eye.
"Anko-sama, we might be in trouble now."

Looking at the direction from which Aoda was looking, Anko saw a colossal bird with a massive, drill-shaped beak diving towards them, probably trying to release its partner.

"Oh shit!" Anko cursed, before jumping to a nearby roof. "I'll try to keep it away from you, Aoda!"

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Suddenly, a colossal toad appeared just above the giant bird, falling down and taking the giant flyer under its weight. The bird cawed in pain before the damage the sheer weight of the toad was causing was too much to sustain, and was promptly unsummoned. A few seconds later, the giant rhino also succumbed to Aoda's hold, and disappeared in a cloud of smoke as well.

"Hn. Never thought I'd see the day in which a toad would help me," Aoda commented in a neutral tone.

"I'm not exactly happy helping your kind either, so show some gratitude!" the giant toad fired back.

"Gamabunta, enough!" the man atop the toad's head, Jiraiya spoke.
"We're all on the same side here. Please put aside your antagonism for snakes."

"Yes, don't make me go down there, boy!" Shima said in a tone of a mother chastising her misbehaving son.

"Hmph!" Gamabunta grunted, as he crossed his arms.

"Hokage-sama!" Anko shouted, as she rushed towards him.

Jiraiya jumped from Gamabunta's head, and went to meet the Special Jonin.

"Anko, what's the situation here?" Jiraiya asked.

"Those things are making a number on the village," Anko began.
"Even if we win, the collateral damage is going to leave the village looking like shit."

"The fastest way to deal with these summoned animals is to find and defeat the summoner," Jiraya told Anko. "That way, we can deal with all of them in one go."

"Easier said than done. Any idea of who he is?" Anko asked.

"Yes. But finding him won't be easy, with all the chaos-"

"Then let me save you the trouble, Jiraiya-sensei," a deep, male voice said, drawing the attention of both Jiraiya and Anko.

Turning around, Hokage and Special Jonin saw Pain, the leader of the Akatsuki. Or better said, all six bodies that composed his being, with Konan joining them shortly after.

"You know why I'm here, sensei," the main Pain said in his cold and emotionless voice. "Hand me the two jinchuriki immediately, or by the end of the day, your village will be nothing more than a smoking ruin."

Jiraiya's eyes were wide open in shock upon seeing Yahiko and Konan, two of his beloved students, looking at him with cold, dead eyes. The Hokage thought that he was mentally prepared for this moment, but that wasn't true.

"I didn't want to believe it was true but now..." Jiraiya mumbled.
"Yahiko... Konan... I'm sorry... I failed you..."

"We don't want your apologies, sensei," Konan harshly interceded.
"The jinchuriki. Now."

There was a moment of silence, in which Jiraiya's face adopted a contemplative, almost meditative expression, as if he was pondering their demands, much to Anko's shock.

"Hokage-sama, you won't be thinking in-" Anko began.

"Yes, I failed you. The fact that you're part of Akatsuki is the proof," Jiraiya sadly admitted. Then, his expression changed to one of determination. "However, I can't let my past failures to keep making new ones! Konoha is my home, and everybody who live on it, jinchuriki or not, are under my protection! So if you want to take Naruto and Fu, you'll have to kill me first!"

Pain, however, looked undeterred.

"So be it then... sensei," was all what Pain said.

Author's Note: And thus, Konoha's greatest challenge begins!

Konoha using the Chakra Golems is something I've been dying to write since I introduced them all the way back during the Kirigakure Civil War. Guess that, after fighting against them for so long, it was about time to use them themselves. Especially since Konoha is the village that houses the remnant of the Uzumaki clan.

I hope that those who asked more of Team Gai are satisfied. I know that Team Gai fighting Kisame already happened in canon, but frankly, I was unable to think in anybody better suited to deal with him. Though unlike canon, I wanted to put more emphasis on Neji, Lee and Tenten rather than Gai. And don't worry, Team Gai will have more chances to shine in the arcs to come.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

The Invasion of Konoha begins! Who will live, who will die? Will Akatsuki claim at least one jinchuriki, or will Konoha finally break their streak of victories? Tell me your thoughts on this chapter with a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Akatsuki Invasion, Part II

Author's Note: People seems to be pretty excited for this arc. That's good! Because let's say that tackling this arc intimidated me a bit. With some of the past arcs, improving them was easy, but how do you improve what's considered one of the best, of not THE best arc of Shippuden? Anyway, enjoy the second part:

Chapter 84:

The Akatsuki Invasion, Part II

or

The Most Powerful Bloodline Limit

Jiraiya and Anko were standing in front of the six paths of Pain plus Konan, both parties involved tensed up, waiting for the other to make the other move. Still, Jiraiya wasn't ready to fight. At least, not yet. He needed some answers first.

"I can't understand it... what happened to you? Why did you end up joining Akatsuki?" Jiraiya asked, some sadness seeping through his voice.

"We didn't 'join' Akatsuki, sensei," it was Konan who replied, taking a step forward. "Akatsuki is our very own creation. A tool that will shape the world into a place where conflict does not exist, where no children will have to see their parents getting murdered before their very eyes, a place where revenge and suffering won't be allowed to exist."

"Exactly," Pain agreed. "Sensei, you said you wanted to bring peace to the ninja world. But all your efforts have been in vain. Even with all the power you now possess as Hokage, the world isn't much better than it was twenty years ago. The apprentices shall succeed where the master failed."

"You call THIS to make the world a more peaceful place!?" an outraged Jiraiya shouted, spreading his arms around in order to emphasize the wanton destruction going around him. "It seems that my failure as your teacher was even greater than I thought if you got that idea from me."

"Sometimes, sacrifices are needed in order to obtain a better tomorrow," Pain rebutted. "Yes, this is a war, I won't deny it. And many people will die. But it's a war to end all wars. Once Akatsuki is victorious, conflict will be a thing of the past."

"It's not that easy, and you know it," Jiraiya angrily replied. "The people you are killing today have loved ones. Loved ones that, even if you succeed at the end of the day, will seek revenge on you, feeding the cycle of hatred that plagues the ninja world. That's why conflict cannot be ended with more conflict!"

"Yes, I'm aware of that possibility. But once our plan succeeds, such thing will be irrelevant," Pain replied. "Because what are a bunch of people seeking revenge compared to the power once wielded to the Sage of the Six Paths?"

"So, that's your endgame? To use the power of the Ten Tails to impose peace by force?" Jiraiya asked.

"Peace imposed by force is a better alternative than letting conflict to happen freely," Konan stepped in.

"No, it isn't! Peace can't never be forced, it's something that can only be achieved once all the parts of a conflict reach an understanding," Jiraiya rebutted. "Otherwise, you aren't eliminating conflict, just pushing it under the rug! It will do nothing but fester and grow up, until it can't be hidden anymore!"

"In the current situation, maybe. But like I said before, it won't happen in the new world order Akatsuki is planning to create," Pain reiterated. "Enough chit-chat, sensei, you know what we want. Give us the jinchuriki of this village, and we shall leave in peace."

"You know I can't do that, Yahiko," Jiraiya replied, before he raised an eyebrow. "Or is it Nagato?"

"Neither Yahiko nor Nagato exist anymore, sensei. Only Pain remains," Pain ominously replied, as he took a step forward. "Pain that you, too, shall experience."

"Hokage-sama?" Anko asked. "Your orders?"

"Anko, we are about to fight somebody who wields the most powerful Bloodline Limit that has ever existed," Jiraiya grimly warned her. "My advice would be to stand back and support me from afar, or else you might end up dead. I can't fight and protect you at the same time."

Anko couldn't help but sigh in resignation. "This is like Orochimaru's invasion all over again..."

"Don't beat yourself for this, Anko. No ninja expects to face an enemy of this caliber in their lives," Jiraiya reassured her.

"Alright. I'll try to help as much as I can without getting in the way," Anko told him.

One of the Pains, the one with the ponytail, started to swiftly make hand seals, as he prepared to use his only jutsu.

"Summoning Jutsu! Summoning Jutsu"

Slamming his palm in the floor twice, Ponytail Pain summoned a gigantic, multi-headed dog with maroon fur and Rinnegan eyes, as well as an equally massive crustacean.

" So, that's the body that can summon giant beasts to battle. All those other animals wreaking havoc around us must be his doing then. Though I doubt he has that many summons in reserve, meaning that he can't summon more without recalling them from their original positions. And if I can kill him, the summons will be canceled," Jiraiya quickly analyzed. "Gamabunta! Go for the crab! That dog will create clones of itself if it's struck with a bladed weapon!"

"Leave that to us then! Aoda!" Anko shouted.

The toad and the snake lunging forward, Gamabunta delivering a swing of his sword at the giant crustacean, which grabbed the blade with one of its claws, while Aoda wrapped himself against the dog, who trashed wildly in an attempt to free itself from the giant snake.

At that point, puppet Pain decided to attack. He detached his left forearm from the rest of the arm, which was connected by a long cluster of segmented missiles. Said missiles quickly took off, flying at Jiraiya and Anko. Jiraiya quickly countered that attack with a jutsu of his own.

"Earth Release: Earth Style Wall!"

Slamming both hands into the ground, and pouring nature energy into the jutsu, Jiraiya erected a massive wall between himself and his enemies, the wall being twice as tall and thick as they normally were. There were several explosions that caused a small tremor, but the wall resisted.

"Jiraiya-chan, above you!" Shima shouted.

Jiraiya looked up and saw Konan floating above him, having just finished to prepare a jutsu.

"Paper Drizzle!"

From her paper wings, Konan fired a massive barrage of paper darts at Jiraiya and Anko. Fortunately, Anko was quick enough to prepare a counterattack.

"Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

Anko breathed a massive stream of fire at the incoming paper, but for some reason, not only she failed to counter the attack, but the paper barrage was slowly pushing the fire back at her, much to her shock.

"Anko, jump back!" Jiraiya shouted.

Both him and Anko jumped in different directions, as they ran away from the rain of paper projectiles, that fell with a force strong enough to shatter the ground.

"The fuck? Papers are supposed to burn!" Anko protested. "How is that bitch able to-"

"Shima, I need some oil!" Jiraiya called.

"You got it, boy!" Shima replied, as her dewlap swelled, before releasing a wide stream of oil at the incoming paper darts, stopping them on their tracks, and even carrying enough momentum to continue flying towards Konan.

"Anko, again! The two of us together!" Jiraiya told her.

Anko nodded, as both she and Jiraiya started to make hand seals.

"Fire Release: Flame Toad Bullet!"

"Fire Release: Great Dragon Fi-"

However, only Jiraiya was able to use fire to ignite the oil, as Anko was attacked from the side by one of the Pains, the one with long, loose hair, as he tried to skewer Anko with a sharp black rod he produced from under his sleeve.

"Shit!" Anko cursed, as she barely parried the blow with a kunai. Her enemy continued delivering vicious swings at her, making her to take a step back with each attack she parried. "Shit, shit, shit!"

"Anko, behind you!" Jiraiya warned.

Anko quickly looked back to see another Pain, one with broad shoulders and a very unfriendly face, about to attack her with one of those black rods.

"OH SHIT!" Anko shouted once again, as she made a hand seal just before the two Pain bodies skewered her.

The moment the black rods pierced her body, "Anko" quickly melted into a puddle of mud, causing the two Paths of Pain to frantically look around in different directions. The real Anko appeared from behind a mountain of rubble, and launched her attack.

"Hidden Shadow Snake Hands!"

Once again, more snakes shot from under Anko's sleeve, ready to dig their fangs into the burly Pain, the one who had her back turned at her. But much to her surprise, her would be victim ducked in the last second. The other pain rushed towards her, forcing her into the defensive once again.

"What the...? How the hell did he know I was going to attack?" Anko said, as she and the other two Pains traded jabs. "Come on you dipshits, get-WHOA!"

Anko was interrupted when she felt a long tongue wrapping around her waist, and pulling her upwards towards the roof of a nearby building with such strength, one could mistake said tongue for a steel cable attached to a crane. When her feet touched solid ground again, she saw she was besides the Hokage, and it was the small toad on his shoulder who pulled her back.

"Goob job, Ma," Jiraiya told the toad.

"Yeah, nice save there, granny," Anko thanked her.

"Don't mention it," the old toad replied. "Come on kids, you need to step up your game! Those guys are kicking your asses!"

"We noticed, Ma, thanks for the observation," Jiraiya replied, rolling his eyes. "In case you didn't hear me before, we're fighting against somebody who wields the most powerful Bloodline Limit to ever exist, so cut us some slack."

"It seems that the intel we have on those guys isn't even complete," Anko pointed out. "That Rinnegan allows them to see in an area around them, kinda like the Byakugan."

"Naruto told me something similar when they fought him in the past," Jiraiya said, rubbing his chin. "Albeit I don't think it's the case, since they sometimes managed to catch them off guard quite a few times."

"What can it be, then?" Anko asked.

But Anko got no question when the Six Paths of Pain landed in the same roof behind them, forcing the two Konoha ninja to turn back and adopt a fighting stance.

"You can't escape from me, sensei," the main Pain said in a menacing tone. "The jinchuriki is your adopted son, yes? If you refuse to tell me where he is hiding, then if I make you scream in agony, he shall come to me."

"You're very bold of you to make such claim, Nagato. Rinnegan or not, you're way above your head," Jiraiya told him back.

"It's you who's over your head, sensei," Pain said, staking a step forward, while raising a palm at him. "You're the one willing to fight a god, after all."

...

Meanwhile, at another part of Konoha, Kisame continued his duel with Team Gai. What it used to be a street was now nothing but mountains of rubble flooded by water, thanks to all the collateral damage of the battle. For most part, Gai and Lee engaged the Akatsuki in hand to hand combat, while Neji and Tenten supported them from afar, trying to capitalize any opening.

"Water Release: Multiple Shark Bullets!"

After finishing the hand sequence, a multitude of globs of water shot towards all members of Team Gai, taking the shape of ravenous sharks, their jaws full of teeth wide open and ready to taste the flesh of the Konoha ninja.

And, as they defended from Kisame's attack, the shark ninja dashed forward, going past Gai and Lee, and heading towards Neji. In less than two seconds, he was already besides him.

"You go down first, Hyuga!" Kisame laughed, as he brought down Samehada.

"I don't think so!" Neji started to rapidly spin as he released chakra from every point of his body, until he turned into a chakra dome.
"Heavenly Spin!"

The dome started to splash water everywhere, and in a few seconds those splashes became waves. Kisame tried to push his sword with greater strength, as the two opposed forces grinded against each other. But in the end, Neji's defense coupled with the generated waves won out the struggle, with Samehada being unable to absorb the chakra that moved that fast, and was blown away from Kisame's hands.

"Good job, Neji!" Tenten praised, as she leaped above the now unarmed Akatsuki, while unfurling a medium sized scroll. "Now's the chance to take him down! Manipulated Tools: Electric Steel Rain!"

Multiple kunai, shuriken, swords and other bladed weapons rained upon Kisame. And much to his chagrin, said weapons were all crackling with electricity, meaning that he wouldn't just get cut if he was hit. Still, Kisame managed to dodge all the weapons in an impressive display of agility, even making use of backflips and sideflips for added flair.

"Incredible. I never thought a guy his size could be so fast," Tenten said, panting a little.

"Not bad. Your teamwork is excellent. I think I can consider you a worthy challenge," Kisame praised, as he held out his hand. "But that doesn't mean that you'll walk out of this as the winners."

As if it was pulled by an invisible string, Samehada flew towards Kisame like a missile, the shark man grinning in anticipation as his lost sword came back to him.

"NOT SO FAST!" Gai loudly shouted, falling from above, as he stomped the flying sword so hard, not only its momentum was stopped, but it was even buried underwater with a great splash. "Maybe we can't use this sword ourselves, but we can still stop you from using it! Lee, Neji, Tenten, go!"

"YOSH! You got it, Gai-sensei!" Lee shouted, he dashed towards Kisame. "Gate of Pain, open!"

With the additional power boost of the Fourth Gate, Lee turned into a green blur, constantly dashing towards Kisame and delivering punches and kicks fast enough not to give the Akatsuki any time to counter. Still, the Akatsuki member was able to block most of Lee's hits, who failed to hit any vital spot.

" Amazing... even with four gates open, he can still keep up with me!" Lee thought, though he was also rather eager to fight such a challenging enemy. "Should I go for the fifth one?"

"Lee, watch out!" Neji warned, snapping Lee from his thoughts. "Below you!"

"Huh?" the green clad ninja asked.

But it was too late. A Kisame clone formed below him, and pulled him down underwater. Lee tried to push him away, but even with his boosted strength, being underwater greatly slowed down his movements. And much to his horror, the Kisame clone wasn't the only threat: a couple of hungry looking sharks swiftly swam towards him.

"Lee!" Neji cried, as he rushed towards what he presumed was the real Kisame. "Release him at once!"

"Care about yourself first, Hyuga," Kisame said with a chuckle, as he finished another hand seal sequence. "Water Release: Water Dragon Bullet!"

The water behind Kisame rose in the form of a spiraling pillar. And from said pillar, a serpentine dragon emerged, before lunging at Neji, letting out a distorted roar. Neji was forced to stop and counterattack.

"Gate of Opening, open!" Neji cried, as his body flared with a green glow. "Multiple Vacuum Palms!"

Neji thrust his palms back and forth, firing a barrage of vacuum shells at the dragon. Seeing that the dragon was pushing through, Neji increased the intensity and speed of his palms thrusts, generating even more vacuum missiles. His efforts paid off as the dragon was successfully repelled and destroyed.

Unfortunately, the attack was a mere distraction. Even if he had his Byakugan activated, Neji was so focused on the water dragon, he didn't notice Kisame dashing past him until it was too late, heading towards his true target from the very beginning.

"Gai-sensei, he's coming for you!" Neji cried.

Meanwhile, the green clad Jonin was trying to keep Samehada at bay, which was a much harder task than it could appear at first glance. Samehada would sprout spikes on its handle if Gai tried to grab it, while making its extremely sharp scales grow if Gai tried to touch any other part. Thus, Gai was pretty much reduced to kicking and punching the sword whenever it tried to return to its master.

"Water Release: Water Bullet!"

Gai, fortunately, heard Neji's warning, and had ample opportunity to avoid Kisame's attack. On the other hand, that meant that there was nothing between Kisame and his sword, and soon the two of them were reunited once again.

"I admit that your strategy was a sound one," Kisame praised, as he made a couple of one handed swings in the air. "But as you can see, nothing can keep me away from Samehada for long."

Rather than looking annoyed or frustrated, Gai smirked. "That sword is sure something, isn't it?"

"Indeed. Samehada's already transferring me the chakra he absorbed from you while you were trying to futilely keep it away from me," Kisame stated, as he rested his sword over his shoulder. "The longer you take to defeat me, the smaller the chances of such thing happening!"

"I see," Gai said, looking a little pensive. "If that's the case... then I'll have to beat you with my next move!"

"Oh? And what move will that be, taijutsu specialist?" Kisame asked, genuinely curious. Still, the Akatsuki didn't drop his guard, and prepared for pretty much anything.

"I shall incinerate you with my flames of youth! No matter how proficient you are with Water ninjutsu, you won't be able to put them out! Gate of View, Open!" Gai's body exuded so much chakra, it started to blow gusts of wind in every direction, as his skin turned dark red and his eyes opened completely wide. Gai then dashed towards Kisame, the sheer speed carved a path in the water, with the shark ninja almost unable to see him.

"Wha...?" Kisame babbled, as he raised his sword in order to block the incoming attack.

Gai delivered a swift kick to Kisame's chin, sending the Akatsuki flying upwards, before the green clad Jonin leaped into the air, passing Kisame, and readied to deliver his attack.

"Shit, this is bad! Samehada!" Kisame cried as he tried to put the sword before the incoming onslaught.

"MORNING PEACOCK!"

Gai delivered a brutal flurry of punches so fast, his fists were nothing but red blurs. The speed of each punch was such that due to the air friction, it produced a fireball with each hit. The flying fireballs created a fan of flames around Kisame, looking almost a bird made of fire with its wings spread out. Gai finished his combo by kicking Kisame in the chest, sending him flying back to the water with a loud splash.

Gai landed on his feet, but as soon as the effects of the Eight Gates kicked in, his body returned to normal, and dropped to one knee.

"Did I... expend more chakra than I thought...?" Gai wondered, panting.

"Gai-sensei!" Lee cried, as he and his teammates went to check his master.

Kisame, meanwhile, stayed underwater for the time being. His whole body hurt as if he had been trampled by a stampede of wild boars. His Akatsuki cloak had been completely burned and torn apart, now only a few tatters remaining. Fortunately, not only he was able to use Samehada to block some of the damage, but the sword had managed to absorb some of Gai's chakra whenever his fists touched the sword, which was now being used to nurse his wounds.

" I don't think I've ever experienced an attack that brutal before," Kisame reflected, as his body slowly recovered. He realized Gai's state, and smirked. "That idiot, he used a technique that would let him completely drained and defenseless. He gambled and lost. Now, it's about time to end this! "

Feeling confident with the amount of recovered chakra, Kisame dashed out of the water towards the now defenseless Gai.

"You're mine!" Kisame said with a predatory glee.

"I can assure you he's not!" another voice said.

Suddenly, Rock Lee appeared between Gai and Kisame, as he delivered a roundhouse kick at the shark ninja. Who was forced to back off. Lee continued his assault of punches and mostly kick combos, before standing on his hands, spreading his legs, and spinning around himself.

"Konoha Reverse Whirlwind!"

Lee spun at such speed, he even formed a tornado around himself, which pushed Kisame backwards. At that point, Tenten appeared just behind him, her body glowing with a green aura, and a huge sword on each hand.

"Raging Bladestorm!"

Tenten started to spin as well, turning herself into a razor-sharp tornado. Pumping chakra into his feet, Kisame leaped away before he could be skewered. He thought that he had avoided her attack, but he noticed that cuts were starting to open in both his arms and his chest.

"Vacuum Blade Palm!"

While still mid air, Kisame saw several blades of vacuum flying at him, fired by Neji. Using Samehada, Kisame was able to deflect the first two, but the third one blew the sword out of his hand, as the two of them fell to the water below with a splash.

"Good one, Neji!" Lee praised, giving his teammate a thumbs up.

"Time to finish that oversized piece of shushi off!" Tenten declared.

Suddenly, the water flooding the wrecked streets started to roar, before its level started to decrease, slowly but surely.

"W-What's going on?" Tenten asked, keeping her guard up. "Neji?"

"Kisame is trying to escape by going underground!" Neji told them, as he saw the shark man digging away. "And since he used his chakra to create and maintain all this water, it's disappearing now that Kisame is no longer here."

"Should we go after him?" Lee asked.

Neji shook his head. "No. We have plenty of things to do here. We need to protect the civilians, as well as deal with the enemies still attacking the village."

"Not to mention, we need to take Gai-sensei to a safe place!" Lee said.

"No, I'm... I'm okay," the green clad Jonin said, as he stood back on his feet. "Using the Sixth Gate left me a bit drained. I may not be able to help much, but I can still defend myself. You don't have to concern yourself with me."

"But Gai-sensei-" Lee tried to protest, before Gai raised a hand to silence him.

"I appreciate your thought, Lee, but remember, you're no longer a Genin. You need to know who needs to be protected the most," Gai replied. "And right now, the civilians and the wounded take far more priority than me."

"I... you're right, Gai-sensei," Lee said, before giving Gai a thumbs up, his face radiating determination. "We won't let you down, Gai-sensei! You can count on us!"

"I'm seeing a group of ninjas escorting a civilian group towards one of the bunkers," Neji stated, as his Byakugan scanned the nearby area. "However, the White Zetsu clones are giving them some trouble."

"Then that's where we need to go," Tenten said, with her male teammates nodding in agreement.

...

Meanwhile, not far away from there, Dosu, Zaku and Kin were fighting a bunch of White Zetsu clones, alongside a couple of chakra golems. So far, they managed to clear a street of them, which could be used as a safe passage for civilians. However, Dosu would soon find out that it wouldn't remain safe for long.

"I'm hearing multiple steps coming to this direction," Dosu warned his teammates. "They appear to be more White Zetsu."

"Ha! Let them come! We'll blast them into bits like we did with their friends!" Zaku boasted, hitting his fists together.

And just like Dosu said, a horde of White Zetsu clones made itself known in no time, letting out multiple yells and cries as they charged forward.

"I'll stop them in their tracks!" Kin said, as she took a step forward, while making several hand seals. "Demonic Illusion: Spiraling Vertigo!"

The genjutsu took hold of the Zetsu, at least those in the first lines of attack, and they quickly tripped and fell to the floor on their faces as if they were drunk. They tried to get up, but slipped and fell again, much to their still unaffected brothers' frustration.

"You're under a genjutsu, idiots! Dispel it!" one White Zetsu said.

"Maybe we should liberate them ourselves," another clone stated, as he knelt down beside a fallen clone, touched his back, and sent a disruptive wave of chakra through his body.

"Oh no, I won't let you!" Zaku said as he aimed his hands forward, "Decapitating Airwaves!"

Zaku two streams of pressurized air and soundwaves from the holes of his palms, blasting both the incapacitated and abled Zetsu clones away, though those standing the furthest weren't hit by the radius of the attack.

"Good job. It seems you were able to back your boasts this time," Kin praised her teammate with a rogue smirk.

"Yeah, I know, right?" Zaku replied, before Kin's words sunk in, and frowned. "Hey, what do you mean 'this time'?"

"Guys, jump to the side!" Dosu warned, as he charged towards them.

The two of them were startled by the sudden cry of alarm, but managed to do so just in time, as a couple of White Zetsu clones emerged from below them, and tried and failed to grab their legs.

"Underground Sonic Boom!"

Dosu slammed both his Melody Gauntlets into the ground between the Zetsu, sending a powerful sonic blast that ripped the ground apart, killing the artificial creatures almost instantly.

"How many times do I need to tell you not to lower your guard?" Dosu asked, his voice sounding a little frustrated. "Stay alert, here they come more of them!"

And indeed, since Zaku had only been able to destroy the first few lines, more White Zetsu remained in the further back, which took note of Zaku's wide area of attack, and were now advancing by crawling through the walls of the buildings that made up the street, something that wasn't lost on the spiky haired teenager.

"Shit! I can't hit all of them at once!" Zaku complained, as he tried to decide where should he aim.

"Not to mention, your attack is going to cause one hell of collateral damage if you aim at those buildings," Kin added.

The solution, however, came in the form of the couple of chakra golems, who aimed their cannon forearms at the White Zetsu, before releasing a stream of fire at them, with enough precision to burn the crawling humanoids but only cause minimal damage to the buildings. Seeing their advance foiled, the Zetsu started to fall back.

"HELL YEAH!" Zaku said, pumping his fists. "Konoha has the coolest toys! I'm so glad we switched sides to them!"

As Zaku cheered, Dosu's ears picked a new enemy arriving.

"Something is coming!" Dosu warned.

"More White Zetsu?" Kin asked.

"No, this is... much bigger!" Dosu said, before turning around and pointing to a nearby building. "It's coming from that roof!"

As soon as his words left his bandaged lips, something that looked like a White Zetsu but was much bigger leaped from the roof of said building, and landed on top of a golem, crushing it into scrap metal almost instantly.

"THE HELL!?" Kin screamed. "What the fuck is that!?"

The creature looked like a White Zetsu indeed, but it was far larger. It had a very muscular body, six arms, two thick legs, and three heads mounted on top of each other. The creature turned at the other golem, who raised its flamethrower arm to burn it to a crisp. But the Zetsu mutant was faster, grabbed the arm and ripped it from the body as if it was nothing. Then he used the arm to beat the golem into a pile of scrap. Then, he turned his three heads at the former Oto ninjas, who took a step back, and snarled.

"I think he found the next thing to smash," Kin whimpered.

"DIEEEEEEEE!" the three heads of the monstrous Zetsu said at once as he charged forward.

"Zaku, Kin, stop him on his tracks!" Dosu ordered.

"Very well then," Zaku agreed, not showing the enthusiasm he displayed before, before taking aim at the hulking Zetsu.

"Decapitating Air Waves!"

The huge Zetsu was hit by the two streams of pressurized air and soundwaves, but it only succeeded in slowing him down. That moment, Kin decided to make her move, as she picked a bunch of senbon from her ninja tool pouch.

"Aim for the heads!" Dosu commanded.

Kin nodded "Lightning Release: Electric Needle Barrage!"

Kin's hands crackled with electricity, which transferred to the steel needles, before tossing them at the cluster of three heads, all of them hitting their mark, with some even stabbing into an eye. The White Zetsu aberration roared in pain, that moment of distraction making him to be pushed back by Zaku's stream.

"Now's my chance!" Dosu said, as he dashed forward to his foe, before leaping, landing on the creature's massive shoulder.

"Resonating Sonic Cage!"

Dosu slammed both fists against the trio of heads, creating a cage of high intensity soundwaves that constantly clashed and bounced against each other. The soundwaves soon started to mess with the heads, which started to swole until they exploded like ballooons with too much air inside. The white giant fell forward with a loud thud, as Dosu expertly landed back on his feet.

"Whew, we did it," Kin said, panting a little.

"Yeah, nothing can beat us!" Zaku said, his pride coming back in full force.

As soon as Zaku said that, a huge white meteor landed between them, impacting with so much force it opened a crater and sent the three former Oto ninjas flying in different directions. When the cloud of dirt disappeared, they could see it was yet another mosntrous White Zetsu.

"DIEEEE!" the three heads screamed in unison, as the creature charged at Zaku, who was trying to get back on his feet.

"Zaku, get away from there!" Dosu cried, as he tried as best as he could to get back on his feet and assist his friend.

"Rasengan!"

However, just before the monster could get any of his six hands on Zaku, yet another white and blue meteor fell, this time landed on the giant creature, the impact creating yet another crater, followed by a chakra explosion that turned the giant Zetsu into white mush, which was splattered everywhere. From the smoke produced by the blast, a lone figure emerged. A young boy with spiky white hair.

"Hey, are you okay?" the newcomer asked.

"Y-You!" Zaku said, as he hobbled towards him. "What are you doing here? Shouldn't you be in a coma?"

"Given that I saved your life, a 'thank you' would be appreciated.," Hagane said, as he frowned a little while crossing his arms.

"Thank you for your assistance, Hagane-san," Dosu said, bowing his head a little. "But my teammate's question remains. When did you get better?"

"Well, you see-"

"HAGANE!" a female voice screamed, as yet a third meteor landed besides them opening another crater. A very angry looking blond woman emerged from that crater.

"Oh, hey mom!" Hagane nonchalantly greeted Tsunade -who had a small Katsuyu clone on her shoulder-, who stomped towards him.

"WHAT THE HELL ARE YOU DOING!?" Tsunade roared, as he grabbed her son by his shoulders, and started to shake him.

"Leaving the hospital without telling anybody, and going to fight on your own! You could have been seriously hurt!"

Hagane lowered his head. "I'm sorry mom. When I woke up, I saw through the window that we were under attack, and went to find out what was going on. I was on my way to meet with Kaida and Tenzo-sensei when I ran into them. But I understand that I acted rashly and without thinking, something my sister would do. I could have at the very least left a note."

Tsunade's anger mellowed out a little after hearing that explanation, and most importantly, seeing that her son was fine.

"Alright. I'll let this incident go, given the circumstances," Tsunade replied. "Can you sense your father or Naruto?"

Hagane closed his eyes, and made a hand seal. "Dad is at the other side of the village, to the southeast. He's fighting against a very powerful Akatsuki. As for Naruto-niisan... wait, this can't be right, I can't sense him anywhere!"

"Don't worry about Naruto, I'm sure he's fine," Tsunade confidently said. "Now I need to go and help your father. I'm sure the Akatsuki is fighting against is Pain himself. That idiot wants to convince his former apprentice to switch sides and drop Akatsuki, but all what he'll achieve is getting himself killed."

"I'm going with you," Hagane stated.

"Definitely NO, young mister!" Tsunade firmly stated. "I'm not going to tell you to find somewhere to hide, but stay away from Akatsuki or any enemy that might prove too much of a challenge, understood?"

Hagane sighed in resignation. "Yes, mom. However, there's something you need to know. It's about one of the Akatsuki, Toneri."

"The guy who put you in a coma," Tsunade seethed, as she narrowed her eyes. "What about him?"

"I remembered my fight against him. I was able to overcome his Truth Seeking Balls, and I think I know how," Hagane stated. "I infuse all my moves with senjutsu chakra, which makes me realize that maybe that's the key to defeat him."

"Right now, besides you, the only ones able to use Senjutsu are your father, Naruto and myself," Tsunade said, placing her hands on her hips. "Your father appears to be busy right now, and I'm not good against aerial opponents. Guess it'll have to be Naruto. Katsuyu, you heard that?"

"Right, Tsunade-sama," the clone on her shoulder replied. "If any of my clones see Naruto, I'll make him know."

"Good," Tsunade nodded, before her eyes drifted towards Anko's students, who looked like they've been put through a grinder. "You three, stay with my son and make sure he doesn't try anything stupid."

"Come on mom, I'm not Kaida, I don't need a babysitter," Hagane complained.

"And while you're at it, you should heal their wounds as well," Tsunade finished. "Now I don't want to hear that you fought against an Akatsuki on your own, you hear me? Alright, see you soon."

And with that, Tsunade leaped into the sky, ready to help her husband.

...

Little by little, the Katsuyu clones started to spread around the village, quickly healing the wounded and allowing them to return to the battle, or just stopping them from being harmed in the first place so they could fight uninterrupted.

One such group was made of Haku and Kurenai, alongside several ANBU lead by Yugao, who continued to fight against the horde of White Zetsu clones and the Moon puppets, though unfortunately they were being pushed back. Haku pulled his collapsible chakra bow.

"Ice Release: Freezing Arrow!"

Haku fired several ice arrows in quick succession at the incoming Zetsu clones. Some of them found their mark, partially freezing the humanoid creatures, though some of them were deflected or blocked. Those who managed to avoid the ice arrows continued forward, and two of them even managed to go all the way to the Ice Ninja.

"DIE!" one of the Zetsus cried, as he leaped at him.

Haku muttered a curse as he jumped backwards while generating a spear made of ice in his hand, but such defensive measure was going to prove unnecessary.

"Hazy Moon Night!"

The White Zetsu clones were suddenly cut into pieces, just as Yugao appeared in front of Haku.

"You okay?" the purple haired woman asked.

"Yes. Thanks for the help, Yugao-san," Haku greeted, before his eyes darted again to the Zetsu clones. "Watch out!"

"Let's attack from afar!" one of the Zetsu clones commanded, as he and his brothers started to make the same chain of seals. "Wood Release: Wood Stake Throw!"

Sharp wooden stakes burst from the Zetsus' bodies, before being fired at great speed at the Konoha ninja, which they tried to either dodge or deflect them, some succeeding, others not. Kurenai prepared a jutsu to counter this attack.

"Earth Release: Earth Style Wall!"

The Genjutsu Mistress slammed both hands into the ground, erecting a large wall of earth and rock, which stopped the incoming stakes in its tracks. Unfortunately, it did little to stop the Moon Puppets to blow it to pieces with their golden chakra blasts, allowing the Zetsu to continue their advance unimpeded

"Fall back!" Yugao called, moving back while tossing kunai and shuriken as well.

"Haku," Kurenai called her student. "If we can't defeat these enemies in direct combat, then an indirect approach may work."

Haku nodded, understanding perfectly what she meant.

"Everybody, get ready. Things are going to get a little..." Haku began, as his lips curved into a small smirk, as he made a single hand seal. "... hazy. Hiding in the Mist Jutsu!"

A dense fog quickly covered the streets blinding both friends and foes alike.

"Quickly, use Fire and Wind Release ninjutsu to dispel this fog!" one of the Zetsu commanded.

The others nodded in agreement, and made the proper hand seals before expelling from their mouths streams of fire and gusts of wind. But much to their shock, the mist didn't even waver.

"What the... what's with this mist?" one of the clones asked, as a figure appeared behind him, a kunai in their hand. "AAAAAARRGH!"

Soon the screams of the Zetsu clones started to fill the air as they were being picked one by one by the Konoha ninja, who either were unimpeded by the mist, or could navigate around it thanks to some extraordinary senses. That's it, until one of them realized what was going on.

"Everybody, listen! The mist won't dispel because it's not real mist! They trapped us in a genjutsu!" a White Zetsu clone said in realization, before bringing his hands together in a seal, and sending a burst of chakra through his body. "Release!"

Said action was echoed by the rest of the Zetsu, who started to disturb their chakra as well, and soon, they saw how the mist started to dispel...

"Yes! Ha, they think they could trick us with such a simple genjutsu!" one of the Zetsu clones boasted.

... before the mist quickly reformed.

"WHAT!?" Several Zetsu cried in unison. "What's with this genj- AAARGH!"

The Zetsu continued to drop like flies until none of them were left, all of them dying without realizing the truth. While it was true that the mist was a genjutsu, it was one cast by Kurenai. Haku had used the real jutsu as well, creating two layers of mist, one illusory and another real. Because as Kurenai used to say, the beauty of genjutsu was that it could make you doubt reality itself.

"Well done, Kurenai, Haku!" Yugao praised her friend and her adopted son. "Now only the puppets remain!"

Despite being alone against the Konoha ninjas, the Moon Puppets showed no signs of falling back, and prepared to attack. Then again, the Konoha ninja wouldn't be able to use the same tactic to beat them, since as inorganic beings that lacked a mind of their own, they weren't affected by genjutsu.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Of course, being crushed under the weight of a massive toad suddenly summoned a few meters above their heads was something they weren't unaffected by.

"Hey there!" Naruto said, waving from atop the toad's head, before landing besides Kurenai and Haku. Fukasaku, the Toad Sage, was riding on his back. "Sorry for the lateness, hehe!"

"Naruto, where have you been?" Kurenai asked, as she rushed towards the blond. His golden eyes indicated his Sage Mode was active. "Hinata has been looking for you, but her Tenseigan was unable to find you anywhere in the village!"

"I was in the bunker under my house. It's protected against all kind of doujutsu, so guess that's why she was unable to locate me," Naruto replied, as he placed a hand in the back of his head. "Sorry if I worried you."

"Took me a while to find the lad," Fukasaku said, sighing a little. "But now he's here."

"It's okay, what matters is that Akatsuki didn't get their hands on you," Haku stated in a somewhat relieved tone. "What were you doing there?"

"Getting prepared," was Naruto's answer. "I summoned three clones, and the four of us were gathering nature energy for Sage Mode. I had to do that in order to keep the clones protected. Akatsuki knows they have to target them if they want to cut Sage Mode off of me."

"A very intelligent strategy, Naruto," Kurenai agreed with a nod. "Though we could have used your help here a little earlier."

"By the way, where is Hinata-hime?" Naruto asked.

Haku merely pointed into the sky, where some flashes of light could be seen every few seconds.

"She's fighting Toneri alongside Fu," Haku told him.

"Then I need to help the two of them as soon as possible!" Naruto said, as he was ready to leave.

"Naruto, wait! You have no way to help somebody fighting an aerial battle!" Kurenai told him. "Even with that jutsu of yours-"

"Actually, Naruto-kun might be of more help than you realize," a Katsuyu clone said, just as she landed on Naruto's shoulder.

"Naruto-kun, I bring news from your little brother."

"Hagane? Is he okay?" the blond asked, a bit worried.

"He is. He has awakened, and joined the fight alongside Tsunade-sama and other Konoha ninjas," the slug fragment informed.

Naruto sighed in relief. "Thank goodness he's alright," he then crossed his arms, and frowned a little. "Though he could have chosen a better time to wake up, you know?"

"I also have an important message from him," Katsuyu continued. "He told me was able to overcome Toneri's Truth Seeking Balls thanks to his Senjutsu. Truth Seeking Balls can't nullify ninjutsu if it has nature energy on it!"

"Heh, I've been a Sage most of my life, and I wasn't even aware of that" Fukasaku said, chuckling a little. "It's true what they say that no matter how old you are, you can always learn new things."

"Really? Great!" Naruto said, as he punched his palm. "Because I have Rasenshuriken with Toneri's name on it!" Naruto then jumped a top of the toad's head, and pointed in the direction of the aerial fight. "Come on, Gamaken! There's a pale ass in dire need of a good kicking!"

...

Several blocks away from there, Kakashi's Animal Squad, accompanied by Rin, were clearing the streets of White Zetsu clones. And just like it happened to the Assassination Squad, they also encountered a bunch of monstrous White Zetsu clones. Unlike them, however, they saw how they were born: three White Zetsu clones merged together, becoming a mass of white flesh, until it took a vaguely humaoid form with multiple arms and heads.

"Just when you think that those things couldn't be anymore disgusting..." Tamaki gagged in disgust.

"Disgusting or not, they're going down!" Kiba yelled, as he and Akamaru rushed forward. "Passing Fang!"

Kiba turned into a living drill, as he and Akamaru dived at one of the merged Zetsu. However, the giant Zetsu countered their charge with a couple of brutal punches that send the Inuzuka and his dog flying back.

"Kiba!" Tamaki yelled, before turning at the White Zetsu, and snarled. "You're going to pay for that! Fire Release: Blistering Firecat!"

Tamaki exhaled a massive wall of fire that took the shape of a large cat. The fire cat dashed forward, but the merged Zetsu were already prepared for that, and made several hand seals.

"Water Release: Wild Water Wave!"

Two of the mutant Zetsu heads exhaled a torrent of water from each of their mouths, creating a small tsunami that threatened to flood the street, and everyone on it.

"Shino, Rin, let's lift a barrier, together!" Kakashi commanded, as the three of them went through the same seal sequence. "Earth Release: Earth Style Wall!"

The three of them slammed their hands into the ground, erecting a large and thick rock barrier that acted as a dome, successfully containing the incoming water.

"Good job, you three," Kiba said, as he hobbled towards them, followed by Akamaru.

"That will only delay them. We need a more permanent solution to deal with them," Rin pointed out.

"Alright, it seems like this is a good moment to use a new jutsu I developed!" Tamaki said, before biting her thumb, and making five hand seals. "Summoning Jutsu!"

From a cloud of smoke, one of Tamaki's cats, Hina, appeared.

"How is summoning a cat going to help?" Kiba asked dismissively. "Akamaru and I have been practicing a new jutsu as well. That will what will help us turn the tables!"

"That's not the jutsu I was talking about! I just need Hina to do it!" Tamaki protested. "Hina, it's time."

"Alright!" the female cat said, as she climbed the kunoichi, and set on her head. "Ready whenever you are!"

Tamaki nodded, and made three hand seals. "Human Beast Combination Transformation: Cat Warrior!"

Tamaki and Hina were engulfed by a cloud of smoke, and when it dispelled, Hina was nowhere to be seen, while Tamaki had changed drastically.

"Whoa..." Rin said in awe.

Tamaki now looked a bit taller and more muscular, but that was the least noticeable change. Her hair had grown longer, and became fuzzier. Her eyes were now yellow with slitted pupils. Her human ears had disappeared, replaced by cat ears that grew at the top of her head. And lastly, Tamaki now had a tail similar to that of a cat.

"In this form, I shall tear those things apart!" Tamaki boasted, before turning at Kiba, and smirked. "What do you think about this transformation?"

"You... you..." Kiba stammered, before his face reddened with anger. "You totally copied my jutsu!"

"What? No, just because I combine with an animal, doesn't mean that-"

"Bah, forget about it!" Kiba huffed, as he sat on Akamaru's back, and made a hand seal. "Human Beast Combination Transformation: Berserker Werewolf!"

Like Tamaki before her, Kiba merged with Akamaru, but while his previous transformation resulted in a large two headed wolf, this one was a much smaller white furred werewolf - relatively small, it was still larger than Kakashi,- which still kept some of Kiba's clothing.

"No wonder Kiba thought that Tamaki had copied him," Rin pointed out.

"Still, they'll have to sort their rivalry later," Shino said, pointing forward, as the two merged Zetsu clones teared the rock barrier down, allowing multiple normal Zetsu a free way forward.

Both Tamaki and Kiba smirked, the former looking at the latter. "Bet I can kill more Zetsu than you."

"Oh, you're on!"

Both cat girl and werewolf dashed forward at a speed unseen previously from them, and started to tear the Zetsu apart like they were made of paper. Some of the Zetsu tried to jump back and attack them with ninjutsu, but neither of their attacks found their mark, and soon they found themselves losing limbs and their very lives to vicious claw swipes and brutal bites. Even the merged Zetsu had trouble keeping up with them.

"The two headed wolf was powerful, but it was too big and hard to control and maneuver," Kiba thought, dodging a kick from a Zetsu, before splitting it in half with a claw swipe. "But this form allows much greater control while keeping the same power."

Rin placed her hands on her hips, and smiled. "Well, look at that, it seems they can back those boasts."

"Indeed," Kakashi agreed. "But better join them. I'm afraid they're going to let their power go to their heads and drop their guard."

"Oh, come on Kakashi, I think your students are old enough to take care of themselves," a new voice said.

Kakashi and Rin froze upon hearing such voice, and turned to the direction it came from. Standing at the roof of a partially collapsed building was Obito Uchiha. The Akatsuki was now wearing a slashed Konoha forehead protector that had a piece of cloth covering his left eye, where Shisui's eye used to be.

"Obito..." Rin apprehensively said.

"Hello there, Rin," Obito said, as he unsheathed his katana. "Now, are you two ready to play with me a little? Team Minato was long overdue of such a reencounter."

Author's Note: And thus, the battle continues. One of the Akatsuki is already out, but there are still many of them causing trouble.

Now you know what happened with Hagane. After so much time, his coma finally ended and is good and kicking! And even better, he was able to pass on the key to bypass Toneri's Truth Seeking Balls. Yeah, I know I didn't show any progress on Toneri's front, but don't worry, the next chapter will fix that. And yeah, Naruto is also back. Given what happened with Pain the first time they fought, he wanted to make extra sure that he has access to his Sage Mode so he can fight at the top of his game.

Another Akatsuki that also showed up is Obito, and naturally, he did so in front of Kakashi and Rin. Rin already fought Obito once, but I think it was about time that Kakashi went to face his former teammate. Though given what happened the last time Obito showed up... yeah, you can imagine what's going to happen next.

You know, I loved the White Zetsu's ability to merge into a single monster. Sadly, they only used that fusion ability once against Naruto and Killer B, and it wasn't very effective. I wish they used this ability more. Hence, I'm going to feature it more prominently. Also, there are going to be different kinds of mutant Zetsu in the future, so the armies of the bad guys don't look so homogeneous and dull.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading the chapter.

The invasion of Konoha continues! With one Akatsuki down, the good guys' chance of winning increase! But there are still plenty of enemies left, and a couple that haven't appeared yet. Tell me your thoughts of the chapter and the arc so far in a review. Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Akatsuki Invasion, Part III

So, what do you think about my take on Pain's invasion? Liking it so far? Hope so. With this chapter, we reach the middle point of the arc. Enjoy it:

Chapter 85:

The Akatsuki Invasion, Part III

or

Clash on Earth and Heaven

"We haven't seen each other since you took Rin away from Orochimaru's lair, haven't we?" Obito asked, looking at Kakashi. "Of course, I did get the pleasure to see Rin back in Kumo, when she took Shisui's eye from my face."

"Did you come here to take that eye back?" Kakashi asked. "Or do you want the eye you gave me before becoming an Akatsuki?"

"That eye was a gift, Kakashi, one that I did not regret giving you, even if the circumstances about us changed drastically," Obito said with a smirk. "No, I'm not here for any eyes. You should know that the only thing Konoha has that interests me, besides Rin, are the jinchuriki. We won't leave until we have the two of them."

"Then prepare to be disappointed," Kakashi defiantly replied.

"Why I should? So far, we have captured almost every jinchuriki we got our sights onto," Obito rebutted. "This won't be an exception, especially since Akatsuki is unleashing every resource at its disposal to destroy Konoha and capture its jinchuriki."

"No matter how many missing ninja, self-powered automatons or artificial creatures you throw at us, you will never crush this village," Kakashi fired back. "Naruto and Fu are ninjas of this village, and everyone who fights do so not just to stop Akatsuki from claiming a jinchuriki, but to protect two comrades from the enemy."

"Yeah, yeah, the 'Will of Fire' and all that crap..." Obito dismissively said as he rolled his eyes. "You might have grown taller, Kakashi, but deep down you're still a kid. It's kind of ironic that you used to be far less naïve when you were younger."

"Kakashi isn't naïve, Obito. He believes in something greater than himself, like you did one time," Rin interceded, taking a step forward. "Please Obito, stop all this madness. It's not too late."

Obito grimaced a little, more in sadness rather than disgust, as if he was forced to admit that there was some truth in the words of his former crush.

"I can't," he stated. "Not when I'm so close to the end. Not when I invested so much time and resources. Not when a world free of strife and suffering is at hand!"

"You're doing nothing but creating more suffering!" Rin shouted back, her face turning red with anger, until she felt a hand on her shoulder. A hand belonging to Kakashi.

"Enough," the silver haired Jonin calmly said. "Nothing we say can bring Obito from the darkness he was sunk in. All we can do now is fight to drive him and his Akatsuki pals out of the village. It's time to fight, not to speak."

"For once, you said something intelligent, Kakashi," Obito complimented in a mocking tone. "Though I should point out that it is you who is still deep in the darkness of ignorance. My eyes were opened to the light the day Rin died."

"Shut up already!" Kiba roared, as he and Tamaki leaped towards the half-masked Akatsuki, ready to tear him to shreds with their bare hands.

"You never learn, don't you?" Obito laughed, as he was about to activate his Kamui, letting the swipes phase through him. However, something caught his attention: Kakashi was also using Kamui, opening a portal that quickly sucked his third student in. Obito's only visible eye opened wide upon realizing what Kakashi was planning. "SHIT!"

The Uchiha was forced to leap back before Kiba and Tamaki could reach him. However, the two feral ninjas merely leaped at him again, and this time, Obito had to defend himself.

" Guess this shouldn't be a surprise. After Sasuke found my secret, it was a matter of time before Kakashi learned to use his eye to counter mine," Obito bitterly thought, as he unsheathed his katana in order to parry a claw swipe from Kiba.

" By sending one of our own into Obito's pocket dimension, we make sure he won't be able to use his intangibility or teleportation," Kakashi thought, a smirk forming under his mask. "Not unless he wants Shino's bugs to eat him alive. And even if for some reason I can't get him out of there, Shino can escape on his own with the Reverse Summoning Jutsu."

"Thundering Roar!"

Gathering chakra into his throat, Kiba let out a powerful roar in the form of destructive sonic blasts, which hit Obito squarely, sending him flying. Still, Obito showed that there was more to him than a powerful eye ability. He threw a kunai with wire attached to it towards a nearby wall, breaking the momentum of the impact that sent him flying, while finding a solid footing, even if it was a vertical one.

As this happened, Tamaki made a hand seal.

"Feline Secret Art: Speed Burst!"

Tamaki quickly rushed after him, walking on all fours, moving so fast she left a trail of afterimages in her wake, climbing the wall Obito was attached to using chakra control, she began her vicious assault towards him. Even if Tamaki was fast as lightning, Obito's Sharingan was able to follow her movements -if with some difficulty- and keep her pace.

Then, Obito pulled out a kunai with an explosive tag attached to it, but much to Tamaki's confusion, rather than throwing it at her, he stabbed it into the wall, before jumping away. The second he did that, Kiba burst from said wall, in a failed attempt to catch him off guard.

"Kiba! Wait-"

But it was too late. Obito detonated the explosive paper, which send the animal-like ninja tumbling down the ground again. The one eyed Uchiha laughed.

"This is the best you can train your students, Kakashi?" Obito mocked his former teammate.

"Tamaki! Kiba!" Rin shouted, as she rushed towards them, Kakashi following behind.

"Are they hurt?" Kakashi asked.

"Just a little," Rin said, as she started to heal the two of them at once. "It seems their new forms made them far more durable. An explosive tag so close could very much kill any human being. Question is, how did Obito know that Kiba was going to attack from that direction?"

"I don't know, but I plan to find it out," Kakashi said, as he moved his forehead protector, revealing his Sharingan. "Hey Obito, do you know what else is long overdue? You getting a good beating from yours truly. It will be like in the old times."

"Heh, the old times..." Obito chuckled a little. "I bet you look at the past with fondness, right? Before I 'went evil' and Rin and Minato-sensei were alive and well. Too bad Kakashi, things will never be like they used to be. And that also includes the time in which I was unable to do nothing but lose to you!"

Kakashi's hand was coated in electricity, sounding like a thousand birds chirping. "No, things will never be like they used to, but I can fight to make them even better than they were!"

Kakashi and Obito dashed towards each other, ready to clash for the first time in decades.

...

Meanwhile, in the skies above Konoha, Hinata, Hanabi, and Fu continued their fight against the last Otsutsuki unimpeded. It appeared as if Toneri wanted no interruptions to his fight, and commanded the flying puppets he still had to attack other zones of the village. It worked both ways, since the trio of kunoichi wouldn't have to worry about possible interference from the enemy.

"Lightning Release: Thunder Fang!"

Hinata brought her hands together, generating a mass of lightning that was shot at Toneri. The electricity formed the head of a huge lion, ready to sink its teeth into the Otsutsuki's flesh. Toneri, however, made a hand motion, and one of his four Truth Seeking Balls intercepted the attack, nullifying it completely.

"No effect..." Hinata sadly said.

"Come on, we gotta keep trying!" Hanabi insisted. "Hagane was able to beat this guy, and if that bore with a stick up his ass was able to do it, then so can we!"

"Yeah, every jutsu has a weakness," Fu agreed. "And if we can't find it, we'll find a way around it! If I can only get close enough, I think I can end this in one punch!"

"You're awfully confident in yourself, jinchuriki," Toneri stated. "I can't help but feel a bit insulted."

"I already beat an Akatsuki before, so I don't think why this time the result it's going to be different," Fu rebutted, before pointing at Hinata and Hanabi. "Especially since I have a back-up as awesome as this one! Plus, behold the weapon that already beat an Akatsuki!"

Fu unslung her backpack, revealing a large storage scroll. From the scroll, she unsealed a massive tree log, its branches and roots cleanly cut, with the symbols of Konoha and Taki carved at each of its ends.

"That's your mighty weapon? Don't make me laugh-"

However, Toneri was silenced when Fu suddenly vanished and reappeared from behind him. Startled, the Otsutsuki tried to move the Truth Seeking Balls to intercept the attack, but it was too late. While he was able to project a repulsive force field to counter the impact, Fu gave her log way too much momentum to be stopped, and the giant piece of wood slammed into Toneri's chest, sending him flying.

"YES! Way to go, Fu-san!" Hanabi cheered.

"Arbor-chan never disappoints!" Fu said, while resting the log on her shoulder, and patting it like it was alive.

"No time to celebrate! Come on, we need to finish Toneri off before he recovers!" Hinata urged them.

The trio of girls all flew towards the tumbling Toneri, who was trying to regain his balance. They surrounded him, and went for the kill from a different angle. However, the Otsutsuki was far from finished, as he managed to direct three of his Truth Seeking Balls towards one of the girls each.

"Emerald Reincarnation Explosion!"

The Truth Seeking Balls started to glow with a green light, before it exploded all of sudden, catching the Konoha and Taki ninjas off guard, the former two not being able to use their own orbs as a means of protection.

"Just... what the...?" Fu asked as she noticed something off. Much to her shock, her Tailed Beast cloak was gone. "The hell!? What happened to my Tailed Beast chakra?"

"As you could see right now, I have the power to remove other people's chakra," Toneri told the green haired girl. He coughed some blood. "You managed to land one good hit on me, jinchuriki, but don't think you'll be that lucky again. I'm done playing around."

"Bold statement for somebody who does nothing but cower behind his little barriers," Fu taunted back, as she drew more Tailed Beast chakra, restoring her Chakra Cloak, while gripping her log.

"I can do more than just cower," Toneri calmly replied, but still felt like he was addressing the insult. He brought his hands together in a seal. "Watch."

Large pieces of debris from below shot into the sky, stopping around Toneri. He changed the hand seal, and the large pieces of rock and concrete shot forward towards the trio of kunoichi, like a storm of meteors.

"Hanabi-chan, Fu, behind me!" Hinata urged, as her hands started to crackle with electricity. "Lightning Release: Protection of the Eight Trigrams!"

Hinata started to thrust her open palms back and forth, releasing lightning bolts with each thrust. In no time, she created a massive web of electric bolts that reduced the incoming debris to little more than pebbles and gravel. Some of the lightning bolts flew all the way to Toneri, but the Otsutsuki merely deflected them with his Truth Seeking Balls.

"Impressive, Byakugan Princess," Toneri complimented. "The last time we met I was sadly unable to check your fighting prowess. It's reassuring to see that it matches your beauty."

"You won't find it so reassuring, once you fight with me a little," Hinata coldly said, her brow furrowing. She made a hand seal, and her two Truth Seeking Balls grew and elongated until they turned into giant nail-like spears. "Take this!"

The giant nails flew at Toneri, but the Otsutsuki merely used two of his Truth Seeking Balls to form a barrier, which successfully stopped the attack. He then commanded the remaining two to do the same, blocking another pair of nails, which were made by Hanabi.

"You won't be able to blindside me," Toneri boasted. "With the Tenseigan, I can see everything!"

"Let's see what you do without it then!" Fu shouted as she made a hand seal. "Hiding in the Scale Powder Jutsu!"

Fu exhaled from her mouth a cloud of glittery powder, covering the entire zone. Clapping her hands together, the powder started to shine with a bright light. Hinata and Hanabi closed her eyes in time, but Toneri was caught off guard, and his enhanced vision made the pain of the jutsu even stronger.

"MY EYES! Not again!" the Otsutsuki cursed, as he shielded his eyes with his forearm.

"NOW!" Fu yelled.

The jinchuriki and the youngest Hyuga flew towards the Akatsuki, ready to pound him in, however, when they got in close combat range, Toneri's hands shot sideways, gripping the two of them by their necks. The sudden pressure to her neck made Fu drop Arbor-chan, which fell to the ground below. The Otsutsuki's hold was far stronger than his frame suggested.

"Again you try the same trick against me," Toneri stated, sounding mildly angered, his eyes closed shut. "Didn't I tell you that I've been blind all my life, and as such, I'm more than capable of fighting without sight?"

"Y-yeah," Hanabi choked. "But you aren't using your Tenseigan right now."

"Huh?"

"Lightning Release: Thunder Palm!"

Coming from below, Hinata's electrified palm slammed into Toneri's chin, sending him flying upwards, while forcing him to release Hanabi and Fu. The jinchuriki then shot upwards as well, caught the Otsutsuki in no time, and broke his momentum by grabbing him by the shoulders.

"Hinata, Hanabi, get ready!" Fu shouted, before putting all her strength into tossing Toneri down towards the elder Hyuga.

Hinata's whole body started to crackle with electricity, as she started to spin just as Toneri was about to crash into her.

"Lightning Release: Heavenly Thunderstorm!"

Hinata turned into a spinning sphere of lightning just a split second before Toneri crashed into her, resulting into an explosion of chakra and electric bolts that send the Otsutsuki flying again in a different direction, the same direction Hanabi placed herself in, anticipating the trajectory he would take. Hanabi's palms were coated in flames.

"Fire Release: Eight Trigrams, Sixty Four Burning Palms!" Hanabi delivered the Hyuga's strongest combo with utmost precision, each blow releasing a burst of flames for added damage. "Two strikes! Four Strikes! Eight Strikes! Sixteen Strikes! Thirty-two-

But before Hanabi could finish her combo, she was tackled by Fu, who took her out of close combat range. Hanabi was about to protest and ask why Fu had done that, when suddenly four sharp spikes made out of Truth Seeking Balls skewered the position she was in, piercing nothing but empty air, much to Hanabi's surprise.

"Thanks," the youngest Hyuga said. "You have good reflexes. Not even my Tenseigan caught that."

"Don't sweat it, but try being more careful," Fu advised Hanabi before allowing her to float on her own.

"That was a good team effort," Hinata said, as she studied their foe. Toneri now had a few burns and bruises, and his clothes were severely damaged. He also looked much angrier than before. "We did manage to do him some harm, but we also enraged him."

"I'm afraid to admit you were right, Bykaugan Princess," Toneri snarled, as he wiped some blood trickling from his broken lip with the sleeve of his robe. "You are indeed quite powerful, and so are your sister and the jinchuriki, thus making my job all the harder. Guess it's time I drop the kid gloves if I want to end this."

"Yep, we definitely angered him," Fu observed, sounding almost nonchalant. Two tails of chakra formed on the back of her cloak. "I'll try using some more of Lucky Seven's chakra. We're going to need it."

...

Little by little, most of the civilian population were being escorted to the safety of the underground bunkers while the ninjas continued the fight. That's not to say that all of them managed to safely reach such havens, and some of them tragically died at the hands of the White Zetsu Clones or the Moon Puppets.

Though not only the civilians were in need of a safe refuge to be protected; ninja clans had also vulnerable members such as young children or the elderly that needed to be evacuated.

The Hyuga were one of those clans. Even with all the losses they sustained during the Uchiha Insurrection, they were still one of Konoha's largest clans, and thus they had quite a lot of elderly and children in need of protection, meaning that they had to dedicate quite a few ninjas to escort them to safety.

And large groups rarely go unnoticed.

"Vacuum Blade Palm!" Hizashi thrust his palm forward, releasing a crescent shaped wave of air that sliced in two a Zetsu that was about to attack one of the Hyuga elders. "Come on, don't stop! We're almost there!"

Even if the Main House/Branch House division was no more, most former Branch House members found themselves carrying the same tasks and roles as in the last time such an event happened in Konoha: protect those most vulnerable while the Main House members faced the threat head on. Not that Hizashi or anybody else complained. All of them knew that their task was as important as being in the middle of the battle. It was something that felt natural to them, a role they had no trouble keeping up for the sake of the clan.

"It's hard to keep fighting while we move!" a younger Hyuga complained, as he struggled against a White Zetsu Clone.

"Watch out! Something big is coming!" Tokuma warned.

And just like the Hyuga who was often tasked gate duty predicted, a couple of merged Zetsu landed besides them with a loud thud, cracking the ground when their feet landed. The sight of such horrifying creatures magnified the already intense panic the Hyuga escortees were feeling, with many of them screaming in terror and running away.

"Don't panic! Don't panic!" Hizashi shouted, futilely trying to elevate his voice above the cacophony of screams. "If you separate from the group, it will be harder to protect you! Adults, keep the children tight, and don't lose sight of them!"

"Hizashi-san, what should we do?" a female Hyuga asked. "Should we focus on the bigger ones, or should we get rid of the normal ones first?"

Hizashi quickly analyzed the situation, as both the two giant Zetsu and the smaller ones menacingly approached the group. It was indeed a good question: if they focus on the larger ones, the smaller ones could sneak past them unnoticed, even with the Byakugan. But on the other hand, the larger ones could do the more damage.

"Let's get rid of the bigger ones first. Those can make our task even harder than they already is," Hizashi said. "I'll try to draw their attention to me. Cover me, and make sure none of the smaller creatures get their hands on our clansmen!"

"Yes, Hizashi-san!" the other Hyuga chorused in unison.

The former head of the Branch house dashed forward towards an intermediate point of the two giant Zetsu clones, before sending his taunt.

"Multiple Vacuum Palms!"

Thrusting his arms in quick succession, each arm facing a different direction, Hizashi shot several vacuum shells at the larger enemies, which didn't seem to take much damage, but got the intended effect of drawing the attention to him. Several of the smaller Zetsu who wanted to attack him or go past him were skillfully intercepted by other Hyugas.

"Alright then, get ready to feel the might of the Hyuga Clan!" Hizashi shouted, as he slipped into an offensive fighting stance. "Eight Trigrams, Sixty Four Palms! Two Strikes! Four Strikes! Eight Strikes! Sixteen Strikes! Thirty Two Strikes! Sixty Four Strikes!"

Despite their size, the giant White Zetsu were slower than the normal White Zetsu, and thus had difficulty dodging the barrage of palm strikes that sealed their tenketsu off. They also tried to use their superior strength to crush Hizashi, but the former Branch House Hyuga dodged their blows with skillful grace.

Jumping back, Hizashi scanned the large aberrations with his Byakugan to check the result of his attack: if it was a single enemy, it would be unable to continue fighting. Unfortunately, not only did he have to split the attack between two foes, but they possessed far more tenketsu than a normal human being, meaning that they could still use chakra. Though, on the bright side, it wasn't that the attack didn't cause any harm, far from it "Come on, finish them off while they're weakened!" Hizashi cried, as he led a group of his clansmen towards the mass of White Zetsu.

While Hizashi and the Hyuga who stayed behind finished off the White Zetsu clones, the other half of their ninja clansmen took the opportunity to make a run for the underground bunkers.

"Come on, just a little more!" Natsu encouraged, as she scanned the area with her own Byakugan. "I'm seeing one of the refuges! We're almost there!"

The news had a balsamic effect on the escorts, who started to cheer and even run at a greater pace. Unfortunately, their joy was doomed to be short lived, as a few golden chakra blasts rained upon them, cutting them off.

"Everybody, stand back! These things are way more dangerous than the green haired weirdoes!" Natsu warned the others, as she and her fellow Hyuga ninja placed between the two puppets and the group of elderly and children. "Hinata-sama and Neji-san told me about these things. They're as strong as one of our Jonin, don't feel pain, and can use powerful ninjutsu. And since they're mechanical, the Gentle Fist won't work on them."

"Just great," an older Hyuga groaned. "Did they tell you how to defeat them?"

"Use more brute force than skill, and aim for the head," Natsu told the others.

The second group of Hyuga reluctantly engaged the puppets, but soon they found that, just like Natsu said, they proved to be more formidable enemies than the White Zetsu clones. Their speed was almost unmatched, and their blows packed a lot of power behind them. Not to mention the sheer destructive power of the golden chakra blasts.

"Force them away from the non-combatants!" Natsu cried.

None of Natsu's warnings were of any use, as it were the puppets, not the Hyugas, who were dictating the pace of the fight, forcing the Hyuga into the defensive. The number of Hyuga defenders started to whittle down, until only Natsu and a couple others remained, with the terrified non-combatants watching with fear-filled eyes.

"Hizashi-san, we need your help!" Natsu cried, before one of the puppets tossed her into the ground with a powerful punch to the jaw. "H-help... !"

Natsu watched helplessly as one of the puppets prepared a golden chakra orb to finish her off. Then, her eyes caught a blur crossing her field of vision, and the golden orb quickly dissipated. And much to her confusion, the puppet fell down to pieces, as if somebody cut it down multiple times.

"What...?" Natsu asked. She then turned around when her Byakugan caught the second puppet, a golden chakra sword in its hand, leaping at her, ready to cut her down. However, the puppet was then caught by a giant, ghostly skeletal hand, and was held firmly in its grip.

The Hyuga saw the hand was connected to an equally ghostly ribcage. And inside said ribcage, was no other than Itachi Uchiha.

"One of my team's sensors detected a large group incoming, and I decided to come here to help just in case you run into trouble," Itachi replied, as the giant ghostly hand squeezed the puppet, crunching it into an useless and unrecognizable form, before his strange jutsu disappeared. "Are you okay?"

"Y-Yes," Natsu said, as she got back on her feet. "Thanks a lot for your help. Not only you saved my life, but those of my clansmen as well."

Itachi took a look at the dead Hyuga that littered the streets. "Sadly, not all of them. And unfortunately, there's no time to mourn their loss. We need to take this group to the shelters. Um..."

"Natsu. Natsu Hyuga," the young woman said, making a slight bow, while smiling a little.

"Itachi Uchiha," he replied. "Now, let me help you escort this group to safety."

"Yes, let's," Natsu agreed with a nod.

Even if it happened many years ago, the Uchiha Insurrection, and its effect on the Hyuga Clan was still in the young woman's mind. While she didn't blame the surviving members for all the lives that were lost that day, she didn't feel any sympathy for them either, and often tried her best not to associate with them. Which was all the more surprising when this Uchiha not only happened to be close, but decided to help them.

"Neji-san would say that fate has strange designs," Natsu thought, before looking at Itachi, and smiled again. "Or a very ironic sense of humor."

...

Hinata, Hanabi and Fu's fight against Toneri wasn't the only clash that was happening above the skies of Konoha. Or at least, it wouldn't be for long.

"Yeah, how about this!"

Riding on his clay dragon, Deidara laughed maniacally as he dropped his explosives to the fighters below. Some of his explosions also caught the White Zetsu clones and Toneri's puppets, but not that he cared. Those creatures were expendable in his eyes -though he did make sure no other Akatsuki member was near when he dropped his load, he knew he could get into trouble if he did that-.

That's why he avoided all the zones with Akatsuki on it, even that meant not taking active part in the jinchuriki hunt -the blond had already two successful captures and wasn't afraid of using them as a shield, nevermind that he had just as many failures, the last one being still recent-, though that doesn't mean he wasn't contributing; by killing Konoha ninja, he would weaken the village and thus make the jinchuriki capture all the easier.

So now, Deidara just forgot about the mission, Akatsuki, and everything else, and enjoyed the rare occasion of being able to display his art in all its glory over a major village. He only did that once, in Iwa, shortly before defecting as a "parting gift" so to speak, and he was quickly chased away by the Tsuchikage himself, who, like Deidara, could fly -though unlike Deidara, he could fly on his own-. Though here, nobody would be able to stop his rampage.

"Ice Release: Thousand Ice Needles of Death!"

Or at least, that was what the blond thought at first, as ice needles started to form around him, before diving at him. Maneuvering his dragon, he was able to dodge most of them, though a few nailed his clay flying mount. Not that it mattered, since the dragon wasn't really alive.

Frowning, the blond Akatsuki looked around, and saw the source of his troubles: two Konoha ninjas riding large birds that were made of ice, leaving a trail of frost behind. Their appearances ringed a bell, and after a few seconds of digging through his memories, Deidara remembered.

"Hey, I know you two!" Deidara said in realization. "You two were part of the group who tried to rescue the Kazekage's son, didn't you? Yes, I remember you. The Ice Release user. And the other one who could use genjutsu."

"So, you remember us?" Kurenai asked. "Should we be flattered?"

"I never forget the face of an enemy I don't defeat, bitch," Deidara snarled. "This is the last time you two get in my way!"

Deidara angrily shoved his hand into his clay pouch, and feed some clay to his mouth hand. Said mouth chewed the clay giving it the shape of a small bird, which Deidara threw at them, before making a hand seal. In a poof of smoke, the clay bird multiplied into dozens of them, splitting into two groups, one aiming for Haku, the other going for Kurenai.

"Now taste my art!" Deidara shouted.

Of course, neither the Ice Ninja nor the genjutsu mistress were going to let Deidara blow them to bits.

"Ice Release: Breath of Winter!"

"Wind Release: Great Breakthrough!"

Haku breathed a massive gust of freezing air, which was magnified by Kurenai's own gale of wind, quickly engulfing the incoming explosive birds, covering them in frost, and making them too heavy to fly, thus they fell to the ground below.

"Your art wasn't that impressive," Kurenai deadpanned.

"That was just a warm up! You want to see what I'm capable of? Fine, I'll skip directly towards the heavy hitters!" Deidara said, his hand mouths already working on another jutsu. Once they were finished chewing, they both spat each a blot of clay at Kurenai and Haku, while Deidara quickly made several hand seals. "Explosion Release: Explosive Clay Twin Hive Queens!"

The two shapeless blobs of clay burst into smoke, increasing their size and taking the shape of a large insect similar to a bee, with a bloated, oversized abdomen, in the likeness of an egg sack.

"I used this jutsu to put down the jinchuriki of the One Tail! Let' see how well you do against it, hn!" Deidara said, as he made a single hand seals.

Each of the Hive Queens spat multiple balls of clay at the genjutsu mistress and her student, albeit from opposing directions, so they couldn't combine their attacks again. Still, both Haku and Kurenai managed to counter this attack the same way they did before. Just like Deidara was expecting.

"Huh?" Haku looked up, noticing a large shadow flying above him, and saw that while he was preoccupied with the Hive Queen, the blond Akatsuki had dropped more of his bombs from above.

"Die!" Deidara shouted, making a hand seal.

Haku frantically maneuvered his ice bird as he tried to dodge the chain of explosions as best as his skill allowed him to. Unfortunately, an explosion hit far too close, and his frost steed was shattered into thousands of tiny bits of ice, making the Land of Water native pummel to the ground below.

"HAKU!" Kurenai screamed, as she made her own bird dive in order to save the falling ninja.

Fortunately, her intervention wouldn't be needed, as while he fell, Haku kept calm and made another chain of hand seals as fast as his hands allowed him to.

"Ice Release: Crystal Bird!"

Using the very same shards of ice as raw matter, Haku quickly created another ice bird below him, breaking his fall just in time. Kurenai sighed in relief.

"His strategy is to divide us and then go for the kill when we are vulnerable," Kurenai told Haku. "We can't let him to dictate the pace of the fight, we need to attack!"

"Agreed," Haku said with a nod. "Any ideas?"

"I think one of us should take care of those clay insects, while the other deals with Deidara," Kurenai suggested. "Your ice is pretty good at shutting down his explosives, and my genjutsu would only work on him alone, so I think I should be the one to face him while you cover my back."

"Understood, Kurenai-sensei," Haku agreed again.

Deidara, however, wasn't impressed in the slightest, and merely laughed at Kurenai and Haku's plan.

"You think that you can stand against me and my art?" Deidara mocked, as he prepared more explosives. "Very well! If you want to become part of it, I'll be happy to oblige!"

...

Meanwhile, not far from there, another of Kurenai's students continued her fight against another aerial Akasuki both of them flying above the village of Konoha.

"Time to end this," Toneri said, as he cast one hand forward. "Silver Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

All of Toneri's Truth Seeking Balls merged into a single orb of silvery chakra, which exploded into a conical tornado that quickly sucked all the flying Kunoichi in. Hinata and Hanabi, being familiar with the jutsu, thought that they could counter or escape it, but they soon found out that its potency was far greater than what they could produce.

"Pull yourselves towards me!" Fu shouted, extending her arms at each sister. "We need to stay together!"

Hinata and Hanabi nodded, and used her kinetic powers, the two Hyuga sisters pulled themselves towards Fu's position, the mint haired girl's hands quickly gripping their own with great strength, bringing them closer.

"Now, let's move towards the eye of the hurricane!" Hinata told them.

Joining their forces, the three of them were able to resist the tornado until it ceased.

"Are you okay?" Fu asked.

"I think so," Hinata breathed.

"I've been better," Hanabi complained.

That moment, a Truth Seeking Ball slowly descended upon them, taking place in an intermediate space between the three kunoichi, much to their confusion.

"Uh guys? Is this thing from any of you?" Fu asked.

The Truth Seeking Ball started to glow with an emerald light, and all three instantly knew the answer, much to their shock. They tried to break apart and fly away in opposite directions, but the orb exploded before they could, and all four of them were engulfed with the explosion. Hinata and Hanabi had their own Truth Seeking Balls to absorb part of the blast, but Fu wasn't so lucky. Besides damaging her whole body, it turned her wings into dust, and thus, the green haired jinchuriki pummeled to the ground, landing with a loud thud.

"FU!" Hinata screamed, as she dived towards her. Unfortunately, she was forced to alter her course in order to dodge a barrage of green chakra blasts.

"Not so fast, my princess," Toneri interjected with a confident smirk. "Don't concern yourself with the jinchuriki, not when you have me to deal with."

Through her Tensiegan, Hinata saw that Fu was well enough to stand back on her feet, much to her relief. But her relief was short lived as she saw a threesome of puppets dogpiling her. Normally, the Taki kunoichi would get them out of her back as if they were nothing, but the explosion made a number on her body, and nothing but a fraction of her usual energy remained.

"Fu..." she whispered, greeting her teeth.

"Now, you'll have the honor to be the first one to witness the true extent of my power," Toneri said, his grin widening, as he cast his hand forward, his four Truth Seeking Balls merging into a single orb of golden chakra.

Upon seeing that, Hanabi paled. "Nee-chan! I've seen that jutsu before! It has enough power to level the entire village!"

"If that's the case, then use Truth Seeking Balls as protection won't be enough. I can't let the village to be damaged any further! I need to counter that jutsu with one of my own!" Hinata thought, as she also cast one hand forward, her two Truth Seeking Balls merging into a purple colored orb of chakra.

"I see you remember it well, girl," Toneri nodded, pleased. "But even if what you said is true, I'm confident in my bride's strength to survive it. Golden Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

The energy contained in the golden orb exploded in the form of a huge beam of golden chakra, fired directly at Hinata. That moment, Hinata her move.

"Amethyst Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

Hinata's own orb exploded into a storm of purple colored lightning bolts. Both attacks clashed, but Toneri's jutsu packed more power than Hinata's, and it easily pushed it backwards.

"And admirable effort, my love, but useless!" Toneri said with almost sadistic glee.

"Leave my sister alone!" Hanabi screamed, as she flew towards them, holding a teal orb of chakra between her hands, before motioning it forward. "Turquoise Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

Hanabi's orb exploded in the form of a stream of bluish-green flames, which joined Hinata's lightning bolts against Toneri's beam of light. Even if it slowed it down considerably, it failed to stop it completely.

"Ugh..." Hanabi groaned, as she tried to pour as much chakra as possible into her attack. "Hinata! He's... too strong!"

"D-Don't give up, Hanabi-chan!" Hinata encouraged her little sister. "We must... win... at all costs!"

"You can't," Toneri simply said, as he floated forward, pushing his beam of light further on them. "You and I are bound to be together, my princess. You can't win, not because you're fighting against a strong enemy, but because you're fighting against fate itself. Your arrival and awakening of the Tensiegan was foretold ages ago, my princess, as so was our union. Don't you see that it's futile?"

"Fate, you say?" Hinata asked, and, even in her current situation, found herself chuckling. "You aren't the only one to use that word to put me down. All my life... I was told that things are the way they are because of fate. My apparent weakness. How I wouldn't amount to anything. How my clan would forever remain divided. And guess what? I proved them wrong. I proved all of them wrong! And I shall prove you wrong too!"

"Resolve without power is meaningless," Toneri countered, as he pushed his attack even further.

"Resolve is everything! Resolve, willpower and never giving up! Plenty of people have power, either born with it or acquiring it on their own! Everything I achieved, everything I am... I didn't manage to do it by just giving up and accepting it as 'fate'!" Hinata replied, her voice booming louder. Even Hanabi couldn't help but feel in awe. "Hanabi-chan, we can't let this man win! Fight with everything you have!"

Hanabi nodded, and smirked, her confidence renewed. "You got it!"

The two Hyuga sisters let out a shout, as they started to draw every little bit of power remaining in their body, trying to make their attack as strong as possible. And much to their joy and Toneri's shock, they started to push back.

"What? How can they...?" Toneri asked in surprise. Through his Tensiegan, he could see that the chakra of Hinata and Hanabi, which threatened to dim any moment, shone with renewed light, so bright it was like looking directly into the sun. "Can this be...?"

Hinata and Hanabi's basic Chakra Cloak also started to glow with more intensity, until it took the shape of a cloak of flames, not different from Toneri's own Chakra Cloak. Soon, their combined power started to push Toneri's attack even faster.

"They unlocked the next level of the Tenseigan Chakra Cloak!?" Toneri asked in shock. "This was unexpected..."

Toneri put even more chakra into his attack, forcing the two attacks into a stalemate, pushing each other a little back and forth, but for the most part, not moving at all. Eventually, all the gathered energy reached a critical point, and was released in the form of a massive, blazing white explosion.

"N-Nee-chan..." Hanabi said, just as her Chakra Cloak suddenly petered out, and faded into unconsciousness.

"Hanabi-chan!" Hinata screamed, as he caught her little sister before she could fall, and, summoning more Truth Seeking Balls -much to her surprise, she could summon up to four now- she morphed them into a sphere encasing both she and her sister, just in time before the explosion.

Hinata then lowered the hollow sphere to ground level, as it slowly dissolved back into the four Truth Seeking Orbs that composed it. She gently placed Hanabi's body on the ground. Even if Hanabi's chakra was completely drained, there was nothing a good night of sleep followed by a copious meal wouldn't fix.

"Rest for the time being, Hanabi-chan," Hinata cooed. "You've done enough already."

"Hey!"

Hinata turned around, and saw Fu walking towards her, limping a bit. She was carrying the arm of a puppet in one of her hands.

"Fu-san! I'm so glad to see that you're okay!" Hinata said with a smile.

"Hehe, yeah! You need something more than a bunch of stupid marionettes to beat yours truly," Fu boasted, though Hinata could see that her body hurt far more than she let her on. "Man, I could use some healing. Do you mind- EEEEEEEEEEEEEAAAACK!"

"Fu!"

Fu was suddenly yanked by an unseen force. Following her direction, Hinata saw Toneri with his hand outstretched, its fingers closing around Fu's neck once she was close enough.

"Now, let's make sure you don't fly away," Toneri said, as one of his Truth Seeking Balls moved away from him, started to glow and expanded, taking the shape of a golden cage with its door open. Toneri threw Fu inside, and the door closed on its own with a loud clang. "That should be enough. Now, Hinata-hime, I'd hate to force you into a cage like a mere animal, but I will if you don't-"

"Hey, dumbass!"

Toneri didn't turn around, as his Tenseigan already saw the newcomer from a distance. Said newcomer must have known this, hence why he didn't bother with a sneak attack.

"... I'm the only one allowed to call Hinata 'princess', you got that?" Naruto snarled in fury.

"Naruto-kun!" Hinata squeed in joy.

"You've done a good job here, Hime. Let me finish this," Naruto praised his girlfriend. Hinata tried to protest, but Naruto spoke before she could. "Don't worry, I'll be fine. Trust me, this guy doesn't know what's coming. Come on, go and find your sister a safe pnce to rest. I'll take care of both Fu and this creep."

Reluctantly, Hinata nodded, and did as she was told. Toneri felt the need to stop her, but he knew he couldn't do that unless he got rid of Naruto first. Oh well, Hinata could wait. After all, the main obstacle to his princess' affections was standing in front of him.

"Ah, Naruto Uzumaki. While I never welcome your presence, in this case I will," Toneri said, turning around, and waving at the captive Fu with one hand. "As you can see, I already captured one of the jinchuriki. So polite of you to both saving me the effort of having to track you and giving me the pleasure of ending you myself."

"Yeah, like hell that's gonna happen," Naruto seethed, making a single clone. While Naruto powered up a Rasengan, said clone started to pour wind chakra into it.

"Ah, that jutsu of yours. I remember it," Toneri said, as his three remaining Truth Seeking Balls floated in front of him. "Back in our earlier clash, I didn't have the means to counter it, but things have changed now."

"Oh, you don't have the means to counter it, you just haven't realized it," Naruto said, as he raised the shuriken of wind chakra above his head, the clone disappearing once his work was done. "Wind Release: Rasenshuriken!"

Naruto threw the wind shuriken forward, which flew towards Toneri, making a loud, whirring sound in its wake.

"Like I said, useless," Toneri boredly said, as he merged two of his three black orbs into a large shield that covered him completely, and smirked. "I know what you're planing. You want me to focus my attention on this attack while you ambush me from another side. However, you are the one who's going to be ambushed," The Otsutsuki thought as he discreetly moved his remaining orb to his back.

The Rasenshuriken hit the barrier, and Toneri expected the real attack to happen at any moment. But said attack never came.

CRACK!

"What...?"

And much to his shock, the barrier started to break.

"What? No!" Toneri cried, as seeing how the crack expanded more and more. "No, not again! This can't be possible! The Truth Seeking Balls shouldn't be able to be pierced by mere ninjutsu! What kind of trickery is this!?"

"Katsuyu-san was right," Fukasaku said, still clung to Naruto's back. "Senjutsu is key to beat those things!"

The barrier was shattered completely, just as the Rasenshuriken exploded in a dome of chakra and razor-wind currents. Toneri tried to fly away, but he was caught in the explosion. Would Toneri get caught inside that explosion, he would have been done for. Even then, if the explosion only hit him when it expanded, it made a number on him. The powerful wind shredded his clothes and left several deep cuts in his body, while violently hurling him into the sky.

Toneri let out a scream before he disappeared into the vast blue yonder.

To confirm Naruto's victory over Toneri, the golden cage holding Fu quickly vanished, dropping the harm jinchuriki to the floor.

"Ouch!"

"Fu!" Naruto said, rushing towards her. "Are you alright?"

"I'll survive," the green haired girl said, making a weak smile. "Though I don't think I can keep fighting if I don't see a medic first."

"Hinata could patch you up in an instant," Naruto confidently said, as he helped his fellow jinchuriki back on her feet. "Come on, let's find her, she shouldn't be too far away."

"Let's hope," Fu said, as she rested her body on Naruto's to help herself walk. "Good job with that weirdo. Too bad you didn't finish him for good."

"Eh, don't worry, I'll get him next time," Naruto said with a confident grin.

"However, he raised a valid point," Fu replied. "Truth Seeking Balls nullify all ninjutsu. How were you able to bypass that?"

"Senjutsu," was Naruto's answer. Fukasaku nodded. "Hagane was also able to break his defense when they fought during the mission to rescue Roshi. He wasn't sure how he did it, but he thought it had to be the nature energy his Bloodline Limit allows him to gather freely. And turns out he was actually right. Heh, that kid might not have Kaida's raw power, but he's far smarter than she and I together."

Fu nodded, and smiled as well. "That's good to know. Besides, once we finish our Sage training, we won't have to rely on you the next time that guy... uhhh, Naruto?" Fu asked, noticing the blond had turned pale and his eyes widened. "Are you okay?"

"I... I don't know..." Naruto said. "I feel something... terribly wrong..."

The two of them a massive burst of smoke many streets away. But it was what came out of the smoke what left him speechless.

...

As the same time as Hinata, Hanabi and Fu fought against Toneri, Kakashi's Animal Squad plus Rin were fighting against Obito Uchiha. Or better said, Kakashi and Obito fought while Rin healed Kiba and Tamaki.

"Fire Release: Great Fireball Jutsu!"

Obito breathed a massive fireball aimed at Kakashi, lined in a way with Rin, Tamaki and Kiba, so Kakashi wouldn't be able to dodge unless he wanted his students to die -Obito was confident Rin could survive that blast-.

Kakashi got the hint, and his hands blurred through hand seals before slamming his palm into the ground.

"Earth Release: Earth Style Wall!"

The Copy Ninja erected a rock barrier between himself and Obito. The fireball crashed against the wall, creating an explosion that cracked the barrier and blew a few chunks of it, but overall was unable to take it down. Kakashi's Sharingan caught some flicker of movement coming from the resulting cloud of ash and dust, and his hand crackled with electricity.

"Lightning Blade!"

Kakashi's electrified hand thrust towards the cloud of smoke coming from the right side, just in time as a surprised Obito emerged from it. Kakashi's attack pierced the Uchiha's heart. But the Uchiha merely smirked before disappearing in a poof of smoke, revealing itself to be a clone.

"A clone? Dammit... !" Kakashi cursed under his breath as he turned around.

"Too late!" Obito shouted, as he gleefully thrust his own katana into Kakashi's body.

The silver haired Jonin grabbed the blade of the katana with his gloved hand in order to stop it. Blood started to seep from his palm as a wave of pain coursed through his hand, but it was a small sacrifice to pay in order to avoid a worse injury. Kakashi generated electricity from said hand, shocking Obito, and forcing him to drop the sword, which his opponent grabbed with his other hand.

"Not bad, Kakashi," Obito admitted, as he started to make hand seals. "But can you stand before THIS? Wood Release: Great Spear Tree!"

The ground started to shake as wooden roots emerged from the ground, and lunged at Kakashi tried to impale him with their sharp and pointy ends. Kakashi, however, wasn't intimidated, and gripping the stolen katana in one hand, and channeling lightning chakra into the other, he started to move as fast as possible, cutting down the razor roots as soon as they emerged, while moving towards Obito.

"You killed sensei, Obito," Kakashi coldly said, as he continued mowing down the growing roots. "Him and Kushina-san. Why? How could you become so rotten as to cause the death of a man that was like the father you never had, among countless others!?"

"Don't get all sentimental on me, Kakashi. Sensei was a powerful ninja, but a failure of a teacher and protector," Obito seethed, as he summoned a Fuuma Shuriken from a sealing scroll. "He lost not one but two students! I don't mind that he wasn't there to help me, but I can't forgive him for letting Rin be captured to begin with!"

"Don't blame sensei for other people's failures!" Kakashi shouted, as he closed the gap with his former friend.

"And he proved me true once again when he failed to protect his wife and son from me!" Obito said, tossing the shuriken at Kakashi, before his hands flew through hand seals. "Fire Release: Flaming Shadow Shuriken Jutsu!"

The Fuuma Shuriken was covered in a coat of flames, before a dozen or so other identical flaming starts appeared before the original, all flying at Kakashi. The silver haired ninja tossed the katana away, as he weaved seals as fast as his hands allowed him.

"Water Release: Water Wall!"

Kakashi expelled a massive stream of water from his mouth -which weirdly enough, bypassed his mask without breaking it- stopping the shuriken and putting the fire out. Or at least, most of them, as some others flew past him, and headed towards Kiba, Tamaki and Rin.

"Guys, watch out!" Kakashi warned.

But when turned around, he saw that his students and other teammate were not there anymore, much to his relief, and a little confusion.

"Wood Release: Wood Dragon Jutsu!"

The ground started to shake again, and from under Obito's feet, a serpentine dragon made of wood emerged, its jaws wide open trying to bite the Akatsuki. Obito jumped backwards, just as he turned around, and grabbed Tamaki by the wrists before the cat kunoichi could slash him with his claw.

"You can't catch me off guard, you should know that by now," Obito told the brown haired girl.

Tamaki, however, smirked. "Think so?"

Obito then realized that Tamaki was holding something in one of her hands, before opening it and letting it fall. He knew what it was but it was too late do anything about it. The moment the flash grenades touched the ground, they exploded, engulfing the entire area in a bright white light.

"AAAAAAHHHH! MY EYES!" Obito screamed, as he pushed Tamaki away.

"Kiba, now!" Tamaki called.

Both Kiba and Tamaki kept their eyes closed and relied exclusively on their enhanced sense of smell in order to track the Akatsuki. The Inuzuka clan heir moved first, as he ran towards Obito, his feet burning with blue light of chakra.

"Crescent Moon Kick!"

Upon reaching close combat range, Kiba made an impressive backflip, hitting Obito's chin with his feet, creating an arc of chakra, and sending the Akatsuki flying upwards.

"Your turn, Tamaki!" Kiba said, as he put his hands together.

Tamaki jumped into Kiba's hands, and the werewolf gave the cat kunoichi a mighty heave upwards, with such force, Tamaki easily surpassed Obito's altitude. Once she was high enough, she prepared her move.

"Here I come!" Tamaki said, as her whole body started to flare blue with chakra. "Feline Aerial Bomber!"

As she fell towards Obito, Tamaki smashed her posterior into Obito's face, making a cracking noise as the hit shattered forehead protector. Obito fell to the ground, while Tamaki landed gracefully on all fours.

"Good job, guys!" Rin praised the duo.

"Thanks," Kiba said, giving her a friendly smirk -which in his current form was more of a terrifying snarl-, before turning at Obito. "Not so thought without your Kamui, are you?"

Despite the brutal combo he was victim off, Hashirama's regeneration soon kicked in, and Obito's injuries started to heal, allowing the former Konoha ninja to stand back on his feet. He shot his enemies a look of hatred. Rin gasped a little when he saw the other side of his face.

"You were right, Kakashi-sensei," Tamaki said. "He had a Byakugan all along."

"No wonder there was no way we could catch him off guard," Kiba agreed. "Good thing he didn't notice the flash grenades, and the fact that we don't need our eyes to orient ourselves."

"Congratulations, you managed to land a few good hits," Obito said, as he wiped some blood from his mouth, and smeared it on his palm. He started to make five hand seals that all of them recognized, but only Rin could see their magnitude. "Let's see if your little tricks can stand against THIS!"

Rin panicked, and rushed forward. "Quickly, stop him before-"

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Obito slammed his palm against the ground, producing a massive burst of smoke, followed by an incredibly strong wind, forcing the Konoha ninjas to fall back a few meters. The smoke took no time to dispel, revealing what Obito had summoned. Kakashi, Tamaki and Kiba looked in horror, while Rin had a look of worry in her face. A giant fox with maroon fur and nine tails.

"Sixteen years ago, I released the Nine Tails in order to destroy Konoha. Today, he will finish the job!" Obito shouted, while standing on top of the Nine Tails' head. "Now, kill them!"

The Nine Tails' Sharingan eyes focused on the Konoha ninjas below, and raised one of its massive paws in order to smash them into pulp...

Author's Note: Yep, given that Obito appeared the previous chapter, you should have expected the other Nine Tails being summoned to cause even more destruction. What will the good guys do against this new threat? Will they attempt to seal it inside Naruto, merging both halves? Though if they do that, Naruto won't be able to help Jiraiya against Pain...

Speaking of Naruto, after much buildup, he finally put Toneri in his place (even if he will live to fight another day), thanks to Hagane's discovery of Senjutsu chakra bypassing the Truth Seeking balls. I hope you found it cathartic. That makes two Akatsuki that have been defeated and driven away from the battle so far. Still, the worse hasn't come to pass, not just because of the aforementioned Nine Tails, but because Deidara has stepped to fill their spot with his unusual brand of art. Still, just like how Kisame's fight left Gai unable to fight anymore, Hinata, Hanabi and Fu won't be able to contribute to the battle any further. Still, the girls earned some rest.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Now that one of the three "important" fights have been solved, the next chapter will focus on the other two: Pain and Konan, and Obito and The Nine Tails.

So, what do you think about the chapter, and the arc so far? Share your thoughts with me in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Akatsuki Invasion, Part IV

Author's Note: So here we are with another chapter of the Akatsuki invasion. D0n't worry, I can assure you that we already passed the middle point of this arc, and it will build up towards its end from now on. How will it end, thought? That's the question. Enjoy:

Chapter 86:

The Akatsuki Invasion, Part IV

or

The Wrath of God

"Shinra Tensei!"

Once again, Jiraiya was blown away by Pain's signature jutsu in his futile attempt at getting close to him. He managed to land on his feet, sliding across the ground, until he finally came to a stop. Jiraiya glared at his stoic rival, and gritted his teeth in anger.

"Dammit! Ninjutsu won't work since that other body will absorb it," Jiraiya thought, as his eyes drifted towards the fat Pain for a moment. "And whenever I try to get close, he blows me away! What the hell can I do?"

"Come on, Jiraiya-chan! We have to keep trying!" Shima encouraged, though even the old toad was started to become frustrated and a little tad desperate.

"We can't just try the same thing over and over again," Jiraiya replied. "We must think something new!"

"I believe it's my turn to attack, then," Pain stated, and the body that looked like a puppet stepped forward. His right arm opened up, revealing a cannon, which started to gather chakra, before firing a barrage of beams at Jiraiya.

"Shit, shit, shit!" Jiraiya cursed, as he tried to run away from the rain of deadly beams of blue light. And on top of that, the Hokage sensed two more Pain bodies trying to ambush him while he fled. Fortunately, he had a defensive measure against such attack. His hands blurred through hand seals. "Ma, stay close! Neelde Jizo!"

Jiraiya's hair doubled in size and volume, while it hardened into a spiky form, and quickly wrapped around the Toad Sage, forming a protective shell around him covered in sharp spikes. One of the Pain bodies managed to break in time, but the other couldn't, and impaled itself against the hair-spikes.

"And that's not all!" Jiraiya shouted, while making a single hand seal. "Hair Needle Barrage!"

Jiraiya fired a wave of his sharp, hardened hairs in every direction, causing all the Pain bodies around him to scatter, and killing the one who was unable to stop his attack, the one with long, loose hair. The other Pain who did stop in time took its mangled body, and ran away.

" Wait a minute... those two... " Jiraiya thought, upon focusing on their respective faces for a couple seconds.

"Jiraiya-chan, focus!" Shima's high pitched shrill didn't allow him to ponder on his thoughts.

And it was a good thing he wasn't, since the main Pain body was heading right straight for him. Once again, he made the same hand seal, and fired another barrage of hardened hair strands at the body of his former pupil.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Once again, Pain's gravity blast was powerful enough to repel Jiraiya's attack, and continued his charge forward. A black rod emerged from under his sleeve, and grabbed it as if it was a sword. Jiraiya, however, wasn't going to let him get that close.

"Ma, together! Fire Release: Flame Toad Bullet!"

Ma expelled from her mouth a stream of oil, which Jiraiya ignited with his fire jutsu, resulting in a wide, large wave of fire that threatened to reduce the Akatsuki leader to ashes. While Jiraiya expected Pain to repel this attack as well -and hopefully find an opening to strike him for good-, Pain instead did something he didn't expect: the Akatsuki stabbed the rod in the ground in order to break his momentum, while also using it as a springboard to jump aside in order to dodge the incoming fire.

"Jiraiya-chan, did you see that?" Ma asked.

"Yeah, I noticed," Jiraiya replied. "He dodged it instead of using that gravity attack. That means that he can't use it non-stop. There must be an interval of a few seconds before he can use that attack again."

"Then all we need to do is strike him during that window of opportunity, and he will go down!" an excited Ma cheered.

A cacophony of whistles warned the two Sages of a barrage of missiles coming at them. However, they were intercepted by a couple of kunai with explosive tags attached to them, making them to detonate prematurely. As that happened, Anko landed besides Jiraiya.

"Nice save, Anko," Jiraiya thanked her.

"Don't sweat it," the snake mistress replied, a bit out of breath. "Man, these guys are tough!"

"They're Rinnegan bearers. We can't expect anything less," Jiraiya said.

Suddenly, both Jiraiya and Anko were alerted by a huge explosion of smoke that happened at the other side of the village. Jiraiya sensed a massive chakra signature appearing on that same spot, whose chakra signature shouldn't exist, since it only existed within his godson.

"H-Hokage-sama..." Anko stutered in shock, upon seeing what emerged from the cloud of smoke.

"So, those bastards brought the Nine Tails as reinforcements," the Sannin said, gritting his teeth.

That very moment, a couple of Katsuyu clones appeared, and jumped onto Jiraiya and Anko's free shoulder. The Snake Mistress visibly flinched.

"Yikes! What the...?"

"Don't be afraid," the slug said. "I'm a clone of Katsuyu, and I'm here on Tsunade-sama's behalf."

"Every help is welcomed, Katsuyu-san," Jiraiya said with a nod. "How's Tsunade-hime?"

"She also entered Sage Mode and is on her way to face the Nine Tails," the slug explained. "I believe she's currently the best suited to deal with a threat of such magnitude."

"She won't be able to do it alone, we need to assist her as soon as possible!" Jiraiya stated.

"Don't even think about leaving this fight, sensei," Pain coldly stated, as he and the other bodies that shared his being closed onto him. "You have nobody but yourself to blame for what's going to happen. I thought that Takigakure would be seen as a warning of what means to oppose us, but alas, you decide to ignore it. By the end of the day, Konoha won't exist anymore."

Jiraiya turned around, and cast Pain a determined look.

"You're so sure of yourself, don't you? Let me tell you something, Nagato. The Nine Tails already attacked Konoha once, and we managed to survive," Jiraiya defiantly said. "This time it won't be different."

"If you think so," Pain said, his tone remaining the same. "Then let you and your ninjas' actions prove me wrong, rather than words."

"It will be my pleasure!"

...

At that moment, far away from Jiraiya and Pain, the Nine Tails laid waste to the already wrecked ninja village, while Kakashi's Animal Squad, Rin, and a few nearby ninjas tried to hold the gigantic fox, without much success.

"Come on, Nine Tails, crush them! Crush them all!" Obito ordered his enslaved beast, as he stood on top of its head.

The Nine Tails let out a deafening roar, before delivering a claw swipe forward. Fortunately, the Konoha ninjas were able to jump back and dodge it. Even then, it packed so much force, it created a shockwave that not only hurled them backwards, but it wrecked nearby buildings as well.

"Shit! How the hell are going to fight that thing!?" Kiba complained.

"To think that Sasuke-kun's team fought against this as well with almost no backup..." Tamaki said, before she realized something. "Rin, you were with Sasuke-kun that other time! What did you do to defeat this thing?"

"We didn't defeat it!" Rin replied, clearly panicked. "And even then, we had the help of a jinchuriki with perfect control of her Tailed Beast! We have no such thing here!"

"For the time being, we'll have to work with what we have," Kakashi calmly said, as his Sharingan eyed Obito, before he looked at his other former teammate. "We do know Wood Release can subdue the Tailed Beasts. Rin, you're our only hope now."

"Alright, but I don't know if I'm powerful enough to subdue it on my own," Rin said unsure, before she also looked at Obito. She then shook her head, pushing away all her doubts, and adopting a determined expression. "No, I can't afford to hesitate! I will stop that beast, you can count on me! I won't let Obito harm anybody else!"

"Very well then. Kiba, Tamaki, cover her and keep her safe. I'll take down Obito," Kakashi stated. "Given that it was him who summoned the Nine Tails, the summoning will be undone if the summoner is neutralized."

"Okay, leave Rin in our hands," Kiba said, before smirking. "Or paws."

"We won't fail you, sensei," Tamaki added.

"I know you won't," Kakashi said, smiling under his mask. "Now go!"

The three of them nodded, and contrary to what their self-preservation instincts screamed, ran towards the rampaging giant fox, though they stopped at a cautionary distance. Rin stared at the best, and sighed.

"This would be easier if I had time to complete my Sage training..." the medic-nin lamented, before making a series of hand seals. "But wallowing in regret won't help anybody. I'll have to do my best. Wood Release: Nativity of a World of Trees!"

The ground started to shake, and a multitude of trees started to emerge under the nine Tails and around it, the closest ones wrapping their branches around his legs, body and neck, immobilizing it completely. The Nine Tails tried to break free, letting out another thunderous roar, but was unable to.

"Good job, Rin! You did it!" Kiba praised.

Rin, however, fell to one knee, her hands still locked in a seal. She was panted heavily, and beads of sweat ran through her face.

"That... was more exhausting than... I thought," the medic-nin said between pants. "I had to expend more than half my chakra on that jutsu alone, and I don't even know how long will it last."

"It's okay, Rin. You did far more than any of us could," Tamaki reassured, patting the other brown haired girl in the back, before looking back at the beast. "Now it's all on Kakashi-sensei."

And indeed, just as Tamaki said those words, Kakashi climbed through the newly formed trees at lightning speed, until he finally reached the Nine Tails' head. His hand crackled with electricity, as he prepared his signature ability to end the life of whom was once his comrade and best friend.

"Lightning Blade!"

Obito, however, sidestepped while grabbing the wrist of the hand that was channeling the jutsu, and used Kakashi's own momentum against him by hurling him away. Kakashi, however, managed to land on his feet on one of the trees around the Kyubi, and shot himself again towards Obito. Obito repeated the same maneuver as before, but didn't realize that Kakashi's momentum was much greater, and even if the Copy Ninja failed to pierce the Akatsuki with his attack, he managed to push him out of the Nine Tails' head.

"Don't think that you can escape from our duel just because you summoned that monster," Kakashi said in an icy cold tone.

"You think I need to escape from you?" Obito asked, sounding indignant, while kicking Kakashi away from him. "Ha! I welcome this chance of getting my eye back!"

"I thought you say that you didn't regret giving it to me?" Kakashi mockingly asked, as he made several hand seals. "Wind Release: Vacuum Blades!"

Kakashi exhaled several blades of wind through his mouth. Obito's Sharingan quickly analyzed their trajectory, and allowed the Uchiha to nimbly dodge them.

"Given how much of an annoyance you're turning out to be, I changed my mind," Obito angrily replied.

"It's not polite to ask for a gift you gave yourself freely," Kakashi replied, as he landed on his feet, before he made a hand seal. "Shadow Clone Jutsu!" A clone popped besides Kakashi, and the two of them started to make hand seals as well. "Fire Release: Great Fireball Jutsu! Wind Release: Great Breakthrough!"

Kakashi exhaled a fireball at Obito, while his clone blew a powerful gust of wind from his mouth. The two attacks merged into a massive firestorm that quickly engulfed Obito. After a few seconds the massive fire quickly receded, revealing nothing but a hole underground. The copy ninja immediately knew what this meant.

"I need to stop him before he can attack!" Kakashi said, as his hands quickly flew through hand seals. "Lightning Release: Breaking Thunderbolt!"

Kakashi closed his hand into a fist, which started to crackle with electricity. He then slammed said fist down, sinking it into the ground, releasing lightning bolts everywhere, which shattered the ground as they traveled. It produced the desired effect when Obito was forced to appear in the surface before he had intended. Kakashi smirked under his mask, and went for the kill.

"Lightning Blade!"

Obito barely had time to react before Kakashi's electrified palm pierced his whole torso, impaling his heart. Obito wheezed, as his eyes grew wide while his irises shrunk. Kakashi let out a sigh of both relief and sorrow as the electricity on his hand died out. He shoot Obito a look full of pity and regret.

"Obito... I'm sorry this had to end this way..." Kakashi said.

Obito didn't say anything, just stood there, immobile, with his eyes threatening to jump out of their sockets, as he clung to his last bits of life. However, Kakashi realized that something was wrong. He didn't hear the Nine Tails vanishing. What was going on?

"Kakashi, watch out!" he suddenly heard Rin shout. "That's not the real Obito!"

Obito's eyes turned back to normal, and smirked. "You will be sorry, Kakashi," Obito said, as he grabbed Kakashi's arms, stopping the silver haired Jonin from pulling it out of the Uchiha's body, leaving him trapped. 'Obito' then lost all color, as his clothes and skin started to turn in what appeared to be tree bark.

"A wood clone?" Kakashi said, realizing of the mistake too late. "Don't tell me he wanted to...?"

"He wants to liberate the Nine Tails!" Rin shouted again.

And indeed, what he presumed was the real Obito appeared near the trapped Nine Tails. He then threw several kunai with explosive tags attached to them at the trees that kept it trapped. Kiba and Tamaki dashed at the Uchiha, but he was able to detonate all the explosives before they could get close, destroying some of the trees. Even if the giant fox wasn't completely free, he was able to break the rest of his wooden bindings on his own.

"What was what sensei used to say, Kakashi?" Obito asked in a mocking tone. "To look underneath the underneath? That's a lesson few ninjas take seriously nowadays. Sasuke Uchiha and his teammates made the same mistake you just did."

"Rin, can you summon more trees?" Kakashi asked, trying to sound confident, but desperation was palpable in his voice.

"I'm afraid not," Rin replied, shaking her head, and panting a little. "I poured more than half my chakra into that jutsu. I may have the First Hokage's DNA spliced into mine, but I'm not him. I'll need some time until I can regenerate my chakra."

"It's okay, Rin, you did what you could," Kakashi thanked his teammate, before his eyes focused again on Obito and his enslaved beast. "Then we'll need to buy so that time until then!"

"Like hell I'm going to let you!" Obito shouted. "Nine Tails, time for a Tailed Beast Ball! Wipe them from the face of this world!"

The Nine Tails opened its jaws, and blue and red chakra particles started to gather, forming a dark purple energy orb that grew in size each second. Neither Kakashi nor his students had ever seen a Tailed Beast Ball in action, but they knew that its destructive power was enough to level an entire village. Even a low powered one could ravage several street blocks.

"We need to stop that thing from firing!" Tamaki urged.

"I'll use Kamui to send it to another dimension!" Kakashi said, as he made a hand seal, while focusing his Mangekyo Sharingan on the forming energy ball.

"Are you sure you want to do that?" Obito asked, laughing.

"Remember that you send one of your students there in order to stop me from using Kamui. And I don't think you plan to sacrifice him like that, do you, Kakashi?"

Kakashi remained frozen in place, but he was no longer preparing the Kamui. He felt as if he'd been splashed by cold water. Shino. He was so focused on Obito and ending the fight, that he had forgotten about him. And sadly, Obito was right. Even if his sacrifice could save hundreds of lives, he couldn't send one of his students to his death so easily. He was better than that.

"So, what's going to be, Kakashi?" Obito asked, clearly relishing in the painful dilemma that he had put his former teammate in. "Well, too late to do anything now!"

The ball finished charging, and the fox was ready to fire it in his general direction. However, before he could do that, a yellow blur fell from the sky, and landing onto the Nine Tails' head, slamming his head into the ground, and forcing his jaws shut. He was forced to swallow the Tailed Beast Ball, which exploded inside his body. When he opened his jaws, it let out a massive tower of smoke.

"It seems I arrived just in time," the newcomer said.

"Tsunade-sama!" Tamaki cried, upon seeing the Sannin. "Finally, some heavy hitters!"

Kakashi was also thankful that Tsunade had arrived. He noticed that the Slug Sannin had red marking around her eyes, which were now golden rather than hazel. One of Katsuyu's mini clones was on her shoulder.

"Sage Mode," Kakashi observed. "If Tsunade-sama was strong before, I can't imagine the height of her power now."

"And she isn't the only one here!" another voice said, this one belonging to Naruto. The jinchuriki was also in Sage Mode.

"Good we could make it in time, son," Tsunade said, before she looked at Obito, and smirked. "Hey, brat, remember me? How about if I finish what I started the day of the Uchiha Insurrection?"

"Yeah, and you nearly lost your life in the fight," Obito angrily replied. "You might have Sage Mode now, but that is no match for the power of the strongest Tailed Beast!"

...

Meanwhile, in the skies above Konoha, the aerial duel between Kurenai, Haku and Deidara continued. While Haku tried to keep the two Explosive Clay Hive Queens while the genjutsu mistress focused her efforts on the blond Akatsuki.

"Die already!" Deidara screamed, as he created multiple clay bats, which quickly flew towards the raven haired woman. The bats quickly surrounded her. She tried to swat them away, without any success. Deidara then made a hand seal. "BOOM!"

A chain of explosions engulfed the genjutsu mistress and her giant ice bird. Deidara smirked, as he looked around, trying to see where Haku was.

"Alright, one bitch down, another one to go!" he cheerfully said.

However, before he could proceed, he noticed something weird. The smoke created by his explosions didn't dissipate. Far from it, it was now condensing into a cloud, almost forming into something, like it was alive. Then, the cloud split into smaller clouds, and each cloud grew in size while taking the form of Kurenai riding that giant ice bird once again.

"Your so called 'art' is useless against me," all the Kurenai said in unison, as they began to fly in circles around him.

"What the hell's going on!?" the frustrated Akatsuki asked, looking around, before he finally realized it. "Oh, I see. A fucking genjutsu."

He brought his hands together in a seal, and after a burst of chakra, the genjutsu disappeared and reality returned back to normal, revealing only one Kurenai.

"You really like to mock my art, yet your shitty illusions fail to harm me in any way!" Deidara angrily shouted.

"Genjutsu is more dangerous than most people give credit for," Kurenai calmly replied. "For it makes one to doubt what is real and what is not. From this point onwards, you won't be able to fight me without wondering if what's going on is really happening or not."

"Those are some big words right there, but big words alone will do you no good!" Deidara replied. "Besides, beating genjutsu specialist is easy! I only need to find anything out of the ordinary, and keep my chakra undisturbed! As long as I'm able to do that, you won't be able to touch me!"

"You sound rather confident for somebody who clearly had no prior experience fighting against a genjutsu specialist," Kurenai retorted. "That's it, unless we count our brief clash in the Land of the Rivers."

"I could say the same about you! Let me show you why Iwa's Explosion Corps are feared across the Elemental Nations!" Deidara shouted, as he commanded his clay dragon to attack.

Said clay dragon started to shoot explosive projectiles at the fleeing Kurenai, which she was barely allowed to dodge. As this happened, Deidara's hand mouth spat another blow of clay, which instantly grew in size and took the shape of a bird with a rather long neck, round body, and tiny wings.

"Okay, and this for-" Deidara was about to say, before he saw Kurenai turning around and flying back at him while making hand seals. "Oh no, you aren't going to catch me off guard with that again! Release!" Deidara preemptively send a burst of chakra through his body to undo whatever genjutsu was she casting before it could take hold of his mind. "Like I was saying, this is for my man Sasori! Die!"

"Wind Release: Great Breakthrough!"

Kurenai blew a gust of wind from her mouth that not only pushed the projectile back, but it carried so much force it hurled the clay dragon backwards, almost making the Akatsuki fall to the ground.

"Shit, she was using ninjutsu instead of genjutsu!" Deidara said, gritting his teeth in anger. "Enough with your trickery! Fight me like a real ninja, you coward!"

"I'm fighting like a real ninja," Kurenai said, shrugging in an almost comical way. "Ninjas use deception and trickery to achieve victory, while samurai tend to fight upfront. But guess that your love for big flashy explosions made you forget that."

"I'm going to show you how much I love my big flashy explosions!" Deidara said, before taking a chunk of his special clay, and feed it to his actual mouth rather than the one in his mouths. After chewing it a few times, he spat the glob upwards, while making three hand seals. "Explosion Release: Harbingers of Devastation!"

The multiple globs of clay appeared alongside the original, and all of them started to grow and change its shape, resembling deformed humanoid figures with wings on their back.

"Release!" Deidara once again disturbed his own chakra just in case Kurenai tried to put him under a genjutsu. "Now go and get her!"

The winged humanoids all flew in formation towards Kurenai, moving as fast as birds of prey. The genjutsu mistress was left with no other option but to flee, and try to counterattack. So far, she knew that making them explode prematurely was a valid tactic. As she commanded the ice bird to fly away, her hands rushed through hand seals.

"Earth Release: Crushing Avalanche!"

Multiple rocks appeared between Kurenai and the explosive figures, before they launched themselves at the latter. However, the figures skillfully dodged the attack as they had mind of their own.

"You can't hope to outmaneuver my intelligent bombs!" Deidara boasted, as his dragon flew above Kurenai. "Now die already!"

Deidara's dragon shot another explosive missile at Kurenai. She quickly tossed a kunai with an explosive tag attached to it in order to detonate it prematurely. And while she succeeded at doing that, she was unable to stop the explosive flying figurines from closing onto her.

"Damn, this is bad!" Kurenai panicked as, seeing no other options, jumped from the ice bird before two of her assailants exploded near it, shattering it to tiny bits of ice.

"Haha, yes! Now wait until she splats against the ground!" Deidara said with a sadistic glee. However, that moment, a second giant bird made of ice swooped in, and caught the genjutsu mistress in time. "OH COME ON!"

"Thank you, Haku," Kurenai said, sighing in relief. "That was a close one."

"Don't mention it," the Ice Ninja replied.

"Did you get rid of those clay insects?" Kurenai asked.

"They gave me far more trouble than I thought, but in the end I prevailed," Haku replied, sounding a little proud. "I guess this Akatsuki also proved to be a more formidable opponent than we initially thought."

"Your guess is a correct one," Kurenai replied. "But maybe between the two of us, we can bring him down for good."

"Haha, you idiots! If you have your flying mount carry two people, it will fly much slower!" Deidara laughed. "Now go, my creations! Turn them into pieces of art!"

The remaining flying suicide bombers obeyed, and dived at the two Konoha ninjas.

"Haku, those things know how to dodge ninjutsu," Kurenai told her student. "But your elemental jutsu have a wider area of effect than mine. Maybe you can bring them down."

"I'll try," Haku said, as he switched places with Kurenai so he could face the incoming flying figurines better. He made several hand seals as fast as he could. "Ice Release: Breath of Winter!"

Haku exhaled a gust of extremely cold, misty air. The clay beings noticed the attack, and they started to spread out in an attempt to avoid it. However, like Kurenai said, the area of effect was larger than average, and they ended up moving away not just from the Konoha ninjas, but from each other as well.

"What the hell are you doing, you idiots!?" Deidara screamed. But he had no time to berate his artificial creations, since the ice bird with Kurenai and Haku was now flying towards him.

"This is our chance to attack!" Kurenai said, as she and Haku started making a hand seals. An ice mirror appeared besides Haku, and the Land of Water native entered it as if it was a portal.

"You won't catch me off guard with your pathetic ambush!" Deidara replied, as he sent yet another burst of chakra to disturb his network, canceling Kurenai's jutsu before it could take root in his brain. A cold breeze warned Deidara of an attack from above, and just like he expected, a second ice mirror formed around him, with Haku emerging from it, several senbon in his right hand. "Too slow!"

Deidara, showing that explosions wasn't the only thing he was good at, gracefully sidestepped the attack, grabbed Haku by his arm and forearm, and used his own momentum to toss him away. Fortunately for Haku, Kurenai was there to repay him the favor and saved him before he could crash against the floor.

"Your pathetic skills can't measure up to my art!" Deidara boasted. "Now, it's time for you to- uh?"

Deidara stopped on his tracks when he noticed bits of frost forming around his hand. The frost started to grow and spread, freeezing his body as it grew, slowly encasing the Iwakagure missing ninja inside a block of ice.

"What the hell? How did you... !?" Deidara shouted in anger, as he quickly lost all mobility. "Shit, this is bad! I need to get the hell out of here!"

Deidara tried to maneuver his clay dragon into flying away, but with all the ice getting in the way, he was unable to, and the artificial beast started to wildly fly in erratic patterns, before it dived towards the forest surrounding the village, and crashed there.

"Should we go after him?" Haku asked.

Kurenai nodded. "Yes. We need to kill or capture every Akatsuki member when there's a chance. Hopefully, we'll be able to take him alive for interrogation."

"Understood," Haku said with a nod. "I think he fell over there."

"By the way, nice genjutsu there," Kurenai praised. "I didn't even know you could place a genjutsu in such a small window of opportunity."

Haku's mouth curved into a smile. Turn out, when he was about to attack Deidara he pretended to go for a physical attack, when in reality he put the Akatsuki under a genjutsu. And due the nature of said genjutsu, Deidara wouldn't realize immediately that the ice was merely an illusion.

"Thank you," Haku replied. "Let's hope we can do the same with the other Akatsuki attacking the village."

...

Jiraiya jumped away just in time before being crushed by a giant panda bear, with the ponytail-sporting Pain riding atop its head. Jiraiya's hands flew through hand seals as he prepared a fire jutsu.

"Fire Release: Greater Flame Bullet!"

Jiraiya breathed a stream of oil that instantly ignited, turning into a stream of fire that engulfed the gigantic bear. He could hear something that sounded like rocks fathering together and becoming compact, before the Panda walked through the fire completely unscathed. His fur now had a rocky-like texture.

"That animal can harden his skin in order to avoid damage," Shima observed.

"In that case, we'll need to use something such defense will be useless against!" Jiraiya said, as he prepared more hand seals.

"Earth Release: Swamp of the Underworld!"

The Hokage slammed his palms into the ground, which quickly turned into a muddy swamp. The panda quickly started to sink. He began to trash wildly in a vain attempt to break free, but all what he achieved was sinking even faster.

"And here come the other two," Jiraiya said, as he jumped into the air just before a cluster of missiles fired by puppet Pain reduced him to ashes.

"Bansho Ten'in!"

Jiraiya grunted just as an invisible force violently pulled him towards the main Pain, who had his hands stretched out. Fortunately, even if Jiraiya had no way to counter that jutsu, he had some help with him.

"Hang in there, boy!" Shima said, before opening her mouth and wrapping her long tongue towards a nearby broken concrete column. Shima's tongue was strong enough to keep Jiraiya in place and stop Pain's kinetic pull.

"And... now!" Jiraiya said.

Shima relaxed her tongue, which caused both her and Jiraiya to be jerked towards Pain once again. However, this time Jiraiya would use said momentum in his favor, and prepared to deliver a flying kick to the main Pain. The fat Pain, the one who could absorb ninjutsu, placed himself between the two of them, but was yanked away by a mass of snakes.

"Not so fast!" Anko said, as he pulled said body towards herself.

Without any nearby body to use as human shield, and his powers unavailable, Pain had no way to avoid the flying kick to his chest, which hurled him backwards, until it landed on a pile of debris.

"Yes! Finally managed to land a blow!" Jiraiya cheered, pumping a fist.

"Jiraiya-chan, look out!" Shima warned.

"I know, I sensed it too!" Jiraiya said, as he jumped away, avoiding some invisible attack.

The attacker made itself visible, revealing to be a gigantic chameleon with a snake for a tail, with the same Rinnegan eyes on both heads. The reptile then slithered away, and used its tongue as a rope to pull the giant panda out of the swamp Jiraiya had summoned earlier.

"Oh no, you won't!" Jiraiya said, as he summoned a single Shadow Clone. He started to form a Rasengan as the Clone poured fire chakra into it. The Rasengan started to grow and flare with a red-orange light. Once it was completed, it appeared as if Jiraiya was holding a small sun in his hand. "Take this! Fire Release: Spiraling Inferno!"

Jiraiya tossed the giant fireball at the two animals, Ponytail Pain still on the Panda, and the projectile hit both of them. It then blasted into a massive dome of spinning fire, a raging firestorm that could reduce anything inside to ashes. When the fire receded, a crater had formed in the zone of impact, with a single, charred to the point of being unrecognizable body on it. There was no trace of the summoned animals, thus Jiraiya guessed that, with the death of their summoner, they all had vanished.

"Amazing! Good job, Jiraiya-chan!" Shima praised.

"Thanks, but we aren't done yet," Jiraiya replied, as he looked at Pain, who was joined by Konan, the chakra absorbing body - it seems he managed to break free from Anko, whom landed behind Jiraiya shortly after-, as well as the puppet. "We got rid of quite the nuisance, but those three bodies form a powerful combo that's both offensive and defensive. My ninjutsu won't work as long as that guy... hey, wait a second..."

"Something wrong, Hokage-sama?" Anko asked.

"That man! I know who he was!" Jiraiya said in realization. "He used to be a Kusagakure ninja! I know because I met him when I visited the village! He was a fan of my books! And that other man..." Jiraiya's eyes rested on Puppet Pain, who returned the stare with empty eyes. "He was a puppeteer missing-nin from Suna turned mercenary!"

"So... you know them?" Anko asked.

"Yes," Jiraiya confirmed. "At first I didn't remember them because of the Rinnegan eyes, the dyed hair and all the body piercings. Wait, if those two used to be normal humans, then the others..."

As Jiraiya recalled the other three bodies, his mind went into overdrive as memories poured in. A Takigakure ninja. A mercenary from the Land of Rice Fields. A priest from a destroyed village that was looking for his disciple. And finally, Yahiko himself. Yes, now it made sense. He had finally cracked the secret behind the Rinnegan.

"You aren't really here, are you, Nagato?" Jiraiya asked. "Those are reanimated bodies you're controlling remotely from a safe location. A location that has to be close to the village. Am I wrong?"

Pain remained impassible, but Konan gasped in shock.

"Bravo, sensei," Pain said, as he gave a couple of slow claps. "But figuring such thing out won't do you any good."

"You think so?" Jiraiya said with a cocky smirk, before looking at the small slug on his shoulder. "You heard that, Katsuyu-san?"

"Indeed, Hokage-sama," the Katsuyu clone stated. "Everything I know, my clones know as well. I'll make sure the information reaches every single Konoha ninja."

"There you have it. All I have to do now is to keep you busy until your real body is found by my ninja," Jiraiya said. "You already lost."

"Pain, I need to leave now and go secure the real you!" Konan hastily said, as she prepared to take off.

Pain, however, raised a hand to stop her. "No, he's bluffing. Even if he knows my secret, it's too late to do anything. Even with such knowledge, he has no idea where my real body is, and no Konoha ninja can afford to leave the village in order to search the hundreds of hectares of forest around the village, at least not until every Akatsuki has been driven off. And that's not counting the hundreds of Zetsu and Moon puppets. He's probably expecting you to leave so he can send an spy to follow you and track my real body. Besides, I need you here as well."

Konan seemed to be relieved by Pain's confident statement.

"Very well then. I shall fight at your side," Konan agreed with a nod.

That moment, Gamabunta landed behind him with a thunderous thump, and Aoda slithered by.

"You guys are done already?" Anko asked her summoned snake.

"The creatures vanished as we were fighting them," Aoda replied. "We assumed that the summoner had been dealt with."

"So we decided to give you guys a hand!" Gamabunta helpfully added.

"Yes, Konan, fight alongside the walking corpse of your dead friend," Jiraiya confidently said, as he crossed his arms. "He's going to need that help!"

...

On another side of the village, the Hyuga civilians and Moon Acolytes finally reached one of the shelters, thanks to Itachi and his ninjas protecting them from the White Zetsu clones and the Moon Puppets. There were many sighs of relief and cheers of joy when the gates to one of the underground bunkers was seen, quickly running towards their safety.

Protecting the entrance were a squad of ANBU led by Hiruzen Sarutobi himself, clad in his old and worn but still usable battle armor.

"Another group?" the former Hokage asked. "It's been a while since we saw more survivors. Good to see that there were people alive out there."

"Come on, get inside, quickly!" one of the ANBU urged. "In case there are wounded among your group, we have medical ninjas ready to attend them!"

They didn't need to be told twice. While the new group of civilians fled to their safety, the former Hokage walked towards the Uchiha.

"Itachi, how's the situation out there?" Hiruzen asked. "This group of ANBU and I have been protecting this shelter from constant attack of those creatures, but it seems the attacks have been slowing down over time."

"There are good news and bad news," Itachi said. "I got word that the Akatsuki Kisame, Deidara and Toneri have been driven away by our forces, and that they're unlikely to rejoin for the remainder of the battle. Meanwhile, Jiraiya-sama is keeping Pain and Konan at bay with the help of some ninjas."

"Good news indeed," the Hokage agreed with a nod, before he prepared for the inevitable. "And the bad news?"

"Obito summoned the Nine Tails in the middle of the village," Itachi said in his usual calm demeanor, and watched how Sarutobi lost all color in his face.

It took the former Hokage a few moments to regain his bearings. He sighed in resignation. "Well, we knew he could be able to do this, and he would be an idiot if he didn't. Still, those are terrible news. Our shelters will be useless against a Tailed Beast's destructive power. Any word on who's dealing with them?"

"According to my crows, Kakashi Hatake and his students were engaging Obito before he summoned the beast," Itachi replied. "Rin Nohara was with them."

"The girl's Wood Release will be an invaluable tool in subduing that monster," Sarutobi stated. "Though I doubt if it will be enough."

"Tsunade-sama was also seen heading in the Nine Tails' direction," Itachi added. "Maybe with her help, the threat can be contained."

"Yeah, let's hope," Hiruzen said, before a realization dawned upon him. "Itachi, you told me about Kisame, Deidara and Toneri being defeated, and Pain, Konan and Obito remaining. What about Orochimaru?"

"Nobody has seen him yet, Hokage-sama," Itachi replied. "At this stage of the battle, he should have made an appearance already. Of all of us, you're the best who knows how Orochimaru's mind works. What do you think he's planning?"

Hiruzen took a pensive stance. That was indeed a good question. "I don't know my former apprentice's mind as much as I would love to, but I agree that Orochimaru should have made his move already. He didn't take long to show up when he invaded the village shortly after the Chunin Exams."

"It is possible that Orochimaru may take advantage of the ensuing chaos to release that minion of his from T & I?" Itachi asked. "You know, the clone of one of Jiraiya-sama's children."

"It's a possibility, yes," Hiruzen said.

"Alright, then that's where I need to go," Itachi said. "If Orochimaru plans to release his minion, I'll be waiting for him."

"Understood. Be careful, Itachi."

...

Meanwhile, back with the Nine Tails, the gigantic beast was glaring at Tsunade below him with hate filled Sharingan eyes. Even under mind control, he still could still feel anger towards the puny woman who dared to kick him in such brutal way, forcing him to swallow his Tailed Beast ball, which didn't do him any good.

She was quickly joined by Naruto, Rin and Kakashi's students. With the Sannin and her son at their side, they felt far more confident with their chances against the mighty nine tailed beast.

"Tsunade-sama, if we can keep this monster busy until Kakashi defeats Obito, then the summoning will be undone," Tamaki told Tsunade.

Tsunade shook her head. "We won't do such a thing."

Everybody minus Naruto gasped at her words.

"What?"

"But why?"

"It's the most logical course of action given the circumstances."

Tsunade merely smirked. "Given that Obito took the effort to bring the other half of the Nine Tails here, it would be incredibly rude if we just turn him back, don't you think?"

"Wait, you're suggesting..." Rin began.

"Yes. We're going to seal the fox inside Naruto!" Tsunade stated.

"Did you hear that? You're going to be whole again," Naruto told the half of the Kyubi inside him, but got no response.

It seems the Kyubi -the one outside under Obito's control- heard Tsunade, and didn't like what she said one bit, as he let out a thunderous, deafening roar, and raised its paw, before bringing it down on Tsunade. The giant paw smashed the ground into a crater when it hit, but unfortunately it missed its mark as Tsunade and the younger Konoha ninjas scattered just in time.

"Okay mom, get ready, I'm going to create an opening!" Naruto said, as he created a single Shadow Clone, followed by a Rasengan. Said clone started to pour Wind Chakra into the rotating sphere, which started to grow and take the shape of a shuriken made of wind. "Alright, take this you furball! Wind Release: Rasenshuriken!"

Naruto tossed the Rasenshuriken towards the giant Fox's face, making an horribly loud metallic noise as it flew. The gargantuan beast barely had time to react before the jutsu hit him square in the jaws, before it detonated, exploding into a spinning dome of razor winds. The Nine Tails cried as the unleashed jutsu pushed him back.

Once the explosion of razor winds died down, the Kyubi opened its eyes, ready to smash the annoying blond into pulp. Or he would, if it wasn't for the fact that yet another Rasenshuriken was flying towards him.

"And another one!" Naruto shouted, as his Sage Mode slowly disappeared.

The Fox, however, owing to his animal stereotype, didn't allowed to be hit by the same attack twice in quick sucession. Ignoring the pain the previous attack had caused, he quickly moved back while using two of his tails to swat the Rasenshuriken away. It was sent into the sky, where it harmlessly exploded.

"Aw shit..." Naruto lamented, unhappy that he had wasted half his nature chakra like that. He made a hand seal, and dispelled one of the three clones gathering nature energy he had left in his house's basement. Soon, he felt a rush of power as all the Senjutsu chakra invaded his body. "Let's hope this time I can make a better use of my Sage Mode."

However, even if the second attack didn't land, it did provide a needed distraction that Tsunade used to get close to the giant beast. Using the remnants of the trees Rin had created, the Slug Princess climbed one of them and used it as a springboard to jump above the Kyubi. Fortunately, he didn't saw her yet.

"Heavenly Foot of Destruction!"

As Tsunade fell foot first, she pumped as much chakra as she could to said foot, which was engulfed by blue chakra flames. The brutal Senjutsu-enhanced stomp connected, resulting in a sick crunching noise, and the surprised Tailed Beast felt as if a whole mountain was dropped on his back, pinning his body against the ground.

"Good one, mom!" Naruto cheered, pumping his fist.

Obito, while still engaged against Kakashi, didn't miss what just happened, much to his shock and disbelief.

"The hell!? No matter how powerful, no mere human should be able to harm a Tailed Beast so easily!" Obito angrily protested.

"This wouldn't be the first time you underestimate Tsunade-sama, do you?" Kakashi mockingly asked, as he traded fast punches and kicks with his former teammates. "Tsunade-sama's famed strength was devastating before. If she has combined it with the additional strength boost provided by the Sage Mode... there's no limit to what feats of destruction she can accomplish now."

Even being hit by such a devastating attack, the Nine Tails didn't give up. Converting his pain into rage, and rage into power, once again the giant Fox used his tails as a whip, and tried to use them to swat Tsunade away like he did with Naruto's Rasenshuriken.

"OOF!" Tsunade shouted, as the wind was blow out of her stomach when the massive tail smashed into her body. Still, the Sannin managed to get a grip on the tail. "You aren't getting rid of me so easily!"

"Hold him like that, mom!" Naruto called, another Rasenshuriken ready to throw. "Wind Release: Rasenshuriken!"

Once again, Naruto tossed another shuriken of pure wind chakra at the giant beast. However, the Kyubi wasn't going to fall again for that. Locking his eyes onto the oncoming attack, the Nine Tails opened his jaws, and fired a small Tailed Beast Ball. The two projectiles crashed, resulting in a huge explosion, which lead to a large cloud of smoke. Though apart from getting some wind in the face, he didn't get any harm.

"Wind Release: Bounce!"

From said cloud of smoke, Naruto shoot forward like a missile, both hands cast upwards, each one holding a rather large Rasengan. The Kyubi barely had time to react before said energy spheres smashed into his face.

"Double Big Ball Rasengan!"

The Nine Tails roared in pain as the two supersized Rasengan blew up in his face, pushing him backwards, and blinding him for a moment. All his tails started to swing wildly, bringing down nearby buildings, and killing some nearby Konoha ninjas and White Zetsu clones alike. Tsunade, still clung to one of the tails, let go when it swung upwards, launching her up in an arc.

"Alright, now it's a matter of nailing the landing zone..." Tsunade said mostly to herself, as she positioned herself so the arc made her land on top of the Kyubi's head. "Perfect! Heavenly Fist of Destruction!"

Tsunade's fist burned with blue chakra as she slammed her fist into the Nine Tails' skull, with such force, it slammed his head into the ground. The Kyubi let out a yowl of pain, before his eyes rolled back into his head, and his entire body slumped. The Sannin jumped from the head, landing safely onto the ground.

"Rin, are you ready?" Tsunade asked, shaking her sore fist.

Rin was sitting on her knees, with a Naruto clone placing his hands on her back, transferring chakra into her.

"Yes, the recharge is now complete!" Rin said, standing up. "Thank you, Naruto! That ability to share your chakra is so useful!"

"I know, right?" the blond proudly replied, before chuckling.

The brown haired medic nin walked towards the allegedly unconscious Tailed Beast, and fighting off the sense of deja vu, she formed a sequence of hand seals as fast as she could.

"Wood Release: Deep Forest Emergence!"

The ground started to shake as big, large tree roots emerged around the Nine Tails, wrapped themselves around his neck, limbs and tails, immobilizing it completely. Even if it didn't appear that he would move anytime soon, one couldn't be too confident in this kind of situation. Once the beast was tied, Rin allowed herself to sigh in relief.

"Sorry Obito, you lose this time," Rin whispered to herself, before turning at Tsunade and Naruto. "Tsunade-sama, the beast is immobilized! Commence the ritual at once!"

Tsunade nodded, and made a hand seal. "Let's not waste another second then. Eight Trigrams Divination Seal!"

A burst of smoke produced in front of Tsunade, and when it dispelled, there was an octagonal platform with a stone altar in the middle, and eight lit candles at each of its corners.

Close to them, Obito and Kakashi continued their duel. Even if Kakashi did his best to keep Obito away from the Nine Tails, Obito always managed to push him back. Naturally, he witnessed the defeat of his ace in the hole, and how Konoha was about to claim it.

"No! How can this happen!? How can the Kyubi be defeated so easily!?" Obito angrily shouted.

"Face it Obito. No matter how many times you invade Konoha, no matter how many allies you gather or powers you get, your fate will always be defeat," Kakashi said in a taunting manner. "Guess that I should thank you for bringing the other half of the Nine Tails back to us. Guess that deep down, there's still some love for Konoha inside your withered heart."

Obito watched in anger and impotence how Tsunade and Naruto prepared the ritual to seal the Nine Tails into the latter. As much as it pained him to do it, there was no other option but retreat for now. He made a single hand seal.

"Summoning Jutsu: Cancel!"

The bound Nine Tails disappeared, leaving a cloud of smoke behind.

"Like hell you're getting your hands on the other half of the Nine Tails!" Obito shouted, as he was slowly absorbed by a vortex around his right eye. "Enjoy this victory as it lasts, Konoha scum, for it will be the last one!"

And thus, Obito disappeared.

Sighing in relief, Kakashi allowed to relax his muscles, and calmly walked towards the group of his students, Rin, Tsunade and Naruto. Both blondes looked rather upset, Naruto especially.

"Aw damn! I can't believe we let the Nine Tails escape!" Naruto protested. "A few seconds more, and he would have been ours!"

"A pity indeed," Rin agreed. "But guess we should be happy that we forced Obito to recall it."

"Yes. It will be only a matter of time before he uses it against us again," Shino interceded. "And then, we will be prepared."

"The key is to break the summoning contract," Kakashi said, as he joined the conversation. "Sensei knew how to do it, though I believe it's not too hard for somebody versed in fuinjutsu," Kakashi suggested, before knowingly glancing at Naruto.

"Yeah! Leave that to me!" Naruto proudly stated. "Next time we see-"

However, the blond was interrupted by a tremor shaking the entire village. Everybody turned around to face the direction from where the tremor and the noise came from. All of them lost all trace of color from their face.

"What... what the hell is THAT!?" Tsunade asked in shock.

...

While Tsunade and Naruto were busy taking down the Nine Tails, Jiraiya and Anko, with Gamabunta and Aoda looming behind them, continued their fight against the Six Paths of Pain and Konan. So far, only Yahiko's body, the puppet, and the one who absorbed chakra remained. Gamabunta decided to attack first.

"There's nowhere to escape!" the Toad Boss said, as he brought down his gigantic sword. "DIE!"

Pain, however, merely jumped into the air, dodging the gigantic sword as it carved a large trench into the ground. Once he reached the Toad's eye level, he cast both hands forward.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Gamabunta wasn't expecting that such a tiny creature could project such a force so massive it could be able to violently hurl him away as if he weighed nothing.

"GRAAAAAHH!" the giant Toad screamed, as he painfully rolled away.

"Bunta!" Jiraiya called, futilely.

Anko, however, knew it was the chance to strike.

"The five second cooldown! Aoda, crush him, quickly!" the snake mistress commanded.

"As you say," Aoda obediently said, as he quickly slithered towards Pain, just as he was descending. Aoda opened its jaws, ready to swallow Pain whole.

However, before the giant snake could gobble the Akatsuki leader, Konan swooped in and grabbed him just a second before Aoda snapped his jaws shut. The giant snake hissed, as he gave chase to the two Akatsuki.

"Damn, we failed," Anko lamented. "Anyway, while they're busy, we should get rid of-"

Anko then was suddenly silenced when a hand was placed on her head. Her eyes rolled back into her skull, as if the mere touch was enough to knock her out.

"YOU!"

Jiraiya saw in shock how one of the Pain bodies, the one with long hair, whose abilities still remained unknown, kept Anko immobile with his mere touch. Then, he pulled the hand back, gripping between his fingers a plasma-like substance with Anko's form, almost as if he was pulling the Special Jonin's very soul out of her body.

Anko then fell to the ground facefirst, and didn't move. Jiraiya couldn't sense her presence anymore. She was dead.

"NO!"

Aoda, still giving chase to Pain carried by Konan, disappeared all of sudden, leaving a cloud of smoke behind. The immediate danger gone, the blue haired woman dropped Pain back on the ground. The moment his feet touched the floor, he started running towards Jiraiya, with his second in command flying behind.

"The snake mistress has been dealt with," Pain declared. "Now it's time to send the Hokage to his grave."

Thanks to his shared vision, Pain could see Jiraiya fighting against three of his bodies, while the summoner was being resurrected as it happened. It seemed that Anko's death had a demoralizing effect on Jiraiya, who fought with far less fire. And now, he would put out that fire permanently. He raised a hand towards the unsuspecting Sannin.

"Bansho Ten'in!"

Unlike the other times, the attack wasn't aimed at the Sannin, but at the toad on his shoulder. Shima gasped in shock upon being pulled towards Pain.

"Ma!" Jiraiya cried. He wanted to catch her, but the other Pains got in the way.

A black rod emerged from one of Pain's sleeves. His fingers wrapping themselves around the tool, he used it to impale Shima in her gut just as she reached him. The poor elderly toad was killed almost instantly.

"MA! NO!" Jiraiya shouted even louder.

"You also possess Sage Mode, but unlike Naruto, you don't seem to rely on clones for it," Pain stated. "Then it hit me. That toad on your shoulder. She was the one keeping your Sage Mode active, wasn't she?"

"You... you will pay for this," Jiraiya seethed.

"I think not," Pain said, raising his hand at Jiraiya once again, the cooldown of his jutsu reaching its end as he did. "Chibaku Tensei!"

Pain fired a small, pure black orb of chakra at Jiraiya, at such speed he wasn't able to dodge it. The orb, no bigger than a marble, imbedded itself into the Sannin's chest, and started to lift him into the air. And as it happened, chunks of earth, debris and dirt were pulled towards it, burying Jiraiya inside it. After a few seconds, the Toad Sage couldn't see the light of the sun anymore.

As it gained attitude, more and more chunks of earth, rock, metal and concrete were being pulled into the forming asteroid, until it became a small planetoid. This one was even larger than the one he had used against Naruto during the fight for the Six Tails. Finally, it stopped at about one hundred and fifty meters above the village. No more chunks were being added to its form anymore.

"Now it's time for Konoha..." Pain said, as he motioned his hand down. "To disappear."

And with that motion, the asteroid was brought down.

Author's Note: Yep, RIP Anko and Shima. I know a certain somebody is going to be especially pissed at me for killing Anko off (well, several people probably, given that Anko is a pretty popular character). And Jiraiya isn't going to fare much better as you could see. But that's what happens when you fight against such a powerful opponent. Now, will they revive like it happened in canon with the people who died during Pain's attack, or will they remain dead for the rest of the story?

Though, not everything is bad news. Deidara, Obito and the Yin nine Tails have been removed from the battle as well, meaning that only Pain and Konan remain as threats to the village. For some reason, I had quite a lot of reviewers expected Deidara to die. Do you find him that expendable? Also, I know many of you were also expecting Naruto to get the other half of the Nine Tails as well, though sadly, I cannot do that yet. I need that other half for a future plotline.

I also had the feeling that I had Yin Kurama lose too easily but... he was fighting against not one but two Sages, one of them being Tsunade who is strong enough without Sage Mode, while in canon Sage Mode Naruto was a pretty good match for the fox.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Next chapter, the climax of the Akatsuki Invasion! I'm sure you're excited to see how this is going to end! In the meantime, leave a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Akatsuki Invasion, Part V

Author's Note: As you can see, this story has a new cover. Thanks a lot to the artist, me, who took some time of his (not really) busy schedule and drew something somewhat passable. If somebody who actually knows how to draw wants to do a better cover, I'd appreciate it (though it will have to be from the kindness of your heart since I can't afford to pay an artist, or else I would have hired one sometime ago).

Now, enjoy the chapter:

Chapter 87:

The Akatsuki Invasion, Part V

or

Can You Fight a God?

Naruto, Tsunade, Rin, Kakashi and his students watched in both horror and awe as a small asteroid emerged from the ground, and elevated into the air, as chunks of earth and stone were ripped from the ground and became part of it, becoming larger as it flew higher.

"What... what the hell is THAT!?" Kiba asked in shock.

"I know what is it!" Naruto shouted, alarmed. "The Chibaku Tensei! That's one of Pain's most powerful jutsu! He used it against us when we were trying to secure Uakata."

"If that thing falls into the ground upon gaining enough altitude..." Shino began, as the implications of his words started to slowly sink on everybody else.

"I... I'm sensing Jiraiya inside that asteroid!" Tsunade said, her voice quivering with worry and fear. "He's barely alive!"

"Shit, we have to go, now!" Naruto urged. "Quickly mom, jump into my back!"

Without asking why, Tsunade did what her adopted son asked, while Naruto made several hand seals.

"Wind Release: Riding the Hurricane!"

A powerful tornado formed around Naruto's legs, elevating both him and Tsunade into the air as if they weighed nothing. The tornado then began to quickly move in the direction the asteroid was being former, with mother and son praying that they could reach it in time.

...

That very moment, outside of Konoha, Haku and Kurenai were looking for Deidara, without much success. With each passing second, they worried about how much they could be helping in the village. But capturing an Akatsuki, or at least neutralizing him, was too good of a chance to pass.

"This would be much easier if Naruto or Hinata were with us," Kurenai complained, as she looked behind every bush and large rock that could be used as a reasonable hideout. "They would track that guy in no time."

"Guess that's an area we could use some improvement once this mess is over," Haku replied, searching as well. "One can never be to-"

"Haku!" Kurenai called. Urgency could be heard in her voice.

The ice ninja quickly rushed to her position, thinking that she had finally found the Akatsuki. But all what she found was his clay dragon, laying there on the grass, motionless.

"You were right about the crashing zone," Kurenai confirmed.

"Meaning that he has to be close. How strong was your genjutsu?"

"Pretty strong," Haku replied. "But if he isn't here, then he must have dispelled it and ran away."

"What should we do, then? If that's the case, he can be anywhere, and we can't leave the village when there's-"

The genjutsu mistress was interrupted by a brief but powerful tremor shaking the earth, which almost made the duo fall on their butts. They were filled with a sense of dread.

"I don't like the sound of that," Kurenai said.

"I bet you wouldn't. We need to return to the village at once. I think I have an idea of what caused this tremor," Haku urged, as he started to run towards the village. "Let's hope it won't be too late."

Kurenai nodded, and ran behind him, leaving the clay dragon where they found it. After a couple minutes, once neither their footsteps nor their chattering could be heard, the clay dragon burst into a cloud of smoke, revealing a badly hurt Deidara once it dispelled.

"You aren't the only one who knows how to use trickery to their advantage, bitch," Deidara groaned, as he tried to get back on his feet. "Shit... I don't think I'm in shape to keep fighting..."

...

A few minutes later, the asteroid had reached its final intended side, and stopped at more than three hundred meters above Konoha. From a safe distance, Pain watched proudly his display of power, the power of a god. He could still feel Jiraiya inside the asteroid, clinging to life as he consumed the last remnants of nature energy inside his body. Then again, no amount of nature chakra would allow him to survive what was about to come.

"Now it's time for Konoha..." Pain said, as he motioned his hand down. "To disappear."

And with that motion, the asteroid was brought down. The collision would create both a shockwave and a tremor powerful enough to level the entirety of Konoha. After that, seeking the jinchuriki would be child's play.

"Pain!" Konan cried.

The Akatsuki leader was snapped from his thoughts as a blur pierced his asteroid, and came from the other side. Said blur turned out to be Tsunade, carrying a badly wounded and bloodied Jiraiya in her arms.

"H-hime..." Jiraiya croaked, coughing some blood.

"Shhh, don't talk," she whispered. "Now I'm going to take you somewhere safe and treat your wounds. Don't die on me, understood?"

And she wasn't the only newcomer.

"Wind Release: Double Rasenshuriken!"

Two shuriken made of wind chakra flew towards the pummeling asteroid, and exploded upon contact, forming two spinning blasts of wind, which they soon merged into one. The blast quickly grinded the asteroid into gravel, destroying it completely before it could crash against the ground. Rinnegan eyes scanned who was the one who had countered his jutsu with such relative ease.

The culprit landed about ten meters away from him, making a loud thud, raising a small cloud of dust. Two golden eyes glared at the Akatsuki leader.

"Mom, take dad away," Naruto said, not taking his eyes from Pain. "I can take care of this."

Tsunade nodded, as she carried Jiraiya away, leaving Naruto alone with the Akatsuki. "Alright, but be careful. I'll come back to help you as fast as I can."

For a moment, nobody said anything, as both Naruto and Pain's main body stared intently into each other's eyes, trying to figure out their thoughts and potential course of actions. Pain was the first one to open his mouth and break the reigning silence, which was only interrupted by the noise of the battles still going on around the village.

"Your Rasenshuriken is a sight to behold. To think that there's a jutsu able to negate my Chibaku Tensei..." Pain began. "However, in the end, it will be for naught. Do both yourself and your village a favor, and surrender already. Enough lives have been lost."

Pain waited for Naruto's response, expecting some sort of bravado about how he was going to "kick his ass" and protect the ruined village. But Naruto's response wasn't something the Akatsuki leader was expecting in the slightest.

"Your name is Nagato, right?" Naruto asked, his voice sounding calm. "Dad told me about you."

"Who I was in previous life doesn't ma-"

"Nagato Uzumaki," Naruto finished.

This seems to take Pain aback a little, but his astonishment was short lived.

"Oh, I see," Pain said in realization. "That's your plan, right? To appeal to our common ancestry in order to reach an understanding, and from there, an outcome that benefits both you and your village. You're wasting both our times. I couldn't care less about being from the same clan. You could be my very blood brother, and the result would be the same."

"How... how can you say that?" Naruto asked in shock. "What happened to you to have such a bleak worldview?"

Oddly, Pain smiled at such question. It wasn't a smile of mockery. "Now you're asking the right questions. See, two people with different worldviews, like you and me, will never reach an understanding. Because one person has experienced pain, and the other didn't. Or maybe both did, but of different kinds. We might be related, but our experiences growing up were completely different. Konan here is the only one who ever shared my pain, and thus is the only one I call my family. Besides, why are you putting so much importance on blood ties? After all, you aren't the product of your parents' union, are you?"

"So, because you had a crappy childhood, now you go inflicting misery on the innocent!?" Naruto asked, enraged. "Just what's wrong with you!?"

"Such a childish worldview," Pain said, shaking his head. "Yes, you probably see me as some sort of villain from a story book. Somebody evil for the sake of being evil, who only exists so the hero can beat him."

"You ravaged my home, killed my fellow jinchuriki and harm my family! How else should I see you!?" Naruto roared.

"Just like how, during the Great Wars, Konoha and other major villages destroyed my home and killed my friends. Now you understand my pain a bit better," Pain replied, though Naruto didn't react. "This body I'm using as an avatar belonged to the best friend I ever had. He was brave, caring, kind and compassionate. His dream was a world of peace, a world without strife, and fought to achieve it, for both mine and Konan's sake. He and Konan were in love. They deserved to get married, have children, and live a long and happy life. But alas, that wasn't his fate. He died because of Danzo, a Konoha ninja, who saw our efforts for peace as a threat to his plans. But I won't let Yahiko's dream go to waste. To honor his memory, I shall create a new world in his image, a world where no children have to grow up the way we did."

"Danzo is no friend of Konoha either!" Naruto protested. "If you really fight for peace, then cease this carnage immediately! This is no peace, this is nothing but pointless bloodshed!"

"From your perspective, perhaps," Pain replied. "But sometimes, sacrifices are need to be made in order to achieve a greater goal. Just like how Yahiko sacrificed his life so Konan and I could live, the jinchuriki and those who protect them must die so this perfect world can be born."

That moment, Fukasaku, still, attached to Naruto's back, saw something that made him gasp, as tears started to form around his yellow eyes. Getting off of Naruto, the old toad hopped towards where it laid the corpse of his wife, Shima.

"Shima..." Fukasaku sobbed, as he held one of her hands. It was cold as ice. "No... not you..."

A saddened Naruto watched the display, before his eyes turned towards Pain, stoic and unflinching as ever. The jinchuriki's scowl deepened. He took his Wind Blade from his ninja tool pouch and activated it. A blade of wind was projected from the modified kunai as Naruto channeled his own chakra into it.

"I'm done trying to reason with you," Naruto coldly stated, before leaping at Pain.

Naruto was expecting the Akatsuki leader to use his signature jutsu to repel him, but instead, he was intercepted by the body with the long hair, parrying Naruto's Wind Blade with a chakra rod. They struggled against each other for a couple seconds, before Naruto sent him flying with a brutal kick to the chest. Pain's main body merely sidestepped as the long haired body flew past him.

"After Toneri, the other Nine Tails, and that meteor, I'm down to just one clone. I better not waste any nature energy. I must save the Rasenshuriken for critical moments," Naruto thought, as he prepared his next jutsu. "Wind Release: Cyclone Vortex!"

Cupping his hands and casting them forward, Naruto released a powerful horizontal tornado, which thanks to the nature energy he had imbued into the jutsu, was wide and strong enough to swallow all of Pain's bodies

Another Pain, the fattest of the lot, landed in front of his brethren, and began to pull the tornado towards his body, absorbing it.

"Thanks for taking the bait, sucker," Naruto said, as he made a hand seal. "Shadow Clone Jutsu!"

Two clones popped into existence at each side of the blond. Without having to issue any order the clones and the original rushed forward, heading for the fat Pain, was still absorbing the cyclone Naruto had summoned earlier.

"Naruto-kun, if you plan to ambush Pain, it won't work," the Katsuyu clone told the blond. "The Rinnegan seem to give them some sort of peripheral vision, like the Byakugan."

"Don't worry, I have a plan," Naruto assured her. "I have an idea of how the Rinnegan works based on what I saw the first time I fought him."

"Clever," Pain praised, watching Naruto closing on his main defensive body. "But not enough."

Pain's main body and Puppet Pain moved to intercept Naruto and his clones. Just as the puppet transformed his arm into a cannon, the Naruto clones tossed a smoke bomb forward, covering the entire area in a mantle of darkness.

"I don't need to see you in order to stop you," Pain boasted, as he raised a hand forward. "Shinra Tensei!"

The smoke was blown away in an instant, and so were Naruto and his clones, the latter being destroyed by the sheer magnitude of the attack. While Naruto was blown away, Konan brought down a storm of paper flechettes upon the blond, while Puppet Pain showered him with chakra bolts. Letting out a scream of anguish, Naruto fell to the ground, motionless...

"That was much easier than expected," Pain commented.

... before disappearing in a cloud of smoke.

"What? That was a clone too?" Konan asked, as she increased her attitude in order to see the original. "Where did he-"

But it was too late. Naruto emerged from underground at the rear end of the group of Pains, where the Pain body capable of reviving the others was. Completely unprotected.

"You're mine!" Naruto said, as his fist started to crackle with electricity. "Lightning Release: Heavenly Hammer!"

Naruto's electricity coated fist pierced the target's body, electrocuting him from the inside out, sending lightning bolts in every direction. Once the jutsu stopped, Naruto couldn't sense anymore chakra from the body, meaning he had killed him.

"Well done, Naruto-kun! Now Pain has no means to replace lost bodies!" Katsuyu cheered. "But how they didn't see you?"

"Easy. It's not peripheral vision, like the Byakugan. It might appear as such, but I realized that when we fought the Pain bodies separatedly, they didn't have such ability. Which made us realize that their field of vision is linked somehow."

"So, that's why you threw the smoke bombs?" Katsuyu asked.

"Not exactly. I used them so he wouldn't see me creating a third clone and going underground," Naruto replied. "I needed Pain to think that I was trying to bring down the chakra-absorbing body, so his attention was away from the other bodies, and thus drop his guard."

"That's a very clever plan," Katsusyu said, before noticing the five remaining Pains and Konan closing in. "But I'm afraid that such thing won't work again."

"I don't need it to. Now I only need to destroy their bodies once," Naruto confidently said. "And I still have plenty of Senjutsu chakra to spare!"

"Outstanding move, Naruto," Pain sounded more genuinely impressed rather than angry due the loss of one of his most important bodies. "Let's see if you can repeat it."

Ponytail Pain took took a step forward, and prepared his only jutsu.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Slamming his plam into the ground,. Ponytail Pain summoned a giant multi headed dog, all its heads barking furiously.

"That's one hell of a mutt," Naruto said, letting out a whistle. He mimicked the enemy by biting his thumb and making five hand seals. "My turn! Summoning Jutsu!"

Once again, Naruto summoned Gamaken to his side.

"I'm ready to fight again, Naruto," Gamaken said, before looking at the dog. "Is that my enemy?"

"Indeed it is," Naruto said. "But try not to behead or cut it. It will split into multiple bodies if it's slashed."

"Yes, I do remember that insidious ability from the first time you asked me to fight that beast," Gamaken nodded, as he put his shield forward, while rearing his Sasumata back. He knew the drill: he'll keep the dog at bay, while Naruto tried to bring the summoner down, and thus undoing the summon. While the giant toad and the giant canine engaged each other in a fierce battle, Naruto prepared his next move.

"Now, it's my turn! Shadow Clone Jutsu!" Once again, Naruto created other two clones, and the htree of them charged forwards.

"I doubt he will try to use the same tactic twice in a row, but try to be careful!" Konan warned him from above.

Pain silently nodded, as he prepared to take in whatever attack Naruto planned to launch.

" Losing the Naraka Path was careless on my part. I need to let him attack, consume all his nature energy, and then exhaust him until he can't fight anymore," Pain thought, as he watched the blond coming. "As long as the Deva Path survives, I can win this. The other bodies are expendable."

The blond created yet another Rasengan, while the clones imbued it with wind chakra. Since he was using two clones, the Rasenshuriken formed much faster now. The blond grinned confidently at Pain, as he held the destructive spinning chakra shuriken above his head.

" He's expecting me to use the Preta Path in order to absorb the jutsu, and strike it down in the middle of the absorption," Pain deduced. "However, I have more than one method to nullify his attacks!"

"Wind Release: Rasenshuriken!"

Naruto threw the wind shuriken forward, in a straight line towards the main Pain. He was expecting that Pain would use his chakra-absorbing body to counter it, but none of the other bodies made any hints to move. Other than the target, who merely raised a hand forward.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Pain shot yet another kinetic wave forward, which managed to successfully dispelled Naruto's jutsu. But unfortunately for Pain, Naruto had already took that into account.

"He's vulnerable now! Five seconds!" Naruto said, as he pulled out his Wind Blade once again, before his clones launched him at Pain at a blurring speed.

Pain was literally taken aback by such tactic. Naruto was coming really fast at him. He had no time to dodge or wait for his power to recharge. His only option was to use another body as a human shield. Fortunately for him, there was an almost literal angel watching above him.

"Paper Drizzle!"

Konan flapped his paper wings once, creating a storm of razor sharp paper darts towards the incoming blonde. Many of the paper darts stabbed themselves into his flesh, stopping him on his tracks. Unsurprisingly for both Pain and Konan, Naruto disappeared leaving a small burst of smoke behind.

"Wind Release: Rasenshuriken!"

"What?" Konan asked.

While she and Pain had their attention drawn towards the incoming Naruto clone, they had forgotten about the original and his remaining clone, who prepared and launched another Rasenshuriken. Of course, his tactic wasn't going to work.

"I have this one," Pain said, as his chakra-absorbing body placed himself between the incoming jutsu and the rest of the bodies.

However, when the Rasenshuriken was about get close enough to be absorbed, it suddenly shot forward, aiming right for Konan. Both Akatsuki were startled. They were so sure Naruto would be focused on Pain, that neither of them took into account that he could target Konan as well. No time to dodge or outrun it, she could only counter it with brute force.

"Paper Shuriken!"

Konan moved backwards as she unleashed a barrage of shuriken-shaped papers on the incoming Rasenshruiken. She managed to detonate it earlier, but the size of the blast was much larger than she had anticipated. She continued unleashing paper projectiles on the ever growing blast of razor winds, but she failed to curb it.

"AAAAAAAARGGH!"

Konan screamed as the explosion reached her. And just like Toneri before her, while she would have instantly died had she been engulfed by the initial explosion, the shockwave was powerful enough to hurl her into the sky, away from Konoha.

Naruto could sense how Konan's chakra signature moved further and further until he couldn't sense her anymore. He could also feel the last remnants of nature energy vanishing from his body as well. The moment he sensed that, he made a hand seal, and dispelled the last clone gathering nature energy in order to reactivate Sage Mode.

Given that Pain had said that Konan was the only truly important person to him left, he was expecting him to be consumed by rage. But all five remaining bodies stayed as stoic as ever.

"Don't worry, Konan, I shall finish the job for the two of us," Pain whispered to himself, before his rippled eyes focused on Naruto. "See? This very battle is the proof that I am right. Just like how I harm people important to you, you in return seek to harm me and those who are important to me. It's a cycle that will never end if the world is left as it is."

"Spare me your bullshit," Naruto growled. "The world will be a better place once you and your lot are wiped away from the face of the planet."

"You keep proving me right," Pain insisted. "Akatsuki and I killed the other jinchuriki, and harmed your friends and family in the process. And in return, you seek retribution you see as just. Not that I'd blame you for doing it. It's not your fault, but this rotten world we were forced to live in."

"But answer me this, jinchuriki. If by sacrificing one person you could save a hundred, wouldn't you do it? One thousand? One million? Because by sacrificing nine people, I can save the entire world from itself."

"All you're going to achieve is releasing a beast so powerful you won't be able to control," Naruto retorted. "The Ten Tails isn't like the other Tailed Beasts. Its power is too big to be directed or controlled."

"For normal humans, maybe. But I'm beyond normal humans," Pain replied, his Rinnegan flashing with a purple glint. "You see these eyes, and you only think in a powerful Bloodline Limit. And you would be right, but there's so much more to the Rinnegan."

"Do you think the Rinnegan can control the Ten Tails?" Naruto asked, outraged. "If that was the case, the Sage of the Six Paths would have done it back in the day!"

"But the Sage of the Six Paths did exactly that," Pain replied, taking Naruto a bit aback. "Not in the way Obito controls the Nine Tails, of course. No, he controlled it in a much more pure, focused way: by absorbing it into his body, and becoming its jinchuriki. Only one born with these eyes can do such a feat."

"Just because you have the same eyes as him that doesn't make you the Sage of the Six Paths!" Naruto hollered. "The Sage preached peace and understanding, and valued freedom above everything else!"

"That, he did," Pain agreed. "He didn't want to use his power to impose himself as an emperor or a god. And look what happened. Do you know why I am here, jinchuriki? I am the reincarnation of the Sage of the Six Paths, who returned to this world to right the past wrongs. Humans have proved time after time that they can't achieve peace on their own. Reaching understanding is an utopic ideal. That's it, unless somebody else comes and ends all conflicts by force. I am that person. And to do so, I need to recover the power that was once mine. Once I'm complete, I shall use the power of the Ten Tails to usher a new world order of peace, security and prosperity."

"Kaguya already tried that, and she failed!" Naruto replied.

"Kaguya's regime would have lasted to this very day if it wasn't for her two sons," Pain shot back. "But unlike Kaguya, once I'm complete, there won't be anybody powerful enough to challenge me anymore."

"So that's your grand plan? Imposing your will by force?" Naruto asked.

In a rare display, Pain smirked.

"If you have a better idea on how to achieve world piece, I'm willing to listen," Pain replied. Several moments of silence passed, with only the wind and the sound of distant fights being heard. Naruto's expression became more and more frustrated as he made his brain work, unable to find an answer that would satisfy his opponent.

"That's what I thought. Now jinchuriki, if you truly want peace too be a reality and not an utopic dream, surrender now and give me your half of the Tailed Beast."

Naruto's expression changed, from frustration to determination as his gaze met Pain's.

"I may not have the solution that problem now," Naruto replied. "But that doesn't mean it doesn't exist. And if you want the Nine Tails, you'll have to beat me first!"

"Very well then," Pain stated. "I wasn't expecting you to make this any easier."

Naruto could sense something coming from underground below him, and jumped just in time before a gigantic centipede burst from the floor. As Naruto was in the air, Pain raised one hand,

"Bansho Ten'in!"

The blond jinchuriki felt his body mass turn to nothing as a strong invisible force pulled him towards the main Pain. On the other hand, Pain generated a one of those black chakra rods. Naruto, however, was ready.

"Shadow Clone Jutsu!"

Pain suddenly saw a tsunami of orange threatening to bury all his bodies. Fortunately, said bodies jumped into action. Puppet Pain removed one of his forearms, revealing a flamethrower inside, which he used to torch the clones, while the giant crustacean summoned by Ponytail Pain released several bales of water from its mouth. While most of the clones were destroyed, Naruto was able to escape unscathed, and jumped back, putting some distance between him and his enemies.

He didn't forget from the giant centipede from before, which lunged from the back, ready to sink its large and sharp jaws into the blond's flesh. Naruto, however, managed to grab said jaws with each hand before they could eviscerate him. Making use of his Senjutsu-enhanced strength, Naruto lifted the colossal arthropod, and tossed it against the giant lobster. Ponytail Pain was unable to jump in time, and fell to the ground, before the two tumbling animals crashed on top of him. Unable to resist so much weight piled up on him at once, the body gave up, and died. As a result, the two animals disappeared, leaving clouds of smoke behind.

"And another body down!" Naruto said with a triumphant glee. "Four more to go!"

The four remaining bodies placed themselves in a formation, with the fat Pain in the middle, long haired Pain to the left, puppet Pain to the right, and the Main Pain behind all three of them. It was obvious which body Pain considered the most valuable, but even then, Naruto couldn't get confident. Just like how he misdirected their attention to get rid of Konan, falling into a trap could prove fatal.

Naruto eyed the long haired Pain. So far, he only saw him using physical attacks. But he deduced every body must have some sort of special ability.

"Katsuyu, do you know what the Pain to the left does?" Naruto whispered to the slug on his shoulder.

"I believe he has some way to kill somebody by just touching them," the slug clone replied.

"The hell!?" Naruto asked, louder than he had intended.

"He touched Anko-san's head and then... it appeared as if he was able to rip the soul out of her body," Katsuyu explained, much to Naruto's horror. "However, given that the Akatsuki want you alive, I seriously doubt he'll use that ability on you."

"Still better not taking any chances," Naruto replied, lowering the volume of his voice again. "Though if he's limited to physical attacks, he should be the easiest one to go down."

Naruto quickly dashed towards the long haired Pain, Wind Blade in hand already active. Despite his speed, his target was able to create yet another black rod from under his sleeve and use it to parry the blow. Still, said blow carried so much force, he was pushed backwards. His senses warned him of the other three Pains closing in. Time for another ambush. Taking his hands to his ninja tool pouch, Naruto quickly grabbed and tossed another smoke bomb, engulfing all combatants in a cloud of smoke.

"I won't fall for that trick twice," Pain said, kneeling down and placing a hand on the ground, while the other three bodies jumped away in opposite directions. "Shinra Tensei!"

Pain sent a powerful wave of telekinetic energy underground, ripping the earth apart as it traveled, forming a crater while it expanded. And among all the rocks and pebbles that were thrown away, there was also Naruto Uzumaki, hurled into the air, with an expression of incredulity adorning his face.

"Got you," Pain said.

Puppet Pain stepped forward, generated a second right arm, and shot his hand like a cannon. The hand was attached to the rest of the arm by an extensible steel cable, which was reminiscent of Kakuzu's bizarre body modifications. The hand closed its fingers around Naruto's neck, before being violently pulled towards them.

However, even with the pressure on his neck, Naruto was able to make a single hand seal. And said seal was enough for his body to produce an electric current that the steel cable carried to the Puppet Pain, shocking him and forcing him to release him. Naruto coughed as he massaged his sore neck, while getting back on his feet.

" Okay, I can't use the Rasenshuriken just yet. As long as the chakra absorbing asshole is still there, it will be useless," Naruto thought, as he eyed the enemies in front of him. "And even if I'm able to bypass him, there's that gravity attack Pain can use to nullify it... damn, if I only had more than two Rasenshuriken... come on, think!"

"Bansho Ten'in!"

Pain taking the initiative snapped Naruto of his thoughts. Though, unlike the other times, he didn't feel being pulled towards the hated Akatsuki leader. Had his jutsu failed?

"What the- ACK!"

The answer came in the form of a large boulder that flew from behind and smashed against his back, launching him forward, painfully landing facefirst against the ground. Before he could react, Fat Pain and Long Hair Pain dogpiled him, with the former grabbing both the blond's hands, and started to suck his chakra.

"If I try to pull yourself to me, you'll simply create an army of clones to overwhelm me with," Pain replied. "But as you can see, there's more than one way to use my abilities."

"Shit!" Naruto shouted, as he struggled to break free. "My chakra...!"

"Let me help you, Naruto-kun!" the Katsuyu cloner said, as she jumped from his shoulder towards the chakra absorbing Pain. "Acid Spray!"

The small slug sprayed the portly Pain with a small but effective splash of corrosive liquid, burning his face, and instinctively making him to nurse his wounded face with his hands, stopping the chakra absorption. Relieved from such burden, Naruto used his superior strength to push the two bodies away from him, and dash towards Pain.

"Now is my chance!" Naruto thought, as he made a beeline for the main body of the Akatsuki leader.

However, Puppet Pain got in the way. Removing his Akatsuki cloak, the humanoid abomination revealed his whole upper body to Naruto: he had six arms, and on top of the black piercings that other bodies also had, this body also had numerous screws and bolts embedded on it, giving it an even more mechanical appearance.

Several bladed weapons grew from each of the six arms, and the puppet launched a flurry of attacks that the blond could only dodge or parry, while pushing him away from the main body. Naruto knew, much to his frustration, that he was only stalling for a few seconds so the main Pain's attack could recharge.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Naruto was proved right when Pain once again threw him back with a powerful kinetic blast. Was this battle going to be like that all the time? With Pain tossing Naruto from one side to another like a ragdoll?

"Give up, jinchuriki," Pain insisted. "Your fate is the same as your childish delusion of a future where everybody can understand each other: to disappear so an actual utopia might become a reality!"

Puppet Pain opened multiple compartments inside his body, revealing several clusters of small missiles that fired at Naruto. The blond, still getting back to his feet, was unable to dodge, and he was quickly engulfed inside several fiery explosions.

"Wind Release: Vacuum Vortex!"

Suddenly, all the flames were sucked into a single point, concentrating them into a small area, revealing Naruto, none the worse. Thanks to his Sage Mode, the flames didn't hurt him much, leaving his body with a couple minor burns. He then motioned his hands forward, releasing a stream of flames towards Pain.

Pain's jutsu hadn't activated yet, needing still a couple more seconds. Fortunately, Fat Pain landed in front of him, and began to absorb the flames into his body. Or at least, that's what he was trying. For some reason, he was unable to, and the body was quickly burned to death, leaving nothing but a blackened, charred corpse.

"What the... how did Preta Path fail?" Pain asked, sounding shocked for the first time.

"Because what you tried to absorb wasn't a fire jutsu, but actual fire," Naruto said, a confident grin adorning his face. "There was no chakra to absorb!"

"Well done, !" the Katsuyu clone praised. "Now you can use ninjutsu without trouble!"

"Not exactly," Naruto replied. "The main body still can nullify my jutsu through his abilities. Though given the five second window between attacks, I might be able to sneak a decisive hit if I time it right. Okay, let's do it! Shadow Clone Jutsu!"

Several clones popped into existence besides Naruto. Two of them threw a smoke bomb each, engulfing their battlefield inside a black cloud. Pain's three remaining bodies raised their guard.

" He's probably trying to ambush me. The first attack will be a diversion, but I can't be sure. Still, I better watch every side," Pain thought, as the three bodies placed themselves looking in a different direction so he could have a 360° field of vision and thus avoid any attacks from behind.

Naruto's attack made itself know when an horribly loud whirring noise pierced his ears, and a large chakra shuriken flew at Pain. He raised a hand at the incoming projectile.

"Shinra Tensei!"

The moment he did that, the Rasenshuriken turned into a Naruto, which quickly poofed after being blown away.

"The hell? He disguised a clone as the jutsu?" Pain asked in shock.

Another whirring sound, and another Rasenshuriken flew at him.

"Damn that jinchuriki and his trickery! I have no way to repel that blast! If it hits me, then these bodies are dead!" Pain thought, pushing away the panic, as he did the only thing he could think of.

The Puppet Pain moved forward, and using his arm canon, shot a chakra blast at the deadly wind shuriken, prematurely detonating it.

Pain's three bodies were about to move in order to avoid the expanding blast, the wind dispelling all the smoke around them. His eyes caught too late a Naruto clone waiving seals before slamming his hands into the ground.

"Earth Release: Mobile Core!"

Suddenly, a circle was cut in the ground around the Pain bodies, which quickly sank several meters below surface level.

"There's no escape from this one!" Naruto said, another Rasenshuriken in hand, before he tossed it at the trapped orange haired men. "This is for Utakata! Wind Release. Rasenshuriken!"

Pain watched impotently as the Rasenshuriken dived at his three remaining bodies, as that infernal noise filled his ears.

" Three seconds." Pain thought.

The Rasenshuriken drew near.

" Two seconds."

It was close enough for him to see it in close detail.

" One second... !"

The Rasenshuriken hit, and the three Pain bodies were engulfed inside an explosion of brutal razor winds. There were splashes of black and red spinning around the white and blue explosion, as the Akatsuki's cloak and flesh were torn to shreds.

"YES! Naruto said, pumping a fist in the air, just as his Sage Mode vanished. "Yes! Take that, Akatsuki! Your leader is down! Wohoo!"

...

From a safe distance, Jiraiya's broken and battered body was lying down on the hard floor, as his wife did her best to heal him as best as she could. Tsunade had removed all the black rods Pain had impaled into his body, and worked to fix all the wounds. He could feel all the wounds slowly closing, broken bones rebuilding themselves, and some of his energy returned. The process was slow and painful, but he endured.

"Tsunade..." Jiraiya began.

"Shh! Don't talk! You need to conserve your strength," Tsunade chided, as she continued the healing process.

"I may hurt but... I think I'm... out of danger..." Jiraiya weakly protested.

"Who's the doctor here?" Tsunade snapped.

"Don't give me the- OUCH!" Jiraiya yelped after Tsunade after more pressure than necessary to a wound. The Slug Princess smirked at him. "Don't do that!"

"Guess that, if you're that talkative, you're indeed out of danger," Tsunade conceded in defeat. "What's so important that it can't wait until later?"

"Nagato..." Jiraiya said. "Pain, I mean... the real one, is none of those bodies. Those are puppets reanimated by his power."

"Yeah, I know, Katsuyu told me about that," Tsunade told him. "Nice finding, by the way."

"What I want to say is..." Jiraiya continued, before coughing a couple times. Tsunade saw the lack of blood in those coughs as a good sign. "Nagato is somewhere around the village. We need to find him before he leaves."

"Those bodies of his seem to be covered in smaller versions of those black rods," Tsunade pointed out, her gaze shifting towards the bloodied pieces of metal she had pulled out of her husband. "Do you think he might be using them as mean to control them? You know, as receptors used to catch the original's chakra."

"It might be, yes," Jiraiya conceded.

"Then..." Tsunade began, as she stopped healing Jiraiya, grabbed one of the black rods, and cleaned it with her blouse, as she grimaced. "Boy, this is so unhygienic..."

"Hime? What are you going to do?" Jiraiya asked, having recovered enough of his strength to sit up. And much to his shock, Tsunade jabbed the rod into her shoulder. "WHAT THE HELL!?"

"Katsuyu..." Tsunade said, as she struggled with the pain. She could feel Pain's chakra coursing through her body, which was a good sign. "Sage Mode, please."

"Right now, Tsunade-sama!" The slug clone obediently said, realizing what her summoner was trying to do.

In less than a minute, Tsunade's eyes turned gold as red markings appeared around them. And most importantly, she could sense everybody around her. Using the sensing ability she now possessed, she was able to track Pain's original body. He was in a large tree made of paper, to the north, not that far away. She could sense Pain's anger at being located.

"Got him!" Tsunade said. Before tossing the rod away, and began healing the wound on her shoulder, while deactivating the Sage Mode. "I know where he is!"

"Good," Jiraiya said, trying to get back to his feet. "Let's get him before he escapes!"

"Not yet," Tsunade replied. "First we need to help Naruto dealing with that asshole. He had his Sage Mode, so I hope everything went fine. But there's no harm in going."

"Right."

"By the way, even among all the chaos and destruction going around us, I have a piece of good news," Tsunade smiled. "Hagane just woke up. Our son finally woke up, Jiraiya."

The white haired man sighed in relief. "You have no idea how happy I am to hear that. I want to hug him and tell him how much I love him after this."

"Yes. But first, we need to make sure Akatsuki doesn't take our other son away from us," Tsunade reminded him.

Jiraiya nodded with determination. "Right. Lead the way, hime."

...

Naruto panted, his muscles relaxing as he saw how the Rasenshuriken explosion slowly shrank, until it dissipated into nothing. Once it was finally over, he made a single hand seal, and cancelled the previous earth jutsu, putting back the piece of ground he had sunk where it originally was.

"Man, I'm so glad I decided to master all five elements," Naruto chuckled. "Okay, now let's check this guys are truly death."

Naruto walked towards the blast zone. The Rasenshuriken had made quite a number on the Pain bodies. First, there was the Puppet Pain. As expected, the innards of his body weren't blood and guts, but metal bolts, joints and plates. A machine that looked like a man. Then, there was Long Hair Pain. This one was organic, as the ungodly amount of blood splattered everywhere could attest. In fact, it was the remains of his long, orange mane the only thing that could be used to be identified.

And lastly, there was the body of the main Pain.

"Uh? Where is it? There should be three bodies here!" Naruto asked.

And that was the problem, that it was nowhere to be found. Looking around, Naruto then saw a hole that was partially hidden by Puppet Pain's body. The ground beneath his feet started to rumble, but it was too late. Pain emerged from under him, slammed his elbow into Naruto's back, making him fall onto the ground facefirst, and quick as lightning, stabbed two black rods into each hand, making sure he wouldn't be able to use them, or move it.

"Your strategy was a good one, jinchuriki," Pain praised. Even if he had avoided the Rasenshuriken, he didn't dodge it completely, as his cloak was partially shredded, and had cuts and bruises everywhere. "Unfortunately for you, you aren't the only one with mastery over all five elements."

"Shit!" Naruto cursed, as he tried to pull his hands from the rods, to no avail. "So, you can also use all elements? Is there anything those eyes of yours can't do?"

"That's a good question," Pain enigmatically replied. "One you won't live to hear the answer, may I say. Though if it's any consolation, think that your death will make possible the existence of a much better world."

"You're wrong," Naruto growled. "Even if you succeed, even if you become the jinchuriki of the Ten Tails, there won't be peace," Naruto said, defiantly looking at Pain. "People won't give up their freedom, and will continue to fight you until your reign is over."

"Then they shall perish," Pain firmly stated. "Just like a shepherd kills a wolf who gets too close to his flock not because he hates wolves, but because he wants to protect the sheep from their predators, I shall too protect the people who wish for peace from those who want to disrupt it."

"That's how you see people, right? Not as humans, but as sheep," Naruto said.

"People are indeed sheep, ninjas more than anybody. For what are humans but cattle waited to be sacrificed for the benefit of others?" Pain asked. "The people who start wars are never affected by them. They spend their time in the safety of their palaces, protected by the best bodyguards money can buy, while ninjas cut each other down in the name of lords they never met, while civilians are caught in the middle. Yes, people are sheep, and this world is nothing but a slaughterhouse. But thanks to Akatsuki, it will change soon."

"There are other ways," Naruto insisted. "Peace can't be imposed by force. All those who tried failed!"

"Those who tried before lacked the power I will have," Pain rebutted. "Because even the Kages are powerless to change anything. Jiraiya-sensei also shared my dreams of peace, yet with the power of a village at his beck and call, what did he achieved? He wasn't even able to keep his own ninjas in check, if the tales of Root are to be believed!"

"My dad has accomplished plenty of things!" Naruto shouted. "He made alliances with Kiri and Suna! And is working to build bridges with other villages as well! Not to mention helping Kirigakure achieve a new era devoid of blood! At era that happened because one of your lackeys brainwashed their Kage!"

"Yes, impressive accomplishments, indeed. But answer me this, Naruto," Pain replied. "Jiraiya is nothing but one man. And one day, he will die. What if the next Hokage doesn't agree with what he did, and burns all the bridges that Jiraiya built? Somebody like Danzo Shimura, whose supremacist views are well known. Or a new Kazekage or Mizukage. Just like Mei Terumi ended the Blood Mist, another Mizukage can bring it back. No, Naruto, we live in a world where change, no matter how good, it's irrelevant, because somebody will come and undo it. Only somebody wielding absolute power can enforce peace."

"The discussion is over. Take a good look at Konoha, for it is the last time you'll see it."

"I see," Naruto said, almost conceding defeat. "In that case, then I have no choice but end you right here, and right now."

For the first time since he met the Akatsuki leader, Pain smirked.

"And how do you plan to do it? Because you aren't in a good position to fight back," Pain pointed out. "Not even your Sage Mode was enough to beat me."

Naruto smirked back. "Yes, your power is amazing. But it also makes you underestimate your opponents."

And "Naruto" disappeared, leaving a small cloud of smoke behind. Pain's eyes widened, as he looked around.

"A Shadow Clone! Where did he-"

A shadow appeared over him. Looking up, he saw Naruto, presumably the real one, diving at him with a gigantic sphere of chakra in his hand. His face was a mask of pure anger. Panicking, Pain raised a hand.

"Shinra Ten-"

"BIG BALL RASENGAN!"

Pain was too late, and Naruto's attack connected, resulting in a spiraling blast of blue and white chakra, that carved a large crater into the ground, as it grinded Pain's body against the unforgiving floor, killing him almost instantly.

"Didn't you think I noticed that your main body dug a hole just before the Rasenshuriken hit?" Naruto asked Pain's corpse, even if he knew he couldn't answer, or even hear him. "I still had some nature energy in my body when you pulled that stunt. That's what you get for underestimating Sage Mode!"

"Good job, Naruto-kun," the Katsuyu clone in his shoulder praised. "I have more good news! Tsunade-sama not only healed Jiraiya, but he also located the position of Pain's real self!"

"That's great!"

"Indeed," the slug nodded. "Tsunade-sama is heading this way. She and Jiraiya should be here in a couple minutes."

"It's a pity they couldn't have come earlier," Naruto said. "I could have used their help against Pain."

"Fortunately, it all ended now," Katsuyu said. "According to the other clones, the remaining Akatsuki have been defeated, or are retreating from the village. Konoha has won."

Naruto looked around, and for the first time, took a moment to contemplate the destruction Akatsuki had brought to his home. Konoha was in ruins, even worse than when the Nine Tails attacked the first time. How many people have died because of them? However, Naruto now had the chance to put an end to this.

...

After Naruto met with his parents, the three of them decided to go after Nagato immediately before he had any chance to flee. Tsunade at first protested that Jiraiya shouldn't go just in case his former pupil decided to set one last trap before going down, but the Toad Sage had insisted, arguing that he needed to see his former student again. In the end, Tsunade relented, and allowed him to come, though he wouldn't take an eye from him.

Just like Tsunade said, they found a fake tree made of paper on a nearby hill to the north of the village. They easily broke into the hideout, when they were met by a badly hurt and wounded, but still battle ready Konan.

"Stand back!" Konan shouted. "I won't let you touch Nagato! You'll have to kill me first!"

"Konan, stand back!" a voice said from the shadows. "It's over. Let them come."

Reluctantly, the blue haired girl returned to the side of her master, allowing the two Sannin and their son to get close. As their eyes got used to the darkness, they could discern a figure in the shadows. An emaciated, frail looking man with red hair, sitting on what appeared to be some kind of mechanical walker. There were multiple black rods sprouting from his back.

"So, you won, and decided to come here in order to claim your just retribution," the redheaded said. He moved his head, his eyes becoming visible, revealing them to be Rinnegan, which rested on Jiraiya. "Hello, Jiraiya-sensei. It's been quite some time, hasn't it?"

"Nagato," Jiraiya replied, upon seeing his former student for the first time in years.

Author's Note: And with Pain and Konan defeated, the Akatsuki Invasion of Konoha comes to a close. There will be one more chapter that will deal with the Sannin and Naruto confronting Nagato and Konan, and what's going to be of the two of them after their defeat. It will also explain some parts of the altered backstory in relation to canon, so be sure not to miss it.

I know there were some reviewers who wanted Tsunade and Jiraiya to fight together, but I couldn't do that because if Tsunade helped either Jiraiya or later Naruto, the battle would have ended much, much earlier than I wanted (and in a much more anticlimatic way). But worry not, because I have a battle involving Jiraiya and Tsunade fighting together against a more fitting enemy planned down the road, which I know you're going to love.

My beta asked how does Pain know about Kaguya. The answer is that Obito told him? And how did Obito know? Madara told him. And remember that yes, Madara knows about Kaguya, since he mentioned her for the first time in the series. Though, I do plan to reveal in a future chapter how Madara and Obito know so many things about the Sages and other ancient history that was never elaborated in canon.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

The battle is won, but there's still one loose end to wrap up before this arc ends for real. What do you think will happen? What are your thoughts about the arc in general? Leave your thoughts in a review! reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Akatsuki Invasion, Part VI

Author's Note: I've been receiving messages from people asking me to help them with their stories. At first I had no problem, but eventually there were so many, I was overwhelmed. So even if it flatters me greatly that you think I'm a good enough writer to help you, I'm afraid I have to ask you guys to stop asking me to help you with your fics. My spare time is limited, and I want to use some of it to work on my story. For those whom I already agreed to help you, don't worry, I'm not going back on my word.

Now, enjoy the chapter.

Chapter 88:

The Akatsuki Invasion, Part VI

or

The Fall of a God

Under the shadow of the fake tree made of paper, was Pain, or Nagato. Or what was left of him, anyway. Far from the powerful figure that was Pain, Nagato was a frail and sickly looking man, one that could die at any moment. Despite his predicament, his eyes showed no fear, only a mixture of acceptance and resignation. Konan stood besides him protectively.

Jiraiya took a step forward, to see his former student a bit better.

"Nagato..." Jiraiya began, his eyes reflecting a deep sadness.

"Just... what happened? How did you end like... like this?"

Nagato didn't say anything at first. His expression being just as cold and stoic as Pain's. He then lowered his gaze.

"You took us in when we were nothing but defenseless children, sensei," Nagato began. "You trained us into capable ninjas, and most importantly, you gave us hope. Hope that a better future was possible. Hope that we could make a difference. Hope that this world wasn't beyond salvation.

"Said hope, however, took little time to be crushed," Nagato said, as he raised his gaze once more.

"Yahiko..." Jiraiya began, his lower lip quivering. "What happened to him? Did you...?"

Konan bristled at the unsaid implication. "How dare you suggest we betrayed Yahiko like that!"

"Konan, calm down," Nagato said in a firm tone. His words seemed to soothe the bluenette a little, before his attention was on Jiraiya again. "Yes... Yahiko. Fitting you ask for him, given that it was because of him that we did this. You see, after you left Ame, Yahiko decided to create an organization whose purpose would be to bring peace and eradicate war and poverty.

"The name of the organization was Akatsuki, since would bring the dawn of a new era. Everything went fine at first, but things quickly went south..."

Nagato told the Sannin and their son all the good they did, and how much Akatsuki grew. Prospect for the future of their organization and what it entailed were bright, However, as they grew in power and influence, they also made enemies that feared them for what they could do or how could change the status quo. The most dangerous of those men was Hanzo, Amegakure's leader.

Hanzo asked Yahiko, Konan and Nagato to meet him so they could join forces and spread Akatsuki's pacifist goals beyond the borders of the Land of Rain. But alas, it was a trap. While the trio went alone, not only did Hanzo brought a small army of his best ninja, but Danzo Shimura and a squad of Konoha ANBU was there as well.

Apparently, Danzo had convinced Hanzo that Akatsuki was a threat to his power and told him to lay a trap.

There was a brief fight, and Hanzo managed to catch Konan. He tossed a kunai at Nagato, and ordered him to kill Yahiko, or Konan would die. Nagato, however, was unable to do it, so Yahiko threw himself at the kunai, ending his own life. His last words were for Nagato to carry on on their dream of a better future, and that he was the key to make it happen.

Something broke inside Nagato, and unleashed a power unlike any other and summoned the Demonic Statue of the Outer Path, and used it to wipe out most Ame and Konoha ninjas, saving Konan, even if Hanzo and Danzo managed to escape with their lives. However, for some reason, the statue stabbed multiple black rods into Nagato's back, leaving him perpetually paralyzed from the waist down.

"Damn Danzo," Naruto cursed, his hand clenching into a fist. "That man poisons everything he touches!"

"If only we knew the extent of his unauthorized operations in other countries..." Jiraiya added. He felt really stupid for not doing something about Danzo earlier. How many troubles could have they saved, or even prevented from happening to begin with if it wasn't for him?

"And that's when you decided to change Akatsuki to what is it now, right?" Tsunade guessed, as she placed a hand on her hip.

"Yes... but not immediately," Nagato replied, before he started to cough. Tsunade could see some droplets of blood flying from his mouth.

Konan took a step forward. "Sometime before Yahiko's death, we were approached by a myserious masked man, who was accompanied by a truly bizarre creature, half man, half plant." Everybody guessed who those two people were. "The masked man introduced himself as Obito Uchiha, and claimed he used to be a disciple of Madara Uchiha, who had been alive until recently. And according to Madara's investigations, Nagato is the reincarnation of the Sage of the Six Paths, and the one destined to usher a new era of peace and prosperity upon the world..."

...

Konoha

Meanwhile, back in the village, many people started to breathe in relief as the fights started to slowly die down, until every Akatsuki, be a member or an easily expendable mook, either left the battle or was slain.

Naturally, the hospital was the spot almost everybody was heading to. Very few people have come out completely unscathed from the invasion, and thus plenty of ninjas and civilians wanted to be healed of their wounds. Or to have a friend or loved one healed. Naturally, the medics were overwhelmed, especially since their boss, Tsunade, had been seen leaving the village with Jiraiya and Naruto. Nobody knew why, but they hoped that she would return soon.

The Konoha Hospital wasn't prepared to hold such a huge number of wounded, so in the end, the most senior medics, who took charge of the situation in Tsunade's absence, decided to restrict the Hospital for those with grievous wounds or in critical condition. Multiple medical tents were set around the hospital where the less gravely wounded were attended.

In one of those tents was Hinata Hyuga, working tirelessly to heal the injuries sustained by her sister. Thankfully, even if Hanabi didn't come unscathed out of the fight with Toneri, her wounds were mostly superficial, and hoped she would get better after several hours of uninterrupted rest.

"Is she okay?" Fu asked.

Hinata offered to heal the muscular girl -who got quite a beating from the last Otsutsuki as well-, but the jinchuriki refused, claimed that other people needed her help more than her, and that, as a jinchuriki, she healed faster than most people. And even if Fu didn't heal as fast as Naruto, Hinata could already see some of her wounds closing, and her chakra regenerating at a rapid pace.

"Yes. Thankfully she didn't bear the worst of the fight," Hinata said with a nod.

"Yeah, it was the two of us who did!" Fu loudly replied with a vigorous chuckle. Upon feeling the piercing glares the rest of the people in the medical tent shot at the mint haired girl, she sheepishly grinned and whispered an apology. She then turned back at Hinata, and in a considerably lower voice said: "That Toneri guy hits hard. I don't think I'd be able to sleep if I knew a guy like that wanted to get inside my proverbial pants, and be so persistent about it!"

"Sadly this won't be the last time I have to deal with him," Hinata replied. "He'll come back, both for me and for Naruto."

"You think so?" Fu asked, as she scratched her temple. "I mean... Akatsuki pretty much threw at us everything they had, and still failed. If I were them, I would give up."

"They don't seem to be like the kind of people to give up after a single setback, no matter how big," Hinata countered. "Plus they still have six Tailed Beasts under their control. That alone makes them a huge threat to every Elemental Nation."

"I remember Naruto saying that we must find a way to release the beasts they captured," Fu said, placing a hand under her chin. "Though getting them out of that statue is going to be hard."

"Now it would be a good moment to counterattack, but I don't think we're in a position to do so, with so many wounded and deceased," Hinata lamented. "While we recover and regain our strength, Akatsuki may do the same."

"What about the other villages?" Fu asked. "They fight against Akatsuki as well, and Konoha helped them in the past. Maybe they can lend us a hand in return?"

"That's... a very good idea, Fu-san," Hinata praised. "Let's hope we can talk about it with Hokage-sama once he gets back."

Fu smiled earnestly at the compliment. That moment, a small group entered the tent, all of them being Hyugas led by a woman Hinata knew too well.

"There you are," the woman, Hikari, said, her voice filled with relief upon seeing Hinata. However, her relief was short lived upon seeing the unconscious Hanabi lying on a bed on the floor. "Hanabi! Is she-"

"She's okay, mother," Hinata reassured the older woman. "She only needs to rest a bit. I already treated all her wounds."

Relief seems to return to her once again, but worry didn't leave her heart completely. "I saw you two and the Seven Tails jinchuriki in the sky flying and fighting against that Akatsuki that's obsessed with you. I was afraid for the two of you."

"I appreciate your concern, mother. But as you can see, we came out of this alive," Hinata said in a reassuring tone. "What have you been doing during the battle, mom? I was worried about you and the rest of the clan as well."

"Those miserables launched an attack on the compound," Hikari said, seething with anger at the memory. "I led a group of ninjas in order to drive them away, while I had Hizashi-san escort the civilians and the Moon acolytes to the underground shelters. Let's hope they arrived safe and sound."

Hinata didn't reply. Her Tesneigan flashed for a fraction of a second, and her eyes became unfocused, as if she was zoning out. Hikari was about to ask if she was okay, but Hinata apparently regained her senses before that.

"They're okay. I can see Hizashi-san and other Hyugas, as well as the people they escorted, getting out of the shelter."

Hikari sighed in relief. "Thank goodness. I was already afraid that this would be another catastrophe like the Uchiha Insurrection. When Konoha is under siege, there are scumbags who always target us in order to get our eyes."

"Anyway, not to sound rude. I'd love to stay and talk more with you, but as a medic-nin, I have the duty to attend all the wounded here," Hinata reminded her mother.

"Oh, right! Sorry, I won't distract you anymore," Hikari replied. "I'll stay here with Hanabi for a bit, if it's not a bother."

"Of course not, mother," Hinata said, before turning towards the jinchuriki. "Fu-san, may I have your help in this endeavor?"

"Sure! It's nice to help in a way other than punching other people for once," the energetic jinchuriki said.

...

Not far away from there, Hiruzen Sarutobi was leading a group of ANBU, trying to find all the people, both ninjas and civilians, not accounted for so far. They had found quite a lot of people trapped under crumbled buildings. Some of them were alive and only needed medical attention. Others, unfortunately, weren't so lucky.

At one moment, another ninja clad in complete black save the green flak jacket appeared before him. His face was as unreadable as ever, but the old Hokage could see some worry into the man's onyx eyes.

"Ah, Itachi-kun," Sarutobi said. "Do you bring news? I trust everything was fine in the T & I department."

"It was," Itachi confirmed. "There were a few Zetsu who attacked the building, but I doubt they realized of its significance, and were only there to cause damage. I managed to repel all of them."

"Those are good news indeed," Hiruzen said, nodding and even smiling a little. "Yet I see there's something that's troubling you."

"Indeed, Sarutobi-sama," the Uchiha confirmed. "Unlike what I was expecting, Orochimaru didn't appear to rescue Hebimaru, nor did he send anybody in his stead to do so."

Hiruzen chuckled sardonically. "And that surprises you, Itachi-kun? As much as it pains me to admit it, Orochimaru cares for no one but himself. That boy, Hebimaru, might be strong, but I doubt my former student would consider him vital."

"I'm aware of that, Sarutobi-sama, and that action on itself is not what worried me," Itachi clarified. Sensing the old man's confusion, he continued. "I've been asking some people, who fought at different areas of the village, and not a single person saw Orochimaru."

"He didn't take part in the attack?" Hiruzen asked, surprised by the revelation. "That's... odd."

"And now you understand the source of my worries," Itachi said. "So far, every other Akatsuki that's still alive was seen in the fight. Pain, Konan, Kisame, Deidara, Toneri, Obito. And even Zetsu in the form of an army of clones. But Orochimaru was nowhere to be seen."

"Maybe Orochimaru was kicked out of their group?" Hiruzen guessed. "Maybe even a band of criminals like Akatsuki couldn't stomach Orochimaru's lack of concern and respect for life."

"An overly optimistic assumption, Sarutobi-sama," Itachi replied. "Though even if that may be the case, we can't count Orochimaru out just yet. I think that he's planning something. Something big. And given that Konoha is now weakened after this attack, he might make his move now."

"And understandable concern, Itachi-kun," Hiruzen said. "Alright, I'll bring it to Jiraiya the next time I see it."

"I appreciate that, Hokage-sama," Itachi said, before making a polite bow. "Now, if you excuse me, I need to check if my little brother and Shisui are okay."

And Itachi vanished as quick as he had appeared.

...

"It was shortly before Yahiko's death that Obito came to us," Konan was the one continuing their story. "We didn't know how he knew of us, and how he knew that Nagato had the Rinnegan. He claimed to be Madara's disciple."

"Madara's disciple? Oh come on!" Tsunade scoffed. "Madara has been dead for decades. My grandfather saw to it."

"The thing is... there's no way that man could know all the things he knew if that wasn't true," Konan added. "Listen, we aren't idiots. We didn't get to live as long as we did by trusting the first stranger claiming nonsense."

"We made a background check on Obito before considering his offer," Nagato continued. "We know he used to be a Konoha ninja, who apparently died during the Third Ninja War. How did he survive, we never know. But like Konan said, he knew things nobody of his background should know."

"And then there's that weird creature that always accompanied him like a shadow," Konan added. "Zetsu."

"Obito told us all the things he learned under Madara," Pain continued. "How both he and Madara had been trying to achieve a world without conflict and war for a long time. And how, after much research, they managed to find a way: a new Sage of the Six Paths needed to be awakened in order to lead the world to such age."

"You haven't answered my question," Tsunade interceded. "How can Madara be still alive? Hashirama brought his corpse to Konoha, where Tobirama himself realized an autopsy and he confirmed his death. He then buried the body in a place whose location took to the grave."

"We... have no answer to that question," Nagato admitted. "Like we said, we decided to strike an alliance with Obito in order to bring the world to an age with no wars nor suffering."

"And it was Obito who told you to capture the Tailed Beasts to do it?" Naruto asked, sounding a little incredulous.

"You're aware of the history behind the Tailed Beasts and the Sage of the Six Paths, yes?" Nagato asked. Naruto nodded. "Then you must know that there was a time in which Hagoromo Otsutsuki had the Ten Tails sealed inside him. And thus, he was immensely powerful. But he didn't use that power to create a better world. He merely became a preacher, and then wasted such power by splitting it in nine pieces and giving them a mind of their own."

"And do you know why Hagoromo did that? Why he didn't choose to reign over mankind as a living god?" Naruto fired back. "Because he already saw what such thing led to. Safety and security are meaningless if we lack freedom."

"Yes, I know that," Nagato stated. "It was what sparked conflict between his sons. Asura believed that the key to peace was love. Indra believed it was power. Yet Asura was proven wrong the very same moment Hagoromo chose him as his successor over his older brother, given that Indra started a feud that continued to this very day. No matter how much 'love' Asura and his followers preached, it wasn't enough to stop those who had darkness in their hearts."

"And what's your solution? More conflict? More death?" Naruto angrily asked. "Did you see in what state Konoha is!?"

"Necessary sacrifices," was Nagato's only answer.

"It's easy to talk about sacrifices when you're not the one doing it," Naruto scoffed.

Nagato pierced Naruto with his glare. "Didn't you hear what I just told you? My best friend sacrificed himself so Konan and I could live. So we could carry his dream in his stead. Don't dare lecture me about sacrifices."

"Yes, I'm sure your friend Yahiko, wherever he is now, would be so damn proud of everything you've done," Naruto seethed, narrowing his eyes at the two Akatsuki, who visibly bristled. "Ask yourselves, would Yahiko want this? Would Yahiko want you to kill innocent people?"

"Shut up!" Konan loudly shouted, anger restoring some of her energy. "You don't have any right to speak about Yahiko! You have no idea of what kind of man he was, or how far he was willing to go to achieve his ideals!"

"For the way you speak, Yahiko sounded like a pretty cool guy," Naruto replied. "That's why I don't think he'll approve of what you're doing. I mean, come on guys, did you ever see the kind of people you're working with? All of them violent and psycopahitic missing ninja! Are you telling me they are fighting for a better world?"

"They're merely means to an end," Nagato said matter-o-factly, before being interrupted by another coughing fit. "Not that it matters anymore, given that I failed Yahiko today, regardless if we follow yours or my interpretation of his wishes. Come on, Naruto, end me already. I took too much from you. Just like how I killed the man who took everything from me, you also earned your just retribution.

"My only request is for Konan to be spared," Nagato asked. "All she did was to follow my orders. Even if her hands are stained with blood, she deserves another chance."

Naruto took a step forward. In front of him was the man who created the organization who hunted Naruto's kind since its inception. The one who ravaged Taki to the ground. The one who killed Utakata and Roshi, and nearly killed Hinata, Haku, Jiraiya, Gaara and many others. And now, he could put an end to it.

"And what good would I make by killing you?" Naruto asked. "Would your death bring back all the people you killed? Not to mention, if I killed you, all I would do is perpetuate the cycle of hatred. You killed the other jinchuriki. I kill you in return. Then, Konan would resent me for doing so and would plan killing me too. Then my loved ones would avenge my death. And so on. Isn't this what ninjas have been doing for generations?"

Nagato looked incredulous. "Are you telling me that you don't feel angry at me? That you don't think your revenge is justified? That you don't want me to pay for my crimes?"

"You WILL pay for your crimes, Nagato," Naruto firmly stated. "However, it won't be me who will decide your fate. The Hokage and the rest of Konoha will be the ones to say that."

"So... this is your answer," Nagato said, chuckling. "You have the willpower not to give into revenge. That's... I don't think I even met somebody like that. I thought that, after all I did to you and your home, you'd be dying to end my life already."

"Listen, Nagato, there are people who thrive off conflict. But those are a minority," Naruto continued. "The Senju and Uchiha clans were locked in a bloodthirsty feud for generations. Uchiha killed Senju, Senju killed Uchiha in revenge, rinse, repeat. Until the First Hokage decided to put an end to that, and took the first step towards peace. And guess what? Most of the Uchiha wanted that as well! Madara, the one still giving into revenge, was alone. That's why nobody wanted him for Hokage. That's why he ended up leaving a village that had no room for a warmonger."

"Yes, and that worked so well," Nagato fired back. "Didn't the Uchiha tried to take over your village a few years ago? And you had to kill all of them to quell the insurrection."

"Not all of them rebelled or were killed," Jiraiya interceded. "Some stayed loyal to the village, and continue to do so to this day."

"Because in the end, everybody wants peace," Naruto continued. "Nobody wants wars, and seeing their loved ones die. But many people are still unable to let go of past hatreds, and stir conflicts, and everybody else are dragged with them. But if we raise our voices, we can silence those who can't let go of the past. Those who want conflict as a mean to satisfy past offenses against them."

"None of us were alive to see the Warring Clans Period, but even with all the faults of our current system, it's still a paradise compared to what it was back then," Tsunade added. "Shouldn't that be a signal that, even if we still have a long way to go, we're on the right path?"

"It wasn't 'paradise' for us, that's for sure," Konan fired back with a scoff.

"Yes, we know. People still suffer, die, or see their loved ones die," Naruto said. "If fighting against you taught me something is that you can't save everyone. But I will continue fighting to save as many people as I can. To make the world a little better. I will probably die before seeing the kind of world we speak about, but I'll die happy knowing that I managed to made the world a little better for the next generation. And one day, we will reach an age in which wars and hatred will become a thing of the past. But since we have reached such age naturally, nobody will try to fight against it."

There was a moment of silence as Naruto's words sunk in. Konan looked at Nagato, who was deep in thought, expecting his answer, as if she had already reached her own conclusion but needed her leader's approval and validation. After a few more tense moments of silence, Nagato raised his gaze, and much to everybody's surprise, he chuckled.

When Nagato's eyes rested on Naruto, a memory of Yahiko manifested in the form of an image, overlapping with the orange-clad blond. It was now when he noticed the uncanny resemblance between the jinchuriki and his fallen friend. Their unbound optimism and their unfettered hope for a better future. Hell, even their hairstyles were similar. This made Nagato to smile as well.

" Maybe it wasn't me who carried Yahiko's will all along..." Nagato thought, entertaining that idea. "Sorry Yahiko... I failed you a second time..."

"You seem to be very confident in which this world can improve and become something better," Nagato said. "And you want to do it without making sacrifices or taking drastic measures."

"Because if the world needed such things, it wouldn't be worth saving," Naruto replied. "But I know it's not the case. I know we can make things better."

Another memory hit Nagato. This time, their time when Akatsuki was in its first incarnation led by Yahiko. That's what Yahiko wanted to do. He wanted to make things better by convincing people that his ideas were right and were worth fighting for. They only fought when there was no other option, and Yahiko always advocated for sparing their enemies if more bloodshed could be avoided.

" Yes... Yahiko's ideals were so inspiring... but guess that when he died, my faith in his ideals died with him," Nagato sadly reflected.

"Naruto, even without the Rinnegan, you proved to be my better. You seem to be like somebody who, no matter what life throws at you, will always stay true to yourself and the path you've chosen... unlike me," Nagato said, as he brought his hands together, making the Ram seal, putting Naruto and the Sannin on guard, while Konan gasped. "And just like Yahiko trusted his dream to me, I will trust both our dreams to you."

"Nagato, are you going to...?" Konan stammered.

"My pain was so big, that I wanted everybody to share it with me. But doing so only caused more misery. I'm afraid I can't bring back any of the jinchuriki Akatsuki has captured, nor the people we killed in our quest to capture them. But I can undo the last of my sins," Nagato said, before turning at Konan. "Konan, words can't express how much I valued your loyalty, and above all else, your companionship. I know how much Yahiko's loss affected you, and how you don't want to lose me either. But I have been lost for quite some time, and worse, I've dragged you with me. It's too late for me, but not for you. Fight for our dreams, but do it correctly this time. Make me and Yahiko proud."

Tears started to stream from Konan's eyes, as she tried to form what would be her last words to her last living childhood friend. "I-I will, Nagato... you can leave everything to me!"

Nagato nodded, and smiled one last time. The Ram seal turned into the Snake seal, and the Akatsuki leader started to glow with an intense white light.

"Outer Path: Heavenly Rebirth!"

A beam of white light shot from Nagato into the sky.

...

Back in Konoha, Hiruzen and his ANBU were overseeing all the corpses that they had gathered, lying down in rows in the middle of a clear area, so their relatives and loved ones could identify them, and say their goodbyes. It was a heartwrenching sight, seeing so many people looking at the corpses, desperately wishing that their sons, daughters, brothers, sisters, parents, spouses, and the like weren't among them.

But alas, fate wasn't kind to everybody, and every couple minutes they could see somebody falling on their knees, sobbing, upon recognizing a corpse. Hiruzen was no stranger to such feeling, so he could empathize with the poor people perfectly.

"Sarutobi-sama?" an ANBU besides him wearing a lizard mask asked. "Are you okay?"

Hiruzen nodded. "Yeah, I am, more or less. It's just... this sight. So much sorrow and pain. I already saw it in all three Ninja Wars. It never gets any easier."

"I understand," the ANBU replied with another nod. "We ninjas are trained to weather this kind of tragedies, but deep down we're just human."

"Still, it's a good thing that there were no more corpses," Hiruzen noted, desperately trying to look for a bright side to their situation. "Given the scale of the attack, I was expecting at least twice as bodies as the time Orochimaru-"

"Hokage-sama!" another ANBU, one wearing a mouse mask, shouted as he pointed into the horizon. "What's that!?"

He didn't need to ask what he was talking about, as the old ex-Hokage saw a pillar of white light shooting into the sky. Then, the clouds themselves started to glow with the same white light, before multiple beams started to rain above them.

"What's the meaning of this!?"

...

Not far away from there, in another field of corpses, the three youngest members of Anko's Assassination Squad were kneeled around the deceased form of their teacher. Dosu remained stoic, but Zaku and Kin, being more emotional, had tears running through their cheeks.

"First Mizuki-sensei, and now her," Zaku sobbed, as he triped to wipe his tears away. "Is there something wrong with us?"

Despite the comment, the trio of former Oto ninjas didn't miss Mizuki in the slightest. The man was strong, but his tracking methods left too much to be desired, and Dosu had the suspicion that he was afraid that the three younger ninjas could surpass him. Something that seemed closer to the truth after they were told about Mizuki.

But with Anko, it wasn't the same. The snake mistress had a sadistic streak, and pushed the trio to their limits. But she was always fair, and the results of her training soon became evident. In Otogakure, they were told not to form bonds, as they were a source of weakness, and to obey without question. Anko, however, was different, and during the three years they spent under her tutelage, they grew to love her as a big sister.

"Guys, stay strong," Dosu told them, barely holding his own grief. "Anko-sensei would have hated to see us crying like little kids over her. She would have wanted us to move on."

"Those assholes are going to pay," Zaku seethed, as he clenched his hands into fists. "I'm not going to stop until every single one of them is dead."

"Yes! Anko-sensei would have avenged us if we died instead of her!" Kin agreed.

Before they could discuss their plans any further, they noticed that the sky had turned bright white, and beams of light of the same color started to rain from above, much to their shock.

"What is this!? Another enemy attack?" Dosu asked, as he jumped to his feet and adopted a fighting position.

The beams started to fall around them, all of them hitting the nearby corpses. And when a corpse was hit by said beams, it suddenly sat up and opened its eyes as if said person returned to life. It didn't take long to realize that that's what was exactly happening. Even the corpses that were mangled beyond recognition were rebuilt and restored, looking as if they never suffered any harm or damage, before coming back to life.

Then, one of the beams hit Anko.

"AAAAAAHHHH!" the Special Jonin screamed, as she suddenly sat up. "... uh? What happened?" the confused kunoichi asked, looking around. "Where is Hokage-sama? And Pain? And what are you brats-"

"ANKO-SENSEI!" the three shouted at once, before tackling their teacher into a hug, with such force they made her fall on her back again.

"WHOA THERE! What the hell are you doing, brats!?" Anko shouted, trying to push them away. "Seriously, you have three seconds to get out of my skin before I murder you all!"

...

Not only the humans were grieving their lost loved ones. Fukasaku was sitting besides his wife's corpse.

"I always thought that I'd kick the bucket before you would, Ma," Fukasaku sadly said, grabbing Shima's cold hand. "Let's hope you're now in a better place, away from all this- uh?"

Fukasaku was startled by the beams of light that rained above Konoha. Once of those beams hit Shima, which instantly healed her injury, and made her open her eyes and rise, as if she just woke up from a dream.

"Pa?... what happened?" the confused toad asked.

"MA!" Fukasaku shouted, as like most people in this situation, tackled his loved one into a hug. "Oh, I thought I had lost you forever! I don't know what happened, but-"

...

Hiruzen Sarutobi was a man that had lived more than most people, especially those that choose a career with such a high mortality rate. And during that long life, he had seen many strange and powerful jutsu. Some in the recent years, such as Orochimaru's Impure World Resurrection or Hinata's Tenseigan led him to believe that nothing could surprise him anymore. Of course, fate is a petty mistress, and decided to prove him wrong.

Much to his shock -and those with him-, the corpses they had gathered not long ago weren't dead anymore. The beams of light that rained from above had resurrected them. Even those whose bodies were far too injured had their wounds completely repaired, almost as if they were never there to begin with.

Naturally, the people that a few seconds ago were mourning their loved ones were now shedding tears of joy rather than sorrow, and loudly praising and thanking whatever deity had decided to grant this miracle to them. Because there was no other way to call this event.

"Hokage-sama, I have news from other parts of the village!" an ANBU said, tapping his ear, where an earpiece was. "Deceased people are coming back to life as well in the whole village! All those reported death are now completely fine!"

"It's amazing. This invasion could have left Konoha on its deathbed, but thanks to this..." another ANBU said in awe. "If the number of casualties drops to zero, we'll be able to bounce back to our previous strength in no time!"

Hiruzen smiled and nodded, before looking at the direction from where the pillar of light shot. From what he was told, that's where the leader of Akatsuki hid his true body, and Jiraiya, Tsunade and Naruto went to confront him. He couldn't wait for them to come back so they could explain what did they exactly do for such a miracle to happen.

...

Back in Nagato and Konan's hideout, Nagato had finally stopped glowing. His previously red hair had turned white, and his body looked even more emaciated than before, almost skeletal.

"Maybe... I should have done this... when Yahiko first died..." Nagato wheezed. "Now, Naruto... make this world... a better..."

Nagato couldn't finish his sentence, as he fell prey to a fit of coughs, before his body stopped working altogether. Konan closed her eyes, and wiped out her tears.

"Can somebody explain to me what the hell just happened?" Tsunade asked.

"Nagato used the Rinnegan's ultimate jutsu to resurrect all the Konoha citizens who died fighting our forces," Konan explained. "The Heavenly Rebirth. However, the price for such a power..."

Konan left the sentence unfinished, the trio of Konoha ninjas being able to fill the obvious blank. The fake tree then started to fall apart, the individual sheets of paper that formed it splitting from each other and being carried away by a gentle wind into the sky. Light started to pour around them.

"Thank you, Nagato," Jiraiya said, even if his former student couldn't hear him anymore. "I knew you weren't completely lost."

"It was said that the Sage of the Six Paths could use this jutsu without dying, or even suffering any sort of ill side effects," Konan explained. "But for some reason, he hardly used this ability. Nagato used to say that, once he became the jinchuriki of the Ten Tails, he would be able to stop people from dying pointlessly. Become a true god."

"How do you know so much about the Rinnegan and the Sage of the Six Paths?" Tsunade asked. "Because there's no way anybody could teach Nagato about it, since everybody thought to be nothing but a myth."

"Obito taught Nagato how to use it," Konan replied. "That's why I strongly believe Obito's words about Madara being his master. He possesses knowledge no human being should have. And even then, we had the suspicion that he knew even more than he let on."

"That brat is turning out to be even more dangerous than we initially thought," Tsunade said, as her body felt prey to a wave of uneasiness. "If his words are true and Madara is still alive..."

Konan then took her Akatsuki cloak off, and walked towards Jiraiya before handing it to him.

"Take this, sensei," Konan said. "Accept it the symbol of my new beginning... and a token of surrender. I'm ready to face my sins."

"You will, in time," Jiraiya said, as he grabbed the black and red cloak. "But for the time being, you might be able to atone for them helping us taking down Akatsuki."

"Starting with the Tailed Beasts," Naruto interceded. "We need to find a way to release them from that statue!"

"The Demonic Statue of the Outer Path," Konan said. "If you know the Ten Tails, then you're aware of the statue's true nature," the Konoha ninjas nodded. "You'll need the Rinnegan to summon the Statue. Then... well, I'm not really sure, but there has to be a way to make the Statue release the sealed beasts inside it."

"Understood," Jiraiya said, as he walked towards Nagato's corpse. He pulled it from the mechanical walker, and placed it on the floor. He then pulled a kunai, and gouged the Rinnegan eyes out. "Not that I wasn't planning to do this to begin with. These eyes are weapons of mass destruction. I wish we could get rid of them right now, but sadly, no can do."

"Whose going to get those eyes?" Naruto asked.

"According to Obito, only those who descend from the Sage of the Six Paths have the right chakra to wield the Rinnegan without being consumed by their power," Konan began.

"The Senju, Uzumaki, and Uchiha clans," Naruto finished.

Konan nodded in return. "Yes. I believe there are people in Konoha who fit those requisites."

"Very well then. We'll have to choose carefully whom we should entrust this power," Jiraiya said, after sealing the eyes inside a storage scroll. He then took Nagato's corpse, and carried it over his shoulder. "Come on, let's go back to Konoha."

They were about to turn around and return to the village, but Konan stopped them.

"Jiraiya-sensei, I know I'm not in a position to ask anything..." the bluenette began. "But I wish for Yahiko and Nagato's bodies to be returned to Amegakure, so they can be buried and rest in peace."

"Don't worry, Konan. I'll see for that to happen," Jiraiya reassured his former pupil.

As the three Konoha ninjas and the ex-member of Akatsuki headed back to Konoha, Jiraiya was alerted by a low caw. Looking up, he saw a crow flying in circles above him.

...

A few moments earlier, at the cells under Torture & Interrogation Department

Sai wasn't sure what was going on. For the past few hours, thundering noises could be heard from above, some of them which caused multiple tremors. He knew there was a battle in the village, though he couldn't tell who was the invader. His best bet was Akatsuki, but the ninja tasked with keeping an eye on the prisoners refused to confirm it.

Said confirmation came in the form of Itachi Uchiha. The Uchiha Jonin joined the ninja protecting the department under the assumption that Orochimaru was the only Akatsuki not seen, and that he more than likely would be planning to liberate the clone of Jiraiya's youngest son, Hebimaru. The Uchiha took command of the place, and organized a defense for the incoming attack.

An attack that never came. Then again, he couldn't fault Itachi. Danzo had taught him that it was better to be prepared even if the situation didn't demand it, than the other way around. Itachi had left when another ninja came and told them that the battle was over and Akatsuki has been repelled. Naturally, there were many cheers and cries of joy, but if Itachi was happy, he didn't show it, as his usual stoic façade did not break. He said he needed to find and talk with either Jiraiya or Hiruzen, whoever found first.

Sai thought that was the end of it, but after an hour or so -it was hard for him to tell how much time passed given his predicament- the Uchiha returned, and much to his surprise, entered Sai's cell.

"Hello, Itachi-san," Sai said, smiling at him. "I must admit I'm surprised to see you here."

"I need to talk to you about Danzo. I want you to answer some questions I have about him," Itachi ordered. His tone carried a bit of urgency, odd given the situation.

"Of course," Sai replied. "But I must tell you that I've been both thoroughly interrogated and my mind scanned. I don't think I'll be able to tell you anything the other interrogators don't know already."

"I'm sure there are things they slipped their mind," Itachi said, sounding sure of himself. His eyes flared with a red gleam as the Sharingan came to life.

"Very well then," Sai said, agreeing to cooperate. "What do you want to know?"

"What was Danzo's relationship with Orochimaru?" Itachi asked.

"From what I know, Danzo-sama had a partnership with Orochimaru for many years. Far more than what I've been alive," Sai began. "I don't know most of the details, but Danzo-sama believed Orochimaru could be a powerful ally in his endeavor. Said alliance continued even after Orochimaru was forced to flee the village when his experiments with human subjects were discovered, and the Sannin joined Akatsuki."

It wasn't hard to figure out why Danzo was so interested in Orochimaru. Shisui had revealed that the leader of Root had some of Hashirama's DNA spliced into his own, which granted him a boost to his stamina and life force, as well as Wood Release. Such work had Orochimaru's signature all over the place.

Of course, anybody who knew Orochimaru knew that the Sannin wasn't helping Danzo out of the goodness of his heart. Orochimaru must have wanted something from Danzo in return.

"What did Orochimaru ask in return from Danzo?" Itachi asked. "We know Danzo helped Orochimaru stage his invasion of Konoha in a bid to become Hokage. But there has to be something more."

"I haven't been in many of their meetings, but in those I was present, the topic was almost always the same. Orochimaru was interested in ninjas with Bloodline Limits. He had perfected a way to integrate them into a human body," Sai replied. "Danzo-sama would track and kill ninjas with the desired abilities, hand the bodies to Orochimaru, and in return, Orochimaru would share with him the way to apply said abilities to another body."

"We already knew that," Itachi said, sounding a little exasperated.

"Sorry. I already warned you that I said everything I know about Danzo-sama and Root," Sai replied.

"But not everything about Orochimaru, I'm sure of that," Itachi insisted. "Did Orochimaru ever mentioned tensions within Akatsuki? Did he ever have any intention to leave the group?"

"Orochimaru didn't seem to be very committed to the Akatsuki cause. He appeared to be part of the group because of the boons he got from it," Sai replied. "Though, from what I remember, it seems that the leader was the reason he joined."

"Pain? What about him?" Itachi pressed on. "What's his relationship with Orochimaru?"

"Orochimaru said that he was interested in the leader's doujutsu. That, when the right moment came, he would claim Pain's eyes for him."

Suddenly, the last piece of the puzzle clicked, and everything began to make sense. Orochimaru abandoned Akatsuki when they were about to attack Konoha hoping that the attack would fail, and Pain would either be killed, or left vulnerable enough. If it was the latter, Orochimaru would swoop in and deliver the coup de grace himself. But if it was the former, he also knew that Konoha would claim the Rinnegan, if only to prevent the enemy from having them. Then, Danzo would use his spies to steal the eyes, and give one to Orochimaru. Or maybe Danzo would betray Orochimaru. Or Orochimaru would betray Danzo. Those outcomes were of no concern to the Uchiha now.

Of course, such plan had gone to waste after Danzo and his forces were forced to flee Konoha. Shisui said that Kabuto Yakushi, Orochimaru's right hand man, spearheaded the rescue operation. Still, Danzo himself and many of his men were able to escape. Among them, a genjutsu specialist so powerful, not even the Sharingan was able to pierce through their illusions, if Sasuke was to be believed.

"Thank you, Sai. You made Konoha a huge service today," Itachi said, as he left the cell.

Sai smiled at him. "I only live to serve Konoha."

Itachi knew what he had to do. First, he had to contact Jiraiya. And he needed to find Shisui. They weren't out of danger yet.

...

Konoha Hospital, a few moments later

Upon arriving at the hospital, Jiraiya ordered Naruto and Konan to be hospitalized -much to the blond's protests-, and in Konan's case, he also ordered to have chakra-suppressing seals for the time being, as well as her room to be watched by sentries every hour of the day. With that out of their minds, Jiraiya handed his wife the two Rinnegan eyes, not needing to tell her what he wanted to do, or what she needed to do.

Tsunade wasted no time and quickly placed the Rinnegan eyes on a sealed tube each filled with alcohol in order to properly preserve them. After that, said tubes were placed inside a strongbox on the hospital's basement.

"Okay, they should be safe here while we decide what to do with them," Jiraiya said.

"We better decide it fast," Tsunade replied. "The moment the word that we have the Rinnegan leaks and spreads, it'll paint an even bigger target on the village than Naruto and Fu's presence."

"I'll make sure the security of the hospital is increased tenfold," the Toad Sage promised. "I wouldn't put past Akatsuki to come back to get the eyes, even after suffering such a defeat."

...

Meanwhile, outside of Konoha, a group of individuals wearing black cloaks and white and red masks were gathering under the protection of the lush forests. They remained still and focused, as if waiting for something to happen, for an order to be issued, for a critical piece of information to be delivered.

Which was about to happen soon, as another of those masked ninjas joined the group, coming from Konoha's general direction.

"Report," one of the masked ninjas, the one who appeared the group's leader, said in a commanding tone.

"It is as we suspected," the newcomer began. "The Akatsuki leader has been killed, and the Hokage collected his eyes."

"I trust you weren't detected, nor were followed to this place," the leader said in an almost chastising tone.

"Given the village's current state, they can't afford to care about potential spies, even if logic says now would be the best moment for an infiltration. Specially after how all those who fell in battle miraculously returned from the grave."

"They're going to take them to the Hospital."

"Pity. Had the Akatsuki won, our mission would have been far easier. There aren't that many of us after the Hokage raided our base and thinned our numbers," the leader lamented. "Still, we can't fail Danzo-sama. If things go as planned, Danzo-sama will possess a power so vast he'll be able to absorb the entire village into root. Akuma," the leader called, and another of the masked ninjas took a step forward.

"I'm ready to act," Akuma said, her voice revealing her gender.

"Good, because this operation relies on you. Now come on, we need to move out quickly before they realize our presence."

The entire group nodded, and quickly dispersed while rushing towards Konoha, careful that nobody could see them.

Unfortunately for them, despite the care they took to make sure their gathering wasn't witnessed by prying eyes, they failed to notice a small crow quietly perched on a branch, under the shadow of a large branch that, combined with his dark feathers, basically made him invisible. Silently, the bird spread his wings and flew towards Konoha as well.

Author's Note: And with Nagato's death, Konan's surrender, and the resurrection of the fallen Konoha ninjas, the Akatsuki Invasion is finally over. Flawless victory for Konoha! I hope you guys find it satisfying, given how the good guys would lose against Akatsuki constantly during past arcs (and yes, I admit I could have made them a little less dark). Now, a few things to comment.

First of all, I didn't want to do the mass resurrection thing. I didn't like it when it happened in canon, as it cheapened the arc and robbed it of much of its impact, and I didn't like that I had to resort to that. But I wanted Nagato death, but I didn't want him to die at the hands of Naruto, Jiraiya or any of the good guys, since it goes against the whole point of his character. And I was unable to come up with anything else, so I had to use the Heavenly Rebirth. That's why I didn't bother to kill that many people, since they were going to be revived anyway.

Though, given how many reviewers hoped that Anko would be revived, I hope that you're happy with the outcome. I do plan to give Anko a bigger role than she had in the War Arc, which she spent unconscious and her only purpose was to provide Sasuke the means to revive Orochimaru. And now that I think about it... the fact that Anko was instrumental in reviving the man she hated the most is something that would have driven her insane with fury.

Now, to another point from the manga that I found unbelievably dumb: Nagato is dead, and Naruto KNOWS that his eyes are weapons of mass destruction. So, he does the sensible thing, and takes his eyes away, right? NOPE! He lets Konan take the whole body away! Akatsuki's plan would have failed if either Naruto or Konan decided to destroy the Rinnegan. Sure, it would have ended with the Tailed Beasts forever trapped inside the Statue, but by then Naruto had no idea they were sentient. And funnily enough, I've never seen a fanfic that points such stupidity out.

Though, even if Akatsuki has been driven away, Konoha isn't out of danger. Weakened as they are, Danzo decided it's now time to make his move, and will try to get his hands on the ultimate Bloodline Limit. Will he be succesful?

Thanks a lot to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

And thus, the Akatsuki Invasion comes to an end! What are your thoughts on this arc? And what do you think will happen next, now that Danzo prepares to attack? Tell me your thoughts in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Return of Root

Author's Note: After the action of the last arc, normally I'd write a slower paced chapter focused on character interactions to serve as breather. As you can guess by this note, this isn't such a chapter, though I did my best to include bits to leave the reader some time to breathe. Enjoy:

Chapter 89:

The Return of Root

or

You can't uproot bad weeds

Perched at the top of an electric post, Itachi surveyed the village. One couldn't appreciate the sheer magnitude of the destruction and ruin brought by Akatsuki until it was witnessed from bird's eye view. While the Uchiha had been in many battles and killed far more people than he could remember, he had never witnessed the aftermath of such catastrophe.

He hadn't been present during Akatsuki's invasion of Taki. Given that the village of the waterfalls was much smaller and thus had a weaker defense force, he wondered if it ended up worse than Konoha.

" Though unlike them, we were lucky enough that our number of casualties is zero," Itachi reflected. "Houses can be rebuilt, but a life that has been ended is lost forever."

The Uchiha was snapped from his thoughts by a loud caw, accompanied by the sound of wings flapping. Turning around, he saw a crow flying towards him. Itachi held one arm, and the bird gently landed on it. He then brought the bird closer to his hear.

"What news to do you bring?" he asked.

The crow cawed softly into Itachi's ear for about twenty seconds, with the Uchiha nodding a couple times.

"Understood. Thanks for your help, you did an excellent job," Itachi replied.

The crow merely made a small head bow, before spreading his wings and flying into the sky once again. Itachi then vanished from the top of the pole, as if he never has been there.

...

Konoha Hospital

Needless to say, word about Jiraiya taking the Rinnegan from the Akatsuki Leader and placing them on a strongbox in the hospital's basement spread quickly, despite the Sannin's best efforts to suppress them. Still, the increased security detail and -thankfully temporary- entrance restrictions did very little to dissuade these rumors.

So far, the only people allowed to enter the hospital, besides the usual staff were other medic-nin. New patients were submitted to a short inspection to ensure they were really sick and needed to be admitted. People who wanted to visit their loved ones had to submit a form, then the patient in question would be asked if he or she knows that person, and their permission on entering or not.

Naturally, there were many protests regarding these measures, but the Hokage wasn't really in a position to soothe these complaints. He was hoping they could choose a new wielder for the eyes soon, so things could return to normal.

The only ones not affected by these restrictions were important ninjas or those close to the Hokage professionally, such as the Jonin Commander, the ANBU Commander, the Advisors, and of course, the jinchuriki. Even if one of them was a patient himself.

"I swear I'm good," Naruto said, lying on his bed, surrounded by his immediate family. "I don't need to be here."

"Yes you do. Your doctor said so," Tsunade insisted.

"You're my doctor, mom," Naruto replied, as he scowled and crossed his arms.

"That doesn't invalidate my statement," Tsunade said. "You spent quite a lot of chakra during that fight, and you didn't come out of that fight completely unscathed. Even you have your limits. You're going to stay here until tomorrow morning, and that's final."

Naruto was going to protest again, but Jiraiya spoke before he could. "Give it a rest, kid. You've fought against two of the most powerful Akatsuki members. We just want to make sure nothing awful comes out of it."

Naruto sighed heavily, seemingly conceding defeat.

"It's okay, brother," Hagane said emphatically, patting Naruto's shoulder. "While you were fighting the Akatsuki, mom forced those ex-Oto ninjas to babysit me, for my 'protection'. Nevermind they were the ones who needed me to protect them."

"Son, the last time you fought an Akatsuki you ended up almost dead," Jiraiya sternly said, glaring at his youngest son.

"Hanabi fought against that Toneri guy again," Hagane countered.

"Yeah, and she's in another hospital room, with her family worried about how long until she wakes up again," Jiraiya retorted.

"I talked with Hikari-san. Hanabi is only exhausted. Don't be so dramatic, dad," Kaida said, as she rolled her eyes.

"I would have liked to get some payback from that lunatic bastard," Hagane said, crossing his arms. "Guess I'll have to console with the fact that Hanabi and Hinata-san did it on my behalf."

"Think it was thanks to you discovering the Truth Seeking Balls' weakness to nature energy that Hinata-hime and Hanabi managed to win against him," Naruto reminded him. "So you did contribute to his downfall in a way."

This made Hagane smile a little. "Heh. Guess you're right."

"Man, I'm so glad that I had the idea to teach other people about Senjutsu, Hinata in particular. The next time that creep comes for her, she'll be able to kick his ass easily without my help," Naruto said, nodding in satisfaction. "Or she will, once we finish the training. All of them were almost there. I can't wait until everything goes back to normal so we can resume and complete the training."

"A squad of Sages will improve Konoha's might greatly. Especially in the face of the threat that's to come," Jiraiya agreed.

That moment, there was a knock in the door. Tsunade opened the door, and there stood Hinata, standing a bit awkwardly.

"Um... I was told Naruto-kun is here..." Hinata began, twiddling her fingers. "It's okay if I come in...?"

Tsunade smiled knowingly, as she exited the room. "Sure thing Hinata. But make sure he doesn't move much. I need him to recover as soon as possible."

"I will, Tsunade-sama," Hinata said, making a head bow.

"Come on everybody, let's give these two some space."

There were no protests, as Jiraiya and the twins quickly followed after Tsunade, leaving the Uzumaki alone with his girlfriend.

"Hey there," Hinata said, as she closed the door behind her, and walked towards the bed. "You look good. When I was told that you were hospitalized, I feared for the worst."

Naruto rolled his eyes. "Blame my mom. She got all paranoid that I might suddenly drop dead or whatever."

"After what happened to Hagane-kun, I couldn't blame Tsunade-sama for fearing for her children's safety," Hinata gently said.

"Still, she should trust me a little more. I'm not a kid anymore," Naruto complained.

"Given what you did, I guess so. Plus the hospital is kind of becoming quite the usual spot for us, isn't it?" Hinata noted with a soft giggle.

"Kind of depressing, when you think about it," Naruto said, making a slight grimace. "So, how about you? I see Toneri didn't touch you that much."

"Thankfully, no. Hanabi-chan and Fu-san were the ones who took the worse of the fight," Hinata told him. "Fu-san is a jinchuriki and heals fast, but Hanabi-chan is going to need more time before she recovers."

"Hope she recovers quickly, or else she's going to lag behind you on your Sage training," Naruto told her.

Hinata's brow furrowed a little, and crossed her arms disapprovingly. "Naruto-kun, do you think it's a proper situation to talk about training? After all this?"

"What's wrong with that?" Naruto asked, scratching his temple.

"We just came out from one of the worst debacles that had befall upon our village," Hinata said. "Maybe we should try to enjoy this reprieve, relax, and have some fun?"

Those words seemed to have a deep effect on the blond, who first a looked a bit astonished, before his face became more pensive.

"Guess you have a point. I had nothing but Akatsuki in my mind for the past months, and I think it's starting to take a toll on me," Naruto admitted.

"We won't have to worry about Akatsuki for some time," Hinata said, as she came closer and sat on the bed. "How about if we plan something fun? Maybe something with the rest of our friends. They surely need to relax as well, given that they all fought against Akatsuki, or so I heard."

"Yeah. I don't think we've ever done anything together since we attended Kurenai's wedding," Naruto said, as he gave Hinata's idea some thought.

"Glad you're on board, Naruto-kun. Now, let's see what we could do that's suitable for a large group..."

...

Inside one of the hospital's waiting room was Shizune's Medical Squad, plus Shisui. Once the battle was over, Shizune's team had been busy helping to heal all the wounded. Sasuke and Shisui also helped in every way they could, despite their lack of medical skills. After working for many hours, and the number of patients in need of immediate attention substantially decreased, they were finally told to get some rest.

"Ugh, I'm so tired..." Sakura groaned, as she slumped onto the waiting room's not very comfortable chairs. "The Kiri Civil War was nowhere near as bad as this one."

"You're not the one who was bitten all over her body and had her chakra drained," Karin complained, as she shot the pinkette a dirty look. While the Uzumaki girl only allowed people to bite her during emergencies, that word had lost most of its meaning during the past hours, given the amount of wounded in critical condition she had to heal through this unpleasant method.

"Come on Karin, this was an exceptional situation. Nobody's going to make you do this on a daily basis." Shizune said, baby Shiro in her arms.

After the battle was over, Shizune immediately left for her home, where the Genin team she had hired to babysit her children were when she saw them last. The house was empty. That was good, meaning that the Genin did the sensible thing and fled towards one of the underground shelters. And thankfully, her assumptions proved to be true. After retrieving her kids -and giving the Genin a little extra money for their good job- she returned to the hospital.

"Also, did you notice that they captured one of the Akatsuki and brought them here?" Shisui asked, as she was holding his daughter. "Man, that Naruto. Killing an Akatsuki and capturing another."

"Tsk. I should have been sent to fight them as well," Sasuke scoffed. "Had I fought an Akatsuki, either they would have died by my blade, or begged me to spare them. I mean, how did so many Akatsuki managed to escape like that?"

"Akatsuki is made of S-Class criminals. Those kind of people didn't get to stay that long in the business if they allowed themselves to be captured or killed so easily," Sakura intervened. "Don't worry Sasuke-kun, you'll have your chance to bring them down in the future."

"Yeah. They still need to capture Fu and Naruto-niisan," Karin added, before a terrible realization dawned upon her. "Oh shit! Does that mean that they'll be back soon!?"

"I find that unlikely," Shizune said, shaking her head. "On top of all the expendable minions, they also lost two of their most prominent members. They'll need time to heal their wounds and recover from their losses."

"Not to mention, they need to put up a new hierarchy, if word of the Leader being killed is true," Sakura helpfully added.

"I'm confident Obito decided to take the reigns of the organization now," Sasuke mentioned. "Which makes them more dangerous, as Obito is a far more unhinged individual than this 'Pain' was, or so I was told."

"Regardless, not even Obito would be stupid enough to attack us so soon," Shisui replied. "All he'd accomplish is losing the rest of his forces."

"Even if you have a point, underestimating Akatsuki is never a wise thing to do," Shizune reminded him. "One time we thought we were going to beat them, and BAM! They summon another Nine Tails!"

Before the conversation could continue, a newcomer, the remaining Uchiha, arrived the waiting room.

"Hello," Itachi greeted them in his usual stoic tone. "I'm glad to see that all of you seem to be fine."

"Brother," Sasuke greeted back. "Where have you been, by the way? During the battle, I mean. I heard that you disappeared in the middle of the battle."

"I was preparing for an ambush that never came," Itachi replied. "And yes, it made me mad that I decided to leave the battle for nothing in the end. I did hear that your team and Shisui had a hard time defending the hospital."

"And that's putting it lightly," Karin piped in. "Healing the wounded in the middle of a battlefield is even more stressing and nervewracking than fighting."

"But we managed to do it," Sakura added.

"Anyway," Itachi then turned at his cousin. "Shisui, may I speak with you for a moment? In private."

The oldest Uchiha raised an eyebrow, but got up from his chair. "Uh, sure," and handed Shizuka to Sasuke before walking towards his cousin.

"Itachi?" Shizune asked, sounding a bit worried.

"It's nothing, Shizune. Or at least, I hope it will be nothing," Itachi said, as he and Shisui left the waiting room. "Just take care of Sasuke and the girls. We'll be back before you realize."

As the two oldest Uchiha left, Itachi lead Shisui to the hospital's room. Even if Shisui didn't show it, he couldn't help but feel uneasy at him. What was so important that Itachi had to hide from Shizune and the others?

"Okay, cousin, spill the beans," Shisui demanded, though he tried to still sound gentle. "She might have not shown it before, but I can tell you made Shizune a little upset."

"I know," Itachi solemnly replied. "But I can't talk about this with a large group of people, in a zone where prying ears might hear it."

"Okay, what is it?"

Itachi turned around, and locked his eyes into Shisui's.

"Danzo knows about the Rinnegan. The Hospital is going to be attacked by his goons, probably tonight, in hopes of stealing Pain's eyes for himself," Itachi stated.

...

Another person was leaving the hospital as well, another medic-nin. Like Shizune's medical squad, this young woman had been treating the injured non-stop to the best of her ability, and after many hours of hard work, was told to go and get some rest. Feeling exhausted and appreciating the offer, she decided to head back home.

"Not even Hashirama's cells' regenerative properties will be able to curb this tiredness," Rin said, letting out a heavy sigh.

"Yo," a familiar voice said from behind.

Rin turned around, and saw Kakashi leaning against the wall besides the hospital's doors, reading one of those porn books written by the Hokage. It was the one thing she could never get used to, no matter how many times she saw it. Tamaki, Kiba and Shino seem to find it normal, though, even if they didn't approve of their sensei's literary tastes.

"Kakashi," Rin said, forcing herself to smile. "How long have you been there?"

"Not much, really," Kakashi answered, thankfully closing the trashy novel and putting it on his back pocket. "I've been with Gai some time, but I find hospitals a bit oppressive, and found myself in need of fresh air."

"I see," Rin replied.

Truth be told, one of the nurses kicked Kakashi out when she spotted him reading that book in public, but the silver haired Jonin had enough shame not to admit that in front of the few people he cared and respected.

"What about you? Have you been helping the hospital staff all this time?" Kakashi asked.

"That's right. I was going home, but I can go for a walk with you if you want somebody to talk to," Rin offered.

"I'll take up on your offer," Kakashi said, as both he and Rin started to walk away from the hospital. "And maybe I can be somebody you can talk to as well. You look like you need it more than I do."

"I'd be lying if I deny it, right?" Rin said with a sad chuckle. "I admit that seeing and fighting Obito again has been quite the challenge."

"Yeah, I feel you, Rin," Kakashi agreed.

"No, what I mean is..." Rin tried to explain. "You know I already fought Obito once. When I was sent as an add-on to Shizune-san's team when the other half of the Nine Tails attacked the Land of Lightning."

"Yes," Kakashi said, as he quickly connected the dots. "Were you expecting that your second fight with Obito would be different?"

While Rin was a bit surprised that Kakashi caught her intention so quickly, she hid her surprise and merely nodded. "I thought this time would be easier. I thought that I'd be prepared to face him."

"I see," Kakashi laconically replied. "I'm afraid to tell you that such thing will never become any easier. Or maybe it will, but not anytime soon. Obito used to be part of our team, and a dear friend. It will take some time before we stop seeing him like that."

Rin didn't say anything, she just nodded silently.

"Though, for all that it's worth, you fought amazingly," Kakashi praised her.

"You... you think so?" the medic-nin replied, rubbing her arm a little.

"Of course. Not only did you kept all of us healed when Shino was in the kamui dimension, but without you subduing the Nine Tails, there's no way we could have forced Obito to retreat," Kakashi told her. "If it wasn't for you, well... Kami knows how much harm Obito and his pet Nine Tails would have done."

"I'm not the only one here with Wood Release. Somebody else could have filled my role," Rin replied. "That Tenzo guy, for example. I did met him some time ago."

"Oh," Kakashi said in mild curiosity. "And what did you think about him?"

"He's... an OK guy, I guess," Rin said, shrugging a little. "I mean, we didn't even talk that much, but I got a good impression. Though I have to respect how, after going through so many crazy experimentations and being trained by Danzo, the guy still has any sanity left."

"No matter how horrible, there's no trauma we can't overcome," Kakashi reassured Rin. "Tenzo is a man with a powerful force of will. He wasn't going to let his tragedies to define him."

"What about you, Kakashi? From what I was told, before realizing that Obito and me were still alive, it didn't appear that you got over our deaths," Rin pointed out.

"Ah, touché. You don't pull your punches, do you?"

Rin shoot Kakashi a sympathetic smile. "Sorry for such a cheap shot. But you got me worried a little bit when I was told of your... less admirable habits."

"I guess losing Obito, then you, and then sensei..." Kakashi began. "I was afraid that, if I moved on, if I got out from the hole I was in, somebody would push me back sooner or later, and I didn't want to feel that pain again. Hell, the Third pretty much had to force me to take a team of Genin in order to break me out of my funk."

"Did it work?"

"I'll admit that I'm better than I was before, so I'll call it a win," Kakashi said, slumping his shoulders a little.

"They're awesome people. And they're lucky to have you as your sensei," Rin told him, gently patting him in the shoulder.

"I wouldn't call anybody lucky to have me as a teacher," Kakashi admitted, chuckling a little.

"Come on, give yourself some credit," Rin insisted. "They're strong, and they're alive. That has to speak something good about your teaching skills, right?"

"Guess I can't argue with that logic," Kakashi admitted, before his expression darkened a little. "Though, by that trail of thought, that would make Minato-sensei a pretty awful teacher."

Rin stopped on her tracks when the implication of what she thought was a heartfelt compliment hit her like a slap in the face. "I-I didn't mean... ! No, Minato-sensei was-what I mean it's that-" Rin quickly stammered, trying to find a way to undo her unintentional insult to her late sensei.

"Relax, Rin, I know you weren't trying to insult Minato-sensei," Kakashi reassured, gently placing a hand on her shoulder. "Despite all his good things, he was still human. And even if I don't resent him, I think he's partly to blame for what happened to us."

Rin raised an eyebrow, and shot a worried look at Kakashi. She couldn't imagine how Kakashi would blame Minato for their team's downfall.

"Minato-sensei was a powerful and precocious ninja, possibly the strongest ninja this village ever produced," Kakashi began to explain. "And thus, he soon found himself being able to take care on multiple powerful opponents on his own, not needing teammates to cover his back. In fact, he was the one who helped others. That allowed him to fly solo pretty easily."

"And you think that was his mistake with us?" Rin guessed. "Letting us going on our own too soon?"

Kakashi nodded. "Yes. He taught us to the best of his abilities, and we became pretty strong as a result. But he mistook our power with capability. We might have been strong, but we weren't ready to face greater challenges. You were okay, but Obito and I had a load of issues that needed to be solved before we could do missions without his supervision.

"Obito was something of a pariah among the Uchiha clan, and thus he lacked confidence in his abilities. And I made him feel even more inadequate, that's why I presume he was so fixated on beating me. He saw beating me as proving himself, as well as showing his worth to the other Uchiha. Plus he also wanted to impress you as well."

Rin never realized that Obito liked her until Kakashi told her, shortly after his presumed death. And looking back, the medic-nin realized how incredibly obvious it was. While she obviously liked Obito as a friend, she sometimes wondered if a relationship with him could have worked. Not that it mattered anymore, sadly enough.

"And I wasn't much better," Kakashi continued. "Despite my skill and power, I was the most dysfunctional member of our team. I didn't get over my father's death, and that affected me deeply, both as a person and how I treated other people. Again, even if I don't resent him for it, Minato-sensei should have noticed these issues and realize that we weren't ready to go on our own yet."

Rin pondered Kakashi's words. All her life she always thought of Minato as a great teacher, and she considered herself lucky to have the legendary Yellow Flash to train her. But now her teammate's words made her look Minato under a different light. It was almost funny how Minato missing a few small details about his students ended up in such a tragic outcome.

"I do keep Minato-sensei close to my heart, and will be always happy to have him as a teacher," Kakashi began. "But his memory is also a constant reminder that I need to be a better sensei than him. That I can't let my students end the same way we did. That's why, even if they think that I'm holding them back, I won't let them undertake challenging missions on their own until I see they're absolutely prepared."

"And you think they aren't?" Rin asked.

"You've spent quite a lot of time with them. What's your impression?" Kakashi asked.

Rin's expression became thoughtful, placing a finger under her chin, as she recalled all the interactions she had with the animal squad. Soon, the answer became obvious.

"I'd say Shino is mostly fine," Rin began, looking at Kakashi for a nod of approval or a head shake of negation, only to find neither. Still, she decided to continue. "Kiba and Tamaki are the problem. They sometimes break into arguments, usually over petty things, and have the need to outdo each other. Sometimes, even when there's a bigger problem to take care of."

"An accurate assessment, yes," Kakashi nodded, and Rin visibly relaxed. "Anything more?"

"Despite that, they aren't hopeless. They do care about each other, they simply have a hard time showing it. I think that, deep down, besides a rivalry, they also want to impress the other. I'd even say that they got over their issues, they could even hook up and become a couple."

"Once again, you're correct," Kakashi said with a nod. "All three of them are ready to be at least Special Jonin, but in Kiba and Tamaki's case, I'm not going to allow any promotion as long as they don't resolve their issues."

"Guess that's a good way to protect them from themselves," Rin admitted. "Do you think they'll solve their issues soon?"

"I hope. Though I want them to realize it on their own. I want to protect them, but I'm not going to hold their hands all the way," Kakashi said, making Rin giggle a little.

...

A few hours later

Nighttime fell over Konoha, and people returned to their homes after such a traumatic day. Or at least, those who still had homes. Large tents had to be set in order to give the now homeless ninjas and civilians a place to sleep. A place they'll have to use before new houses could be build.

However, not all ninjas were going to rest that night. Many of them still have to perform their night shifts in order to ensure the safety of the village. Especially those protecting the hospital, given the importance of the place. The hospital had ninjas protecting all entrances, several at ground level, and a single one in the roof.

A trio of Konoha ninja, two Chunin and a Jonin, were tasked with protecting the roof. They were tired, yawning and eager to go home, and couldn't wait anymore for the replacements to arrive already.

"Man, the replacements are surely taking their time, are they?" one of the Chunin, a young man, whined.

"Don't worry, they'll come. The village is simply in desarray," the Jonin intervened. "Things like this are kind of expected. Remember the aftermath of Orochimaru's attack?"

"Maybe the replacements died in battle?" the second Chunin, a woman, suggested.

The first ninja shook his head. "Everybody who died was resurrected after the battle was over. Everybody. Dying isn't a excuse to slack."

"Hey, look, I think they're coming!" the second ninja said, noticing several figures jumping from roof to roof, heading towards the hospital.

"Finally!" the first ninja said, rolling his eyes. "Took you long enough, you jackasses! It's fifteen minutes since-"

"Wait," the female guard said, grabbing his partner's shoulder.
"Something's wrong."

Upon her warning, all of them tensed up. They didn't adopt fighting stances, but their hands quietly moved towards their ninja tool pouches.

It didn't take long for them what she meant. For once, there were six ninjas as opposed to the three they expected to come. Also, they weren't wearing the standard Konoha uniforms, but black robes. And their faces were concealed by white and red masks, not different from those used by the ANBU. Except their instincts pretty screamed that these strangers were no ANBU.

"I'm going to ask this once," the Jonin said in a grave voice, taking a step forward. "Who are you?"

"We are Konoha's saviors," the leader of the group said in a clearly female voice, taking another step forward as well. "Who came to save Konoha from herself."

"Root!" the female Chunin shouted, as she and her partners immediately drawn their weapons.

The masked woman just shook her head, and made a hand seal. "I have no time to deal with you. Temple of Nirvana Jutsu!"

The three Konoha guards saw white feathers falling from the sky around them, while also starting to feel very sleepy.

"It's a genjutsu! Dispel it!" the Jonin ordered, as he brought his hands together in a hand seal, and send a burst of chakra through his body. But for some reason, the sleepyness didn't disappear. "What... how...?"

"There's no person on this world that can resist or undo my genjutsu," the masked woman said, her voice cold and stoic. "Not even the Uchiha."

In a few seconds, the three guards were lying on the ground, completely asleep. The woman walked past them, and entered the hospital through the door at the roof. She then tapped an earpiece under her mask.

"This is Akuma. I'm in," Akuma said.

"Understood. Time until extraction?" a man at the other side of the line asked.

"I presume it won't take more than ten minutes," Akuma said. "Make sure your team is ready. I'll be sending a signal soon."

"Roger that. Good luck with your mission, Akuma-san."

...

A few minutes later, Akuma's team managed to slip completely undetected towards the basement of the hospital. Turns out, while the security on the outside was tight, the inside was barely protected. Jiraiya might have thought that there's no way an intruder could have gotten into the hospital.

"There it is," one of the masked ninjas said.

The room where the safebox containing the Rinnegan eyes was completely dark. Wordlessly, one of the masked ninjas made a couple hand seals, and formed a small orb of white light that illuminated the place.

"Hello there."

Revealing Jiraiya leaning against the safebox, with his arms crossed in a nonchalant pose, smirking confidently.

"I was waiting for you to show up," Jiraiya continued, as he snapped his fingers.

A detachment of ANBU appeared almost out of nowhere, their weapons drawn and aiming towards the intruders' vital spots.

"So, I'm guessing you're Danzo's goons, right?" Jiraiya said, as he walked towards them. "I knew word that we got the Rinnegan would spread. And that Danzo wouldn't resist the chance to get his hands on it. I was hoping that he would lead the heist personally, but guess that was wishing too much."

"Danzo-sama is a wise man, fake Hokage," the leader of the team said. "His intelligence is high and his instinct is sharp. He knows when an enemy is setting a trap."

"Yet he didn't hesitate about sending you to your doom, knowing it was a trap," Jiraiya replied. "I know Danzo considers all his subordinates expendable, but given his current situation, I believed he'll use some pragmatism and try to keep what little troops he still has."

"Again, you underestimate Danzo-sama," the masked ninja insisted. "Tell me, Hokage. Haven't even realized that this might be a diversion in order to draw your attention somewhere else while the rest of us steal the eyes?"

Jiraiya paled upon hearing such words. The masked ninja noticed.

"Yes. We know the Rinnegan eyes aren't here," the masked ninja revealed. "You only put fakes while the true ones are hidden inside your office. There's another team stealing the Rinnegan as you speak."

Jiraiya managed to shoo away the shock, and brimming with anger, stomped towards the masked ninja once again.

"Just who the hell...?" Jiraiya asked as he forcefully removed the mask. "WHAT!?"

Under the mask, there was nothing but a black, empty void.

"You're a nothing but a foolish child, Jiraiya," the faceless ninja said, his voice distorting as he and his teammates started to dissolve into nothingness. "Soon, Danzo-sama will have a power that none of you will be able to match!"

And the faceless ninjas disappeared.

"Shit! Shit, shit, shit!" Jiraiya cursed, as he dashed out of the hospital basement. "To the Hokage Tower, now!"

Wordlessly, the ANBU quickly followed his lead. A purple haired ANBU with a cat mask quickly caught up to him.

"What... what the hell was that?" Yugao asked. "That couldn't have been a genjutsu! I was sensing those ninja! They were really there!"

"I have an idea of what it can be," Jiraiya replied. "Danzo fooled us the same way the first time he escaped. It seems he's trying the same trick twice."

"And you knew this?" Yugao asked, outraged. At that moment, she didn't care that the Hokage was the superior. What Jiraiya did was a huge negligence. "Then why didn't you prepare for such a situation!"

Jiraiya, however, smirked.

"I did prepare for it," Jiraiya confidently said. "But I had to make sure that none of Danzo's spies knew about my true plans."

...

Akuma and her team were finally out of Konoha, jumping from one tree branch to another, as they moved to the west, to the meeting point with Danzo. The Root leader didn't want to leave any room for mistake, and wanted to have the Rinnegan in his possession as soon as possible, even if he couldn't be able to implant the eyes into his body yet.

Once the delivery was done, they would continue west, towards the coast. Once they reached a small harbor, they would take a ship already waiting for them that would take them into open sea. From there, they could plan their next move without fear of being found.

Even if Jiraiya had forced Danzo and his men out of Konoha, there were still many undercover agents that hadn't been found, which continued to spy and feed information to the Root leader. One of these spies managed to learn that the Rinnegan eyes inside the Hospital's basements were mere decoys, a trap for a potential thief, while the real ones would be kept at the Hokage's office.

So, after casting her illusion on the Hospital, Akuma was instantly summoned to the Hokage Tower via special scroll, so she could help her men break into the building. Even if Jiraiya also increased the security of the tower, none of the guards could resist her brand of genjutsu, allowing her men to enter and take the eyes with them.

And now, with their mission finally close to completion, a new Root could raise, stronger than it ever was. No, a new Konoha would raise, one backed by the absolute power of the world's strongest Bloodline Limit.

Her group arrived to a small clearing, where Danzo, surrounded by more of his Root agents, was patiently waiting for them. Akuma and her team immediately bend to one knee and lowered their heads before their supreme leader.

"Report," Danzo said.

"The mission was a success, Danzo-sama," Akuma said, without even moving a muscle. "Jiraiya was confident that his trick would fool us, but in the end, it was him who proved to be the biggest fool."

"Those are good news," Danzo said, his tone as stoic as ever. "Now come on, give me the eyes. There isn't any time to waste."

Akuma reached her hand under her cloak, pulling two sealed tubes filled with alcohol, the two Rinnegan eyes floating inside. She extended her hand towards Danzo, who was ready to accept the prized orbs.

"Fire Release: Phoenix Sage Fire Jutsu!"

Suddenly, a volley of fireballs rained from above, creating fiery explosions upon impacting on the ground or the nearby trees. Many of the Root ninjas were hurled away, Akuma among them, who lost the tubes she was holding. As the Root agents quickly got back on their feet and scanned their surroundings to see the enemy. Soon, Itachi and Shisui Uchiha fell upon them, and started to cut down the Root ninjas.

Danzo, however, only had his mind on one thing.

"The Rinnegan! Where are they!?" he shouted, losing his cool, as he frantically looked around, ignoring his ninja under attack.

"There's one!" a masked Root ninja said, as he lunged for the tube, which was thankfully unbroken.

"Konoha Whirlwind!"

Said Root ninja was unable to grab the prized item, as a green blur appeared out of nowhere, delivering him such a savage kick, he was sent flying against another tree. Said green blur turned out to be Rock Lee, who was later followed by his teammates and sensei, who proceeded to engage the Root ninja. And as they fought, a black blur dashed over the tube, which disappeared from there.

"I have one of the Rinnegan!" Itachi shouted, as he quickly pocketed the item.

"Well done, Itachi-san!" Gai said, as he was trading punches with more Root agents.

"Take that eye out of here! We can't afford Danzo to get his hands not even on one of them!" Tenten urged.

The Uchiha silently nodded, and Body Flickered out of there, while the others tried to fight the enemy at the same time they were looking for the other eye. Naturally, it was the ninja with the best eyesight who located it first.

" I found the other one!" Neji thought, his Byakugan active, as he ran towards the other eye, which was partially covered by the grass.

However, two other Root ninjas read his intentions, and also rushed towards the same direction, having located the other Rinnegan. Neji was confident he could reach it first, and quickly use Heavenly Spin to deflect the inevitable attack.

But suddenly, his foot sank into the ground, as if he had stepped into a quicksand or a pit of tar rather than solid ground, followed by the other foot.

"What the?" Neji asked in shock, as he started to sink.

"I can't move!" Tenten cried, as her feet also sank into the ground.

"What's going on?" Lee asked as well, finding himself in the same predicament as his teammates.

This was bad, Despite having the Byakugan active, Neji hadn't seen any of the enemy ninjas using any jutsu like that on them. Looking around, he saw that Gai and Shisui had fell prey to the same trap as well. And as he and his teammates tried to break free, the former Branch House Hyuga was forced to watch impotently how the Root ninjas reached the other tube and claimed it for them.

"Danzo-sama!" the ninja who grabbed it said, before tossing the tube at Danzo.

The war hawk expertly caught the tube, before storing it inside his robe.

"Danzo-sama, you and the others flee! I can take care of these people myself!" Akuma claimed.

"Very well then. Thank you for your sacrifice, Akuma. I'll make sure it won't be forgotten," Danzo said, as he and his men disengaged, turned around, and run away, leaving the masked ninja named Akuma with Team Gai and Shisui.

"So, that was Jiraiya's plan, wasn't it?" Akuma said in realization. "Let us believe we have fooled him, so we could lead you to Danzo-sama. Well, too bad that white haired fool didn't count with me!"

Akuma made a hand seal, and suddenly, giant serpentine dragons made of rock emerged from the ground, letting out distorted roars. Neji, however, noticed something unusual through his Byakugan.

"Wait, the way her chakra moved... that didn't look like normal ninjutsu..." he thought, as a realization dawned upon him. "Wait, this isn't ninjutsu! Gai-sensei, Tenten, Lee! We're under a genjutsu!"

"A genjutsu?" Lee parroted. "How can it be possible for you to be affected then, if you have your Byakugan active?"

"There will be time for questions later, Lee! Now break the genjutsu!" Gai ordered, as he brought his hands together in a hand seal, and send a burst of chakra through his body. "Release!"

Gai's action was echoed by his students, but much to their shock, the genjutsu didn't disappear.

"It's not working!" Tenten said.

"My Sharingan can't dispel it either!" Shisui cried.

"Of course it can't," Akuma said, her voice remaining stoic, but with an edge of boastfulness. "My genjutsu can't be broken by normal means. And soon you will find that even if they're illusions, they can hurt you as badly as if they were ninjutsu. Perish!"

The stone dragons opened their jaws, and lunged at the defenseless Konoha ninja. However, before they could reach their prey, they were stopped by multiple vines emerging from underground, wrapping around them, and applying enough force to shatter them into pebbles. Team Gai and Shisui found themselves pushed upwards as the quicksand returned back to normal.

"What?" Akuma asked in shock. "How did you...?"

"You... aren't the only one confused," Lee admitted, as he checked himself.

"It doesn't matter. Whoever helped us will have my gratitude," Tenten interceded.

"You're welcome then, Tenten."

Everybody turned around to see Kurenai landing behind them. She then walked to the front, her eyes locked onto the Root agent.

"How did you dispel her genjutsu?" Shisui asked. "Not even my Sharingan was able to see through it!"

"Genjutsu of the Kurama clan can't be dispelled by normal means, not even by a Sharingan or Byakugan. You have counter it with genjutsu of your own," Kurenai explained. "And fortunately, not only I'm good with genjutsu, but I'm very familiar with the Kurama clan Bloodline."

"A genjutsu impossible to dispel? Man, that's so unfair!" Shisui complained. Kurenai then shot the Uchiha patriarch a massively annoyed glare, before Shisui realized he was in no position to complain about unfair abilities. "Okay, I get it. Shutting up."

"You should go and make sure Danzo doesn't escape, or at least he doesn't escape with the Rinnegan," Kurenai advised the others. "I stay here and take care of her."

"Very well, Kurenai-sensei. We shall return victorious," Neji replied.

"And Danzo will return without his head," Shisui added.

Team Gai and Shisui quickly left the scene, running towards the west, hoping to catch Danzo and his cronies before it would be too late. Kurenai and Akuma remained in place, staring at each other.

"Take that mask off, Yakumo," Kurenai ordered. "You don't need it."

While she appeared to ignore her at first, Akuma did as she was told. And just like Kurenai expected, under the mask was Yakumo Kurama, the girl she trained a year before becoming her current team's Jonin-sensei. She looked noticeably older, her eyes looked much duller than Kurenai remembered, lacking the glint of determination they used to have. A side effect of Danzo beating her personality and drive into fine powder.

"I knew it. I knew you were alive," Kurenai said, some raw emotion dripping into her voice. "The girl I saw that day on our way to Ichiraku's... it was you, right?"

"Yes, it was me. Or what you thought it was me," Yakumo replied, her voice keeping the same stoic tone. "Not that it matters anymore. The girl you trained back in the day is no more."

"I figured as much," Kurenai said. "I can imagine what Danzo did to you in order to become one of his puppets. But I refused to believe that the hopeful and determined girl who wanted to be a ninja more than anything in the world isn't there, buried under layers of mental conditioning."

This made Yakumo chuckle a bit. "Heh, let's say that Danzo-sama made me realize that being a ninja wasn't as... glamorous as I thought. Not that it matters. I know that my work is important for the safety of a lot of people."

"No, you got it completely backwards. Numerous lives have been lost because of Danzo!" Kurenai insisted. "Come on, Yakumo, I know you're a smart girl! You must realize that what Danzo and Root do is wrong!"

"There's no such thing as right and wrong! Just Konoha, and its enemies that need to be crushed!" Yakumo replied, raising the tone of her voice, as her hands formed several hand seals. "And for enemies to be crushed, we need to be stronger than them!"

Suddenly, the world around her changed. The grassy soil beneath her feet became a tatami floor, while the trees were walls made of wood. She was now inside a house, which was richly decorated in a very traditional way, with plenty of finely drawn pictures of forests, rivers and mountains hanging from the walls, shoji doors, and tables and chairs of expensive wood. Kurenai recognized the place even if she had only been there a handful of times. It was Yakumo's home.

"Yakumo, listen to me! Danzo poisoned your mind!" Kurenai implored. "Danzo's way can only lead to ruin! Don't you see it?"

"Danzo-sama's way is the only possible way!" she insisted, her voice coming from every direction.

Suddenly, fire started to burst all around Kurenai, quickly consuming the house and everything on it. The fire exponentially grew with each second, until everything, Kurenai included, were engulfed by it.

"I was born weak, but Danzo-sama made me strong!" Yakumo cried. "He'll make sure I won't be able to kill anymore people who doesn't deserve it!"

Suddenly, a malestrom burst among the flames, putting them out as it expanded. The malestrom ceased, revealing Kurenai from within.

"That fire... it was you, right?" Kurenai said in realization. "Your powers went out of control... and your parents paid for it."

There was no response. Kurenai took Yakumo's silence as a confirmation. Then, girl appeared in front of her. Not as a young woman wearing Root apparel, but as the young girl Kurenai remembered, wearing a kimono.

"I thought that I had my powers under control," Yakumo's voice said, as tears started to stream from her eyes. "But they weren't. I didn't know what was reality and what was illusion anymore. And my illusions made my parents' deaths a reality."

"Yakumo, what happened to your parents was a tragedy, but it was an accident! It wasn't your fault!" Kurenai continued. "Don't you see that Danzo is using you? He doesn't care about you! All he sees in you is a weapon!"

"Ninjas are nothing but weapons!" Yakumo said, as she stomped her foot. As she did, hundreds of kunai and shuriken appeared around Kurenai, floating still around her. "And we need to make sure said weapons only hurt those who deserve it!"

The kunai and shuriken all dived at Kurenai, embedding into her flesh. However, the raven haired woman burst into a mass of pink petals, scattering around the place.

"It didn't take Danzo much to bring you to his side, did he?" Kurenai asked, now her voice coming from every direction. "All your life was plagued the chaos caused by your powers... and Danzo offered order. Something you accepted, no matter the cost."

"He succeeded where you failed!" Yakumo cried louder.

"Yes. I admit that maybe I could have trained you better. Maybe I underestimated how much you needed guidance, and how much harm your powers could do," Kurenai sorrowfully said. "I even considered sealing your powers for good and be done with it."

"Maybe you should have done that," Yakumo replied. "It would have been the best for everybody."

"No, that wouldn't have been a solution," Kurenai replied. The pink petals started to gather and took the form of a human, which turned into Kurenai again. "Your powers are something magnificent, and shouldn't be suppressed."

"My powers gave me nothing but misery!" Yakumo loudly cried. "My powers killed my parents! My powers made me an agent of Root! How can you say that?"

"Wait a minute... you don't want to work for Danzo?" Kurenai asked in shock.

"Of course not, I hate it! You have no idea what he did to me in order to ensure I controlled my powers! What I'm forced to do when working under him! But I have no other options! Danzo-sama and Root is everything I have! Danzo-sama is the only one who can assure that I won't harm the wrong people again!" she cried, her face turning red.

"No, that's not true! You still have me, Yakumo!" Kurenai pleaded. "And there are still plenty of people who would help you selflessly if they knew about you!"

"LIAR! Nobody came to help me when I needed it the most! Nobody helped me when I was trapped in my burning house, except Danzo's ninjas! Nobody came to my help when I begged for the Root instructors to stop!" Yakumo said, as the now burned house started to disappear, leaving the two women inside a pitch black void.

"I didn't know that you were alive! Had I know that you still lived, I wouldn't have rested until I had found you!" Kurenai told her. She then took a deep breathe, in order to calm a little. "It's not too late, Yakumo. Come with me. There's still time to make your dreams true."

"No, I... I can't," Yakumo said, her voice trembling. "He won't let me. Others tried to escape and... it never ended well. All I can do is to obey him."

"I can protect you! The Hokage can protect you from Danzo!" Kurenai insisted. "Hell, we won't even need you to be protected from Danzo, since that man's career is pretty much over! His fate is either rot in a cell for the rest of his days, or death!"

"I... no, I can't do that," Yakumo said, shaking her head. "I still need Danzo. I need him to live, no matter how much I hate that man personally. He's the only one who can make sure no other innocent like my parents dies by my hands."

"And how many innocents did you-" Kurenai said, before she stopped herself. Suddenly, something that Yakumo said dawned upon her, and realized that she had the key to defeat Yakumo here and there. It was kind of a cheap shot, but it was her best bet. "I'm sorry, Yakumo. Don't hate me for this."

"That's why I need to beat you!" Yakumo said, and made a hand seal.

Suddenly, a giant sword fell from the sky, cutting Kurenai in two. However, Kurenai's two halves burst into rose petals again, before reforming into two humanoid shapes. Said shapes then became two human beings, a man and a woman. Two people Yakumo knew too well.

"Mom... dad..." Yakumo said in a whisper.

"Do you think your parents would want you to do this? To work for a despicable man like Danzo?" Kurenai said. "Do you think they'll feel proud of you?"

"I... they... SHUT UP!" Yakumo screamed, as the image of her parents was shattered in a million crystal shards. "You know nothing about them! You know nothing about me!"

"That may be true," Kurenai admitted, as she reappeared before Yakumo. "But I'm a mother. And I'd hate to see my daughter ending up like you did. Even more if her guilt over my death drove her to such fate."

"I... I..." Yakumo stammered.

"Search your feelings, and ask yourself: Is this what your parents would have wanted?" Kurenai asked once again. "They wanted you have a bright future, not to be the personal assassin of an old war hawk. But you can still make them proud. It's not too late."

Yakumo wanted to retort, but words didn't come out of her mouth. Both she and Kurenai dissolved into nothingness, and the black void where they had been stopped existing.

...

Back in the real world, the fight had ended. Both Kurenai and Yakumo were sitting on the grassy ground, the latter in the former's arms, crying her eyes out, and the older woman gently caressed her brown hair, while whispering words of reassurance.

"I'm sorry... I'm so sorry..." Yakumo sobbed.

"Shh, it's okay. Your nightmare is finally over," Kurenai whispered. "Your nightmare is finally over."

Author's Note: Danzo might have outsmarted Jiraiya, but Jiraiya outsmarted his outsmarting! (with Itachi's help)

A lot of people guessed that Akuma was Yakumo Kurama before, but this chapter finally confirmed it. Once again, I'd like to thank the reader AzureTemplar for suggesting me the idea of introducing Yakumo as a brainwashed Root agent. If it wasn't for him, I wouldn't have been able to create this follow-up mini arc. Also, I hoped you enjoyed Kurenai and Yakumo's duel. I liked it in that it was pretty different from the usual fights, since you almost never see characters that specialize in genjutsu fight (outside of filler, the only stance of this happening was the beginning of the Sasuke vs Itachi duel, and then they moved to ninjutsu anyway).

I know I'm going to get some hate for my less than savory comments regarding Minato not being a very good sensei, but after rewatching Kakashi Gaiden, and then the episodes about Rin's death and Obito's downfall don't paint a very good picture on him. Like I said, he should have taken the time to solve the issues between Kakashi and Obito (or give them time to solve them themselves) before letting them take dangerous missions without his supervision. Hell, at the beginning of Kakashi Gaiden, Kakashi nearly gets killed by an Iwa Ninja because he didn't realize of a fatal flaw of the Chidori, and had to be saved by Minato.

And yes, as you can see, Danzo is back. I know a lot of people hate Danzo, and they preferred if I just killed him back in chapter 81. But like I said many times, I didn't keep Danzo alive because I liked him personally. I need him to make a certain plotline work.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Next chapter, Team Gai and Shisui vs Danzo! Will they be able to claim the other Rinnegan as well, or will Danzo rise victorious? Also, next chapter is going to have a twist I'm sure none of you will see coming, even if it has been very subtly foreshadowed during past arcs, that will put every action of a certain character under a completely different light.

In the meantime, leave a review with yours thoughts on this chapter! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Darkness Falls, Shadow Rises

Author's Note: Many reviewers expressed worry about Yakumo, but I can assure you that the worst has already passed, and you have nothing to fear for her. Also, I'm glad that so many reviewers agreed with me when it comes to Minato as a sensei. Though, as another reviewer pointed out, senseis in the world of Naruto are pretty crappy overall. Let's hope at least I made a better job on that front.

Now, enjoy the new chapter:

Chapter 90:

Darkness Falls, Shadow Rises

or

I got my eye on you

Forests of the Land of Fire

Karui, Omoi and T traveled through the lush sea of trees that made most of the country that houses Konoha. Used as they were to the Land of Lightning's far rockier and steep terrain, the trio of Kumo ninjas did appreciate the beauty of the forests of the foreign land. Or as much as they could, given that the death of their sensei still clung heavy to their hearts.

"It's getting too dark," Karui said, as the sun started to set. "I think we should set a camp and continue tomorrow morning."

Both Omoi and T nodded. They set up a campfire in no time, and started to cook some fishes that they had caught earlier that day. As they cooked and ate their dinner, nobody said anything. The mood was gloom. Not being able to take the tension, the blonde decided to break the silence and strike a conversation.

"So..." she awkwardly began. "How long until we arrive Konoha?"

"Two or three days, I'd say," the redheaded girl replied. "If go at a good pace. We've been going pretty slow."

"Yeah well, I don't feel much like doing this, you know?" Omoi replied, his body droopy. "I don't feel like doing anything since Akatsuki got sensei."

"Raikage-sama gave us an important mission. We can't disappoint him," Karui told them.

"Besides, B-sensei would have wanted us to go on and become the best ninjas we can be even without him," T chimed in. "He'd hate to see us all depressed and down."

"True," the only male of the group admitted, before chuckling sadly. "Heh, if he was here, he'd try to cheer me with one of his songs, like he always used to do."

"Plus, by doing this we'll be avenging him," Karui added. "There's no way the rest of the villages aren't going to hunt down Akatsuki with all the shit they did. They were the ones who turned Kiri into such a shithole, among other things."

"Let's hope you're right, Karui," Omoi replied. "Because I can't imagine Konoha being willing to help us, given the history between our villages."

"That's in the past," T said, with a dismissive hand wave. "We were also afraid when we went there for the Chunin Exams. But in the end, nothing happened. In fact, most of the Konoha ninjas we met treated us rather kindly."

"That's right," Omoi said, smiling a little more, before his smile widened even more. "And Karui got a boyfriend!"

The redhead's eyes were wide open with shock, as a faint blush started to spread through his skin. "W-What the hell are you talking about!? I have no boyfriend!"

"No?" T said, as she inched closed towards her, sporting a smug smile. "Then what about the letters you write him?"

"Well, those letters..." Karui began, stammering a little, as she averted her gaze. A scowl developed on her face as she turned back at the girl with the twin braids. "Why the hell do I need to justify myself to you!? Whoever I send letters to is none of your damn business!"

"Now I'm seeing why you want us to get to Konoha so fast," Omoi said, chuckling a little louder than before. "You really want to see your beloved Choji, don't you?"

Omoi and T continued to prod and laugh at their for the time unofficial leader, while the redhead became more heated by the minute, and tried to stop them from bringing up their relationship with Choji, to little success.

That is, until T suddenly stopped laughing, and remained completely still, almost in shock, like she just saw a ghost.

"T? Something wrong?" Omoi asked.

"I'm senseing somebody. Ninjas getting closer to our position," T said, worried. "They surrounded us!"

The three ninjas immediately jumped from their benches, standing back to back as Karui and Omoi drew their katanas, while T pulled out a kunai.

"Shit, we've been too noisy!" Karui reprimanded both herself and her teammates. "How many of them?"

"I'm sensing..." T started to count them in her head. "About sixteen."

"Great, so, they outnumber us more than five to one. Great, just fucking great!" Karui said, greeting her teeth. "Okay, this what we're going to do. When they show up, the three of us use the Lightning Flash in tandem to blind them, and then run as fast as we can. Got it?"

The other two silently nodded.

T could sense how the enemy got closer. As they did, both Kauai and Omoi started to notice them as well. A shadow quickly passing through the trees. A bush briefly rustled. The sound of a little branch snapped in two. Beads of sweat started to run down their heads the more seconds passed, which felt like an eternity. That's it, until two ninjas appeared before them.

"NOW!" Karui shouted.

"Lightning Release: Lightning Flash!"

The three Kumo ninja started to glow with a bright, intense white light. Anybody unfortunate enough to be looking in their direction would feel like looking directly into the sun. Cries of agony filled the air as the enemy ninjas instinctively covered their eyes with their hands.

"Come on, go, go go!" Karui urged, as she started to run in a random direction, with Omoi and T behind her. Unfortunately for the redhead, neither she nor her teammates went to far, as they found themselves trapped inside a tornado of sand. "What the hell?"

"What kind of jutsu is this?" T asked, looking around.

"Sorry, but I will be the one asking the questions here," a stoic but powerful voice said, as another ninja appeared before them. A boy with spiky red hair and black rings around his eyes. "Starting with what a trio of Kumo ninjas are doing so far away from home."

...

While Kurenai fought Yakumo, and most importantly, brought her back to the side of good, Team Gai and Shisui Uchiha continued the chase of Danzo and his remaining goons. Neji was tracking their prey with his Byakugan, and according to him, they were getting closer to them with each second.

"It seems that Danzo's old age is something he can't ignore, not even with Hashirama's cells giving him a boost," the former Branch House Hyuga mused. "Even with the head start, he has no chances of running away from us."

"Neji, how much distance?" Gai asked.

"About two hundred and fifty meters. We shorten the gap by a few meters with each passing second."

Gai seemed to ponder what Neji said, before silently reaching a decision.

"It would be better to catch Danzo as soon as possible. He might have more reinforcements waiting for him further into the forest," Gai decided, before looking at Lee. "Lee, you and I are going to cut his escape. Neji, Tenten, Shisui-san, get ready to fight them once they turn around."

The other three ninja nodded. Shisui's eyes gleamed with anticipation.

"Nobody will save you this time, Danzo," Shisui thought. He could feel his blood boiling with anger, and tried to keep that anger in check until he could channel it to fight. "Your karmic punishment awaits."

"Lee, it's up to us to make sure that miscreant doesn't get away!" Gai boomed. "Let's rush ahead and cut his escape!"

"Understood, Gai-sensei!" the green-clad boy said, as both he and his master got ready.

"Gate of Opening: Open!"

A burst of wind blew from Gai and Lee's bodies as master and student opened the first gate, releasing a wave of chakra through their bodies. With their enhanced capabilities, they shot forward like a pair of green-clad rockets. And in less than ten seconds, Neji saw how his sensei and teammate completely bridged the gap between them and the Root group, running so fast they were almost flying, before falling on top of them, and engaging them in combat.

Danzo wanted to continue fleeing and leave his remaining troops to deal with the pair of bowl-haired ninjas. However they had already anticipated this, and while Gai engaged Danzo himself, Lee would keep the rest of the ninjas at bay to the best of their ability. And since they were no longer fleeing, it took the rest of the Konoha ninjas almost no time to reach them as well.

"Guys, can you provide me some cover?" Shisui asked, as he impatiently unsheathed his tanto. "I have a fight with Danzo pending to complete."

Both Neji and Tenten nodded, being more than aware of Shisui's intense grudge against the Root leader.

"We shall focus on dealing with his minions first, so we all can focus on Danzo and make sure he doesn't escape this time," Tenten said, as she unfolded her collapsible chakra bow. She tensed the chakra string as long as her eyes saw the enemy fighting against Lee. "Precision Arrow Wave!"

"Vacuum Blade Palm!"

Tenten let loose a chakra arrow that quickly split into smaller arrows, while Neji thrust his palm forward, releasing a vacuum blade that flew alongside the arrows, cutting leaves and branches in its path. Shisui closely dashed behind the combination attack.

Already expecting it, Lee quickly noticed the attack, and kicked a Root ninja he was fighting against towards it, before jumping away. On top of that unlucky ninja, Tenten and Neji's combined attack also caught more than half of Danzo's goons.

"DANZO!" Shisui screamed, as he dashed towards his hated enemy.

Danzo, who was keeping Gai at bay with his Wood Release, noticed the Uchiha coming at him like an ebon missile, and quickly made several hand seals.

"Wind Release: Vacuum Serial Waves!"

Danzo exhaled several blades of wind at Shisui, which cut multiple tree branches in their way, resulting in a small storm of leaves. The Uchiha's Sharingan, however, was able to predict the trajectories of the wind attack, and leaping from one branch to another, skillfully dodged all of them. And using his built momentum, Shisui dashed past Danzo, landing on a tree branch behind him, making sure to cut his advance.

"Your path ends here, Danzo," Shisui seethed, as his hands flew through hand seals. "Fire Release: Meltdown!"

Shisui breathed a fireball that continuously expanded. Danzo's own Sharingan scanned the surroundings in an attempt to find an escape route, but the only one he found was to drop to the ground level, where he'll be more vulnerable.

" He dodged, meaning that he can't use Izanagi. Or he won't sacrifice the only Sharingan he still has," Shisui deduced. "Gai, let's double team him! He can't use Izanagi!"

"Understood, Shisui-san!" Gai agreed, as the green clad Jonin and the Uchiha landed in front and behind Danzo, respectively, and quickly adopted fighting stances.

Anger and frustration were building inside Danzo, and thus found himself unable to keep his stoic façade, as his facial expression reflected his feelings. This seemed to amuse Shisui.

"What, aren't you supposed to be as cold as a statue?" Shisui said, smirking confidently. "Guess that even you know that this is the end. Without Izanagi, you can't hope to get out of here alive."

"While I admit that Izanagi is an useful ability, it's far from my only trick. I still have my skill, experience, and Wood Release," Danzo said, regaining some of his clamness. Then, his Sharingan took a different shape, one of a three bladed shuriken, with a small dot between each blade. "Not to mention, I still have Fugaku Uchiha's Mangekyo Sharingan."

Gain tensed up upon hearing this. "Shisui-san! What does Fukagu Uchiha's eye can do?"

"I have no idea!" Shisui replied, just as unnerved. "Be ready for anything!"

"Then let me show you the power of Fugaku Uchiha's eye. I was unable to use it alongisde Izanagi, but now I have no such problem," Danzo said, as he made a hand seal. His lone Sharingan took the shape of a three bladed shuriken, with a dot in each space between the blades. And a larger one at the middle. "Okuninushi!"

A burst of chakra came from Danzo, and the air around him looked distorted. Grabbing a kunai, Danzo dashed at Shisui, leaving a trail of negative-colored afterimages after him, much to Shisui and Gai's confusion.

Shisui easily parried Danzo's blow, and was ready to counter, when the afterimages attacked as well. Thanks to his speed, he was allowed to block all of their swings, but while doing so, not only he was pushed backwards, but allowed Danzo to fall back and prepare a counterattack.

"Wind Release: Vacuum Bullets!"

"You're wide open!" Gai shouted, as he rushed at Danzo from behind, ready to deliver a roundhouse kick. "Konoha Great Whirlwind!"

Danzo and some of his afterimages fired a barrage of wind bullets at Shisui, while the rest of his afterimages fired backwards, towards the unsuspecting Gai. While Shisui used a fire jutsu to propel himself upwards, avoiding the barrage of vacuum missiles, Gai was in no position to dodge. One of the bullets hit Gai in the sole of his shoe, producing an explosion of wind that hurled the green clad Jonin backwards. However, Gai was able to land on his feet on the trunk of a tree, and used his momentum to propel himself back at Danzo.

"You won't catch me off guard this time!" Gai said, facing his elbow at Danzo. "Konoha Rock Crusher!"

Danzo turned around, and sent one of his afterimages after Gai. The afterimage tried to block the elbow strike, but the force it carried was too strong, and was shattered into nothingness. Still, it cost Gai much of his momentum, allowing the real Danzo to safely block the attack, before delivering a devastating counterattack with his afterimages.

"For a ninja that relies exclusively on taijutsu, you're quite strong, Maito Gai," Danzo began, as he pushed Gai backwards with a barrage of punches and kicks. "But against this power, mere taijutsu is no rival."

"Of course you'd have such an unyouthful view on power and strength!" Gai replied, as he tried to push Danzo and his afterimages back. "You've got your power by stealing it from other people! There's no point in having power if you didn't work to rightfully earn it!"

"Power is power, no matter how you acquire it," Danzo calmly said, as he made his afterimages to surround Gai, before they lunged at them from different directions.

"Gate of Healing, Open!" Gai's powerful chakra started to blow wind in every direction, but that didn't deter Danzo. However, the next thing would. "Konoha Earthbreaker!"

Gai focused as much chakra into his fist as possible, before smashing it against the ground, opening a large crater, and creating a powerful shockwave that pushed Danzo backwards and destroyed his afterimages. However, they reappeared besides the original a few moments later.

"As much as it pains me to admit it, Danzo has a point, that jutsu is powerful," Gai thought, as he adopted a defensive stance. "They're like Shadow Clones that follow Danzo and echo his actions, but he can command them to do something else. And while they're easy to destroy, they respawn almost instantly. Still, I can't give up! I'm confident that if I keep fighting, between Shisui-san and I we'll find a way to overcome that jutsu!"

That moment, Shisui landed besides Gai, his trusty tanto in his hand.

"Shisui, you fought against Danzo before," Gai spoke. "Any idea on what can we do to beat him?"

"We should turn this into a war of attrition," Shisui suggested.

"Despite having Hashirama's cells, Danzo is still an old man, Both you and I have much more stamina than him. If we can overcome his jutsu, then let's wait until he tires out. All Mangekyo Sharingan jutsu comes with a high chakra cost, and I doubt that one's an exception."

"Not a strategy to my liking, but if there's nothing better, I'll have to swallow my pride and bow to your experience," Gai admitted.

"You aren't going to beat me with that trick again, Shisui," Danzo said, confident. "I know what my weaknesses are, and how to cover them. And once I'm done with you two, your eye will be-"

"As entertaining as it was to watch you lot fight," a new voice said out of nowhere. "I think it's about time to get back what it's rightfully mine."

"That voice..." the leader of Root said.

The three ninja quickly looked around, trying to find the hidden enemy. Then, a spiraling vortex formed a few meters from Danzo. And from said vortex, Obito Uchiha emerged. His mouth was curved in a confident smile.

"You again..." Danzo seethed, as he moved his body to face the Akatsuki, forgetting about Gai and Shisui for a moment.

"The hell!?" Shisui asked, as his eyes shifted back and forth between Danzo and Obito, unsure on whom he should focus.

"We meet again, Danzo," Obito said with the same informality one would address a longtime friend. "Funny how things turn out to be, huh? Many years ago, you took Shisui's eye before I took it away from you. Now, history repeats again with the Rinnegan."

"Danzo," Gai called the elder, his tone dead serious. Danzo quickly turned at him, the tension on his face constant. "Despite our current enmity, Obito and Akatsuki are our mutual enemies. Akatsuki can't take the Rinnegan back. If we join forces, we can defeat him easily."

"I can't believe I'm going to say this but... I agree with Gai," Shisui admitted, looking as if those words hurt him as badly as being branded with a burning iron. "There's nothing more than I want that cut that ugly head of yours from the rest of your body. But this is far more important than my revenge."

"Ah, isn't it beautiful, seeing deathsworn enemies not even five seconds ago joining forces to fight an even bigger threat?" Obito mockingly said, laughing a little. However, all trace of joviality disappeared after that. "Too bad such thing isn't going to happen again. Danzo, the time has come for the nine to become one."

For a reason neither Gai nor Shisui were able to understand, those words made Danzo stagger as if he had been hit with a hammer in the face. Obito then extended his hand as he walked towards Danzo.

"Now, Danzo, would you kindly give me the Rinnegan?" Obito asked.

Then, much to Gai and Shisui's shock, Danzo pulled the sealed tube from within his robe, and wordlessly handed it to the Akatsuki, who quickly stored inside the kamui dimension.

"Just one? Oh well, guess that'll have to work," Obito said, displeased, but resigned to do what he had been given.

"Danzo! What the hell!?" Shisui asked, his fury resurfacing twice as strong. "You... you fucking traitor! You were always with Akatsuki from the very beginning!"

"Oh, come on, don't blame poor Danzo," Obito said, as he patted the elder's shoulder a couple times. "After all, you should know better than anybody how hard is to fight Kotoamatsukami, right?"

Both Gai and Shisui opened their eyes wide in shock.

"What... what did you say?" Shisui asked. It was him now who was staggering upon hearing Obito's words.

"You heard me. I have Danzo under my control. He has been like that for quite a few years, actually," Obito explained. "I might not have your eye anymore thanks to my lovely Rin, but the effect still lasts even if I no longer possess the eye."

"But that..." Gai began, trying to fight the shock. "How none of us noticed? How it is possible that...?"

"You see, when I first acquired Shisui's eye, I knew I had to put a high rank Konoha ninja under my control. The question was who. The Hokage? The Jonin Commander? The ANBU Commander?" Obito asked, before shaking his head. "No, I couldn't do that. I already tried that with Yagura, and look how well it worked. But Danzo, the leader of a division that officially doesn't exist? He was perfect. Plus, I knew Danzo was dealing with Orochimaru, so I could use him to spy on that snake as well. You see, if you set a tree on fire, people will see it and rush to put the flames out. But if you quietly poison its roots, nobody will notice until the rot becomes visible. And by then, it's too late."

"So that's why Danzo was feeding you information on the jinchuriki, right?" Shisui asked, his voice full of spite. "He was your puppet all along."

"More or less," Obito admitted with a shrug. "You see, I needed to leave Danzo with some free will, or else I'd have another Yagura in my hands. That's why I implanted an idea inside his mind in order to make him think that letting Akatsuki gather all other Tailed Beasts in a single place was the way to go. It was so subtle, nobody noticed it wasn't his idea at all, not even when he shared it with anybody else. Right, Shisui?"

The Uchiha patriarch gritted his teeth. When Danzo told him about his plans in their previous battle, at no point Shisui considered that the plan may not be Danzo's.

"And, of course, I also implanted a mental trigger that would make him completely subservient to me when the time was right," Obito finished his explanation. He then turned at Danzo, his eyes looking the elder in fake pity. "And now that you gave me the Rinnegan and can't use you as a spy anymore, I have no more use for you. Danzo, execute the Black Night protocol."

Those words seemed to have the same effect as the ones that put him under Obito's control. Gai and Shisui quickly prepared for the worst. While Obito disappeared inside his spiraling vortex, Danzo ripped his robe apart, leaving his chest exposed. Five black symbols appeared on it, one in the center, the other four around it in an X pattern.

"Sealing Art: Reverse Tetragram Sealing!"

Then, the five seals moved towards the center, merging into a pitch black sphere which started to expand. Without needing to trade words, both Gai and Shisui knew that they had to put as much distance from Danzo as fast as possible. Once the sphere reached the size of a house, it compressed, absorbing everything inside it into Danzo's body. Tree branches, leaves, rocks, soil, even small animals and insects were violently sucked in, and a second later, all that mass was burst in a massive explosion, putting an end to Danzo's long and sordid life.

...

A Few Hours Later, Undisclosed Location

Inside an underground chamber, Zetsu waited patiently. Not long ago, he and his boss were preparing the heist of the Rinnegan, when one of the White Zetsu clones told them that Danzo managed to steal them first.

Rather than being angry, Obito smiled, much to the vegetal being's confusion.

"This is excellent!" the Uchiha had said. "It seems that fortune smiles upon us once again. Wait here, Zetsu, I'll be returning shortly."

That was two hours ago. What the Uchiha was planning to do, Zetsu had no idea. However, his wait came to an end when the familiar spiraling vortex formed before him, and Obito emerged from it, his expression that of triumph.

"So..." the black half began. "Do you have the Rinnegan?"

Obito reached under his robe, revealing the sealed tube with a single Rinnegan floating inside it. Zetsu wasn't convinced.

"Just one?" the white half asked.

"Sadly, I was unable to acquire both," Obito said, as he tossed the tube at his inhuman minion, who easily caught it with one hand.

"Fortunately, one Rinnegan is enough to complete the last phase of our plan. Now, time to work. I want you to remove my Byakugan and replace it with that Rinnegan. Konoha has the other one, and I need to bond with the Demonic Statue before any Konoha ninja does it first."

"Understood, boss. I'll prepare the operation room at once," the white half said, before sinking into the ground.

...

That Night, Hokage's Tower

After successfully recovering the Rinnegan, Jiraiya kept the sealed tube with him rather than put it on a safebox again, despite the threat of being stolen was pretty low now.

Wasting no time, he had his ANBU gather Tsunade, Hiruzen, Shizune, Itachi, Shisui, Konan, Takuya and Nori for an urgent meeting in the Council Room. Ten minutes later, all of those he had summoned were in the room, as well as several ANBU for added security.

Naturally, most eyes were on Konan. The ex-Akatsuki member was now wearing a collar with sealing patterns around her neck, on top of the chakra-suppressing manacles. If Jiraiya, Tsunade or Naruto made a single hand seal, the collar would release an electric discharge, shocking her into submission. Fortunately, the blue haired woman accepted the security measure without raising a fuss.

"Thank you for coming so swiftly, especially at such late hour" Jiraiya said, as he pulled the sealed tube with the Rinnegan on it, and placed it on the table. "I think you can figure out why I summoned all of you here. We need to discuss what are we going to do with this eye."

"That eye is dangerous," Takuya spoke up. "Hokage-sama, you fought against Pain, and experienced firsthand what kind of power he had. If this eye falls into the wrong hands, it could be catastrophic."

"Sadly, it already fell into wrong hands, Takuya-san" Shizune interceded. "Obito managed to steal another one. We'll need this eye to match his power."

"I agree with Shizune-san," Nori said, as she shoot an apologetic look towards her father.

"You will need the eye if you want to release the trapped Tailed Beasts inside the statue," Konan interceded. "Destroying the eye is not an option, at least not now."

"I figured as much as well," Hiruzen stated, as he stroke his beard. "The question is, who's going to wield that eye? If it's anything like the Sharingan, then only a selected few will be able to tap into its powers without any drawbacks."

"Hiruzen-sama is right," Nori said, nodding. "Only a descendant of the Sage of the Six Paths who possess at least one half of Six Paths chakra can wield the power of the Rinnegan."

"That means only an Uchiha, Uzumaki or Senju can do it," Takuya helpfully added, before looking around. "Fortunately, we have plenty of suitable ninja from those three clans."

"So, the ones who can use that eye are Tsunade-sama, Naruto-kun, Hagane-kun, Kaida-chan, Sasuke-kun, Itachi, Shisui and Karin," Shizune recounted. She left her own children out for obvious reasons.

"I'd leave Hagane and Kaida out," Jiraiya interceded. "They're way too young for such a responsibility. Not to mention that their bloodlines already brought them no small amount of misfortune."

"I think either Itachi or myself would be the best suited for it," Shisui began. "After all, we both wield the Mangekyo Sharingan and have experience with-"

He was interrupted by Tsunade slamming her hand onto the table, startled both him and everybody else.

"Like hell I'm going to let the eye of a god in the hands of a kid!" Tsunade energetically protested. "As the most veteran ninja, as well as having both Senju and Uzumaki blood, I'm the best suited for the role."

"Kid? But I'm twenty seven..." Shisui weakly protested. Shizune gently patted his shoulder in consolation.

"Let it go, Shisui," Itachi interceded. "Your arguments are sound, but I think it's better if we let somebody else get the eye. The Uchiha Clan hasn't recovered in the eye of the public completely, and people might grow suspicious if one of us were to acquire the Rinnegan."

"I guess so..." the older Uchiha admitted.

"So, all in favor for the Rinnegan going to Tsunade?" Hiruzen asked.

Everybody raised their hands in approvation. Even Konan. This didn't go unnoticed, and got a few odd stares in her direction.

"I don't know if my vote really counts, but I do think that Tsunade-sama is the best candidate to use the Rinnegan," Konan stated.

"It's decided then. Let's do this as soon as we can. Shizune, take Tsunade-hime to the hospital, and begin the transplant," Jiraiya told the black haired medic. Shizune nodded, and both she and her master got up from their chairs and left the room, not before taking the sealed tube still on the table. Wordlessly, several ANBU followed them. "I will work on a mask with protective seals to ensure nobody will be able to steal the Rinnegan from Tsunade-hime. Konan?"

"Yes, sensei?" the bluenette asked.

"Of all of us here, you're the one most familiar with the Rinnegan and its abilities," Jiraiya began. "Do you think that you can train Tsunade-hime in order to master the Rinnegan?"

"Even if I never experienced such power myself, I saw Nagato using it countless times. I shall teach Tsunade-sama to the best of my ability," Konan stated.

"Excellent. Then, I think we can conclude this meeting. Hope we can end this crisis soon without having to spill more blood."

...

Next Morning, Torture and Interrogation, Underground Floor

Yakumo Kurama sat alone on a bench inside one of the cells under Konoha's Torture and Interrogation department. While she wasn't restrained, she was wearing a pair of metal bracers with chakra-suppression seals on them, as well as a collar with seals that could give her an electric shock if she did anything her captors would deem dangerous or even suspicious.

Despite the name, they had assured her that she would be neither tortured nor interrogated, mostly because what was left of her former boss, Danzo, could be stored inside a matchbox.

She had mixed feelings over such news. On one side, she was afraid that without Danzo to rein in the darkest parts of her power, nothing would stop another accident like the one which claimed her parents' lives from happening again. On the other hand, she felt relieved that that horrible man wouldn't control her life anymore.

Kurenai had promised Yakumo that together they'd find a solution to her problem that didn't involve Danzo's draconian measures. She wasn't sure if the raven haired woman could fulfill such promise, but for everybody's sake, she had to let her try at the very least.

She was snapped from her thoughts when she heard the sound of steps coming closer. A few seconds later, an ANBU appeared, followed by Kurenai. The ANBU opened the door of her cell, letting the raven haired woman in. She sat besides the brown haired girl as the ANBU locked the door once again. They spend a long moment in silence, without even making eye contact, until Kurenai decided to open her mouth.

"So..." Kurenai began, trying to shake off the awkwardness of the moment, as she rubbed her bare arm. "How are you? I hope they aren't treating you too bad."

"Don't worry, compared to what my life used to be under Danzo-sama, this is a spa," Yakumo softly replied.

Kurenai frowned a little. Despite the fact that he was dead, and that Yakumo never liked the man, she still used a respectful honorific to address him. Hopefully she could be able to correct that soon.

"Even then, I spoke with Anko, and we expect that you'll be out here soon, even if under probation," Kurenai reassured her, as she placed a comforting hand on the younger girl's shoulder. "Hokage-sama knows that no Root agent was working under Danzo by their own volition, and with him dead there's no risk of Root being rebuilt."

"I see," he said, not looking all that excited of being free. Truth be told, she has pretty much forgotten what it meant to be free. "What's going to be of me once I'm free? I have nowhere to go. I have no family anymore, and I can't return to Root."

Kurenai smiled at her. "You'll be living with us. Hiruzen-sama gave me permission to let you live in the Sarutobi Estate. I already got your room ready."

"Really?" Yakumo asked. "And... is everybody else okay with that? Aren't they afraid of letting a former Root agent near them or their children? Especially since I helped Danzo-sama kidnap a few..."

Kurenai frowned a little, as she squeezed Yakumo's shoulder a little tighter to drive her point further.

"Listen, Danzo's sins are only Danzo's, not yours," Kurenai insisted. "All of his unwilling accomplices, you included, deserve a second chance. And I have faith that you'll make good of that chance."

"I..." Yakumo began, before his mouth curved into a small smile. "Thank you, Kurenai-sensei. I promise I will make the best out of this opportunity."

Kurenai smiled back as well.

...

Downtown Konoha

The day after the invasion, and subsequent clash with Root, Jiraiya finally put in motion Konoha's reconstruction. Letters were sent to other villages telling them about what happened and asking for help, countless D-Rank missions were issued in order to help with the reparation efforts.

There were two things that greatly sped the reconstruction: one were the Chakra Golems, which proved to be an incredibly useful asset, as they could be used to remove and carry rocks, pieces of concrete, and debris away, while the humans focused on something else.

The second was a trio of ninjas that had an unique ability that was thought to be lost forever.

"Wood Release: Four Pillar House Jutsu!"

From the debris, a large, two story house made of wood emerged. It had glass-less windows, several balconies and a couple doors. Konoha's emblem was carved in the front. Even if it lacked glass, plumbing and electricity, it was completely habitable. Upon seeing the house emerge, people watching the display let out wild cheers.

"Ugh," Kaida said, as she fell to her knees, trying to regain her breath. "I'm the closest thing Konoha has to a princess, why I'm doing these handicrafts?"

"Because we're the only ones who have the power to do it," Tenzo replied, having erecting another house himself.

"Yes, you should take joy in knowing that your power will speed Konoha's recovery quite a lot," Rin replied, having raised another house as well. "Come on, we're almost done with this block."

"Can't we take a little rest? I'm winded!" Kaida whined.

"Come on, just a little more," Tenzo insisted. "I know firsthand this takes a lot from you, but the people of Konoha depends on us."

"Besides, it's a princess' job to take care of her subjects, right?" Rin asked with a cheeky grin. Kaida merely narrowed her eyes at her in anger.

"Plus, for all you talk about being the First Hokage's great granddaughter, you could try to emulate him a little more," Tenzo continued. "Did you know that he used this jutsu to create almost a hundred houses in one go?"

Kaida opened her eyes widely. She was aware that Hashirama used Wood Release to create the initial settlement that would become Konoha, but he couldn't imagine how he could build so many houses at once, when a single house left the white haired girl drained.

"R-Really?" she asked.

Tenzo nodded in confirmation. "You can ask your mother if you don't believe me. Now, you wouldn't want people to hold you as some sort of a pale imitation of Hashirama, would you?" Kaida merely shook her head wordlessly. "Then let's continue. Then I'll treat you to a snack."

...

Training Ground One

"Let's do it, Tsunade-sama," Konan stated. "Remember, think of the statue."

Tsunade nodded, bit her thumb, and formed five hand seals.

Training Ground One was a place not many ninjas had the chance to see. While it had nothing significant or extraordinary that made it stand out from the rest of the training fields -being just your standard grassy terrain with a few cluster of trees and some small lakes-, such place was the reigning Hokage's training grounds.

Which didn't get much use since the reigning Hokages don't have that much spare time to train as much as any other ninja would. Still, the fact that Jiraiya had a training ground all to himself -and whoever he decides to bring with him- was something he was being thankful for know, given the current circumstances. Namely, the fact that they had a place to train Tsunade away from prying eyes.

The transplant had been a success, as expected. However, it was advised for Tsunade to rest a few hours before using the Rinnegan, so her body could familiarize with this new power. For protection, Jiraiya created an eyepatch with multiple protective sealing patterns that made sure nothing other than a S-Rank jutsu could break it. Due lack of space for the seals, the actual "patch" pretty much covered Tsunade's left side of her face from the nose up.

And now, deciding that she had rested enough, Tsunade was going to use the Rinnegan for the first time since her transplant, in order to summon and bind herself to the Demonic Statue.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Tsunade slammed her palm into the ground, producing a massive burst of smoke, accompanied by a powerful wind blowing in every direction. Jiraiya held his breath.

"Did she...?"

But when the smoke dispelled, there was nothing there. Tsunade scowled, Jiraiya muttered a profanity, and Konan merely sighed.

"We were too late. Obito must have bonded with the statue already," Konan said, dejected. "And as long as he has the Statue and all the beasts inside it, he will be a threat to the world."

"In that case, I think it's about time we changed strategies," Tsunade stated, punching her palm. "So far, we only reacted to Akatsuki's movements. This time, we should track them down and pound them into dust."

"That's a good idea, if only we knew any of their general HQ," Jiraiya said, before looking at the bluenette. "Konan?"

"Our main based used to be Amegakure, thought that was mostly Nagato and I," Konan said. "We had multiple lairs hidden across the elemental nations, mostly in small countries without ninja villages, or very small villages, though they were more meeting points where the extractions took place, rather than actual bases.

"With how things are now, the leadership of Akatsuki falls upon Obito. And I'm one hundred percent sure Obito has assets of his own that neither me nor Nagato were aware of. Finding his base of operations isn't going to be an easy task."

"If you give me information on Akatsuki in general, my spies can make an educated guess on where Obito could have his base," Jiraiya said. "In the meanwhile, I think you should begin Tsunade-hime's training."

"Understood. Are you ready to begin, Tsunade-sama?" Konan asked.

"You can bet I am. We've wasted enough time already. Show me what I can do with this fancy eye," Tsunade said.

...

Sakura was walking down the street as she headed towards her destination. Unlike a good chunk of Konoha, the pinkette could appreciate that the damage to the buildings in this zone were minimal. She was happy for the people living there. She also remembered that, during the Uchiha insurrection, her street had been among those ignored by the perpetrators, given that it was on a mostly civilian zone.

She wasn't this lucky now, given that Akatsuki's attack was more indiscriminate. Thankfully, her parents were evacuated to the shelters long before their house was brought down by the ensuing battles.

"Guess it only makes sense that you're the lucky one now, Ino," Sakura said to herself, as she reached her destination, the Yamanaka Flower Shop. "Given that the last time you lost something so precious."

Sakura opened the door, and greeted the people inside, expecting to see Ino, or at least her mother, in the counter.

"Good morning!" Sakura cheerfully said.

"Good morning, Sakura-san. It's nice to see you."

However, it wasn't either Ino nor her mother who returned the greeting, but a male voice. A voice she recognize, and filled her with irritation. It took the pinkette a few seconds to realize that Sai was in front of her, wearing a white apron with yellow flowers over his ninja gear, wiping the floor with a broom he was holding.

After the momentary lapse, Sakura's ninja instincts kicked in, as she quickly reached for a kunai, and tackled Sai, slamming the pale boy into a wall, causing a small tremor.

"YOU! What the hell are you doing here!? How did you escape!? You're going to kill Ino because she busted both you and your organization, don't you!?" the heated kunoichi demanded.

"Actually-"

"What was that noise...?" Ino asked, as she entered the store. "Sai, what are you- SAI!"

"You were lucky I caught this guy sneaking inside your store, Ino," Sakura proudly said, tightening her grip. "I'm sure he was planning to kill you!"

"What? No! Sakura, release him at once!" Ino demanded, as she rushed towards the two. "Sai is working here!"

Sakura felt as if somebody spalshed her face with cold water. Her grip lessened a little.

"What?" Sakura repeated. Upon seeing Ino's glare, Sakura complied, and released the former Root agent, who fell down on his butt. "Okay, I think I need to hear some explanation as for why this scumbag is working here."

"Sai isn't a sumbag," Ino said, as she helped the black haired ninja back on his feet. "And he's working here as a part of his rehabilitation."

"Uh?" Sakura asked.

"See, most of Danzo's agents didn't work for him willingly," Ino began to explain. "Many of them, such as Sai, were subject to heavy mental conditioning, and thus they can't be made responsible for their actions. So Hokage-sama started a program to de-condition them, so they can rejoin Konoha's proper ninja ranks, or become civilians if they wish so. I volunteered my clan to take care of Sai for the time being."

"That's... so nice of you," Sakura said. "But aren't you worried that Sai might turn on you, or may do something-"

"Ino-san has nothing to worry about," Sai chimed in, as he lowered the neck of his shirt, revealing a collar with small sealing patterns inscribed on it. "If I went to do something inappropriate, Ino-san only needs to make a hand seal, and this collar will immobilize me via electric shock."

"Though I'm pretty sure we won't need to resort to that," Ino added, laughing a bit awkwardly as she patted Sai in the shoulder.

"Oh, I see.." Sakura said, as a feeling of guilt started to creep on her back for assuming the worse and assaulting Sai like that. "I'm sorry for attacking you, Sai. I got a little carried away."

"Apologies accepted, pinky," Sai said, smiling at her.

Sakura raised an eyebrow. "Pinky?"

"Do you find that nickname inappropriate as well?" Sai asked, his smile lessening a little, and his body tensing up.

"We still need to work on your nicknames, but it's an improvement," Ino interceded, before things could escalate any further. "So, wanna go to somewhere and have a coffee, Sakura?"

"Yeah, I was wondering if you were free to hang out a little," Sakura said. "I have some free time."

"Sure. I can leave Sai in charge," Ino said, as she and the pinkette left the store, before turning at Sai one last time. "Be on your best behaviour, okay?"

"Don't worry, I'll be."

...

Sasuke was getting ready to leave his home for some routine training on his own when somebody knocked the door. That was weird, the only ones who ever visited the Uchiha brothers were Shizune and Shisui, and Itachi decided to give them a copy of the apartment's keys so they could drop by whenever they wanted.

Still, Sasuke decided to check who it was. Opening the door, he saw much to his confusion a young woman, who appeared to be a Hyuga, if her eyes were any indication, dressed like a maid, holding what appeared to be a box wrapped in a piece of cloth.

"Yes?" Sasuke asked, sounding a little suspicious. "May I help you?"

"Uh, hello. My name is Natsu Hyuga," the woman said, sounding a little nervous. "Uh, you must be Sasuke Uchiha, right?"

"Yes, I'm Sasuke," the Uchiha confirmed. "Do you have any business to do with me or...?"

"Actually, it was your brother I was looking for," the Hyuga girl replied. "Is he here?"

Sasuke rose his eyebrow, part confused, part suspicious. What did a Hyuga wanted to do with his brother? Then again, Itachi was old enough to fend for himself.

"Brother!" Sasuke yelled, as he walked back into the house, leaving the door open. Natsu interpreted it as being invited in, so he followed the younger Uchiha. "There's somebody here asking for you!"

The sound of steps could be heard, and Itachi walked out of a nearby hallway. She looked at the newcomer.

"Ah, hello," Itachi said, as he walked towards the young woman, clearly recognizing her. "You were among that group of Hyuga I helped during the Akatsuki attack, right? Your name was... Natsu?"

The Hyuga smiled tenderly. "Yes, that's me," she confirmed, before she handed the wrapped box at Itachi. "I wanted to give you this a sign of appreciation for helping us. If it wasn't for you, Kami knows how many Hyugas would have died then and there."

"I see," Itachi said, accepting the wrapped box. "I was only doing my duty. Thank you for the gift. It's very considerate on your part."

Itachi's line was followed by an awkward silence, the three of them standing there, not knowing what to say or what to do, and Natsu growing more restless, as she fidgeted constantly, shifting from one foot to another.

"Well... that's all I wanted to say. I hope you enjoy my gift," Natsu said, making a polite bow, before exiting the Uchihas' apartment.

Once the brother were again alone, Sasuke scowled at Itachi.

"Are you going to tell me what was that about?" Sasuke asked.

"It isn't obvious?" Itachi replied, smiling a little. "I helped her and her clansmen during the invasion, and she decided to give me a gift in return."

"Aren't you going to open it?" Sasuke asked.

"Maybe later. Weren't you going to train?" Itachi replied, as he turned around and walked towards his room.

"Tch, whatever," the youngest Uchiha scoffed, before leaving the house.

...

Training Ground Twenty five

Thankfully, Naruto was released from the hospital the next morning after he was admitted. One of the very first things he did was to gather once again all the Sage apprentices, and resumed their training. Naruto was sure that, had all the trainees were Sages by the time Akatsuki attacked, the damage to the village would have been much smaller.

Fortunately, they covered most of the training before such attack happened. And when they resumed it, all of them were pretty close to becoming Sages themselves. Under Naruto and Fukasaku's watchful eyes, they saw how during the next two days all the trainees mastered the art of Senjutsu, the last day not even needing to use the anti-Senjutsu staff.

Like it happened with Naruto, the Sage trainees' developed colored marks around their eyes. Hinata had purple marks around her eyes that went down half her cheeks. Hanabi's were similar, but they were teal colored instead. Fu's marks had the shape of a winged insect, similar to a butterfly, the same color as her mint hair. Shisui's were black shaped like hooks at corner of his eyes, with one pointing down and the other pointing up. Shizune's were pink, extending from her eyes down her cheeks, in a way similar to the marks of the Inuzuka, only wider. Karin's were as red as her hair, and had the shape of an spiral that started from her eyelids and continued into her cheeks. Asuma had thin red lines on the sides and under his eyes.

"Hmmm... interesting," Fukasaku said, as he stood in front on Rin.

"Something's wrong, Pa?" Naruto asked the elder toad.

"This girl's marks," the toad said. "I already saw them before."

Rin's marks were forest green, starting from the eyes and extending towards her ears. There was an additional round marking in her forehead with a dot on it. The medic-nin felt the urge to say something, but she didn't want to break her concentration. She didn't want to mess it up when she was so close to achieve it.

"Yes, those marks... I remember seeing them on Hashirama Senju's face," Fukasaku said. "Is this girl related to him?"

"In a way, you could say that," Naruto confirmed, shrugging a little.

"I see. I thought that Tsunade-chan and her tadpoles were his only living descendants," Fukasaku said, rubbing his goatee. He then continued to inspect the rest of the Konoha ninja -and one Taki kunoichi- and review their progress. He nodded, seemingly content with what he saw. "Okay, I think that's enough. Guys, open your eyes and stop gathering nature energy! Wait a few seconds so the nature energy properly mixes with your chakra!"

They did as they were told. As soon as the nature energy mixed with their chakra stabilized, they started to feel the more immediate effects of Sage Mode.

"Whoa!" Shizune said in awe. "I... I can sense all the people in Konoha! It's as if I was a sensor!"

"Me too!" Shisui replied, just as giddy. "Coupled with the Sharingan, nobody is going to catch me off guard ever again! Hey, now that I think about it, can Sage Mode enhance the Sharingan in some way?"

"I'm afraid I have no answer for that question," Fukasaku said with a shrug. "For you're the first Uchiha who achieved Sage Mode."

"Really? Well, nice to be a pioneer at something," Shisui said with a nonchalant shrug. "The more fun I'll have figuring out the answer."

"Okay, now it's about time you guys learn the power behind Sage Mode!" Naruto cheerfully said, as he walked towards one of the many giant toad statues that he and Fukasaku had placed there. "Rin, get over here!"

The brown haired medic nin did as she was told.

"What do you want me to do?" she asked.

"I want you to lift this statue with all your might!" Naruto said.

Rin looked at the statue with her eyes wide open. It was easily four meters tall, and while she couldn't tell how much it weighted, she could guess it would be above two tonnes. Physical strength was never Rin's forte, and she doubted that even with Sage Mode, she could do what the blond was asking her.

"Trust me, just try," Naruto said, his smile unwavering. "You're going to be surprised."

Wordlessly, Rin nodded, and crouched down, inserting her hands under the statue's bottom. Once she had a good grip of the statue, she tried to lift it with all her might...

"WHOA!"

And much to her shock, her arms easily lifted the statue above her head. It was as if it was made of plasticine. Then, she let the statue fall, making a loud rumbling noise, as if to remind everybody its actual mass.

"Incredible! I can't believe I lifted something so heavy!" Rin said, amazed, as she looked at her own hands.

"Bah, I could already do that before," Fu sneered with a dismissive hand wave. Then, her eyes opened wide as a realization dawned upon her. "Wait, then does it mean...?"

"What about ninjutsu? It is enhanced by Senjutsu as well?" Hanabi asked.

Before Naruto had the chance to ask, Hinata decided to do a test, and walked towards a nearby large rock -since she didn't want to risk breaking the toad statues-.

"Vacuum Palm!"

Hinata thrust her palm forward, and felt a huge force surging through her arm. However, rather than a vacuum shell or wave, Hinata's hand projected a large, lavender colored spectral arm, which grew bigger as it was released forward. When the spectral hand crashed against the rock, the boulder was shattered in a thousand shards and pebbles.

The Hyuga Clan Head could do nothing but stare in disbelief at what she has just done. She stared at both hands in shock.

"Just... what was that?" she said, almost in a whisper.

"That was... AMAZING!" Hanabi loudly cheered, as she rushed towards her still dazed older sister. "How did you do it?"

"I... I have no idea," Hinata replied. "I was trying to use the Vacuum Palm."

"Maybe it's an effect of mixing Senjutsu with the Tenseigan?" Hanabi guessed.

"I wouldn't know, but it's a possibility," Hinata said, as she rested her chin on her hand. "Maybe we should talk with Nori-san and Takuya-san. They seem to know everything regarding the Tenseigan."

As the Hyuga sisters continued their discussion, another kunoichi decided to test her new capabilities.

"Hey guys, look at this!" Fu cheerfully called.

Everybody turned at the Taki kunoichi, and saw that she was lifting two toad statues with a single finger each. They were all watched in a mixture of awe, shock, and a little terror. Everybody minus Karin, who merely crossed her arms and narrowed her eyes at the green haired girl.

"Showoff," she muttered.

"I believe that's all," Naruto said, clapping his hands once.

"Congratulations! From this day onwards, all of you are Sages!"

"Be sure to use this ancient noble art responsibly," Fukasaku reminded them. "I'm sure you will need it for the conflicts to come."

"In order to celebrate, let's all go to Ichiraku's!" Naruto cheerfully said. However, his cheer died when nobody replied in kind. He frowned, and crossed his arms. "My treat."

This time, he got the cheers he was eager to hear.

Author's Note: And thus, Danzo's life comes to an end. As many reviewers made it clear in their comments on past chapters that focused on Danzo, they couldn't wait to see him dead, so I hope you guys are satisfied now. I couldn't spoil it back then, but the plan was always for Danzo to die. I simply needed him alive to steal one of the Rinnegan, which in turn would be stolen by Obito. Since I had Jiraiya take Nagato's eyes, but I wanted to go with the Fourth Ninja War arc, I needed one of the Rinnegan to end on Obito's hands, and Danzo was the way to do this. Don't worry, you won't have to suffer him anymore.

I told many of you that there was going to be a revelation about Danzo that would make you see his past actions under a completely different light, and here you have it. Many reviewers complained that Danzo's reasons for helping Akatsuki were a bit dumb, and I told them that they were right, but there was a reason for that. This was the reason. His death is also the ultimate karmic retribution, given that Danzo wouldn't have been brainwashed by Obito if he didn't stole Shisui's eye to begin with. What's commonly known as poetic justice.

Now, onto the other Rinnegan. I know many of you wanted Naruto to get the Rinnegan, but sorry, no, that's not going to happen. I hate when authors turn Naruto into an overpowered Gary Stu, and I refuse to walk that path even if it costs me readers. Naruto is going to get his canonical power ups in the future, starting with control over the Nine Tails before he gets to fight again. Plus, I also needed Tsunade to have the Rinnegan for a future subplot to work.

Though, if it's any consolation, I also dislike the idea of Sasuke with a Rinnegan, so he won't get it in this story either.

Some people asked if I was going to give Itachi a love interest, given that Sasuke and Shisui have significant others. At first I wasn't going to give him any, since the only girl of Itachi's age group is Ayame, and I couldn't think in any way to hook them up in a realistic way. Then I realized that Natsu could look to be Itachi's age as well, and told myself "hey, why not?". I know it's weird, but I hope you guys grow to like this pairing.

Also, Naruto's Sage students finally completed in training! Maybe too late for the Akatsuki invasion, but it will come in handy for the war. Sage Mode is my favorite power-up of Naruto, and I hated that so few people got to use it. Making more people Sages was also one of my goals with this fic. Oh, and on top of this group, there will be more Sages in other villages as well ;)

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

The Kage Summit comes next, followed by the war! But as you can imagine, things are going to be very different from how they developed in canon. I hope you guys are as excited as I am for the arcs to come. Meanwhile, leave yours thoughts on this chapter in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

New Arrivals, Old Friends

Author's Note: First of all, sorry for the delay. I've been super busy and stressed these past few weeks, and it wasn't until now that I should have uploaded a new chapter yesterday. I can't believe it slipped my mind like that.

BTW, for some reason, I'm not getting alerts when somebody sends me a PM. Like, I do get the PM, but the website doesn't send me a message to my email like it usually does. It's just me, or does it happen to you too? So yeah, if you send me a PM, I may take some time to see it and send a reply.

Anyway, enjoy the new chapter:

Chapter 91:

New Arrivals, Old Friends

or

Finally some time to relax!

Ichiraku Ramen

Fortunately for Konoha, Ichiraku Ramen managed to survive the Akatsuki Invasion with nothing but some minor damage. Fortunately for Konoha because, had the ramen restaurant fallen prey to the wanton destruction, Naruto would have been filled with so much rage that he would have unleashed the Nine Tails on a heartbeat. But thankfully they wouldn't have to worry about that.

Today it was a good day for the old cook and his daughter. While it was normal for Naruto to bring somebody with him for a meal - usually Hinata, or his siblings,- never did the blond bring such a large group with him. And given that they just came from a training session, they were especially hungry.

"Thanks for eating with us! We hope you enjoy your meal!" Ayame cheerfully said as she laid all the orders on the table.

Their hunger made them finish their food quite fast -though not as fast as Naruto, whom nobody saw actually eating. The moment they blinked, the bowls appeared completely empty-, though they decided to stay some more time and engage in some conversation.

"Quickly, come on!"

That's it, until they heard some people, both ninjas and civilians, rushing to the nearby gates, sounding worried. All of them looked at each other, as worry started to spread. Konoha wasn't ready for another invasion so soon. Shisui got up from his chair and walked towards one of the running people.

"Excuse me," Shisui asked a Chunin, who was forced to stop on his tracks. "What's going on?"

"There has been a sight of a large contingent of ninjas heading to Konoha!" the Chunin replied, before resuming his march.

"What?" Shisui asked.

"Are we under attack?" Karin asked.

"They say a large contingent of ninjas is heading here," Shizune interceded. "They didn't say if they were enemies or not."

"Maybe news of the invasion spread and another village wants to capitalize on our weakened state," Rin replied. "Like Kumo or Iwa."

"That makes no sense. Kumo and Iwa are too far away to move their troops so fast," Shizune replied, shaking her head. "Plus, if they really wanted to attack us, they wouldn't have let us spot them so soon."

"There's a way for us not to be in doubt. Tenseigan!" Hinata said, as she expanded her eyesight, before focusing it on the direction the allegedly enemy ninjas were coming. A smile developed on her lips as her sight reached the large group. "They are not enemies! They're Suna ninjas!"

Excitement built inside Naruto upon hearing those words. "Really!?"

"They're bringing wagons with food, medicines, and building supplies! They must be coming to help us rebuild!" Hinata continued, much to everybody else's joy.

"Hinata-hime, is-"

"Yes," Hinata cut Naruto before he could finish that sentence, since she knew what he was going to ask. "Gaara is among them."

...

Training Ground One

"Okay Hime, this is going to be a big one!" Jiraiya said, as he held a truly massive Rasengan between his hands.

"I'm ready!" Tsunade replied, getting into a defensive position.

"Alright, here it goes!" Jiraiya said, as he leaped at Tsunade, before bringing down the gigantic Rasengan upon her. "Ultra Big Ball Rasengan!"

Tsunade raised her hands towards the incoming attack, creating a barrier just as the chakra sphere crashed down. Said sphere started to shrink as Tsunade siphoned its chakra, the Slug Princess feeling how her husband's chakra was converted into her own before being funneled into her chakra network. After a few seconds, the attack was completely absorbed.

Tsunade placed her hands on her hips, and smirked. "So, what do you think?"

"Truly amazing," Jiraiya praised. "We might not even be close to your absorption limit."

"We may be," Konan interceded. "Remember that Tsunade-sama only has one eye. In order to have access to the Rinnegan's full power one must possess both eyes."

"So far, I don't feel like we're close to any limit," Tsunade replied

"Though, you shouldn't make the mistake of thinking that the Preta Path makes you immune to ninjutsu," Konan pointed out. "As you surely noticed, you need to stand still and channel the ability in order to absorb chakra. You won't be able to do such a thing if you're moving, much less using chakra for something else, like ninjutsu of your own."

"Thanks for the advice, kid. Okay, let's test another power," the Slug Princess said as she spread one of her arms. Said arm then split apart in multiple sections, revealing a machine-like insides rather than flesh and blood, before they reassembled into what appeared to be a cannon. She pointed the cannon to a nearby rock, and fired a blast of chakra, blowing it up to pieces.

"It seems you can use the Asura Path with no problem," Konan observed.

Tsunade's arm returned to normal, as the Senju looked at her limb with incredulity. "This jutsu defy both logic and biology. How can I turn my inner organs into machinery?"

"I'm afraid I have no answer for that question," Konan admitted in a neutral tone, as she started to fly into the air. "Nor I believe it's important to know. We still need to test your abilities further."

"Whatever you throw at me, I will be ready!" Tsunade confidently boasted.

However, before Konan could attack, an ANBU wearing a boar mask appeared before them. They knew it had to be important, or else he wouldn't have dare to enter the private training ground.

"Jiraiya-sama, I have news that require your immediate attention," the ANBU said, his tone stoic and professional.

"Speak," the Toad Sage commanded.

"A large group of Suna ninjas is approaching the village," the ANBU informed. "According to a trustworthy source, they seem to come in order to provide us help in the reconstruction efforts."

A smile developed on the white haired man's face. "Well, those are excellent news indeed! I believe we should give them the greeting they deserve!"

"You should go. I think I'll stay here with Konan and continue our training," Tsunade replied.

"A good decision. We won't have much time until Akatsuki strikes again, and we'll need Tsunade-sama to develop as much skill with the Rinnegan as we can," Konan agreed.

"Alright then. This shouldn't take much. See you later," Jiraiya said, as he and the ANBU Body Flickered away.

Tsunade and Konan resumed their spar.

...

Back at one of Konoha's entrances, a large group had gathered around it. Just like Hinata said, the group turned out to be Suna ninjas who carried plenty of supplies and workforce for the reparation efforts. The Konoha ninjas were more than happy to help them unload all the crates and boxes they had carried from Suna.

They recognized quite a few faces, such as Maki, and her students Matsuri, Yutaka and Mokoshi. And leading this group were no other that the Sand Siblings, Gaara, Kankuro and Temari. Naruto and Hinata quickly went to greet them as they deserved.

"Thank you guys for coming!" Naruto excitedly said. "Your timing couldn't have been any better!"

"Your presence here is a surprise, but a welcomed one, for sure," Hinata added, giggling a little.

The trio of Suna ninjas stared at the Hyuga, looking a bit surprised. It took Naruto and Hinata a few moments to realize what they were looking at.

"Oh, it's my eyes, isn't it? I don't think we saw each other since Gaara's kidnapping," Hinata said realization. "My Byakugan evolved to a higher level, called Tenseigan. I will tell you in more detail later."

"I see," Gaara said, deciding not to ask about the issue. "Anyway, when our father got the news about Konoha being invaded, he immediately decided to send some help. Guess he didn't forget how much Konoha helped us during our time in need."

"And naturally, we volunteered to be part of the mission," Kankuro chimed in. "We will always take a chance to come to Konoha. Especially Temari!"

For some reason, Naruto and Hinata expected Temari to yell something at her little brother, but the blonde kunoichi merely crossed her arms and rolled her eyes. Not being able to get any reaction out of her seemed to bother the puppet master a bit.

"Anyway," Temari spoke for the first time. "Is Shikamaru here? Because we're going to have a problem if he happens to be on a mission just when I had an opportunity to drop by."

"Let me check," Hinata said, as she seemed to zone out for a bit. "Nope, he's here! In fact, his whole team is coming this way. Though Shikamaru-san is dragging them down considerably."

Temari let out an annoyed sigh. "Better late than never, I suppose."

"By the way, I know you guys probably have a lot of problem with housing right now," Kankuro interceded. "But given that our ninjas and us are going to spend quite some time in the village while we help, I was wondering if we could get a place to stay."

"We did bring plenty of tents just in case there are no hotels or houses we can use," Temari added. "But even then, we do need some space to set them up."

"Don't worry, I'm sure that my dad can arrange something so your stay here is as comfortable as possible," Naruto reassured them. "After all, it's the least we could do, given that you came here to help us!"

"By the way," Hinata interjected. "I can't help but notice that there are not just Suna ninjas among your group. How did you end up with those three?"

Hinata nodded at the trio of Kumo ninjas, who were also helping unload some of the crate wagons. Both she and Naruto recognized them as Killer B's students, who came to Konoha to take part in the Chunin Exams. They knew Choji managed to befriend the dark skinned redheaded girl, the one named Karui, and even became pen pals.

"We found them on our way here," Gaara replied. "At first we thought that they were scouts or spies, trying to assess Konoha's situation for a future attack. To finish what Akatsuki started."

"But given that they aren't restrained or anything, I assume that's not the case?" Hinata guessed.

"Which would be dumb if it were," Naruto added, crossing his arms. "We did help them when Akatsuki attacked the Land of Lightning in a ruse to abduct one of their jinchuriki. In the end Akatsuki won, but the gesture remained."

"We interrogated them, and they claimed that they were carrying out a diplomatic mission," Gaara began. "To deliver a very important message from the Raikage to the Hokage. Our sensor ninjas confirmed that they weren't lying."

"Did they tell you what the message is about?" Naruto inquired.

Gaara shook his head. "They said their orders were to deliver it to the Hokage and the Hokage alone, and that they weren't allowed to discuss it with anybody."

"Though, one of them did let something slip," Kankuro mentioned. "The boy with the oral fixation said that there were other groups of Kumo ninjas delivering similar messages to the other Great Villages, ours included."

"That's intriguing," Naruto said, pressing his lips. "Do you wonder what the message is about?"

"I have some ideas, but nothing concrete," Gaara admitted. "We'll know once they meet with the Hokage and deliver the message."

"You have message for me?" a new voice said.

Everybody turned around, and saw Jiraiya behind them. It appeared that he had arrived just now, and caught the tail end of their conversation.

"Greetings, Hokage-sama. We heard about what happened here regarding the Akatsuki," Gaara saluted, making a small bow. "On my father, the Kazekage's behalf, we brought you various supplies and able bodied ninjas that will help with the reconstruction efforts."

"Suna's help is both welcomed and very appreciated," Jiraiya replied, returning the bow. "You also mentioned a message?"

"It's not them who have a message for you, Hokage-sama," Karui said, as she and her teammates walked to him, having finally spotted him. "Can we go to somewhere private? It's a delicate matter to discuss."

"Sure. We'll take this conversation to my office," Jiraiya offered.

"Naruto might want to come as well," Omoi suggested. "Given that we came here because of Akatsuki."

Naruto and Jiraiya exchanged worried looks.

...

A few minutes later, Hokage's Office

"What!? No!" Naruto cried. "There's no way Killer B fell prey to the Akatsuki as well!"

Jiraiya had read the message from the Raikage out loud. It informed of Killer B's capture by Deidara and Kisame, followed by a formal summon to a Kage Summit, that would be held in the Land of Iron in less than three weeks. Each Kage could only bring an escort of two ninjas with them, in order to quell any potential threats of aggression. Jiraiya already knew who would be bringing with him.

"I'll send a messenger toad to the Raikage telling him that I will be there," Jiraiya told the three Kumo Chunin. "As for you three, I'll arrange some living quarters for you until you decide to leave."

"It's appreciated, Hokage-sama," Karui replied, making a slight bow. "We know your village isn't exactly in the best shape to accommodate guests."

"Guess this confirms our worst fears," Naruto sadly said. "With Killer B captured and his Tailed Beast sealed, all that was left for Akatsuki was to kidnap both Fu and me in order to complete their plan."

"I've been trying to locate Killer B, but I was unable to," Jiraiya mentioned, before his eyes shifted to the Kumo ninjas. "Where was he, may I ask?"

"We had a special shelter in a place to the north of Kumo called the Valley of Cloud and Lightning," Omoi began. "It's terrain is very hard to traverse, and its location was one of Kumo's top guarded secret."

"Not even we knew where it was," T chimed in.

"Not that it mattered, given that Akatsuki found the place and a way to overcome its difficult terrain," Karui said, scoffing a little. "Anyway, Raikage-sama will be pleased to know that you're going to attend. Hopefully the other three Kages decide to go as well."

"I can assure you that the Kazekage and the Mizukage will go as well," Jiraiya told the redhead. "The Tsuchikage, though, I couldn't tell. We don't have much of a relationship with Iwa."

"Neither you nor any village," T interceded. "They have fame of wanting to do things their way and scoff at the idea of an alliance."

"Let's hope they change their mind, or else Akatsuki will eat us alive," Karui said, as she started to leave, her two teammates behind her. "Hokage-sama."

Jiraiya nodded as the three foreign ninjas left his office.

"So... this Kage Summit," Naruto began. "It's a good thing, right? If they want all Kages to meet and discuss the Akatsuki threat... with the help of the other villages, dealing with them will be much easier."

"In theory, yes," Jiraiya told Naruto. "In practice, not so much. Even with the threat of Akatsuki, tension between villages still exist., and some of them haven't suffered the scourge of Akatsuki like we did, other than the loss of their jinchuriki."

"Suna and Kiri are already on our side," Naruto pointed out. "With more than half the villages on a single front, maybe the other two will join us?"

"I'm counting on that," Jiraiya replied. "Though we should be careful as well. Rather than joining us, Kumo and Iwa may take this as a threat and join together against us."

"But... the Akatsuki is the real enemy here! Plus we did help Kumo with one of their jinchuriki!" Naruto protested, throwing his hands into the air.

"I know, and I do plan to remind them of that," Jiraiya stated. "However, things aren't as clear cut as they are from our point of view. I mean, the fact that it was the Raikage who requested this summit is good, since that means he's willing to cooperate with other villages against the Akatsuki threat. If I play my cards right, there's a good chance we may enlist the rest of the villages for our cause."

"Let's hope," Naruto agreed, before he remembered another part of the message. "The Raikage said that you're only allowed to bring two people with you. Who do you have in mind?"

"That's an easy one. I'm taking your mom and Itachi Uchiha. They're two of Konoha's strongest and well known ninjas, meaning that I can make a show of force in front of the other villages, and I'll have my back covered if things get ugly," Jiraiya explained. Naruto visibly deflated, which didn't go unnoticed by the white haired man. "What? Did you expect me to bring you?"

"I AM among the strongest ninjas in the village. Not to mention one of the two jinchuriki left," Naruto dejectedly told him.

"Naruto, I'm not taking you for several reasons," Jiraiya began. "First, you're much safer here. If I took you out of the safety of our walls, well, that would be like daring the Akatsuki to come and snatch you. And two, given the recent invasion, I thought you deserve a little break. While I'm out on this, you should try to relax and have some fun."

"You aren't the only one who suggested me that," Naruto said, chuckling. "Hinata-hime also told me that I needed to do something other than training or missions."

Jiraiya's mouth curved into a perverse grin. "Ohhhhhh... does she want some alone time with you?"

Naruto merely rolled his eyes. "Nah. She said to do something with the rest of our friends. She has a point, it's been a while since we did something all together that isn't a mission."

"I see," Jiraiya said, his face returning to normal. He smiled again, albeit this time it was more earnest. "May I give you a suggestion?"

...

"Akatsuki did make quite the number in your village, didn't they?" Temari asked before letting out a whistle of admiration, as she contemplated the ruined buildings around her. "I shudder to think that this could have happened to Suna."

Temari, alongside other Suna ninjas, were helping the Konoha ninjas to move construction supplies such as concrete, sand, or metallic grids to the zones in need of them.

"The saddest part is, this isn't even the first time it happened," Shikamaru, who was working alongside her, replied. "I think we told you about all the other invasions we had to go through, right?"

"The Nine Tails attack, the Uchiha Insurrection, Orochimaru's invasion, and more recently, Akatsuki," Temari recounted, with her boyfriend nodded in confirmation. "Man, if anything, it speaks volumes of how resilient you guys are. Any village that went through so many invasions in such a small timespan should be defunct by now."

"Guess that speaks volumes about Konoha, doesn't it?" Shikamaru asked, feeling a little patriotic pride, which was kind of an odd feeling for him.

"And what about you?" Temari asked. "Are you okay?"

"Yeah, I'm fine, why do you ask?" Shikamaru replied, raising an eyebrow. "Don't I look okay to you?"

"You do. But given the experience, I thought that maybe... well, that maybe the invasion got you down a little," Temari said. "I take you were among the lucky ones who didn't lose a loved one?"

"You could said that," Shikamaru lazily replied.

However, there was something in the way he said that got Temari suspicious. "What do you mean? Did you actually lose somebody or...?"

"No," Shikamaru stated. "But if I did it wouldn't have mattered, because the Akatsuki leader returned everybody to life." Needless to say, Temari was quite shocked at such revelation, her eyes growing wide, but narrowing next upon realizing how much of a nonsense it was. Shikamaru seemed to pick his girlfriend's reaction, and continued speaking. "It's true, you can ask other people if you don't believe me. Some freaky Rinnegan power or something like that."

"Rinnegan? But..." Temari began, flabbergasted. "Even if that were true, how is that the Akatsuki leader decided to help you? It makes no sense!"

"Apparently Naruto went to talk with him. I think Naruto made him feel bad about what he had done, and in order to atone before dying brought everybody back from the death," Shikamaru elaborated. "The other Akatsuki then surrendered without fighting any further."

As the sand blond kunoichi tried to digest Shikamaru's unbelievable tale, another realization dawned upon her. "Wait, did you guys collect the Rinnegan? Because such power-"

"Yeah, we did," Shikamaru replied, not letting her finish her question. "Unfortunately, Akatsuki managed to snatch one of the eyes from us, with Danzo's help. Old bastard..."

"Well, at least you guys still keep the other eye," Temari said. "You don't know what are they going to do with it, do you?"

Shikamaru shook his head. "Like they're going to make a mere Chunin like me privy of what do they plan to do with such an item of power. Though guess that we'll know soon enough. From what I heard, we need those eyes if we want to release all the Tailed Beasts captured by Akatsuki."

Temari accepted Shikamaru's response with a nod, as the two of them resumed their work, opening crates and unloading their contents, before either stacking them on a pile, or handing them to the people who needed them. After a few minutes of working in silence, Shikamaru decided to open his mouth again.

"So... how long are you planning to stay?" Shikamaru asked.

"Father told us that we could stay as long as the reparation efforts lasted. Unless there's an emergency, we aren't needed in Suna," Temari answered, as she carried another crate, ready to open. She shot Shikamaru a taunting smirk "Why? Are you already counting the minutes until I'm out of your hair?"

"Quite the contrary. Did I give you that impression?" Shikamaru asked, chuckling awkwardly. "I always enjoy when you come to visit."

"Given that other times made you look as if being with me is some sort of chore..." Temari replied, sounding a little hurt.

"Because I love getting a reaction out of you," Shikamaru said, chuckling again, this time more earnestly.

"Do you find it amusing?" Temari asked, raising an eyebrow.

"Yes. But it also tells me that you care," Shikamaru replied. "Though if you want me to stop doing it, you only need to ask."

"Then please drop it. It's kind of childish," the blonde asked.

"As you wish," Shikamaru said, shrugging a little. "Though in all seriousness, I'm really happy to know that you're going to be here for some time. It will be nice to see you several days in a row. I mean, did you know some people think I'm making you up when I told them about you?"

"Really?" Temari asked, suppressing a chuckle. "Well, I can imagine. Some boys from Suna also think that I say I have a boyfriend in Konoha just so they leave me alone."

"That's one weird thing to have in common. Albeit it's obvious that the reasons people think that of us aren't the same," Shikamaru commented. "By the way, where are you staying? I'm afraid all the hotels are being used as improvised infirmaries, storehouses and barracks for our ninjas."

"We know. The Hokage reserved a training field for our ninjas so we can set our tents there," Temari said.

"That doesn't appear to be very comfortable," Shikamaru pointed out. "Especially since you came here to help. I think you guys deserve a little better."

"I know, but what else can we do? We're in no position to be demanding," Temari said in resignation. "We came here to help, not to hog space other people may need."

"Well..." Shikamaru began. He lowered his gaze as he rubbed the back of his neck, looking uncomfortable. "You could... you could stay at my place?"

Temari's eyes were open wide in shock. "Come again?"

"You could stay at my place," Shikamaru repeated, this time sounding more confident. "We have quite a few spare rooms, so not just you, but you could also bring your brothers or whoever you want."

And given that you're helping the village, I don't think my folks will object to it."

Temari stopped what she was doing to place her full attention on her boyfriend. She placed her hands on her hips, as her expression became one of skepticism. "So... you okay with me meeting your parents? Like, really?"

"I'm sure I'm going to regret it later, but better do it now and get it out of my hair," Shikamaru said, rubbing the back of his head again.

The lazy Nara was surprised when she found Temari's arms wrapped around his neck, and her lips pressed against her cheeks.

"Thank you," the Suna kunoichi whispered into his ear.

Shikamaru smiled at her.

...

"Okay, mission completed," Karui said, as she and her two teammates walked through the streets of Konoha. "Good thing the Hokage said he'd go to the summit. Hopefully in no time, the other villages will hunt the Akatsuki down and B-sensei will be avenged."

The other two nodded sadly. While they do wanted justice for their beloved sensei, they knew that no matter how many Akatsuki died, nothing would bring Killer B back. Their absence is something they'll have to get used to.

" And we aren't the only ones who lost people to the Akatsuki," Karui thought, as she looked at the ruined buldingd around her. Though there were ruined and destroyed buildings, they wouldn't stay like that for long, since she also saw plenty of ninja and civilian alike tirelessly working on the reconstruction of their village. If there was something it could be said about Konoha, is that they were dillgent. "So, do you guys want to do anything? We've made a long trip here and I really don't feel like going back home just now."

"Maybe we could see the sights this village has to offer?" Omoi asked. "Those who hadn't been reduced to rubble, I mean. We barely had any time to do that the last time we were here because of the Chunin Exams."

"We could get something to eat first," T mentioned. "I would like to eat something other than ration bars and fish. And Konoha has pretty good restaurants."

"Hmm... guess that's something we could do," Karui replied, nodding as well. "Hopefully a couple restaurants not far away from here may have survived the Akatsuki's attack."

Omoi was also going to agree, until something drew his attention. A pair of stocky ninjas, one old and one young -clearly father and son- were using a jutsu to enlarge their arms in order to move heavy construction supplies such as metal girds or wooden beams around. The Kumo ninja, however, remembered who that ninja was.

"Hey, Karui," Omoi said, as he nodded at the working pair. "Isn't that the guy you write letters to?"

"Where!?" Karui suddenly said, unwittingly shouting but willingly trying to keep her voice down. Nervous, the redheaded kuonichi frantically looked around, until he spotted the young man in question. "Oh... yeah. Well, it's normal that he's here working to rebuild his village, isn't it? And why are you looking at me like that!?"

"Aren't you planning to go and say hi?" T asked in a teasing tone. "I mean, it's a pretty good chance, given that we were given Konoha of all villages to deliver the message to. I'm sure you'd regret if we left without meeting him at least once."

"Don't worry about us," Omoi preemptively said, as he and his other female teammate started to walk away in the opposite direction.

"We'll look for a nice place to eat. Once we found one, we'll tell you!"

"W-Wait! Don't leave me alone!" Karui said, as her eyes frantically shifted back and forth between Choji and her teammates, who were getting further and further away. "Ugh, you guys suck! You're going to regret this!"

Huffing, Karui decided to walk towards Choji. At the very least, the two dumbasses decided to leave her alone. There's no way she could have approached Choji with those two teasing her constantly. As she walked towards the Konoha ninja, who was with a man she presumed was his father, Karui's heart started to beat faster and faster.

"Come on girl, you completed S-Rank missions, you surely can talk to a boy," Karui reminded herself, and once she was close enough, she opened her mouth. "Hello!"

That came way louder than she expected, if the way Choji and his dad were startled was anything to go by. The two of them quickly turned around.

"What the...?" Choji asked, almost defensively, as he turned around. However, the tension of his body disappeared, and his mouth curved into a smile the moment she saw who had called him. "Karui!"

"Hey there," said said, waving weakly at him. "Long time no see, huh?"

"Indeed!" Choji energetically nodded. "It's amazing how much you grew! You look so pretty!"

"Thank you. You grew up a lot as well, as I can see. I mean, you're taller than me," Karui said, as she wiped a strand of hair from her face away. "Good thing he didn't mention my chest."

"So, Choji," the larger man with the wild red hair said. "I take this is the girl you've been writing letters to?"

"She is!" Choji happily said. "Dad, this is Karui. Karui, this is my dad Choza Akimichi, leader of the Akimichi Clan."

"It's a pleasure to meet you, sir," Karui said, making a head bow.

"Same here. Though I do remember you from the Chunin Exams," Choza stated. "You gave my son quite the beating, didn't you?"

Karui grew visibly uncomfortable, as she tried to find a way to salvage the situation.

"Uh, I-"

"Hahaha, relax, girl! I'm not going to hold that against you," Choza boomed, giving Karui a mighty slap on her back. So mighty, she almost fell on her face. "We Akimichis find strong women very appealing! Strong women produce and raise strong children! That's how a clan stays in top shape!"

That did nothing but increase Karui's uneasiness, albeit now for completely unrelated reasons. "If this man pulls out a marriage contract, I'm SO out of here!"

"Um, dad," Choji pointed out, noticing -and even sharing- some of the Kumo kunoichi's uneasiness. "I think you're going too far. You're making Karui a little uncomfortable."

"I am?" Choza asked, genuinely surprised.

"Way more than 'a little', but thanks! Great timing there, Choji!" Karui mentally thanked him.

"Oh, my apologies then. I didn't want to suggest anything hasty," Choza admitted, before taking a very large crate between his arms. "I better move this box towards the Jonin Station. I'll leave you alone so the two of you can catch up."

"Okay dad. See you later," Choji said.

"See you later, son," Choza said before leaving.

Both Karui and Choji sighed in unison once the Akimichi Clan patriarch was seen turning at a corner, disappearing behind a half destroyed building.

"I'm... I'm sorry for my dad," Choji said, rubbing his neck in embarrassment. "He's... very excited about you."

"I could tell," Karui breathed.

"So... what brings you to the village?" Choji asked, hoping that a change of topic would help push the awkwardness of the situation away.

"My team was sent here by Raikage-sama to deliver a message to your Hokage, in order to set a date for an upcoming Kage Summit," Karui explained. "Hoping all five villages could deal with Akatsuki together."

"Did Akatsuki also attack Kumo?" Choji asked, looking worried.

"Not exactly. My sensei, Killer B, was attacked and kidnapped by the Akatsuki," Karui said, as she cast her eyes down, sadness creeping upon her.

"Oh..." was all the Akimichi could say in return. "I... I'm sorry for your loss, especially since it had to be a huge blow. If it were Asuma-sensei... I don't know what I would have done..."

"It's okay, it's not that it's your fault," Karui replied, before she looked around. "I'm guessing that, after they snatched B-sensei from his hiding place, they came here to get your jinchuriki, right?"

"Yeah," Choji said. "Thankfully they failed. Had they captured Naruto and Fu, they would have all Tailed Beast under their control."

"Did you guys managed to kill some of them?" Karui asked.

"Yeah. The leader is dead. And another one, a woman, surrendered to Konoha after their defeat," Choji explained.

Karui scowled a little. "Dammit. I was hoping that at least Kisame and Deidara would be rotting in hell right now."

"Those were the ones who captured your sensei?" Choji asked.

Karui nodded. "Kisame also helped to capture Yugito-sama, so we have even more reasons to hate him."

"Well... think that you still have the chance to get revenge on them. Though you should be careful, every Akatsuki member is a powerhouse on their own, and those two are no exception," Choji advised her.

"I don't mind if I'm not the one who brings them down, as long as they get their just desserts," Karui told Choji. "If I can help their downfall in any way, I will."

"I'm on the same boat. Akatsuki was already bad before, but look how much they wrecked our home," Choji told her, as he spread his arms around for added effect. "Hopefully this will be the beginning of an alliance between Konoha and Kumo."

"Yeah, let's hope the Kage Summit goes well," Karui agreed.

There was a moment of awkward silence as the two teens stayed there next to each other, doing or saying nothing. Until Choji decided to break the silence.

"So... now that you gave the message, are you planning on leaving?" Choji asked. "Or do you plan to stay a bit?"

"After such a long trek for a mere message, neither me nor my teammates feel like going back home so soon," Karui told him, and the redhead could see the rotund boy growing more excited.

"Though given the state the village is right now, it might not be for the best if we sta-"

"Nonsense! Please stay all the time you need!" Choji insisted, loudly interrupting her. "I mean, we're already housing a lot of ninjas from Suna that came here to help, so we can afford three more people."

Before Karui could reply, they were interrupted by a loud, rumbling noise. Choji would have apologized for such a thing, but the Akimichi knew his stomach too well to know when it was him. Karui seemed to be on the same boat, as the redhead's expression was that of embarrassment.

"Man, T was right. We've been way too much time eating nothing but ration bars and fish," Karui complained.

"If you want to eat, there's this restaurant that serves the best barbecue of the entire village!" Choji enthusiastically said, not missing a chance to share his favorite eating spot with a girl he liked. "My treat!"

"Really? Thanks. I'm not going to say no to free food right now," Karui said. "Lead the way, Choji."

And with a huge smile plastered on his face, Choji walked towards Yakiniku-Q with Karui walking besides him. While the redhead would try to hide it, she was smiling as well.

...

While most of the Suna ninjas were helping with the reconstruction of the village, some of them were proving to be more helpful than others, albeit more due their abilities rather than enthusiasm or intent. And there was a certain somebody whose abilities that he had since he was born made construction work trivially easy.

Using his sand, Gaara was able to do the work of multiple people in far less time, all at once: he could push debris away, move and lift heavy objects like wooden beams or crates of bricks, place iron girds in the ground, and many more. However, this didn't mean that the effort he was making didn't took its toll on the former jinchuriki, as he was expending chakra as quickly as if he were in a fight to the death.

Beads of sweat started to roll down Gaara's forehead, which he wiped with the sleeve of his shirt from time to time, however, the former jinchuriki didn't complain nor requested a break. Fortunately for him, the other people working alongside the redhead decided that he had deserved a rest for the time being.

"Okay, I think we're done here," a large man wearing stained working clothes and a helmet on his head said, as he walked towards Gaara. "You made quite the quick work, kid."

"I'm here to help as much as I can," Gaara stoically said. "What can I do now?"

"For now, nothing. We've done a good job with the heavy lifiting, but now it's time for the more specialized craftsmen to take the lead," the man said. "Why don't you take a break?"

"I still have energy. I can continue," the former jinchuriki insisted.

"Don't push yourself too hard, kid. You helped us a lot already. Trust me, there will be more work for you when you come back. Now go and relax a little," the man said, as he nodded towards an approaching girl.

Gaara saw that said girl in question was Matsuri, coming at him with a small smile on his face.

"Hey," she said.

"Hello," Gaara replied. "Have you finished your assigned tasks too?"

Matsuri chuckled uneasily. "Not in the slightest. We simply decided to take a break. You know, I thought this would be like a D-Rank mission, but it's much harder than it looks!"

"I can relate to that," Gaara said, wiping some more sweat from his brow. "I think this used to be easier when I still had Shukaku inside of me."

"Here," Matsuri said, before pulling out a canteen buckled to her belt, and handed it to the redhead."

Gaara took the canteen, which he noted was half full, and downed whatever water was left in one go.

"Thank you," Gaara said, returning the canteen.

"You're welcome," the brown haired girl said, blushing a little, as she returned the canteen to her belt. "So... given that we have some spare time, care to go for a walk with me? This is my first time in Konoha, and I'd like to see it a bit better. You've been here before, maybe you could show me?"

"Sure," Gaara agreed. "Though the village used to be a better sight before all this destruction."

Matsuri merely shrugged. "I can always return another time once the reconstruction is finished."

Besides, it's not that she was THAT interested in seeing the village to begin with, but it was a good excuse as good as any other to spend some relaxing time with her crush.

...

West Gate of Konoha, next morning

Not wanting to waste anymore time, Jiraiya decided to head to the Land of Iron as soon as possible, lest the summit would start without him. A crowd had gathered around the Hokage to bid him goodbye, among them being his children, his sensei, and other ninja close to him and those he was taking as escorts, such as Shizune and the rest of the Uchihas.

Like he had told Naruto, Tsunade and Itachi were the chosen ones. Not just to display Konoha power, but in case that the worst came to happen, those two provided the best combination of abilities. Itachi's ninjutsu and genjutsu could provide good ranged cover, while Tsunade could act as both frontline fighter and heal any injury that may happen to the trio.

The Slug Sannin and the Uchiha were wearing the standard Konoha uniform, blue navy long sleeved shirt, pants, and a green flak jacket, clothes that neither of them used to wear. Though in Tsunade's case, she had to wear the flak jacket unzipped, since her massive chest made it impossible to zip it up.

"So many years later, and there are no jackets for women my size," Tsunade grumbled, recalling the last time she had to wear the official uniform. Interestingly enough, it was also a meeting involving the Raikage.

"Alright, I presume that, at a good pace, it will take us about a week to reach the Land of Iron," Jiraiya stated. "While the summit will be in twelve days. That will allow us some window of time in case an unexpected event happens."

"Have a safe trip, Jiraiya-sama," Shizune told him.

Jiraiya nodded at her, before turning at the previous Hokage. "Once again, sorry for piling my job on you, sensei," Jiraiya told his master. "But I trust no other to run the village in my absence."

"Don't feel guilty, Jiraiya. In my case, I would have done the same," Hiruzen replied with a nod. "I'll make sure the reconstruction goes as smoothly as possible."

"Make sure Naruto and Fu are under constant watch," Jiraiya told him. "I wouldn't put past Akatsuki sneaking an agent to kidnap them taking advantage of me leaving."

"Come on dad, we aren't helpless," Naruto protested, as he crossed his arms. "Remember that it was me who saved you from Pain, not the other way around."

Jiraiya smiled at him. "I know. But I can't help but worry about you, son. So while I'm out, try not to draw much attention, okay?"

"Okay, dad," Naruto replied.

Jiraiya returned his attention to his former sensei once more. "It's possible that, if things go smoothly in the summit and we all reach an understanding, we might launch a joint offensive against the Akatsuki."

"Then I'll make sure all our ninjas are ready to move once the time is right," Hiruzen replied, before Jiraiya had any chance to issue more orders. "I've lived through all three wars, Jiraiya. I know better than anybody here how this works. Though truth be told, it makes me sad that I'll live to see yet another war."

"If things go good, it will be over before we realize it, and there won't be more wars in a long time," Tsunade spoke up for the first time.

"Let's hope," Hiruzen said. "I'll also make sure our defenses are in top condition in case Akatsuki decides to strike first."

"Good. I'll rest easier knowing that the village will be in good hands in my absence," Jiraiya said with a nod. He then noticed Gaara, who walked towards him.

"Hokage-sama, given that you're going to see my father, please tell him that we arrived here safely, and that we're helping the village as intended."

"Don't worry kid, I will," Jiraiya replied, as he turned around, Itachi and Tsunade doing the same. "Tsunade-hime, Itachi, let's go!"

"Yes!" the two Jonin said in unison, as they followed Jiraiya into the forests of the Land of Fire.

Once the Hokage and his two escorts were no longer visible, everybody else returned to the village, back to their daily tasks.

Author's Note: Now, after the Akatsuki Invasion arc FINALLY came to an end, I think it's about time to let our heroes some time to catch their breath and relax a little, don't they?

And boy, do I appreciate writing something relaxed once in a while. Especially romance. Like, when was the last time we saw Choji and Karui interact? It has to be the Chunin Exams, more than 60 chapters ago. Same goes with Shikamaru and Temari. Temari has appeared in quite a few arcs, but I don't think she and Shikamaru had a conversation since the beginning of the Gaara Rescue arc, almost 40 chapters ago. Wow... when did this story get so crazy long?

And as Jiraiya and his two escorts head to the Land of Iron, the Kage Summit is about to begin. I know a lot of you can't wait to see how my version of the Kage Summit is going to play out. Needless to say, it's going to be much shorter, given the lack of Sasuke to attack it, as well as Danzo being dead already. Still, there are going to be a couple of surprises around the corner. Plus, a few fan favorites from the other villages will make a return during this arc.

Though, the Kage Summit won't start immediately. The next chapter is going to be the Konoha 15 and their friends from the other villages, such as the Sand Siblings or Karui, having a much needed and much deserved fun and relaxing time together. Mostly because, well, I'm sure you know that after this, they won't have anymore time to relax until the end of the story.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

So, what do you think about this chapter? Did you enjoy the return of the Suna and Kumo ninjas? Leave your thoughts in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The More the Merrier?

Author's Note: This time, I didn't forget about updating! The wonders of not being as stressed as of lately. Anyway, this is the last chapter of the year, and the decade. So I hope you find it to your liking:

Chapter 92:

The More the Merrier?

or

The Mandatory Hot Springs Chapter

It has been three days since Jiraiya left with Tsunade and Itachi for the Land of Iron, and so far, it seemed that calmness had finally replaced the tension following the devastating Akatsuki attack. People continued working tirelessly on the reconstruction of the village, which went quite fast thanks to the effort of all its ninjas, but among them, those with unique abilities.

In just those three days, Tenzo, Rin and Kaida managed to replace about two thirds of the houses that were completely destroyed by creating new ones with their Wood Release. However, their powers only went so far, and most of those houses still needed glasses, plumbing, electricity and furniture, but they were habitable and definitely beat sleeping in the streets.

Other ninjas that sped up the reconstruction process were Choji and the rest of his clanmates, whose body expansion jutsu made rebuilding houses as easy as if they were toys, while Gaara's control over sand provided similar results. And naturally, Naruto's army of clones provided a massive boost to the workforce, speeding the process even further.

"Heh, at this pace, maybe we'll have most of the village rebuilt by the time dad gets back from the Land of Iron," Naruto said in pride, as he watched his clones work. The summit would be in a week and a half, and Jiraiya would take at least another week to get back to Konoha.

As the clones started to dispel little by little, Naruto's brain received their memories, and with them, a little of their mental fatigue and exhaustion.

"Man, I thought using clones would get me out of the hard work," Naruto complained to no one in particular. His hands went to his right pocket, where it found something. Pulling it out, it was the gift that his father had given him during their last conversation before he had to depart for the Land of Iron. "Maybe it's a good time to put this to use. I could use some relaxing."

"I think I could agree with that, Naruto-kun," a female voice said. Naruto turned around, and saw Hinata standing in front of him.

"Oh, hey, hime," Naruto greeted her with a kiss on the lips. "What's up?"

"I just finished helping with the rebuilding of some houses, and decided to call it a day for now," Hinata replied, sounding a little exhausted. "Do you have any plans?"

"As a matter of fact, I do," the blond replied, as he handed her the item in question.

Wordlessly, Hinata took it and gave it a good look. Her eyes opened up in surprise a little.

"Oh," Hinata said, fighting a blush from developing on her pale face. "You plan to use this today? With... us?"

"I was planning to use it with all of our friends, you know," Naruto told her. "You said it would be nice if we did something together as a group, and I think this is a pretty good chance."

"I see," Hinata said, before nodding. "Yes, with how much everybody is working, I guess they also deserve a little reward and relaxation."

"Nice! Hopefully nobody will have any plans for this afternoon," Naruto said. "Can you go look for your cousin's team and Shikamaru's team? I'll get Karin's team and Kakashi-sensei's team myself."

"Alright. I'll see you in the place in an hour," Hinata said with a nod, before flying away.

...

Hyuga Estate

Hikari was in her study -which used to belong to her husband when he was alive- reading a scroll. It wasn't just any scroll, but one of those the Moon Acolytes had brought with them to Konoha. The former but still acting Clan Head had shown a lot of interest in knowing the true story of her clan, which was mired in mysteries, due the clan's nomadic nature prior joining Konoha.

Most of the historical documents, even if they were well preserved, showed their age. That's why Hikari ordered the clan's scholars to instantly copy them, and translate them to a more modern version of their language in order to make their reading far easier.

Even if the Acolytes themselves, as well as Hinata, already told them the true history of their clan, there were many details that they left out. The history of the Otsutsuki and later the Hyuga spanned for over a thousand years, and thus there was a lot to cover. Hikari believed that, by carefully studying their history, they could uncover more clan secrets. Because who said that the Tenseigan was the only one?

However, there was a part that left her intrigued. One that, no matter how many documents revised, she simply couldn't find a proper answer. So, rolling the scroll, she got up from her chair, and decided to ask somebody for answers.

It didn't take her long to find the person she was looking for. When he wasn't overseeing her daughters' training with the Tenseigan, Takuya was often in the Hyuga Library, alongside other Acolytes and more studious Hyuga members, working on copying said historical documents, reading the books and scrolls they already had, or organizing the library as a whole.

Little by little, Takuya had made that place into his little domain. Not that any of the Hyuga minded, since most saw it as a boring, thankless job, and were grateful to have somebody willing to keep their library organized. Right now, the leader of the Moon Acolytes was putting in the shelves some scrolls that had just been copied. He quickly noticed Hikari's presence.

"Ah, Hikari-sama," the older man said, making a bow. "What can I do for you?"

Hikari nodded back, and walked towards him, handing him the scroll before speaking. "I have decided to educate myself on the history of our clan and our ancestors. Today I have been reading that scroll."

"Ah, the fall of the Main Otsutsuki Clan, and their exile on Earth," the monk said, nodding as he quickly read the unfurled scroll. "A very poignant point of the history of both your clan and my order."

"Indeed. However, there's something I can't understand," Hikari said.

Takuya smiled, and rolled the scroll again. "Well, that's why I'm here. I'm more than happy to explain anything you want to know."

"You see, in all the records I reviewed, they mention a terrible weapon created by the Branch Otsutsuki," Hikari began. "But none of them specify the nature of that weapon. I thought that maybe you could cast some light upon this mystery?"

Takuya's face darkened a little, as his smile vanished.

"I'm afraid, my dear Hikari-sama, that neither me nor the Acolytes, know about that," Takuya replied. "All we know it's that it was a weapon of terrible power. Unfortunately, the ensuing war and destruction, there was no time nor opportunity to make an extensive record of such weapon. In fact, many of our records were lost to that war; they were either destroyed or remain on the moon."

"I see. The weapon also remains on the moon, correct?" Hikari asked.

"I'm afraid so, Hikari-sama," Takuya replied.

"Then... how can we destroy a weapon that brought down the Otsutsuki Clan when it was in its prime?" Hikari asked. "Because it's said to be a weapon that can match and even surpass the Tenseigan."

"I'm afraid I have no answer for that, Hikari-sama," Takuya gravely said.

...

Training Ground Seven

Kiba, Tamaki and Shino were in the middle of an intense training session, a spar against Kakashi using the Sharingan. The Inuzuka heir and the cat kunoichi were covered in sweat and dirt, breathing heavily, but were smiling confidently. Shino, on the other hand, looked far less exhausted and dirty, though his body language revealed that he hadn't been merely watching while his teammates fought.

"What about that, Kakashi-sensei?" Tamaki asked, eager for praise.

"Okay, I admit it," Kakashi replied. "At first I had my doubts, but both you and Kiba managed to do it."

"Ha, of course we did!" Kiba boasted, with Akamaru vigorously barking in agreement. "Did you have any doubts?"

"I have to admit, it was quite an exercise of creativity and outside the box thinking on your part," Shino chimed in.

"Eh, it wasn't really that hard," Tamaki said, with a dismissive hand wave. "There are countless ways to circumvent a jutsu's weakness. Kiba and I just used one of the most obvious."

"Even then, it's not something I can-"

"Hey!" a new voice said, interrupting Shino.

Everybody turned around to see Naruto happily running towards them. Their stances relaxed, as they came closer and walked towards the blond in order to meet him in the middle.

"Hey, look at that! That's too good to be a coincidence!" Kiba said, grinning wildly. "Hey Naruto, you came here just in time! Fight me! I have a new jutsu that-"

"While I appreciate your passion, I doubt Naruto came here thinking in fighting you, Kiba," Kakashi interrupted him.

"Besides, you should know that, even with our new jutsu, Naruto would still be too much for us," Tamaki reminded him.

Kiba's excitement was so big, he felt he could take on any opponent, Naruto included. And while in another time he would have argued with Tamaki for that, the more rational part of his brain won out, and all he did was cross his arms and huff in annoyance..

"Okay, whaveter," Kiba said in resignation. "But I'm not going to stop training until the gap between us closes!"

"I'll be holding you to that boast, Kiba," Kakashi said in his jovial tone, but everybody could sense a "you're going to regret saying that" there. He then turned towards the blond. "So, what can we do for you, Naruto?"

"I wanted to ask Kiba, Tamaki and Shino something," Naruto began, as he pulled a small, crumpled paper out of his pocket. He straightened the paper as much as he could, and showed it to his friends. "Dad gave me this before he left for the Kage Summit. He thought that we could use some relaxation after the whole debacle with Danzo and the Akatsuki."

Shino held the paper between his hands, as he and his teammates and sensei read it. It was a coupon for one of Konoha's most expensive hot springs, cutting its price per person in more than half. However, the coupon was only valid for large groups, meaning ten people or more. And on top of that, said group would have one of the springs reserved for them, instead of having to share it with others.

"I thought we could spend the afternoon there, and then have a nice dinner together," Naruto said. "I already asked Shikamaru's team, and they said yes. Hinata-hime is asking Karin and Neji's team, respectively, to come."

"Yeah, count me in!" Kiba excitedly said. "After how hard we worked today, we deserve a reward!"

"It's okay if I ask Rin to come with us?" Tamaki asked.

"I also thought that Fu would enjoy some time in the hot springs as well," Shino added.

"Sure, the more the merrier!" Naruto happily agreed.

"Sorry for asking, but it's that invitation just for my students? Or are the sensei invited as well?" Kakashi asked.

"Yeah, you and the other sensei can come if you want too," Naruto said. "The coupon doesn't say anything about how big the group must be. Anyway, it's so great to know that you'll be coming! Meet us at the entrance at five sharp!"

And thus,. Naruto left as quickly as he had come.

"It was so nice that Naruto decided to invite us grownups as well," Kakashi said, sounding pleased. "Don't worry, I'll make sure none of us get in your way or anything. Anyway, how about if we end the training for today?"

"Sure, I want to get ready for the hot springs," Tamaki agreed. Kiba and Shino nodded as well.

And with that, the group dispersed. However, as they returned to their homes, there was a single thought that filled both Kiba, Shino and Tamaki's heads.

"We will be able to see Kakashi-sensei without the mask."

...

Hot Springs, that afternoon

After picking Haku up, Naruto and Hinata arrived at the Hot Springs. They noticed there were already more people there, a pretty large crowd. In fact, they were the last ones to arrive. Teams Gai, Kakashi, Shizune and Asuma. Kurenai was also there, presumably coming with her husband. The Hot Springs were going to be pretty crowded today.

"Hey there!" Naruto greeted the group, as he and his teammates walked closer. "Good to see that you managed to come!"

"We already told you that we would come, didn't we?" Neji asked. "It would be rude if we decided to just leave you hanging after that."

"Hey, Tenten!" Haku happily said, as he walked towards his girlfriend. She greeted him with a kiss. "I'm so glad you could come."

"Yeah, it feels like we haven't been together for months!" Tenten said, just as gleeful. "Though... wouldn't you melt if you go into the Hot Springs? The water is pretty hot."

"I think my ice can manage," Haku said with a chuckle. He found that joke a bit cringey, but decided to humor his girlfriend.

"Thanks a lot for this invitation, Naruto-kun!" Lee excitedly said. "However, now I must think of something to return such generosity! Too bad I can't think of anything yet."

"Eh, it's okay, Lee. It's my dad who-

"And if I can't think anything, I'll climb the Hokage monument with one hand with weights on my belt!" Lee declared, just as excited.

"Well done! There's nothing to stimulate the mind that intense exercise, Lee!" Gai told Lee in a congratulatory manner. Neji merely sighed, while Tenten shook her head.

"I have to agree with Lee on this one, Naruto," Shikamaru said. "Usually all the stuff you organize is about training and the like, but a relaxing day at the hot spring? Heh, that's something I can't miss."

"Yeah, it was a pretty good idea," Choji added, nodding. "By the way, Naruto, you told us that there was no limit to the size of the group, right?"

"Yeah, what about it?" Naruto asked.

"Well, I did ask Karui if she wanted to come," Choji replied.

"I asked the same to Temari," Shikamaru said. "She was so happy to hear that. With some luck, she may forgive all the misgivings from the past months."

" Oh, yes. I remember that those Kumo and Suna ninjas were in the village. Oh shit! I totally forgot to extend an invitation to Gaara! Maybe I can send a clone..." The blond distressingly thought. "Um, yeah," Naruto said, now having doubts about the size of the group. "As long as-"

"I also brought Shisui with me," Shizune chimed in. The blond noticed that the oldest Uchiha was indeed besides Naruto's surrogate sister, who smiled and waved at him happily. "We don't have much of a chance to do something like this together!"

"Yeah, it was such a nice detail on your part, Naruto!" Shisui added.

"I also brought Sai," Ino intervened, pulling the pale brunet closer to her.

"Ino thinks that such gathering will be good for both my rehabilitation and to train my social skills," Sai stated.

"Er, okay," Naruto said. "In that case, we should wait for the rest of the people that the others have told to come before going all in."

"I think we won't have to wait much," Hinata said.

Naruto turned around, and saw the trio of Kumo ninjas that had delivered the Raikage's message walking towards them. Naturally, the three of them looked way happier than they have been in the past days. A smile formed on Choji as he went to greet the girl he had a crush on.

"Oh man, hot springs! I can't wait to get to them! I have never been in one!" Omoi excitedly said.

"Same here," T added. "After all these stressful days, we are in desperate need of relaxation."

"Oh... Karui brought her teammates too," Naruto noticed, as he started to sweat a little. There was no way all of them could fit inside two hot springs alone.

"Naruto-kun," Hinata said, tapping his shoulder. He turned towards his girlfriend, who wordlessly pointed back.

Naruto turned around, and saw Gaara, Kankuro and Temari. Of course, it was obvious that Temari would ask her brothers to come with her. However, they weren't the only ones; walking besides them was another trio of Suna ninjas: Matsuri, Yukata and Mikoshi.

"Hey, look at that! It seems that everybody is here already," Kankuro observed, before he turned at his sister. "Told you you were spending way too much time getting ready!"

"Hey, I don't get many chances to go to a hot spring, so I wanted to make sure to have everything!" Temari angrily shot back.

As Kankuro and Temari continued to argue, Gaara walked towards Naruto.

"In Suna's name, thank you for your invitation, Naruto," Gaara told the blond in his usual stoic tone. "Once again, you're a credit to Konoha's hospitality."

"Yay, hot springs!" Yukata chimed in.

"Let's hope there are mixed baths..." Matsuri whispered, as she shot a look at Gaara, while blushing a little.

"Sure, you're helping us a lot, so this is the least we could have done for you!" Naruto said, laughing awkwardly. He sighed in relief inwardly. "Well, that solves one problem. At least I won't come off as rude for forgetting to invite him"

The blond then looked at the truly massive group that had formed at the entrance of the hot springs, all of them speaking with each other, the sound of their chattering combining into a cacophony of multiple conversations chaotically intermingled with each other.

"Let's get everybody inside before more people decide to show up," Naruto said.

There were three hot springs: one for men, another for women, and another mixed, the three of them sharing the same spring, separated by a divider made of bamboo. Naturally, most couples wanted to be in the mixed one in order to be with their significant other, but there was a problem: just like Naruto had predicted, there were too many of them and they wouldn't fit inside the mixed bath.

The owners of the springs, a couple in their early sixties, not wanting to lose such a large group, devised a solution: they removed the dividers and decided to made the springs into a single, mixed bath. This solution seemed to please everybody, who quickly rushed towards the changing room, so they could enjoy the hot baths.

...

Undisclosed Location

After a rather long trek, Kisame and Deidara finally reached their goal, much to their relief. Deidara was tired of walking and complained about his feet hurting -he wanted to use his clay constructs to just fly there, but Obito had told him that doing so would alert the enemy of their presence-, and was glad that they were done walking.

Kisame was tired of Deidara's constant complains, and was glad that he didn't have to hear the Iwa missing-nin's grouses. Still, the perspective of a good battle was enough to push the frustration he had built over the past few days away.

"So, this is the place," Deidara said, as he eyed the fortress cleverly built into the mountain, which could be easily missed unless you knew what were you looking for. Such a place would be hard to siege or break into, even with a large army. "That's it, if Zetsu's intel is correct."

"Our intel has always been good, Deidara-san," Kisame replied.
"There's no reason to doubt our spymaster."

"I dunno, it looks kind of small," Deidara said, eyeing the place with a critical eye. "Not the place I'll use a hideout."

"Appearances can be deceiving," Kisame observed. "The fortress could extend into the mountain, or even down below. Besides, if I needed to hide, I'd use a small place as not to draw attention."

"Whatever. So, what's the plan?" Deidara asked. "I think I should fly above the place, drop some of my art, force the son of a bitch out, then we crush him between the two of us. Simple, fast and effective."

"While I do agree with your plan, we should make sure there aren't any secret doors or escape routes he can use to evade us," Kisame told Deidara, as he gave him a mocking grin. "We don't want a repeat of what happened our last mission, do we?"

"You were there with me, you asshole! It was as much your fault as it was mine!" the blond heatedly protested.

"I know. That's why I said we should approach this mission with care," Kisame said, grinning at the Iwa missing-nin. "Why did you think I was talking about you alone?"

Deidara just huffed, and crossed his arms. Kisame ignored him, and watched the mountain the fortress was built on more closely.

"Thankfully this mountain isn't too big. Let's circle it while we look for any hidden exit," Kisame proposed. "I take the left, you take the right."

"Understood."

Both Akatsuki split for the time moment, as they prepared the terrain for their impending hunt.

...

Back in Konoha

Inside the hot springs, Naruto and Hinata were resting as the hot water nursed their bodies. The two of them were leaning against one of the walls of the stone, the water reaching to their shoulders. Hinata's head was resting on Naruto's shoulder.

"Ahhhh..." the Hyuga Clan head moaned. "This is so good... I don't know why we didn't do this anytime sooner. Don't you agree, Naruto-kun?"

"Indeed," Naruto said, so relaxed it almost sounded like a purr. "All my worries seem so far away..."

"This is perfect. You, me..."

"And literally dozens of people around us."

Because yes, even if the hot springs were pretty big now that the three pools had been merged into one, it was bursting with people, to the point that the water level had raised considerably. Fortunately, everybody else was quiet, as they also either relaxed, or merely talked with their friends or significant others.

"CANNONBALL!"

That's it, until Fu joined them, and bombed into the spring so hard, she created a large wave of hot water, splashing everybody around her. Fu happily emerged from the water, as several people started to telling her off.

"Goddamit Fu!"

"You can't do that in a hot spring!"

"This is not a kiddie pool!"

"Sheesh, I get it, I get it!" Fu replied, as she held her hands defensively. "You should try to chill out a bit, you know. You'll live longer."

Soon they quickly forgot about such small incident, and continued to relax, chatter and enjoy the warm and pleasant water. Kurenai was saying something to Asuma, who nodded, before the Genjutsu mistress waddled her way to where Naruto and Hinata were relaxing. She'd wish Haku wasn't so far away from the other two, but it would have to do for now.

"Hey, Naruto, Hinata," Kurenai called them.

"Hello, Kurenai-sensei," Hinata greeted back.

"So, enjoying the baths?" Naruto asked.

"Plenty. It was a very thoughtful gift, Naruto," Kurenai said with a smile. "Anyway, there's something I wanted to talk to you about, and I feel this is a good moment as good as any other."

"Let me guess: you're pregnant again!" Naruto said with a cheeky grin.

Kurenai clicked her tongue in annoyance, but decided to ignore the blond's guess. "Remember Yakumo Kurama? The girl I trained before I was your sensei, and thought she was dead?"

"Who wasn't dead and turned out to be a Root agent," Hinata finished, already imagining what was she going to ask. "What about her?"

Kurenai tensed up a little as she moved to the side. "Well..."

Turns out, Kurenai wasn't alone. Behind her was a girl with pale skin and shoulder-length brown hair. Like most women there, she had a towel wrapped around her body. She was visibly nervous and even a little uncomfortable.

"... this is her," Kurenai finished. "Yakumo, these are two of my new students, Naruto Uzumaki and Hinata Hyuga. Naruto, Hinata, meet Yakumo."

"Um... hi," Yakumo shyly said.

Naruto and Hinata spend a few long, tense moments staring at her, without saying anything. Until Hinata's natural born politeness won over, and returned the greeting.

"Hello, Yakumo-san. I hope you're having a nice time with us," Hinata said.

"Uh, sorry if I sound rude, but shouldn't she be in jail or something like that?" Naruto bluntly asked, raising an eyebrow.

Kurenai sighed in resignation. Even if the jinchuriki was indeed blunt to the point of being insensitive, he was raising a good point. She hoped they would be willing to give the last member of the Kurama clan another chance.

"Hokage-sama released the most mentally stable Root ex-agents under probation, living in foster homes. Yakumo is living with us in the Sarutobi Clan compound," Kurenai explained. "I thought that Yakumo being with more people her age would be good for her mental development. Sorry for not telling you about this before."

"It's okay, Kurenai-sensei. We understand," Hinata replied, before looking around. "However... there are far too many people here. Such a multitude might not be the best place for somebody in Yakumo's position," Hinata pointed out.

"I know, but I don't have that many options. You guys are my only hope," Kurenai said, in almost pleading tone. "Just like Yakumo was not given the option to refuse Danzo. She really needs friends her age, and I would consider it a huge favor if you agreed."

"Kurenai-sensei, please, I don't want to be a burden-" Yakumo began, but was interrupted by Hinata.

"Nobody considers you a burden, Yakumo-san," Hinata said, before turning her eyes towards the raven haired woman. "I know firsthand how much damage Danzo caused, and that most of his minions were also his victims. If by helping Yakumo-san I can help to undo some of that damage, I'm for it."

"I guess it would be very hypocritical of me to hold against somebody something that's out of their control," Naruto said. "So yeah, you can call me your friend if you wish so."

"I... thank you. Thank you a lot," Yakumo said, bowing her head multiple times.

"Again, I'm sorry for this," Kurenai insisted. "Thankfully, unlike most Root agents, Yakumo hasn't been that long in Root. Undoing Danzo's conditioning shouldn't take that much effort compared to other agents."

"Not that I liked working for him," Yakumo said, shaking her head. "Being a Root ninja was... it was... it was horrible," Yakumo said, sobbing a little.

"Don't worry, I think that the nightmare is already over..." Hinata said sympathetically and placed a comforting hand on the brown-haired girl's shoulder. "Danzo is gone, and he will never be coming back."

"And Konoha will be all the better for it," Kurenai said with a nod. "I'm going back to Asuma and the other adults. I'll leave Yakumo in your care. If you need anything from me, just call. Oh, and introduce her to Haku, will you?"

"Sure, you can leave her in our hands, Kurenai-sensei!" Naruto said with a grin, giving the raven haired woman a thumbs up.

Kurenai smiled and nodded, before turning around and going back where all the adults were gathering.

"So, Yakumo, right?" Naruto said, rubbing the back of his head.
"Sorry for saying that you should be in jail."

"Don't be. I did quite a lot of awful things while working under Danzo. Including helping him escape the first time," the brunette said. She was about to say that she was also instrumental in the Rinnegan theft, which ended up in Akatsuki's hands, but decided against it. At least, for the time being. "A few days ago, we were enemies."

"We weren't enemies because of your choice," Naruto said. "And now we have the chance to choose to be your friends," Naruto said, nodding, before making a grimace. "Okay, I think that sounded a little too cheesy..."

Hinata giggled. "Cheesy or not, I think it was the right thing to say, Naruto-kun."

"It would be nice to have some friends," Yakumo softly said.

"I'm guessing that Danzo didn't allow you to grow attached to any of your fellow agents, did he?" Naruto assumed. "With that guy's stance on 'a ninja should be an emotionless drone'."

"No. He was adamant that there was nothing more important than the mission," Yakumo replied. "And if we had to choose between the mission and the lives of our partners, we couldn't hesitate to choose the former."

"How horrible," Hinata said, scowling a little.

"And it wasn't just that," Yakumo continued. "Everything has to be secondary to the mission, including our own lives. Though thankfully, I was never in a situation that demanded my life. I don't think I'd be able to do it."

"Guess that, since you're the last bearer of a powerful Bloodline Limit, he considered you less expendable than the rest of his goons," Hinata deduced.

"By the way, Yakumo," Naruto interceded. "Do you think that Danzo would have liked seeing you like this? Having fun on a hot springs while chatting with us?"

This made the brown haired girl laugh a little. "Kami, no! We were banned from taking such activities, that he considered 'wasteful'. If we had no missions, we had to train all the time. Danzo would be fuming if we decided to do something purely for our pleasure."

"In that case, think that Danzo is watching you from wherever hellish afterlife he's now, and is completely impotent to do anything about it," Naruto told the brunette with a grin.

"Heh..." she chuckled again. "That's something I'd like to see."

"By the way, Yakumo-san," this time, it was Hinata's turn to intercede. "Kurenai-sensei told us about you. Though she didn't mention other students. How is that you didn't have any teammates? It's custom for rookie ninjas to have teams of three."

"Technically I wasn't a ninja yet. Due my medical condition, I couldn't afford to go to the Academy," Yakumo explained. "Hence why they had Kurenai-sensei teach me how to control my powers while Tsunade-sama worked on a treatment. I guess that, once I had graduated the Academy, I would be assigned to a traditional four man team. Speaking of which... where is your other teammate? Kurenai-sensei told me she was training three people."

"Ah, yes, Haku! He's probably locking lips with Tenten," Naruto said, as he looked around, trying to discern his other teammate among the crowd.

However, Hinata beat him to the punch thanks to her Tenseigan. "Found him. And your prediction was a correct one, Naruto-kun."

"I knew it," Naruto said, shaking his head, but grinning a little. "Come on Yakumo! You need to meet Haku!"

"This Haku guy... what kind of person is he?" Yakumo asked.,

"Well, you can say that he is..." Naruto began, trying to look for the most suitable words to describe his teammate. His lips formed a grin when he found them. "... a pretty cool guy."

Hinata merely rolled her eyes.

...

"You know, it's kinda weird seeing you guys like that," Shikamaru said.

Rather than his team, Shikamaru chose to take a spot near the Suna ninjas, clearly to be near his girlfriend. Speaking of which, Temari's hair was no longer styled in four ponytails, but let it fall loose on her back, revealing it to be deceptively long.

"I'm so used seeing you with your ponytails that you almost look like a different person," Shikamaru continued, before his eyes drifted towards Kankuro, who was obviously not wearing any face paint on his face nor a black hood over his head. "And that goes double to you."

"Look who's talking," Kankuro said, with an eye roll. "Guess that your hair isn't permanently stuck in the shape of pineapple after all."

Kankuro's comment made Temari giggle and Shikamaru to scowl a little. Just like Temari, Shikamaru wasn't wearing his hair in a ponytail either, letting it loose.

"Yeah, but in my case the contrast isn't so big," Shikamaru tried to defend himself, though he decided it was probably better to change the topic before his girlfriend and her brother took offense. "Anyway, are you enjoying the baths? I don't think there are any in Suna or the Land of Wind."

"Nope!" it wasn't Kankuro nor Temari who replied, but Matsuri, who was sitting between Gaara and Yukata. "And I'm so glad you guys invited us to this place! Like, we came here on a mission, but being allowed into a hot spring during it... it's so cool!"

"But... water in a hot spring is hot, not cool," Yukata chimed in, looked a bit confused. "I mean, it's like, in the name."

"It was a figure of speech, Yukata-chan," Matsuri replied, sounding a little tired. "We already went through this before."

"We did? Oh, right, yes!" Yukata said, smiling and nodding. "By the way, how many times can we go here?"

"We came here to help Konoha rebuild, Yukata," Gaara called out. "Not to relax. This is a gesture of their gratitude, not something to be done every day."

"Though you can come here every day if you want," Shikamaru added. "Though don't expect to pay as little as you did today. We managed to get such a huge discount thanks to a coupon Naruto had."

"I didn't bring that much money," Yukata said, before an idea dawned upon her. "Oh, I know! Gaara-sama, can we get the hot spring's price discounted from our mission revenue?"

"Like I said before, this is a mission to help an ally village. None of us are getting paid for this," Gaara said.

"We don't!?" Yukata replied, outraged. "Aw, shucks."

"If it makes you feel any better, think that this stay at the hot springs is Konoha's way of repaying us," Gaara told her.

"I'd like to be paid in hot spring tickets rather than money," Yukata said. "It feels nicer."

"Or you can spend the money you earn on missions on hot springs if you wish?" Shikamaru suggested.

"That works too!" Yukata happily agreed.

Shikamaru grimaced, and looked at his girlfriend. "Is this girl for real?" he whispered to her.

Temari sighed and nodded. "She can be kind of... absent minded. But she's a brave and a sweet girl."

"Regardless of her other qualities, I don't think I could stand being near somebody so lacking in the brain department," Shikamaru said in a disapproving tone. "I don't think my sanity could hold for long."

"She isn't so bad once you get used to her," Temari said with a shrug, as she shifted on her seat. "It takes some time, though."

"Hey," Shikamaru said, as she grabbed one of Temari's biceps. "It's my imagination, or did these get even bigger?"

"Why yes, Shikamaru, I've been training a lot, thanks for your compliment," Temari said in an overly sarcastic tone, as she narrowed her eyes dangerously at the Nara.

"Hey, I didn't mean to disparage you," Shikamaru said, holding his hands in defense. "I was simply surprised. It was just a harmless comment. I'm not used to seeing you without clothes, you know. You have a very fit body."

"Maybe not fit enough. After my loss against Akatsuki and Gaara almost dying, we decided to redouble our training. Being so close to death really opens your eyes." Temari told him. She shifted her position again, subtly inching closer to her boyfriend. "What about you? Aren't you training either?"

"Well, as you can see, right now I'm kind of busy picking up the pieces of our wrecked village," Shikamaru dryly said. "But yeah, I am. Asuma-sensei says that we're ready for a promotion, and both my teammates and I are getting ready for it."

Temari smiled, pleased, and nodded. "Good. You have a lot of talent, Shikamaru, and it would be a pity if you decided to waste it by staying a rank unbecoming to you just because it's too 'troublesome'."

"Hey, I don't say that that often, do I?" Shikamaru protested. "I'm trying to complain less about hard work."

"That's good," Temari said with a grin. "Otherwise, you and I wouldn't last much longer together."

"Though I hope you don't mind if I don't end up as jacked up as you are," Shikamaru said, now his turn to grin.

Temari scowled at him, and slapped his shoulder, while splashing some water. "Oh come on! I'm not THAT jacked up!"

"I thought you'd be happy I have no complex about dating a woman stronger than I am," Shikamaru added, his grin still present.

"People as nonchalant as you rarely have any complex about anything," Temari replied. "Besides, as much as I train, I don't think I'll ever will -or want- to end up as big as her."

Temari pointed to another group near them, and Shikamaru immediately realized who she was pointing out. Fu was talking happily with the Animal Squad, and now that he had set his eyes on her, he realized how muscular the girl was. Temari could be considered skinny by comparison.

"Man, look at that broad back," Shikamaru said. "I didn't even know that we had so many muscles there."

"I feel sorry for Shino if that girl feels like playing rough in the bed," Temari sympathetically said. "Though I'd prefer if your eyes were only on my body, you know. You won't have a chance like this in some time, so you better take your chance."

Shikamaru smiled. "If you put it that way, how can I say no?"

Meanwhile near Shikamaru and Temari, the Chunin of Kakashi's Animal Squad were rather pissed that something they planned didn't go as expected. They had thought that being at a hot spring would force their sensei to take their mask off but apparently not...

"I can't believe it!" Kiba protested, throwing his hands in the air, making a splash once they came down. "We're at a hot springs, and the asshole still keeps his mask on!"

They were all expectantly waiting for Kakashi to appear unmasked when they heard he was also going to go to the hot springs. But even if he wasn't wearing anything under his neck, the mask remained firmly in place.

"The guy must be suffocating with all this steam," Tamaki said, narrowing her eyes at her sensei.

"He doesn't look like he's suffocating to me," Shino replied, also looking at Kakashi. "Maybe is easier to breathe through that mask than it appears at first sight."

"And what about you?" Kiba asked, as he moved closer towards Shino. "Why are you still wearing those shades?"

"I like wearing them, even in a place like this. Is that a problem to you?" Shino defiantly answered.

"Come on, leave Shino alone," Fu interceded, as she adjusted the towel wrapped around her body. "A man must have some mystery. That makes them more attractive to us," Fu said, as she placed an arm around Shino's shoulders, pulling the Aburame slightly closer to her.

"In Kakashi's case, I don't think it's working, or if that's his intention," Tamaki noted. "I don't think I ever saw Kakashi-sensei with a woman, ever."

"Or a man," Kiba added. "Though he and Guy-sensei tend to hang out a lot..."

"Correction: Guy-sensei is the one who hounds Kakashi-sensei," Tamaki observed.

"Going back to the original topic," Shino interceded, clearly not wanting to discuss his sensei's possible sexuality. "There's somebody who may solve the issue regarding what does Kakashi hides behind his mask," the Aburame heir said, as he nodded towards a girl coming from the female locker room: Rin Nohara. The brown haired girl noticed the trio, and quickly moved towards them.

"Hey guys!" Rin happily greeted them, as she entered the water. "Wow, the water is just perfect! So warm! It was really nice of Naruto to invite us here, wasn't it?"

"Rin, you've known Kakashi since you were a little kid," Kiba impatiently said, ignoring the medic-nin's greeting. "Can you tell us what's under his mask?"

"Huh?" Rin dumbly asked, before her brain actually processed the question. She smiled awkwardly. "Uh... I'm afraid I have no idea."

"WHAT!?" Kiba shouted, startling the medic-nin a little.

"You're telling us that Kakashi-sensei wore that mask since he was five?" Tamaki asked, just as skeptical.

"Pretty much, yeah," Rin said. "There were many people, including Obito and I, who wanted to know what does he look under that mask. None of us succeeded. Whatever secret Kakashi is hiding, he guards it with zeal."

"Maybe a scar, or a birth deformity?" Kiba guessed. "Because I can't think why he's so averse to show his face."

"Maybe he does to create an aura of mystery around him? I admit that's something that I found attractive of him," Rin confessed.

"Heh, that's exactly what Fu said," Tamaki said, turning towards her Takigakure friend. However, the green haired girl wasn't there anymore. "Fu...?"

"Coming~!" Fu chirped, as she forded her way back to the group. However, they noticed that she wasn't alone, as a certain silver haired man followed her.

"Kakashi-sensei?" Tamaki asked.

"Why did you bring him?" Kiba asked.

"Well, Fu told me that you were talking about me, so I thought it would be fitting if I was part of your little chat, given that I'm the topic," Kakashi nonchalantly said, giving them his usual eye-smile. "More specifically, why I hide my face under a mask all the time."

"So I asked him if he could come and show us his face," Fu helpfully added. "And he said yes!"

"Wait... that's it? That's what it takes? Just asking him to unmask?" Kiba asked, his disbelief growing with each passing second-

"There are many people who have tried to see what's underneath my mask. They employed all sorts of ambushes, traps and schemes," Kakashi began, as his visible eye rested on Rin, who laughed awkwardly as a faint blush colored her face. "Though for some reason, nobody ever thought about asking. Until Fu, that's it. Anyway here you go."

Everybody held their breath as Kakashi removed his mask to reveal... an admittedly good looking but still mundane face. The Jonin smiled in amusement to their disappointment. No birth deformities or hideous scars crossing his face. He had a strong jawline, and a mouth full of pearly white teeth. The closest thing to a facial defect would be a small dot under the left corner of his mouth.

"So, what's with those reactions?" Kakashi asked, using an irritatingly jovial tone that bordered on mocking. "You wanted to see my face, and now you're seeing it."

"But... you're completely normal!" Kiba protested.

"I think I'll take that as a compliment," Kakashi said, before pulling his mask up to his nose once again. "What did you expect to see?"

"Something worth hiding!" Tamaki shouted, as she punched the water with both fists in exasperation, splashing some hot water around. "If you hide your face with such zeal, it has to be because of something meaningful."

"And didn't you think that maybe I wear a mask because I just like it?" Kakashi asked.

"While it's a possibility, any line of logic would say that somebody who wears all the time tries to hide something," Shino intervened.

"If you weren't hiding something, then why is that whenever somebody tries to unmask you, you resisted so much?" Kiba asked.

"If somebody sneaked up on you from behind and tried to pull your pants down, would you let him? Or would you fight him?" Kakashi replied with another question.

"That's not the same thing!" the Inuzuka protested.

"I can't see how they aren't," Kakashi said with a shrug, before turning around, and moving back with the other adults. "If that's everything, I'll leave you guys alone."

The members of the Animal Squad, Rin and Fu shared a moment of very awkward silence, until the Wood Release user opened her mouth.

"So many years wondering what was under Kakashi's face, and all I had to do was ask," Rin said, mostly to herself. She then looked at everybody else. "Do you guys feel stupid, or it's just me?"

"Nope, I don't feel stupid!" Fu brightly replied.

"And in the end, he turned out to look perfectly normal," Kiba added, sighing a little.

You call that normal? Boy, your sensei looks really hot. I don't know why he hides such a handsome face behind that mask all the time," Fu commented before pulling Shino closer to herself. "Of course, he's still nowhere near as cute as my Shino, that's for sure!"

"Sometimes I feel that Kakashi only does the things he does to mess with people," Tamaki reflected. "Because that's how I'm feeling right now."

Everybody, both teens and adults, continued talking and having fun at the hot springs. They would remember that day as one of relaxation and enjoyment, not only because of the good time everybody got, but because it would be the last time they would be able to experience such pleasure for the foreseeable future.

...

Land of Iron, a few days later

After a week of travel, Jiraiya, Tsunade and Itachi managed to reach the capital of the Land of Iron. There were still a few days until the summit began, and Jiraiya wanted to use that time to discuss with his two escorts possible strategies and topics to broach in what was going to be a five way discussion. Hopefully, he could convince Kumo and Iwa to join Konoha, Kiri and Suna into an unified front against Akatsuki.

The trio of Konoha ninjas crossed the snow covered city until they reached the Three Wolves Mountain. Inside said mountain was the Iron Fortress, seat of power of the Samurai, from where the High Shogun ruled the small but powerful country.

The entrance hall of the Iron Fortress was a huge, cavernous instance, so wide and long an entire army could fill it, and the roof so high it one needed to crank their neck to see it. Said roof was supported by massive pillars, evenly spread around the place. Despite being so big, it was also empty and scarce, with only torches on the walls providing some illumination.

There were several groups of samurai guarding the place. Most of them wearing white full body armors with gas masks that completely hid their faces. Other samurai wore red, bulkier armors, probably to show their higher rank. One of these red-armored samurai, flanked by two regular ones, walked towards the newcomers.

"Hello, and welcome to the Land of Iron, ninjas of Konoha," the samurai officer greeted the Hokage and his escorts, making a polite bow. "You're the first to arrive. Though I must say we weren't expecting any of you to arrive so soon."

"I hope my early arrival is not a problem," Jiraiya said.

"Not in the slightest. We already prepared all the guest rooms ahead of time precisely if something like this happened," the samurai explained. "While we don't mind you being early, you're going to have to wait some days until the others come. Hopefully you'll have a way to pass the time until the summit begins."

"We do have, don't worry," Jiraiya told him. "Now, if you can show us where are we going to stay, we'd appreciate it. It has been a long journey and my escorts and I would wish to rest."

"Sure," the samurai said as he and his two subordinates turned around and started to walk away, the Konoha ninjas following them. "We prepared two rooms, one for you and another for your escorts. We hope you find them to your liking."

"If it's possible, I'd prefer if one of my escorts shared a room with me," Jiraiya said, as he and Tsunade briefly exchanged a look. "I hope that's not a problem."

"Of course, it can be arranged," the samurai said.

The next days would indeed be boring, though Jiraiya and Tsunade knew how to use all that time to their enjoyment.

Author's Note: I hope you enjoyed the hot springs chapter. Despite all the people that ended showing up, I was unable to come up with something for all of them to do or talk about, so in the end could only focus on a few groups.

Those of you worried about Yakumo Kurama, I hope that this chapter put your worries to rest. As you can see, she's doing pretty good under Kurenai's tutelage, and she befriended Naruto and Hinata. She still has a long way to go until all Danzo's negative influence is washing away, but hey, it's a good beginning for her, don't you think so?

Also, regarding Kakashi's mask... I saw a couple episodes where Naruto and co. tried to remove his mask to see what his face looks like. However, I don't remember anybody in those episodes simply asking Kakashi to do so. Guess that wacky shenenigans are funnier than taking a reasonable course of action. And of course, Fu was the one behind such genius concept. It's only natural that the most simple minded people are the ones coming up with the simplest solutions.

Though, not everything in this chapter is fun and relaxation: as you can see, Kisame and Deidara are on the hunt once again.

Did they locate Killer B already? You'll see soon enough.

And lastly, as you could see, Jiraiya, Tsunade and Itachi had finally arrived to the Land of Iron. Yep, what you guys have been waiting for is going to happen, the Five Kage Summit! Are you as excited as I am?

Well, that's all, see you next year! Merry Christmas and Happy New Year to all my beloved readers! I hoped you liked this little Christmas Present. You can give me a present as well by reviewing this chapter! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Five Kage Summit

Auhtor's Note. Heya everyone, I hope you had a great start to the new year and the new decade! I started it by catching a fucking cold and spending several days bedridden, so I hope yours was at least relatively better. Here's the first chapter of 2020, about something you guys have been dying to see for quite some time. Enjoy:

Chapter 93:

The Five Kage Summit

or

International Politics, abridged

Land of Iron, Hokage's Quarters

"It seems that we didn't think this through," Jiraiya said.

Jiraiya had no delusions about the kind of room the samurai had prepared for him. While it was custom for somebody as important as a Kage to be given a comfortable guest room, the Sannin was aware of the kind of lifestyle the samurai led, and thus he was already expecting a rather austere room. Said room was small and narrow, with only a single bed, a small nightstand besides it with an oil lamp, and a wooden wardrobe.

Still, despite years of being used to their comfort of their fancy house, Jiraiya and Tsunade were more than capable of handling some austerity. However, there was a problem that they didn't account for when they requested a single room.

"Well, with this cold, we were going to sleep very close to one another," Tsunade added.

The bed they were sharing was individual, meaning that they had to squeeze themselves into it. And given that Jiraiya was tall and broad shouldered, he sometimes unwillingly threatened to push the shorter and smaller Tsunade out of the bed.

"At first I thought that we could take this as some sort of vacation," Tsunade began. "But I can't wait until this is over and we go back home. I miss our king size bed and Konoha's warm temperatures."

"Then I must be making a lousy job keeping you warm, aren't I?" Jiraiya asked, half jokingly. "But jokes apart, I do agree. I can't understand how so many people are willing to live in such a land."

"Something about living in a harsh place being good to build character, or some other nonsense," Tsunade said, rolling her eyes. The two of them fell into a short, comfortable silence, before Tsunade spoke again, though to change the topic. "So, how are you feeling? You know, at the prospect of having to deal with the other Kages."

"I'd lie if I said that I'm one hundred percent confident," Jiraiya admitted. "Though the fact that two of the other four Kages are already on my side is a good thing. Otherwise this would be much harder."

"Just remember what we've been preparing these past days, and you'll do it fine," Tsunade said, before giving Jiraiya a kiss in the lips. "Besides, the escorts are allowed into the meeting, even if we aren't allowed to intervene in the discussion. I'll be there with you all the time."

"What would I do without you, Hime," Jiraiya said, kissing her again.

"Drink, whore, and overall, lead a destructive and aimless lifestyle?" Tsunade asked.

"Ouch," Jiraiya grimaced. "You don't pull your punches, do you?"

"Never," she said with a cheeky grin. "Though I'm not one to talk, to be honest."

Their conversation was interrupted when somebody knocked the door.

"Hokage-sama, Tsunade-sama, are you presentable?" Itachi's voice asked from the other side of the thick wooden door. He sounded like he had urgent news.

"Come in!" Tsunade said.

Itachi opened the door, and entered the room while averting his gaze. However, once he saw both the Sannin were covered, he dared to look at them. While the two Sannin usually slept in the nude, the unmercifully cold climate from the Land of Iron beat such idea out of their minds, and had to keep some of their clothes when they went to bed, on top of several layers of thick blankets.

"Something wrong, Itachi?" Jiraiya said, as both he and Tsunade pushed the blankets away and got out of the bed.

After being thankful for the Sannin also wearing something from the waist down, he nodded. "The last of the Kages has finally arrived. The samurai decided that now that we're all here, the summit can begin."

"Understood. No time to waste then," Jiraiya said, as he and Tsunade began to dress as quickly as possible.

Once they ready, they exited the room, where a group of samurai were already waiting for them. The samurai lead the trio to the meeting room. On their way, they were joined by the rest of the Kages and their escorts beign led by a group of samurai each. They saw the Raikage, accompanied by his two most trusted men Darui and C, like other occassions; Rasa brought with him Baki and Maki as well. Mei Terumi, whom was no longer sporting a pregnant belly, decided to bring Zabuza and Ameyuri this time. The Tsuchikage was escorted by a tall, portly man with a round face and a big nose, and a woman with shoulder length brown hair, with a single lock falling over a disproportionately large forehead.

"Odd," Tsunade whispered, as she looked at the Tsuchikage, whose face was hidden by their hat. "That doesn't appear to be Onoki."

After a rather long walk, they reached the meeting room: an open, spacious place with high roofs -it seemed the samurai favored them for some reason-, decorated with banners displaying the kanji of the elements of the nations the Kages served. There were two tables, a small one where a wizened, unarmored samurai with a long gray moustache, a long gray goatee, and bandaged head was sitting, flanked by other two unarmored samurai, the two of them with scars running down their faces. In front of him there was a much bigger table shaped like a horseshoe, presumably where the Kages would sit. Around the table there were five benches.

"Hello, Kages of the elemental nations," the samurai began. "Please take a seat. Your bodyguards can rest in the benches."

Jiraiya traded quick glances with Mei and Rasa, which both nodded. Jiraiya quickly sat at the center of the table, with Mei sitting to his right and Rasa to his left, forcing the Raikage and Tsuchikage to sit at the extremes of the table, meaning that they were not only isolated, but they were separated from each other as well, making them join forces against the other three all the more unlikely.

"My name is Mifune, High Shogun of the Land of Iron, and I shall be the moderator of this meeting," the samurai of the bandaged head, Mifune, introduced himself. "Please, remove your hats and place them on the table."

The Kages did as they were told, and as many people has suspected, the Tsuchikage wasn't Onoki, but a young girl no older than eighteen, with short black hair and black eyes, giving her an odd resemblance to Shizune. Rasa was the first one to comment this.

"Ohoho, look at that. It seems that the Fence Sitter finally decided to retire and pass the hat to somebody else," Rasa commented in his usual snubbish tone. "About time, somebody old enough to remember the First Ninja War isn't suited to rule during modern times."

"Watch out your tongue, Kazekage," the young girl snapped. "I won't tolerate anybody disrespect my grandpa, no matter if it's a Kage or not!"

"Now, now, let's try not to start a heated argument so soon," Mei intervened, trying to calm the Tsuchikage down.

"Nobody asked you to intervene, Mizukage," the Tsuchikage said, glaring at Mei. "Oh, and tell your mother she's still wanted for defecting Iwa."

Mei puckered her lips, pretending to be hurt. "Are you still angry about that? My, my, it's true what they said about Iwa and grudges. Plus, that's not a way to treat your family, is it? We're practically sisters, Kurotsuchi."

The Tsuchikage, Kurotsuchi, narrowed her eyes at the Mizukage. "Second cousins. And even if the blood of the Kinryu Clan may run through our veins, that doesn't make us family."

"You have no idea how much you're breaking my heart," Mei said in a mocking tone. "I always wanted to have a little sister."

In the benches, Tsunade was carefully following the conversation. She was enjoying the revelation of the Tsuchikage and Meizukage being related, reminding her of the usual twists of her soap operas, but she was a bit lost.

"Itachi," Tsunade whispered, leaning close to him. "How are those two related? And why is Mei's mother wanted in Iwa?"

"From what I had gathered, both Mei and Kurotsuchi's respective mothers are cousins belonging to the same clan, the Kinryu. The Kinryu Clan members possess the Lava Release, and they're one of Iwa's three most important clans," Itachi started to explain.

"However, it seems that, while most clans, especially those with Bloodline Limits, tend to be watchful over their members' relationships in order to protect their secrets, the Kinryu... well, to put it lightly, they have a hard time keeping it inside their pants."

Tsunade chortled, covering her mouth with one hand. This was getting better and better. "Really?"

"Yes. They do have a very liberal view towards sex and relationships, plus they tend to fall in love easily. The Tsuchikage and Earth Lord were willing to allow this, as long as they only married people native to the Land of Earth."

"And Mei's mother fell in love with somebody from Kiri, right?"
Tsunade guessed.

"Exactly. It was during the Second Ninja War. Mei's mother defected Iwa and returned to Kiri with her lover, whom she married shortly afterwards," Itachi continued explaining. "As you can imagine, the Terumi Clan was more than happy to welcome her among their ranks. The potential of a generation of ninjas with two Bloodline Limits... it was like a gift from the gods. Even if in the end, only Mei manifested both Bloodlimits."

"No wonder that Kurotsuchi girl isn't that happy to see Mei. Her very existence is a reminder of how Kiri successfully stole a Bloodline Limit," Tsunade stated. Her eyes then moved towards the two Iwa Jonin, who appeared to be ready to fight at any moment. "What can you tell me about those two? Should we worry about them?"

"The big man is Akatsuchi, one of Iwa's top Jonin. No Bloodline Limit, but one of the best Earth Release users there is, if the Bingo Book is to be believed," Itachi explained. "The woman is Suzumebachi Kamizuru, leader of what's left of the Kamizuru Clan, a clan that uses bees as weapons in a similar fashion to the Aburame's beetles. Though don't tell them I said that, since both clans hate each other to death.

"The Kamizuru clan used to be one of Iwa's three most important clans, but they lost most of their members during the past two wars, as well as most of their secret jutsu. Both she and her two younger brothers were away from Iwa looking for something, some kind of lost family treasure that would return the clan back to its glory days. Given her presence here, I'd say they succeeded."

"Did you know that Onoki had retired, and put that girl in his place?" Tsunade asked.

Itachi shook his head. "Hokage-sama had me watch Akatsuki's movements, so I didn't have the time nor the chance to see how the other villages were doing."

"It seems that she's his granddaughter, according to her," Tsunade mentioned.

"Granddaughter or not, she has to be a formidable kunoichi if she was deemed worthy of the Tsuchikage's hat," Itachi replied.

Before things could escalate even further between the two female Kage, Mifune decided to intervene and put some order.

"I'd appreciate if you solved your personal quarrels once we're done with this meeting," Mifune interrupted the two bickering female Kages. "Raikage-sama has convened this Kage Summit to discuss a matter of utmost importance," Mifune said. The Raikage nodded and grunted something inaudible, inwardly thanking the samurai for bringing the discussion back on track. "Raikage-sama, given that it was you who summoned the Five Kage, you may speak first."

"Thank you, Mifune-san," the Raikage said, as he stood up from his chair. "During the past few years, a mercenary group called Akatsuki made itself known. While at first they appeared to be yet another mercenary group with excessively low prices in order to compete with our villages, it later became apparent that they had some sort of agenda: the kidnapping of the nine jinchuriki for some nefarious purposes.

"A few months ago, the jinchuriki of the Two Tails, Yugito Nii, was abducted by two Akatsuki identified as Obito Uchiha and Kisame Hoshigaki," the Raikage's tone became harsher when he named the two kidnappers, glancing briefly at the Hokage and Mizukage. "And a few weeks ago, the jinchuriki of the Eight Tails, my own brother Killer B was attacked and abducted. The perpetrators of such attack were once again Kisame, though his accomplice was an Iwa ninja named Deidara," this time, the Raikage glared at Kurotsuchi.

"And what do you expect us to do? Rescue them? Help you deliver swift retribution to the Akatsuki?" Kurotsuchi began, earning a scowl from the Raikage. "Jinchuriki are the responsibility of the village they belong to. To ask other villages to help your problems is really embarrassing."

"If that's the case, you didn't do a good job keeping yours," Jiraiya intervened, shooting a sharp look at Kurotsuchi. "Not only both of your jinchuriki were abducted with you being none the wiser, but when we asked for your help in order to secure the jinchuriki of the Four Tails, Roshi, we got no response."

"And how could we know you were honest, and it wasn't some sort of trap?" Kurotsuchi asked. "Konoha and Iwa aren't allies. We have no responsibility towards you people. What about your allies Suna and Kiri? Didn't you ask them for help?"

"Kiri has been active in the operation to gather the jinchuriki, as so was Suna," Mei intervened. "Though I'm afraid that our results haven't been that good."

Kurotsuchi snorted. "So much for your alliance."

"At least we've been trying to do something!" Rasa exploded, hastily standing up from his chair as well. Kurtosuchi's bodyguards quickly leaped and jumped into the table, standing protectively in front of their Kage. This prompted the rest of the bodyguards to leap into action as well, jumping in front of their respective Kages, some with their weapons drawn, and others with their hands already interlocked to for hand seals.

"Enough!" Mifune shouted. "There won't be any fighting as long as you are our guests. Now please sit down, and return to your seats."

The ninja didn't listen to Mifune, and remained there. But after a few seconds, the Kage told their respective bodyguards to stand down and return to their benches.

"Now that's better," Mifune said, before turning at Rasa. "Now, Kazekage-sama, I believe there was something you wanted to say?"

"Yes. My youngest son is a jinchuriki. He became one before he was even born by my order," the Kazekage began. "We used to keep our Tailed Beast sealed inside a teapot, but Suna was going through hard times, and I thought that a jinchuriki would help us recover. For quite some time, I treated Gaara as nothing but a weapon, and it wasn't until I nearly lost him when I realize how awful of a father I've been.

"And from what I could learn, other jinchuriki got similar treatments too. Expected to be loyal to the village and die for it, but were given little incentive to stay loyal. Hence why many of them abandoned their homes and became vagrants. This made Akatsuki's job all the easier."

"Don't lump Kumo with your lot, Kazekage," the Raikage growled. "Kumo has always treated their jinchuriki with the same respect as any other of our ninjas. In all of Kumo's history, not single jinchuriki has ever thought about betraying the village!"

"Let me repeat my question: what do you expect us to do?"
Kurotsuchi asked. "Iwa doesn't have any responsibility towards-"

"IT DOES!" The Raikage roared, as he brought his fist down the table, opening a hole on it. Even if the bodyguards didn't leap into action, they did get ready in case a fight broke out. "Didn't you hear about the part that one of your ninjas kidnapped my brother!?"

"Deidara is a missing-nin. Whatever he did, he wasn't acting in Iwa's name," Kurotsuchi defensively said.

"Akatsuki is composed of missing-nin from all of your villages," the Raikage said, pointing an accustory finger at the other Kages. "And not just that, but I know that some of you hired their services!"

Rasa seemed to sigh, and cast his gaze down. Kurotsuchi, however, frowned at the larger man.

"Hey, I have no idea of what are you talking about," Kurotsuchi said. "So you better stop making those-"

"You don't? Maybe you should ask your grandfather," the Raikage interrupted. He then turned at the Mizukage. "And we also know that your predecessor, Yagura, was being manipulated by Akatsuki as well!" then, he looked at Jiraiya. "And a Konoha ninja is one of the organization's leaders! All of you have a responsibility regarding Akatsuki! You created this monster that took my brother away!" the Raikage roared.

"Konoha has been dealing with the Akatsuki threat for years, Raikage," Jiraiya told him, sounding exasperated. "We even helped you deal with Obito and his pet Nine Tails when they attacked one of your outposts and a town of the Land of Lightning. Yet, despite the fact that your ninjas saw with their own eyes the level of threat Akatsuki possess, you still refused to do anything other than hiding your brother away."

"Don't go boasting about what your village has done, Hokage! What have you accomplished?" the Raikage fired back, his rage not only unabated, but growing. "Akatsuki possess seven and a half of the Tailed Beasts! I'd say you've been doing a pretty lousy job, if the results are anything to go by!"

"The Akatsuki threat is too big for a single village to handle," Mei interceded. "Just like how Akatsuki had our previous Mizukage under their control, who can't say that something similar happened in your villages?"

"Are you implying that my granpa was also in their grasp!?" Kurotsuchi asked, outraged. "Maybe he is old, but he is no senile fool!"

"Not necessarily that," this time, it was Rasa who spoke. "After my son was abducted by the Akatsuki, I ordered my ANBU to search the village for spies. Turn out they found many moles among our ranks working for Akatsuki. And not just low ranked mooks, but actual Jonin with an impeccable record, that I would have pegged as completely loyal to the village and trust them blindly. The hand of Akatsuki is big and their reach is long.

"Ask this yourself, Raikage: how did Akatsuki find where your brother was being hidden so quickly and easily, if they didn't have spies among your ninja?"

The Raikage gritted his teeth and snarled in anger. He wanted to answer to that so badly, but was unable to. What the Kazekage said made too much sense to dismiss like that. The Raikage always prided in his village's strength, but maybe that pride blinded him to threats he had considered beneath him.

"To answer your previous question, Raikage, Konoha has eliminated several Akatsuki members," Jiraiya began. "Sasori of the Red Sands was killed by a squad composed of both Konoha and Suna ninjas after the Kazekage's son's kidnapping; Hidan and Kakuzu were defeated while we helped the Takigakure ninjas reclaim their village, Kakuzu being killed by the very jinchuriki he was trying to abduct, while we managed to neutralize and capture Hidan. And lastly, Pain, the leader of the Akatsuki, died while trying to capture the jinchuriki of the Nine Tails, and his partner, Konan, surrendered to Konoha shortly afterwards."

"Not that it matter, given the amount of Tailed Beasts the Akatsuki had gathered," the Raikage growled. "Seven and a half Tailed beasts in exchange of a few members is quite the trade-off."

"If I'm allowed to give my opinion, I believe there are some pieces of information that are missing," Mifune began, drawing the attention of the five Kages. "Akatsuki seems to be collecting the Tailed Beasts. But what we must ask ourselves is, for what purpose? The Beasts have to be the means to their endgame."

"It isn't obvious? They want the Beasts to rule supreme over the Elemental Nations," the Raikage said.

"If that was the case, they would have launched an offensive already," Mei countered. "Seven Tailed Beasts is more than enough to put a whole country to its knees."

"The Raikage is right," Jiraiya said, much to the other's surprise. "However, the sheer scope of their plans is something that escapes him."

"Enlighten us, then," Kurotsuchi said. "I'm sure there's something you're hiding from us, Hokage."

"There is. The Mizukage and the Kazekage know an abridged version, but this is the whole story. Sometime ago, we had a mostly odd mission request to escort a priestess to the Land of Tea. Said priestess specifically requested Hinata Hyuga to be part of the squad assigned to her," Jiraiya began. "Of course, I already knew that there was something more going on involving her..."

Jiraiya told the others about their encounter with the Moon Acolytes, and everything they learned from them: the Sage of the Six Paths and his brother; the Ten Tails, and how it was split into the nine Tailed Beasts, the Rinnegan and the Tenseigan, how the Akatsuki leader possessed the former, while Hinata and Hanabi awakened the latter. And lastly, Akatsuki's plan of reforming the Ten Tails and use its power to conquer the world in the name of "peace".

"Wait a minute," Kurotsuchi said, holding a hand. "The leader of Akatsuki had the Rinnegan. The same leader you said died while trying to invade your village. What happened to the Rinnegan?"

"Unfortunately, one of the Rinnegan was recovered by the Akatsuki," Jiraiya answered.

"And the other?" the Raikage asked, narrowing his eyes at him.

Jiraiya took a few seconds to answer. "The second Rinnegan is in our possession. Currently, one of our ninjas is wielding it."

Jiraiya could feel how his fellow Kages' expressions darkened. While A and Kurotsuchi were the most obvious, not even Mei and Rasa were able to stop some worry to manifest through their faces.

"And what gives you the right to claim that power as your own, Konoha!?" the Raikage bellowed.

"Spoils of war, that's what," Jiraiya fired back. "A man widening those eyes attacked our village. That eye are the just retribution taken from a defeated enemy."

"I believe we're losing sight of what this summit is meant to accomplish, which is the destruction of the Akatsuki threat," Mifune intervened. "Given that the Land of Iron is a neutral nation and has no stakes in the affair of ninjas, allow me to give my opinion: I think we already established that their threat has grown too big for a single village to tackle. Konoha, Suna and Kiri are coordinating their efforts, but that wasn't enough if the results are to be believed. However, if all five Great Villages join their forces for real, we may have a real chance at stopping them for good."

"You want us to join forces with them?" Kurotsuchi asked, a little disgusted.

"Yes, but not just a mere alliance. Why not all five Great Villages pour their ninjas and their resources into a single, massive army?" Mifune suggested. "A Grand Army would be strong enough to face all the power Akatsuki had gathered."

"I agree with the idea," Jiraiya was quick to say. "This is an international emergency, and drastic measures need to be taken."

"Suna shall stand with this alliance as well," Rasa added.

"And so will Kiri. Between the five of us, we will make Akatsuki pay for their crimes against us," Mei said as well.

The Raikage let out a sigh. "I don't like the idea of allying with you people. But something tells me that refusing to do this is a huge mistake. My mistakes cost my brother and Yugito their lives, so in their memory, I shall do the right thing."

"Listen, I got the hat not even a month ago, and I had a shitload of detractors who said I'm too young for the position," Kurotsuchi continued. "And if my first big act as Tsuchikage is to surrender my entire village to foreign powers, I'll be proving them right!"

"Do you prefer to be remembered as the last Tsuchikage instead?" Mei sharply asked. "The one who let her pride cloud her reason, and thus allowed Akatsuki to crush her village?"

Kurutsuchi snarled at her cousin, trying to come up with a comeback, but finding herself unable to. "Alright. If you want to join forces, guess I have no choice but to comply. But my village won't give up its sovereignty."

"Of course, Tsuchikage-sama. This is just a temporal measure until this threat persists," Mifune said, pleased to make some progress. "Now, we need to establish a chain of command. This Grand Army must be under the control of a Supreme Commander. I believe that one of you should fit that position. The question is: who is the most fitting candidate for this position?"

A deafening silence followed the samurai's question, as all the Kages eyed each other.

...

Orochimaru's Lair, Undisclosed Location

Orochimaru frowned as he read the latest report his agents had brought him. Kabuto's sudden disappearance had him a bit worried for the past couple weeks. Kabuto was Orochimaru's right hand man not because he possessed any kind of Bloodline Limit or other sort of overwhelming power. No, he already had Kimimaro and similar reasons to fulfill that role, among others, even if Kabuto was indeed a very strong ninja.

No, the reason was that Kabuto was a competent and dependable ninja whom one could trust to carry any mission, and also because his loyalty towards his master was unshakeable. Others in the same situation might think that Kabuto had abandoned Orochimaru, but the Sannin knew better. He knew something had happened to the silver haired medic-nin.

"Maybe he found something about that rat Danzo and thus he ordered his death?" Orochimaru wondered.

Despite their alliance, Orochimaru knew better than trust Danzo. The only reason he continued to help the old war hawk was because he still had spies on the village that could be valuable. The Snake Sannin thought that his patience had been rewarded when Pain fell to Konoha, and they harvested his eyes. Danzo would then step in and steal the eyes for Orochimaru. Of course, Orochimaru didn't trust that Danzo would honor his side of the deal, so he had several contingencies in place for when the inevitable betrayal arrived.

Unfortunately, while Orochimaru was right in not trusting Danzo, it wasn't for the right reasons. Who could have guessed that Danzo was secretly under Obito's control? Orochimaru had to admit that he had underestimated the young Uchiha. His plans to acquire the Rinnegan had been ruined, and now he had to start from square one.

"No, Danzo had no reason to do this. And his agents are like headless chickens now that he's dead. Perhaps Akatsuki?" Orochimaru wondered. Given that Obito could have used Danzo to spy on him, he must have known something. "At this stage they must know about my betrayal. Is this their doing? I wasn't expecting them to hunt me so soon."

Orochimaru's ramblings were answered in the form of a massive explosion coming from above, rocking the entire hideout, and causing large chunks of concrete and metal to fall down. The Sannin expertly dodged the falling pieces of debris, as sunlight poured from the now large hole that had been opened in the roof of his lair. And through that hole, he could see Deidara flying above him on top of a giant clay bird.

"Oi there, Orochimaru!" Deidara said, as he fed his hand mouths some explosive clays. "I hope you don't mind if I do some remodeling on this place. It could use some of my art!"

Deidara cast his hands forward, and his mouth released a swarm of explosive clay bees that flew at the pale skinned man as fast as if they were bullets. Orochimaru expertly dodged them as he moved around the place, using the pieces of fallen debris as temporal cover from the rain of projectiles, which left a trail of blasts behind. The Sannin almost reached a hidden door that would lead to an escape tunnel, when said door opened on its own, and a torrent of water poured in, forcing the Konoha missing-nin to fall back once again.

As the water started to flood the zone, Kisame casually emerged from the secret door, his clothes soaked, but otherwise unperturbed.

"You know, Orochimaru-san, you've missed the past few Akatsuki meetings," Kisame nonchalantly began, as he casually walked towards him, Samehada resting on his shoulder. "Not to mention the attack on Konoha. We were kind of worried for you, so we decided to see if you were okay."

"How touching of you," Orochimaru replied in the same mocking tone. "And now that you see that I'm fine, you'll say something about how your job is to change that for the worse, right?"

"I see you're not in the mood for talking," Kisame said, as he swung Samehada, and his lips formed a bloodthirsty grin. "Fine by me!"

In less than a second, Kisame closed the distance between himself and Orochimaru, and brought his sword down on the Sannin. However, Orochimaru had activated his Sharingan, and thanks to his enhanced reflexes, he was able to jump backwards just in time. Not that Kisame was going to give up his prey so quickly.

"Your Sharingan will be of little help against me, Orochimaru-san," Kisame mocked.

"Then how about this? Sword of Kusanagi!" A snake emerged from Orochimaru's mouth, which in turn regurgitated his legendary blade, which he expertly caught just in time to parry another blow from Kisame.

"Do you expect to counter my Samehada with that little letter opener?" Kisame's mockery continued, as he delivered more brutal swings.

"It's not a matter of size, but how do you use it," Orochimaru replied, tried to counterattack, but Kisame was proving to be the better swordsman. "Sometimes a smaller tool can do a better job than a bigger one."

Then, despite the fact that Kisame was pushing Orochimaru back, the Shark ninja jumped backwards, much to Orochimaru's surprise. He was quick to remember that Kisame wasn't his only opponent. Looking down, he saw something floating around him.

"Boom!" Deidara yelled, as he made a hand seal.

Orochimaru was engulfed by a chain of explosions, raising huge splashes of water and clouds of steam. Kisame and Deidara waited expectantly for the droplets of water in the air and the clouds of vapor would dissipate to see if the Sannin was dead, but they doubted such a basic attack would have brought Orochimaru down. Which was confirmed the next second.

"Wood Release: Deep Forest Emergence!"

The lair started to shake as multiple green wooden vines emerged from below the water around them. Deidara quickly commanded his clay bird to rise higher in the air in order to avoid the attack, while Kisame savagely cut the vines growing around him with wide swings from Samehada. The vines quickly rotted the moment the living blade touched them.

"So, you managed to acquire Wood Release," Kisame said, as he nonchalantly cut the growing vines down. "Samehada can still absorb the chakra of any trees you summon!"

"Absorb this!" Orochimaru said, leaping into the air, as he made several hand seals. "Lava Release: Burning Catastrophe!"

Orochimaru's cheeks puffed, before releasing a stream of lava in a wide cone, large enough to engulf Kisame. The Shark Ninja, whoever, wasn't fazed, and started to make hand seals of his own.

"Do you forget what I specialize in?" Kisame replied mockingly.
"Water Release: Water Shark Bullet!"

The water around Kisame started to gather around him in the form of a liquid tornado, before lunging at the incoming lava. The water tornado took the shape of a shark, which chomped the molten rock, instantly cooling it off and reducing it to bits.

While Orochimaru was engaging Kisame, Deidara decided it was his chance to strike, and took a dive at the Sannin as he prepared another cluster of explosives to drop.

"Disappear already!" Deidara shouted, as he dropped his clay explosives around the Sannin.

However, Orochimaru wasn't going to let the Iwa ninja catch him off guard twice.

"Dance of the Larch!"

Suddenly, multiple bone spikes grew all around Orochimaru's body, many of them firing into multiple directions. Deidara's explosives were caught by these unorthodox projectiles, which carried enough momentum to push them away. However, Orochimaru didn't stop there, and continued firing bone missiles at Deidara's bird, which due to its size was unable to dodge more than half of them, shredding the artificial creature to shreds, and forcing the Iwa ninja back into the ground.

"I'm tired of you attacking me from above like a coward," Orochimaru hissed.

That moment, Kisame charged at him once again, ready to deliver his most brutal swing. When Orochimaru saw it, it was too late to dodge, so he had to parry the blow with a combination of the Sword of Kusanagi and his Dead Bone Pulse Bloodline Limit. Even if he was able to do it, the blow was so powerful it pushed him backwards, and grievously damaged his arms.

"Wood Release, Lava Release, bone manipulation... you hid quite a lot of secrets from the rest of us, didn't you, Orochimaru-san?"

Kisame asked, as he pushed against the Sannin.

"Please. As if I was the only person in that organization hiding secrets," Orochimaru said, grinning for the first time.

Suddenly, a small snake emerged from under the Konoha missing-nin's clothes, and fast as lightning, bit Kisame in his dominant arm, forcing him to drop Samehada. Orochimaru quickly took advantage of this, and delivered a brutal kick into the blue man's chest, which tossed him back skidding through the water.

"Let's see what you can do without your precious sword as a crutch!" Orochimaru boasted, as his hands weaved hand seals as fast as they could. "Water Release. Water Dragon Jutsu! Lightning Release: Wave of Inspiration!"

The water around them gathered and took the form of a massive serpentine dragon, which quickly lunged at Kisame. Said dragon was then infused with lightning chakra, crackling with electricity. However, Orochimaru was going to learn that thinking that Kisame was nothing without his sword was a bad idea.

"Impressive! A jutsu worthy of this counter!" Kisame said, making hand seals of his own. "Water Release: Great Water Shark Bullet!"

The shark and the electrified dragon clashed, however, instead of the usual struggle of two similarly powered jutsu colliding, Kisame's water shark swallowed the electrified dragon whole. The shark then doubled its size and gained a cloak of electricity before continuing its way towards Orochimaru.

Too surprised to see how easily his combo had been countered, Orochimaru was unable to dodge the incoming attack, resulting in a massive blast of electrified water.

"Did you get him?" Deidara asked, as he landed besides Kisame. "There's no way he could have survived that!"

"You're right, there's no way I could have survived that," Orochimaru's voice said, as the clouds of steam started to dissipate. "At least, not without my Shedded Skin Replacement. Truly a magnificent jutsu, Kisame. You're worthy of the title and reputation you carry."

"I'll be able to add 'the man who killed Orochimaru' to my already excellent resume," Kisame said, grinning at Orochimaru.

"Somehow, I find that unlikely. Not after I use this jutsu with you two," Orochimaru said, as he started to make hand seals. "Summoning Jutsu: Impure World Resurrection!"

The moment he formed the last hand seal, two wooden coffins emerged in front of him. Kisame's grin vanished from his face.

...

Land of Iron

When Mifune asked one of the Kages to take a step and become the Supreme Commander of the Alliance army, he was expecting all five of them to jump and claim the position, as they yelled each time louder over each other. Mifune was aware over the power struggle that could go on inside Ninja Villages, and given that this situation involved five people from different countries, the samurai leader expected a bloodbath.

Instead, he got nothing but silence, and the Kages awkwardly staring at each other. Guess they also had predicted the same thing Mifune had imagined. Or maybe they were expecting the others to talk first in order to prepare an answer.

Mifune was tempted to make a suggestion, but there were two problems with that: one, as the leader of a neutral nation, he wanted to stay neutral and not take any sides. Plus, he believed that, with the exception of Kurotsuchi, who was too young and inexperienced as a Kage, any of the other four would make a fine Supreme Commander.

And two, if the five Kages couldn't reach an agreement on this topic, then there was no way they would be able to coordinate an army of such magnitude, and Akatsuki would have won already. Still, that didn't mean he couldn't give them a little push.

"Nobody?" he asked. "None of you wants to volunteer for the task? Or at the very least, nominate somebody else for the position?"

This had the intended effect, as Mei Terumi cleared her throat, before she spoke.

"I'd like to nominate Hokage-done for the position of Supreme Commander," Mei began. "As we've been discussing here, Konoha and its Hokage have lead the fight against the Akatsuki, and even took down some of their members. I can't think of anybody else better suited for such task."

Jiraiya nodded at Mei in gratitude. However, the Toad Sannin's nomination wasn't going to pass unchallenged.

"Of course you'll support him," the Raikage growled. "Everybody knows how he helped you snatch that hat from its previous owner. What did you surrender to Konoha in order to carry your coup? Or is being Jiraiya's loyal lapdog enough?"

"Who are you calling a lapdog!?" Zabuza snarled, as his hand reached his sword, while taking a step forward. The Raikage's bodyguards did the same.

Mei raised a hand "Stand down, sweetie, I can take care of this," Mei said, before locking eyes with the Raikage. "I'd advise you to measure your words, especially regarding a village you're no part of nor have any idea about its history or culture. And, even if supposing that what you said is true and I'm merely the Hokage's servant, how does it invalidate anything I said?"

"I agree with the Mizukage," Rasa interjected before the Raikage could reply. "Jiraiya and I rarely saw each other eye to eye. But what the Mizukage said is undeniable. They did more for the jinchuriki as a whole than most of the villages those jinchuriki hailed from. And speaking of which, Konoha so far is the only village left with jinchuriki among its ranks. That should be a deciding factor as well."

Mifune nodded. "A compelling argument, from both the Mizukage and the Kazekage. And, if I assume that Hokage-dono accepts this position, that would make him the Supreme Commander of the Alliance with three votes out of five."

"I'm not that eager to have more responsibility piled on my shoulders, but I know the stakes are too big to reject them," Jiraiya said.

"Still, before we can officially hand Hokage-dono the leadership of this army, I believe that all of us should reach an agreement, for the sake of cooperation," Mifune added, before looking at the Raikage. "Raikage-dono, do you have any reason to believe that the Hokage may be ill-suited for the position, or that there's a better candidate?"

A growled and glared at Jiraiya, but in the end, he sighed in defeat. "I'm afraid not. I may not like Jiraiya, and I would prefer the Alliance to be under my leadership. However I allowed Kumo's two jinchuriki to be snatched by the Akatsuki, while Konoha managed to keep theirs. For the sake of crushing Akatsuki, I'll work under Jiraiya, as long as he doesn't give me a reason not to do so."

"Excellent," Mifune said, happy with the progress they were making. Now only one loose end remained. He looked at Kurotsuchi, and was about to ask her the same question, but he saw she was talking to one of her bodyguards, the woman named Suzumebachi, who was whispering something into the Tsuchikage's ear. Kurotsuchi nodded, and mouthed a "thank you" to her bodyguard, who returned to her position. "What about you, Tsuchikage-dono? Do you agree with the Hokage as the Supreme Commander?"

"Before I do, I'd like to ask him something," Kurotsuchi said, sounding confident. "Word has reached to my ears that the reason Akatsuki had such an easy time capturing so many jinchuriki is because they had help from Konoha. And not from some sort of lowly Chunin, no. The source of those leaks was no other than Danzo Shimura, who, according to our files, is a member of Konoha's Council of Elders. Hokage, if you're given command of such a huge army, how can we know that you won't allow Akatsuki to plant spies and saboteurs? Imagine if Akatsuki knew beforehand about all our troop movements and operations beforehand. It would be a catastrophe!"

Mifune sighed wearily. Even if Kurotsuchi did raise very good points, it wouldn't help if all they accomplished was inaction and pointless arguments.

"I believe you're right," Jiraiya answered. "However, you should know that Danzo has already been dealt with, and all his minions and collaborators have been either killed or captured. Plus, like the Kazekage and the Mizukage said, Akatsuki has spies in every village, including yours. The difference is that we've been actively trying to safekeep the jinchuriki, while your village didn't."

"Tsuchikage-dono, even if your concerns regarding Hokage-dono and Konoha are valid, I'm afraid we can't just disqualify him for the position if another candidate isn't presented," Mifune intervened. "Do you have any other person in mind?"

Kurotsuchi opened her mouth to speak, but no words came from them. She realized that she didn't like any of the other Kages as candidates either. She hated Mei for how she had used Konoha to become Mizukage, on top of the previous bad blood. There's no way she'd support Rasa, the Kage of the weakest Great Village. She thought the Raikage was too anger-prone and emotional. And there's no way the others would support her, being so young and inexperienced as a Kage. In the end, she was forced to relent.

"No, I don't have," she finally conceded with a sigh. "The Hokage has Iwa's support as well."

Mifune nodded and smiled. "In that case, we have a consensus. Hokage-dono will be the Supreme Commander of the very first Army of the Ninja Alliance! Now, let's discuss-"

"Oh, how endearing. The five great villages, joining forces against a common enemy," a new voice said.

"Who said that!?" the Raikage roared, looking around.

Darui's visible eye widened, as a realization dawned upon him. "Wait, I already heard this voice before..."

"This is-" Tsunade said, knowing who was speaking.

Mifune and his two bodyguards jumped back as a spiraling vortex formed behind them. The rest of the Kage's bodyguards jumped forward in front of their leaders, weapons drawn, and ready to strike. From the vortex, Obito Uchiha emerged. His face was unmasked, letting everybody see the Rinnegan in his left socket.

"Hello there, members of the Five Kage," Obito nonchalantly said. His tone was so jovial, it was an obvious provocation. "Given that you've gathered under a single roof, I decided to take this unique chance to discuss a very important matter with you five."

Author's Note: As you could imagine, with Danzo already dead and no evil Sasuke stirring trouble, this Kage Summit was much shorter than the canon one, as we went directly from the summit directly to Obito's irruption, skipping all that was in-between. Some reviewers were expecting that there would be a fight, but no. There will be moments for fights.

Though, there was a fight in this chapter, even if it hasn't ended yet. Most of you thought that Kisame and Deidara were trying their luck again with Killer B, but nope, Orochimaru. Unlike Pain, Obito really doesn't want this guy free to do what he pleases after he defected Akatsuki, even there are still jinchuriki to capture. Shout out to the reviewer W8W who correctly guessed this.

As you could see, Jiraiya and Rasa weren't the only changes from the original Kage Summit, as Kurotsuchi is now Kage ahead of canon. I not only did this so I could keep at least two female Kages, given that Tsunade isn't Hokage here, but also to have one Kage to be young and inexperienced, given that Gaara isn't Kazekage either, since his old man is still alive at this point. Also, given that the two of them have Lava Release, I decided to make Mei and Kurotsuchi related by being descendants of the same clan. I know that in canon Mei and Kurotsuchi's Lava Releases are different (and theirs aren't the only variants) but I always disliked that, so in this fanfic Lava Release is going to be the same for every user, just like every other Bloodline Limit. And it's going to be actual lava, unlike what Mei uses in canon which looks more like boiling vomit.

Also, the Kinryuu Clan and its backstory is a creation of fellow Naruhina writer DryBonesKing, author of the amazing fanfic "True Potential", who kindly allowed me to use it in my story.

You probably can guess what's coming next chapter, but will only be a small part of it. Remember when you guys asked me about how some elements of the backstory didn't match canon, and I told you that they would be explained in a future chapter? It will be next chapter, titled "Obito Gaiden". You can imagine what's going to be about.

In the meantime, leave a review with your thoughts on this chapter! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Obito Gaiden

Author's Note: So here we are, the second part of the Kage Summit. This chapter is mostly a big info dump that will serve to illustrate the differences between this fanfic and canon, at least when it comes to the side of the villains, which I'm aware I changed a lot, and sometimes come as confusing for some readers. Enjoy:

Chapter 94:

Obito Gaiden

or

The Fall of a Legend

For a few moments, silence reigned supreme as the five Kages, their bodyguards, and the samurai stared at the daring Akatsuki member. All sporting various expressions, ranged from angry, to shocked, to surprised, to even scared. The silence lasted until one ninja decided to make a move.

"YOU!" Darui said, as he unsheathed his cleaver, and dashed towards Obito, fast as lightning.

"Darui, wait!" C called out, trying to reach him.

Darui delivered a horizontal slash at the Akatsuki with his electricity-imbued cleaver, but much to his surprise and frustration, the attack phased through Obito as if he was made of air. His building momentum also caused the Kumo Jonin to stumble forward, phasing through Obito as well. He managed to regain balance just before slamming against the opposing wall.

"As I said just a second ago," an irritated Obito said. "I didn't come here to fight, but to talk."

"We have nothing to talk with you about!" Tsunade yelled, both fists clenched. She felt Jiraiya's hand on her shoulder.

"While I agree with the general sentiment, Hime," the Toad Sage began. "I believe it's unwise to stop an enemy from sharing information with us," Jiraiya's eyes locked into Obito's. "What do you want to tell us, Uchiha? You're talking with the Supreme Commander of the Ninja Allied Forces."

Obito's lips curved into a smile. "Good. I'm going to tell you about Akatsuki, and our goal."

"We do know your goal. You plan to revive the Ten Tails!" Rasa angrily shouted.

Obito's smile widened. "So, all of you know about it. Excellent, that will save me explaining you what it is."

"And what do you pretend to do with such a monster, Uchiha?" Mei asked.

"Ah, now you're asking the important questions," Obito said, pleased.

...

Madara Uchiha's Secret Hideout, many years ago

For many days, Obito had been sitting in front of the cocoon that would hopefully bring Rin back to life stronger than ever. He didn't eat, he didn't drink, he didn't even move. He merely watched. He was unaware of how much time he spent there, given that he had no way to measure the days in a place where the sun didn't shine.

"Hey, you."

Obito stood up and turned around, and saw Zetsu -the original one, not a clone- standing in front of him.

" Madara-sama wants to speak with you."

Obito silently nodded, and followed the artificial human through the hallways of the underground lair, until they reached a chamber Obito had never seen during his stay there. The chamber had a couple shelves with some books and scrolls each, a table with some books on it, and a couple chairs. It appeared to be some sort of improvised library.

" Hey boss, here's the kid, as you requested," the creature said.

Madara, who was taking a look at one of his books, closed it, and nodded at his servant.

" Thank you. Leave us alone, please," the elderly Uchiha commanded.

White Zetsu nodded, and left. Despite the lack of doors, Madara knew that none of his minions would try to defy his will.

" You know, the Zetsu have told me what you've been doing these past days," Madara began. "Just because you stay close to the cocoon it won't make the girl to come out faster. Like I told you, the process may take years."

" Um, sorry..." Obito said almost in a whisper. "So, you called me?"

" Yes. I think it's about time you begin to fulfill your side of our deal, and become my agent," Madara explained.

" Alright. What is my first mission?" Obito asked, his lack of enthusiasm more than evident.

Madara shook his head. "There will be time for that. In any other time, blind obedience is all what I would have wanted. But in the end, even blind obedience is unreliable. That's why, before we begin my plan, I need you to understand why we're doing this. I need you to be completely committed to my cause."

" I already told you that I was willing to do what you say," Obito began, looking irritated. "Does my word hold so little value to you?"

" Yes," was Madara's blunt answer, taking Obito aback. "And soon you'll see why I think that way. Tell me, Obito, do you have any family? I don't mean the Uchiha Clan, but direct family. Brothers or sisters?"

" I'm an only son," Obito replied.

" Parents?"

Obito shook his head. "They both died on a mission when I was a toddler."

" So, no immediate family. I guess that your teammates and sensei are the closest thing you have to a family, excluding the rest of the Uchiha clan?" Madara asked.

" Yeah, pretty much. The other Uchiha weren't exactly very fond of me." Obito said, glancing at the ground below.

" I see. One may call that unfortunate," Madara said. "You see, I used to have five younger brothers. Four of them died even before I came of age."

" Whoa!" Obito gasped in shock. "I'm... I'm sorry to hear that. But at least one of your brothers survived."

Madara shook his head. "While said brother went to live longer than the others, he joined them in death as well. Killed by Tobirama Senju during our last clash against his and Hashirama's clan, before we ended the hostilities and founded Konoha."

" I'm sorry to hear that," Obito repeated, as he looked around while awkwardly rubbing his arm. "Not to sound rude but... you didn't call me just to tell me your life, don't you?"

" Knowing the details of my life is important for our cause. Like I said before, you need to understand why we're doing this, and to do so, you need to know the same things I do know now," Madara explained.

" Oh, sorry then... continue."

" Given that you're an Uchiha, you're aware of our history with the Senju Clan," Madara continued. "Nobody knew when our feud began, it simply existed, and we didn't question it. Uchiha fought Senju to avenge our fallen brethren. And then the Senju struck back to avenge their own. Eventually, after the battle where my brother died, Hashirama offered us a chance to end the hostilities, and form together a ninja village where we could live in peace."

" And you said yes," Obito assumed.

" No. Not at first, at least," Madara said, much to the young Uchiha's surprise. "I couldn't agree with such suggestion, even if it was what I desired. Or what I think I desired. Letting go of the past like that would mean spitting on the sacrifice of all the Uchiha who died fighting Senju. My brother among them. They died so we could have a chance at crushing them for good."

" But... that's stupid!" Obito blurted. Upon seeing Madara's unamused stare, Obito covered his mouth with his hand, and tried to hastily apologize. "Well, not stupid, it's just-"

" No, go on. Please, explain me why it's stupid," Madara asked. He sounded like he genuinely wanted to know the boy's opinion.

" Well..." Obito began, as he tried to find the best way to word his ideas, as he nervously rubbed his arm. "While it's true that all the Uchiha dead at the hand of the Senju was a tragedy, continuing the hostilities wouldn't have been of any help, and it would only resulted in more pointless deaths for both sides. You said that the Uchiha and the Senju had been fighting for generations, and neither clan was even close to destroy the other. By ceasing the hostilities, at least you ensure the next generation of Uchiha wouldn't have to go through the same horrors you did."

Madara rested his chin under his hand, as he weighed down Obito's words. Obito, meanwhile stared nervously at the elder Uchiha, awaiting for his verdict.

" Yes, that's a very good argument," he finally said. "One many of my clansmen shared. They were tired of warring, and wanted to create a better future for their children. Even if that means joining forces with our hated enemies."

Obito smiled, and sighed in relief, knowing he had passed what he believed was a hidden test.

" So, hearing my clansmen's plea, I decided to accept Hashirama's offer. The Uchiha and the Senju ended their legendary feud, and we joined forces to form Konohagakure, the very first of the ninja villages," Madara told Obito. "News of these event spread like wildfire, and soon many clans that made the Land of Fire its home asked to join us. The Sarutobi was the first of such clans, followed by the Shimura, whom they had a feud with. Next came the Hyuga and the Aburame, and later the Yamanaka, Akimichi and Nara, whom already had a history of working together.

" The village grew as more clans joined us, and thus, another problem was presented. When it was just the Senju and us, both Hashirama and I ruled over our respective clans like we did in the past. But now, it was time to decide a new leader who would reign supreme over the village. Hashirama wanted that person to be me, but in the end, the villagers choose him by an overwhelming majority. Even my fellow clansmen preferred Hashirama to me."

" Wow. Were you that bad of a leader?" Obito asked, before once again realized of what he said, and clamping his hand over his mouth. "Sorry! I didn't mean to-"

If Madara took offense to Obito's comment, he didn't show it. "You see, the news of Konoha's birth traveled well beyond the Land of Fire's borders, and other clans started to form villages as well. It was then when I realized the flaw of Hashirama's dream: while we had effectively put an end to the Warring States Period and ushered an era of peace, it wasn't bound to last. Soon, the ninja villages would start to wage wars against each other, and the scale of those wars would dwarf those that came before.

" Hashirama wanted to establish alliances and treaties with other villages, but I knew such idea wouldn't work, and I advocated to subjugate them before they could be a threat. Rather than just the Land of Fire, Konoha should be the only military power of the entire elemental nations, which would keep peace and stability. Neither Hashirama nor the rest of the villagers supported my idea, and after a heated discussion with Hashirama, I realized that there wasn't a place for me anymore in that village. Since I had no children, I passed the clan leadership to Izuna's oldest son, and left the village."

Obito more or less knew that, since he had to study it in history class in the Academy. What he didn't know, however, was what Madara did before he returned to fight Hashirama one last time. And now, he could hear it from the man himself.

" And... what did you do then?" Obito asked, instinctively leaning forward.

" I traveled. Trying to find myself, as it's usually said. I realized that I never felt at home at Konoha, so maybe I could find a place like that," Madara told him. "The Uchiha history was shrouded in mystery due lack of written records, so I decided that I could unearth some of those mysteries. As I traveled, I found many places that the Uchiha used as temporal homes before moving out. Thanks to my search, I found out that neither the Uchiha nor the Senju are natives to this land. They first appeared in a faraway land called the Land of the Ancestors, once a powerful empire, now an uninhabited ruin.

" And in one of those places, inspecting a ruined fortress that had been used by the Uchiha, I found this," Madara said, showing Obito the book he was holding. "The journal of Indra Otsutsuki, the very first ninja to awaken a Sharingan."

" Indra Otsutsuki? I never heard of that name," Obito said, scratching his head.

" I don't blame you, neither did I," Madara admitted. "Tell me, Obito, what do you know about the Sage of the Six Paths?"

" Uh, he's supposed to be the one who invented ninjutsu. A very powerful man," Obito said, before scowling a little. "What has that myth have to do with anything?"

" Oh, plenty. Apparently, this Indra was the Sage's eldest son," Madara casually said.

" Say what?" Obito asked in disbelief. "Come on, there's no way that book is telling the truth!"

This seemed to amuse Madara, whose withered lips formed a smile. "Yes, my reaction was the same. I've never been the one to believe in something without evidence. That's why I decided to do some research of my own to see if the book conformed to reality. And my findings were... troubling to say the least."

" You have proof that the Sage of the Six Paths truly existed?" Obito asked, excited.

" Not exactly. I have proof that many of the things written on that book did indeed happen," Madara replied, before handing Obito the book. "Now, you must read this book. Every page, every paragraph, every word, drink them as if they were a glass of water."

Obito opened the book, and glanced at a random page. He scowled. "Wait, this is nothing but gibberish! How I'm supposed to read it?"

" Use your Sharingan," Madara laconically instructed.

After activating his remaining doujutsu, suddenly everything became clear. "Hey, I can read it now!"

" Of course you can. Those symbols are a special code that can only be deciphered with the Sharingan. While anybody with a Sharingan can read it, unfortunately the knowledge on how to write it was lost centuries ago. Now, enough talking. Read that book. We won't talk again until you finish it."

And thus, Obito read Indra's journal. While the book showed its age - the cover was consumed, the pages were yellowish and the writing half faded- it was still in a pretty good shape, and completely legible, quite the achievement for something that was almost a millennia old.

Despite the archaic wording, Indra's history was a fascinating tale. Apparently, the Sage of the Six Paths, named Hagoromo, had a brother named Hamura, and the two of them were the sons of a very powerful woman named Kaguya, who was said to come from beyond the stars. Kaguya used her vast power to rule the land, until her sons decided to put an end to her reign.

Kaguya then transformed into an horrifying monster called the Ten Tails, which was defeated when Hagoromo drained it of its chakra and sealed it inside his body. Then the two of them used a powerful jutsu to seal the Ten Tails' empty husk inside the Moon, creating the Moon in the process. After that, the younger brother went to the Moon in order to watch over the Ten Tails' body, while Hagoromo stayed on Earth in order to preach peace.

Hagoromo married and had two sons. Indra and Asura -whom later Obito would learn he would be the ancestor of all Senju and Uzumaki-, whom he trained to carry on his legacy. As Hagoromo's life reached its end, the Sage realized he had to name one of his two sons as his heir. In order to determine which one was the most suitable to take his mantle. Hagoromo asked the sons about the best way to bring peace to the world.

Indra advocated for a powerful individual or small group of people to rule over the rest, creating laws that ensured the safety of all, and punished those who broke them. Asura advocated for love and mutual understanding to be paramount for any peace that was bound to last. Hagoromo chose his youngest son over the oldest. Indra, outraged, attacked Asura, ready to kill him, or at the very least, force him to give back what Indra thought was his birthright, but was unable to beat him, and left.

Indra would later learn that, shortly before his death, Hagoromo released the Ten Tails' chakra stored inside his body, split it into nine beings, and gave them their own mind: that's how the nine Tailed Beasts were born.

After Indra's loss to Asura, the book merely described what Indra did after that: he met a woman whom he married and had two kids as well, both of them whom inherited the Sharingan, and trained them as ninjas. Both Indra and his descendants used their power to work as mercenaries and assassins, taking part in many battles and wars, some of them against Asura and his family.

Eventually, Indra died of old age. However, in the very last page he wrote he claimed that his hatred for his father and his brother would never disappear until Asura's line was eradicated and his bloodline reigned supreme over the Elemental Nations.

Once again, Obito hadn't realized how much time had passed until he finished the book. To him it were mere hours, but in reality there were a few days. Once he was done, he returned to Madara, who was waiting for him in the library, as if he had never left the place.

" I finished the book," Obito told him.

" Well? What are your impressions?" Madara eagerly asked.

" It's... fascinating indeed. If what is says it's really true," Obito said, unable to shake off the last remnants of his skepticism.

"It is true, I can assure you that," Madara insisted. "What about the conflict between Asura and Indra? What's your impression on that?"

"I guess both brothers had a point," Obito asked, trying to give a noncommittal answer. However, Madara's unamused glare made it clear such thing wasn't going to fly. "Though in the end, I agreed with Asura more."

"Of course you did," Madara said. While he sounded disappointed, he seemed to expect that answer. "And tell me, kid, do you think Asura's way of doing things fixed anything? You yourself told me you're in the middle of a war. A third one involving Ninja Villages."

Obito didn't say anything, he simply nodded.

"I could have stopped this from happening, if they just listened to me," Madara said, shaking his head. "Anyway, now that you read that book, I can now continue with my tale. After traveling and learning, about both the past of our clan and ninja history in general, I was even more confident in my convictions: Hashirama had the right idea with the ninja villages, but that was only a job half done. In order to achieve true peace, we would need to unify the Elemental Nations under a single village, with an absolute power as its backbone. Said power would be the Tailed Beasts.

"However, upon my return to the Land of Fire, I was shocked to see how much Hashirama had screwed things up: He had hunted nearly every Tailed Beast, but instead of keeping them for Konoha, he idiotically handed them to other villages, apparently in a vain effort to create some sort of 'balance of power' that would ensure peace. Unsurprisingly, it ended up provoking the First Ninja War. Hashirama also had abdicated as Hokage, and passed the hat to his younger brother.

"Fortunately, not everything was lost. Hashirama hadn't captured the Nine Tails yet, meaning that I could put it under my control and use it to defeat him once for all. But even then, it wasn't enough to bridge the gap between us, and as a result, I died."

"Wait," Obito interrupted. "How could you die if you're here before me?"

"Because, fortunately, I had the means to evade death in the form of Izanagi, an Uchiha Forbidden Jutsu that allowed me to rewrite reality, at the cost of one of my Sharingan. Though, even if I had cheated death, the loss of one of my eyes was a big price to pay. With one single Sharingan I could no longer use Susanoo, my most powerful ability. However, I had a way to gain an even greater power: during the battle, I was able to bite some of Hashirama's flesh and store it within my mouth. I used that flesh to cultivate more of his cells, and combined them with my own. Not only I would gain Hashirama's power, but by combining powerful Senju and Uchiha chakra, the result is Six Paths Chakra, the very same chakra the Sage had. And with that chakra... I could awaken the Rinnegan.

"And awaken it did. But it took far longer than I thought. When my eyes turned into Rinnegan, I was already an old and withered man. Still, it was something. I was able to summon the Ten Tails' empty shell, the Demonic Statue of the Outer Path, and use it to generate more Hashirama's cells. By doing so, I accidentally created the beings that you see around the lair, Zetsu and his clones. The statue also keeps me alive, as long as I'm directly connected to it," Madara said, as he turned around so Obito could see better the organic cables attached to his back.

"You... didn't tell me what was your plan. What did you plan to do after you defeated Hashirama?" Obito asked.

Madara's lips formed a smile again. "Ah, good, you finally pay attention to the finer details. My original plan was that, once Hashirama was out of the way, I would take over Konoha by force. Then, I would subjugate the other villages one by one, taking back the Tailed Beasts Hashirama foolishly gave them as if they were mere pets. Then, I would have build a single village, with a force of nine jinchuriki as the backbone of said village's might. With the Elemental Nations united under a single government, there wouldn't be no more wars nor strife. A world where no kids should have to be sent to the battlefields and see their friends die."

That last sentence seemed to especially resonate with Obito.

" However, over the years, especially those after I awakened the Rinnegan, I perfected my plan: nine jinchuriki could still cause problems, since they could fight among each other, or have their own agendas. No, there had to be a single jinchuriki that would enforce the village's power. So far, the only person capable of completing such task would be the Sage of the Six Paths, hence a second Sage needed to be created. In order to do so, the Nine Tailed Beasts need to be gathered and sealed inside the Demonic Statue. Once they're all inside, their chakra will merge into Six Paths chakra, and the Demonic Statue will return to its original form as the Ten Tails, Lastly, I will seal the Ten Tails into my body, becoming an ageless being of unmatched power. Then I shall do what the first Sage should have done to begin with: use my power to usher an eternal era of peace and harmony."

" It's a beautiful dream indeed," Obito agreed, before gazing down. "But it looks kind of impossible to reach."

" Kid, those who achieve greatness are those who try the impossible, and find a way to succeed," Madara said. "So far, people would think that bringing somebody back from the dead it's impossible. Yet we're doing exactly that with that Rin friend of yours."

" Of course," Obito agreed. Then, in a more enthusiastic tone, he asked: "What can I do, Madara-sama?"

Madara smiled. That determination is what he wanted to see. He then started to slowly walk, and Obito followed behind him.

" My time draws near. I shall undergo the same process of rebirth your friend Rin is undergoing in order to recover my former strength," Madara explained. "Such process may take years. In the meantime, you need to put my plan in motion. First, go to Ame and find an Uzumaki boy named Nagato. I had the Zetsu extract my Rinnegan and secretly implant them into him for safekeeping. Convince the boy to follow our plan. Lie to him if necessary. Tell him he's the reincarnation of the Sage of the Six Paths. You can tell him about me as well, but be mindful what you choose to reveal."

" I believe it won't be very hard to do it," Obito confidently said.

" I have faith in your abilities, kid," Madara said with a nod. Obito could see they were returning to the chamber where Rin's cocoon was. "Then, gather the Tailed Beast, and seal them inside the statue. I presume that by the time you're done, the regeneration process will be finished already. If you haven't completed your task yet, I will finish it myself. With my old power restored, it shouldn't be too hard."

As they entered the chamber, they could see more Zetsu clones on top of those working on Rin's cocoon, as well the original Zetsu. Madara walked towards the latter, and placed his hand on his nonexistent right half of his body, and a black liquid-like substance started to spread around it. As it grew, it formed half a body, making the Zetsu whole, but looking as if they were the halves of two different beings clumsily put together.

" This is Black Zetsu, an extension of my will. He will guide you and follow your orders from now onwards, just like White Zetsu and his clones," Madara said. With a mere hand wave, the idle Zetsu clones formed another circle, and Madara placed himself in the middle. "I believe that's all, Obito. From now onwards, the future we want to build rests on your shoulders. Do not fail me."

" I won't, Madara-sama. This world, Asura's vision, Konoha... all of them allowed Rin to die. I shall fulfill your vision, and create a better world," Obito said, clenching one fist in determination.

" Good," Madara said with a nod, before turning at one of the clones, and nodded. "Begin."

Green vines emerged from the clones' midsection, and crawled towards Madara as they grew. Once they reached him, they started to wrap around his body, covering him in layers upon layers of vines until the elderly Uchiha could no longer be seen. Lastly, all eight of them formed the same chain of hand seals.

" Wood Release: Majestic Cocoon of Divine Rebirth!"

Just like it happened with Rin, the mass of vines not so much glowed with a green light, but that became light, growing and taking an oval shape. When the light faded, there was an indentical cocoon in Madara's place, slowly pulsating like a giant heart.

" Just like Rin, the process has been a success!" one of the Zetsu keeping the cocoon active announced. "Madara is still alive, and it's slowly regenerating."

" For additional security, I believe we should seal this room, boss," Black Zetsu spoke for the first time.

" Yes, I agree," Obito said, as he walked outside the chamber. "You do that while I'm out."

" Hey, wait!" the white half said. "You shouldn't go to fetch Nagato alone! You'll need us to help you."

" I'm not going to Ame," Obito said. "I'm going to Konoha. There are a few things I need to check there before we start with the plan."

" Understood, boss. Try not to take too long," Black Zetsu warned him.

...

Undisclosed Location, Orochimaru's Lair

Deidara and Kisame watched for a second the two wooden coffins Orochimaru had summoned. The two of them had the kanji for "two" on them, on top of the kanji of "water" on one and "earth" on the other. The coffins then opened on their own, their lids falling forward with a thud. Lastly, two men emerged from each coffin: a blond man in a pin-striped, high-collared, long gray kimono with a black sash wrapped around his waist, and a man which was almost entirely covered in bandages, wearing nothing but a pair of black pants.

Kisame and Deidara immediately recognized the men as the second Mizukage and Tsuchikage, who looked disoriented after stepping out of the coffins.

"Where... where I am?" the Tsuchikage asked. "This place..."

"The hell if I know!" the Mizukage replied, looking around as well. It was then when the kage realized who they were talking to.

"YOU!"

The two Kages tried to attack each other, but found that their bodies weren't under their control, and remained firmly in place.

"So, I'm stuck with you and some unseen force stops me from tearing your face from your head..." the second Mizukage said as he rest his chin on his hand. "Yep, this is hell!"

"If you weren't to jump to conclusions so easily, you'll realize this isn't the afterlife, Gengetsu," the Second Tsuchikage said. "We can't control our bodies. And your eyes are black and your skin is cracked. This sounds like Tobirama Senju's jutsu, Impure World Resurrection."

"Exactly, Mu-san," Orochimaru said, making the two Kages to turn around. "I summoned you with this jutsu to do my bidding!"

"And who are you supposed to be?" Gengetsu asked, scowling a little.

"Your master. You can call me Orochimaru, no honorifics needed," the Sannin said in a theatrical way. "Now, those are the targets I want you to dispose of."

Forced to turn around once again, the two Kages faced the two members of Akatsuki. They quickly noticed their headbands.

"An Iwa ninja working side by side with a Kiri one?" Mu asked. "What kind of world I've been summoned to?"

"That's Samehada! That means you're of the Seven Swordsmen!" Gengetsu said, pointing at Kisame. "What the hell are you doing working with Iwa scum?"

However, Orochimaru's orders quickly kicked in, and Mu started to make hand seals, before clapping his hands together. Pulling his hands apart, he created a translucent white cube with a white glowing ball inside. Deidara paled upon seeing this, and instinctively jumped backwards.

"Kisame, whatever he throws at you, dodge it!" the Iwa missing nin warned.

Kisame, however, merely placed his sword in a defensive position.

"Ha! Whatever ninjutsu he throws at me, Samehada can absorb it!" Kisame confidently said.

"Don't try you idiot! He's going to-"

"Too late. Now die like the fool you are, Kiri ninja," Mu said with contempt, as he threw his hands forward. "Dust Release: Atomic Dismantling Jutsu!"

In a second, the glowing cube flew towards Kisame, and growing large enough to engulf the confused Akatsuki member.

"What the...?"

For a second, the cube glowed with a bright white light, so intense it was like looking into the sun. When the light receded, Kisame wasn't there anymore.

"Good job, Mu-san," Orochimaru praised his undead puppet. "It's kind of sad how a powerful ninja like Kisame-san went away in such a quick and dull way."

"You... you ASSHOLE!" Gengetsu screamed, though it wasn't clear if he was talking to Orochimaru or Mu -probably both-. "You destroyed Samehada! Kirigakure's greatest weapon! A treasure of untold-WHOA!" He was interrupted when his body started to move on his own.

"I'm sorry, Gegetsu-san, but I need you to get rid of the other for me," Orochimaru said. "After all, we all know how much you love to kill Iwa ninjas, right?"

" Shit, this is bad!" Deidara thought, as he fed his mouth hands some explosive clay, while running away. "With that blue idiot dead, there's no way I can defeat that many enemies on my own! I need to escape NOW!"

As fast as he could, Deidara created a small clay bird, and with a hand seal, it grew large enough to carry a rider on its back. Not thinking it twice, Deidara jumped onto its back, and commanded it to fly away.

"Sorry, little bird, no running away!" Gengetsu said with a maniac grin, as he pointed at the fleeing Deidara with his finger. "Water Gun Jutsu!"

Gengetsu fired a single water droplet at the escaping clay bird with such force, it caused the artificial construct to blow up in a thousand pieces, making Deidara to fall to the ground, half fascinating at how a water jutsu could damage so badly a jutsu that used earth, and half terrified knowing that this was his end, before hitting the ground with a splash.

"Impressive, Gengetsu-san," Orochimaru praised again. "Now, finish hi-"

Suddenly, something bursted from underground behind Mu, sending rocks and splashing water everywhere, distracting the two zombies and the former Akatsuki. Mu turned around too late to see a very much alive Kisame ready to strike, and with a powerful swing of Samehada, Mu's torso and left arms were separated from the rest of his body, releasing dust and ashes, instead of the blood and gore Kisame was expecting.

"Hey, you survived and saved Samehada! Nice!" Gengetsu said, happy to see Kisame. "Now try to-"

The Mizukage never finished his sentence, as with a powerful vertical strike, Kisame split the undead man in two halves, which fell to a side each. Kisame then turned at Orochimaru, who seemed oddly pleased.

"I knew you wouldn't go down so easily, Kisame-san," Orochimaru said, grinning.

"Do you take me for an idiot?" Kisame asked, his tone being that of mockery, but there was a hint of anger hidden there. "Of I know what Dust Release is! And I know how to counter it. Now, get ready to pay the price for underestimating me, Orochimaru..as well as the interest you've accumulated for betraying Akatsuki!"

"Before you can do that, you need to defeat my reanimated Kages," Orochimaru pointed out.

"What are you talking about? Your living corpses are nothing but-"

Kisame was stunned into silence when he saw ash, dust and paper bits swirling around the deceased Kages, reassembling their bodies back together and repairing any damage they had suffered. In a few seconds, they were completely restored. Kisame gritted his teeth, and bisected them once again with two powerful swings of Samehada. But the result was still the same. Shocked, the shark ninja took a couple steps back.

"Kukuku. They said that, thanks to your massive chakra reserves and your chakra draining sword, you can defeat any opponent by turning the battle into one of attrition," Orochimaru said, his smile unwavering. "And I'd really like to test who's going to give in first: you, or my reanimations. Don't take it personally if I bet on the latter."

"What... what kind of jutsu is this?" Kisame asked, sounding more angry than afraid.

"Kisame, move!" Deidara yelled from above.

Kisame knew better than asking what was going on, and jumped back just in time multiple clay bombs dropped from above. Said bombs detonated before they could touch the water, raising huge splashes of water and clouds of steam. The blond Iwa ninja, atop another clay bird, swooped down on him. Kisame then jumped onto the birds' back.

"Let's get the hell out of here!" Deidara shouted, his body shaking, as he commanded his bird to fly as fast and high as possible. "The second Tsuchikage can fly! If Orochimaru sends him after us, we're fucking done!"

"I'll prepare a jutsu if he gets close to us!" Kisame said, as he started to make hand seals.

Meanwhile, back on the ground, Orochimaru watched as the Kages regenerated once again from the chain of explosions, while seeing how the two Akatsuki members became smaller and smaller as they flew into the horizon.

"Don't you want me to go after them?" Mu asked the Sannin. "I can catch and kill them easily."

Orochimaru shook his head. "Tempting, but for the time being... let them leave. I want them to deliver a message to Obito. Now, return to your slumber, I'll call you back once I need you." Orochimaru said, before making a hand seal.

"Aw shi-" the Mizukage wanted to complain, but he was quickly silenced and shoved into a wooden coffin, before the lid closed it, fate he shared with his deathsworn enemy the Tsuchikage. Both coffins sunk into the ground.

"Not bad for a test run. Definitely not bad," Orochimaru said, sounding satisfied.

...

Land of Iron

"Many decades ago, Hashirama Senju and Madara Uchiha founded Konoha. That put an end to the Warring States Period and gave birth to the Ninja Villages Period," Obito began. "However, while well intentioned, all what Hashirama accomplished was escalate the problem. Now we have less wars than in the past, but their scale increased a hundredfold. I plan to put an end to that and bring an era of true peace."

"And you plan to use the Tailed Beasts to do that," Kurotsuchi guessed. "How?"

"Once they're all sealed inside the Demonic Statue, it will return to its original form, the Ten Tails," Obito explained. "Then, I shall seal that monster inside me, becoming its jinchuriki, and attaining a power similar to that of the Sage of the Six Paths. With that power, I shall unify the Elemental Nations under a single banner, with a single Ninja Village that shall act as a peacekeeping force, with me as the backbone of that army. There won't be anymore wars since there won't be any nations that will fight against each other. The new Ninja Village will establish a set of fair and just laws and shall punish those who break them."

"Kaguya Otsutsuki already tried that before, and it failed! You can't force peace like that!" Tsunade protested.

"Indeed. All the clans who joined to form the ninja villages did so under their own volition," Mei interceded. "If there's no agreement, your one nation is doomed to fail from the very beginning."

"And is the alternative any better?" Obito retorted. "Mankind is nothing but unruly children, who can't take care of their own without an authority figure supervising them. A milenium of history backs my claim. In the end, future generations will thank me and Akatsuki for making such a bold move to bring peace to the world."

"It sounds to me like you just want power without limit in order to make the world your own," Rasa snarled at Obito.

"You can think whatever you want. Our mission already had too many setbacks. Hand me the three remaining jinchuriki, or you will spend the what's little left of your life regretting what's going to happen next," Obito threatened.

"Wait a minute, three ?" Jiraiya asked. "I thought that you have captured all the jinchuriki minus Naruto and Fu!"

"Yeah, I thought so as well. But the jinchuriki of the Eight Tails managed to trick us and got away," Obito clarified.

The Kumo ninjas were visibly relieved to hear such information, even if the Raikage tried to hide it from the others.

"I knew somebody as strong as B-san couldn't have been captured by Akatsuki," Darui said in satisfaction.

"B... my brother is still alive..." the Raikage said softly, almost in a whisper. Then, his face turned into a mask of pure anger. "GOOD! BECAUSE I WILL BE ABLE TO KILL HIM MYSELF! HOW THAT DUMBASS DARE TO PULL SUCH A STUNT AND MAKE ME BELIEVE HE WAS DEAD!"

"Needless to say, Konoha isn't going to hand you the jinchuriki under our protection," Jiraiya firmly said. "And I can tell the Raikage feels the same towards Kumo's jinchuriki."

"And we will help them to make sure they won't fall into your hands!" Mei stated, saring to speak for both herself, the Kazekage and the Tsuchikage. However, both Rasa and Kurotsuchi nodded energetically.

"You should reconsider. Akatsuki has amassed a lot of power over the last years," Obito insisted. "Other than our official members and six and a half tailed beasts, we have an army of an almost one hundred thousand Zetsu. Even if you joined your armies into a single one, it would still fail to match our numbers."

"I think we made our answer clear," the Raikage growled at him.

"I see. In that case, I hereby declare the beginning of the Fourth Ninja War," Obito said, as he opened a spiraling dimensional portal to leave the place. "The next time we meet, it shall be on the battlefield."

And with that, Obito Uchiha disappeared the same way he appeared before them. His departure was followed by a moment of tense silence.

"Guess that, in the end, the five Great Nija Villages joining forces was inevitable," Mifune said. "Since we have no more options to deal with a threat of this magnitude. Hokage-dono, the Land of Iron will also join the Alliance in order to help you curb this threat."

"Your help will be mostly appreciated, Mifune-dono," Jiraiya said with a nod. "I believe I can also bring some of the minor villages into the army as well, such as Taki or Ame."

"Will they be of any use, Hokage-sama?" Itachi asked. "Ame used to be under Akatsuki's control, and Taki suffered great loses during Hidan and Kakuzu's invasion."

"Fortunately, we still have Konan, who can fill the position of leader of Ame at our behest," Jiraiya began. "And I'm sure that Taki ninjas will be eager to take revenge on the people that destroyed their home."

"Besides, we helped them retake their village and with the reconstruction efforts," Rasa added. "They might as well show some gratitude and help us. If we lose, their village will share our fate."

"Raikage-sama, I believe we should start another search for Killer B-san immediately," Darui advised. "The Akatsuki learned that he didn't return to us, meaning that he's still out there, alone and without reinforcements that may protect him from the Akatsuki."

"Yes. Send a message home to do so immediately," the Raikage agreed.

"Allow us to help on that matter," Itachi said, taking a step forward. "Our summoned animals can make the search for the jinchuriki much easier."

"Any help will be welcomed, regardless of where it comes," the Raikage said with a nod.

"That begets a question," Kurotsuchi spoke up. "What should we do with the jinchuriki? Should we hide them, or should we use them in battle? Personally, I'm partial to the former. We can't risk them being captured by the Akatsuki."

"A cautious approach, yes. But we shouldn't forget that Akatsuki has many Tailed Beasts under their control, and they won't hesitate to unleash them upon us. We will need their power to counter them. Besides, I fought alongside Naruto-kun during the Civil War. Despite his youth, he's a powerful ninja, and can be a strong asset on this war." Mei said.

"Except Akatsuki will be expecting us to do that," Darui intervened. "Akatsuki sent their Nine Tails against Kumo hoping that we would deploy our jinchuriki to counter it. Unfortunately, we fell for the trap and lost Yugito as a result. I wouldn't put past them to try the same stunt again, only on a greater scale."

The Raikage weighed in Darui's words.

"Darui speaks the truth. But if our combined forces are unable to beat Akatsuki, hiding them will be in vain," the Raikage said, unsure of what to do.

"Hokage-dono," Mifune spoke, looking at the white haired Sannin. "Given that you're the Supreme Commander of the Alliance, and two of the three jinchuriki are under Konoha's protection, I think the decision should be yours."

Jiraiya felt many eyes staring at him as the Hokage pondered over what to do. The father in him screamed to hide Naruto somewhere remote. But the ninja in him told him that no war has even been won by playing it safe. Then again, sending Naruto and Fu into a battlefield like they were now was extremely risky, too much for his taste. That moment, a solution dawned upon him. Something that would solve both their problems at once.

"Raikage," Jiraiya said, looking at his Kumo counterpart. "I believe your brother has perfect control of his Tailed Beast, am I right?"

"Yes, Killer B is a perfect jinchuriki," the Raikage confirmed. "What are you planning, Hokage?"

"Do you think Killer B could teach Naruto and Fu to tame their Tailed Beast as well?" Jiraiya asked.

"Yes, I believe he could," the Raikage said, as he realized what was Jiraiya's plan. "Plus, while he does that, we can send the three of them to a secret location where they will be safe from Akatsuki."

"And once they finish their training, we'll have not just one, but three perfect jinchuriki to aid us with the war effort," Tsunade said in realization. She smiled at her husband. "Well thought, Jiraiya."

"Though, with some luck, it won't have to come to that, and the war will be won by then," the Raikage said. "Plus we need to find B first. Though I trust he will be fine."

"Now that the alliance is formed, and the Fourth War has been declared, there's also much to do," Mifune began. "You need to contact the rulers of your respective countries and tell them about the impending war. We also need to establish a chain of command, and reorganize the five armies into a single one."

"Agreed with Mifune-dono," Jiraiya said with a nod, before turning at the other four Kages. "Meanwhile, I think we should establish the rest of the Allied Ninja Forces' hierarchy. I may be the Supreme Commander, but I want to hear your input as well."

The other four Kages nodded in agreement, and the five of them plus Mifune continued discussing the chain of leadership of the Allied Forces.

...

Outskirts of the Land of Iron

To the south of the capital of the Land of Iron was a thick forest, full of large trees covered in snow. Said trees were the perfect spot to remain hidden, spot that was chosen by Zetsu, who waited patiently for his master's return. The wait finally came to an end when he saw a spiraling portal appearing near him, and his temporary master emerged from it. Obito looked between annoyed and angry.

"I take the Kages didn't surrender the jinchuriki, did they?" the white half guessed.

"It was stupid to hope otherwise," the black half stated. "We know our plans will only come to fruition through force."

"Still, it was worth a shot," Obito replied. "Plus I wanted to see the meeting with my own eyes. I was hoping that there would be no consensus, thus making our job easier. But given that they agreed to an alliance, there was no harm in coming out and make a demand."

"Are you sure we're ready to fight them? The five Great Ninja Villages gathered under a single banner is something that has never happened before," a worried Black Zetsu said. "Their combined power must be terrifying."

"Not terrifying enough to curb the might we had amassed," Obito confidently said. "Still my intrusion wasn't a complete waste of time. Apparently, the Raikage was unaware that the jinchuriki of the Eight Tails escaped from our custody, and is still out there. I want you to track him down before our enemies do."

"Leave that in my hand," the white half said. "What will you do now, boss?"

Obito looked around, and narrowed his eyes when his eyes rested on the Three Wolves Mountain. "There's nothing to do here anymore. I'll head to the meeting point in the Mountain Graveyard. Once you track the Eight Tails and Kisame and Deidara return from killing Orochimaru, all of us will devise the strategy for the war."

"Understood, boss," the black half said.

And both Obito and Zetsu disappeared, leaving the snowy forest devoid of any human presence.

Author's Note: And with this chapter, the Kage Summit comes to an end, and we head into the final part of the story! Yep, we're on the home stretch now! Aren't you guys excited? Though, that doesn't mean that this story is ending anytime soon. According to my estimations, this story will be about 135-140 chapters long. Even if I plan it to be much shorter than it was in canon, the Fourth Ninja War arc is still going to be pretty long.

Now, a lot to unpack here. First, all the backstory changes I made regarding Madara. In canon, Madara left the village because he was worried for the Uchiha's future, which was a bit OOC and kind of came out of nowhere, so I decided to change that reason to political differences stemming from the "Love vs Power" that SHOULD have been Naruto's central theme. I think it makes much more sense, plus it was something that was in canon yet Kishimoto didn't take advantage of for some reason.

Also, the timeline of that era is a complete mess. According to canon, Hashirama, who was still the Hokage, captured the other Tailed Beasts minus Shukaku AFTER beating Madara and capturing the Nine Tails, and handed them to the other villages during the first Kage Summit... which happened in the middle of the First Ninja War, when Tobirama was Hokage. This left a lot of questions unsolved: when did Hashirama stepped down and passed the Hat to Tobirama? When - and HOW - did Hashirama die? When did the First Ninja War start? When did Madara and Hashirama have their final duel? So, in order to make sense of that, I created my own timeline that goes like this:

1. Hashirama and Madara had their disagreement, making Madara leave the village.
2. Hashirama seeks and captures seven of the nine Tailed Beasts, and hands them to the other Great Villages (and Taki) during the first Kage Summit.
3. Hashirama steps down as Hokage, Tobirama is appointed as the Second Hokage. Shortly after that, the First Ninja War breaks out, with both Hashirama and Tobirama taking part on it.
4. In the middle of the war, Madara makes his return, pulling Hashirama from the war. The two of them fight for the last time.

Madara dies, but later revives using Izanami, and the Nine Tails is sealed inside Mito.

5. Hashirama returns to the battlefield still exhausted and wounded from his fight with Madara, which results in his death. A few years later, towards the end of the war, Tobirama would die, and Hiruzen would be appointed Third Hokage.

With that out of the way, let's talk about Madara. I always thought that what happened with Rin was a dead giveaway of how Madara was going to come back, but nobody seemed to make the connection. Every reviewer that mentioned him thought that he was dead and that he would reappear as an Edo Tensei zombie like in canon. But now, you can imagine what's going to happen. And if the process turned Rin, a rather unremarkable medical ninja, into such a powerhouse, try to imagine how Madara is going to be.

Lastly, the jinchuriki. I hated how everybody always want to keep first Naruto during the Pain arc, and later Naruto and B during the war, away from the action, with only Tsunade arguing that they should be allowed to fight. And io and behold, both times Tsunade is proven right! And I hated so much how they had BREAK OUT of the island, and then face the Raikage. So that's why I came up with what I believe is a more sensible solution: Naruto and Fu will go into hiding alongside B, and begin to train to master their Tailed Beast power, and once they do that, they'll be sent to the frontlines.

Thanks a lot to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

This note is getting too long, so I better end it here. So, what did you think about this chapter, and what was revealed on it? Tell me your thoughts in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Decisions and Reencounters

Author's Note: While I did say that we're heading into the final arc of the story, I don't mean that this story is close to its end. I believe it passed the 2/3 mark not long ago. Meaning that, even if we're on the final stretch, there are still plenty of chapters left, and plenty of events to happen. Remember how long the 4th Ninja War was in canon.

Anyway, enjoy the new chapter:

Chapter 95:

Decisions and Reencounters

or

Things are about to get shaky

Training Ground Twenty Five

Naruto watched proudly as his students sparred against each other in Sage Mode. Shizune was sparring against Asuma, Shiusui with Fu, Karin with Rin and Hinata with Hanabi. Even if some of them had a better hang of senjutsu than others, all of them had made remarkable progress in such a short amount of time. Now they'd only need to polish it a little more, and they'll be ready for battle.

While senjutsu had improved their capabilities dramatically, the ones who showed it more were the Hyuga sisters. Both of them had developed an uncanny ability to project large arms of chakra from their palms, in a way similar to the Uchiha's Susanoo. Apparently, according to the Moon Acolytes, Hamura and his daughter Kalika were also Sages, and combining Senjutsu with the Tensiegan could be used to unlock new abilities.

"Learning how to draw nature energy and mixing it with your chakra is one thing," Naruto began, as he walked around the sparring pairs. "But using Sage Mode in combat is a totally different beast. Sage Mode is finite, and you need to make sure it doesn't run out in the middle of a fight. Conserving nature energy inside your bodies is paramount."

"Heh, I don't think I'll ever hear you using words like 'paramount', Naruto-kun," Shizune giggled.

Naruto scowled a little. "Well, if I'm going to be a teacher, I had to sound the part, right?"

"A part you did wonderfully," Shizune praised, before frowning a little, rubbing her head at the returning memory. "That's it, when you weren't breaking our heads open with that staff."

"Hey, it wasn't that-" Naruto said, before interrupting himself. "Oh wait, that reminds me! I need to check on the new students!"

Naruto ignored the sparring sages, and moved towards another part of the training field, where three tall stalagmites had been erected. On top of those stalagmites, Gaara, Kankuro and Temari were sitting on a stone slab each, trying to keep balance while drawing nature energy.

When the Sand Siblings asked Naruto if they could use his help with the rebuilding of a particularly large house, Naruto had to decline since he had to continue his senjutsu class. It was then when the blond realized that the Sand Siblings fit the requirements to learn Senjutsu, large chakra pools and good chakra control, and asked them to join him. Once Naruto explained them what Sage Mode was about, they were immediately on board.

"Hmmm... so far, it seems they're getting the hang out of it as well," Naruto observed. "Good, that means I don't need to use the staff."

Naruto was more careful with the anti-senjutsu staff with Sand Siblings than he had been with his previous batch of students. Mostly because, the first time he used it on Temari, she replied with a scathing "break my head again, and I'll shove that staff where the sun don't shine". Naruto didn't want to see if the blond girl was bluffing or not.

"Hey guys, how are you doing?" Naruto asked.

"I'm doing alright," Gaara said. "I think."

"Me too. The balance was hard at first, but it gets easier once you get the hang of it," Kankuro added.

"How long do we need to stay here?" Temari asked.

"You guys are making good progress as well, but let's not rush things, okay?" Naruto asked. "Better stay there a little longer before we can move onto more advanced exercises."

While Gaara and Kankuro merely nodded, he could hear Temari loudly snorting. The blond jinchuriki decided it was better to return to his other students. He drew their attention by clapping his hands.

"Okay everyone, enough with the individual spars!" Naruto said. The Konoha and one Taki ninja disengaged, and walked towards Naruto. "In order to test your skill with Senjutsu, now we're going to-"

But Naruto didn't finish his sentence, as he suddenly disappeared, leaving a puff of smoke behind. Naturally, the senjutsu trainees were left befuddled.

"Wait... was that a Shadow Clone?" Karin asked.

"I don't think so," Hinata said. "Naruto-kun said that he was leaving some Clones to help with the reconstruction, but I thought that this one was the original."

"So, what do we do now?" Fu asked.

...

Mount Myoboku

"... do a one versus all sparring match to see how much you can stand with..." Naruto stopped talking upon realizing that he was no longer in Konoha. "Uh?"

"Hey there, Naruto," a voice greeted him.

Naruto turned around, and saw his parents, Itachi and Fukasaku and Shima. It took him a few more seconds to realize where he had been brought.

"Hey, this is Mount Myoboku!" Naruto said in realization.

"Indeed it is, Naruto-chan," Fukasaku said. "Come on, there's much to discuss regarding your near future, kid. Let's go to see Gamamaru-sama."

Naruto nodded, and joined his parents, the elder toads and the one Uchiha as they walked towards where the great sage was.

"So... how was the summit?" Naruto asked.

"Eh, it had good and bad parts," Tsunade answered. "The good part is that we managed to unite the five Great Villages under a single banner. We're part of the Ninja Alliance now."

"And you're talking with its Supreme Commander!" Jiraiya proudly said.

"Now you're boasting? I thought you said you didn't want more responsibility piled on your back," Tsunade said, with a smug smile.

Jiraiya deflated. "Let me impress kid just once, okay?"

Naruto chuckled at her parents' banter, before realizing something Tsunade had said. "Wait, what about the bad parts?"

"Akatsuki showed up," it was Itachi who spoke. "More specifically, Obito."

Naruto gasped, before scowling as well. "What did he want? Did he try something?"

"Fortunately, he only wanted to talk," Tsunade said. "He asked us to hand him the three remaining jinchuriki so they could finish reviving the Ten Tails. Naturally, we told him to shove it."

"Oh yes, it turns out Akatsuki didn't capture Killer B," Jiraiya added, before Naruto could ask. "He managed to trick them with a decoy, and went away."

"Really? That's awesome!" Naruto said, beaming widely. After such a string of failing to protect his fellow jinchuriki, it was refreshing to hear that Akatsuki failed for a change.

"Unfortunately, the jinchuriki is still out there, alone and vulnerable," Itachi said. "Kumo already deployed many teams to find him, and Hokage-sama, Tsunade-sama and myself offered the help of our summoned animals."

"Let's hope we can find him before Akatsuki does," Naruto said. "Wait, that was the bad part? If all Obito did was ask for the rest of us and then left, that's not quite a big of a deal."

"Due our negative, Obito then declared the Fourth Ninja War," Jiraiya said, his tone being more ominous. "Obito claims that, on top of his surviving Akatsuki members and the Tailed Beasts, he commands an army of Zetsu of one hundred thousand strong."

"Okay, that's a pretty big deal," Naruto grimly agreed. "So, we are going to war, then?"

"No, we are going to war," Tsunade stated. "You are going somewhere else."

"WHAT? Please don't tell me that you plan to ship me away to some underground bunker!" Naruto quickly and loudly protested. "You guys need me! The Akatsuki Invasion would have been much worse if it wasn't for me!"

"Whoa! Calm down, Naruto! We didn't say that," Jiraiya said, raising his hands defensively. "We're going to send you to a special place where you will learn to control the Nine Tails."

"Both you and Fu," Itachi added. "The jinchuriki of the Eight Tails will teach you how."

Naruto's smile returned. "Really? That's awesome!"

"That way, when the time comes, you will be an even greater asset to us than you're now," Jiraiya said. "With three perfect jinchuriki, we'll be able to counter Akatsuki's Tailed Beasts."

"Awesome!" Naruto cheered, before he realized of something. "Wait, what has to do with me being here?"

"You'll see shortly, Naruto-chan. Be patient," Shima told him.

They continued the rest of their short trek in silence, until they were in front of the large elderly toad sage. Gamamaru shifted on his seat, as he noticed the group.

"Ahh... you brought the child... good, good..." Gamamaru said, his voice slow and raspy. "Come closer, Naruto... an important task awaits you."

"Good to see he didn't have one of his episodes of senility," Shima grumbled, making Fukasaku roll his eyes.

Naruto took a few steps forward. "I'm here, venerable sage," Naruto said while making a bow, trying to sound as respectful as possible. Even he knew this toad was somebody important here.

"I had a vision... you and a green beetle will go to an island... a green paradise... then, the two of you will meet an octopus..." Gamamaru began. "Said octopus... will help you tame your... inner beasts. You will meet... lost family... there will be joy... and there will be tears... for you'll reencounter some who was thought to be lost... and will say goodbye to others forever. And finally... a wave of darkness will wash over the world..."

Naruto expected the seer toad to continue, to tell him that he'd win and dispel the darkness, but no such premonition came. Impatient, he decided to speak. "What happens next? Don't we beat the darkness?"

"I... don't know," Gamamaru admitted. "What lies beyond... the darkness... I can't see. Some events... are in place but... the future... always in motion is... always changing... I'm afraid I... can't be... of much more help..."

"Don't worry, Gamamaru-sama, you helped us a lot already!" Fukasaku said, as he turned to the rest of the group. "Your news of the ninja war and plans to teach Naruto how to control the Nine Tails align with Gamamaru-sama's predictions. That's why we decided it's about time to give Naruto the key."

"Uh, key? What key?" Naruto asked, tilting his head.

"The key to your seal," Jiraiya answered. "The seal that holds the Nine Tails has a key that, when in your possession, will allow you to open and close the seal at will."

"You will need to open the seal in order to access the full power of the beast," Tsunade added.

"Okay. Where's that key, then?" Naruto asked.

"Right here!"

Naruto turned around to see a small black and orange toad landing besides him. The blond couldn't help but notice that the toad's stomach was quite strange, as if he was wearing an obi around it, but he could tell those were skin flaps, not cloth.

"Hello there!" the toad said. "My name is Gerotora! Your father trusted the key to me when he sealed the Nine Tails inside you! I've been keeping it here until the moment to hand it to you came! And that moment is now!"

"You have the key? Where?" Naruto asked.

"Again, right here," the toad repeated, this time with less enthusiasm.

Naruto's assessment turned out to be right as the toad's abdomen started to expand in a comical way, until it reached its full length. Then, much to the Uzumaki's surprise, he saw that the toad's abdomen was a very large scroll. Gerotora unfurled his scroll-abdomen to reveal a large and complex sealing pattern.

"This is the key! Once you have it, you'll have control of the seal," Gerotora explained, before furling the scroll again.

"But... what I'm supposed to do with this? Eat it?" Naruto asked, looking at the rest in search for answers.

"Hey, the kid is much brighter than he looks!" Shima happily pointed out.

Naruto's face dropped, as he looked at the smiling scroll-toad with a grimace of disgust.

...

Land of Frost

In a town on the southern coast of the Land of Frost, Killer B was sitting on the outside of a cafe, with a bottle of sake on the table, as he eagerly worked on his new rap song. His for the time short journey was proving to be very productive and inspiring, and had hopes that his new song would be finished before the end of the month.

He looked at the large waves crashing into the empty beach, smiled, and continued writing.

"Aw yeah, the view from here is amazing, I can feel new rhymes rising!" he cheered, as he happily wrote. "I really needed this vacation, so I can visit new locations!"

" Hey, B," his Tailed Beast called.

" What do you want, Number Eight? I'm busy writing, can't you wait?" the jinchuriki replied.

" B, you know that this is foolish," the Eight Tails insisted. "The Akatsuki must know about your deception by now, and they will be looking for you. Why don't we go back to Kumo? You already enjoyed quite a few days of vacation."

" Fool ya fool! My vacations just started! And you're afraid of Akatsuki, are you so fainhearted?" Killer B asked. "Those idiots would never find me if I constantly move, I bet they won't be able to follow my groove!"

Killer B could hear his Tailed Beast sigh. "At the very least, try to keep a low profile. Oh, why I even bother, I'm so dead..."

" Come on, don't be so dramatic, don't bring me down, or it will be problematic. I make sure those fools don't get their hands on you, and if I find one of them I'll turn him black and blue!" Killer B assured him.

Needless to say, the Eight Tails wasn't convinced. Though he decided to gave up, since while Killer B was stubborn on his own, talking to him was an uphill battle when he was so focused on a new song. He would try sometime later.

However, little did the jinchuriki nor his Tailed Beast realize that somebody had noticed their presence, and were going to sent such information to their boss.

...

"PUAJJJJ!" Naruto coughed, having just swallowed Gerotora. "I think I'm going to throw up!"

"Come on Naruto, it wasn't that bad," Jiraiya said. "I swallowed toads much larger than that."

Naruto wanted to ask why, but he felt like he wouldn't like the answer. He was about to say something else, but continued coughing violently.

"Wait, isn't going Fu going to need the key to her seal as well?" Tsunade asked. "We need to talk with whoever sealed the Seven Tails inside her."

"No need to," Jiraiya said. "Fu's seal can already be undone by herself. It's not as secure as the Eight Trigrams Seal, but given that Seven Tails is not as powerful, it's not necessary. And thank goodness, since the man who did the sealing is Shibuki's father, who died many years ago."

"Now that you guys have everythig you need, we'll send you back to Konoha," Fukasaku said, as he and Shima made a hand seal.

"Heh, thanks to the toads, we can skip another week-long trip in order to get back home," Tsunade observed, nodding in satisfaction.

"We'll return where Naruto-chan was just before he was summoned here!" Shima added.

And with that, the four Konoha ninjas and the two elder toads disappeared, leaving a cloud of smoke in their wake.

...

Trainig Ground Twenty Five

"Hey, look, Naruto is back!" Fu cheerfully said.

All the Sage trainees turned around to see Naruto's return, though they could see he didn't return alone.

"Oh, Hokage-sama, Tsunade-sama and Itachi-kun are also back," Shizune observed.

"Hey, Itachi!" Shisui called out, as he took a step forward. The younger Uchiha could see that his cousin was in Sage Mode, if the wing-shaped black marking around his eyes were any indication. "Check this out!" Shisui then proceeded to create an armored Susanoo around him, armed with a drill-like spear. "Senjutsu Susanoo! Not only is stronger than the normal one, but thanks to Sage Mode, I can counter the eye strain caused by the Mangekyo Sharingan, meaning that I can use it as much as I want despite not having the Eternal version!"

Itachi smiled, genuinely impressed by his cousin's breakthrough. "That's amazing, Shisui. I can't wait to see it in action."

"Wait a minute, if the Mangekyo Sharingan slowly worsens your eyesight until you go blind... how is that Obito isn't blind yet?" Rin asked. "He uses his Mangekyo Sharingan non-stop."

"If I were to make a conjecture, I'd say that the regeneration provided by his Zetsu body is able to nullify the deteriorating eyesight," Itachi guessed. "But I wouldn't know for sure."

"Come on Itachi, fight me! Today, I shall reclaim my rightful place as the greatest of the Uchiha!" Shisui said, as he pointed at Itachi in an overly dramatic manner.

"Sadly, you will have to leave that for later, since we have urgent matters to attend to," Tsunade began. "Shisui, Hinata, given that the two of you are the heads of the Uchiha and Hyuga, you need to come with us. Naruto, use some clones to tell the rest of the Clan Heads still in the village that they're needed for an urgent meeting at the Hokage Tower."

"Right away, mom," Naruto said, as he did as Tsunade asked.

"Fu, you will have to come with us too," Jiraiya said, much to the green haired girl's surprise. "There has been some developments that concern you."

"Uh... sure, understood, Hokage-sama," Fu said with a nod. Even she could tell that the situation was serious.

"Can you guys tell us what just happened?" Hanabi asked.

"I'll leave a clone here in order to explain," Naruto said. "Sadly, the class will have to end sooner than usual. I'll tell Gaara and his siblings as well."

Meanwhile, Shima noticed that Shisui, who was speaking with Itachi, radiated nature energy.

"Wait, is he a Sage too?" Shima asked in shock.

"Not just him," Fukasaku said. "All the humans here are Sages! Can you feel it, Ma? This place is overflowing with Nature energy!"

"How it is possible?" Shima asked in shock.

"I told you Naruto-chan wanted to teach other people how to use nature energy," Fukasaku explained. "And it seems he was successful."

"Without Myoboku's special oil? How did he do it?" the female toad asked, her shock growing with each second.

"Heh, Naruto-chan surely does the impossible, doesn't he?" Fukasaku asked, sounding proud. "Come, I'll tell you his idea."

...

Hokage Tower, Council Room, an hour later

As Jiraiya surveyed the people sitting at both sides of the large table and making sure that nobody was missing, the Hokage realized that he had never seen the Council Room so crowded. At his sides were his four advisors: Tsunade, Hiruzen, Koharu and Homura, and next to them were Naruto and Fu, the jinchuriki.

Then, there were the Clan Heads of the most important and/or populous Konoha clans, such as the Hyuga, Uchiha, Sarutobi or Aburame, as well many other high ranking members of Konoha's ninja corps, such as the Jonin Commander or the Anbu commander. Some of the people there were pulling double duty, such as the aforementioned Jonin Commander, Shikaku Nara, also the head of the Nara Clan.

Hinata wasn't the only young teen representing her clan. Ino Yamanaka was also there, as the Clan Head of hers.

"Is everybody here? Yeah, I think so," the Hokage muttered, mostly to himself. "Hello, and thank you for coming here with such short notice. I'll go to the point: in their bid to claim all Tailed Beasts, Akatsuki has declared a war against the Elemental Nations."

Naturally, the effect was immediate. Many of the present started to murmur among each other, while others started to ask questions to the Hokage, raising their voice over each other in hopes to be heard or answered first.

"Order! Order!" Tsunade shouted, slamming her fist into the table for added effect multiple times. Thankfully, she managed to control her strength enough not to break it. "The Hokage will explain you everything! Now keep quiet and listen, because this shit is important!"

"Thank you, Hime," Jiraiya said. Tsunade smiled in return. "As you probably know, my wife and I have been in the Land of Iron on a summit with the other four Kage, in order to discuss what to do with the Akatsuki threat. In the middle of the meeting, Obito, the new leader of Akatsuki, appeared before us and demanded the three remaining jinchuriki to be handed to him. Naturally, we told him no. In response, he threatened to unleash an army of Zetsu one hundred thousand strong, backed by the Tailed Beasts Akatsuki has captured so far, against Konoha and the rest of the villages.

"If what Obito says is true, then Akatsuki possesses a power that Konoha alone can't hope to defeat. Fortunately, we aren't alone. On top of Kiri and Suna helping us, Kumo and Iwa agreed to join us to form the world's very first Ninja Alliance. We shall-

"You have to be kidding me!" Tsume Inuzuka shouted. "Are you really willing to ally with Iwa scum!?"

"Not to mention Kumo!" Choza added. "Those guys have been trying to kidnap little girls with Bloodline Limits from Konoha multiple times!"

"I think it's obvious the situation at hand is dire enough to merit such measures," Shibi calmly replied, though his tone was firm. "I trust Hokage-sama to do the right thing."

"I agree with Shibi-san," Shikaku said. "Besides, Kiri and Konoha used to be enemies, yet now we're allies."

"Come on Shikaku, you're supposed to take my side!" Choza loudly protested.

"I take the side that makes more sense!" Shikaku argued back, raising his voice to match his large friend's.

Eventually, another argument broke out as everybody tried to yell at each other, trying to assert who was right not by the strength of their arguments but by the volume of their voices, resulting in a cacophony of shouts and yells.

"SILENCE, YOU FUCKS!" Tsunade bellowed, making everybody to instantly shut up. "The next time you do that, all of you will go out of the window, got it!?"

"Thank you again, Hime. Anyway, as I was saying, the five Great Villages shall join forces as a Ninja Alliance, with me directing it as its Supreme Commander," this new managed to ease some of those present who didn't like the idea of working with villages who had been enemies until now. "Given that we're in a situation of war, no more missions shall be accepted, and all the accepted missions minus the A and S ranked shall be cancelled and their price reimbursed to the customers. We won't fight individually, the plan is for all villages to create a single, massive army composed of every village."

"Even if they don't usually involve themselves in the affair of ninjas, the Samurai of the Land of Iron shall assist us in this war," Tsunade added. "We're also working on bringing Ame and Taki into the Alliance, since we'll need every last man and woman able to fight if we want to win this."

"Hokage-sama," Homura spoke. "What about the jinchuriki? What are we going to do with them?"

"Akatsuki already tried to claim them by force once," Koharu added. "If we keep them here, they will come again. And I don't trust the rest of the villages to move their armies into the Land of Fire to protect us in time before a second attack happens."

"You do rise a good point, and rest assured that such topic had been dealt with," Jiraiya said, before looking into Naruto and Fu's general direction. "Many of you know that Kumo's remaining jinchuriki, the Raikage's younger brother Killer B, has complete control over his Tailed Beast. The Raikage had agreed to allow his brother to train Naruto and Fu so they can master their jinchuriki powers as well.

Said training will take part at a secret location, ensuring the safety of our jinchuriki."

"Once Naruto and Fu finish their training, they shall join the front lines. With their new powers, we should be able to win the war for good," Tsunade added. "Though we do hope that we can win before that happens."

"Indeed," Jiraiya continued. "Now, while we were at the Summit, the other Kages and I created an structure for the army of the Ninja Alliance. It will be split into two groups: the Support Divisions, composed by the medics, sensors and intelligence, and the Battle Regiment, split into five divisions. Each of these divisions will be lead by a field commander. We need to discuss which ninjas shall be deployed in which divisions."

...

"Oh, thank the Heavens! Killer B-sensei is still alive!" Karui squealed in joy, after hearing what the Naruto clone had told her.

The Naruto Clone had gathered the Konoha 15 (minus Hinata and Ino, who were busy attending the meeting with the Hokage), Rin, the Sand Siblings, Maki's students and Killer B's students. One of the first thing Naruto had told them was about the ending of the summit, Obito's appearance, the revelation that Killer B had escaped Akatsuki, and the declaration of war.

"But if sensei is alive, why didn't he return to us already?" T asked.

"Maybe he was unable to," Omoi began. "Maybe tried to find a town in order to ask for help, but said town was ran by a criminal gang who wanted to capture sensei in order to cash on his bounty, but then-"

Karui silenced Omoi with a well timed slap to the back.

"Enough with your nonsense! I'm sure sensei had a very good reason to do so," Karui firmly stated. "It's not that he pretended to be dead just so he could go on vacation. I'd cut his balls if he did that."

"While the escape of the jinchuriki of the Eight Tails is indeed a very good new, we should focus on the greater picture," Gaara stated. "There's a war in the horizon. One that will encompass all five Great Villages. A war of this scale is something that has never been seen before."

"Well, I for once am not worried," Kiba interjected. "You should have seen those Akatsuki shits coming here and wreaking havoc. I doubt war will be any different than what we went through already."

"I wouldn't speak so lightly, Kiba," Neji interjected. "While I never experienced the horrors of war, plenty of my clansmen, my own father included, did. And they don't have pleasant memories of such events."

"Yeah, if anything, it's going to be worse," Shikamaru added. "Before we used to have homefield advantage. In an open war, it won't be the case."

"And as much as we enjoyed staying here, that means we will have to head back to Suna and prepare for the war," Temari said, as she and Shikamaru exchanged gloomy stares. "Guess it was fun while it lasted."

"Hey, we will see each other soon," Shikamaru said, trying to be optimistic. "Even if it will be on a battlefield."

"But hopefully, you guys will be on the same side," Matsuri chimed in.

"Yeah, it will be soooooo tragic if you had to be at different sides of a conflict," Yukata said. "Hey, that sounds like a neat idea for a romantic novel, don't you think, Matsuri-chan?"

"Totally! Maybe we can work on it once this war is over?" Matsuri suggested.

"Also, that's not all," the Naruto clone intervened, before Matsuri and Yukata could derail the conversation any further. "Fu and I aren't going to take part in the war. At least, not from the very beginning."

"It's because the two of you are jinchuriki," Shino said. It wasn't a question, but an statement.

"Yeah. The Raikage is going to send us to this super secret place Kumo owns where their jinchuriki trained to master their powers," the clone explained. "Fu and I are going to be sent there to do that as well. Once our training is over, we will join you guys."

"Oh, I think that I know what place you refer to," Karui said. "B-sensei told us about it. It's extremely hard to find, and only the highest ranking Kumo Jonin know how to reach it. You two will be safe as long as you're there."

"What do you know about that place, Karui?" Choji asked the redhead.

"As much as B-sensei told me," Karui replied. She then frowned a little. "Though I'm not going to say anything out loud here in the open. There might be an Akatsuki spy listening to this conversation."

"Oh, right. Sorry I didn't realize of that," Choji sheepishly apologized.

"We might better return as well," T stated. "I think we've been here long enough, and the journey to Kumo is a long one."

With that, the foreign ninjas returned to the places they were staying at while in Konoha in order to pack their things in order to move back to their home villages, leaving the Konoha ninjas alone.

"I can't believe Obito went as far as to declare a war to the entire continent," Rin said, as she wrapped her arms around her body.

"Just... what happened to him after my death to make him fall this low?"

"It might be hard for you to do, but you must understand that the current Obito is not the same boy who used to be your teammate," Shino replied. "I apologize if I sound cold, but as long as he poses a threat of such magnitude, we should focus on bringing him down, not on what caused him to turn to our enemies."

"Yes... I agree," Rin forced herself to say. "You know, I have the feeling that, the next time we see Obito, it will be the last... no matter how things end between us."

"I think your prediction will be accurate," was Shino's reply.

...

Hokage Tower, many hours later

It took them quite a lot of time and many heated discussions, but they were finally able to finish the division designation for every active Konoha ninja. The sun was starting to hide in the horizon, and Jiraiya was reviewing the draft one last time. The rest of the people present in the room had left already once the meeting had been officially concluded, leaving the Hokage to make sure that everything was perfect. Fortunately, his wife was still with him, helping him with such mentally exhausting task.

"I believe this is okay," Jiraiya said, before looking at Tsunade. "Unless you have something to say, that's it."

"No, I think we did a good job with the division assignments," Tsunade said, before letting out a yawn. "So, do we need to send this to anybody or...?"

"I'm the Supreme Commander, remember?" Jiraiya boasted with a confident grin. "In fact, it's the other Kages who should defer to me."

Though once the other Kages have done the division assignment, we will gather at the Allied Forces HQ for the final preparations."

Besides the main chain of command, the Kages also decided to build a new place to serve as the Alliance's headquarters for ease of command, instead of using any of the Ninja Villages. Given that Jiraiya was the Supreme Commander, it would be build in the Land of Fire, around Konoha's vicinity.

"Hopefully the new headquarters will be finished soon," Jiraiya said, before standing up. "And I don't know about you, but I'm so tired I could sleep for a week. And the days to come are going to be even crazier than today, so we better get as much rest as we can."

"I can agree with that," Tsunade replied.

The two Sannin were about to stand up and leave for their home, when somebody else entered the room. It was Hiruzen, their former sensei, who had left the meeting room not that much ago.

"Sensei? What are you doing here?" Tsunade asked. "Shouldn't you be home, resting?"

"Yes, I should," Hiruzen admitted. "However, I forgot about something important, and thank goodness, I have found you two here before you left."

"What is it, sensei?" Jiraiya asked.

"Can you tell me what division I'm supposed to be assigned to?" Hiruzen asked, trying to remember. "Because no matter how much I try, I just can't recall it."

Jiraiya and Tsunade shared a look of worry, before their eyes rested on their aged sensei again.

"Uh, sensei..." Tsunade began, trying to sound gentle. "You... we didn't assign you to any division."

Though much to their surprise, the former Hokage smiled. "Yes, that's what I thought. I would have remembered if you did."

Jiraiya, however, immediately realized where the former Hokage wanted to say. "Whoa there, wait a second, sensei! I hope you're not asking me to send you to the battlefield!"

"And why not? Because I'm old?" Hiruzen replied, indignant. "I may be long past my prime, but I know I can still help our younger ninjas in the battleground."

"Sensei... you've fought in every past Ninja War so far," Tsunade continued. "Don't you think it's about time that you take a rest? You did more than enough for several generations that came after yours."

"Yeah, you should spend the days you have left playing with your grandkids, not fighting another war," Jiraiya added.

"That's no excuse for me not to do more," Hiruzen firmly said, as a frown started to develop on his face. "How can I look at my grandkids in the eyes, knowing that their parents are risking their lives for their future, but their grandfather and clan leader isn't?"

"Listen, sensei, you can't-" Jiraiya was about to say, but was interrupted when Tsunade whispered something into his ear. "You sure?"

Tsunade merely nodded.

"Very well then. Sensei, my wife here has suggested me a position for you where your talents won't be wasted," Jiraiya began.

"Jiraiya, I'm not going to accept any position of 'war advisor' or something equally inane just so you can-"

"It's not that," the Toad Sage said, interrupting him. "I think you can be a pretty good addition to Naruto and Fu's security detail."

"Jiraiya..." Hiruzen grumbled.

"Come on sensei! This is important!" Jiraiya insisted. "Do you think I would send mediocre ninjas to protect my son? The fact that we thought of you for this should speak volumes about how much we trust you and your skills."

Hiruzen wanted to protest, but in the end he resigned to Jiraiya's decision.

"I always preached that the older generations should get more involved in the development of the younger ninjas. It would be very hypocritical of me to turn down such position," Hiruzen said, as he smiled. His eyes rested on Tsunade. "Well played, Tsunade. You always had a cunning mind."

Tsunade merely smirked in return.

"Don't think you're going to be a glorified babysitter, sensei," Jiraiya reassured him. "Everything regarding Naruto and his training is important. If you can keep him safe and help him train with his new powers, your actions will help us more than if we merely send you to a battlefield."

"Naruto, Fu and his bodyguards will depart in a few days for Kumo's secret base, where the jinchuriki of the Eight Tails should be waiting for them," Tsunade added. "Meet them at the West Gate."

"Understood. I'll be heading home now to pack some essentials for the journey," Hiruzen said, finally leaving the two Sannin alone.

"Stubborn old man..." Jiraiya groaned. "Hime, you have permission to kill me if I end up like that in my old age."

"You may end up regretting those words," Tsunade replied with a cheeky grin.

...

Land of Frost, that very moment

Since he left that port town, Killer B has been prey to a feeling of uneasiness, as if an impending danger greater than any other was hanging on his head. That's what made the rogue jinchuriki to leave the town and seek refuge elsewhere.

"I feel like there's somebody out there out to cut my balls," Killer B said, before shivering a little.

"B, don't you think it's a little to dangerous to wander around like this?" the Eight Tails warned. "You should have waited until next morning to continue your journey."

"No, you see, it's part of my plan, to hide in the darkness, the idea of a wise man! My enemies won't find me, if I travel during the night, that way I can avoid any fight! Oh yeah!" Killer B rapped, satisfied with his brilliant idea. Brilliant according to him at least.

That moment, Killer B heard something rustling a nearby bush. He turned around, and unsheathed one his swords.

"What? Have I been found? How? I've been silent and sneaky like a foxhound!" Killer B said, frantically looking around.

"Just a second ago you've been loudly rapping," the Eight Tails deadpanned. "I'm sure everybody in a kilometer radius heard you."

Once again, B heard another rustle, followed by another one. There were more than just one enemy, and they were getting closer. Yes, he could heard them coming closer and closer. They weren't even bothering with stealth anymore.

"It seems those Akatsuki bores are back, come on Number Eight, let's give them a mighty smack!" Killer B said, unsheathing another sword.

The Eight Tails sighed. "I knew it was going to end like this one way or another."

Another rustle, this time much louder. That's where the attack was going to come from.

"I got you now! Prepare to-"

"DROP KICK!"

However, that was merely a distraction. Killer B barely had any time to see a white and brown blur dashing at him, before he was at the receiving end of a brutal flying kick. Said kick sent him flying against a tree, which was instantly brought down by the sheer force of B's momentum. Three more trees suffered the same fate until B finally stopped.

"U... ugh... that was..." a dazed Killer B said.

Looking up, he saw a massive figure angrily towering over him, surrounded by more ninjas. The giant grabbed him by his neck and lifted him to eye level.

"B-brother?" Killer B blabbered.

"YOU FUCKING IDIOT!" the Raikage said, as he started to violently shake Killer B. "MAKING ME BELIEVE YOU WERE DEAD SO COULD GO YOUR MERRY WAY! YOU GODDAMNED DUMBASS, I'M GOING TO PUNCH YOU UNTIL I BEAT THE STUPIDITY OUT OF YOU! YOU HEAR ME!? WHEN I'M DONE WITH YOU... !"

The rest of the Kumo ninjas merely watched the comical display, knowing full well that the Raikage wouldn't carry those threats. At least most of them.

"It's a good thing we found him before the Akatsuki did," C noted. He then turned to a brown haired Kumo kunoichi wearing a short Kumo flak jacket that left her midriff exposed. "Ran, send a message home. Tell them that we finally found Killer B, and we will be sending him back to the village. Tell them to prepare a ship, since we're going to send him to the Island Turtle."

"Understood, C-san," the kunoichi, Ran, said before leaping away.

"Well, it's a good thing that in the end, it was all a scare," C said, sighing.

"... THAT YOUR GREAT-GRANDKIDS ARE GOING TO FEEL IT! THAT'S IT, IF YOU LIVE LONG ENOUGH TO FATHER THEM!"

...

Konoha's West Gate, a few days later

Naruto, Fu, and their escorts were ready to depart Konoha for Kumo's mysterious island. Their escort team was composed by Genma, Raido, Choza Akimichi, Yugao, Hayate, Hiruzen Sarutobi, and lastly Tenzo, who was there just in case things would go out of control regarding the Nine Tails. Jiraiya, Tsunade, their younger children, Naruto's teammates, and Team Kakashi were there to bid the two jinchuriki a safe journey.

"Once you arrive the island, send me a toad so I know that the journey went well," Jiraiya told his son. "Since it's one of the few ways to deliver a message Akatsuki has no way of intercepting."

"Don't worry dad, I'm sure Akatsuki doesn't even know where are we going," Naruto reassured him.

"Still, it's better to be too cautious than to be careless," Tsunade agreed with her husband.

Fu walked towards Shino, wrapped her arms around his neck, and gave him a kiss on the lips.

"Guess we won't see each other in some time," Fu said, sounding a little melancholic. "I'll keep you in my mind to inspire me if this training proves to be too much."

"I know that whatever trials you have to face, you will overcome them without trouble," Shino reassured her. And in a rare display for the Aburame, he smiled. "Because you're one of the strongest and most skilled kunoichi I've ever met."

Fu didn't say anything, she merely rested her head on Shino's shoulder.

Hinata, naturally, also wanted to give her boyfriend a special goodbye.

"Good luck during your training, Naruto-kun," Hinata said. "Hopefully the war will be over before we need you to intervene."

"Yeah, let's hope," Naruto said.

The two of them kissed. However, during the kiss, a jolt of electricity shocked the blond. Naruto yelped and jumped back, holding his mouth in pain.

"Ouch! What the...? you shocked me!" Naruto protested.

"Hehe, sorry..." Hinata sheepishly said. "Takuya-san said that my powers have been growing lately. It seems I have some trouble keeping them under control. Guess you're not the only one who needs some training, are you?"

"Sorry to cut this moment short, but Naruto and Fu need to head to the port as soon as possible," Jiraiya said. "Sensei, given that you're the most veteran ninja of the group, you'll be the captain of this mission. Good luck."

"Don't worry, Jiraiya, Tsunade. Your son and Fu-san will be safe under my watch," Hiruzen promised then. "Everybody, let's go!"

The elderly Hokage leaped towards the trees, with the rest of the Konoha ninjas following him. Jiraiya and the others turned back and returned to the village, given that they soon would leave their home for a dangerous mission.

...

Mountain Graveyard

Given that Akatsuki was heading into the final phase of their plans, Obito had decided to make his secret base, formerly belonging to Madara, into his base of operations and headquarters for the war. Obito was now inside a cave that connected his lair to the exterior, in the middle of a mountain. Deidara, Kisame, Toneri and Black Zetsu were standing around him.

"Look at that. When we started, we were ten, and now only half of us remain," Kisame said, looking at the small group, before his gaze rested upon Obito again. "So, what's the plan, boss?"

"Despite our failure at invading Konoha, we still have the superior numbers. Ninety five thousand Zetsu clones, plus about two thousand puppets Toneri still has in the Moon," Obito looked at Toneri, who nodded in return. "According to the information provided by Zetsu, the Ninja Alliance managed to marshal a force of eighty thousand strong. They may bump those numbers to eighty five thousand if they manage to convince some of the minor villages to lend their forces."

"Still, numbers aren't everything," Toneri reminded. "Konoha has ninjas powerful enough to be worth dozens of your Zetsu clones, and it would be unwise not to assume the same of the other villages. We need to be cautious."

"Cautious? What we need to do is attack now! In war, whoever strikes first, strikes twice!" Deidara loudly interjected. "We should strike now while they're getting ready for us!"

"And I agree with you, Deidara," Obito said, much to the blond's satisfaction. "We shall start moving our troops as soon as possible. My plan is to focus our force on Konoha and Kumo. Given that the remaining jinchuriki are under their care, that's where they will be hiding. By concentrating our forces on those two villages, we will force them to come out and join the fight. Once in the open, catching them should be much easier."

"A bold plan, Obito-kun. Somebody would say it's a little too bold," a new voice said.

The five Akatsuki turned around, and saw Orochimaru casually strolling into the cave. Kimimaro and Tayuya were flanking him, acting as bodyguards. While every other Akatsuki got on guard - especially Kisame and Deidara-, Obito smiled, strangely enough.

"Orochimaru! So nice to see you drop by!" Obito said in a mock happy tone, spreading his arms around. "I was quite disappointed when Deidara and Kisame failed to kill you, but it was so selfless of you saving me the trouble of tracking you down again," Obito's smile disappeared, replaced by a scowl of anger. "Kill him."

The four other Akatsuki moved forward ready to attack. Kimimaro and Tayuya quickly placed themselves in front of their master, acting as human shields, while Orochimaru jumped backwards and made several hand seals. Hand seals both Deidara and Kisame recognized.

"Oh shit! Don't let him finish-" Deidara said, as he rushed to prepare an explosive.

Too late.

"Summoning Jutsu: Impure World Resurrection!"

Orochimaru slammed his hands into the ground, and five coffins emerged. Said coffins were marked with the kanji of each of the five elemental nations, and a number under them. Three twos, and two threes. The lids of the coffins fell forward, revealing the reanimated corpses of the second Tsuchikage and Second Mizukage that nearly killed Kisame and Deidara during their previous fight, plus the Third Kazekage, Third Raikage, and Second Hokage.

"Are you sure you wish to fight me?" Orochimaru asked, almost in a taunting tone. "Obito, you have nothing to win and much to lose."

"So, that's why he let Kisame and Deidara live despite having the chance to kill them. Either he or a spy working for him must have followed them to this place," Obito thought.

There was a moment of tense silence, as Obito weighed the question. Kisame and Deidara already told Obito about Orochimaru's reanimated puppets, and how it was impossible to kill them. He didn't know what the Sannin wanted, but given that he already declared the war, he couldn't afford to focus on him any longer. He knew for a fact that even if Orochimaru wasn't a friend, he would never help the Ninja Alliance.

Given that Truth Seeking Balls could nullify ninjutsu, he was confident Toneri could permanently kill those reanimations. Still, a fight right here could end with one or two Akatsuki dead, and he couldn't afford to lose more people before the war ever began. Still, before making his decision, there were a couple questions that needed answers.

"What do you want, traitor?" Obito asked. "You defected the organization, and now you come back to us. What the hell do you want?"

"Why don't we talk somewhere more private?" Orochimaru asked. "That pocket dimension of yours, perhaps?"

"So, you know of Kamui," Obito said. "Very well."

Obito closed the distance between him and his fellow Konoha traitor, grabbed Orochimaru, and teleported the two of them away.

...

The next second, both Obito and Orochimaru reappeared inside the Kamui dimension. Orochimaru took a few seconds to inspect it.

"So, this is it?" Orochimaru asked. "I must say, it's far more... underwhelming than I expected."

"Why did you ask me to bring you here?" Obito asked. "You know I could teleport back to the real world and leave you here to rot forever?"

Orochimaru merely chuckled. "Do you really think I'd ask you to bring me here if I didn't have a way out? I'm sure you know about how Reverse Summoning works."

"Of course," Obito said, rolling his eyes. "Come on, I have a war to win. Make your demands already."

"While I have no intention of returning to Akatsuki as a permanent member," Orochimaru began. "There's something I want. Something both sides of this conflict have. Something I need to possess in order to achieve my goal."

"The Rinnegan," Obito guessed. "Do you expect me to give you my Rinnegan? Really, Orochimaru?"

"Of course not. But it's not the only Rinnegan out there, is it?" Orochimaru asked. "Konoha managed to keep the other. According to my spies, Tsunade-hime wields it now."

"I'm aware of that as well. So, you want Tsunade's Rinnegan. But you can't take it on your own," Obito continued to guess. "Not even with your army of immortal zombies?"

"My plan was for Danzo to get the Rinnegan for me. I'll keep one, he would keep the other," Orochimaru said. "Imagine my surprise when I found that Danzo was, and has always been, a puppet of yours all these years. A masterful move indeed, Obito-kun. I admit I underestimated you."

"So, that's why you defected the organization. Once you got what you wanted, we were of no more use to you anymore," Obito said in disgust. "Still, you haven't answered my question."

"Regrettably, no, I can't do it alone. I already tried it before in the past, yet Konoha somehow found a way to neutralize my reanimations," Orochimaru said, his eyes narrowing, angered by the memory. "But if we join our forces, both our chances will be better. Let's join forces, Obito-kun. With my army of undead supporting your White Zetsu army, the Ninja Alliance will be crushed. I will get Tsunade's Rinnegan, and you'll get the last three Tailed Beasts."

"Do you think I'm going to trust you with a Rinnegan?" Obito asked.

"Why not? Once you form the Ten Tails and absorb it inside your body, I shouldn't be a threat to you anymore, Rinnegan or not," Orochimaru said with a shrug. "You can then create that new world without war and conflict you wish so much. I will simply spend the rest of my years in quiet solitude, continuing my research. Both of us win."

Regardless of how much he despised the Sannin, he had to admit it was an enticing offer. An immortal army composed of the strongest ninjas that ever lived... yes, that would give him the additional push he needed to crush his enemies.

"I already saw those five Kages. What else do you have?" Obito asked.

"Heads of the strongest clans of all the Elemental Nations. Legendary ninjas. Former jinchuriki," Orochimaru began. "And if you bring me new samples of DNA, I can create more."

"Sounds promising," Obito said with a nod. "One last thing. Do you have anybody disposable? Somebody you resurrected by accident, or who didn't meet your expectations?"

"Quite a lot. Why?" Orochimaru asked. He didn't know why Obito was interested in his failed reanimations, something that made him uneasy.

"Summon one of those now, please," Obito asked.

Not sure why, Orochimaru complied. Even if he was worried, he was also curious as to what Obito wanted to do. Another coffin appeared between the two of them, revealed a young Iwa ninja.

"Huh? Where am I? What is this place?" the disoriented ninja asked.

Wordlessly, Obito placed a hand on the reanimation's head.

"Ningendo!"

Then, much to Orochimaru's shock, Obito ripped the soul out of the zombie's body. The soul quickly vanished, returning to the afterlife, while the body left behind crumbled into dust and ashes covering the sacrifice used to create it.

"It doesn't regenerate. Good," Obito said, smirking at Orochimaru, who didn't smile back. "Glad to see that, if you try to do something funny, I have the means to stop your army. Also, given that Tsunade has the same power as I do now, I'd avoid sending your reanimations against her, or their fate will be the same."

"Hn, guess my position isn't as strong as I initially believed," Orochimaru was forced to admit. "So, now that you proved you have nothing to fear from me, do we have a deal?"

"We have a deal," Obito confirmed. "However, there's one more thing I want from you."

...

A few minutes later, in the real world, both Orochimaru and Obito returned from Obito's Kamui dimension through a spiraling portal. The two of them appeared satisfied.

"Guys, I know that Orochimaru abandoned us in the past, but we're going to let him help us in this endeavor," Obito announced.

Kisame chuckled, while Toneri raised an eyebrow. Deidara, however, was louder than the other two.

"Did you lose your fucking mind!?" Deidara shouted. "So, this guy leaves-"

"Silence!" Obito shouted back, forcing the Iwa ninja to keep quiet. "There are circumstances that forced me to accept this kind of agreement. Also, before we begin the war, one more thing: we are going to seal our half of the Nine Tails."

"What?" Zetsu asked, perpelexed. "Aren't we going to use it?"

"I thought that we have to have the other eight Beasts first before we could seal that one," Toneri said.

"If it's just half, then there's no danger," Obito told them. "Now enough blabbering. It's time to get to work!"

Author's Note: We add the Sand Siblings to the list of Senjutsu users because like I said before, all three of them fit the requirements. And because they're fucking awesome and deserve better than what they got in canon.

And as I'm sure a lot of you expected, Orochimaru rejoins Akatsuki, even if it's more an alliance of convenience than proper membership as it has been before. I'm sorry for those of you who expected him to remain independent, but I can't have a Ninja War with White Zetsu clones alone. Without the Edo Tensei zombies, it would be unbelievably dull. And speaking of which, I do plan to take advantage of this jutsu more than Kishimoto did. There are quite a few deceased ninjas that Kishimoto never thought about brining back, despite having a lot of potential for epic and emotional fights, like Sakumo Hatake, Mito Uzumaki or Fugaku Uchiha.

Also, why did Obito want to seal their half of the Nine Tails, instead of using it like he has been done so far? Don't worry, you'll see why in due time.

Next chapter, Naruto and Fu will arrive at the Turtle Island to begin their training under Killer B. I have something special prepared that I'm sure all of you are going to enjoy. And thankfully, this time around the Kumo ninjas didn't have to save B from an Akatsuki about to capture him. And once the hard part of the training is done, the proper war will finally commence.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

So, what did you think about this chapter? Did you enjoy it? Hated it? Neither? Tell me your thoughts in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Genbu the Turtle Island

Author's Note: Okay, a lot of people have been asking for quite a long time, so here it is. With this chapter, Naruto's training to master Kurama's power finally begins. I know a lot of you wanted this to happen much sooner, but I don't want to make Naruto so powerful I have trouble coming up with conflicts he can't solve instantly. I already regretted giving him Sage Mode so soon, and I wasn't going to make the same mistake twice.

Enjoy:

Chapter 96:

Genbu the Turtle Island

or

Not really a vacation

Hyuga Estate

"Okay, here we go. You ready?"

"Yeah, let's get on with it."

"I should warn you that this might hurt. Like... a lot."

"I know, I know! Come on, let's start already."

"If the pain becomes too much, tell me and I-"

"Goddamit girl, do you ever shut up!?"

"R-Right, sorry. I'll get started immediately. Truth Seeking Ball!"

Inside a room of the Hyuga Compound were two women: Anko Mitarashi, lying on her belly on a bed, wearing nothing from her waist up, and Hinata Hyuga, sitting besides her, having just created a Truth Seeking Ball.

After word that Hinata had used her new powers to remove the what most people thought unremovable Caged Bird Seal, the Hyuga Clan head got a visit from Anko, who asked if she could do whatever she did to the Branch House members in order to remove the cursed seal Orochimaru marked her with so many years ago. While Hinata was a busy woman, she was able to make some time for such an important request.

"Okay, here we go," Hinata said.

The blue haired girl slowly lowered the Truth Seeking Ball towards the cursed seal on the base of Anko's neck. Even if it was in a less dangerous zone than the Caged Bird Seal, and it wasn't linked to the brain, the neck was a delicate zone as well. Finally, the Truth Seeking Ball made contact with Anko's skin, and the orb started to erase the seal. There was a hissing sound that was quickly silenced by Anko's screams.

"AAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAGGGGHHHHHHH!"

On top of the screams, Anko started to trash wildly in place. Hinata was startled, almost fell from her chair as she quickly removed the black orb from Anko's body.

"Sorry, sorry!" Hinata quickly apologized.

"Why... why did you stop, girl?" Anko asked, as she tried to regain her bearings.

"You... you looked to be in a lot of pain... and you started to move a lot..." Hinata replied.

"Yes, I admit it hurt like hell," Anko said, rubbing the marked spot. "Did it hurt that much with the other seal?"

"A little, but not as much as you say," Hinata said. "Though, I can see that this seal is different. The Caged Bird Seal felt inert, and this one... it feels like it's alive. Like it was trying to fight me, and wanted to preserve its existence at all costs. Like a cornered animal."

"Yeah, that's because this seal has a portion of Orochimaru's chakra and will," Anko explained. "As long as this seal exists, I'm linked to him. It has a mind of its own, and if I drop my guard, it will try to take over me."

"That's... horrible," Hinata said, covering her mouth with her hands. "Why didn't you come to me sooner, so I could take it away?"

"I DID come sooner!" Anko replied. "But you were always busy! Enough talking, come on, let's do it again!"

"Alright. But first, let me take some precautions. Lay still," Hinata said. When Anko was completely immobile, Hinata delivered a series of finger strikes at several points of Anko's body, near the arms and the legs.

"OW! What the hell was that for!?" an indignant Anko asked. "Hey, what the fuck? I can't move!"

"Sorry, but I needed to make sure you don't trash again like before. Not even unwittingly," Hinata then placed a pillow under Anko's head. "If the pain becomes too unbearable, bite this."

Once again, Hinata lowered the Truth Seeking Ball, and the moment it touched the seal, it began all over again. Anko started to scream, though this time she bit into the pillow. Hinata continued to work on the seal, who was fighting to stay alive. Black markings started to spread around Anko as it tried to use her own chakra to sustain itself. However, the speed Hinata erased it was faster than the speed it regenerated itself. Eventually, the original mark disappeared, and with it, the black markings around Anko's body.

Despite only taking a couple minutes, it felt like much longer, especially for Anko, who in her twenty seven years of life never underwent such an intense physical pain. Not even when she was training for Torture & Interrogation. There was a reddened spot of burnt skin where the seal once was, a spot that Hinata quickly healed with the Mystic Palm Jutsu. She also removed the pillow from under Anko's face, which had been tattered to shreds. Lastly, Anko felt four more quick stabs of pain, before she regained the mobility on her arms and legs.

"It is done," Hinata announced. "How do you feel?"

"Oh my god, it's gone... it's really gone!" Anko said, as she sat up, and instinctively touched her neck. "I can't sense his presence anymore!"

"I'm glad I could be of help- EEP!"

"You're my hero, girl!" Anko shouted, as she pulled Hinata into a bone crushing hug. "Whatever you want in return, you only need to ask!"

That moment, the door of the room opened, revealing a Hyuga man with a look between worried and ready to fight.

"I heard screams! Hinata-sama, are you-WHOA!" the Hyuga said, blushing furiously.

Because when Anko hugged Hinata, she was still naked from the waist up, making the scene look far more suggestive than it was in reality.

"Get lost, dumbass! Don't you guys ever knock!?" the snake mistress hissed.

The Hyuga silently left before closing the door, while Hinata, still blushing, wordlessly handed Anko her mesh shirt, which the Snake Mistress took and put it on, much to the bluenette's relief.

"It was a pleasure helping you, Anko. I wish I could have done it earlier," Hinata said again. "If you want anything else, you only need to ask."

Anko was about to say that it's okay and what she did was more than enough for a single lifetime, but that was before an idea dawned upon her.

"Um, I feel kind of bad asking you something so soon, but you could also help me with something else," Anko said, sounding a little unease.

"If it's within my power, I shall do my best," Hinata said, smiling reassuringly.

"Well, you see..."

...

Sea to the west of the Continent

"Land ho!" one of the ninjas yelled.

Naruto and Fu, who were casually chatting with each other at the ship's deck, quickly rushed to the handrail at the edge of the ship in order to check if it was true. And, indeed, they could see the small shape of an island in the horizon, slowly growing as the ship approached.

"Man, finally!" Naruto said in exasperation. "We've been on this ship for weeks! I want to start my training already!"

"Yeah, me too!" Fu agreed. "Especially since they didn't even let us train in the ship. What a bunch of party poopers."

"We didn't let you train in the ship, because if you did there would be no ship," a third voice said. Naruto and Fu turned their heads towards the newcomer, the Third Hokage, who walked towards them. Hiruzen was wearing a black and grey battle gear, helmet included. It was quite an odd sight, given that, like most people, Naruto and Fu were used seeing him wearing his usual loose white robes. "And weeks? We've only been at sea for three days."

"Just three? They felt like months to me," Naruto groaned. However, he smiled once the island started to become more visible.

Even if the journey wasn't that long, there wasn't many things to do aboard. The only training they could do was Senjutsu, and even that became old really fast. And even if they did have each other to make themselves company, they did miss their other friends and significant others.

Fu deployed her wings as she hopped onto the railway. "I want to see the island now!"

However, Hiruzen grabbed her by the arm, and forced her to step down -the old Hokage also thanked the gods above for not making the girl fly with him grabbing her-. "Don't get separated from the group, young Fu. Stay with each other at all times."

This time, it was Fu who groaned and rolled her eyes. "Whatever you say, gramps. Of the bunch we got saddled with, you're the least fun of all."

Hiruzen sighed in return. "So I wouldn't be a glorified babysitter, would I, Jiraiya?" the old Hokage thought in exasperation. "Might as well stayed of Konoha. If I had to take care of a couple of impatient kids, at least they could be my grandkids. And my grandkids don't have the power of a Kage."

Hiruzen gathered the rest of the escort team, Yugao, Hayate, Choza and Tenzo, just as the ship docked at a small port, where they were greeted by a group of Kumo ninjas. Their apparent leader was a man with spiky brown hair, small eyes, and a green mark running down the bridge of his nose.

"Welcome, Konoha ninjas, to Genbu island!" the Kumo ninja said. "My name is Motoi, and I'm in charge of the ninjas that protect and take care of this place."

Being the group leader, Sarutobi took a step forward. "Greeting, Motoi-san. My name is Hiruzen Sarutobi. My companions are Hayate Gekko, Yugao Uzuki, Choza Akimichi, and Tenzo," he then motioned to Naruto and Fu. "And these two youngsters are Naruto Uzumaki and Fu. They're the jinchuriki that came here for training."

"I see. Yeah, we received a message from Raikage-sama. Fortunately, Killer B-san arrived the day before you did, meaning that you can start your training immediately."

"Awesome!" both Naruto and Fu cheered in unison, as they shared a high five (which caused Naruto to nurse his hand in pain, since Fu didn't measure her strength).

"This island is the home to many large and potentially dangerous animals. But if you follow the established paths and don't bother them, they should leave you in peace," Motoi warned them.

The next moment, Fu felt a lot of eyes staring at her. "What? Why are you looking at me? It's not that-" Fu was interrupted when several massive butterflies flew above her. "OH MY GOD, LOOK AT THE SIZE OF THOSE BUTTERFLIES! I have to see them closer!"

Even if she had deployed her wings, both Choza and Hayate grabbed her by the shoulders, forcing her to remain groundbound.

"Come on girl! What did Hokage-sama told you about not flying on your own?" Choza asked, as he struggled against the muscular girl.

Eventually, Fu gave up, and crossed her arms in annoyance. "Party pooper..."

"That girl is quite an excitable one, isn't she?" Motoi said with a chuckle.

"You have no idea," Tenzo said, letting out a weary sigh.

"I think she drove the ship's entire crew crazy.," Yugao added.

"Don't worry. She will put all that young energy to good use once the training begins. Anyway, let's get going, time is of essence, or so I was told," Motoi said, as he turned around, and started to walk into the jungle. The Konoha and Kumo ninjas started to follow his lead as well. "Killer B-san is now resting at his house on the island. We'll take you to him."

The large group trekked through the lush jungle that covered most of the island. Fortunately, there were clear pathways that could be use for easy traversing, no doubt man made. On top of the large trees and mushrooms -that reminded Naruto of Mount Myoboku- there were also extremely large animals. The butterflies that they saw before it was only a prelude of what they would see, as there were many giant lizards, frogs, parrots, toucans, sloths, and even tigers and gorillas.

"Wth animals of that size, at least we won't risk dying of starvation if we have to stay here for long, hehe," Choza quipped.

However, the fact that none of the animals seemed perturbed by the newcomers must mean that they must be used to the humans' presence.

"So," Tenzo began, as he walked besides Motoi. "Is this place safe for Naruto and Fu? I'm talking about external threats."

"Trust me, there's no way Akatsuki will find this place," Motoi confidently assured the Wood Release user. "This is Kumo's safest place so far."

"How can you be so sure?" Hiruzen interjected, catching wind of the conversation. "Akatsuki has proved in the past to be extremely effective at finding jinchuriki."

"Because Genbu isn't a normal island, but a massive turtle," Motoi said, much to the two Konoha ninjas' shock. "Every day we move Genbu to a different location to avoid detection. And that before considering that the enemy doesn't even know such creature exists."

"If you guys had such a safe place from the very beginning, why didn't you send your jinchuriki here?" Hiruzen asked.

"Well, Killer B doesn't take kindly to being confined to a single place, so we need to watch him constantly," Motoi explained. "This place has plenty of spots that Killer B could use to fool us, and then escape into the mainland. That's why the Valley of Cloud and Lightning was deemed a better place to keep B there."

"And aren't you afraid that B might try to leave again?" Hiruzen asked.

"I find that unlikely, not after the massive dressing down Raikage-sama gave him," Motou said, chuckling a little. "Ah, I wish I was there to see it."

As the Third Hokage and Tenzo talked with Motoi, Naruto and Fu admired the massive and untamed fauna and flora surrounding them. More specifically, Fu was watching the gigantic ladybugs, beetles, dragonflies and other large insects that flew around them.

"Boy, Shino would love this place," Fu stated, as he tried to imagine her boyfriend's reaction to seeing such huge insects. "When this is over, I think I'm going to bring him here."

"I don't think they'll let you," Hayate interceded, before coughing a couple times. "From what we've been told, this is some sort of super secret base, and the fact that they let us in is due exceptional circumstances."

"Aw, poop. Why is that when I find such an amazing place, I won't be able to return or show it to my friends?" Fu childishly whined.

"We do have places like this in Konoha," Yugao, who had been listening to the conversation, decided to chime in. "The Forest of Death, for example."

"The Forest of Death?" Naruto asked, joining the conversation as well. "Where is that?"

"You've never been in the Forest of Death?" Hayate asked. "Not even during the Chunin Exams?"

"Honey, they didn't use the Forest of Death for the exams the year Haku-kun's team took the exam here, remember?" Yugao reminded her husband. "Since Zabuza was the proctor, he choose the Ship Graveyard for the second task."

"Ah, yes, I do remember now. It was quite the deviation from the usual," Hayate said, before coughing again. He then turned at Naruto and Fu. "Anyway, to answer your question, the Forest of Death is Konoha's most dangerous training ground. Is a large and lush forest isolated by metallic fences. The forest's fauna include many giant animals, such as insects, leeches, bears, wolves, snakes, and other predatory beasts," Hayate had to stop due another coughing fit.

Her wife noticed that, while he listed the animals living there, Naruto seemed to grow more and more uneasy, while Fu's eyes and smile grew each second. The purplette decided to continue the explanation. "It's only safe haven is a single stone tower in the middle. Usually, ANBU and Jonin use that place to train for dangerous missions and hone their survivalist skills, though there are many times when it's used as the staging grounds of the second stage of the Chunin Exams."

"Now I wish our Chunin Exams took place there," Fu said, as she beamed when an idea dawned upon her. "Oh! Oh! I know where I'm going to take Shino for our next date!"

"The Chunin Exams? Isn't that too dangerous for mere Genin?" Naruto asked. "I mean, you yourself said it's a training ground for ANBU and Jonin."

"Perhaps, but it's a good way to show who's ready for the rank and who isn't," Yugao replied. "The fact that there are Genin able to overcome the trials the forest throws at them is enough proof of it."

"And even then, we have many experienced ninjas watching the zone when there are Genin to make sure that none of them die to the training ground," Hayate assured Naruto. "The only deaths are those caused by ninjas fighting each other."

Naruto felt thankful that, as far as he knew, nobody died during his Chunin Exams. He was aware that being a ninja meant killing and seeing your friends die -and while Naruto hadn't killed anybody yet, he had seen quite some people dying, or being sent to their deaths-, but felt that that was going to far for a mere exam. Still, his thoughts were snapped when he heard Motoi say something that drew his interest.

"Oh, look at that, we're almost there," the Kumo jonin stated.

The large group found themselves in front of a very strange looking house. It was made of what appeared to be dark red dried mud, and was split in three sections, the middle one being half as tall as the two towers to the sides. On top of the front door was the head of an ox with one of its horns severed.

Motoi took step forward, and knocked the door a few times.

"Killer B-san, come out! The other jinchuriki are here!" Motoi said.

They didn't have to wait much before the door opened, revealed the famed jinchuriki of the Eight Tails, Killer B himself. The moment he did, Naruto and Fu felt something inside them shift. The kind of feeling they experienced when another jinchuriki was near them.

Needless to say, Killer B also sensed the other two Tailed Beasts inside the two youths. Without needing to ask, the Kumo jinchuriki walked towards the blond and the green haired girl, and scanned them with a critical eye. Or they thought it was critical, it was hard to tell with him wearing those shades all the time.

"So, you guys are the last two jinchuriki? Can't say I'm impressed. I don't think you can withstand the training, you might end up stressed," Killer B rapped, even if his tone was surprisingly solemn. "Now, you know you're in front of the great Killer B, but I don't know who you are, so start with introductions, don't you agree?"

"Uh yeah," Naruto uneasily said. "I'm Naruto Uzumaki, and I'd be honored if you trained me, oh great Killer B-sensei?"

Killer B looked at Naruto with a disapproving look, shaking his head. "Wow kid, that was so boring! It's a miracle I'm not snoring! I liked the flattering, you know, but that's not good enough, you're too slow!"

"W... what?" Naruto asked, flabbergasted. "What the hell was that? Are you going to train me or-"

"Quiet!" the eccentric Kumo ninja said, before turning at Fu. It was weird for the Taki ninja to be near somebody she didn't tower over. "Now let's hear you, girly, let's hope you don't make me anymore surly."

Fu cleared her throat, before adopting what appeared to be a dancing stance. "My name is Fu, old man, try to keep up with me if you can! Taki was my home, but it got wrecked, yet I have many friends I seek to protect! So you better teach me how to tame my beast, or next time instead of my mouth I'll convince you with my fists!"

There was a moment of deafening silence after she finished her impromptu rap session. Naruto leaned towards her.

"What the hell are you doing?" he whispered into her ear.

"I'm trying to communicate in his native dialect," Fu whispered back. "It's a bit hard to understand him, but I believe this is some kind of test."

Then, much to everybody's surprise, Killer B nodded and smiled. "You get it, girl, you're on a roll! Your rhymes may need some work, but they do have soul!"

"Yay!" Fu cheered, pumping her fist.

"However, you also need to learn how to properly greet. Extend your fist, let our thoughts meet," Killer B said, extending his fist at Fu.

Fu did so, and suddenly, a wave of foreign emotions washed upon her, as if their chakra had been connected. She deduced the link of the Tailed Beasts had to do with it.

"Just like I guessed, you're a pretty swell girl, your chakra and your heart shine like pearls!" B finally broke contact, and extended his fist at Naruto. "Now you, boy."

Unsure, Naruto did so, and once again, he experienced a brief but intense connection to the bizarre jinchuriki, and for that moment, he didn't look so bizarre anymore. Unlike the previous assessment, Killer B nodded and smiled. "Alright boy, your greetings may suck, but your heart doesn't lie! You will reach high, today's your day of luck!"

"So... does that mean that you'll train us?" Naruto asked.

"Indeed. Alright, enough chitchat, time to train, let's head to the waterfalls, don't make me say it again!"

Meanwhile, the stunned Konoha ninjas watched the display, not understanding what was going on.

"Uh... what did just happen?" Hayate asked.

"Don't worry, Killer B-san has agreed to train the jinchuriki," Motoi reassured them. "Now, we need to go where all jinchuriki begin their training: at the Waterfall of Truth."

...

Konoha

Meanwhile, back at the village, while the Hokage and the rest of the higher echelons prepared for war, the lower ranked ninjas decided to spend the few days they would have before all hell let loose and the Fourth Ninja War began. Some of those ninjas were the kunoichi of the group unofficially known as the "Konoha 15", formed by the teams that graduated from Naruto and Hinata's class, plus Gai's Close Combat Squad. Later additions to that group were Rin Nohara and Fu, though the latter wasn't there at the moment. And then, another addition in the form of Yakumo Kurama, whom, per Kurenai's request, was introduced to the group by Hinata.

Yakumo already got used to Hinata during the time they spent in the hot springs -Hinata was a very approachable person after all-, but it would take some time for the rest of the girls to warm up to her. Rin and Ino were the most receptive -especially the latter, given that she's also close to an ex-Root agent- though sadly the same couldn't be said of Sakura, Karin, Tenten and Tamaki.

So far, seven of the eight kunoichi had been gathered, with only one missing.

"Where is Hinata?" Sakura asked, looking around. "She's usually the first one to arrive."

"Yeah, it's not normal for her to be late," Karin agreed.

"Hey, cut her some slack," Ino defended her absent friend. "Maybe she got caught up with some clan stuff. I became Clan Head myself recently, and trust me, you have no idea of how much extra work you need to do in order to manage the clan."

"You don't need to rub in our faces how important you and Hinata are now, Ino," Tenten said, rolling her eyes. "Should we be thankful that you find time to spend with us lowly clanless girls?"

"Come on, don't twist my words like that," Ino protested. "You know I don't mean-"

"Hey, look, Hinata is here," Rin said, interrupting the nascent discussion before it could become more heated. "And she isn't alone?"

"What?" Sakura asked. "Did she bring somebody else?"

The "so soon after Yakumo" was left unsaid, but everybody could hear it.

And, indeed, Hinata wasn't alone. Walking besides her was a pale skinned girl with long black hair, tied at the end with a pink ribbon, wearing a dark green tanktop and loose blue cargo pants.

"Who's that girl?" Sakura asked, narrowing her eyes in order to see the approaching figure better.

"Hey, I think I know her," Tamaki said. "Isn't she part of Anko-sensei's squad? You know, the one made by former Otogakure ninjas? They were with us at the hot springs."

"Really? I didn't notice them?" Tenten pointed out.

"Maybe because there were so much people, and they didn't stand out much," Tamaki said with a shrug. "But that's definitely her."

"I believe so," Karin said. And frowned. "And why did Hinata is bringing her here? Without asking us first?"

"These Clan Heads think they can do whatever they want..." Tenten said.

"Don't begin again!" Ino protested. "Maybe she wants her to have some friends. Honestly, I find that commendable. Besides, from what I heard, they've been helping a lot with the Akatsuki threat, so the least we could do is giving them a chance, don't you think?"

"Heh, that means I'm no longer the only new one to this group. Nice," Yakumo said, smiling a little.

Just that moment, Hinata arrived.

"Hello, girls," Hinata greeted. She decided it was better to address the elephant in the room as far as possible. "I'm sure you know her already, but this is Kin Tsuchi, one of Anko-sensei's students."

"Hi," the former Oto kunoichi said, not daring to make eye contact with any of the Konoha girls.

"I ran into her on my way here, and asked her to join us," Hinata explained, even if she knew it was a lie. It would be too humiliating for the black haired girl to learn that her sensei arranged such a meeting for her to have more friends. With Yakumo it was different, given her trauma, but in Kin's case, it would feel like too much. "I'm sorry for not telling you before, but I thought it would be a good experience for both her and us."

"No worries. Guess that what's done is done," Sakura said, as she and the rest of the girls started to walk towards the village downtown. "Anyway, today's Karin's choice of restaurant, meaning that we'll be eating at that Okonomiyaki place again, right?"

"You got a problem with that?" Karin defensively fired back. "At least it's more refined than your dumplings!"

"Ugh, no more dumplings!" Kin suddenly said.

Karin looked at her a little startled, before she smiled.

"See? She knows what I'm talking about," Karin said with a nod.

"You don't like dumplings, Kin-san?" Hinata asked.

"I used to, but after Anko-sensei took us to eat dumplings so many times..." Kin said, shuddering a little. "In the end we got sick of them. Of course, none of us had the courage to tell her, so we have to endure and pretend it's our favorite food as well."

"Anko-san sounds like a tough teacher," Rin said. "Then again, it shouldn't be surprising. That girl always had a lot of energy and spunk."

"Eh, I'm sure that, regardless of her reputation, she can't be any worse than Gai-sensei," Tenten interjected. "If you knew the kind of insane training exercises he makes us to do..."

"Does he send giant snakes after you?" Kin asked, narrowing her eyes at the brown haired girl, who flinched. "Yeah, I thought so."

"Giant snakes? Like, seriously?" Tamaki asked, just as surprised.

"And the Forest of Death is her favorite training ground," Kin continued. "A month before the Chunin Exams at Suna, she dropped us in the middle of the Forest of Death, and told us that we needed to survive for two weeks there, and that if we did, we would be ready for the exams."

"Yikes," Ino replied. "I don't think I'm going to complain about Asuma-sensei's training again..."

"I can relate to that," Yakumo intervened. "Danzo's training was also brutal. Though even if he helped me control my Bloodline Limit, I can tell he wasn't doing it out of the goodness of his heart."

"Danzo... I remember that name mentioned quite a few times when I was in Oto," Kin said, recalling past events. "So, he was your sensei?"

"I wouldn't call him that," Yakumo corrected. "Let's say he was a man who wanted to have his own army of drones loyal to him rather than to the Hokage"

"He couldn't be a decent person if Orochimaru was allied with him," Kin concluded.

"And what happened then? Did you pass the Chunin Exams?" Rin asked, putting the conversation back in track.

"... yes," Kin admitted, almost reluctant to give her sadistic teacher credit. "We had such a hard time there, that the exam in comparison felt easy. We breezed through all the tests like they were nothing, and the three of us got a promotion."

"Anko-sensei might be a harsh teacher, but given your testimony, it's obvious that her methods do work," Hinata conceded. "I remember that you used to work under Mizuki when you were Oto ninjas. Is Anko-sensei better than him?"

"As rare as it sounds... she is," Kin admitted once again. "Anko-sensei is like, super-sadistic. She will sic several giant snakes at us while laughing and cracking jokes about how we're going to be eaten... yet at the same time she seems to care about us. Every day we always learn something new with her, and over the months her training didn't feel so rough."

"Because you got used to it," Tenten pointed out. "It was the same with Gai-sensei. Running several laps around the village with weights was like torture at first," Sakura and Hinata, going through the same training even if only temporarily, nodded empathically. "Yet it becomes a little easier every day, and in the end you're surprised that you used to struggle to begin with."

"That signifies that you're getting stronger," Ino added.

"Exactly," Kin admitted once again. "Mizuki was nowhere near as harsh as Anko yet... I don't think we got very strong under him. I didn't see it at the time, but now I realize that he treated us more like his minions rather than his students."

"Had he given you proper training, I wouldn't have been able to beat all three of you by myself," Hinata added.

"Lee told me about how he defeated Mizuki," Tenten stated. "He confessed that the reason behind his defection from Konoha and theft of the Forbidden Scroll was that he felt that he wasn't becoming as strong as he wished and blamed the village for keeping him down. Given his ego, I believe the guy was afraid that you would end up surpassing him."

"There's one thing clear: the fact that Mizuki got beaten by a Genin that couldn't even use ninjutsu shows that he didn't become much stronger under Orochimaru either, even with a cursed seal," Kin said, before looking at Tenten. "No offense to your teammate."

"None taken. And to be fair, Mizuki wouldn't be the first one to underestimate Lee," Tenten replied. "It's amazing how far one can go with taijutsu alone."

The conversation continued until they reached the restaurant in question. Karin's favorite, where she and Neji had their first date.

"Hey, I was thinking," Ino began, as she looked at Kin. "Given that Yakumo and Kin are new, they should treat all of us today. You know, as her 'initiation' into the group."

"WHAT?" Kin asked, outraged. "You're only going to let me hang out with you if I pay for your food!?"

"Uh..." Yakumo uneasily checked her coin purse. "I don't think I have enough money to-"

"Come on Ino, don't be so cruel!" Sakura shouted, interrupting Yakumo, who was a little startled.

"Yes, that's not a very nice thing to do," Hinata added, nodding as well.

"Plus, we didn't even make anybody else do that either!" Tamaki said.

"Kidding, kidding!" Ino said, raising her hands defensively. "It was just a joke, don't kill me! I know we're a lot of people for just two girls to treat all of us. In fact, I was thinking that we could be the ones treating Kin and Yakumo to something nice. You know, as a way to welcome them into the group?"

"That sounds like a better idea," Rin agreed.

"Plus with how many of us are, we won't have to pay much each!" Ino happily chimed, which earned her a few unamused glares, but nobody said anything.

Eventually, the girls sat on a large table, ordered their food, and started to eat. In silence at first, but it didn't take long until somebody struck up a conversation.

"Say, Hinata, Ino," Sakura began. "You were in that meeting with the Hokage and the other Clan Heads. What did you talk about?"

"Or is it something you can't tell us without killing us later?" Karin added.

"Oh, it's nothing you should be too worried about," Ino told them. "Hokage-sama told us about the agreement with the other villages, the war, and preparations."

"The army is going to be split on multiple divisions, some of support and the others being battalions. We spent most of the meeting discussing which ninjas should be on which divisions," Hinata explained. Her eyes rested on Sakura and Karin. "For example, you two, as well as Rin-san, will be in the Support Medical Division."

"Kind of expected," Sakura admitted.

"Though, you might be temporarily assigned to one of the five battalions if need arises," Hinata punctualized. "Hokage-sama needs to discuss with the other Kages who are going to be the commanders of each division, but the Medical Division will more than likely be under Tsunade-sama's lead."

"What about the rest of us?" Tamaki asked, visibly interested.

"You and the rest of your team have been placed on the Fifth Division," Hinata told the cat kunoichi. She then looked at Tenten. "And your team is on the Second Division."

"Hinata will be in the Third Division, while I'll be in the First," Ino continued. "Yakumo is going to be part of the Fourth Division."

"Wait, Yakumo is going to fight as well?" Karin asked, before looking at the brown haired girl. "No offense. It's not that I think you're weak or anything. But after the whole ordeal with Danzo..."

"That's precisely why I need to fight this war," Yakumo interceded. "If it wasn't for me, Danzo would have never been able to steal the Rinnegan. And if that didn't happen, Obito wouldn't have gotten his hands on it. I can't just stay here and not help fix a mess I helped to create."

"Nobody blames you for that, Yakumo-san," Hinata replied. "We're aware you didn't have a choice in your role as Danzo's agent."

"Even if that wasn't the case, the stakes are way too high for me not to help in any way I can," Yakumo insisted.

"What about me?" Kin asked. "Where I'm going to be assigned?"

"Ah, yeah. Sorry, I forgot about you," Ino said, half apologizing. "I don't remember your name-"

"Kin," the former Oto kunoichi said, almost in a growl.

"-but I do remember Anko being assigned to the Third Division, so you and your teammates will accompany her."

"That means that we'll fight together, Kin-san," Hinata said with a friendly smile.

"If anything, I know I'll be safe as long as I stick close to you," Kin deadpanned, as she continued eating her food.

"Man, I'm the only one here on the Fifth Division," Tamaki complained, as she chew her food slowly. "I wish I got to be with any of you guys."

"Sorry. The consensus between the Kages was to make all divisions as balanced as possible, so all of them could stand on their feet," Hinata explained Tamaki. "At the very least, you will be with your sensei and teammates."

"Where is Sasuke-kun assigned?" Sakura asked. She noticed that she and Karin were on the Medical Division, but there was no mention of the Medical Squad's only male member.

"Sasuke-san is on the Second Division, alongside his older brother," Hinata answered.

Sakura looked visibly dejected. "Guess we'll have to trust ninjas from foreign villages to cover our backs. We're allies with Suna and Kiri, but even if I have worked with Kumo ninjas, I still can't bring myself to trust them immediately. And that goes double for Iwa ninjas."

The rest of the girls agreed energetically. The rest except Kin.

"Well, now you'll understand a little of what I felt during my first months in Konoha," Kin interjected.

Six pair of eyes turned at her, with varying shades of incredulity.

"Sure, I know getting used to another village is a bit hard at first, but it couldn't be that bad, right?" Ino asked, a bit incredulous. "Konoha is a very welcoming place."

"Eventually, I did learn to see it that way," Kin said, as a scowl developed on her face. "But it took me some time to reach there."

"Come on, it couldn't have been THAT bad," Tamaki interceded. "Fu also came to live here from Taki, and while she misses her home, she adapted to us almost perfectly."

"In that case, let me share with you something about myself so you can understand my point of view better," Kin began, her tone cold as ice. "Imagine that you're a girl who is born in the slums of the capital of the Land of Fire. Your family doesn't earn much, but you get by. Then, one day your father gets murdered on his way back home from work for a few bills. This forces your mom to take a second job, since her actual job just doesn't cut it, and she has a little girl to feed. Then, your mom is so overworked, she literally dies of exhaustion, leaving you alone."

The mood turned much darker. Nobody dared to say a word. Some of the girls, like Ino or Rin, placed their hands over their mouths in horror. Still, nobody dares to interrupt the story.

"For many months, you're forced to steal and dig in the trash just to have something to eat," Kin continued. "But you aren't a very good thief, so you're caught many times, and find yourself at the receiving end of many beatings from uncaring adults. You even start to wonder doing prostitution for a living."

This drew a collective gasp from the rest of the group. Still, Kin wasn't done.

"Then, one day, after stealing a loaf of bread and evading pursuers, you're found by a man. A creepy looking man with unnerving eyes, but he doesn't look at you as if you were the scum of the earth. 'You have a lot of talent, girl. Have you ever thought in being a ninja? Join me, and I'll train you to bring out your potential. All I ask is for your loyalty', he says.

"With nothing to lose, you follow that man, and your training begins. It's rough and harsh, and the drill sergeant is merciless and prone to use physical violence, but you eat three times a day and sleep on a bed. During your stay there, you also learn who are your enemies you must beat. You heard a name more than any others: 'Konoha'. This is the place where the enemy lives. If a ninja from Konoha sees you, they will try to kill you without question. Konoha is an elitist village ruled by old aristocratic clans that don't give a damn about the common man, and want to expand their wealth and power at the expense of everybody else."

"Hey, that's not true!" Ino protested. "I know Konoha isn't perfect, but-"

"I know that," Kin replied, glaring at the blonde. "Now I know that Orochimaru didn't care about me in the slightest and would discard me and the others the moment I was no longer useful. But Orochimaru gave me a chance when nobody else did. He saved me from a fate worse than death. And then, after failing him, I'm captured, brought to the village I was taught was the enemy, and told me that I either join their ranks or rot in a cell. Dosu convinced us to take the Hokage's offer, and I'll always thank him for doing so."

"But just for a moment, try to imagine being kidnapped by a foreign enemy village, and forced to work there. Would you feel safe there, being surrounded by people you were told wanted nothing but kill you? People you actually fought against ?"

"Yikes..." Tamaki winced. "I'm... I'm sorry to hear that. I had no idea your life had been so rough..."

"Not even my time at Root was so bad," Yakumo admitted.

"Anko-sensei hates when we speak of Orochimaru with reverence. She even forced us to stop addressing him as 'Orochimaru-sama'. And given what he did to her, I can understand why," Kin began. "But she has never been in our place, so she can't understand why deep down, we will be grateful to Orochimaru for rescuing us from the streets, even if he did so for his own interests."

There was a moment of deafening silence, as everybody processed Kin's words. Until that point, many of them saw the world in black and white, Konoha, and its enemies who wanted to see it destroyed, like Orochimaru. But while Orochimaru's evil was undeniable, it made them question about the ninjas that served him. Did they have an awful life, and joined the Sannin in order to escape that living hell? In that case, they found themselves unable to blame them for taking such decision.

"Well, I want you to know, that you're among friends here," Hinata said, as she subtly and quickly shot a glare at the girls who were clearly unhappy with her bringing new girls. "If you ever need something, we will help you without question, and without asking you anything back."

"Yeah, we people of Konoha take care of each other," Ino added.

Then, for the first time in the afternoon, Kin cracked a smile.

"I... thank you," she said, before blushing a little and averting her gaze.

...

"Well, this is it. What do you think?"

Far from where the girls were having lunch, the entire Uchiha Clan, Shizune included, were standing in front of a large cluster of buildings, a compound, mostly made of wood, but with some stone and concrete on it as well. The windows lacked any glass, and it didn't have any plumbing or electricity yet, but it looked both solid and cozy.

"It looks pretty nice," Shizune said. "When will we be able to move in?"

"The additional reforms may take from a few weeks to a few months, but it should be habitable before that," Shisui explained.

"Good, because that apartment isn't big enough for that many people," Sasuke complained, as he crossed his arms.

Unfortunately for Shisui and Shizune, their apartment had been destroyed during the battle against Akatsuki. And thus, they were forced to move back to Itachi and Sasuke's place. And while it was big enough for three and even four people, it was too small for four adults and two babies, and they were in need of a new place.

Though, rather than moving to another house, Shisui decided that it was time for the Uchiha Clan to live together again under the same roof, like they had been in the past. All of them were eager to do so, but it would take some time before they could move for good.

"But once the war ends, this will be our home," Shisui announced, as he placed an arm around Shizune's shoulders. "Together, we will bring the Uchiha Clan to new heights!"

...

That Night, somewhere dark

Hinata opened her eyes, and found herself inside a vast, open palace of dark lavender stone. It was a familiar place, as she had been there once, even if not physically. Besides her was the figure of an old man, somebody she already met before. She realized that this had to be some kind of dream, yet she didn't wake up.

"Hamura-sama," Hinata greeted the Otsutsuki elder.

"Hello, Byakugan Princess," the man replied. His voice lacked the warm it had the last time they spoke. "As you can imagine, this is not a visit of courtesy."

"Yes, I know," Hinata said. "Is this because of the war?"

"In a way, yes," Hamura said. "Though you won't be part of it. At least not now. There's another place that requires your presence."

"What? But I can't do that," Hinata said, shaking her head. "It's not right for me to say it but... but I'm among the strongest Konoha ninja. Both my and Hanabi-chan's power will be needed to end this as fast as possible."

"Your power is needed, indeed. But in order to save this world, you need to travel somewhere else," Hamura explained. "To the Moon."

"... what?"

"Do you remember the Otsutsuki civil war, and how the Branch House won it, driving the Main House close to extinction?" Hamura asked.

"They... they built a weapon of untold power," Hinata said, trying to remember. "Is that weapon in the Moon?"

Hamura nodded. "Yes. And Toneri plans to use it for this war. You need to travel to the Moon, and destroy it before he gets the chance. Only one that carries my chakra will be able to destroy it for good."

"But... how I'm going to go to the Moon?" Hinata asked. She doubted her flight would cut it.

"The same way I went there for the first time, and how Toneri travels between the Moon and the Earth: through a portal," Hamura explained. "Talk with the Moon Acolytes, they should have the same portal I created to travel to the Moon."

Hinata nodded. "It shall be done, Hamura-sama."

And everything turned to black.

...

Next Day, Hokage's Office

Jiraiya and Tsunade were working tirelessly in order to make sure that the village would be in top condition before most of the ninjas left. Missions already approved needed to be complete as far as possible, and they had to organize a defense force with the ninjas that would stay in the village in order to defend it before the bulk of the army would leave.

"This is the list of the Suna ninjas and the division they have been assigned to," Tsunade said, as he placed a folder with many files inside in front of Jiraiya.

"Rasa worked fast," Jiraiya said, as he began to glance at the list. "What about the others?"

"We can expect Mei's list to be here soon. I can't tell about Kumo and Iwa, though," Tsunade said. "Though for everybody's sake, I hope they don't take much time with them. Akatsuki could strike at any moment."

"Still, we didn't have any news of their movements. If they make a move, we will know in no time" Jiraiya reassured Tsunade.

"I wouldn't be so sure. During their last attack, they moved a force of thousand Zetsus and Moon Puppets through the Land of Fire, and we were none the wiser until they attacked. We can't let that happen again."

"This time they won't attack the villages," Jiraiya replied. "First, they need to locate the jinchuriki, and I doubt they will-"

There was a knock in the door. Weird, since Jiraiya wasn't expecting any visits today. Still, if somebody required his attention, then it must be important.

"Come in!"

The door opened, and much to their surprise, Hinata entered the office. The Sannin could tell that she was very worried. Whatever she was going to tell them, they had a feeling they wouldn't like it.

"Hokage-sama, Tsunade-sama," Hinata said, making a polite bow to both of them. "I have something to tell you. Yesternight, Hamura-sama appeared to me in a dream, and tasked me with a mission of utmost importance. I'm afraid I won't be able to take part in the war."

Their feeling turned out to be accurate. The war hadn't started yet, and they had lost one of their most valuable assets.

...

Turtle Island

The day before Hinata had that fateful dream, Naruto and Fu were about to begin their training in order to master their jinchuriki powers. Killer B and Motio led the group of Konoha and Kumo ninjas towards an impressive waterfall that poured water into a lake.

"Here we are," Motoi announced. "The Falls of Truth. On this place, you will take your first step of your training."

"I can't wait to begin. What are we supposed to do?" Naruto asked.

"In order to tame the beasts inside, you must purify your heart," Killer B began to rap. "If you fail to do so, they will tear you apart. Sit in front of the falls and close your eyes. You will find yourselves in a strange place, your inner darkness will be waiting for you to face. But power won't suffice, you will need to be wise. Understood, ya fools?"

"Sit down and meditate, the waterfall will take us to another world," Fu began.

"There, our dark selves will be waiting for us. Beat them down, and return. Is that it?" Naruto finished.

Killer B gave them a thumbs up. "You got it, pals, you're pretty quick! Now let's begin, and try to be slick!"

Naruto and Fu nodded. Wordlessly, they walked towards a small isle in the middle of the lake. The two jinchuriki sat down, adopted the lotus position, and crossed their eyes. After a few seconds, the small island they were sitting on disappeared, and they plummeted down to the abyss that appeared below them.

"AAAAAAAAAAAAHHHHHH!" Naruto screamed. Opening his eyes, he realized he was no longer on Turtle Island, but on some sort of endless black void. Fu was nowhere to be seen, but he couldn't care about the whereabouts of his fellow jinchuriki.

"AAAAAAAAAAAAHHHHHH... !"

"Naruto, wake up!" a frantic female voice shouted. A voice he knew really well.

Suddenly, Naruto was no longer falling down an endless abyss, but back in his home. More specifically, on his bed. He felt both tired and disoriented.

"What the...?" Naruto asked.

"Naruto, it's okay!" Tsunade's voice said in a reassuring tone. "It was just a nightmare!"

"A nightmare...?" Naruto repeated, as his eyes rested on Tsunade. For some reason, his adoptive mother felt alien, strange. There was something about her that unnerved him, something that wasn't right. Once he calmed down, he was able to see where the problem.

"Mom! Why are your breasts so small? And why are you wearing glasses?"

Because this Tsunade wasn't the busty woman Naruto was used to see. She had a much smaller bust, and for some reason she was wearing glasses. Said woman frowned, and crossed her arms.

"First of all, they aren't small, they're average! And your dad loves them!" not-Tsunade protested. "And I always wore glasses! Just what's wrong with you?" she shook her head. "This is the last time I let you eat that much ramen for dinner. You have nightmares that mess with your head. Anyway, now that you're awake, come down and have some breakfast. You don't want to be late for your team meeting, don't you?"

And not-Tsunade turned around and left the room.

"Just... what the hell is this place?" Naruto asked.

Author's Note: So, amny things to unpack.

Yeah, that was alternate Tsunade from the Road to Ninja movie. And yes, Naruto is now trapped in a version of that world. You see, at first I was planning to have the confrontation with Dark Naruto the same as in canon (but very summarized for obvious reasons), until one day I decided to watch the Road to Ninja movie out of curiosity. The movie itself was pretty mediocre, but boy, I LOVED the alternate version of the Konoha 11 (well, most of them), and think the movie would have been much better if they were given more focus. It was then when I had the idea of using that movie's initial premise and adapt it for the confrontation with Dark Naruto, instead of having Naruto beat an evil version of himself through self reflection like in canon.

I'm really hoping you'll find my version of Road to Ninja more enjoyable than the mess that it was that movie. Though, if you're afraid that this chapter and the next are going to be filler, fear not. It's certainly going to be a little more relaxed than usual, but there are going to be cool action scenes and Naruto is going to learn a few valuable lessons that are going to be very important down the road.

Though, you DON'T NEED TO WATCH THE MOVIE to understand the next arc. The arc itself will provide all the information you need in order to get everything

So, all in all, the "main" training is going to last until chapter 99. The war will begin on chapter 100. Unlike canon, which only lasted a day and a half, this War Arc will have its battles spread over a period of several weeks, instead of happening all at once. That way, I can give Naruto enough time to train and master his new powers.

And as you can see, not only Naruto is going to be absent, as Hinata is leaving for the Moon. It is time for her to end Toneri's threat for good, though that confrontation won't happen until much later. So yeah, I'm going to warn you now, while Naruto and Hinata may continue to appear, their presence is going to be very diminished once the war begins. That's because I want to give the other characters some focus as well, and once Naruto and Hinata make their grand return, they will grab the spotlight with both arms and legs and won't let it go.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

So, how did you find this chapter? And what do you think about me making a hopefully better version of Road to Ninja? Leave your thoughts in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Road to Ninja, Part I

Author's Note: Okay, I got some people wondering how Orochimaru was able to revive Tobirama again since Itachi sealed him. The answer is that, after the invasion was over, Itachi released Tobirama's spirit again so it could return to the afterlife. Which sadly allowed Orochimaru to revive him again.

Though, Orochimaru won't be able to revive Minato and Kushina. I've been wondering if a reanimation that's undone because of finding closure can be revived again, something canon has no answer to. In the end, I decided that the answer is "no", because if that was the case, then Kabuto could have revived Sasori or Shin again after they reached closure.

Anyway, with that out of the way, enjoy my take on Road to Ninja:

Chapter 97:

Road to Ninja, Part I

or

Yep, we're adapting a non-canon movie

"Just... what the hell is this place?" Naruto asked.

Because it did feel like his home back in Konoha. It was his room, just like he remembered. But like with Tsunade, there was something... off. An ever present feeling that there was something wrong. Naruto's thoughts, however, were interrupted when his stomach growled.

"Better listen to mom, or whoever that is, and have some breakfast first," Naruto decided, as he got up from the bed, removed his pajamas, put on his usual clothes, and exited his room.

As he walked through the familiar yet strange house, Naruto noticed the pictures decorating the walls. Jiraiya, Tsunade, Shizune, Hagane, Kaida, him... everything seemed to be in order. Though it didn't take him long to notice that Shizune wasn't like he remembered her: It seemed that Tsunade's lost bust ended up on Shizune instead. Plus her lips were of a brighter shade of red. Weird, given that other than special dates with Shisui, Shizune never uses lipstick.

For a brief moment, Naruto hoped Hinata's breasts didn't end up on Sakura's body.

Upon reaching the kitchen, he saw Tsunade once again, finishing her own breakfast.

"Where are dad and the twins?" Naruto asked.

"Your father left early for the Tower, as usual," Tsunade said.

"Hagane and Kaida have been out for a mission for a couple days, don't you remember that?"

"Ah, yeah..." Naruto pretended to remember. "For some reason I forgot."

"Like I said, you ate too much ramen last night," Tsunade said, shaking her head, before placing a bowl of cereals with sliced fruits in front of Naruto. "Now eat something healthy for a change!"

...

After bidding his not-mother goodbye, Naruto exited the house and walked into the village. At first glance, everything seemed to be normal -he was half expecting the Hokage Monument to be different, but the faces of the five Hokages remained the same-, yet the feeling of uneasiness persisted. On top of that, he felt a strange pull towards one of the training grounds.

"Should I go there...?" the blond wondered, before shaking his head. "No, I should try to investigate this place first, gather some intel, the usual ninja stuff. Also, I need to know if Fu is still here, or if she ended somewhere else. Given that she's from Taki, she might be there right now."

He decided to walk towards his team's usual training ground. Hopefully he would find some answers from his sensei and teammates. Leaping from one roof to another, Naruto reached his team's training ground in no time. And fortunately for him, Hinata, Haku and Kurenai were already there.

"Look, Naruto's finally here. Now we can begin our morning training," the raven haired woman said. Unlike Tsunade and Shizune, she looked exactly as he remembered her.

Something he couldn't say about this fellow teammates. It took Naruto a while to realize that the other boy of the group was indeed Haku. Because he had his hair cut very short, and instead of his usual green and yellow haori with a grass green sash, Haku was wearing dark blue pants and a sleeveless jacket over pretty much nothing. The jacket was open, leaving his bare chest visible for all.

Then there was Hinata. What Naruto first noticed were her eyes: they were still Byakugan instead of Tenseigan. But her eyes were quickly forgotten when Naruto saw the rest of her attire: while she was wearing her usual long lavender and purple jacket, she wore it unzipped. Under said jacket she was wearing nothing but a mesh top that barely covered her large breasts, leaving a good chunk of her midriff bare. Her usual knee long pants were nowhere to be seen, replaced by extremely short shorts. Lastly, rather than her sandals, she was wearing knee-high boots that left her toes and heels exposed.

Yep, wherever he was, this wasn't Konoha. Or at least, the Konoha he was familiar with.

Hinata walked towards Naruto with a confident smile, placed her arms around his neck, and planted a kiss on him. "Hey there, handsome," Hinata said in a very seductive and sultry tone, one the real Hinata would never use. "I was afraid you wouldn't come. What took you so long?"

"Well, you see-"

"You weren't seeing another girl, were you!?" she yelled, as she increased her pressure of her arms around his neck, while her Byakugan flared to life. "Because if you let any bitch near you, I'm going to kill you both and-!"

"Now, now, let's not get carried away," Kurenai said in a conciliatory tone, as she helped separate the crazy Hyuga from the scared blond. "Let's use that energy to train, okay?"

"I'm keeping my eyes on you too, you hag," Hinata told Kurenai, as she narrowed her eyes at her. "I do know what people say about how little your husband satisfies you, and you aren't going to go all cougar on my man!"

"Geez, this girl is so fucking crazy! I'm so glad my Hinata isn't jealous at all," Naruto thought, as he rubbed his pained neck. He then took another look at her very revealing yet alluring attire. "But damn, her choice of clothes is something I can't complain about!"

"Heh, you're truly a brave one for daring to date that girl," Haku said, as he walked towards him. "Not that I wouldn't dare to date her either! There's no woman I'm afraid of! Otherwise, I wouldn't be the epitome of masculinity I am!"

Naruto looked at Haku as if the Ice Ninja had grown a second head. The look was already throwing him off, but that was easy to ignore compared to the personality switch. "Epitome of masculinity...?" Naruto dumbly repeated.

Haku's previous confidence crumbled like a castle made of paper, replaced by sheer terror and insecurity.

"What? Why did you say that? Don't you think I'm manly!?" the Ice Ninja panicked. "Is my hair getting too long again? It's my clothes!? I know I'm a bit too scrawny, but muscle takes some time to build!"

"Whoa, calm down, pal!" Naruto said, placing his hands on his panicking teammate's shoulders, as he tried to think something reassuring. "You look very manly indeed! In fact if you looked like a girl, eh... uh... Hinata wouldn't allow you to be part of the team because she'd be jealous I'll leave her for you!"

Haku looked at Naruto into the eyes, before he finally relaxed. "Of course, you're right. How can anybody mistake me for a girl? HGHN!" Haku grunted, as he flexed his non-existent biceps.

"Okay, enough chattering, let's get to training already. If we keep wasting time, we won't train until the sun sets," Kurenai said, clapping her hands twice to draw attention.

" At the very least Kurenai-sensei still looks normal," Naruto thought, knowing that he was tempting fate.

The training turned out to be normal enough. At least, normal compared to what was fearing it would be. Hinata and Haku, beffting their new personalities, employed a fighting style far more aggressive than their real life counterparts. Still, they also proved to be comparatively weaker than the real ones. The fact that Hinata didn't have a Tenseigan was rather noticeable when they clashed against each other.

"Wind Release: Cyclone Vortex!"

Naruto cast an horizontal tornado that swallowed both Hinata and Haku, before violently expelling them against the ground.

"Ouch... that hurt so much..." Hinata complained, as she struggled to get back, before a creepy wide smile formed in his face. "Oh Naruto-kun, you're soooooooooo strong! That's why I like you so much!"

"I'm pretty strong too!" Haku quickly protested, as he got back on his feet as well. He started to make hand seals. "Let's see what you think about this jutsu I developed! Ice Release: Testosterone Blizzard!"

The temperature dropped suddenly, as a cold breeze started to blow. Snowflakes started to form in the air, as they formed a whirlwind around Naruto. In a few seconds, the blond was trapped inside a freezing tornado, that covered the grassy ground around it in frost and snow.

"Let the manly embrace of my ice ninjutsu freeze you!" Haku boasted, before his brain registered what he just say. "Wait, manly embrace? No, that doesn't sound-"

"Wind Release: Cyclone Shockwave!"

Another tornado emerged from inside the first tornado Haku had summoned, undoing it and dispelling all the frost and snow. The tornado quickly expanded outwards in every direction, forcing Hinata and Haku to jump back.

"Look at the power of that wind jutsu," Hinata swooned. "That's my Naruto!"

"Okay, I've seen enough," Kurenai said, interrupting the match, as she walked between her students. "I don't remember you being that strong, Naruto. It seems that you've been training a lot on your own."

"Hehe, yeah, you know me. I love to train," Naruto said, chuckling awkwardly as he rubbed the back of his head.

Kurenai then turned at the other two members of her team. "That means that you two should step up your training as well so you can shorten the gap a little. It's not good for a team if there's a big disparity between the members' skill and power."

"Yes, Kurenai-sensei," Hinata and Haku replied.

"Meet me after lunch, and we'll go and see if there's a mission suited for us today," Kurenai said, before leaping away, leaving the trio of teens alone.

...

Not far away from there

While Naruto had decided to check this weird version of Konoha first, the blond was somebody who could be on multiple places at once, so once he finished his training session with his not-teammates, he created a Shadow Clone and sent it to follow that pulling feeling while the real one went to have lunch. After a few minutes of jumping from one roof to another, and some running through the grass of a few training grounds, he reached the place.

In front of Naruto was a massive forest, walled by several fences, and a rather ominous warning sign. It said:

TRAINING GROUND 44

THE FOREST OF DEATH

ACCESS TO THIS TRAINING GROUND IS FORBIDDEN UNLESS EXPLICITLY ALLOWED BY THE HOKAGE

"Geez, I know Hayate and Yugao said that this place is dangerous, but come on, it is that bad?" Naruto wondered aloud. "Anyway, I better go and check what's so important-YIKES!"

Naruto jumped back startled, as a couple kunai landed besides his feet. Shortly after that, a pair of Konoha ninjas Naruto didn't know landed in front of him.

"I'm sorry, Naruto-san, but access to this training ground is strictly forbidden," the first ninja said, as he pointed to the warning sign.

"I'm not even Naruto, but a Shadow Clone," Naruto said.

"Regardless of how dangerous that forest is, nothing of value will be lost if I get killed."

"I'm sorry, but our orders are strict. Nobody, clone or not, is allowed to enter," the other ninja said. "I'm sure you won't have any trouble getting the Hokage's permission to send a clone there."

While the Naruto clone was sure he could beat those ninjas -they didn't look to be higher than Chunin- he decided it was probably better not to do something so drastic so soon. So he instead opted to turn around and walk away.

"I'll be back," the clone said.

"HEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEY!"

The clone didn't get too far before somebody called him. They weren't those obstructive guards, but a girl, and the shout came from above. Looking up, the blond smiled upon seeing Fu flying down towards him. She landed in front of him with a thud, raising a small cloud of dust when her feet hit the ground.

"Hey, Fu!" Naruto greeted her, smiling widely. "You're the real Fu, right?"

"Technically, I'm a Shadow Clone, but yeah, I'm the same Fu from our world," the green haired girl explained. "The real one is with Shino and the others. Or weird people who look like them. This Shino speaks non-stop! He never shuts up! He talks constantly, never letting others speak! He goes on and on and on... and he will sometimes change topic mid-conversation, to top it off! By the way, on my way here, I saw an AMAZING pair of white boots that were not too expensive. Do you think there will be in the same store in the real Konoha when we return? I'm not a boot person, but-"

"I can imagine how horrible being near this Shino can be," Naruto deadpanned, but let out a lighthearted chuckle. "But I feel you. If you only met Hinata and Haku."

"One of the things I liked about Shino is that he was somebody who knew how to listen, you know? Now I can never talk," Fu complained, as her posture became slumped. "It totally messes our dynamic! Man, this waterfall of truth has one mean sense of humor."

"Anyway, I guess you send a clone here because of a sensation that pulled you constantly?" Naruto guessed. Fu nodded vigorously. "I guess that, whatever we need to face, it's hiding inside the Forest of Death. However, it's guarded and the sentries won't allow us to pass unless we have permission from my dad."

"Guess we'll have to meet him," Fu concluded. "Though not now. The real me is going to eat with Shino and the others."

"I believe the real me will eat with this team as well, as I often do after normal trainings," Naruto asked. "Say, where are you going?"

"Yakiniku-Q."

"Alright, I'll convince my teammates to go there, so we can stay in touch," Naruto decided.

Fu nodded in agreement. "Alright. See you soon."

Both clones disappeared, transferring their memories to the originals.

...

Yakiniku-Q

Both Naruto and Fu's teams were the first ones to arrive at the restaurant. Once there, Naruto could also appreciate the differences between Kakashi's Animal Squad from this bizarre reality and the real world.

"... before Kiba was slammed against a tree. Our training has been pretty good. Kiba and Tamaki didn't fight as much as they usually do, and guess what? When Kiba smashed his face against that tree, it broke its bark, and I managed to find several green beetles lurking underneath. Did you know that green beetles are extremely rare in the Land of Fire? And speaking of rare, I hope that this time they don't burn my order, since I only like medium..."

Just like Fu said, Shino would never shut up. Both his teammates and girlfriend tried to ignore him as he droned on various topics, but he didn't get the hint.

"GOADDMIT, SHUT UP ALREADY!" Hinata screamed, much to everybody's shock. Not that the aggressive Hyuga cared. "Next time you open your mouth and it's not because somebody talked to you first, I'll rip your vocal chords and shove them where the sun don't shine! YOU GOT THAT, BUG BOY!?"

Shino whimpered something inaudible, as he nodded energetically. Despite the display, Naruto could tell by their body language that the rest were thankful for Hinata's intervention. Naruto included, even if he felt kind of bad for Shino.

"I don't know why you wanted us to eat with our former classmates," Hinata said. She then leaned against Naruto, and cooed: "Next time, let's eat the two of us alone. It will be more romantic!"

"Damn, her personality is scary, but how she goes from murderous rage to romantic mood is even more unnerving," Naruto said, trying to suppress a shiver.

"Well, I do think that multiple dates can be romantic, don't you think, my little kitty?" Tamaki asked Kiba in a sickeningly sweet tone.

"Of course, my love. After all, all of us here has a mate, so nobody will left out," Kiba replied in the same overly mushy tone.

While they talked and waited for the others to arrive, Naruto could also tell that Kiba and Tamaki weren't the same people he once knew. The fastest way to put it was that they have switched personalities, or more specifically, tastes when it comes to animals. It seemed that Kiba hated dogs and was a cat lover -evidenced by his forehead protector, which he added a pair of fake cat ears-, while Tamaki hated cats and loved dogs. In fact, Kiba had given Akamaru to Tamaki when they were in the Academy, and Tamaki in return allowed Kiba to sign her family's Cat Summoning Contract.

All this led them to become a loving couple, as opposed to the real Kiba and Tamaki's constant bickering fueled by a feeling of unresolved sexual tension that was funny at first but ended up being kind of annoying over time.

The door of the restaurant opened, and a new trio of teens entered. It was Shizune's Medical Squad, and just like with his teammates and Team Kakashi, they were also changed. While Sasuke and Sakura were wearing different clothes -Sasuke's style was far more casual and relaxed, which didn't fit him in the slightest- Karin was the one sporting the biggest change: she was wearing a black leather jacket over a black shirt, a black skirt, a black atudded belt, and black knee high boots. Her hair had several dark purple streaks.

"Hello there, ladies, your man Sasuke is here!" Sasuke said, winking at Hinata, Tamaki and Fu in a very un-Sasuke-y way. "You don't need to fight for me, there's enough Sasuke for everybody."

" Okay, that has to be the weirdest shit I've seen so far," Naruto through, cringing at the Uchiha's ladies' man act.

"Don't begin!" Sakura chastised. "You know, if you dedicated half the time you spend trying to get on every girl's pants to become a better ninja, you would be Jonin already!"

"Come on, you need to relax a little, and enjoy the finer pleasures of life," Sasuke said, as he tried to put an arm around Sakura, which she quickly pushed away. "If you weren't so obsessed with training and being a better ninja so much, people would like you better."

"Ugh, you're... listen, just drop it already, and let's try to eat in peace," Sakura said.

"There's no peace in such a place of death and blood like this one," Karin firmly said.

"A ninja village?" Naruto asked, a bit uneasy.

"A restaurant that serves processed meat," Karin explained. "Do you know that cows and pigs are force fed untold amount of food laced with chemicals in order to fatten them, before being sent to a slaughterhouse, when they're not just killed, but dismembered, their parts being scattered around the world so we humans can consume them. Their life is suffering, we feed of their suffering, and they're denied the rest of a peaceful death. And this place... this place is filled with the souls of the slaughtered pigs and calves, that have to watch how we eat their corpses in horror. If you listen closely, you can hear their anguished cries of agony."

"So... I take that you aren't going to order any meat?" Naruto guessed.

"Hell no! I love meat!" Karin replied back, sounding more energetic.

As the three members of the Medical Squad took their seats and engaged in some light conversation with those already there, they were followed by another team: Asuma's Tactical Squad. And like the previous teams, one could tell these were different versions of the Ino-Shika-Chō Naruto and Fu knew. While Shikamaru looked the same, Chōji was far more fit and muscular, and his eyes reflected iron hard determination, a far cry from the carefree and easygoing junk food lover.

Meanwhile. Ino dressed in a more conservative fashion than her real world counterpart, and while she kept her iconic ponytail, she tied it at the bottom of her hair, as opposed to the top. Her body language and the way she carried herself, her posture was droopy, she was folding her arms and was averting eye contact, suggested a meek and shy personality

"Why did you drag me to this place?" Choji complained. "You know I hate the food that serve here."

"It's not just for the food, but all our friends are here," Shikamaru said. "Why do you have to act as if you're better than everybody else?"

"I'm not acting like I'm better than anybody else, I just expressed my dislike of this restaurant," Choji insisted. "You know, your inferiority complex can be quite grating at times."

"Who are you calling inferior-"

"Now, now, let's not fight, okay?" Ino softly asked, placing a hand on each of the boys' shoulder. "All of our friends are here, let's try to have a good time."

This seemed to have a calming effect on her two male teammates. Still, that display told Naruto and Fu everything they needed to know about Asuma's students from this weird reality.

At the point, Sasuke appeared before Ino almost as if he had used the Body Flicker. A rose appeared in his hand as he presented it to the blond girl as a gift.

"Ah, my dear Ino, you always know what to say to difuse a problem," Sasuke said, trying to sound as seductive as possible. "I know tha behind such shy personality lies a woman of iron."

"Uh... eh... t-thank you, Sasuke-kun..." Ino muttered, as she backed from the Uchiha invading her personal space.

"Hey, back off, buddy, don't you see you're making her uncomfortable?" Shikamaru said, forcibly pushing Sasuke away from her. "You think that just because you're an Uchiha everybody should worship and fawn you? I can't stand you geniuses!"

"Come on, I wasn't-" Sasuke tried to protest, but he was interrupted.

"Sasuke, stop embarrassing yourself -and by extension, Karin and I- and get back on your goddamned seat," Sakura threatened, her voice hard as steel.

"And then they'll ask me why I hate coming here," Choji grumbled under his breath, as he and his team took a seat.

A few minutes later, the last team of the Konoha 15 arrived, Gai's Close Combat Squad. While Neji and Lee looked like their normal selves, Tenten was wearing white and blue robes that gave her a somewhat saintly appearance, and her body language gave Naruto and Fu the impression of somebody that had reached some sort of spiritual enlightenment.

Even if on the outside they did look like usual, the finer details also revealed changes on Neji and Rock Lee. Neji's expression was... unnerving, almost perverse, predatory. Meanwhile, Rock Lee displayed none of his usual youthful energy, and he moved as if the very act of walking required a massive effort. Which kinda reminded Naruto of Shikamaru.

"Tenten-chan!" Haku jumped upon seeing his girlfriend, rushed towards her, and gave her a very passionate kiss. "Hey everybody, my girlfriend is here! Yeah, I have a girlfriend! And I wouldn't if I wasn't so manly!"

"Now, now, Haku-kun, we talked about this, didn't we?" Tenten said in a mildly chastising but very gentle tone. "If you let your insecurities rule your life, you shall never be happy. You need to learn to look inside, and find your inner beauty and strength. Which is what I did."

"Y-yeah, sorry, Tenten-chan," Haku replied, rubbing the back of his head. His enthusiasm didn't disappear, though. "Come on sit besides me!"

While Tenten sat besides Haku as the latter requested, Lee and Neji sat besides her as well. Naruto wondered why Neji didn't sit alongside Karin, as he often did. Maybe they weren't a couple in this bizarre reality.

"So, tell me, how was your day? You've been training, yes?" Haku asked.

"I've been training in my medical arts. Because why harm, when you can heal? It's much more rewarding," Tenten replied. Naruto raised an eyebrow. It's not that the real Tenten loved to bath in the blood of her enemies, but she was no stranger to violence, given her passion for weapons. Tenten continued: "My teammates haven't trained either. Lee has been all the time sleeping under a tree, and I bet Neji has been using his Byakugan to watch other girls' underwear."

"Yep, that explains why Neji and Karin aren't together," Naruto thought.

"Tenten, you goddamn tattletale! Why do you have to tell them that?" Neji protested, before realizing what he just said. "Er, I mean... how do you know I was peeping on girls? You were focused on your book all the time, you couldn't tell what I was doing!"

"You were standing in the same spot for two hours straight, and you chuckled perversely from time to time," Tenten replied. "One doesn't need to be a genius to know what you were doing."

"She's right, Neji," Lee added.

"Shut up! You were asleep the whole time! How can you tell if she's right or not?" Neji protested again.

"How can you waste the time sleeping like that, Lee?" Shikamaru intervened. "You should use that time to train so you can soar to new heights! Man, if I only had a quarter of the talent you possess, with my hard work I'll be Konoha's top ninja!"

"Eh, it's too tiresome. Why train when you're as strong as I am?" Lee said with a shrug. Though Naruto could tell he wasn't really boasting, his laziness was really irritating Shikamaru. "Besides, we're living in a age of peace. It's not like we're going to be needed for any future conflict."

"That's irrelevant! Hard work is a reward on itself! The satisfaction of achieving something with the sweat of your brow! Of moving forward! Doesn't that mean anything to you?"

"Man, it's like they switched personalities," Naruto thought.

"I have to agree with Shikamaru," Sakura said. "As ninjas, is our duty to be as strong as possible and fulfill all our latent potential. Not just for the village, but for ourselves as well. Otherwise, we wouldn't have any self worth. Everything else is secondary."

"That attitude of yours is why you don't have a boyfriend," Sasuke said with a mocking smirk.

"Didn't you think that maybe I don't want a boyfriend, you sorry excuse of a pick-up artist?" Sakura fired at the Uchiha.

"Being single, being in a relationship... why does it matter?" Karin gloomily asked. "Since all of us will perish sooner or later. It's pointless to care about such trivialities in the face of our impending doom."

"Come on guys, not again," Ino softly interceded. "Let's not ruin this gathering between friends with a fight-"

"Given that everybody is talking, can I talk too as well?" Shino asked Hinata, breaking his silence. "Because I kind of feel a bit left out, and I have plenty of topics to discuss with you guys, as well as many anecdotes to share, such how coming here I saw this guy who..."

But Hinata wasn't listening to the bug user, since she was currently hotly screaming at her cousin

"... and I'm so fucking sick of you right now! You're a goddamn embarrassment to our clan! All you do is prove all that people talking dirty of us right!" the angry bluenette shouted.

"Come on, I've been a good guy! You can't believe what my lying teammate is saying!" Neji replied.

Eventually, the only thing that could be heard in the restaurant was the loud cacophony of the many arguments and discussions happening simultaneously. The only ones not part of the madness were Kiba and Tamaki, who were trading exceedingly sweet and corny compliments, and Ino, who tried, and failed, to stop the chaos.

"Guys, please, stop!" she begged, but was unable to raise her voice any further. "Naruto-kun, please, do something!"

However, when her visible eye drifted towards the spot the blond jinchuriki was in, she found it empty. Fu wasn't there either.

...

Taking advantage of the chaos, Naruto and Fu had slipped out of the restaurant unnoticed. The two of them were enjoyed the relative peace and calm of the streets of Konoha, far away from the insanity of their not-friends. The two of them were now walking towards the Hokage Tower.

"Do you think we did wrong leaving like that?" Fu asked Naruto.

"Yeah," Naruto replied. "I think we should have waited for the food to arrive first. I'm kind of hungry."

"Well, that too, but I was wondering if it was right to leave our friends behind," Fu specified. "They aren't going to be happy when they find out. Hell, Hinata might think you're cheating on her with me."

"Those aren't our real friends, and that girl wasn't my girlfriend," Naruto stated, shivering a little. "Listen, we both know that whatever's inside the Forest of Death is the 'Inner Darkness' we have to defeat. We meet dad, ask him to grant us permission to enter the Forest of Death, kick the ass of whatever's lurking there, and return to the real world to continue with our training."

Her second thoughts dispelled, Fu nodded enthusiastically. "Right!"

...

Hokage's Office

"Hey, dad!" Naruto greeted Jiraiya as the two jinchuriki entered the office.

"Hello, there Naruto, Fu," Jiraiya greeted them back. "Well, what can I do for-WHA!" the Sannin screamed, as his jaw dropped, while his eyes grew wide, and stared at Fu. "Wha... what..."

"Is something wrong, Hokage-sama?" Fu asked, as she scratched her temple.

"What the hell are you wearing!? Don't you have any shame!?" Jiraiya screamed, as he pulled a blanket out of nowhere, and wrapped it around Fu's body. "That's a direct violation of the official Konoha dress code! And don't tell me that you aren't a Konoha ninja! As long as you live here, you'll follow our rules!"

"Dad, have you lost your mind?" Naruto asked, but deep down he knew the answer.

"No, SHE lost her mind, dressing in a such provokatively manner!" Jiraiya continued shouting. "First you allow a laxer dressing code, which leads to making out, and then to premarital sex, and then to teen pregnancy, and I'm not going to stand for any of that!"

"Of course dad's version of this world would be a total prude," Naruto sourly thought. Better deal with this as soon as possible.

"Anyway, we came here because we want you to ask something."

"Okay, I'm all ears," Jiraiya replied.

"We'd like permission to go to the Forest of Death," it was Fu who answered. "We want to test our abilities and strength against the toughest training ground Konoha has to offer."

"I'm afraid I can't let you go there," Jiraiya replied.

"What? Come on dad, we're pretty strong!" Naruto protested.

"Not strong enough for whatever the evil that lurks there," Jiraiya sternly replied. "Not even I'm sure I can deal with what lives there. That's what the best thing I can do is to quarantine the area and pray that whatever's there decides to stay there. So far, it has worked."

"And on top of that, he's a fucking coward. Yep, definitely not my dad," Naruto said, repressing the need to shake his head in disappointment.

"I don't know what made you two think you can take on whatever's there, but I don't want to hear you got even close to that training ground, got it?" Jiraiya warned them.

"Sure thing dad," Naruto said with a weary sigh. "Come on Fu."

"Wait, that's it?" Fu asked. "Aren't you going to-"

"Dad has been pretty clear on the issue. Let's go," Naruto insited, pulling the muscular girl by the arm. Fu complied and let herself be dragged out of the office.

Naruto quickly dragged Fu out of the tower, the green haired girl pulling her arm away until Naruto finally released it.

"It's not like you to give up so easily," Fu pointed out, as the two jinchuriki exited the tower, and walked back into the streets of Konoha. "What do we do now?"

"Who said that I was giving up?" Naruto replied with a cheeky grin. "We're going to go into the Forest of Death, with or without his permission."

"But how? That place is closely guarded," Fu replied.

"Well, thankfully, one of us can grow wings on her back and is strong enough to carry at least one person while flying," Naruto explained.

"Really? You learned to fly to? How?" Fu excitedly asked. Upon seeing Naruto's unamused stare, she realized of something. "Ohhhhhhh, you were talking about me. I see. Still, even if I smuggle us into the forest through air, the guards are going to see us and warn the Hokage."

"Not if we infiltrate at night," Naruto said. "The visibility will be much lower by then. In fact, Mei used this strategy to infiltrate the Crimson Citadel during the Kirigakure Civil War. It worked back then, and it will work now."

"If you say so."

...

Forest of Death, that night

Just like Naruto said, their infiltration went without a hitch. Under the shadows of the night, none of the guards placed around the training ground could see or even heard Fu as she entered into the forbidden forest.

"So, this is the place. The Forest of Death," Naruto said, looking around. He couldn't see anything but the massive trees surrounding him, since the dim light provided by the half Moon wasn't enough to see their surroundings with clarity. "Man, I wish Hinata-hime was here. She could guide us with her Tenseigan."

"Shino's bugs are pretty good for exploring as well as locating foes," Fu said, looking around, narrowing his eyes as he tried to discern her surroundings. "I can hear many creatures lurking around, but I can't tell what they are. Other than that they're big. And hungry."

"We won't have to worry about those," Naruto reassured her. "With our power, wild beasts are no longer a threat, no matter how big they are. All we need to do is find whatever's the representation of our darkness, and beat them."

"And I guess that's something we have to do on our own," Fu concluded. She pointed in a seemingly random direction. "That way?"

"Yeah, I felt being pulled towards there as well," Naruto confirmed with a nod. "Let's go."

Naruto leaped to a nearby tree branch, and started to head into said direction jumping from one branch to another. Fu was following him from behind, flying. While they saw some giant animals on their way, such as giant bears, snakes, or insects, it seemed they didn't feel like starting a fight with them.

"I see some light coming head on," Fu observed.

"Me too. Guess that must be the place we need to reach," Naruto said.

The two jinchuriki reached a very large clearing surrounded by lit torches, which provided some nice illumination to the otherwise extremely dark forest. Naruto and Fu landed in the middle of the clearing. The moment their feet touched the ground, a voice was heard.

"So, you finally came," a male voice said, which was deep and unsettling.

"We were getting tired of waiting," a female voice said. This one was also deep, but also snide.

"Who's there? Show yourselves!" Naruto demanded.

"Seems that he's a impatient one, isn't he?" the male voice asked.

"Yes. One might think he was the one doing all the waiting," the female voice said. "But we better do what he says. There's no need of delaying this any longer."

Two more figures landed in front of Naruto and Fu. The first one was wearing a mask resembling a fox that obscured his face -though his spiky black hair was visible-, his body was covered by a long, dark blue robe with a faded gray fur collar.

The second figure was also wearing a mask, this one modeled after an insect. Naruto and Fu could tell it was a woman given her body shape. She was wearing a black sleeveless top, short black pants, shoulder length black gloves, knee length black leather boots, and a tattered cape that reached her rear. She was tall and had a muscular built, not unlike Fu.

"So, if I'm to guess... you're our respective inner darkness, right?" Naruto asked.

The two figures removed their masks, revealing their faces, which were identical to Naruto and Fu, except that their hair was black and their eyes were glowing red.

"Not quite," Dark Naruto explained. "We're your true selves."

"What you think it's your identity, is nothing but a mask, no different from this," Dark Fu said, holding her mask for added emphasis, before lazily tossing it away. "We're you, free of the layers of lies you created around yourselves."

"Whatever you say, guys," Naruto said, as he pulled out and activated his Wind Sword, producing a blade of white wind chakra.

"Quite an impatient one indeed," Dark Naruto said, mimicking the real one's actions, except his Wind Sword was dark purple instead of white. "Fine by me. I'm ready for some action!"

Naruto and Dark Naruto charged at each other, their Wind Swords clashing when they met in the middle, producing a small shower of sparks.

"Let me guess," Naruto said, grinning confidently. "You're going to tell me how I can't defeat you since you're as strong as I am."

"No. I'm MUCH stronger than you," Dark Naruto said, before pushing Naruto's Wind Sword aside and delivering a brutal kick to his chest, sending the blond flying. "Though you got the part about losing right."

"Naruto!" Fu shouted, as she flew to aid her fellow jinchuriki.

However, Dark Fu got in the way, forcing the green haired girl to stop.

"Let the boys have their fun," Dark Fu casually said. "Besides, you can't afford to worry about others given the current situation."

"You asked for it!" Fu angrily said.

The Taki jinchuriki and her dark side engaged in a fast paced exchange of punches and kicks. Each hit that connected produced a thunderclap followed by a shockwave. The two girls started to gain altitude as their brutal duel became fiercer. Their physical clash came to an end when their fist connected with each others' in a particularly brutal way, pushing them backwards. Both Fu and her dark analogue weaved the same sequence of seals.

"Wind Release: Great Breakthrough!"

The two of them blew a powerful gust of wind at each other. However, both opposing gales carried the same power, and neither was able to overpower the other. Fu tried a different jutsu, but Dark Fu copied it as if she had a Sharingan.

"Water Release: Water Wall"

Both of them expelled a massive torrent of water from their mouths, but just like their previous attacks, it failed to win the other. Fu gritted her teeth in anger, while Dark Fu smiled smugly.

"Like I said before, I'm your true self," Dark Fu began. "That means that not only do I know all your fighting moves, tactics, jutsu and the like, but I know exactly what you're going to do, and prepare accordingly."

"If that's true, then this won't surprise you," Fu said, as she unslung her red backpack, and opened it, revealing a rather large storage scroll. Unsealing its contents, a gigantic oak log emerged from the scroll. The green haired kunoichi grabbed it with one hand, and rested it on her shoulder. "I don't see you carrying a similar scroll, so I guess you can't match this, can't you?"

Dark Fu sneered. "A brutish weapon for a brutish girl. I don't need such primitive weapon to match you, false me."

While Fu and Dark Fu traded blows above the forest, Naruto and Dark Naruto did the same with Wind Sword swipes. And just like Fu found, Naruto realized that his evil twin was just as skilled as he was, and could counter every move the blond made flawlessly. Still, Naruto didn't get so far by giving up.

"Wind Release: Decapitating Wheel!"

Naruto swung his Wind Sword in a wide arc multiple times, releasing multiple crescent blades of wind in every direction. However, Dark Naruto was able to either parry or dodge them expertly. All what Naruto's attack accomplished was cutting some tree branches.

"Pathetic," Dark Naruto sneered, as he regaining his footing and charged forward. "With such pitiful display, no wonder you failed to save Ukatata and Roshi!"

"SHUT UP!" Naruto shouted, delivering a series of brutal swings at his dark counterpart.

Dark Naruto, however, laughed as he parried or dodged all of them expertly. "What's wrong, did I hit a nerve?" the black haired young man smirked at Naruto, making the jinchuriki even angrier. "Look at that, letting yourself getting carried away by your emotions. You won't beat me like that!"

"How about this, then!" Naruto said, as he jumped backwards while pulling a kunai. "Shadow Clone Kunai Jutsu!"

Naruto tossed a kunai at his evil doppelganger, before making a hand seal, turning the lone weapon into almost a hundred. This time, Dark Naruto didn't make any kind cutting remark, but several hand seals, in order to answer the rain of razor steel.

"Wind Release: Cyclone Shockwave!"

A tornado formed around dark Naruto, and started to expand outwards, pushing the incoming storm of kunai away in every direction. When the tornado ceased, there were a multitude of kunai scattered around the red-eyed copy, while their intended target was unharmed.

"Such a basic attack. How long are you going to keep this charade up, and accept reality?" Dark Naruto mocked.

Naruto didn't acknowledge his evil counterpart's words. He merely smirked and made a hand seal. "Sealing Art: Cursed Binding Circle!"

Some of the kunai spread around Dark Naruto started to glow with a blue light, and from said kunai a chain of seals started to form, advancing towards the surprised doppelganger. The chain of seals formed a circle, which started to glow with even more intensity.

"Ha! You fell in my trap!" Naruto boasted. "Now you can't move! You lost!"

"A fairly decent trap, I will concede that," Dark Naruto calmly said. "Though I wouldn't be so sure of your victory yet."

"What are you-"

Naruto was interrupted by a scythe blade coming for his neck, which he dodged in the last second. The blond jinchuriki saw a strange figure wearing a priestly black robe, and its face obscured by a white skull mask with red marking and fox ears. There was a large scythe on its hands, whose blade glowed with chakra.

"What the hell...? Who are you?" Naruto asked.

But the only response he got was another charge, followed by vicious scythe swings. As Naruto defended from this newcomer, he felt the ground under his feet tremble. Years of experience and dealing with Earth Release users made him know instantly the ground wasn't safe anymore. And true to his instincts, something burst from underground seconds after jumping, a giant snake, also wearing a white and red mask.

"What the hell are these things?" Naruto said, as he landed on a nearby branch. From his vantage point, he could see that Dark Naruto was still immobilized, but he knew those seals wouldn't last forever. He needed to get rid of these creatures as soon as possible.

However, before he could formulate a plan, he was alerted by a low pitched growl. Turning around, he saw a masked tiger leaping at him. Naruto had no time to react, and the tiger's rush knocked him out of the branch, and fell to the ground with a loud thud.

"Shit... !" He cursed, as he tried to get back on his feet, before those three creatures would attack him again.

Meanwhile, several meters above them, Fu continued fighting her doppleganger. She tried to smash her with her giant oak log, but Dark Fu proved to be exceptionally fast and nimble, dodging all of Fu's swings with insulting ease.

"Seriously, girl, you need to stop," Dark Fu stated. "You're embarrassing both of us with this display. You can't hit me with that, and even if you did, you lack the strength to cause me any sort of damage."

"Interesting theory. Let's put it to test then!" Fu said, as she brought down her mighty oak log onto Dark Fu. However, much to her surprise, Dark Fu managed to catch the log on the other end with her bare hands. Surprise that only grew when the log was pulled out of her hands, and casually tossed away.

"You were saying?" Dark Fu boasted. "Honestly, it's amazing that you managed to last as long as you did. Jinchuriki stronger and more skilled than you fell to the Akatsuki. Do you think that's fair?"

"No, it's not," Fu replied, as she charged forward. "But it's not my fault that they were captured! Hurricane Punch!"

Fu delivered a wind-enhanced punch that released a violent burst of air, but Dark Fu managed to dodge it expertly.

"I'm not blaming you. But you have to admit that you're very lucky indeed. You had the entirety of Konoha covering your back. How many Konoha ninjas did die protecting your sorry existence? How many more died while trying to reconquer the pitiful attempt at a ninja village you call a home?"

"Don't you dare to badmouth Taki!" Fu hollered, as she delivered a roundhouse kick.

Kick that Dark Fu easily blocked. "Why? I'm only telling the truth. You've been in both Taki and Konoha. Deep down, you know how a true village must be. Besides, why do you defend Taki so much? It's not that you have people there that like you, other than Shibuki. Your friends and boyfriend are all from Konoha."

"Just because I haven't made friends in Taki doesn't mean I won't ever will!" Fu replied, delivering a combo of fast punches and kicks.

Combo that once again, was also blocked by her dark counterpart. "Keep telling yourself that. After all, you aren't even sure if those Konoha brats are your friends, or they merely hang out with you out of something else. Maybe they just pity you, and deep down they want nothing to do with you."

"Shut up!" Fu shouted, as she made a hand seal, while exhaling a cloud of glittering scales. "Hiding in Scale Powder Jutsu!"

Fu clapped her hands once, and the dark forest was filled with a bright, blinding light. Taking advantage of the sudden light, Fu charged forward, ready to deliver a punch to the head. However, said punch was easily caught by the hand of her enemy.

"Seriously? Are you trying to use such a childish tactic against me?" Dark Fu chided. She shook her head. "If your so-called friends could watch you now... what would they say?"

"They would cheer me on!" Fu replied, tried tom punch with her evil twin with her other hand, but the result was the same.

"Please, don't make me laugh. You met this world's version of Shino. Somebody who speaks non stop and never shuts up. Didn't you find him annoying? Boring? Now think that's how people feel when they have to suffer your presence!"

Dark Fu started to spin her good counterpart in a circle, before violently tossing her down. Fu fell like a meteor, crashing against the ground with a loud crash, raising a cloud of dirt and dust, and opening a large crater. However, the dust cloud was immediately dispelled as Fu shot upwards almost as fast as she fell down. Fu's eyes glinted with a golden light, and they were surrounded by green marks in the shape of butterfly wings.

"Naruto had such a good idea of leaving Shadow Clones gathering nature energy. With Sage Mode, these guys stand no chance against us!" Fu thought, as she delivered yet another punch at her foe's face.

Once again, Dark Fu caught her good counterpart's fist with her hand. Fu expected the hand to be blown up from the rest of the arm due the sheer force, but such thing didn't happen. Dark Fu's hand gripped Fu's fist firmly.

"What!? How can you...?" Fu asked in shock.

"Aw, Sage Mode didn't work?" Dark Fu teased, much to the green haired girl's surprise. "Look closely."

Fu did so, and much to her horror, realized that Dark Fu's eyes were no longer red, but golden, and had green marks around the eyes shaped like butterfly wings.

"You have Sage Mode too!?" Fu asked in shock.

"Weren't you listening to me at the beginning of the fight? I'm the real you. Everything you do, I can do better. Sage Mode included," Dark Fu boasted, as her grip around Fu's fist tightened. "It would do you some good if you listened once in a while instead of talking all the time!"

Dark Fu then grabbed Fu's wrist with her other hand, pulled her violently, and tossed her against a nearby tree. The impact was so brutal, it blew a hole on the tree, caused its upper part to topple down.

Meanwhile, Naruto, already in Sage Mode as well, was fending off Dark Naruto's masked beasts, when he saw Fu being brutally tossed against a tree. He didn't see where she landed, though she could sense she was still alive.

"FU!" Naruto yelled, while kicking the masked tiger, hurling it against a tree.

"Spiraling Ring of Terror!"

Naruto saw a dark purple sphere of chakra with pure white rings circling around it flying against him. Pumping chakra into his feet, the blond jumped just in time before the attack connected, creating a big explosion that carved a large crater into the ground, while obliterating the trees, rocks and bushes around the blast zone.

"Wow... such power..." Naruto said in awe, before landing on the grass.

"Impressive, isn't it?" Dark Naruto proudly said. "And that's nothing but a smidge of my actual power. Though I must thank you for using Sage Mode. With it, my jutsu can reach an even greater level."

"What the...?" Naruto asked, upon noticing Dark Naruto's golden eyes and orange marks around them. "You can use Sage Mode too!?"

"I believe we already went through this," the evil doppelganger said. He made a hand seal. "Time to end this nonsense!"

The three masked creatures from before landed behind Naruto, while six more landed around him. Some of them were more animals, like one who looked like a bird and another that resembled a mix between a dragon and a seahorse, though the others appeared to be human.

"If you think numbers are on your side, then think again! Shadow Clone Jutsu!" Naruto made his favorite hand seal, and a hundred clones appeared besides him. Albeit none of them had Sage Mode like the original.

"You must think I'm impressed," Dark Naruto deadpanned, as he mimicked Naruto, and created another hundred clones of his own. "Everybody, attack!"

Both armies of clones and the nine masked creatures charged forwards, clashing in the middle, resulting in a brutal melee battle. The air was filled by a cacophony of shouts, yells, and steel clashing against steel as both armies fought relentlessly.

" This is just a distraction. If I can reach the real one, it will be over," Naruto thought, before making several hand seals. "Wind Release: Riding the Hurricane!"

A tornado formed around Naruto's legs as he started to elevate above the crowd. However, before he could gain more altitude, a white translucent ribbon wrapped around his body, pinning his arms to it.

"What the...?" Naruto asked, looking at the source of the deceptively strong bind, and saw it was one of the masked creatures. This one, another humanoid dressed like a priestess. He tried to struggle, but was unable to. "Hey, a little help over here!"

Some of the clones heard Naruto's plea and tried to get closer in order to release him, but sadly they were cut down by the Dark Naruto clones and some of the remaining masked creatures. To add to his distress, he saw Fu's battered body crashing into the ground near the battlefield, with her evil counterpart happily landing besides her. Then, she grabbed the green haired girl's neck, and in one swift motion, she snapped it.

"NO!" Naruto screamed.

Fu's dropped with a thud, and it instantly turned into a cloud of glowing white dust that dispelled in a few seconds.

"Guess that this one couldn't defeat the darkness within her," Dark Fu said in a mocking tone. She then looked at the ongoing battle. "So, are you going to finish him already, or what?"

"Yeah, just give me a second," Dark Naruto said, as he walked towards the immobile Naruto. "This one can't beat his darkness either."

"Shut up! This is nothing! I can still beat you!" Naruto shouted as he futilely tried to break free of his bindings.

"Because you're so good, right? Because you think you're the hero that will save your village," Dark Naruto sneered. "You abandoned your friends when you found them annoying. And ignored your father when he warned you that you'll only find death coming here."

"Those weren't the real versions of my friends or my dad! I would never do that to them!" Naruto protested.

"They're as real as I am," the black haired young man said, as he extended a hand. Another purple sphere with white rings formed around his fingers. "Sorry Naruto, but you can't defeat me. Now perish. Spiraling Ring of Terror!"

In a split second, Dark Naruto crossed the distance that separated them and smashed his jutsu into Naruto's chest, resulting in a massive explosion. And after that... nothing.

...

Real World

"Wha!"

"Aaaaaah!"

Naruto and Fu screamed, before scanning their surroundings, and realized that they were no longer in the Forest of Death. Instead, they were back on the small island in the lake of the Falls of Truth. Naruto instinctively reached his hand to his chest, and Fu to her neck. Both of them found much to their relief that they were okay.

"Hey!" Motoi's voice called, as he ran towards them. "You okay?"

"Y-Yeah," Naruto replied, still processing what happened.

"Hey, how is that it suddenly became daytime?" Fu asked, looking at the bright sky.

Motoi couldn't help but chuckle. "Because in the mental world you've been in, time passes differently. I take you've been a whole day inside the mental world, right? However, from our point of view, only a couple minutes passed."

"I see," Naruto replied.

"Don't worry if you didn't got it on your first try, your inner darkness is no small fry!" Killer B rapped as he joined them.

"How did you know we failed?" Fu asked.

"You sour faces are easy to read, it's easy to tell that you didn't do the deed," Killer B replied. "But you don't have to worry, you can try again, there's no reason to be sorry!"

"But first you should try to rest a bit," Motoi helpfully offered. "The experience must have been draining. Trying immediately won't net you better results."

"Sure thing, Motoi-san," Naruto said, as he got up and started to walk away. "Fu, you coming?"

"Yeah," Fu said, her voice lacking her usual enthusiasm.

As the Konoha and Taki jinchuriki walked away, the two Kumo ninja watched them. They could see their body language was nothing like how they were before taking the trial. The energy they carried themselves with was nowhere to be found. Whatever happened in that mental world had crushed them.

"Facing their inner darkness nearly broke them," Motoi observed. "Let's hope they can succeed with time. I don't think we can win this war without their power."

The normally talkative Kumo ninja remained silent, merely observing his fellow jinchuriki walking away.

Author's Note: And thus, Naruto and Fu failed at their first attempt at defeating their inner darkness. You didn't expect to succeed at their first try, did you? That's not something it can be beat with brute force alone. Though, the key to beat them isn't the same as in canon (I wanted to be a little original), and I dropped a few hints over what they need to do to win.

So, what do you think about my take on the alternate Konoha 15? Some of them were the same as in the movie because I loved them (Hinata and Sasuke were my favorites), others were changed because I didn't like much (like Lee or Shino), and others, like Sakura or Haku, had to create from the ground up since they didn't exist. Don't worry, if you want to see more of them, they will be back the next chapter.

Originally, I had the idea of featuring an alive Minato and Kushina like in the movie (though Minato would still be the Hokage), but given that this Naruto hasn't meet his biological parents in person yet, meeting a pair of fakes first would cheapen the moment. Plus that allowed me to use an alternate Jiraiya, and I loved to write a Jiraiya that's a super prude when it comes to women XD

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Anyway, how do you like the first half of my version of Road to Ninja? How about the alternate Konoha 15, do you like them? Which one is your favorite? Tell me your thoughts in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Road to Ninja, Part II

Author's Note: Man, this Coronavirus thing turned out to be far more serious business than what most of us believed. My country is pretty much in state of alert, a lot of businesses have been forced to close their doors for the time being, and you can even get fined if you're on the street without a good reason. Plenty of events have been cancelled or delayed because of this pandemic.

But do you know what HASN'T been cancelled or postponed? This fanfic! Yeah, I know is not a lot, but hope that, at least, it will keep you entertained and distracted from the flow of bad news for some time. Enjoy the second part of my Road to Ninja Adaptation:

Chapter 98:

Road to Ninja, Part II

or

Battle of the Fake Doubles

Konoha, Hyuga Estate

Jiraiya watched how the Moon Acolytes unfurled a massive scroll onto the estate's main yard. On the scroll was an equally large sealing array arranged in circular patterns, which formed a portal gate that would teleport whoever stepped on it to another portal, allegedly in the Moon. So far, very few people knew about its existence until now, Jiraiya being among the privileged few.

"I had my best seal masters study this scroll, but they were barely able to decipher it," Jiraiya inwardly lamented, as he saw the scroll completely unfurl. "The secrets of teleportation, right into our very hands..."

Everything was ready for her departure. The team that would escort Hinata to the Moon would be led by Shisui Uchiha, since Jiraiya felt they would need another Sage (the fact that they had to send two Sages so far away from the front lines hurt immensely), Sai, since his jutsu could provide easy aerial transportation (fortunately, they weren't as lacking in that department, as they had many ninjas that could summon flying animals), several Hyugas that volunteered for the job, such as Tokuma, and several Moon Acolytes, Nori among them.

Naturally, most of the Hyuga Clan was there, ready to bid Hinata good luck on her mission.

"The Moon Portal is ready, Hinata-sama," Takuya told the Hyuga Clan Head. "Step into the circle of seals, and we'll activate it."

"How safe it is?" Hikari asked. "I would hate if my daughter and her companions ended up floating in the outer space or something like that."

"Worry not, Hikari-sama, we have tested this portal multiple times," Nori assured her. "We wouldn't risk any life, much less Hinata-sama's, on such venture if there were risks like that."

"Good luck up there, nee-chan," Hanabi said, as she walked towards her sister and gave her a hug.

"I'm sorry I have to leave on such a critical moment, Hanabi-chan," Hinata said, hugging her sister back. "I'll try to get back as soon as I can, so we can fight in this war together."

"Don't worry about me, I have a Tenseigan too, I can take care of myself," Hanabi replied. "If that creep shows up, I'll give him a beating on your behalf. Now that I have Sage Mode, that guy won't be able to even touch me."

Hinata smiled at her. "I'm sure he won't."

They broke the hug, and Hinata walked towards the rest of her group, who were already standing inside the circle of seals.

"Begin the teleportation process!" Takuya commanded.

The Hyugas and Moon Acolytes placed around the circle of seals brought their hands together, and started to channel chakra into the circle. The seals started to glow with a white and blue light, and in a bright flash, they were gone.

"The teleportation has been a success," Takuya announced. "Now, all we can do is pray that they succeed in their endeavor."

"Good to hear that," Jiraiya said with a nod. "Now that that's out of the way, we can focus on the war here. I think it's about time for the army of the Ninja Alliance to gather."

...

Turtle Island

After a night of sleep followed by some light sparring with Killer B, Naruto and Fu were in front of the Falls of Truth once again. They weren't sitting on the lake's small island, though. After the experience in the mental world, the sight of the waterfall induced them a sense of respect that they lacked before. While Naruto paced around, trying to think in strategies that would help him deal with his dark half, Fu was sitting at the edge of the lake, skipping stones across it.

"So, if we go beforehand and boobytrap the arena..." Naruto wondered aloud, even if he was talking to himself. "No, they would see through that. For some reason, they know what we're going to do before we even do it."

"How about switching opponents?" Fu suggested, as she tossed another stone across the lake's surface, bouncing many times until it sank with a splash. "Your evil twin won't know what I will do or how to counter it."

"I don't think they'll let us," Naruto said, shaking his head. "Besides, wouldn't be that like cheating?"

"How so?" Fu asked, turning her head at the blond.

"Well, we're supposed to fight them ourselves," Naruto said. "Imagine if we had to do this alone. We wouldn't be able to rely on the other for help. Meaning that, even if we fight together, we'll have to beat our respective dark sides ourselves."

"Yeah, guess that makes sense," Fu admitted, as she dejectedly tossed another stone. This one bounced fewer times before it sank. "Should we ask B for tips?"

"I already did," Naruto replied. "He said it's different for everybody, and that we need to figure it out ourselves."

"Poop," Fu childishly said, before tossing yet another stone.

"I think we aren't taking the right approach," Naruto pondered, as he rested his chin under his hand. "These guys are the embodiment of our inner darkness. They can't be beaten through brute strength alone. The question is: how do we beat our inner darkness?"

"By... being kind?" Fu offered, though she sounded unsure. "Because that's all what I have."

Suddenly, a realization dawned upon Naruto. "Wait, that's it! Of course we've been doing this all wrong!" the blond said, excited. "We can't beat our inner darkness with violence, but with kindness! We need to show them that we're stronger than them not because of our fists or jutsu, but because they have no power over us."

"That... makes a lot of sense," Fu agreed. A grin developed on her lips. "Come on, let's do it!"

"Yeah!"

Both Naruto and Fu sat once again on the small island, adopted the lotus position, and closed their eyes. Soon, their minds were no longer inside their bodies, but on another plane of reality.

...

A few minutes later

"Turn out that wasn't the way to beat them," Naruto said, tiredly lying on the grass.

"Yeah. We should have guessed that being our dark sides and all that, they would use our kindness to backstab us," Fu lamented, also lying down on the grass. "You know, at least it's a good thing that our friends from the mental world didn't remember the previous day. Or else they'd be mad at us for walking on them the first time at the restaurant..."

"Guess that, since they don't really exist, they don't have long term memory," Naruto concluded, before letting out a sigh. "Back to square one."

"You know, I have the feeling that we're missing something..." Fu said, standing up and walking towards the edge of the lake.

"Yeah, I have that feeling too," Naruto replied. "And I've never been one to solve mysteries. Hinata-hime and Haku always got that part covered."

"Same with me and my Shino. He's so smart... I'm sure that he could figure this out in an instant," Fu said, kicking the water lazily. "Maybe we could ask his other counterpart? But given how much he talks I don't think he'll even let me do the question to begin with."

"Well, we could try-" Naruto began, before suddenly going silent. His eyes grew big as a smile developed on his face as a realization dawned upon him. "Hey, that's it! If we can't do it alone, then we can ask others for help!"

"Wait, I thought you said that was cheating," Fu replied.

"It may be, but I think it's the key to everything," Naruto said, his excitement growing by the moment. "Suddenly I remembered something the evil me said. Come on!"

Naruto then pulled Fu by the wrist and dragged her towards the island in the middle.

"Whoa! Calm down! I can walk on my own!" Fu protested, shaking her wrist free. "Okay, so what are we supposed to do?"

"Let's do the same thing we did during the first time, but when we're at the restaurant, follow my lead, okay?" Naruto asked.

"You got it," Fu said with a nod.

Naruto and Fu sat besides each other in the lotus position on the small island, and closed their eyes. Soon, their minds abandoned their bodies and traveled to a different world.

...

Mental World

Once again, Naruto woke up in his bedroom, or the equivalent of his bedroom, inside the mental world. This time, he merely bid his mother a quick "good morning", had a nice breakfast, and headed outside. After creating a clone and send it to look for Fu, Naruto headed towards his team's training grounds. Just like he expected, the rest of his teammates were there.

"Hey there, handsome," Hinata said, using the same seductive tone as in the same time. Naruto, however, knew that that sweetness was actually a honey trap. "I was afraid you wouldn't come. What took you so long?"

"Sorry babe, I had a dream with you and I didn't want to wake up," Naruto said, giving her a peck on the lips. "But then I thought that having the real one between my arms would be better."

Hinata's face turned beet red, as she averted her eyes and her lips formed a wide smile. "Oh, Naruto-kun, you always know what to say to make me feel special."

" Well, that reaction is more Hinata-like," Naruto thought. He then looked at Haku, who was impatiently waiting for the two lovebirds to stop greeting each other and get on with the training. "Hey Haku, looking good! Have you been working out on your own?"

The Ice Ninja beamed upon hearing the compliment. He then suppressed the smile, and tried to turn it into a smug grin. "Yeah, I did! Of course you noticed, didn't you?"

"Hehe, it's hard not to!" Naruto chuckled. "Say, how about a one on one? I want to test how strong you've become!"

"You're on!" Haku eagerly said.

Kurenai shook her head, but chuckled in mild amusement. "Well, it seems that the boys are fired up today. Do you want to spar against me, Hinata?"

"I guess I have no other choice," the Hyuga said with a shrug.

And thus, the training began. While Hinata fought against Kurenai, Naruto faced Haku. Naruto made sure to compliment the Ice Ninja and to measure his own attacks, careful not to hurt the poor guy's fragile ego. After an hour or so, Hinata requested a change, and Naruto went to spar with her. This time, however, he decided that the aggressive Hyuga wouldn't appreciate if he held back against her. Which wasn't a very good idea either, since whenever Naruto landed a solid hit, Hinata would moan and gush about how strong Naruto was.

" Geez, let's hope the real Hinata isn't a masochist deep down," Naruto thought, cringing a little.

After the second sparring matches, Kurenai decided it was time for some teamwork exercises. Something Naruto was extra careful with, and made sure they went down without a hitch. When the sun was at its highest, Kurenai decided to stop.

"Today has been a pretty productive training. You guys appear to be extra motivated. Good work, you three," the raven haired woman praised. Her three students nodded and smiled proudly. "Say, how about we meet again after lunch? In the meantime, I'll see if there are any missions for us to do."

"As you say, Kurenai-sensei," Naruto nodded, as he saw his sensei walking away. "So, you guys want to eat? Because I'm starving!"

"Yeah, me too," Haku agreed. "Icharaku's?"

"Sounds good, but... I feel like eating with more people, you know? It's been a while since we did that," Naruto suggested. "I could send a clones to our former classmates, and have all of them meet us at Yakiniku-Q. The place's pretty big."

"We almost never eat with our former classmates," Hinata pointed out. "What's the occasion?"

" Yeah, I can see why," Naruto inwardly deadpanned. "I dunno. I feel like having a big meal with everybody else."

"You seem to be in a very good mood today, Naruto," Haku pointed out. "Did something good happen to you today?"

"What, can't I just happen to be in a good mood?" Naruto replied, though trying not to sound too defensive.

Hinata wrapped her arms around the blond. "If you're so happy today, I won't be the one to sour your mood. We'll eat with the others if that's what you want."

"Heh, I knew I could count on you, Hime," Naruto replied, smiling.

...

An hour later, Yakiniku-Q

Just like the time before, the first team to arrive was Team Kakashi, with Fu in tow. And like the last time, Shino was telling his day to Fu.

"... before Kiba was slammed against a tree. Our training has been pretty good. Kiba and Tamaki didn't fight as much as they usually do, and guess what? When Kiba smashed his face against that tree, it broke its bark, and I managed to found several green beetles lurking underneath. Did you know that green beetles are extremely rare in the Land of Fire? And speaking of rare, I hope that this time they don't burn my order, since I only like medium..."

Naruto, sitting between Hinata and Fu, could see how both ladies were starting to grow exasperated, and just like before, Hinata was ready to tear the Aburame's head apart with her bare hands. However, before that could happen, he leaned onto Fu, and whispered into her ear.

"Hey, I know that you prefer to be the one to talks rather than the one who listens, but... could you try to humor Shino just this time?" Naruto told Fu.

"What? Are you kidding me?" Fu whispered back in shock.

"I know, but this is part of my plan. Trust me, if everything goes well, this will be of a huge help later," Naruto reassured her.

"Hey, what the hell are you two whsipering!" Hinata screeched.

"If you say so," Fu said, unsure of what her fellow jinchuriki was planning, but decided to play along. She turned at her not-boyfriend, and smiled. "That sounds mostly interesting, Shino. Can you tell me more about those new beetles you found?"

A huge smile developed on Shino's face. Seeing the normally stoic Aburame (the real one at least) making such a display was unsettling to the point of creepyness.

"Really? Wow, nobody really ever told me that!" Shino excitedly said. He gathered his thoughts, and started his explanation. "You see these kind of beetles usually leave in areas with a very specific climatological contidionts, which happen mostly in the are between the Land of Waterfall and..."

Shino continued to talk nonstop, though he seemed to address solely Fu rather than everybody else, much to their collective relief. Still, Naruto knew that he wasn't out of hot water yet, since he had to address his temperamental and jealousy-prone not-girlfriend.

"I was telling Fu that he should try to listen to her boyfriend a little more," Naruto said in a reassuring tone. "Sorry if I made it look like something different."

Hinata glared at him, but her scowl disappeared. It seemed she accepted the explanation. "Well, given that she'st his girlfriend, it should be her job to listen to that chatterbox of a boyfriend, and let he rest of us in peace."

The door of the restaurant opened again, and like it happened before, Shizune's Medical Squad entered.

"Hello there, ladies, your man Sasuke is here!" Sasuke said, winking at Hinata, Tamaki and Fu just like he did before. And seeing it again didn't make it any less jarring. "You don't need to fight for me, there's enough Sasuke for everybody."

"Don't begin!" Sakura chastised. "You know, if you dedicated half the time you spend trying to get on every girl's pants to become a better ninja, you would be Jonin already!"

"Come on, you need to relax a little, and enjoy the finer pleasures of life," Sasuke said, as he tried to put an arm around Sakura, which she quickly pushed away. "If you weren't so obsessed with training and being a better ninja so much, people would like you better."

"Sasuke, I think Sakura is right," Naruto interceded. "Plus your constant flirting makes many of the girls here uncomfortable. Try to rein your impulses in."

"Ha!" Sakura laughed, emboldened by the blond's support. "I told you I wasn't the only one to think like that. Thanks for agreeing with me, Naruto. I knew a ninja of your skill would see that I'm the one in the right."

"Though, even if I find admirable how much time and effort you put into being a better ninja, nobody is forced to follow your pace," Naruto added. "There are other things in life besides training and missions. Like friends and having fun."

"Heh, I knew my man Naruto wouldn't let me down!" Sasuke replied, now being the one emboldened. Naruto cringed upon hearing the Uchiha calling him 'his man'. "You had to, otherwise you wouldn't be dating that blue haired wild beast."

"Wanna see how much of a 'wild beast' I am, Uchiha?" Hinata seethed, as she activated her Byakugan for added emphasis.

Naruto merely grabbed Hinata's hand, and the temperamental Hyuga quickly calmed down.

"Please, let's try to eat in peace," Fu intervened, briefly pausing his conversation with Shino.

"There's no peace in such a place of death and blood like this one," Karin firmly said.

"Come on Karin, I'm sure that there are places far worse than a mere barbecue restaurant," Fu said, before the redhead could go on a gloomy and long winded rant. "Plus, we all know you love meat."

Karin wanted to say something in response, but she merely shrugged and sat down. "Alas, disarmed before I could even begin an argument. Like a little chick tragically killed before it can grow up into an eagle and learn to fly."

That seemed to be the end of it. Though Naruto knew that his job was only halfway done. And the next challenge appeared when Asuma's Tactical Squad entered the restaurant, with Choji and Shikamaru arguing about something, and Ino trying and failing to play the peacekeeper.

"Why did you drag me to this place?" Choji complained. "You know I hate the food they serve here."

"It's not just for the food, but all our friends are here," Shikamaru said. "Why do you have to act as if you're better than everybody else?"

"I'm not acting like I'm better than anybody else, I just expressed my dislike of this restaurant," Choji insisted. "You know, your inferiority complex can be quite grating at times."

"Who are you calling inferior-"

"Now, now, let's not fight, okay?" Ino softly asked, placing a hand on each of the boys' shoulder. "All of our friends are here, let's try to have a good time."

"Come on guys, Ino is right," Naruto interceded, much to the Yamanaka's gratitude. "You just entered here. You can't have such a shitty attitude."

"Easy for you to say. Nobody is forcing you to go to a restaurant specialized in food you don't like," Choji replied, crossing his arms indignantly.

"That's because nobody feeds exclusively on salad and egg yolk like you do, Choji," Shikamaru said, rolling his eyes.

"You know, Choji, while this is a barbecue restaurant, they do have salads and other kind of dishes low on fat or with no meat," Naruto pointed out.

The fit Akimichi was taken aback. "They do?"

"You can check the menu if you don't believe me," Naruto said, handing it to Choji.

"Come on man, you aren't going to die if you don't eat salad one day," Shikamaru protested.

"Hey, let Choji eat what he wants," Fu interceded. "In what way does whatever he eats affects you?"

"I just wanted to enjoy himself once in a while, that's it," Shikamaru said defensively.

"Maybe he enjoys eating healthier food. Haven't you think of that?" Naruto asked.

"Thank you," Choji said, giving Shikamaru a dirty eye.

"Now, now, let's stop arguing. People here seems to be in a good mood today. Let's relax and have some fun, okay?" Ino asked.

Both Shikamaru and Choji wordlessly nodded, and the three of them sat alongside the rest of their former classmates. Naruto couldn't help but let out a sigh of relief.

" Well, one more team to go. Fortunately, this one shouldn't be too hard," the blond thought, just moments before the restaurant door opened once again, and the last members of the not-Konoha 15, Gai's Close Combat Squad, made their presence known.

"Tenten-chan!" Haku jumped upon seeing his girlfriend, rushed towards her, and gave her a very passionate kiss. "Hey everybody, my girlfriend is here! Yeah, I have a girlfriend! And I wouldn't if I wasn't so manly!"

"Now, now, Haku-kun, we talked about this, didn't we?" Tenten said in a mildly chastising but very gentle tone. "If you let your insecurities rule your life, you shall never be happy. You need to learn to look inside, and find your inner beauty and strength. Which is what I did."

"You should listen to your girlfriend, Haku," Fu chimed in. "She likes you for what you are, not for what you're pretending to be."

"See? Everybody else also thinks I'm right," Tenten said, before turning her head at Fu and nodding in gratitude.

"I guess so. Sorry, I kind of forget about that," Haku replied, rubbing the back of his head. His enthusiasm didn't disappear, though.

"Come on sit besides me! So, tell me, how was your day? You've been training, yes?" Haku asked.

"I've been training in my medical arts. Because why harm, when you can heal? It's much more rewarding," Tenten replied. Despite not being the first time he heard it, it was still weird for Naruto to reconcile the real Tenten with this one. "My teammates haven't trained either. Lee has been all the time sleeping under a tree, and I bet Neji has been using his Byakugan to watch other girls' underwear."

"Tenten, you goddamn tattletale! Why do you have to tell them that?" Neji protested, before realizing what he just said. "Er, I mean... how do you know I was peeping on girls? You were focused on your book all the time, you couldn't tell what I was doing!"

"You were standing in the same spot for two hours straight, and you chuckled perversely from time to time," Tenten replied. "One doesn't need to be a genius to know what you were doing."

"She's right, Neji," Lee added.

"Shut up! You were asleep the whole time! How can you tell if she's right or not?" Neji protested again.

"How can you waste the time sleeping like that, Lee?" Shikamaru intervened. "You should use that time to train so you can soar to new heights! Man, if I only had a quarter of the talent you possess, with my hard work I'll be Konoha's top ninja!"

"Eh, it's too tiresome. Why train when you're as strong as I am?" Lee said with a shrug. Though Naruto could tell he wasn't really boasting, his laziness was really irritating Shikamaru. "Besides, we're living in an age of peace. It's not like we're going to be needed for any future conflict."

"That's irrelevant! Hard work is a reward on itself! The satisfaction of achieving something with the sweat of your brow! Of moving forward! Doesn't that mean anything to you?"

"ENOUGH!" Naruto yelled, raising his voice above everybody else. A deafening silence fell upon them, as they stared at the blond in both fear and awe. His eyes rested on Neji first. "Neji, your behavior has no excuse."

"Ha! You tell him, Naruto-kun!" Hinata boasted, though Naruto ignored her.

"And Lee, no matter how strong you think you are, training, even just a little, is a must for a ninja," Naruto told him. "You don't have to train your body to death, but enough to keep yourself in shape. Remember that we don't work alone, the lives of our comrades depend on us."

"Oh... I haven't realized that," Lee said, sounding a little ashamed.

"Thanks for agreeing with me, Naruto. I knew you would," Shikamaru said with a nod.

"Don't think you're in the right here, Shikamaru," Naruto said, as he turned towards the Nara heir. "I find your dedication to training and being a better ninja encomiable, but like I said before, not everybody needs to spend every second they have training. Let everybody spend their free time as they see fit. Don't go imposing on others."

"I..." Shikamaru wanted to protest, but found himself disarmed of any argument. "Yeah, you're right. That wasn't very nice of me, was it?"

"Hey, it's okay, just don't do it again," Naruto replied, smiling reassuringly. "Now come on, let's sit, eat, talk, and have a good time!"

Unlike the first time they were there, the meeting didn't devolve into a cacophony of screaming contests. And whenever it threatened to, Naruto and sometimes Fu were quick to play the peacekeeper role before things could escalate. But overall, everybody ate in peace and had a very good time. Now that Naruto had finally set the proper mood, it was about time to set his plan in motion. He hoped that it would work.

"Hey everybody, may I have your attention?" Naruto asked, as he stood up. Everybody dropped what they were doing, and looked at him. "Let's say, Fu and I had a little jinchuriki problem, and we were hoping that you could help us with it..."

...

Forest of Death, that night

Just like they did the previous times, Naruto and Fu landed on the arena marked by a circle of lit torches. Unlike the other times, thought, their dark counterparts were already there, rather than waiting to make a dramatic entrance.

"Hey look, they came back for more," Dark Naruto chuckled. "You guys think third time's the charm?"

"So, what's going to be this time?" Dark Fu jeered. "Because boy, trying to befriend us the last time was so fucking gold! That's going to be hard to top!"

"You know Naruto, he thinks he can talk his enemies into surrendering and being friends," Dark Naruto said, shaking his head.

"Yeah, that was dumb on my part, trying to be kind to the literal embodiment of my evil," Naruto admitted. "That's why we decided to go back to the first idea and give you a good ass whooping."

Their dark counterparts merely chuckled.

"Well, it works for us," said Dark Fu said with an evil grin, as she cracked her knuckles.

Dark Naruto, meanwhile, made the tiger seal. "Though this time, let's skip the warm up and jump directly into the fun. Nine Masked Beasts!"

A massive mandala appeared behind Dark Naruto, with nine kanjis inside nine rings, arrayed in a cross pattern. The circled kanjis started to glow, turning into portals that summoned the creatures that Dark Naruto had used during their previous fight.

"Come on, I'd love to see what kind of strategy you guys came up with in order to desperately close the gigantic gap between you and us," Dark Naruto chuckled. "Attack!"

The nine masked monsters all lunged at Naruto and Fu, who made no effort to dodge or defend, much to their dark counterparts bemusement. Not just that, but they looked fairly confident in their chances. That moment, Naruto quickly made an arm wave.

"Vacuum Palm Wall!"

"Fire Release: Great Fireball Jutsu!"

"Ice Release: Testosterone Blizzard!"

The nine charging monsters were hit by a destructive wave of fire, ice and vacuum that resulted in multiple blasts that knocked them backwards. It wasn't enough to put them down for good, but the attack did some serious harm to them.

"What?" Dark Naruto asked in shock. "Just how...?"

"You can come out, guys!" Fu called, clapping her hands twice.

That moment, the rest of the alternate Konoha 15 left their hiding spots, and landed besides Naruto and Fu. All of them were in fighting stances, ready to battle.

"What? You brought those guys into the battle?" Dark Fu asked in shock. "But... but... you can't do that! That's cheating!"

"Says who?" the green haired girl challenged. "The fact that they can stay here and that their attacks can harm you tells me that we can use their help to take you down. Otherwise, the Waterfall wouldn't allow it."

"What was that thing you told me during our first encounter? That they were as real as you are?" Naruto asked in a mocking tone.

"Thanks for the advice, by the way."

Dark Naruto didn't say anything in response. He merely gritted his teeth and growled something inaudible.

"So... this are the guys you told us about?" Hinata asked. "Your dark sides?"

"Yep, that's them," Naruto confirmed.

"That raises a lot of questions," Shino began. "Like how they came to exist, for starters. Were they always living inside you, or did they exist as separate entities? Do we need to kill them, or should we keep them alive in order to seal them back into the originals? The metaphysical implications to such-"

Fu stopped Shino's rambling by placing a finger on his lips. "Shino, honey, forget about irrelevant questions. Just help us beat them. That's all we need to do."

"Okay. But I want an explanation after this is over," Shino demanded.

"So, Hinata, ready to take down the evil me?" Naruto asked his not-girlfriend.

"Aw, but he just looks like you. Such a handsome face. I don't think I can't bring myself to hurt him when he looks so much like you," Hinata said with a somewhat dramatic pout.

"In that case, try to imagine he did something that infuriated you," Naruto said. "Maybe a version of me who cheated on you with Sakura."

Hinata didn't have to picture such scenario in her mind in order to make her blood boil.

"YOU'RE SO FUCKING DEAD!" Hinata bellowed, as she activated her Byakugan and leaped at the black haired Naruto.

"Hinata, wait- oh shit, she's going to get herself killed," Naruto said, shaking his head. "Everybody else, attack!"

The rest of the alternate Konoha 15 members leaped into the nascent battle. The nine masked beast had completely recovered, and rushed to aid their masters. However, Both Dark Naruto and Dark Fu knew that they no longer held the advantage in this battle. Naruto and Fu had found the key to victory.

"Shit, there's no way we can beat so many people!" Dark Fu said in panick. She turned at her partner in crime. "What are we going to do?"

"For the time being, fight! These guys don't matter! If we can kill Naruto and Fu, victory will be ours!" Dark Naruto said, as he charged forwards while creating an army of Shadow Clones, with Dark Fu reluctantly following him.

"Try to focus on those creatures while we take care of our evil selves!" Naruto told the alternate version of his friends.

"Though if you can lend us a hand against them, we would appreciate it a lot!" Fu added.

And thus, the huge battle began. Fu deployed her wings in an attempt to fly above the incoming army and reach her evil counterpart, but was stopped when a piece of cloth tightly wrapped against her legs, and pulled her down. It was one of those masked beings, the one who looked like a priestess. That's it, until a swarm of angry beetles descended and bit the cloth until it was cut, releasing the green haired girl.

"Thank you, Shino!" Fu said, giving her not-boyfriend a thumbs up.

"Anything for you. Now go and kick that fake's ass!" Shino encouraged her. "Though, if you're as strong as she is, how are you-"

Shino was interrupted when one of the masked creatures, shaped like a strange bird, swooped at him. The Aburame was forced to jump back. Waving his arms, he commanded his swarm to attack the incoming bird. However, it flapped its wings at a fast pace, creating a powerful gale that blew most of Shino's insects away.

"My beetles are of no use here!" Shino say no one in particular, as he took a step back while pulling a kunai. "What should I do, to defend myself from this nefarious beast? Alas, I must think how-"

Before the bird could skewer him with its talons, it was sent back flying by a powerful punch coming from a giant fist. The next second, Choji landed besides Shino.

"You know, you could have asked for help instead of going into an aimless ramble," Choji told Shino, before going after another enemy.

At another side of the battleground, two of Dark Naruto's masked creatures, who looked like monks wielding fox-shaped staves, had trapped Ino, Neji and Kiba inside a purple chakra barrier powered by seals. Kiba and Neji tried to break it by slashing it and hitting it with Gentle Fist strikes, but to no avail.

"What the hell this barrier is made of?" Kiba angrily cursed, as he continued delivering swipes.

"Guys, watch out!" Ino warned, pointing to one side.

The three ninja could see the scythe-wielding being leaped at them, and reared its scythe back, which started to glow with chakra.

"Can its attacks bypass the barrier?" Kiba asked incredulously.

"So it seems!" Neji said, as he prepared to take the hit.

However, just before the creature could attack, several chains wrapped around its body, immobilizing it completely, before he was violently launched against a tree. The chains then retracted back into their caster, Karin. Following that moment, Tamaki rushed towards them, followed by Akamaru.

"Come on Akamaru, let's save my boyfriend!" Tamaki happily shouted. "And Ino and Neji, I guess. Fang Passing Fang!"

Tamaki and Akamaru turned into living drills and lunged at the two staff wielding masked men, who were forced to jump back, undoing the barrier in the process.

"Thank you, Tamaki, I got them now!" Ino said, pointing her hands at them. "Mind Disturbance Jutsu!"

The masked creatures were paralyzed on the spot. They struggled to break free, but they were unable to overcome Ino's mind control.

"Eight Trigrams, Sixty Four Plams!" Neji dashed towards the twin enemies, ready to unleash his most powerful combo. "Two strikes! Four strikes! Eight Strikes! Sixteen Strikes! Thrity Two Strikes! SIXTY FOUR STRIKES!"

He finished the combo with a double palm hit in opposite directions, sending the two creatures flying away, until they crashed against a tree each.

"Three down," Ino said, pleased, before turning at Karin. "Thanks for your help, Karin-san. Your timing was impeccable."

"Whatever," the goth redhead said.

"Oh Kiba-kun, I was so worried when those meanies got you!" Tamaki said, as she rushed towards her beloved.

"Don't worry my love. Not even death itself can keep us apart for long!" Kiba replied.

"Of course, because I love you so much!" Tamaki replied.

"No, I love you more!"

"No, I love you more!"

"No, I love you more!"

"No, I love you more!"

The two of them started to passionately kiss each other, only stopping to breathe and exchange even more compliments, and to claim who loved the other more.

"Though in hindsight, I should have let that creature kill Kiba at the very least," Karin deadpanned.

Neither Neji nor Ino could disagree with her. Neji, however, perked up when his Byakugan picked up something.

"Over there! Watch out!" Neji warned.

Suddenly, a group of a dozen Dark Naruto clones leaped at them, each wielding different weapons, ready to strike. However, before they could a green blur intercepted them.

"Konoha Whirlwind!"

The green blur, who was Rock Lee, delivered a powerful roundhouse kick to the clones. Even if he really didn't hit any, the kick carried so much force, it created a powerful shockwave that instantly dispelled the clones. The shockwave expanded into every direction, shattering nearby tree branches, and leaving deep gashes on the surrounding trees, resulting in a rain of shards of bark and sliced leaves, before landing in front of Neji, Ino, Kiba and Tamaki -the latter two were oblivious to what happened, as they continued with their make out session-.

"Wow, that was... amazing," Ino said in awe.

Suddenly, Lee dashed towards Ino and reared his fist back, ready to punch the surprised blond. However, rather than her face, his fist passed her left ear. Even if he did punch thin air, the punch carried so much force it created another shockwave, which blasted another of Dark Naruto's masked creatures, this one looking like a cross between a dragon and a seahorse, the force of the shockwave violently lunging it against a tree, which was snapped in two.

"Uh... t-thank you, Lee-kun," the shocked blond stammered.

"There, I did it, I contributed to the fight," Lee wearily said. "Can I go home now? I'm tired."

"Not now, Lee," another voice said, as Tenten clamly walked to the group. She made several hand seals, before slamming her hand into the ground. "Sealing Art: Safe Zone!"

A circle of seals formed around the group, as they started to glow with a green light. All the Konoha ninjas inside the circle were surrounded by a green healing aura that started to restore their forces.

"While I abhor fighting, I can still help you with my jutsu. If you're tired or injured, you can rest inside my Safe Zone," Tenten helpfully explained.

Meanwhile, Dark Fu was in the middle of fighting her good counterpart, Sasuke and Shikamaru.

"Shadow Binding Jutsu!" Shikamaru made a hand seal, as he send his shadow in the form of multiple tendrils to catch Dark Fu. "If this enemy is as strong as Fu, then it's going to be a fight worth remembering! I'm so pumped right now!"

Shikamaru's excitement caused his shadow tendrils to grow larger and travel faster, making Dark Fu's attempt to dodge them all the harder.

"Goddamit, I prefered you when you were a lazy ass!" the black haired girl complained. She was then alerted by the sound of a thousand birds chirping. Looking around, she saw Sasuke diving at her with his hand coated in electricity.

"Chidori!"

Before she could be impaled, Dark Fu managed to grab his wrist and using his own momentum, tossing him against a tree. However, Sasuke was able to land on his feet.

"The hell? How do you know how to use Kakashi's jutsu?" Dark Fu asked, incredulous.

"Interested? How about if I let me treat you to dinner tonight at a fancy place, and I tell you?" Sasuke asked, as he winked at her in a suggestive fashion.

"Goddamit Uchiha, that's the embodiment of my inner darkness you're trying to flirt with!" the real Fu protested.

Sasuke merely shrugged. "Hey, I don't judge anybody. Especially not pretty girls. And given that you have rejected all my advances for Shino's sake of all people, you can't blame me for trying my luck with your lovely doppelganger. The black hair and red eyes combo makes a nice contrast. Very Uchiha-like. That's a sign meaning that we belong with each other!"

"Fu is right, you can continue your inane flirting once we're done with this!" Shikamaru hotly shouted, as he changed his hand seal. "Shadow Sewing Jutsu!"

The shadow threads emerged from the ground, forming sharp edges, as they tried to impale the evil jinchuriki. She deployed her wings and tried to evade them by gaining some altitude, but that's what Sasuke was expecting. The moment Dark Fu took off, he leaped at her from his standing point, ready to impale her with another Chidori.

"Sorry beautiful, but no pretty girl escapes the Uchiha sex god," Sasuke cooed, winking at her again.

Dark Fu managed to spin around herself and successfully avoid the electrical attack aimed at her gut. But by doing so, she left her wings exposed, which took the brunt of Sasuke's jutsu, and were instantly shattered. As a result, Dark Fu pummeled to the ground.

"My wings! No!" she cried, before crashing down with a thud. She rubbed the spot where her wings used to be. "Ow... this is going to hurt tomorrow..."

"It ain't going to hurt more than THIS, I can assure you as much!" Fu shouted from above.

Dark Fu looked up, and saw Fu diving at her, the giant oak log between her hands, like a meteor made of wood. Given her speed, dodging was impossible. "Oh shi-"

The giant log slammed into Dark Fu, resulting in an explosion of earth and dirt, opening up a massive crater, and most importantly, ending Dark Fu's existence.

Meanwhile, Dark Naruto was trying to evade Hinata's aggressive assault. He tried to put some distance and counterattack, but the angry Hyuga wouldn't let him any time to breathe. She was relentless in her attack, each blow carrying loads of anger.

"What the hell, is this Hinata's dark side or what? How is she so goddamn brutal?" Dark Naruto said, as he tried to evade her blows.

"Heh, I doubt the real Hinata is that vicious," Naruto chuckled, mostly to himself.

"Minions, to me!" Dark Naruto called.

However, no help came. Half of his masked creatures have already been destroyed, and the remaining few were busy fighting against the alternate Konoha 15. Dark Naruto noticed this, much to his desparations.

"Minions, come to me this instant!" he yelled.

"Shut up already!" a new female voice said.

Between dodging Hinata and trying to locate his minions, Dark Naruto didn't notice Sakura getting closer. When he turned around, he saw the pinkette's fist a few centimeters from his face, before it impacted, sending the black haired jinchuriki flying, and crashed against a tree.

"Urk," the evil doppelganger said, coughing some blood, while trying to stand up. "That was... uh?"

"Ice Release: Iceberg of Manliness!"

Just as he was standing up, ice and frost started to quickly gather around the evil jinchuriki, encasing him inside a block of ice, leaving only his head exposed.

"What the hell!?" Dark Naruto yelled.

"You have been trapped inside my Iceberg of Manliness! Do you know why I call it that? Because you need to be manlier than I am to break out of it!" Haku boasted, waving his arms in a taunting fashion. "And since you can't break it, that means I'm manlier than you are! How does that feel, huh? Huh? HUH?"

But Dark Naruto had no time to address Haku's boasts, as he heard an horrible, whirring noise. Looking in the direction of the noise, Dark Naruto saw his good counterpart, in Sage Mode, flanked by a couple of clones and a Rasenshuriken above his head.

"Good job guys, I'll deal the finishing blow!" Naruto told the others.

"No, no, NO! This can't be happening! You can't beat me! YOU CAN'T!" Naruto's evil counterpart yelled.

"You're right. I can't beat you. Not alone, at the very least," Naruto admitted. "But guess what? I don't need to beat you alone. I don't need to beat any of my enemies alone. I used to think that I had to protect everyone, all by myself. And that it was my fault if things went wrong and people I cared for died. But guess what? I can let others protect me as well. As long as I have them, I won't have to face my darkness alone."

"So that's it, huh? You're going to let others do the heavy lifting. You're an useless brat that can never succeed on his own, so he needs to go crying to others for help! You can't win unless somebody else helps you!" Dark Naruto screeched, both out of anger, but also in an attempt to escape his predicament.

"That's the beauty of it. Alone, we are weak, but together, we're strong," Naruto replied. "Power might give you strength to do things on your own, but love allows you to join your strength with those of others, and form part of something greater than you are. Not that I expect you to understand it. Now die already! Wind Release: Rasenshuriken!"

The chakra shuriken flew at the trapped evil clone, resulting in an explosion of razor sharp wind gusts that destroyed him almost instantly. When the dome was finally dispelled, there was nothing left but a crater. Dark Naruto was no more.

"Naruto!" Fu shouted, as she landed besides him. "Hey, you did it! You also destroyed your evil side!"

"So, does that mean that you also won?" Naruto asked. Fu nodded vigorously. "Awesome!"

"So, what do we do now?" Fu asked. "Should we-"

There was a bright flash of white light that blinded the two jinchuriki, and made them feel dizzy. When the light banished, they were back in front of the Falls of Truth. Upon realizing that they had passed the test, the two jinchuriki got up on their feet, cheered hugged each other. Somethign Naruto regretted since Fu was hugging way too hard.

They stopped hugging upon noticing that they weren't alone. Killer B was watching them from the edge of the lake, arms crossed, and a smile of satisfaction on his face.

"Congratulations, you two, I knew there was some spunk in you," Killer B told them. "To fight the beasts you're now ready, for your soul and mind are steady. Though, I feel I need to ask, are you ready for the coming task?"

"Yeah!" Naruto cheered. "Bring it on, Octo-pops!"

"Me too! I feel like I can do anything!" Fu agreed.

Killer B merely nodded. Though, even if they passed the first test, he couldn't help but wonder if these kids had what it takes to tame a Tailed Beast. Especially one as vicious as the Nine Tails. He'd find the answer soon.

"In that case... follow me."

Author's Note: Okay, why was the bottom's author's note cut? Well, guess that I have to write it again.

So, I hope you guys enjoyed my version of RtN, and hopefully, liked it better than the original. I already said that I hated how criminally underutilized the alt!Konoha 11 were, especially lacking a cool fight scene. Nothing against the heroic Akatsuki of that version, but I think the alt!Konoha11 deserved it better. And as a nod to canon, Sasuke has the Chidori here.

As for Naruto and Fu's dark counterparts being beaten: I know that in the original, Naruto wasn't supposed to physically beat him, but accept his inner darkness as part of him. However, if I went to do something different, the conclusion had to be different as well. So here, they defeated their inner darkness by learning that they didn't have to do it alone, but let others help them if they find problems too big for them alone.

Next chapter, the moment you've been waiting for: Naruto will finally face the Nine Tails!

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

So, what were your thoughts on my version of Road to Ninja?
Are you excited to see Naruto finally taking on the Nine Tails?
Tell me your thoughts in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Overcoming Hatred

Author's Note: Before the idea crosses your mind, no, this isn't an April's Fools Day prank, but a genuine chapter.

And now, the moment all of you have been waiting for so long, Naruto finally faces the Nine Tails! I tried to make it a little different from canon, hope you enjoy it:

Chapter 99:

Overcoming Hatred

or

What does the Fox say?

Before Killer B would bring Naruto and Fu towards the place where they would tame their Tailed Beasts, Naruto decided to bring Tenzo and the Third Hokage, given that they had the means to stop them if they lost control of their Tailed Beasts in the process and the worst came to happen (Wood Release and Tailed Beast Chakra Suppressing seals, respectively). The rest of their escort team would watch the entrance just to be sure.

Said entrance happened to be behind the waterfall. When they crossed the water curtain, the Konoha ninjas and one Taki kunoichi all gasped upon seeing what was behind the water. Instead of a small cave leading to some kind of sealed room, there was a massive chamber, its roof being dozens of meters high. It was so big, it could probably house a small village. There was a large temple with five tall towers at the end of the gigantic chamber, and a painting of the Eight Tails and the Two Tails firing a Tailed Beast Ball against each other. There were two rows of beheaded statues that formed a hallway towards the temple's entrance.

"Here we are, the Tailed Beast Temple, a very special place, it will be here where the Tailed Beasts you two will face," Killer B started to rap.

"What's so special about this place? Can't Naruto-kun and Fu-san attempt to control their Tailed Beasts anywhere else?" the Third Hokage asked.

"The temple is special, yes, it's a security measure, if the jinchuriki falls," Killer B explained. "If the beasts attempt to escape they will be held inside these walls."

"Of course. With a place like this, a jinchuriki can train without endangering other lives and let the Tailed Beast out," Tenzo agreed. "If only we had a place like this in Konoha."

"Maybe with some time, and enough fuinjutsu, dad and I can cook up something," Naruto offered. "Though sadly it will have to wait until the war is over."

"We're here," Killer B announced. They reached to the entrance of the temple, a very large gate with an sculpture of the Two Tails' head with its jaws opened. The Kumo jinchuriki introduced his arm into the mouth, and activated a hidden switch inside. The gates slowly slid open.

"Whoa..." Naruto said, looking at the room.

"What is this place?" Fu asked.

Because the room that had been opened didn't look like a room at all. It was more like... like a vast, endless space that spread in every direction. There was no floor or walls just... a sky of multiple colors.

"Come on, no time to waste, get into the chamber, make haste," Killer B urged them as he entered the room. Apparently, there was a solid floor, even if it couldn't be seen. The three Konoha ninjas and one Taki kunoichi followed the rapper inside. "It's time to begin. Who's going to be the first to go in?"

Naruto looked at Fu, and smiled at her weakly. "Ladies first?"

"Actually..." Fu began, rubbing her arm, uneasy. "I feel a little nervous. Would you mind going first? I'd be more at ease after seeing you doing it."

"I'm scared as hell too," Naruto admitted. "But guess we're not going anywhere unless one of us take the first step. Okay, I'll do it."

A sigh of relief escaped Fu. Killer B nodded in approval. He made a hand seal, and the gate closed with a loud boom, leaving all of them trapped inside the room.

"Now there's no danger to the outside world if the Nine Tails breaks free. Of course we would die, but it's the better option, don't you agree?" Killer B rapped, as he sat down, action which was mimicked by Naruto. The two of them bumped fists, and closed their eyes. "Okay, this is the plan, let's face the Nine Tails, I'll guide you as best as I can."

"Understood," Naruto said with a nod.

...

Nine Tails Seal

When Naruto opened his eyes, he was no longer inside the Tailed Beast Temple, but in front of the massive gates that held the giant fox. It seemed the beast hadn't noticed Naruto's presence yet.

" So, you're already in, that's swell," Naruto heard Killer B's voice rap. "The first step is to remove the seal. But be careful, the fox won't be ain't quell."

"Got it," Naruto replied with a nod. "Though before I do, let's do some preparations."

The blond sat cross legged, and closed his eyes. Despite the fact that he was inside a mental world, Naruto could still feel nature energy around him. He gathered as much as he could, before deciding it was enough. He also left a clone back continuing gathering nature energy, just in case. Then, he walked towards the gate, and when he reached it, the water around his feet formed a spiraling tower that pushed him upwards, so he could reach the paper seal holding the door easily.

" Hm? Who's there?" the Nine Tails grumbled, as Naruto heard his body shift. He sounded like if he just woke up from a nap.

"Who's there? Really?" Naruto asked, a bit incredulous. "Does somebody besides me pays you any visit without my knowledge, furball?"

" You?" the fox asked, sounding surprised. "But you feel... different. Wait... what happened to your true self?"

"You mean the guy with the pitch black hair and glowing red eyes? That's more the edgy me, to be honest," Naruto casually answered, as he removed the seal protecting the gate, revealing its intricate lock. "Though to answer your question, I gave him quite the ass beating. You should have seen it."

" The Nine Tails can't feel your darkness, that's great, but don't get confident, he has more weapons than your hate," Killer B said.

Naruto then removed both his jacked and mesh shirt, tossing them away. The Double Tetragram Seal appeared on his gut, while the key to the seal appeared on his hand. Naruto placed the key on the seal, and turned it like it was a doorknob.

" What are you doing?" the Nine Tails asked, irritated.

The lock on the cage started to undo itself, first slowly, but progressively faster, ending with a final loud "click". The moment

Naruto heard that, the Nine Tails slammed the gates open, hurling the blond backwards, landing on the wet floor on his back.

"Ouch..."

" I don't know what you're pretending to do," the Nine Tails growled, as he exited his cell. "But this is the last mistake you'll ever make in your short and inane life."

" Naruto, get up, no time to sleep, if you fail now, you'll make all of us weep!" Killer B urged.

Naruto jumped back on his feet, just to see the behemoth of a fox angrily charging at him. However, before he could get any closer, multiple maroon colored tentacles broke the ground below him, and wrapped themselves around the giant fox, leaving him completely immobilized.

" Don't worry, Naruto, I can give you a hand, I'll make sure no attack of the Nine Tails ever lands!" Killer B rapped.

" Gyuki... you goddamned traitor... !" the Nine Tails growled, as he struggled against the tentacles.

" Now, Naruto, pull his chakra into your body, but be quick, these tentacles are a bit shoddy, and the Nine Tails may escape my grip, and that won't be very hip!" Killer B advised. "Though when your chakras are in contact, the Nine Tails will pull yours too! He will use his hatred to corrupt you, so make sure you break through!"

Naruto walked towards the downed Nine Tails, and grabbed the tip of one of his tails. He could feel the chakra of the beast coursing through the furry flesh. Naruto coayed his hands in chakra, and pulled. This didn't go unnoticed by the struggling fox, who glared at his jailed with eyes full of hate.

" Oh, so that's your plan! You want to take my chakra for you, huh? Well, IT'S NOT HAPPENING!" the Kyubi roared.

Suddenly, the Nine Tails' body released a powerful blast of chakra, one that destroyed Killer B's tentacles, and once again violently hurled Naruto backwards.

...

Real World

Naruto wasn't the only one pushed backwards, as the same thing happened to Killer B in the outside world.

"B!" Fu called, as she went to check on her fellow jinchuriki. "Are you okay? What happened?"

"The Nine Tails is much stronger than I thought. I can no longer help Naruto, he isn't in a tight spot," Killer be told the others.

Four pair of eyes turned at the immobile blonde, hoping that he would be able to defeat the Nine Tails without any help. And then, much to their shock, Naruto burst into flames.

...

Nine Tails Seal

" No playing around! I'm going to make sure there's not enough to bury left of your body!" the Nine Tails boasted, as he opened his jaws, and started to gather chakra. Blue and Red energy particles started to gather, forming a dark purple sphere that was quickly growing. "Tailed Beast Wave!"

The Nine Tails swallowed the ball, before opening its jaws again, releasing a powerful wave of chakra at the hapless blond. It would have been his end if it wasn't for a barrier of purple flames that formed between the human and the Tailed Beast, succesfully dispersing the attack into multiple directions.

" WHAT!?" the Nine Tails roared in indignation.

"Wait a minute... these flames... this chakra! It can't be!" Naruto said in realization, full of joy.

The purple flames formed a tornado of fire that quickly began to shrink and compress, until it took an humanoid shape, surrounded by a cloak of purple flames. It was somebody Naruto knew too well.

"Hello, Naruto-kun. I hope my intervention was timely."

"Hinata-hime!" Naruto said, pulling his girlfriend into a hug. "Oh boy, I'm so happy to see you! What are you doing here? How are you here, by the way?"

"Actually, I'm not the real Hinata, but a piece of her chakra she sealed into you before you departed Konoha," Hinata explained.

"When did she...?" Naruto tried to remember, until the realization hit him. "The kiss! That's why she jolted me!"

"Yes. I knew I had to help you tame the Nine Tails somehow. This was the only thing I could think of," Hinata told him.

"Heh, don't worry, hime. Now that you're here, that furry asshole has no chances to win!" Naruto proudly declared.

"Indeed," Hinata smiled, and nodded. "What is the plan, Naruto-kun?"

"You cover me from above. I'll give this overgrown furball a beating he won't forget," Naruto said, grinning confidently.

"You got it!" Hinata agreed, as she elevated above Naruto.

The Nine Tails angrily eyed the two youths, and snarled. "No matter how much help you get, you won't make my power yours! I won't be a slave to the humans anymore!"

High into the air, Hinata pulled her collapsible chakra bow. Pulling the chakra string, she generated an arrow made of pure electricity.

Though than aiming at the fox, she aimed at a spot above him.

"Lightning Release: Thunder Arrow Volley!"

Hinata released the arrow, which flew above the Nine Tails in an arc. However, when it was above his head, it exploded into a multitude of smaller lightning arrows that rained upon the giant fox like the lightning storm. He wrapped his tails around him like a dome for protection.

"Naruto-kun, now!" Hinata shouted.

The Nine Tails heard a loud whirring sound, and saw that Naruto had just thrown a Rasenshuriken at him. Still, the beast proved to be faster than he appeared, as he moved his tails just in time to intercept the chakra shuriken. There was a massive explosion of chakra and wind that pushed the fox backwards and all of his tails in different directions. However, he did manage to avoid the worst part of the explosion.

" Heh, not bad, brat, but you can't hope to-"

The Nine Tails was interrupted by another whirring sound, and from the dome of chakra and wind, a second Rasenshuriken emerged.

" Accursed brat! He used the first Rasenshuriken to leave me wide open and to hide the second one!" the Nine Tails thought in realization, though too late.

The attack connected, resulting in a second explosive sphere of chakra and razor-blade wings. The giant fox roared in pain as the force of the blast tossed him against the soaked floor on his back.

"Hinata-hime, use your black ball thingies to immobilize him!" Naruto told his girlfriend.

"Right! Truth Seeking Balls!" After making the necessary hand seals, Hinata generated four Truth Seeking Balls. With two arm motions, she threw the orbs at each of the Nine Tails' limbs. They took the shape of horseshoes before they embedded themselves into the ground, pinning his arms and legs down.

" You think you can keep me contained!?" The Nine Tails roared, as he began to push the Truth Seeking Orbs. "Just because you have a Tenseigan you think that makes you Hamura? You're barely a shadow compared to him!"

"Hinata-hime was chosen by Hamura to carry his legacy," Naruto said, as he made several Shadow Clones, which positioned themselves around the fox in a circle. "And she isn't the only one who's going to contain you! Sealing Art: Cursed Binding Circle!"

The Naruto clones stabbed a kunai with a sealing tag on them into the ground. The seals were activated immediately, generating more chains of seals that formed multiple concentric circles. Once said circles were complete, the Nine Tails felt his body go completely rigid.

" I... can't move..." the fox grunted. Between the binding seals and the Truth Seeking Balls, he couldn't barely speak.

"Now that the Nine Tails has been subdued, try to take his chakra, Naruto-kun!" Hinata told him.

"You don't have to tell me twice," the real Naruto said, as he walked towards the central tail, and grabbed its tip. "Alright, here we go!"

Naruto started to pull the Nine Tails' chakra out, which took the shape of a blue energy current, and pushed it into himself.

" You... you bastard..." the Nine Tails grumbled. Anger started to well up inside him as he felt Naruto slowly draining his chakra.

"You... you humans are... all the same..."

Fueled by his rage, the fox started to fight both Naruto and Hinata's bindings, and began to recover some mobility, even if it wasn't much.

Still, with some time, he could break free. The Tenseigan wielder noticed this.

"Naruto-kun, hurry! He might break free any moment!" Hinata urged him.

"I'm... I'm trying!" Naruto replied, struggling to pull and absorb the chakra.

"Alright, I'll see if I can buy you some more ti- eh?" Hinata interrupted herself when she noticed something. The chakra current that was being absorbed into Naruto, was starting to change from blue to very dark red. Hinata had a very bad feeling about it.

" You... you think you can take my power... AND MAKE IT YOUR OWN!?" The Nine Tails roared with such power, Hinata was forced to cover her ears. The chakra current changed color completely, and worse, it started to spread into Naruto. The clones keeping the binding circle active dispelled, allowing the Kyubi more freedom. "You have no idea who you're fighting against! What I am, and what my power represents! But you'll learn it soon! Now, TASTE MY ANGER! TASTE MY HATRED, AND BE CONSUMED BY IT!"

The dark red chakra started to spread around Naruto's body, engulfing it completely. First, Naruto was hit by a wave of pain unlike any other he felt before. He fell to his knees, and tried to cut the connection between him and the beast, but the Nine Tails wouldn't allow any of that.

"AAAAAA AAAAAAAAAAHHHHHHH!" Naruto screamed, as he clutched his body.

"Naruto-kun!" Hinata said, as she quickly flew at her boyfriend's side, and placed a hand on her shoulder. "Naruto-kun, are you- OW!"

Touching Naruto felt like touching a burning iron. If that was how it felt on the outside, she couldn't imagine what the blond was feeling on the inside. Panicked, Hinata started to look around, trying to find a way to help her beloved. It didn't take her long to see that the root of the problem was the chakra linking human and beast.

"Don't worry, you'll be fine in an instant," Hinata said, as she started to make hand seals. "Truth-seeking-"

" LIKE HELL YOU WILL!" The Nine Tails roared before smacking Hinata with one of his tails. The Hyuga Clan Head was so focused on Naruto and his suffering, that she didn't notice the fox until it was too late, and the poor girl was hurled away.

"AAAAAaaaahhhh... !" she screamed, before falling into the nearby water with a splash.

Such a violent act against Hinata would enrage Naruto beyond reason. But the jinchuriki was in so much pain, he didn't even notice what was happening around him. The pain was too great. Being tightly chained to a giant rock, with spikes piercing your limbs and chest... it was too much.

Then it came the anger. Rage so pure and undiluted, it felt unreal. Not even when Pain almost killed Hinata and Haku, nor when Akatsuki abducted several jinchuriki under his nose did Naruto feel such fury. Anger at all the people responsible for this. That despicable Madara Uchiha. The loathsome First Hokage and his equally worthless wife, Mito. Kushina Uzumaki. And lastly, Kushina's spawn, and current jailer, Naruto Uzumaki.

"Wait, there's... something wrong..." Naruto said, in a moment of clarity. He quickly realized that the pain and anger he was feeling wasn't his, but the Nine Tails'. Not that this helped him in any way, as he was soon overwhelmed by the inhumane pain and anger, while desperately clinging to his last bits of sanity.

" For sixteen years I've been languishing inside your body. And now... you will be the one inside me, Naruto! Goodbye!" The Kyubi shouted, as he proceeded to absorb Naruto once and for all.

"H-help..." Naruto said, his voice being a whisper, before the fox consumed him.

...

Back in the real world, people were worried. When Naruto burst into purple flames, Fu instantly recognized them as Hinata's Tenseigan Chakra Cloak -not to mention that thanks to her connection to Naruto, she could sense that chakra as if it was hers-, meaning that Hinata must have transferred some of her chakra to Naruto. However, another kind of chakra, this time dark red, put the purple flames out as it started to slowly spread around Naruto.

"This is bad, the beast is winning! The Nine Tails' chakra grows while Naruto's is thinning!" a worried Killer B panicked.

Fu had to admit that Killer B's dedication to rapping was worth respecting, given not even such a dire situation forced him to drop it.

"What do we do?" Fu asked, looking at Tenzo and the Third Hokage.

"Hokage-sama, I think we should put an end to this," Tenzo told the old man. "Naruto can always try later."

"Agreed," the Third Hokage said with a nod, as he pulled out a few sealing tags Jiraiya had given him. "Now, Tenzo, use your-"

"Wait a second!" Fu called, as through her connection to Naruto, she started to feel something. "Look!"

...

Back inside the seal, the pain and the anger finally overwhelmed the blond, and in his wish to be released from such torture, allowed the Nine Tails to win, and let the beast absorb his chakra.

SNAP!

And lastly, the pain and the hatred vanished, being replaced by a warm, comforting feeling. Was he finally dead? No, he wasn't dead, he could still feel his body, his feet standing on that soaked floor.

" The connection broke!" the Nine Tails said in alarm. He could no longer feel his connection to Naruto. It was as if something was filtering his chakra from corrupting the blond any further. "My hatred was pushed back! What... what is this feeling?"

"Tell me, Nine Tails," a new male voice Naruto never heard before began. "Have you ever loved somebody so much, that you would give your life for their happiness and well being? Because this is what you're feeling right now. Two parents' love for the son they barely got to meet."

" YOU!" the Nine Tails roared.

"Yeah," the man said, as he turned at the beast. "Me."

Slowly, Naruto's eyesight returned, and he realized he was still inside the Nine Tails' seal. But there was another person he hasn't seen before. A blond man wearing a white cloak adorned with flames. Said man had a hand on the chakra link that was binding the Nine Tails to Naruto, and with a quick hand motion, snapped it in two.

Naruto then felt a comforting hand placed on his shoulder. "Naruto, are you okay?" a female voice asked. Yet that voice didn't belong to Hinata. Naruto realized there was a red haired woman standing besides him, her lips curved into a welcoming smile. As his mind started to recover, he put two and two together. "Wait... you two... you guys are..."

"The Fourth Hokage?" Naruto heard Hinata's voice. He turned around, and saw that the Hyuga was slowly floating back to him.

"What... what are you guys doing here?" Naruto asked.

The Fourth Hokage merely smiled at him. "Don't worry. I know you must be confused, and have plenty of questions. There will be time for that."

"Let us help you put that oversized furball in his place. You don't have to do this alone, ya know!" the woman added.

" Minato... Kushina..." the Nine Tails growled, as he glared at the two newcomers. "First the Hyuga girl, and now you two... I don't know why or how are you here, but this changes nothing! No amount of humans will stop me from claiming my freedom!"

"We'll see about that," Minato confidently replied. His eyes moved towards Hinata. "Your name is Hinata, right?"

"Y-Yes, Hokage-sama," the shocked Hyuga replied. Talking with a past Hokage felt unreal. Not even talking with Hamura Otsutsuki felt so overwhelming.

"We saw that the Nine Tails got you good before. You think you can continue fighting?" Minato asked.

"Of course!" Hinata said, trying to put on a brave face. "I promised Naruto-kun I'll help him no matter what, and I won't go back on my word!"

"Good," Minato said with a nod. "Naruto and I will fight the fox head on. Kushina will bind it with her chakra chains. You will provide some support from above."

"Understood," Hinata replied, as she started to gain attitude. "You can count on me, Naruto-kun, Hokage-sama... eh, your name was Kushina?"

Kushina nodded. "Don't worry about introductions now. We can do that later. It's time to fight, ya know!"

Back on his feet, or better said, paws, the Nine Tails stomped towards the four humans.

" I'm so going to enjoy killing you a second time, Minato, Kushina," the Nine Tails threatened, as he gritted his fangs.
"Though I don't know if I should kill you first so your son can see you die this time, or if I should kill the brat first in front of your eyes!"

"We'll see about that!" Kushina said, as a chain shot from her body. However, it wasn't aimed at the beast, but at Hinata hovering above them. "Hinata, catch! Hold it tightly!"

The Hyuga Clan head caught the chain, and wrapped it around her wrist for good measure.

"What do you want me to do, Kushina-san?" Hinata asked.

"When I tell you, launch me at the Nine Tails with all your strength, ya know?" Kushina asked. Hinata merely nodded. "For the time being, let the boys go first!"

"You heard your mother, Naruto, let's go!" Minato said, as he rushed forward. "Prepare a Rasenshuriken!"

"You got it!" Naruto replied, while summoning a

Minato pulled out multiple tri-pronged kunai with seals on their handle, and tossed them all around the place.

"Let's see if you can keep up with me!" Minato said, as he charged towards the Nine Tails, Rasengan in hand.

" You stupid, insignificant human! You weren't able to beat me back then! What are you going to do? Seal me again?" The Nine Tails said in a mocking tone, as he brought down his paw down.

Minato, however, quickly teleported to a nearby kunai. The Kyubi attempted to crush him with his other arm, but Minato was faster.

Eventually, the fox was forced to play a very frustrating game of whack-a-mole with the teleporting Minato.

" Stay still, dammit!" The Nine Tails roared.

Upon seeing that Naruto was ready, Minato tossed one of his special kunai at the Nine Tails' face, and in less than a second, he teleported back to Naruto, touched him, and teleported again to the kunai flying towards the Nine Tails' face.

"Naruto, now!" Minato shouted.

"Wind Release: Rasenshuriken!"

The younger blond tossed the shuriken of wind chakra at the giant fox. However, the Nine Tails was already expecting this, and opened his jaws.

"You won't be able to charge a Tailed Beast Ball fast enough!"
Naruto claimed.

But the Nine Tails had more weapons than the Tailed Beast Ball. His throat glowed with an orange light, and a torrent of flames poured from his jaws, intercepting the Rasenshuriken. Naruto's jutsu detonated prematurely, exploding in a dome of razor sharp winds, and upon absorbing the fox's fire attack, a massive ball of fire that quickly expanded.

"Whoops!" Minato said, before teleporting both himself and Naruto to the farthest tri-pronged kunai in order to escape the expanding inferno.

" You think you're so smart, don't you, Minato?" The Nine Tails growled, still behind the flames. "But you have no idea what you're fighting against-"

"Hinata, now!" Kushina shouted.

Suddenly, the expanding ball of flames split in two -mostly the result of Hinata's kinetic ability- and launched Kushina against the giant fox.

"Adamantine Wrecking Ball!"

Kushina shot multiple chakra chains from her body that wrapped around herself, forming multiple layers, until they resembled a metal ball, at the same time Hinata let go of the chain she was holding. The Nine Tails was unable to dodge, and the wrecking ball hit him with such force, it knocked the fox on his back.

" Urk... you... you cursed-"

The Nine Tails was interrupted when Minato and Naruto suddenly appeared besides Kushina, who was quickly pulled away by Hinata's kinetic power. The two blonds were holding a truly massive sphere of chakra.

"Parent and Child Rasengan!"

Minato and Naruto slammed the gigantic sphere of destruction onto the fox' belly. The nine tailed beats roared in agony, still reeling from the pain in his jaws caused by Kushina.

"Adamantine Sealing Chains!"

"Truth Seeking Balls!"

Once again, multiple chains shot from Kushina's body, and wrapped against the Nine Tails' body, arms, legs and tails.. Meanwhile, Hinata summoned four Truth Seeking Balls, changed their shape into horseshoes, and used them to pin the fox's arms and legs to the ground like she did before.

"Naruto, now!" Kushina called.

Naruto created an army of clones, who split into nine groups, each group grabbing one of the Nine Tails' chakra, who futilely tried to break from Kushina and Hinata's bindings. The army of clones started to pull, and with their combined strength, a gigantic mass of orange chakra was ripped away from the Nine Tails. Naruto quickly absorbed that chakra into his body, resulting in a burst of golden light.

"Naruto-kun, you just... wow!" Hinata said in awe.

The absorbed Tailed Beast chakra manifested as a golden chakra cloak that covered Naruto completely. It was similar to Hinata's Tenseigan Chakra Cloak, but while Hinata's made her look like she was surrounded by flames, in Naruto's case it was as if he was made of them. The Double Tetragram Seal was visible on his stomach.

"You did it!" Minato cheered.

"Of course he did! He's our son, ya know!" Kushina added, just as excited.

" Naruto..." the Nine Tails growled, drawing the four humans' attention to him. The Nine Tails now looked extremely emaciated, like an animal who had been starved for months. Even if he struggled to do so, he managed to get back to his feet. "You... you think you can take my power like that!?"

"Amazing... after all the chakra I took from him, he still has enough strength to continue," Naruto said in awe. "Tailed Beasts are truly amazing."

" YOU WILL DIE THE SAME WAY YOUR PARENTS DID!" The Nine Tails roared, as he charged towards the group of four.

While the other three tensed up and prepared to continue the fight, Naruto merely shook his head. He placed his hand on the seal on his stomach, and just like he did before, turned it as if it was a doorknob. Suddenly, torii started to fall from the sky, pinning the fox's tails to the ground, then his body, and finally his neck, immobilizing it completely. The Nine Tails struggled to break free, but it was useless. Finally, a pair of gates appeared and closed with a loud clang, forming a new jail for the Tailed Beast.

"I'm, sorry, Nine Tails," Naruto said, sounding regretful. "I promise you that this isn't the end."

"It's okay, son," Minato said, placing a comforting hand on Naruto's shoulder. "You did a good job."

"I'm sure you'll have lots of questions to ask us," Kushina added. She then looked at the Nine Tails, still trashing and cursing loudly. "But let's move this conversation somewhere a bit nicer, shall we?"

Suddenly, they were no longer inside the Nine Tails' seal, but in some sort of shapeless space of bright swirling colors and shooting stars, in a way similar to the room where the real Naruto was.

"Yes, this is much better," Minato said with a nod, before facing Naruto. "Hello, Naruto. It's been a while since the last time we saw you."

"You surely grew a lot!" Kushina added. "You know who we are, right?"

"Yes," Naruto hesitantly replied. "My... mother and father. But, how can you be here? I thought you were..." Naruto's eyes drifted towards Hinata, and a realization dawned upon him. "Wait, you're a fragment of their chakra, right? I've been carrying a piece of your chakra this whole time!"

"Exactly," Kushina confirmed. "Before our tragic demise, Minato sealed the last remnants of our chakra inside you. He knew you'd need help when the time to tame the Nine Tails came."

"Plus, it would give us the chance of seeing you all grown up, Naruto," Minato said.

"Though, it seems we aren't the only foreign chakra you've been carrying," Kushina said, as she glanced at Hinata, and smiled at her. "Who are you, girl? You said your name is Hinata, right? You have the Hyuga looks, but those eyes aren't the Byakugan."

"Your presence was a surprise, but not an unwelcome one," Minato added. "It seems that you and Naruto are pretty close."

"We are," Hinata replied. "And yes, I'm a Hyuga. These eyes are called Tenseigan, and they're an evolution of the Byakugan. My name is Hinata Hyuga, current Clan Head of the Hyuga Clan. Naruto-kun and I are in a relationship."

"Clan Head?" Kushina asked, a bit incredulous. "But you're so young... hey, wait a moment, you are Hikari-chan's daughter, are you?" Kushina asked. Hinata nodded. "Heh, no wonder you looked so familiar!"

"Look at that. Our son and Hikari's daughter ending up together. Who would have guessed it," Minato said, chuckling.

"I was expecting for you to hook up with Mikoto-chan's baby, but he turned out to be a boy," Kushina said, laughing a bit. "Anyway, how are the two of them doing?"

"Uh, mom..." Naruto began. "Mikoto Uchiha is dead. And so is almost all of the Uchihas."

Both Minato and Kushina were frozen in shock.

"What? No!" Kushina cried in horror.

"Just... what happened after we died?" Minato asked.

"It's a pretty long story. So I better start from the beginning..." Naruto said.

And thus, Naruto began narrating as well as he remembered the events after his birth. How Jiraiya and Tsunade returned to take care of him. Their marriage, and the birth of Kaida and Hagane -Naruto used two transformed clones to show Minato and Kushina how they looked, Kushina couldn't stop gushing for whole five minutes.

The gushing stopped when Naruto reached the part of the Uchiha Insurrection, which ended with most of the Uchiha Clan dead, as well as many Konoha ninjas, among them Hinata's father, Hiashi Hyuga.

"To think Mikoto-chan would be willing to go along with such insanity..." Kushina began.

"I can't believe that Fugaku would do that either," Minato added. "I knew the man. He was serious and practical, and above all else, always looked for the best for his clan. To send his clan into such a suicidal folly..."

Naruto continued his story. Jiraiya's ascension to Hokage after Hiruzen couldn't continue anymore. How Naruto graduated the Academy and was assigned to a team with Hinata, and Haku as his teammates and Kurernai Yuhi as his sensei. The mission to the Land of the Rice Fields, now the Land of Sound. The Chunin Exams, Orochimaru's invasion, and Kaida and Hagane's kidnapping attempt. And finally, the revelation that the masked Akatsuki member, who claimed to be responsible of the Nine Tails attack and the Uchiha Insurrection, was no other than Obito Uchiha.

Both Minato and Kushina felt like they've been hit in the gut by a sledgehammer.

"Obito? No... no! It can't be him! Even if he somehow survived the Battle of Kanabi Bridge, there's no way that he could have committed such atrocities!" Minato said, shaking his head, clearly disbelieving what he was hearing.

"First Mikoto-chan and now Obito! Did the world turn crazy!?" Kushina screamed.

"Hokage-sama, Kushina-san," Hinata spoke, drawing their attention. "I know it must be hard to believe, but that man is indeed Obito Uchiha. Kakashi-sensei and Rin-san confirmed his identity multiple times."

"Wait a minute... Rin?" Minato asked, his confusion growing. "Is she alive too?"

"Well... no, but actually yes," Naruto replied. "Rin died the same way you remember, but Obito brought her back to life. Somehow. And probably with lots of the First Hokage's cells."

"Good to hear that something nice came out from so many catastrophes, ya know," Kushina said, letting out a heavy sigh. "Her death broke my heart."

"Still... if I knew that the man who attacked us the day of your birth was Obito..." Minato began, clenching his fist in anger. "Maybe I would have been able to stop him in time. I just... I just can't imagine what moved Obito to attack us so coldly. He was like family to us!"

"Nobody knows what happened to Obito after his disappearance during the Third Ninja War," Hinata said. "Who knows who he could have met."

"Speaking of which... what happened that day?" Naruto asked. "I tried to ask Old Man Hokage and all the people who were present the day of the attack, but they knew very little."

Minato and Kushina proceeded to tell the couple about how the happiest day in their lives turned out to be one of Konoha's biggest tragedies. How Obito infiltrated the secret location where Kushina was giving birth, using newborn Naruto as a distraction so he could get away with Kushina. Then, Kushina told them how Obito extracted the Nine Tails from her body, bound him to his will through his Mangekyo Sharingan, and teleported him to Konoha, where he summoned him in order to cause mass destruction.

Minato moved Naruto and Kushina to one of his several safe houses in the outskirts of Konoha while he went to deal with the Nine Tails. However, he was unable to do it, given that Obito forced him away from Konoha and into a battle. Minato managed to win, but while he was busy, the fox continued his rampage, killing dozens of people. Eventually, Minato teleported the beast to Naruto and Kushina's location, both to move the fox out of the village, and to seal it again.

Kushina wanted to seal the Nine Tails within herself again, even if she was about to die. Minato, however, decided that Konoha needed the Fox's power, and that Naruto should be the one to inherit it. Since the whole Nine Tails would be too much for a baby, he sealed half of his chakra with the Reaper Death Seal, while sealing the other half inside Naruto. The Nine Tails attempted to kill Naruto before he could be sealed again, but his parents blocked the attack with their own bodies, and with his last breath, Minato sealed the Nine Tails inside Naruto, alongside what remained of their chakra.

There was a moment of silence, as Naruto and Hinata processed the story they just heard.

"What a tale," Naruto finally said. "I'm sure mom and dad- uh, Tsunade and Jiraiya will want to know what happened. Jiraiya in particular might find some closure."

"You can call them 'mom' and 'dad', Naruto," Kushina said, smiling reassuringly. "They were the ones who raised you, after all."

"Yeah. That's why we appointed Jiraiya-sensei as your godfather. Though Tsunade-sama wanting to take care of you was quite a surprise," Minato said, chuckling a little.

"And they did a really great job, ya know!" Kushina said. "I mean, look at you! You're a Jonin at sixteen, who just tamed the most powerful Tailed Beast in existence, and most importantly, you have a cute girlfriend!"

Both Naruto and Hinata blushed, and averted their gazes.

"Uh, drop it, mom," Naruto whined. "You're making Hinata feel embarrassed."

"Just Hinata?" Kushina said, raising an eyebrow in a taunting manner.

"Naruto, I need to ask you something," Minato said. "I sealed the Nine Tails into you because I knew that his power would be needed when the masked man, Obito, returned. The fact that you were trying to control his power now means that that time has come already. Am I wrong?"

"Unfortunately not," Naruto said. "Obito recruited multiple S-Class criminals and formed a terrorist group named Akatsuki, with the goal of capturing all nine Tailed Beasts. We managed to kill or capture several of them, but we couldn't stop them from claiming no less than six Tailed Beasts."

"On top of the captured Tailed Beasts and his Akatsuki allies, Obito has revealed to have an army of artificial humans called 'Zetsu' at his disposal, and declared war on the entire Elemental Nations unless he is in possession of the remaining three."

"Those are... terrible news," Minato said. "Not even in my worst nightmares I'd imagine that Obito could start a war of such magnitude."

"So far, the five Great Villages, and a few minor ones, plus the Land of Iron Samurai, have joined forces in order to face Akatsuki. I'm on a secret island alongside the other two remaining jinchuriki. One of them can already control his Tailed Beast's power, and he'll teach us to do the same. The other one will try to subdue hers once I'm done."

"Who are these two jinchuriki, Naruto?" Kushina asked.

"Fu, from Takigakure, and Killer B, from Kumogakure," Naruto told his parents.

"I'm afraid I don't know who this Fu is, but I'm familiar with Killer B," Minato said, nodding. "I fought both him and his brother A during the Third Ninja War. B might be an unorthodox person, but he's a powerful and skilled ninja. With him as your teacher, you will learn to control your newfound power in no time."

"Let's hope I do, because I have the feeling we'll need the Tailed Beasts' power in order to end this war."

That moment, white sparkles started to form around Minato and Kushina's bodies, which started to be consumed by a white light.

"It seems our chakra is starting to break down and disappear, Naruto," Minato said. "We only have a few more seconds, in case you want to tell us something."

"I do," Naruto began. "After everything I heard, how you guys sacrificed yourselves not just to save me, but to save Konoha as a whole... I want to tell you guys that I'm going to make sure your sacrifice won't be in vain. Konoha shall thrive, and I'll become the kind of son you'll feel proud of."

"Oh, Naruto..." Kushina said, as her body started to break apart. "We are already very proud of you. Despite how little we could see you, we can tell what a fine young man you've grown into."

"Tell Jiraiya-sensei and Tsunade-sama that we're very thankful for raising you into such a great man and ninja," Minato said, as he started to disappear as well. "And that they shouldn't be in a hurry to meet us again."

"Don't worry, mom, dad... I will," Naruto replied.

And just like they did the first time, Minato and Kushina disappeared with a smile in their lips.

"Goodbye, mom, dad," Naruto said to no one in particular. "Even if it was for a short time, I was glad to meet you... as well as fighting alongside you."

"Naruto-kun," Hinata called him. Naruto turned around, and saw that his girlfriend was starting to break down into white sparkles as well. "It seems my time here is over as well."

"It's okay, at the very least, I know I'll get to see you again," Naruto said with a sad chuckle. "Thanks a lot for your help. I'm glad you were at my side at such moment in my life, Hime."

Hinata smiled at him. "Don't sweat it. Now make sure we both make to the end of this war alive. See you soon!"

With that, Hinata disappeared as well. Now that Naruto was alone, there was no more reason to be inside the Nine Tails' seal at all. The others might get worried, given that the Nine Tails had been close to winning a couple times.

...

Real World

Naruto opened his eyes, and saw that Tenzo, Hiruzen, Killer B and Fu were staring at him with various expressions. Tenzo and the the Third Hokage were looking at him in shock, Killer B was happy, and Fu had her eyes very open and her jaw dropped, completely in awe. It took Naruto a couple seconds to realize that he was also wearing the golden chakra cloak.

"So hey, what do you think?" Naruto said, as he got back to his feet. "Pretty cool, huh?"

"It's... amazing..." Fu said, almost in a whisper. "I'm not even a sensor, yet I can feel the sheer power you're radiating! It's like being close to the sun, except... the heat feels pretty nice!"

"Yes. The air even feels cleaner the moment you activated that cloak," Tenzo pointed out. "So, this is the power of Tailed Beast's chakra free of the beasts' corrupting will?"

"So it seems," Naruto said.

"Tailed Beast's raw power is primal essence, and with your chakra it formed a coalescence!" Killer B enthusiastically rapped.

"Oh, oh! Me next, me next!" Fu excitedly exclaiming, bouncing up and down like a little girl about to receive her birthday present. "I was scared at first, but I want to do it now!"

"Sure," Naruto said, moving aside, so Fu could take his place, which quickly did so.

"You seems to be full of enthusiasm, and that's good! But be careful, taming a Tailed Beast is no small task, don't be a fool," Killer B warned, as he sat besides her.

The two of them bumped fists, and closed their eyes.

"By the way, excuse me for a second, I need to do a little something," Naruto said, as he exited the room, leaving Tenzo and the Third Hokage alone with the entranced jinchuriki.

Just like his fellow jinchuriki, Naruto sat down cross legged, and closed his eyes. When he opened them again, he found himself inside the seal. Behind the red colored prison gates was the Nine Tails, still immobilized by the torii,

"Hey there, Nine Tails!" Naruto called.

" Hm?" the giant fox grumbled, not noticing Naruto's presence at first. He narrowed his eyes at the blond. "What are you doing here so soon? Did you come here to gloat your victory over me?"

Naruto then switched his seal once again, and much to the Nine Tails' confusion -but happiness- the torii pinning his body against the ground disappeared, and the gates of his cell opened again.

"What... what are you doing?" the confused Fox asked again.
"What's the meaning of this?"

"Don't you feel better now?" Naruto asked. "Because you appeared to be very uncomfortable before."

"You know exactly what I mean. Stop playing games with me, human," the Nine Tails growled, as he stretched his very sore limbs.

"I see you're in no mood for small talk. Guess it can't be helped," Naruto said, as he sat down. "I want to talk with you. And make you a proposition."

"You know that I could attack you now," the Nine Tails threatened. "Your girlfriend and birth parents are no longer here to help you. What you're doing is extremely foolish."

Naruto chuckled. "Well, you aren't the first one to tell me that. And I bet you won't be the last either," Naruto then grew more serious. "Do you want to listen to what I have to say, or do you prefer to go back to your jail? Because I can send you back just as easily as I released you."

The Nine Tails narrowed his eyes and gritted his teeth at Naruto once again. While Naruto wasn't the first human who spoke to him in such haughty tone, it was something that drove him mad. Still, the cunning part of his mind told him to wait and see what happens. Naruto was holding all the cards right now, so he needed to approach this patiently.

"I could have run away the moment Obito's mind control over me was broken, but I decided to stay and vent my rage on those Konoha ninja. And thus I ended up sealed again. I cannot waste anymore chances," the Nine Tails reflected. "Talk, brat. I'm listening."

"I'm sure you heard already, but I will tell you again just in case: there's going to be an all out war against the Akatsuki. Many people will die. Hell, we might not even win," Naruto began, his tone being solemn and urgent. "I want your help to win this war."

" You already have complete control over my power, brat," the Nine Tails replied, even if he knew that wasn't true. "Why do you need, or want, my cooperation? What do you expect to get?"

"... your cooperation?" Naruto repeated.

The Nine Tails narrowed his eyes at Naruto again.

" What are you planning, brat? Why do you want me to work with you willingly instead of directly taking my power?" The fox asked again.

"Well... when I was trying to steal your chakra, and you were trying to overwhelm me with it... a connection between us was formed. And I could feel all your rage and your hate... and all your suffering," Naruto began. The Nine Tails seemed to pay more attention, but he didn't say anything. "I experienced the long years of captivity you spent inside Mito, then Kushina, and lastly me. The former two were especially bad. And I... I don't want you to suffer that badly. That's why, even if I can't afford to release you, I want to make your stay here better."

Then, much to Naruto's shock, the Nine Tails started to roar with laughter.

" Oh, that's a good one, human! Caring about me! As if humans could care about our kind!" The giant fox said, as he continued laughing uproarously. That's it, until he noticed that Naruto was looking at him with dead serious eyes. "You... you can't be serious!"

"Why not?" Naruto asked. "Is that incredible that, after I experienced firsthand how do you feel, I want to make your life better?"

" But... I killed countless Konoha humans! Your birth parents among them!" the Nine Tails reminded him, sounding incredulous. "Are you telling me you're willing to ignore all of that?"

"A certain somebody I met once told me that you can't understand somebody else unless you experience their pain," Naruto began. "And, even if you do, you might not agree with them, or you may not want to forgive them for their actions against you. That no human can do that. But in the end, if we don't do that, all what we'll accomplish is to perpetuate the circle of hatred that keeps us embroiled in wars. And Tailed Beasts are no different to us on that regard. Sure, I could make your life a living hell while you're sealed inside me, but what good would be? Someday, I'll die, and you might break free, your hatred for humans stronger than ever. If I had any hopes of curving that hatred, I need to forgive you. I need to show you that there are humans you can trust. And even call your friends."

" You want to be friends... with me?" The Nine Tails asked, before letting out a mirthless laugh. "Heh, now that's a good one!"

"We don't have to be friends right now," Naruto replied. "All I ask is for you to work with me in good faith. But mom and dad say that I have a knack for making friends, so I expect that in the end you'll also fall to my irresistible charm." The blond said, half joking.

The Nine Tails stared at Naruto with a critical eye. At first he thought that maybe it was some sort of trick to make him lower his guard, but to what end? The human already had complete control over his chakra. Could this blond moron mean his words? The Nine Tails had a hard time trusting humans, given his experiences with them:

You Tailed Beasts are simply servants of those with the Blessed Eyes! Now obey me, you filthy animal!

Your power is too great. Regrettably, I can't let you run loose.

When you exert your power, you draw hatred towards you, please stay quiet inside me.

You might be here to keep the world in check, but I'm here to watch you.

Yet here was this brat, talking nonsense about forgiveness and friendship. Almost treating the Nine Tails like a living being rather than a mindless weapon. Could this boy be different? The Fox hated the fact that he was even entertaining the idea. But then again, he had made the seal far more tolerable, and he wasn't planning on giving up that. For the time being, it would be best to play nice, and see what happens next.

" It seems I don't have much of a choice. But a choice nonetheless," the Nine Tails said in defeat, much to Naruto's joy.
"You have a deal."

"Excellent!" Naruto happily cheered, as he jumped to his feet. "If you want anything tell me. Now I need to go with Fu, she's about to face her Tailed Beast. See you later, Nine Tails!"

" Naruto," the Nine Tails called before the blond could leave. "Don't call me Nine Tails. I have a name. It's Kurama."

"You have a name?" Naruto asked, looking surprised. "Why didn't you tell me before?"

" Only those who I deem worthy may use my name. So far, only my father and my idiotic siblings know my name, so consider yourself fortunate," the Nine Tails said with a huff of self importance.

A wide, taunting grin formed on Naruto's face. "So, I'm worthy in your eyes? Heh, I knew you'd warm up to me."

" Don't push your luck, human. Now go already, your unbound, youthful energy is like a plunging a searing dagger into my eyes," the Kurama said.

...

Naruto opened his eyes, and found himself back in the real world. Despite he had spent a few minutes talking with the Nine Tails, only a second passed in real time. He stood up, and walked back into the special room, when Fu was about to begin her greatest challenge.

"Hey guys, did she-"

Suddenly, there was a huge burst of chakra coming from Fu. The green haired girl opened her eyes, and smiled.

"And done!" she cheered.

"What? So soon?" Naruto asked in shock. "How could you beat a Tailed Beast so easily?"

"Oh, I didn't beat Chomei -by the way, the Seven Tails has a name, and it's Chomei, isn't it cool?- we just sat down and have a nice talk. We have a lot of things in common! For example, we both have the same favorite genre of music! We also hate the same genres of music!" Fu excitedly explained. "And since then, we decided is for the best to work together. She helps me, and I'll try to make her stay inside me as pleasant as possible."

Naruto looked defeated. "Man, I had to fight a goddamn deathmatch against the fox, and needed the help from three people to win... and you only had to talk to your Tailed Beast? Speak about fair."

"Don't fret about it, boy," Hiruzen told him. "The important part is, the two of you have successfully tamed your Tailed Beasts, and their power is at your disposal."

"Speaking of which, check this out!" Fu said, as she started to build chakra around her. Soon, a dark teal armor formed around her body, leaving only her eyes visible. The armor appeared to be organic rather than made of any kind of metal, and reminded of an insect's carapace. "And that's not all!" she said, and suddenly, spikes started to grow all around the armor, a huge Y-shaped horn grew on her helmet, blades that looked like the jaws of a stag beetle grew from her wrists, and lastly, six wings sprouted from her back. "The Chomei Chakra Armor! I bet you haven't seen anything cooler in your life!"

Naruto crossed his arms, and averted his gaze in a somewhat disdainful manner. "I think my Chakra Cloak is much cooler..."

"So, now that their training is over, I guess that we can send them to the battle, right?" Tenzo asked.

"Sorry pal, I'm afraid it won't be the case, if you send them as they're now, it will be a disgrace. First thing they need, is to train a lot, master their new powers, if they want to have a shot!" Killer B told the Konoha ninjas.

"Guess it can't be helped," Naruto said, a little dejected.

"How long do you think the training will take, Killer B-san?" Hiruzen asked.

"I'm afraid I don't know, it could be a lot of time, but these two are fast learners, so it will be sublime!" Killer B replied.

"I think we should start our training right now," Naruto suggested.

"Seconded!" Fu chimed in. "I want to know what I can do now that Chomei and I are synced."

"Alright then, let's head outside, show me what you can do, and fight with pride!" Killer B replied.

Their job done, the group headed outside of the temple, where Naruto and Fu would begin their Tailed Beast control training. While Naruto and Fu hoped that the training would end before the war, Hiruzen and Tenzo hoped that Akatsuki's power won't be so great as to need three perfect jinchuriki to counter it.

Author's Note: And there you have it, Naruto finally got his Kurama Chakra Cloak. Yes, I know he got it the same moment as in canon, but like I said before, I wasn't going to make the same mistake I did with Sage Mode.

As for Fu... yeah, sorry if you were expecting another epic fight of human versus giant beast. I have Fu befriend Chomei for several reasons: I thought that another fight would just drag on after Naruto's, plus I think it fits Fu's character, who wants to make a lot of friends and be on good terms with everybody, even if she previously had some issues with Chomei. BTW, I've been referring to Chomei as female for the whole story, and my betareader pointed out Chomei is male. However, given that it's a bit too late to correct that, I'm going to keep Chomei as female for what's left of the story.

What do you think about the Chomei Chakra Armor? Like with the Kurama Chakra Cloak, I wanted to give Fu an unique transformation, and given that Chomei is a beetle, I thought in giving her a carapace-like armor rather than a chakra cloak like Naruto's.

And special mention to W8W who correctly guessed that there was something more to Hinata accidentally jolting Naruto with that kiss. Did you expect her to show up?. I hope you enjoy her guest appearance here. She is going to be absent for quite a few chapters, given that she's on the Moon, so thought in giving her one last epic fight alongside Naruto before her confrontation with Toneri arrives.

And given that Minato didn't appear before, he obviously can assist his son here in subduing the fox alongside Kushina. Though, before you ask, no, Minato and Kushina aren't going to show up again. They already fulfilled their purposes, and have nothing else left to do.

Naruto learned Kurama's name earlier than in canon. That's because I hated how in the manga Naruto learned his name through a third party, and felt it would be a more powerful moment if the Fox himself revealed it to him as a sign of their budding respect, and I felt that this was the best moment for such a thing to happen. Another thing I disliked was how Kurama only started to help Naruto because between him and Madara, he hated the latter more, and then it was treated as a genuine friendship.

Thanks to Ookami88 for beta-reading this chapter.

Well, the preparations for the war are already done, the pieces are in place, the game can now begin. Next chapter will mark the beginning of this fanfic's very last arc, which I hope it will be memorable. In the meantime, don't forget to review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Prelude to the War

Author's Note: Man, look at that. One hundred chapters. I never imagined, not in a million years, that I would write so many chapters for a single story. So, upon reaching such a meaningful milestone, this story has:

1648502 views

3549 favorites

3903 alerts

and 3580 reviews!

Thank you to everybody who read, favorites, follows and, of course, reviews this story. It's thanks to you that we reached this far. Now, enjoy the beginning of the very last arc of Son of the Sannin:

Chapter 100:

Prelude to the War

or

The Begining of the End

Island Turtle

Fu was admiring her new chakra armor in the reflection of the lake of the Falls of Truth, making several poses and shifting her position so she could see all of it. She changed poses with increased frequency, and the more he did it, the more upset she grew, something her Tailed Beast noticed.

"Fu? Something wrong?" Chomei asked.

"It's the armor..." she began, as she kept changing her pose.

"Don't you like it?" the giant beetle asked, sounding disheartened.
"You think it's ugly?"

"Oh no, nothing like that, the armor is awesome!" she reassured, before growing a little more uneasy. "It's just... I don't know, it messes with my style. It kinda lacks something, and I can't put my finger what is it..."

"Oh, oh! I think I know what you're talking about!" the beetle said, excited. "Let me do a little adjustments..."

As soon as Chomei said that, the plates covering her midsection retracted, leaving her abs bare for all to see. Fu beamed upon seeing this.

"YES! Now it's perfect! Thank you, Chomei!" Fu cheered.

"Anytime, girl," Chomei replied, glad to make her host happy.

"You know, Fu, I think you're missing the point of an armor," Naruto said, as he walked towards her. "Your armor isn't going to protect you much if you have such a gap there. That's like wearing a sign that says 'please eviscerate me'." Naruto deadpanned.

Fu turned at him, frowned, and placed her hands on her hips.

"Sorry, but a Fu that doesn't bare her midriff is like a Naruto that doesn't wear orange. It's an immutable part of who I am," the green haired girl said. "But if you're so worried about me, go ahead and punch me in my gut."

"I'm not going to do that," Naruto replied, crossing his arms.

"You need an incentive, then? Fine," Fu said. "Punch me, and if you make me bend down, I'll treat you to ramen for a whole month."

This seemed to change Naruto's disposition, who clenched his hand into a fist. "Well, I don't like punching my friends, but who can resist such an offer?"

And with a loud crack, Naruto's fist hit Fu's stomach...

"YEOWWWWWWWWWW!"

... and not only Fu barely budged, Naruto felt as if every finger in his hand broke at once.

"Hehe, told you," Fu chuckled. "You need to pack far more power to make me feel pain!"

"Just... what the hell do they feed you!?" Naruto cried, as he nursed his injured hand, which was starting to turn red. "It's like punching a wall of bricks!"

"I know right? I was super strong before, but after having access to all of Chomei's power, my strength and endurance are even higher!" she boasted, while flexing her biceps. "Now try stabbing my stomach with a kunai!"

"Hey you two, no more fooling around, let's start the training, or I'm going to beat you down!" Killer B called his two younger counterparts.

"Coming~!" Fu chirped, as she and Naruto walked towards the senior jinchuriki.

"You now can use your beasts' whole power, and that's great, but now you need to learn how to use it, you agree, mate?" Killer B began. "In order to master your power, you must first get used to it, so let's start little by little, learn to use only a whit."

"As you say, sensei!" Naruto replied.

"Sensei?" Killer B asked, as he rested his chin over his hand. "I would have preferred if you called me Killer B-sama, but guess that sensei would do. Okay, let's start already, let's see what you can push through!"

And thus, Naruto and Fu began their training under Killer B's eccentric yet surprisingly effective teaching method, while Hiruzen, Tenzo and the rest of the escort team watched them master their powers.

...

Allied Ninja Forces Main HQ, Land of Fire

The new headquarters building had been built in record time, mostly thanks to Rin and Kaida's Wood Release speeding the process -and it would have been done much sooner if their third Wood Release user, Tenzo, wasn't away-. From this building, the higher echelons of the Allied Ninja Forces would be able to coordinate the war effort. It was also where the Intelligence Division and most of the Sensor Division were located as well.

At the top floor of the building was the War Room. Like many of its kind, this War Room had a huge table with a detailed map of the Elemental Nations on it, that the Five Kages and their advisors would use to monitor their progress and plan strategy.

Around the table, some sitting, and some standing, were the Five Kages, Mifune, and some of their advisors, such as Shikaku Nara, Ebizo, Chiyo, Ao, or Onoki. Konan was also present as well, given her past ties with Akatsuki.

"Our spies already warned us of Akatsuki's mobilization," Mei began. "Turns out Obito wasn't bluffing when he claimed he had a massive army. My spies counted almost one hundred thousand effectives, split among smaller divisions."

"So, they outnumber us," Kurotsuchi gravely said. "Any suggestion on how are we going to deal with such a problem?"

"With strategy, granddaughter," Onoki intervened. "Numbers don't win war. We can beat Akatsuki if we are able to outsmart them."

"Numbers might not win wars, but they surely help," Rasa intervened, sending Onoki a challenging glare. "Plus, Akatsuki not only has quantity on their side, but quality as well. Reports also said that the battalions of Zetsu clones are accompanied by undead ninjas reanimated through Impure World Resurrection. We have many tough battles ahead."

"How did Akatsuki managed to get their hands on that jutsu? I find unlikely that Orochimaru decided to share his knowledge with them," Jiraiya pondered.

"You told us that he had defected them, given his absence during the invasion of Konoha. Do you think there's a chance Orochimaru might have rejoined their ranks?" Mei asked.

It was Konan who answered. "I find that very unlikely. Our policy was zero tolerance for traitors and deserters. We were planning to send a team to kill Orochimaru for good, but our failure in capturing the jinchuriki of the Eight Tails forced us to drop such course of action."

A growled upon hearing Konan talking about his brother's capture in such a casual manner. Still, he decided it was for the best to keep his temper in check, and bit his tongue. Konan was a valuable asset, and they couldn't afford losing her. Once the war was over, though...

"But that was when your friend was the leader," the Raikage spoke. "Maybe Obito decided to be more lenient. Especially since he's going to need any asset he can get his hands onto if he wants to win the war."

"It's a possibility, yes," Konan agreed. "Orochimaru might have been able to buy his return into the organization in exchange of an army of undead, unkillable ninjas."

"Not as unkillable. While they're few, we have some ninjas able to destroy reanimations permanently," Jiraiya helpfully said.

"Still, this begets a question," Shikaku spoke. "Why did Orochimaru want to rejoin Akatsuki? What's in for him?"

"We don't even know why he left to begin with," Jiraiya said, looking at Konan.

"This merely conjecture, but if I had to guess, I'd say the promise of the Rinnegan," Konan said. "Orochimaru and Danzo worked together, and Danzo attempted to steal a Rinnegan from Konoha after Nagato's death. However, Obito managed to intercept it before Orochimaru could get it. It is possible that Obito promised Orochimaru a Rinnegan in exchange of his help."

"And... do you think Obito would honor that promise?" Jiraiya asked. The idea of a Rinnegan-wielding Orochimaru wasn't something he liked to entertain. It would be like a nightmare come to life.

"I find it unlikely," Konan said, as she crossed her arms. "The Rinnegan, even just one, is an incredibly powerful tool. If I were Obito, I wouldn't honor that promise. Plus, given that Orochimaru already betrayed Akatsuki once, Obito might have him killed once his usefulness reaches its end."

"Still, we can't afford to just wait for the best," Kurotsuchi intervened. "We need to know where is Akatsuki's main base. Orochimaru will be directing his zombie puppets from there. We send a team to kill him and one less problem to worry about."

"It's not that easy. We don't know where such base is located," A stated. "The White Zetsu clones come from different directions, suggesting multiple bases."

"Actually, the Zetsu Clones are able to travel underground. They probably dispersed and reemerged at different points in order to confuse us," Konan told the Raikage.

"That leaves us very little options," Kurotsuchi said, as she looked at the map intently. "Based on their movements, it appears that some battalions are moving towards the Land of Fire, while others are heading to the north, towards the Land of Lightning."

"The last three jinchuriki are under Konoha and Kumo's care, so such course of action is a sensible one," Onoki commented.

"For the time being, given our current situation, I think we should fight defensively," Kurotsuchi suggested. "Reinforce our positions, let Akatsuki come at us, and stall them in a war of attrition until their resources bleed dry."

"A good idea on paper, but I'm seeing some holes," Mei interjected. "We don't know how fast the Akatsuki can produce their Zetsu clones. If we aren't careful, it may be Akatsuki the ones bleeding our resources."

"The fact that they didn't use them until now suggests that they do take some time to be produced," Rasa deduced. "Which would make Kurotsuchi's strategy the more viable course of action."

"Still, this doesn't mean we can't change our strategy next," Jiraiya said. "Though focusing on defense might give us an opportunity to analyze the enemy better, and if possible, prepare a counterattack."

"Given our lack on detailed intel on the enemy, I also support Tsuchikage-dono's plan as well," Shikaku said.

"Then, there's nothing more to discuss," A said. "As we speak, hordes of enemies are invading our lands. It's about time to mobilize our troops and meet the enemy in the battlefield."

"First, let's address the army. They should be gathered just outside," Mei suggested.

"Given that I'm the Supreme Commander, I should be the one to address the troops," Jiraiya suggested. The others nodded in return.

As Jiraiya headed to the balcony, Onoki walked towards his granddaughter. It seemed she imagined what he wanted to tell her, and decided to ask him first.

"So, how was that?" Kurotsuchi asked, looking a little nervous.

"Very good. You did a fine job. A very sensible suggestion," Onoki praised her.

"Thanks," the black haired girl said, smiling a little. "I'm trying my best. I may not show it, but I feel a little overwhelmed. The other Kages have far more experience than I do, and I'm not as versed in playing politics as they are."

"Patience. That's a skill you will develop over time," Onoki reassured. "Besides, it's not that necessary now. Even if some of these people have been our historical enemies, we're on the same side now."

Onoki remember very well the day after Kurotsuchi's appointment. Deciding he was too old to continue as the reigning Kage, he decided to pass the hat to his granddaughter, so he could retire and a new generation could bring Iwa to the future. Everything went fine at first, with Kurotsuchi slowly but surely growing into the position.

Then those kumo ninjas arrived, with their letter requesting the Tsuchikage attend a Kage Summit to deal with the Akatsuki menace. Their timing couldn't have been any worse. Even if Kurotsuchi was a powerful kunoichi, one needed more than mere power to be a Kage, and his granddaughter was still too green to deal with the other Kages. But he couldn't retake the position so a more experienced ninja could tackle this crisis, not without destroying her granddaughter's reputation and credibility in the process. If Kurotsuchi was a Kage, she had to deal with this kind of things, experienced or not.

Upon returning from the meeting with the other Kages, the poor girl was on the verge of crying. During the creation of the Ninja Alliance, she was basically forced to handle all of Iwa's military might to Konoha, their greatest enemy. Despite her best efforts, she was bested by an alliance between the Hokage, Mizukage and Kazekage. Onoki had told her that it was okay, and that Iwa would remain independent once the war was over.

Even if it might make her look like he was holding her hand, Kurotsuchi decided to bring her grandpa to following meetings, under the pretense of being a very experienced man when it comes to warfare. Fortunately, other Kages also brought more people as advisors as well, so her excuse was easily bought. Still, Onoki wanted to make sure his granddaughter would grow more confident as a Kage.

"Plus, I think you earned their respect when you took the initiative and suggested a course of action that was reasonable and sensible," Onoki said. "If there's a bright side to this awful war is that you'll come out as a much better Kage once it ends."

"Thank you, grandpa," Kurotsuchi said with a smile.

...

Outside HQ

Almost the whole army of the Ninja Allied Forces had been assembled outside of its main HQ. More than eighty thousand ninjas, coming from multiple different villages, spread in front of the HQ building, like a colossal mosaic of multiple colors. One of the largest armies ever gathered. And it was hard to believe that the enemy's army was even greater in number. Still, seeing such a multitude together inspired courage in each of its members.

The army was split into five shapeless masses of people, one for each division, which would be commanded by one of the Five Kage minus Jiraiya, and Mifune. Though technically speaking, there were more than five divisions, but those were dedicated to logistical roles, and were much smaller in number.

Given the size of the groups, it was only logical that many people who were close or at least have some friendship with each other ended up in the same division together,

"Choji!"

"Karui!"

The Konoha ninja and the Kumo kunoichi quickly went to greet each other, and shared a loving embrace, as Omoi and the rest of the Tactical Squad walked towards them.

"Heh, it's so good that we ended up in the same division!" Choji cheered. "Now we can fight side by side!"

"Indeed!" Karui agreed, but her expression then became deadly serious. "Though, given that we're going to fight a war of such scale, you better don't let me down! If your performance in battle is poor, I'll break up with you!"

Choji's face paled upon hearing it. "W-What!?"

"Ignore her," Omoi stated, as he walked towards them. "It's a coping mechanism. She tends to get like that when she's nervous or scared."

"S-Shut up, you dummy!" Karui lamely told her male teammate.

"No, I mean... if you threatened to break up with me... does that mean that we're a couple?" Choji asked.

Omoi chuckled as Karui's hands flew to her mouth, upon realizing what she just said.

"I mean... well, it's that... I guess not, given that we haven't gone on any formal dates yet, you know?" the redhead nervously explained.

"You two went to eat together a couple times when we were in Konoha," Ino pointed out. "And I don't mean going out with other people. The two of you alone."

"That sounds like a date to me," Omoi agreed with a nod.

Karui let out an exasperated sigh. "Okay, fine we've been going on dates! And yes, that means we're a couple! Will you dumbass shut up now and stop meddling in my private life?"

"Was it that hard to admit?" Omoi said with a smirk, as he and he left his teammate alone with Choji and his team.

"It's finally official, I have a girlfriend! Wohoo!" Choji cheered, as he pumped his fist into the air. "If we weren't about to fight a war, I'd be so excited!"

"Well, congratulations, Choji," Shikamaru said, as he, Asuma and Ino walked to the newlyform couple once Omoi was out of sight. "It's good to see something happy before heading into a war."

"Plus, Shika and I aren't that lucky," Ino said, shaking her head. "Temari is the Fourth Division with her dad and brothers. And Sai was sent to the goddamn Moon with Hinata."

"My wife is on the Fourth Division too," Asuma lamented, as he let out a sigh. "Then again, try to be positive about it. Absence makes the heart to grow fonder."

"At the very least, our teams weren't split," Ino said.

"By the way, where is your other teammate, Karui?" Choji asked.

"T is part of the Medical Division. She will be assigned to one of the main divisions as need arises," the redhead explained. "Though, I hope she doesn't end up with us. I already have to deal with Omoi's nonsense, and his teasing is going to be even worse now that we're a couple."

"Do they think I'm not boyfriend material?" Choji asked, sounding a little self conscious.

"Nah, there's nothing wrong with you," Karui said nonchalantly. "Let's say that I'm not exactly popular with boys. They say I have 'too much of a temper'. HA! What I don't have is patience for bullshit. And those two always have fun at my expense trying to hook me up with whatever boy shows any interest in me just to see me explode."

"Well, you do have a little of a temper," Ino said. Karui glared at her, but the blond didn't flinch. "And I know a few things about temper."

"Just ignore them, and they'll stop," Shikamaru said. "Or even better, show them how happy you're with Choji. That's bound to shut them up."

"I don't have much faith in that plan, but I'll keep it in mind."

...

Unlike Team Asuma, not all teams were lucky enough to stay whole. Sasuke was separated from the rest of the Medical Squad, given that his two other teammates and sensei were part of the Medical Division, and Sasuke wasn't made part of the ninjas that would escort them. Given his skill, power and record, they decided he would make better use of his talents in the front lines, a logic the younger Uchiha couldn't disagree with. The Uchiha found ironic that he actually missed them, given that a few years ago, he would have paid to get rid of them, if only temporarily, and have some peace.

Though, at the very least, there were some people Sasuke was close to, or at the very least, was on good terms with.

"YOSH! All the waiting is killing me! Hopefully our commanders will give us the order to go to the front soon!" Lee energetically shouted.

"I admire your enthusiasm, Lee, but this is a war we're talking about!" Gai replied, just as energetic, but sounding a little chiding. "Don't get over your head, or you will get killed!"

"Don't worry, Gai-sensei! My performance in the battlefield shall be second to no one! You won't have to worry about me!" Lee replied.

Sasuke rolled his eyes. Of all the people from Konoha he knew to be grouped up with, Team Gai wasn't his preferred choice. Oh well, at the very least, Itachi was also in the same division as him. He looked to the side, and saw his older brother, a couple meters away from him. Talking to somebody. Her .

"I'm so nervous... I wish I had your temperance, Itachi-kun."

"I'm not as calm as you think, Natsu-san," Itachi replied. "I've been in a war before, and knowing what I'm going to face doesn't make it any easier. Quite the contrary."

This caught the Hyuga's attention. "But... how old are you? You can't be older than twenty five, and the last big war ended when we were children."

"I know. I was four when the Third War was going on. Sometimes, my father would take me to the battlefield, so I could see firsthand what it means to be a ninja," Itachi explained.

Natsu took her hands to her mouth in horror. "But that's... that's terrible! What kind of person would take a small child to a battlefield of all places?"

"Father would sometimes complain about people who become ninjas, but were unaware of the reality of the world we live in. Given that I was supposed to be the next Clan Head, Father wanted me to know that," Itachi said. "And... he succeeded. Probably far better than he expected."

"What do you mean?" Natsu asked.

"The night of the Uchiha Insurrection... do you know why I did what I did? Not only why I sided with Konoha over the clan despite my father leading the coup, but the fact that I decided to kill half the Uchiha ninjas myself?" Itachi asked. Natsu's face was starting lose what little color had, but nodded at him to continue. "Because they didn't think long-term. Even if they were succesful, an Uchiha-ruled Konoha was doomed to fail. Many people wouldn't accept their rule, and would start a civil war. That would weaken Konoha from the inside, and encourage other villages to invade us. It would be the beginning of the Fourth Ninja War.

"With every clan member I felled... I felt like a civil war and potential war was pushed further and further away... I didn't see them as family members, not even humans beings, just... obstacles to peace I needed to remove."

Once Itachi finished, neither of them didn't say anything for a few minutes. Natsu stared at Itachi, while Itachi merely stared at his feet. Then, after a bit of hesitation, the Hyuga woman placed a comforting hand on the Uchiha's shoulder.

"I... you must feel pretty awful when you think about that," she began. "But I don't want you to think you're a bad person. You did what it thought it was the best. Fighting against your family is never easy. They may hurt you, you hate them in return, but deep down, you know that it's your own flesh and blood, and wish things weren't the way they are. It's normal that you feel guilty for what you did, but it was also for the best."

"You speak as if you knew what I'm talking about," Itachi replied. "I'm really hoping you weren't forced to kill a family member."

"Fortunately, it never got that bad, but sometimes the thought crossed my mind," Natsu replied, as she removed her forehead protector. "My forehead hasn't been as it is now. Not even a couple months ago, it sported the Caged Bird Cursed Seal, which allowed the Main Family members to cause me unbearable pain with a mere hand gesture if I ever stepped out of line."

"At the very least, you got rid of it," Itachi pointed out.

"Thankfully, yes. Thanks to Hinata-sama," Natsu replied, as she put the protector back on. "It's ironic that a person I used to hate ended up being the one to release me from my yoke."

"You hated Hinata? From what I heard, she's a very kind girl. Everybody that knows her likes to some degree," Itachi said, a bit surprised.

"Not that I hated her personally," Natsu replied. "I hated the whole Main House. How I was forced into servitude, how I had to be Hanabi-sama's babysitter instead of improving my ninja career, like the Main House members did. Only the best of the Branch Members, like Neji, were allowed such privilege. I knew Hinata was kind and all the things they said about her, but despite her good intentions, I doubted she would change the status quo. Any other Clan Head with such power would have used it to consolidate their grip on the Clan."

"Right now, I'd love nothing more than swapping my place with a babysitter," Itachi noted, chuckling a little.

"It might sound stupid and naive, but I don't. I want to make a difference in a way that involves my ninja training," Natsu said, as she looked at her Konoha Chunin uniform. "Though I do feel a little odd right now. I'm so used to the maid uniform, these clothes feel strange on me."

"I think your maid uniform also looked better on you," Itachi said, smirking a little.

Natsu smiled back at him. "Why do I have the feeling that there's a hidden meaning to those words, Itachi-kun?"

Once again, Sasuke rolled his eyes. Of course it was his luck that the Hyuga that had been hanging out with his brother a lot for the past few weeks would be assigned to the same division as them. Itachi might deny it now, but it was obvious that Natsu was interested in something more than a friendship, and so was his brother. Guess neither of them wanted to rush things.

Sasuke knew his jealousy was unjustified. He might not express it as outwardly as Sasuke did, but the weight of Itachi's decisions wore him down little by little. Itachi deserved to find love, just like Sasuke did.

"I can't get mad at her for taking Itachi's attention. I'm not a little kid anymore. Plus, they seem to click quite nicely," Sasuke inwardly berated himself. "I guess I took Itachi for granted, and expected him to be there for me whenever I wanted. Or maybe I'm missing Sakura, and Itachi and his Hyuga are reminding me of her."

Sasuke discreetly activated his Sharingan, and scanned the crowd, hoping to see more people he knew. Given that the commander of the Second Division was the Tsuchikage, about half the ninjas hailed from Iwa. In the sea of red uniforms, Sasuke also saw some white and navy from Kumo, and tan and white from Suna, but very little green and navy from Konoha. Oh well. The less people he knew, the less friends he had to see die in front of his eyes.

Speaking of Suna, there was also a certain girl that was also lamenting the fact that she wasn't grouped with the person she was hoping for.

"Man, I can't believe we were placed in a different team from Gaara-sama's," Matsuri whined. "Now I won't be able to protect him."

"I doubt he needs your protection," Mikoshi said, rolling his eyes. "Plus, it was inevitable. Chances were that most of us we will end up in another division."

"Yeah! Let's be happy that our team remains whole!" Yukata cheered.

"You're right. Complaining like this is not befitting a ninja of my rank," Matsuri conceded, as she looked at her Chunin vest. "Now, let's do our best so we can end this war as soon as possible!"

"Yes!"

...

"Do you see anybody from Konoha? Anybody we may know," Zaku asked, as she looked at Dosu. "Or hear, in your case."

"With such massive crowd, all my ears pick is a nonsensical cacophony of voices and murmurs. I can't really tell one voice from the other," Dosu complained.

"I already told you guys that none of those guys were in the same division as us," Kin said, crossing her arms. "There's barely any Konoha ninjas here. All what I see are mostly Kiri ninjas."

"Natural, given that this is the division commanded by the Mizukage," Anko chimed in, joining the conversation. "Though, you should be glad that we got assigned to this division, given that we missed our chance to take part in the Kirigakure Civil War!"

"Are you sad you weren't sent to fight in a war, sensei?" Kin asked, raising an eyebrow. When she heard what had happened in their absence, she was glad that they were away on a C-Rank mission protecting a merchant caravan that was heading to the Land of Wind.

"I would have agreed with you if it was any other war but... it was the Kirigakure Civil War! We could have fought both side by side and against the Seven Ninja Swordsmen of the Mist!" Anko said, gushing like a schoolgirl talking about her favorite idol. "One of the most efficient, brutal and with the highest confirmed kill count squads in all of history! You have no idea how jealous I was when Shizune told me that she and her team got to kill Jinpachi Munashi, and Asuma and his team got to kill Kushimaru Kuriare! Not to mention fighting alongside the new wielders of the Thunderfangs and Hiramekarei! Fortunately, fate seems kind enough to give us another chance."

"I don't think if that's something worth celebrating either," Dosu said. "A division with the Seven Swordsmen will be assigned the fiercest battles."

"So? The better! That way we can show off our abilities and when the war is over, getting a promotion" Zaku confidently shouted.

"You're talking my language as well, kid!" Anko nodded in agreement.

Meanwhile, the Seven, or better said, Six Swordsmen of the Mist, were also talking among each other while they were waiting the Kages to end their meeting and give them the order to advance.

"I was kind of surprised that they allowed to keep the squad whole," Suigetsu commented. "I was expecting that they would split us to the other four divisions, so each division could have one of us at least."

"Mizukage-sama must have told them that our unit works better as a team," Miyako said. "Plus, seeing six of the seven Swordsmen of the Mist fighting together after so long will be quite the morale booster. At least for our fellow Kirigakure ninja."

"Yeah, whatever, just try not to get in my way when I'm cutting down those White Zetsu thing to tiny bits!" Ameyuri said, making a couple swings with the Thunderfangs for added emphasis, nearly cutting Chojuro, who jumped back with a yelp. "See? This is why you guys need to keep your distance."

"Don't try to play lone wolf, girl," Zabuza chastised, glaring at the redhead. "Wars aren't won by individually. No matter how strong you are, you will end up facing an opponent you can't beat on your own. And then, you'll find you have no backup to rely on."

"I thought you'd be on my side, Zabuza-taicho," Ameyuri said, sheathing her swords before crossing her arms. "You're somebody who tends to fight alone as well."

"While that's true, I fight alone because my sword has a long range and I can hurt my allies if I'm not careful, so my concentration isn't split," Zabuza explained. "That doesn't mean that I don't disregard my allies, given that I may need them at any moment. Go and fight alone if that's how you think you're more effective, but keep also in mind that all of us are part of a much bigger division, and we're expected to fight as one."

Ameyuri let out a snort. "Whatever keeps you from nagging me constantly."

"It's not the captain you'll have to be worried about, Ameyuri-san," Miyako told her. "Mizukage-sama herself will be leading this division, and we shall fight alongside her. We can't disappoint her."

"We already fought alongside Mizukage-sama during the Civil War, this is nothing new," Ameyuri countered, rolling her eyes.

"That's true, but this time, we'll be fighting alongside plenty of other villages, not just a handful of Konoha ninjas," Chojuro interceded. "If we did a bad job, it would not only bring shame upon us, but upon Kiri as well."

"Like how the previous generation got their asses handed by a Konoha Genin!" Suigetsu said, chuckling. "Though, with a bar so low, it's impossible to fall even lower!"

"None of you will bring shame to Kiri nor the swords you carry, because I'll make sure you put your best performance," Zabuza said in a commanding tone. "And remember, besides those White Zetsu clones, intelligence reported many Impure World Resurrection zombies. No matter how skilled we are, those things can't be killed with brute force alone."

"Don't worry, we have never brought shame to our blades or our village, and we never will," Suigetsu reassured.

...

Meanwhile, in another group, half of the members of the Assault Squad were talking with each other, while waiting for the others from the higher ups. On top of Kurenai and Haku, Yakumo Kurama had joined them as well, given that she was still under Kurenai's custody. The two youths looked a bit uneasy, Haku constantly looking at the division besides them, and Yakumo constaly shifting her position.

"Are you guys okay?" Kurenai asked.

"A little nervous, but otherwise I'm fine," the Ice Ninja replied, without looking at her.

"Me too. One good thing about being trained by Root is that I'm completely capable of controlling my emotions. Fear included," Yakumo stated.

"Controlling? Or supressing?" Kurenai prodded, raising an eyebrow.

"In this case, controlling," Yakumo assured her. "Trust me, sensei, I've done quite the share of dangerous missions while working under Danzo. I know the scale of a war is something I've never seen before, but I'm ready for anything."

"Remember, if you want to talk about anything, I'm here for you," Kurenai said, placing a hand on the girl's shoulder. Then, she turned at Haku. "The same goes for you. Is there anything you want to tell me?"

"Why do you ask?"

"You've been looking at that other division for quite some time, " Kurenai pointed out.

"From what I heard, that's where Zabuza-sama and the rest of the Sworsmen have been assigned," Haku told her. "It's a pity we weren't assigned to that division. I would have liked to fight at Zabuza-sama's side once again. Or at the very least, being able to talk with him before heading to the front lines. It's been a while since the last time we met."

"It's understandable. But don't despair," Kurenai told him, as he placed a hand on his shoulder. "You'll be able to talk to him again. Zabuza is a strong ninja, and he won't die that easily. And you won't die either as long as I'm here."

Haku acknowledged Kurenai's encouragement with a smile. Then, he asked: "This isn't your first war, is it, sensei?"

Kurenai nodded in affirmation. "Correct. I took part in the Third Ninja War, about eighteen years ago. I remember I was only twelve, not even Chunin yet. As a general norm, Genin aren't send send to the frontlines, and they're usually keep as a reserve force, or for logistic tasks, but back in the day Konoha suffered from low numbers. So lucky me, I got a taste of what war is like when I was barely a teenager."

"I'm sorry to hear that. I had to be a crushing experience," Haku told her.

"It was. Though I doubt it was any worse than your childhood in the Land of Water. Or your years in Root," Kurenai sympathetically told her students. "Though, on the bright side, the next Chunin Exams became a joke in comparison, and I was able to nail a promotion easily."

"Still, I hope-"

"Haku-san!" a new female voice shouted. "Hey, Haku-san!"

Both genjutsu mistress and Land of Water native turned towards the direction of the voice, and they saw a girl with dark blond hair decked in a Kirigakure uniform running towards them, waving both arms wildly. While Kurenai didn't know who was this girl -she didn't remember seeing her during the Kirigakure Civil War- Haku immediately recognized her.

"Hotaru-san!" Haku said, smiling widely.

"Hey, Haku-san! It's so great to see you again!" Hotaru said, panting a little after stopping her run. "It's amazing we were assigned to the same division!"

"Indeed it is," Haku said. "By the way, let me introduce you to my sensei, Kurenai Yuhi, and Yakumo Kurama, a friend and fellow Konoha ninja. Kurenai-sensei, Yaku-san, this is Hotaru, a girl we met during our mission to protect Utakata."

"Nice to meet you, Kurenai-san!" Hotaru said, shaking her hand. "Haku-san and his teammates told me quite a lot about you."

"Yes, I do remember that they also mentioned you when they told me about their mission on Nagi Island," Kurenai replied.

"And nice to meet you too, Yakumo-san!" Hotaru greeting, shaking her hand as well. "Though I'm afraid I haven't heard of you until now."

"That's understandable. Most people thought I was dead until recently," Yakumo told her. Upon seeing Hotaru's confused face, the last Kurama clan member added: "It's a long story. I'll tell you another time."

"So, you finally became a Kirigakure ninja?" Haku asked.

"Yes! And I secured a promotion during the latest Chunin Exams!" Hotaru said, proudly displaying her Kirigakure flak jacket.

"Congratulations. Utakata-san would have been very proud of you," Haku told her.

"Yeah, I like to think that," Hotaru said, as her gaze drifted down. "His memory is what keeps me going. And now, I'll try my hardest to stop Akatsuki and bring his killers to justice. Though, from what I heard, the leader of Akatsuki had already met his just desserts."

"You heard right. Pain died during the Akatsuki Invasion of Konoha," Kurenai told her. "It was Naruto who defeated him for good."

"Oh, speaking of which, what about him? And Hinata-san?" Hotaru asked. "I thought they'd be in the same division as you two."

"Naruto is on a secret location, training to master his jinchuriki powers under the tutelage of another jinchuriki," Kurenai explained. "And Hinata has been assigned a special mission far away from here."

"Oh. I see. Let's hope that they return from their training soon, because I remember that they were very powerful ninja," Hotaru said. "We might need their help if we want to end this as soon as possible."

"Yeah, let's hope," Haku agreed.

Not far away from there, in the same group, the Sand Siblings were also talking among each other, passing the time until the Kages finished their initial strategy and issued the orders. Gaara looked as stoic as ever, though Temari looked mildly upset, something Kankuro noticed.

"What's with that face, sis?" Kankuro asked. "Disappointed that you weren't put in the same division as pineapple head?"

Temari glared at her younger brother. "First of all, don't call him that. Only I get to insult him," Temari said. "And yes, I admit I was hoping we could fight together. Though that's not the only thing in my mind."

"Whatever troubles you, you can share it with us," Gaara said. "And you better do, it's not wise to go to the battlefield with a troubled mind."

"You probably heard about those reanimated ninjas that the enemy is using..." Temari began. "Do you think we might have to fight against somebody we used to know?"

"Like... mom?" Kankuro suggested. "I don't think so. Mom was a ninja but not a very strong one. If they resurrect anybody from Suna to fight us, it will be our strongest ninjas who died during the past years."

"Like the previous Kazekages. Or Pakura of the Scorched Earth," Gaara suggested. "She was powerful enough to be taken into account for the position of Fourth Kazekage, before father was appointed."

"Naruto and Hinata told me that when Orochimaru first used the jutsu, he resurrected the First, Second, and Fourth Hokages, as well as the latter's wife in order to destroy Konoha."

"Whoa, really?" Kankuro asked, surprised. "And how did Konoha managed to survive? Because from what I heard, the First Hokage was immensely powerful. No Konoha ninja would have been able to even make him fight seriously."

"Naruto and Hinata didn't fight any of the reanimations, but from what I heard, they only had a fraction of the original's power. That's how they beat them," Temari explained. "The Hokage revised the notes they had on the jutsu, and if you try to revive a very powerful ninja, the caster must reduce their power, or else they risk losing control."

"Oh, then that jutsu isn't so great!" Kankuro said, visibly relieved. "Even if they send the past Kazekages against us, they will be shadows of their former selves. Even if they can't be killed by normal means, sealing them will be child's play."

"You have an awful habit of underestimating your opponent, Kankuro," Gaara chided the puppeteer.

"Hey, I'm just trying to see the bright side of a situation. But you don't have to worry, I'm not planning to drop my guard at any point," Kankuro assured him. "Though, I wonder if they will reanimate Sasori. I'd like to have a second round against him for that time he nearly killed us."

"You already had your second round," Temari reminded him. "You fought against him alongside Maki-sensei, Hinata and Kurenai,"

"Yeah, but I felt I didn't contribute that much to the fight, plus Hinata ended up dealing the killing blow," Kankuro replied. "Plus this time I have new and better puppets to fight with."

"While I try to be above such things, I admit I'd like a rematch against Deidara," Gaara confessed. "Now that I know the way he fights, I'm confident I'd be able to bring him down."

"Now that I think about it, if Akatsuki didn't take your Tailed Beast, you wouldn't be here with us, but training with Naruto and that Taki girl on a secret island," Kankuro said in realization. "I can't imagine how freakishly strong you would be if you had the whole power of Shukaku at your command."

"It's something I prefer not to dwell on," Gaara replied. "Even if they're a distant memory now, I still remember Shukaku's maddening whispers in my head, telling me to kill others. It's a power I wouldn't want unless I was able to silence that voice forever."

"So I'm guessing you don't want to become Shukaku's vessel again once we get the One Tail back," Temari said. "Understandable."

"I wouldn't mind to bear that burden again, given that I'm experienced with it. But this time, I'd prefer if Jiraiya-sama was the one doing the sealing," Gaara replied, crossing his arms. "No disrespect to Chiyo-baasama, but sealing wasn't her forte."

"Speaking of her, I heard that she wanted to rejoin active duty," Temari said.

"She wanted to, but father didn't want somebody so past her prime in the front lines," Gaara told the other two. "He allowed her to have a voice in the strategic and tactical meetings, given her experience in previous wars."

"It's probably for the better," Temari said with a nod. "This war has to be won by the current generation, and not let our forefathers do our jobs for us."

...

"Kakashi-sensei, are you okay?" Tamaki asked, looking at the silver haired Jonin a bit worried.

While most people have been doing some small talk among each other before the Kages would address them and issue their first orders, Kakashi had been staring into the horizon, his one visible eye not focused on anything in particular. Tamaki's voice, however, seemed to snap him from the trance he got caught in.

"Yeah, I'm fine," Kakashi replied. "I was just thinking... well, many things. Like how soon we've been embroiled in another war. The Third Ninja War ended before you guys were even born, yet it felt like it was yesterday."

"The time between two wars is always too short, regardless of how many years pass between them," Shino sagely noted.

"My mom used to tell me about the Third Ninja War when I wanted to hear her past exploits. Though rather than combat, she did mostly scouting and tracking jobs," Kiba interceded. He then paused and crossed his arms, before adding: "I'm afraid this war will be even bloodier."

"Unfortunately yes, it appears to be the case," Tamaki sadly agreed.

"Hey, hey, don't be so glum, okay?" Kakashi told them, raising his voice a little. "If we stick together, we will all go home in one piece. As long as I'm alive, I'll make sure none of you will die."

"As much as we appreciate the thought, Kakashi-sensei, that doesn't depend on you," Shino said, as he adjusted his shades. "During war, chaos and disorder reign supreme, which makes an ideal scenario for sudden and unexpected deaths."

"Yeah. Not to rub salt on the wound, but you end up losing two of your teammates during the past war," Kiba reminded Kakashi. "Even if the two of them turned out to be alive."

"Though, that doesn't mean that we think we're doomed to die," Tamaki added. "We will do our best to stay alive. But if we don't... well, we don't want you to think it was your fault."

"Except if you die, it is my fault. A subordinate's death is always the leader's fault," Kakashi stated. "I think both Rin and I told you the story of how we thought Obito died, and how I acquired my Sharingan, right?"

The three of them nodded.

"The reason the mission went the way it did was that neither of us three were ready to take missions in the middle of a war without sensei's supervision," Kakashi stated. "A leader must know their subordinates' capabilities, and what jobs are they fit to do, and which ones are too much."

"So... you think it was the Fourth's fault that Obito ended up the way he did," Shino guessed.

"Yes, and no. He's partly to blame, but there were other factors that weren't his fault," Kakashi added, then he let out a weary sigh. "You know, this is the reason I didn't want to be a Jonin-sensei to begin with."

"You were afraid to lose your students the same way you lost your teammates and sensei," Kiba replied. It wasn't a guess but a statement.

"Correct," Kakashi said. "When I was doing solo missions, or working with people of similar skill to mine at ANBU... I was at peace, knowing that everybody knew how to take care of themselves and that if the worst came to happen, it wouldn't be my fault. But if I had to take three Genin fresh out of the Academy under my care, I'll have to be much more careful. Even if they mostly do D-Ranks and the occasional C-Rank, Genin deaths are far more common than you think. You'd be surprised how often a C-Rank turns out to be much more dangerous than initially assessed thanks to faulty intel.

"So forgive me if I sound too overprotective, or like I'm underestimating your skill, but as long as this war lasts, I'm not taking any risks. This squad will act, move and fight as one, unless we have no other option but split."

Contrary to what he was expecting, his three students nodded in agreement.

"I think is the wisest decision. We might have grown stronger during the past years, but we are a tracking squad, not a combat one," Tamaki acknowledged.

"Even if we fought against Akatsuki before," Shino said. "They proved to be formidable enemies, and we were unable to win without external help."

The Aburame recalled how Hidan and Kakuzu dominated the battle - and almost lost Kakashi-sensei- even with Fu and Shibuki's help, and it wasn't until Naruto and his teammates appeared that the battle took a turn in their favor. And to say nothing of Obito summoning the Nine Tails in front of them.

"And hey, we don't want to worry you," Kiba added. "There will be time to show you our full potential once the war is over."

"Hey, that's very mature of you, Kiba," Tamaki complimented. "I was expecting you to protest and complain that you're ready to kick ass on your own."

"My thoughts exactly," Shino added, crossing his arms.

Kiba stared at his two teammates with eyes full annoyance.

"Sometimes I feel you guys don't give me enough credit. Listen, we already fought against Akatsuki a couple times, and those guys are some tough nuts to crack. If they're going all out, we better be careful."

There was a moment of silence following Kiba's statement. However, before any of them could continue their conversation, the cacophony of murmurs around them grew much louder all of sudden. Kakashi looked up, and saw the source of the commotion.

"Oh look. There he is," the masked Jonin said in a bored tone.

Because on the highest balcony of the Alliance HQ, Jiraiya, the other four Kages, and Mizune were standing right now. Jiraiya took a step forward.

"EVERYBODY, BE QUIET!" the Raikage roared, and the chatter stated to die down almost instantly. "The Supreme Commander is going to speak!"

"Thank you, Raikage," Jiraiya told the temperamental man, before turning at the massive crowd below. "Greetings everybody. People of Konoha, Kumo, Suna, Kiri, Iwa, Ame and Taki, as well as the Samurai from the Land of Iron. You know, if somebody told me a mere year ago that all Great Villages and some of the minor ones would put their differences aside and join their forces to fight a common foe, I would have laughed at them in their face. But alas, there is an enemy powerful enough to merit such alliance. Said enemy is Akatsuki.

"As somebody who has been researching and fighting Akatsuki for years, I couldn't even imagine the true extent of their resources, and the way they infiltrated our nations, and how far are they willing to go to make sure their goals are fulfilled. They're an enemy unlike any other, and thus they must be fought in a way not seen before. Together. As one.

"In the past, we've been enemies. All of us have fought pretty much each other in every past war, even if many of us weren't even born when some of those wars begun. But now, seeing all of you gathered here before my eyes... I like to think of this not of just a crisis to avert, but an opportunity to take. Akatsuki believes the world is hopeless as it is, that it will be doomed to a state of constant warfare between ninja villages. That only they have the means to achieve peace, but their peace will come at the cost of thousands of lives, not to mention our freedom.

"However, we shall prove Akatsuki wrong! From this point onwards, we aren't ninjas fighting on behalf of our villages or our nations, but our own future! From this point onwards, we become comrades, brethren, fighting for what we know is right! Because once this war is won, we won't return to the status quo, we will create a better world and a better tomorrow for all of us to live!"

Jiraiya's speech was met with a roaring ovation. The white haired Sannin smirked. He always took pride in his ability to write inspiring speeches.

"You guys must feel antsy. I'm a veteran of two wars, so I can tell that the wait before the first battle is even worse than the battle itself. But fret no more! Multiple armies of White Zetsu Clones, Moon Puppets and Impure World Resurrection zombies are coming from the west towards the Lands of Fire and Lightning as we speak. Now, we shall go to the front, and protect our lands from these invaders!"

Once again, the crowd erupted into cheers and shouts declaring their imminent victory. Yes, their morale was now at their peak. Nodding and satisfied at a job well done, Jiraiya turned towards the other Kages and Mifune.

"Alright, time to move out. You know your orders, so you know what to do," the Toad Sage said. "Now go, and return victorious. And try to come back alive as well."

"You won't have to worry about us, Hokage-sama. I mean, Supreme Commander," Mei corrected herself.

"I still have a settle to score with those bastards for nearly killing my children," Rasa seethed, clenching his hand into a fist.

"I'll make sure that they get their just retribution for Yugito and Killer B as well!" the Raikage added.

"I may be the youngest Kage, but I'll show you guys that I'm your equal once you see my results!" Kurotsuchi proudly declared.

"You can leave it to us, Supreme Commander," Mifune replied.

...

A few minutes later, the five Division Commanders joined their divisions, and all of them headed towards five different directions. Jiraiya, still in the balcony, watched them go. His head was now filled with one thought, the same thought he had just before he took part in the Second and Third Ninja Wars, as well as their participation in the Kirigakure Civil War.

How many of them would return home alive.

Author's Note: And thus begins Son of the Sannin's version of the Fourth Ninja War. I'm very much aware that this is easily one of the least liked arcs of the entire series, so I know I have the work cut out for me. Still, I'm going to work hard to make sure the chapters to come are as enjoyable as possible.

Many characters made their return. Some like Karui or the Sand Siblings weren't away that long, but how many of you did expect to see Hotaru again?

And I know that the middle of a war might not be the best moment, but I will try to develop some of the couples that need more screentime, like Choji/Karui or Itachi/Natsu. There's little wonder as why I put them together. I would have liked to have more couples together in the same division (like Gaara/Matsuri) but alas, it couldn't be.

Thanks a lot to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

The war will begin next chapter. Which Division will get to fight? And what zombies will Orochimaru choose for the opening battle? In the meantime, leave a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The First Blood

Author's Note: So, how are you guys doing? I hope you're staying safe. I also hope that this new chapter makes dealing with the lockdown a little better. Enjoy:

Chapter 101:

The First Blood

or

Blast from the past, literally

Land of Fire

Despite the size of the Akatsuki's army, it seemed that they were afraid of going all out. They sent White Zetsu clones in relatively small squads, sometimes supported by one or two reanimations. The Alliance's initial guess was that Akatsuki was "testing the waters", so the speak, before sending a larger attack force.

And said larger attack force came sooner than they expected, and definitely not in the way they imagined. The Sensor Division detected a large mass of chakra traveling underground, and immediately realized that an army of Zetsu wanted to go under them unnoticed. Unfortunately for them, such thing wouldn't happen.

Kurotsuchi managed to move her Second Division en route to intercept this large attack force. It would be the first true battle of the Fourth Ninja War.

"Everybody, stand back, and prepare to attack when I force them out!" the young Tsuchikage commanded, as she took a step forward, and made several hand seals, before slamming both hands into the ground. "Earth Release: Opening Earth Rising Excavation!"

The effect was immediate. The ground in front of Kurotsuchi started to violently shake, as cracks started to form, with large chunks of earth being violently displaced. From said cracks, hundreds upon hundreds of White Zetsu clones were hurled into the air, much to their shock and confusion.

"Everybody, attack now!" Kurotsuchi ordered, before clapping her hands together. "I'll oversee the battle from above, and provide aerial support! Earth Release: Lightweight Boulder Jutsu!"

Kurotsuchi's feet stopped touching the ground as she elevated into the air, slowly at first, faster later, and in a few seconds, she was a good twenty meters above the battleground, which provided her with perfect view of the battle to happen. This was one of the two jutsu she had now that identified as the Tsuchikage, since only those who wore that hat were made privy of their secrets.

The Lightweight Boulder Jutsu was created by the First Tsuchikage, and only passed it down to his eventual successor, Mu, which in turn passed it down to Onoki, and Onoki down to her. Some ninjas asked why isn't the jutsu taught to every Iwa ninja. With an air force, Iwa would reign supreme over the rest of the ninja villages.

However, the Tsuchikages pointed out that making such thing would risk the jutsu to fall into the hands of foreign ninjas, which in turn would create an air force of their own. Hence why it was decided that only the Tsuchikages would be the ones to have this jutsu.

"And from here, I can attack without fear of retaliation," Kurotsuchi said to no one in particular, as her gloved hands weaved hand seals. "Fire Release: Blazing Meteors!"

The young Tsuchikage breathed a volley of massive fireballs at the White Zetsu clones, some of them who had just gotten up and prepared to attack, resulting in a chain of explosions that engulfed them in domes of fire, making the ground shake even further. Seconds after this, the Second Division engaged the Zetsu army in close combat.

...

Mountain Graveyard

So far, there were only two people left on the unofficial Akatsuki Headquarters: Orochimaru, who was directing and coordinating all the zombies on the different battlegrounds, and Obito, who was keeping an eye on the unreliable Sannin. That moment, a White Zetsu clone emerged from one of the walls next to Obito.

"Boss, I have bad news," the clone began. "The division that was traveling underground towards Konoha has been busted. They're engaged with the enemy as we speak, and are in need of reinforcements."

"A pity. Though it was a result I was expecting," Obito said, shaking his head. "Tell the special divisions to move towards the battleground."

"Understood, boss," the clone said, as he vanished into the wall.

"Orochimaru," Obito told the Sannin, who made no effort to acknowledge the Uchiha. "You should send several of your reanimations there if you have some nearby."

"Of course, Obito-kun. I have this group stationed near their position that will be of great help," Orochimaru gushed, as he made a hand seal. "Bloodline Limit Squad, proceed to the designated coordinates."

...

Land of Fire

"Eight Trigrams, Sixty Four Palms!" Neji prepared the Hyuga Clan's signature combo as several White Zetsu Clones converged upon him. "Two strikes! Four strikes! Eight strikes! Sixteen strikes! Thirty two strikes! Sixty four strikes!"

Each Zetsu didn't take more than a two or three well placed strikes to go down. They wouldn't die, but they would be knocked out for quite some time, allowing the Alliance some time to breathe. And Neji didn't seem to be the only one having an easy time with them.

"Konoha Whirlwind!"

With a roundhouse kick so powerful it raised a gust of wind in every direction, Lee beheaded several Zetsu clones ganging up on him.

"It seems that Akatsuki plans to beat us with quantity rather than quality," Lee commented. "These creatures don't put much of a fight, not even in large numbers!"

"Yeah!" Tenten agreed, as he impaled an attacking Zetsu with a naginata. "I remember fighting them along with Haku-kun and Karin when we rescued Rin. They weren't very strong back then, and they didn't get any stronger in the meantime."

"Still, you better not drop your guard!" Gai warned them, as he also clobbered two Zetsu clones. "This might be an enemy ploy to make us confident, and strike us down with greater force!"

Suddenly, Neji's Byakugan picked up something. A mass of chakra coming from below. The earth suddenly started to rumble.

"Uh? What's going on? An earth jutsu?" Lee asked.

"No! Something's coming from underground! Something big!" Neji warned.

The ground burst open across the battlefield, and more Zetsu joined the battle. However, these Zetsu were not like the ones they've been fighting until now. They were twice as tall, had an extremely muscular upper body, and had four massive arms sprouting from their shoulders. There was a moment of shock that spread among the whole battlefield, as the Allied ninja tried to process what was this new enemy.

"Just... what the hell are those?" Tenten asked, clutching her naginata.

"I don't know. But I saw similar beings during the Akatsuki invasion of Konoha," Neji told her. "Be careful, their chakra levels are much higher than the normal clones!"

"Alright, let's test then if they're as strong as they really look!" Lee excitedly said, wasting no time and dashing towards the closest of the larger Zetsu clones.

"Lee, wait! Don't go on your own!" Tenten cried, as she and Neji went after him.

"Konoha Drop!"

Lee leaped forward, spinning vertically mid air, and delivered a falling kick to the big Zetsu's head. Despite the power behind the attack, the Zetsu barely reacted to the kick, and smiled evilly at Lee. Gritting his teeth, Lee tried to punch him in the face, but his much larger enemy caught the green clad ninja's fist in his massive hand, and squeezed it hard.

"Does it hurt, Konoha scum?" the giant Zetsu taunted, his smile unwavering. "Not as much as THIS!"

Lee let out a short squeak as the giant Zetsu hurled him upwards with his immense strength, ready to smash Lee against the ground and turn him to pulp.

"Konoha Strong Hurricane!"

Suddenly, there was a green blur, and the arm the giant Zetsu was using to grab Lee was severed from the rest of his body, allowing Lee to land on the ground safely.

"Thank you, Gai-sensei!" Lee energetically said.

"This is why I told you to keep your guard up," Gai said in a mostly chastising tone. "It's obvious that the enemy has more assets under their sleeve than mere numbers!"

"It might be the case, as I'm picking four more chakra signatures," Neji warned his teammates.

"More mutated Zetsu clones?" Tenten guessed.

Neji shook his head. "No, these appear to be humans. Reanimations, if I were to make a guess. Just four, but each of them has an exceptionally powerful chakra."

"Alright, whatever comes, we'll deal with it as a team! Keep your guard up, and cover each other's back!" Gai told his students, who nodded in return.

...

On another part of the battlefield, Sasuke and Itachi were fighting together against the coming horde of White Zetsu clones, and as anybody would expect, they weren't having any trouble dealing with them, numbers be damned. Even the larger variants only proved to be a slightly bigger challenge to the unstoppable Uchiha duo.

"How are you going, Sasuke?" Itachi asked, as he tossed a bunch of shuriken in an arc. Each of the steel stars embedded themselves inside a Zetsu clone's forehead, ending their lives instantly.

"Good, good!" Sasuke replied, as he dodged a mighty blow from a mutant Zetsu, packing so much power it opened a small crater on the ground. "These things provide a better challenge than the normal ones!"

"Challenge this, Uchiha!" the huge Zetsu growled, his voice low and guttural. "Wood Release: Great Spear Tree!"

Sharp, thick roots emerged from underground, and lunged at Sasuke, trying to impale the youngest Uchiha. Sasuke merely jumped back while making several hand seals, and then pulled several shuriken from his ninja tool pouch. He infused the shuriken with fire chakra before tossing them forward.

"Fire Release: Phoenix Flower Scarlet Claw!"

The burning shuriken flew forward, easily cutting through the growing roots, leaving a trail of burning wood behind, before stabbing themselves into the mutant Zetsu's skin.

"GRAAAHHH!" the abomination screamed as the burning metal stars cut his flesh open.

"I take that back, this guy isn't much of a challenge either," Sasuke cockily said, as he made more hand seals. "Let's finish-"

"Plasma Release: Light of Death!"

Suddenly, the mutant Zetsu's upper body blew up like a bomb, his burning flesh splattering around him, as an orange chakra beam pierced through him. However, said beam didn't stop there, as it continued its way towards a dumbfounded Sasuke.

"What the-?"

"SASUKE!" Itachi yelled, as he rushed towards him.

Almost instinctively, Sasuke activated Susanoo, and purple ghostly ribcage formed around the younger Uchiha, enveloping him like a protective barrier, just in time before the beam could reach him. The beam produced a huge explosion upon hitting its mark that engulfed the Uchiha, before the shockwave violently hurled his body backwards, landing on his back with a couple of thuds.

"Sasuke!" Itachi repeated, struck by panic, as he rushed to assist his younger brother. The explosion left multiple burns across his body and clothes, but given that he was trying to get back on his feet, the harm wasn't as bad as the older brother feared. "Sasuke! Are you okay!?"

"I've been better," the younger brother sourly replied. "Where did that- ITACHI, WATCH OUT!"

"Plasma Release: Light of Death!"

As Itachi turned around, he started to make hand seals as fast as his hand allowed him.

"Water Release: Water Bullet Jutsu!"

Just like Itachi expected the moment he heard Sasuke's warning, another orange chakra beam was coming at them. This time, however, Itachi managed to form a jutsu to counter it in time. Exhaling a stream of water from his mouth, Itachi's jutsu met the destructive beam before it could strike either of the Uchiha. However, the beam proved to be the stronger attack, as it pushed Itachi's water jutsu backwards, generating clouds of steam as a side effect.

"What? I could swear that that jutsu has a fire component, yet my water attack is failing to stop it!" Itachi thought in distress as he poured even more chakra into his jutsu.

Itachi's salvation, however, came in the form of Sasuke, who joined his brother as he made more hand seals.

"Lightning Release: Thunderbolt!"

A mass of lightning bolts flew from Sasuke's hand, combining with Itachi's water stream. The electrified water was able to push the orange beam back, which quickly lost its momentum, and disappeared.

"Thank you, Sasuke," Itachi replied, panting a little. "How did you know that lightning could stop that jutsu? It didn't look like an Earth jutsu. Though that would explain why water was ineffective."

"It wasn't. That's Plasma Release, a combination between fire and lightning. You had the right idea with the water jutsu, but the lightning component of the combination needed to be neutralized in some way as well," Sasuke explained.

"Wait, Plasma Release? Wasn't the clan that had that Bloodlimit wiped out during the Warring States Period?" Itachi asked.

"That's right, Uchiha scum!" a new voice said. "But the gods were kind enough to return me to the land of the living so I could avenge my fallen clan!"

Itachi and Sasuke turned around to see a man in his late thirties, wearing dark red clothes under a black antiquated armor. He had pale skin, black hair tied into a slipknot, and the cracked skin and black eyes common in reanimations.

"Let me guess... you're a member of the Sutoku clan, aren't you?" Sasuke guessed.

The man smirked. "It's good to see that we haven't been forgotten. Yes, my name is Akashi Sutoku, last head of the Sutoku Clan!"

"So, Orochimaru got his hands on DNA from somebody who died before the ninja villages even existed," Itachi said in realization. "I have to admit that the man is quite methodical."

"Right now, I wish he wasn't," Sasuke dryly replied.

Akashi started to make hand seals. He held two fingers in front of his eyes, which started to crackle with orange sparks. "Now turn to ashes! Plasma Release: Light of Death!"

Akashi jabbed his two fingers forward, releasing another orange beam of destruction. Sasuke and Itachi decided that it was best to dodge this time, and jumped in opposite directions. Akashi's beam carved a furrow on the ground as it moved while creating a wall of fire, and killing several White Zetsu clones and Alliance ninjas that were accidentally caught in its wake.

"Such destructive jutsu..." Itachi said in awe.

"Plasma is the combination of Fire and Lightning," Sasuke explained. "The two most destructive basic elements form the most destructive bloodline. Fighting this guy isn't going to be easy."

"If I can get close to him, I can seal him with the Sword of Totsuka," Itachi replied. "Sasuke, you should fall back and see a medic-nin to treat those wounds."

"There's no way I'm going to leave you alone against this guy," Sasuke insisted. "Besides, my wounds aren't that bad. They sting a little, but I can continue."

"You cannot beat me, Uchiha! I have returned from the grave to punish your kind for your sins! I'm the demon of the Sutoku clan!" Akashi boasted, as he prepared to attack once again.

...

Meanwhile, at another part of the battleground, Maki's team was fighting alongside other ninjas against the hordes of White Zetsu. While the strongest ninjas could dispatch them with ease, in large numbers they proved to be a formidable challenge. And a particularly large number of them were heading towards the Suna ninjas.

"Alright Yukata-chan, time for our combo!" Matsuri said, as she took a step forward, as she started to make hand seals.

"Right behind you, Matsuri-chan!" the bubbly Suna kunoichi replied, mimicking Matsuri. "Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

"Wind Release: Great Breakthrough!"

Yukata exhaled a stream of flames from her mouth, while Matsuri exhaled a powerful gale of wind from her. Both attacks merged, the wind fanning the flames, resulting in a massive wall of fire that caught the incoming White Zetsu clones. Some of them were able to jump back, and others were smart enough to hide underground, but those closest to the fire were engulfed by it, their bodies quickly reduced to ashes.

"Good job girl! That will give us some room to breathe!" Maki praised her two students.

Indeed, the girls' combination attack broke the Zetsu's charge and sent them into a disarray, which was taken advantage by their fellow Allied ninja.

"Everybody, move! We need to push these creatures back!" an Iwa ninja said, as he led a charge towards the dazed White Zetsu clones. "Let's-"

But his words died on his throat as a round, orange fireball landed upon him, resulting in a huge explosion that engulfed both him and a few ninjas close to him. When the explosion ceased, they could see that the bodies weren't charred or carbonized but... mummified. As if the water inside their bodies had been instantly boiled.

"What... what was that?" Yukata asked.

"Where did that attack come from?" Mikoshi asked.

Maki, however, already saw the effect of such attack before, and much to her worry, had a pretty good idea of what they were going against.

"Everybody, behind me!" Maki ordered, and paled upon seeing more of those weird fireballs were about to fall on a group of ninjas in front of her. Maki, however, could only save a couple of them,. "Clothing Binding Jutsu!"

Maki shot two bands of clothes from inside her sleeves, wrapped themlseves around the waists of two kunoichi, one from Kiri and another from Kumo, if their uniforms were any indication, and yanked them backwards a second before another explosion could claim their lives.

"Thanks, nice save," the Kiri kunoichi replied, panting a little.

"It was a close one indeed. You have nice reflexes," the Kumo kunoichi praised. "I'm Ran, by the way."

"Ruka," the Kiri kunoichi said.

"Maki," Maki replied. "And these are my students. Unfortunately, we'll have to leave the introductions for later. We're not out of danger yet."

Maki looked at a figure that walked through the cloud of smoke raised by the explosions. Once she was visible, they could see it was another woman. Pretty tall, with green hair styled in a bun, two bangs framing each side of her face, said bangs colored orange. She was wearing a sleeveless black top, a white obi tied around her waist, and short black pants.

"You were lucky to escape my wrath, Kiri scum. But luck won't smile upon you a second time," the woman said, as she formed a couple of those fireballs on each hand. As she walked towards the group, her eyes rested on Maki, and stopped on her tracks. "Wait a minute, those purple marks... Maki, is that you?"

"Indeed I am, Pakura-sensei," Maki replied. "After your death, I always wished to be able to see you one last time. Needless to say, I'm regretting that wish."

"Pakura-sensei?" Maki's three students shouted in unison, before Mikoshi asked: "The legendary Pakura of the Scorch Release was your sensei?"

"How is that you never told us about that?" Matsuri asked, sounding almost indignant.

"I had my reasons. I promise I'll explain you later." Maki said, her eyes never leaving Pakura. "However, you need to go away. Face an easier opponent, leave her to me. She's an extremely dangerous foe."

"What!?" Yukata asked, indignant. "You can't ask us to leave you alone against her, sensei!"

"I'm not asking, I'm commanding you to. Don't forget that you're my subordinates," the Suna Jonin said in a scathing tone. "Now stay away from Pakura and the other reanimated enemies. Let the more experienced ninjas handle them."

"We better listen to Maki-sensei," Mikoshi said, thought there was some resignation on his voice. "Come on, girls. Maki-sensei will be okay."

Now that they didn't have an unified front, Matsuri and Yukata were forced to give up, and she and Mikoshi leaped away, leaving Maki and the other two kunoichi alone against the Scorch Release user.

"You did the right thing sending your students away, Maki. They looked a bit too young and green, and I'd hate killing fellow Suna ninjas," Pakura said, as her eyes drifted towards Ruka. "That Kiri scum, on the other hand, I'll be more than happy to send her to the afterlife!"

Displaying astounding speed, Pakura dashed towards the dumbstruck Ruka with a fireball on each hand, who yelped in shock, before once again being yanked away by a strap of cloth, removing her from the jutsu's way. Pakura saw in surprise and anger that Maki and Ran had jumped in the opposite direction, while the former wrapped a strap of cloth around Ruka's waist.

"Whoa! Thanks again!" Ruka said. "Second time you save me in less than five minutes!"

"Why did you save her!?" Pakura angrily demanded. "She's a Kiri ninja! I died to Kiri ninja! Your father died to Kiri ninja too! Hell, that was the reason you wanted to be a ninja to begin with!"

"Times have changed, sensei," Maki solemnly said. "In case you didn't realize, the Five Great Villages are fighting together under a single banner against an enemy that threatens the whole world. The same enemy that took you from your rest in the afterlife and turned you into their slave. We can't allow old grudges to get in the way."

"Yeah, and they will stab you in the back once they no longer need you!" Pakura hotly repeated, as she started to make hand seals. "Scorch Release: Blazing Heatwave!"

Pakura started to glow with a golden orange light, before said light burst into a wave of intense heat that exploded upwards, burning the grassy ground as it expanded. The trio of kunoichi found themselves forced to jump backwards in order to avoid the lethal attack, but Ruka made several hand seals as well.

"Water Release: Water Wall!"

Ruka expelled a torrent of water from her mouth, but much to her shock, the water evaporated instantly, turning into a cloud of steam, while barely stopping Pakura's attack.

"A water jutsu. You must think you're so clever, you Kiri bitch," Pakura seethed. "No wonder you chose to stab me in the back when you fooled me into dropping my guard. You scum can't beat me in a fair fight!"

This time, it was Ran who decided to attack. She quickly made a couple of hand seals, before pulling out several shuriken.

"Lightning Release: Lightning Shuriken!"

The Kumo kunoichi tossed a handful of steel stars at Pakura, which crackled with electricity as they flew towards its target, making whirring noises. Pakura, however, was going to respond in kind, her hands flying through hand seals.

"Wind Release: Breakthrough!"

Pakura exhaled a powerful wind current that not only stopped the shuriken with ease, but pushed them backwards.

"And you aren't that much better," Pakura said, looking at Ran with disdain. "You should know that Scorch combines Fire and Wind, and Wind beats Lightning."

"Dammit..." Ran gritted her teeth, before looking at Maki. "Maki-san, how do we beat her then, if our elemental ninjutsu is useless against her?"

"Scorch release is a combination of fire and wind, but what most people don't realize is that it's not fire, but extremely hot air," Maki explained. "That's why water on its own is useless against it. In order to beat heat, you need cold."

"So... Ice Release?" Ran asked.

Ruka's face lit up. "The Konoha-Kiri ambassador, Haku Yuki, has Ice Release!" she said in realization. However, all enthusiasm left her just as quickly when she realized of something else. "... but he's been assigned to another division."

"Fortunately, we won't need Haku-kun to win this battle for us," Maki confidently said. "Next time Pakura-sensei attacks, prepare another Water jutsu. Ran, you get ready to attack."

"But the last time I did that, it didn't work!" Ruka protested.

"Don't argue, just do as I say! Nobody knows Pakura-sensei better than I!" Maki firmly stated. "Here she comes!"

"Scorch Release: Extremely Steaming Murder!"

Pakura dashed towards the trio of kunoichi, holding a sun-like orb on each hand, and thrusting them forward. The Allied kunoichi jumped back, while Ruka and Mai started to make hand seals.

"Water Release: Water Wall!"

"Wind Release: Gale Palm!"

Ruka exhaled another torrent of water towards the incoming golden orbs, while Maki clapped her hands before thrusting them forward, releasing a powerful gale. Maki's wind fanned Ruka's water stream, turning it into a tornado of water that filled the air with thousands of tiny droplets. And much to Pakura's surprise, her orbs of heated air quickly shrunk until they finally vanished, leaving nothing but a cloud of steam behind.

"What...?" Pakura asked.

"Ran, now!" Maki urged.

The Kumo kunouchi quickly rushed towards the momentarily shocked Pakura as she made hand seals as fast as her dexterity allowed her, before unsheathing her tanto, which began to crackle with electricity.

"Lightning Release: Thunder Blade!"

In two swing motions, Ran's electrified blade slashed Pakura's forearms, producing two small bursts of ash and paper bits. Ruka then pulled out a kunai with an explosive note attached, and threw it at Pakura's feet. The explosive tag detonated instantly, blowing up Pakura's legs and hurling her backwards.

"YES! We did it!" Ruka cheered, pumping her fists into the air. "We took down such a legendary kunoichi!"

"I'll go and seal her right now with my jutsu," Maki said. "You two stay close and cover me."

"You got it!"

"As you say."

The trio of kunoichi walked towards Pakura, who was lying on the ground, motionless. As expected, her arms and legs were slowly regenerating. But they wouldn't regenerate in time for her to continue the fight.

"Sorry, Pakura-sensei. It pains me seeing how you weren't even allowed to rest in peace. But don't worry, this will be over-"

"MAKI, WATCH OUT!"

"Explosion Release: Landmine Fist!"

The trio of Allied kunoichi jumped back in time just before another reanimated ninja landed between them fistfirst. When his fist touched the ground, it produced a huge explosion that would have obliterated them hadn't been for Pakura's warning. When the cloud of the explosion dispelled, they could see it was a man with long spiky brown hair and a square jaw. His uniform and forehead protector tied on his arm identified him as an Iwa ninja.

"Damn, Pakura, why did you have to warn them?" the new ninja said, clicking his tongue. "You just robbed me of a three for one."

"You almost killed my apprentice, Gari, you piece of shit!" Pakura said, as she finished her regeneration. "If you weren't dead already and I had control over my actions... !"

"But our situation is nothing like that, so your threats are empty," Gari nonchalantly said, before turning at the trio of Allied kunoichi. "You should do like me and try to make the best of a bad situation. Since we are forced to fight, why not have some fun?"

"Are all Explosion Release users this deranged, or it's just you?" Pakura angrily asked.

"Did she said Explosion Release?" Ran asked.

"I don't like the sound of that," Ruka whimpered.

"Pakura alone proved to be a formidable opponent. There's no way we can match two immortal ninjas with Bloodline Limits," Maki assessed. "Let's fall back and see if we can join forces with other ninja! We will engage them when our odds of victory are better."

Ruka and Ran nodded in agreement, and the trio of Allied kunoichi leaped back in order to rejoin with their comrades, followed by the two reanimated ninjas.

...

As the other battles raged on, Gai's squad continued to fight against the White Zetsu clones. On top of the larger variants, a new kind of Zetsu had appeared: this kind of Zetsu had their right arms replaced by a mass of interwoven wooden vines, cropped by a flower. Their backs had sacs of an unknown substance connected by more vines to the arm. Their method of attack involves firing yellow projectiles of what appeared to be corrosive spores compressed into small bullets.

"Here comes another volley!" Neji warned. "Everybody, watch out!"

And as the Hyuga said, a rain of corrosive bullets fell upon the Allied ninja. Many were able to dodge the deadly projectiles, while others weren't so lucky, and the spores ate through their skin.

"Neji, do you locate the snipers?" Tenten asked, trying to look around while fending off incoming normal White Zetsu clones. "We can't fight like this!"

"I just found some of them hidden among the trees!" Neji said, fighting as well.

"In that case, guide us to them so we can stop them from harassing us from afar!" Lee shouted, as he delivered a roundhouse kick to a group of clones.

"Sure, follow -WHOA!" Neji said, as he jumped back, barely avoiding a lightning bolt from striking him. "I'm picking up a new chakra signature! Very powerful! Everybody, stay on guard!"

Wind started to blow, as more lightning bolts came somewhere behind the trees. Between the Zetsu snipers and this new enemy, the Allied forces were on a pinch. However, Neji wasn't going to let the enemy control the pace of the combat.

"Lee, Tenten, Gai-sensei, I'm going to make this new enemy to come out!" Neji called, as his body shimmered with chakra. "Gate of Opening, open! Multiple Vacuum Palms!"

Thrusting his arms back and forth, Neji shot a barrage of vacuum shells at the point where the Lightning Release user was hidden. And just like Neji expected, he, or better said, she, was forced to come out from her hiding spot into the open. A woman with dark skin and long white hair, wearing a Kumogakure flak jacket under a long and elegant light blue battle kimono.

Gai and Lee prepared to attack, their bodies also glowing with chakra as they started to open Celestial Gates.

"Lee, now!" Gai said, as he and his protege leaped at her. "Double Konoha-"

"Tempest Release: Blades of Light!"

The Kumo ranimation generated two swords which appeared to be made of light, and swung them at the green clad ninjas. Even if they were mid air, Gai and Lee were able to dodge the attack by sending a burst of chakra through their feet, allowing them to change direction and maneuver around the attack, before they landed on the ground again.

"We avoided her in time," Gai said, looking at the swords of light with narrowed eyes. He didn't know what they were, but they looked dangerous. "Lee, are you okay?"

Lee appeared to be unscathed, but a small cut opened on his cheek, and a thread of blood trickled down from it. Lee wiped the blood from his finger, before staring at their new opponent.

"I am, Gai-sensei. But it's been a close one," Lee commented.

They were soon joined by Neji and Tenten, the two of them already on fighting stances, ready to face the new opponent.

"In all my years as a ninja, I've never seen anybody able to dodge my Tempest Release jutsu like that," the woman said. "One has to be faster than lightning in order to do so."

"Yes, all of us train to be as fast and strong as our bodies allow us to be. And then some," Gai told the woman.

"Tempest Release," Neji repeated. "The combination of Wind and Lightning. It produces jutsu with unmatched cutting power and speed. That's the Bloodline Limit of the Tokimune Clan."

"I see you know about us. Even if Kumo isn't that big on clan culture or promoting clans over the individual. You can all me Sayu, Sayu Tokimune," Sayu said, making a bow. "I have nothing against you, Konoha ninjas, but I'm afraid I have no choice but fight you to the best of my ability. The commands of the one who resurrected me are impossible to ignore. Tempest Release: Razor Starfall!"

Sayu clapped her hands together before making a hand seal. Silver sparkles started to appear around her body, before they shot forward in the form of a barrage of glowing needles.

"Everybody, behind me!" Neji warned, as he started to spin in place while releasing chakra from every single point of his body. "Heavenly Spin!"

Neji turned into a spinning dome of chakra that successfully deflected the incoming barrage of glowing needles. When Neji's spinning started to lose speed, the green clad Jonin knew they had to go on the offensive, or else their foe would control the pace of the fight.

"Good job, Neji, now it's our turn to attack!" Gai excitedly said, as he rushed towards the white haired woman, with Lee and Tenten behind him.

"I'd advise you not to get close to me if you expect to come out of this fight alive," Sayu calmly said, as she made more hand seals. "Tempest Release: Blades of Light!"

This time, two blades made of light appeared on each hand of the Kumo reanimation, and swung them to strike the incoming Gai and Lee. However, much to her surprise, Tenten appeared in front of her, a katana crackling with electricity on each hand, and parried the twin blows. The two kunoichi struggled against each other, until Tenten's swords were cut in half.

"Your speed is impressive, and you had the foresight of channeling elemental chakra through your weapons to counter my attack," Sayu praised., even if her tone didn't change. "However, with just one element-"

"Double Konoha Whirlwind!"

Both Gai and Lee delivered a brutal kick to the kunoichi's chest, sending her hurling backwards, and making her to release her energy swords into the air. However, rather than falling on her back with a loud thud, Sayu used the force of the kicks to do a backflip, and landed gracefully on her feet. And as a final touch, she casually caught the swords of light as they landed.

"Clever maneuver," Sayu praised once again. "Will you be able to do it again? Tempest Release: All Cutting Crescent Moon!"

Sayu swung her light swords in arcs in opposite ways, creating a crescent shaped energy blast that flew forwards in a straight line, slicing that trees and rocks that it found in its way like they were made of butter, without losing any kind of momentum. Gai's team paled upon seeing the destructive power of such attack.

"Everybody, watch out!" Neji shouted, warning not only his teammates, but the Allied ninjas that were fighting Zetsu clones and other reanimations around him. "Do not let that jutsu touch you under any circumstances!"

Thankfully, most ninjas that heard Neji were able disengage and jump away in time in order to avoid the attack. Others weren't so lucky, and were caught in the area of effect. While some Allied ninjas and Zetsu clones only lost either an arm or a leg, the less fortunate ones were cleanly cut in half, dying almost instantly.

"The cutting power of her attacks is too great. Any idea on how are we going to counter it?" Lee asked, as he eyed the Kumo reanimation.

"Tempest is the combination between Wind and Lightning. We'd need Wind and Fire to stop it," Neji replied. "And sadly, the only member of our squad that uses elemental ninjutsu is Tenten, and she only knows Lightning jutsu."

"In that case, we have no option but dodge her attacks and try to get close to her," Lee guessed. "We already did it once, I'm sure we can do it again!"

Meanwhile, Sayu made a chain of hand seals as she prepared her next attack.

"Unfortunately, this jutsu isn't as easy to block as the ones before," Sayu warned, and slammed her hands into the ground once she made all the seals. "Tempest Release: Slash of the White Tiger!"

Suddenly, five vertical blades of light emerged from Sayu's hands, moving forward. They grew in size as they advanced, while carving five furrows onto the ground. The gap between each blade also grew bigger as they moved, with arcs of lightning jumping between each blade. The effect was as if a giant beast was slashing the ground with an invisible paw.

"I'll try to stop it!" Neji said, as he rushed forward to meet the deadly attack in the middle. "Gate of Healing, open! Gate of Life, open!"

"Neji, wait!" Lee tried to stop his teammate, but it was in vain.

"Heavely Spinning Lotus!"

Neji turned into a blue and green chakra dome of spinning chakra, much larger than the normal Heavenly Spin, and moved to intercept the attack. The five vertical blades crashed against the spinning dome, both attacks trying to grind each other, until the former started to push the latter back. Neji released even more chakra and increased the rotation speed in return. Eventually, it proved to be too much, and the five blades of light shattered in a million dots of light.

Still, Neji didn't stop. He advanced towards the Kumo reanimation, carving a large furrow as he moved.

"A Heavenly Spin that allows the user to move while he's casting it... I fought many Hyugas when I was alive, yet none of them managed to push their clan's taijutsu to such levels," Sayu complimented, as she started to make hand seals. "Let's see if you did something about that glaring weakness of yours! Lightning Release: Lightning Flash!"

Sayu's body crackled with electricity for a second, before it was engulfed by a massive and bright flash of light. The effect was immediate, and Neji abruptly stopped spinning, tripping on his feet before falling to the ground, hands clutching his eyes.

"MY EYES!" Neji shouted in pain, as tears of pain streamed from his hurt eyes.

"I see not. Disappointing," Sayu said mostly to herself, shaking her head. She started to make hand seals again. "Unfortunately, you won't have the chance to-"

Suddenly, several kunai landed around her, stabbing themselves into the ground with a thud each, followed by Tenten, already making a hand seal. Each kunai had an explosive tag attached to them, which was already burning, and a couple seconds later, Sayu found herself engulfed by a chain of explosions.

"Well done, Tenten!" Gai praised, as he and Lee landed behind her. Lee quickly but carefully helped Neji back on his feet.

"Thanks, but I'm afraid something so basic won't be able to keep her down," Tenten said, her eyes fixed on the cloud of smoke.

And indeed, just like she said, a powerful gust of wind dispelled the cloud of smoke, revealing Sayu, her arms wide open, and her damaged body slowly regenerating.

"It's okay, you already did enough," Gai told Tenten, before turning at Lee and Tenten. "Stay with Neji until his sight gets better."

"Yes, Gai-sensei," Tenten replied, nodding.

"She's a formidable opponent, Gai-sensei. Won't you need our help?" Lee questioned.

"You're right, Lee, she's a magnificent adversary. But don't worry, since now that I saw how her jutsu works, I know the perfect way to counter it!" Gai told him, as he pulled out a pair of nunchakus from his backpack. "Tenten, I need you to stay close to seal that reanimation once I incapacitate her."

"Understood, Gai-sensei. Please be careful," Tenten said before she and Lee took Neji away, leaving Gai alone against the white haired woman.

Gai walked calmly towards the Kumo reanimation, a confident grin on his face, while skillfully twirling his nunchakus around. Sayu saw this, and raised an eyebrow.

"So, you plan to beat me all by yourself?" Sayu asked, cocking her head to the side. "No matter how good you are with those weapons, they won't be enough to beat my Bloodline Limit."

"Then I'll be more than happy to prove you wrong!" Gai excitedly said. "Gate of Pain, open!"

A blue aura appeared around the green clad Jonin the moment he opened the fourth gate, as chakra poured from every pore of his body, raising gusts of wind in every direction.

"An impressive power up. Let's see if it can really help you," Sayu replied, as her hands started to fly through hand seals. "Tempest Release: Deadly Light Blossom!"

Sayu pulled several shuriken from her ninja tool pouch, and infused them with both lightning and wind, before tossing them at Gai. The two elements combined, granting the shuriken a star shaped aura, greatly increasing their cutting range. It reminded Gai of Naruto's Rasenshuriken. They even made a similar loud whirring noise.

Gai rushed forward, while channeling chakra through his nunchakus, while he made them spin at an even faster pace, producing a strong wind current. Using his enhanced weapons, he quickly deflected the incoming elemental shuriken away, careful they weren't towards areas with allied ninjas fighting.

"You... you deflected my all-cutting shuriken? Impossible!" Sayu cried, as she made more hand seals. "This is something you won't be able to deflect! Tempest Release: Razor Starfall!"

Casting her hands forward after clapping them together, Sayu send a storm of light needles towards Gai. Gai had to admit she was right, there's no way he could deflect projectiles so tiny, some of them would slip past him. Fortunately, he had another way to counter the attack.

"I don't need to deflect your jutsu if it never gets close to touch me!" Gai said, as he started to twirl his nunchakus at an even faster speed, before facing them towards Sayu. "Winds of Youth, blow everything away!"

The nunchakus spun so fast, they started to raise a very powerful gust of wind, taking the shape of two tornadoes. The light needles caught in the wind quickly slowed down, until they disappeared completely. None of them managed to reach the green clad Jonin.

"The Razor Starfall too? How can you nullify all my jutsu?" Sayu asked in disbelief.

"People tend to look up to ninjutsu and underestimate taijutsu, and they don't realize that there's more to taijutsu than just punching and kicking!" Gai shouted, as he took a fighting stance. "I let you attack me twice, now I believe it's my turn to strike!"

Gai crossed the gap between the two of them in less than a second, and swung his nunchaku at the Kumo reanimation. However, the white haired woman was fast enough to generale a blade made of wind anf lightning on each hand, parrying Gai's swings.

"Don't think I'm harmless in close combat just because I'm a ninjutsu specialist," Sayu said, as she and Gai traded blows.

"I would never dream to underestimate an opponent, much less one as formidable as you!" Gai replied. "But this is over now!"

In a quick motion, Gai crouched and delivered a low kick to her claves, making her fall on her back. But before her back touched the ground, Gai kicked her once again into the sky. He then leaped after her, and wrapped his arms and legs around his body. The two of them started to spin as gravity pulled them towards the ground.

"FRONT LOTUS!"

Gai released Sayu just before she smashed against the ground, opening a crater when she crashed down. Her whole body appeared to be shattered, with all four limbs separated from her body. It slowly began to regenerate, but not in time before stopping them from sealing her.

"It is done," Gai said, looking at his fallen opponent. "Tenten!"

Team Gai's only kunoichi landed besides her teacher a few seconds after being called. Without being told what to do, she immediately pulled multiple sealing tags, some chakra suppressing and others body immobilizing, and started to place them on Sayu before she could regenerate completely.

"You were a fantastic adversary, Konoha ninja," Sayu praised Gai. "I wish I could have fought you in life, under different circumstances."

"My feelings are the same," Gai replied. "I know the enemy brought many past ninjas who would be a formidable opponent. Too bad everything that's at stake will stop me from enjoying beating such foes."

"Take joy in peace, not in battle, Konoha Jonin," Sayu told him, as she felt the seals disabling her body and chakra. "Now do me a favor... and help end this war... so my fellow Kumo nin... can return home safe..."

"It's done," Tenten said. "What should we do with her?"

"Somebody should take her to the rear guard, so she can be properly safekept," Gai told her.

"Why don't you do it yourself, sensei? Opening the gates must have leave you a little winded, while I'm still pretty fresh," Tenten suggested.

"What!? And leave my students alone in the middle of a battle? That would be mostly unyouthful, and there's no way-explosion release

Gai was silenced when he noticed the glare Tenten was shooting at him.

"Gai-sensei, you did a lot here. So take her away and rest a little. Neji, Lee and I may be your students, but we aren't little kids anymore. We will be fine," Tenten chastised the older man.

"A good ninja always recognizes a battle he can't win," Gai said in resignation, but in good humor. He threw Sayu's body over his shoulder, and leaped away. "I'll be back as soon as possible!"

...

Allied Ninja HQ

Inside the Allied Headquarters, Supreme commander Jiraiya and the military experts and advisors brought by the other villages were contemplating the course of the battles, and devising strategies according to them.

A multitude of sensory ninja had been linked together through a machine, and were using their expanded senses to monitor how the battles were going. So far, there were only minor skirmishes going on, with the exception of Kurotsuchi's second division, which were fighting a large force of Akatsuki, and could be considered a real battle.

"Supreme Commander, news from Kurotsuchi!" Ao shouted. "The Second Division is losing ground against the enemy! New mutant variants of the Zetsu clones with increased strenght and ranged capabilities are giving them some trouble. Plus several reanimated ninja with powerful Bloodline Limits. Even if one of them have been defeated, the number of casualties has been high."

"Should we divert some troops from other divisions in order to reinforce her position?" Onoki suggested. Even if he was trying to hide it, one could tell he was worried for his granddaughter.

"I suspect that's what the enemy is expecting us to do," Chiyo replied. "Then they'll move to attack our less reinforced positions. We can't allow them to do that."

"While I agree with Chiyo-san," Shikaku said. "We can't afford to lose ground so early in the war. We need to find a way to reinforce their position without compromising our other fronts."

Jiraiya, however, smirked confidently. "That's why I decided to keep our strongest asset in standby, since I knew something like this could happen."

Chiyo looked at Jiraiya. "You plan on sending her, don't you?"

"Indeed," Jiraiya said with a nod. "Send a message to Tsunade-hime. She and a few of her medics must head towards the Second Division's position in order to reinforce them. Let Akatsuki be the ones to taste the power of the Rinnegan."

Author's Note: And thus the war begins.

Aside from Gari and Pakura, I had other two Bloodline Limit elemental combination users, not so coincidentally, the ones that didn't appear in canon. I teased Plasma release with Sasuke all the way back to the Chunin Exams, and now you saw what the real deal was (more next chapter), as well as Tempest Release: the name I gave to the combination of Wind and Lightning.

Once again, many thanks to DryBonesKing for coming up with the names of the clans that used these bloodlimits. The Tempest Release clan name, Tokimune literally means "inquisitive", but the name references the Japanese samurai/second-in-command to the shogun at the time, Hojo Tokimune. He was a man who helped lead Japan in a war against the Mongolian Empire. During this time period, Japan was aided by two tsunamis and tornados that managed to do damage to Mongolian warships and armies. The wind references in the history fit a tempest release user, and Tokimune was also a devout zen Buddhist.

Then there's Sutoku. Named from another former japanese emperor that got deposed for supporting the wrong samurai clan in a rebellion. He was removed from office, replaced by his son, and became a monk. In Japanese folklore, Sutoku became enraged and bitter and became a spirit that cursed Japan with bad natural disasters such as fires and earthquakes. Hence how this Sutoku claims to be a demon that seeks revenge on the clan that brought him and his own clan down.

Some people complained (rightfully, admittedly) that I was giving Team Gai the short end of the stick, and they kinda had a point. Turth be told, fights that are nothing but taijutsu are a bit hard to write, since hand to hand combat is something that works better on a more visial medium rather than a written one. Still, I hope you guys were satisfied with their fight (there will be more in the future, don't worry).

Also, I'd like to point out that Ruka and Ran aren't OCs. They appeared in some filler episodes during the anime's take of the Fourth Ninja War arc.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Hope you guys enjoyed the beginning of the war, and remember to stay safe, practice social distance, keep washing your hands, and leave a review on this chapter! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Battle Among the Flames

Author's Note: Well, not much to say here other than enjoy the second part of the first day of battles:

Chapter 102:

Battle Among the Flames

or

The Land of Fire, on fire

Forests of the Land of Fire

The first battle of the ninja war continued, with neither side appearing to gain advantage over the other. Akatsuki had superior numbers, but most of the Allied ninjas were individually stronger than the white Zetsu clones. Plus, the Allied ninjas also had the Chakra Golems, whose armor resisted all but the strongest of the physical attacks, and their seals allowed them to absorb elemental ninjutsu. And thus, they were excellent at dealing with the White Zetsu clones.

At least the normal ones. Some Zetsu brutes noticed the Golems, and went to destroy them. While the golems were strong, the mutant Zetsu had enough muscle to tear their armors apart.

"These pieces of scrap will help the Allied Ninja no longer!" a Zetsu brute yelled, as he was about to trash yet another golem.

"Wood Release: Wood Binding Jutsu!"

Suddenly, multiple vines emerged from below the giant Zetsu, and tightly wrapped around his arms, legs and body, leaving him completely immobilized.

"What the...?"

"I'm sorry, but dad said those golems are quite expensive," a white haired girl said, just as she landed in front of him. "And dad says that we must take care of expensive stuff."

The Golem wasted no time, and slammed its fist into the Zetsu's head, blowing it into multiple chunks of white flesh. The rest of the body lifelessly fell back on its back after the girl undid her jutsu. Nodding to herself in satisfaction, Kaida went to look for more targets.

...

"Lava Release: Scorching Rocks jutsu!"

Kurotsuchi expelled a large amount of lava from her mouth, which took the shape of multiple burning boulders, spreading in an arc towards the enemies surrounding her. Some found their marks, while others missed, before falling to the ground below. However, while she was casting the jutsu, she felt a foot smashing against her back, and talons trying to pierce her flak jacket, interrupting her attack and sending her tumbling down.

"SHIT!" Kurotsuchi loudly cursed as she tried to regain her balance mid air. As she did, she saw more aerial enemies diving at her.

Right now, the Tsuchikage was fighting against yet another type of White Zetsu, one that had leather wings instead of arms, which allowed them to fly. On top of that, their feet ended in long and sharp talons, which was their main method of attack, but it wasn't the only one.

"Yes, you dumbasses, come to me if you dare!" Kurotsuchi said as she started to make hand seals before she clapped her hands together. When she brought them apart, a cube made of white light appeared between them. "Dust Release: Atomic Dismantling Jutsu!"

Kurotsuchi send the cube towards the incoming Zetsu, which increased its size tenfold in less than a second, catching the flying Zetsu within. The cube then flared with white light, and the Zetsu were no more.

"That takes care of that group," Kurotsuchi said, panting a little. Looking around, she saw dozens of those flying Zetsu converging upon her. "A shitload of them remains. And they can attack me from pretty much any direction. Time to break out that jutsu then," Kurotsuchi said, as she started to make hand seals. "Lava Release: Lava Chakra Armor!"

The air around Kurotsuchi started to ripple as heat build around the young Kage, before her body flashed with a bright red light. The next instant, her whole body was covered in an armor made of molten rock, leaving only her eyes exposed.

"All right, all set! Come on assholes, come here and see if you can touch me!" Kurotsuchi taunted. Much to her surprise, the flying Zetsu did so. Kurotsuchi merely raised an eyebrow, and smiled under her mask of lava. "Your doom, then."

...

"Plasma Release: Light of Death!"

Once again, Akashi fired his destructive orange beam at the Uchiha brothers, who dodged it by jumping in opposite directions. The beam carved yet another furrow as it moved, but this time it didn't kill anybody as collateral damage. Both the White Zetsu clones and allied ninjas learned to get away from the Sutoku clan head, and let Itachi and Sasuke deal with him.

"Sasuke, I'm going in!" Itachi said, as he rushed forward, katana in hand. "Cover me!"

"You got it!" Sasuke replied, as his hands flew through hand seals. "Fire Release: Phoenix Sage Fire Jutsu!"

Sasuke exhaled a volley of fireballs in a wide arc forward, which forced the reanimation to jump back in order to avoid them. Taking advantage of that moment, Itachi Body Flickered next to him, and brought his sword down. However, Akashi was fast enough to block it with a kunai.

"You're fast, Uchiha, but you won't catch me off guard so easily!" Akashi boasted, as he pulled another kunai and swung it at Itachi.

The older brother parried it, before delivering another swing that was dodged. The two of them exchanged blade swipes, though it was clear that Itachi was the superior swordsman, and slowly pushed Akashi back.

"Your Plasma Release jutsu have an impressive destructive power, but they have a glaring weakness: they can't be used in close range!" Itachi said, as he pressed his attack with more powerful sword swings.

"Don't you dare underestimate me, Uchiha! We of the Sutoku clan aren't one trick ponies reliant on our Bloodline Limits!" Akashi boasted.

Akashi delivered a swipe with one of his kunai, which Itachi was ready to parry. However, in the last second, the kunai started to crackle with electricity as lightning chakra was channeled through it, allowing it to cut Itachi's katana as if it was made of paper. Even if Itachi was able to dodge the electric kunai, the second kunai, wreathed in flames, plunged into his chest, just below the neck.

"Got you!" Akashi said with a sadistic smirk, as he dug the kunai even deeper.

"Itachi!" Sasuke yelled, as he rushed to aid his brother.

Itachi, however, smirked, much to the reanimation's confusion, before the older Uchiha burst into a murder of crows that started to fly around him, cawing loudly, and pestering him with pecks.

"What the... oh, I get it, this is a fucking genjutsu!" Akashi said, as he dispelled it.

"Too late!" the real Itachi said, as he appeared behind him, his Susanoo already formed. A sword of golden flames appeared in one of the red chakra construct's arms. "Sword of Totsuka: Seal!"

As he delivered a swing of his flaming sword, Akashi turned around, revealing an orange ball of energy that crackled with chakra.

"Plasma Release: Light of Judgement!"

Akashi tossed the sphere at Itachi, which exploded upon touching the Uchiha's Susanoo. The chakra construct managed to absorb most of the blast, but it was shattered to pieces, and the resulting shockwave hurled Itachi against a nearby tree.

"You think you can catch me off guard with one of those accursed genjutsu of yours, Uchiha?" Akashi said, angrily boasted. "We know how to deal with your kind! That's why your miserable clan had to ally with your longtime enemies in order to-"

"Lightning Release. Thunder Blade!"

Crackles of electricity alerted Akashi of Sasuke's attack, and he turned around just in time to parry Sasuke's swing of his electricity-enhanced sword with a kunai empowered the same fashion.

"Ah, the runt," Akashi said, rolling his eyes. "So, you don't want to see your brother die? Do you prefer if I kill you first, then?"

That moment, Sasuke's Sharingan morphed into their advanced form, as the air around them started to become much hotter.

"Amaterasu!"

Akashi burst into black flames, and the youngest Uchiha jumped backwards in order not to be burned by them, as he flinched when the memory of his near-kill of Naruto washed over his body like a blanket of anguish. However, before he could cry victory, there was a small burst of smoke, and the black flames weren't consuming the Plasma Release user, but a mere log.

"A Replacement? Shit!" Sasuke cursed, as he looked around, lamenting having to force himself to relieve that trauma for nothing.

"Sasuke, to your right!" Itachi called.

Sasuke turned to said direction, just in time to see an orange light glowing brighter.

"Plasma Release: Light of Judgement!"

Once again, Akashi threw a sphere of plasma at Sasuke, who dodged it the best way he could. Unfortunately, just like his brother a moment ago, he was unable to avoid the ensuing shockwave, and was hurled away. Through rather than smashing against a tree, the younger Uchiha landed on the ground on his back, bouncing multiple times before.

"Shit... that was..." Sasuke grunted, as he tried to shake away the pain from his body. Unfortunately, he wasn't going to have time to nurse his wounds.

"Plasma Release: Light of Death!"

Sasuke's Sharingan watched in horror as another orange destructive beam carved a furrow in the ground as it moved towards him, leaving a trail of flames. Even if caused him no small amount of pain, Sasuke made a hand seal and molded some chakra, and was able to use Body Flicker to dodge the attack before it could reduce him to cinders.

"Dammit... I could use Sakura or Karin right now..." Sasuke complained, as he held the left side of his body. He swore he would never take his teammates for granted ever again.

"Sasuke!" Itachi said, as he landed besides him. "Are you okay?"

"I've been better," Sasuke replied, coughing some blood. "If just one guy can do so much damage, I can't imagine a whole clan of them."

"There's a reason as for why they were exterminated," Itachi pointed out.

"We can't beat this guy on our own. We better fall back and get some help from the main body of the division," Sasuke suggested.

"We can't do that. His jutsu are incredibly destructive and have a very wide area of effect. We would risk causing even more casualties to our side. We have to defeat him ourselves," Itachi stated.

"You're very confident in our chances, Itachi," Sasuke dryly said.

"I am. I know your potential, Sasuke, and if we fight together, that reanimation won't have a chance against us," Itachi assured. "Can you use Susanoo?"

"A little. I still haven't mastered it yet," Sasuke replied. "I can use it, but I won't be able to keep it for long."

"In that case, save it if you're unable to dodge that man's jutsu. I'm alive thanks to my Susanoo cushioning the blast of that attack," Itachi said. "I can end this fight in one hit. If I can stab him with the Sword of Totsuka, I can seal him permanently, and won't come back even if he's a reanimation."

"I don't think you'll be able to get close enough to him for that," Sasuke observed, "At least not before he obliterates your Susanoo like he did before."

"No, if he doesn't see me coming," Itachi said.

"So, that means I'm going to be the distraction, don't I?" Sasuke asked. It was something he wasn't looking forward to.

"No. Both of us will be," Itachi cryptically said. "Confusion will be our greatest weapon, and his downfall."

...

Not far away from there, Maki continued the battle against her resurrected sensei, who now had the help of another reanimation. Despite trying to fall back and ask for help, the zombies wouldn't let them go much further. The Suna Jonin decided it was for the best to go all out.

"Selaing Art: Cloth Binding Armor!"

Whips of cloth wrapped around Maki's limbs and body, covering it completely, and leaving only her eyes visible.

"Huh, what's that?" Gari asked, cocking his head in mild annoyance. "You plan to copy the Second Tsuchikage's style or what?"

"See if your Tsuchikage can do this!" Maki boasted, though she immediately realized that trying to compare herself to a Kage would make her sound ridiculous. "Multiple Cloth Razor Whips!"

Many whips made of cloth emerged from under Maki's bandages, and lunged themselves at the two reanimations, like a bunch of angry snakes hungry for their prey. Pakura and Gari were able to dodge the attack, yet Maki was able to redirect half of the razor whips towards Pakura and the other towards Gari, and this time they were unable to dodge them.

"Yes!" Maki cheered.

However, victory was still far from her reach. Even if she aimed at their vital spots, zombies had none, and could still go on. Pakura grabbed the cloth whips, and focusing her chakra, used them to channel a stream of fire that spread through the cloth whips towards Maki. Realizing she made a mistake, Maki broke the whips that tied her to both Pakura and Gari, and jumped backwards in order to avoid being burned.

"Too late, mummy gal!" Gari said, as he leaped towards her, glowing fist reared back. "Explosion-"

"Lightning Release: Thunder Blade!"

A white and dark blue blur crossed between the two of them, accompanied by the sound of crackling electricity, and Gari saw how his arm was cut away from the rest of his body.

"Got you!" Ran said, gripping her electricity-infused tanto.

"Shit!" Gari said, as he broke his momentum for the sake of jumping back. He looked at his sliced arm, which was starting to slowly regenerate.

"Quickly, let's try to overwhelm him now that I crippled him!" Ran called, as she and other nearby ninja went to chase him. The reanimated Explosion Release user ran away.

Maki sighed in relief, as her eyes focused on Pakura. "Good. With that Iwa ninja out of our hair, our chances of sealing her are all the greater."

While Maki's reasoning was right, "greater chances" didn't necessarily translate into "good chances". And Pakura, weaving more hand seals, was about to show that. Several flaming orbs appeared around her, and start to spin around her body, their speed progressively increasing. Maki and Raku adapted defensive stances.

"Ruka, let's counter this! Together, like we did before!" Maki said, as she started making hand seals.

"You got it!" Ruka replied.

"Scorch Release: Blast Wave Ring!"

The orbs spun so fast, they almost looked like a ring of fire. Said ring then exploded outwards in a wave of blazing winds. However, the two kunoichi were ready to counter this.

"Water Release: Water Wall!"

"Wind Release: Great Breakthrough!"

Once again, the combination of wind and water created a powerful torrent that managed to stop Pakura's jutsu from advancing, creating yet another cloud of steam result of the heated air coming in contact with the cold water, blinding all combatants.

"Ruka, get close to me! Back to back!" Maki called, pulling the other kunoichi towards her. "She'll take advantage of the cloud of steam to ambush us! We can't let our backs exposed!"

"You got it!" Ruka said, as she obediently rushed to Maki's side.

"Knowing sensei's hatred of Kiri ninja, she'll attack Ruka first," Maki thought, as she looked around. "The moment she makes her move, I need to act quickly if I want to catch her before Ruka is injured. Sorry for using you as bait like this, Ruka, but this is our best chance to beat her."

Long seconds passed by, and Pakura didn't seem to make any attempt at attacking them. The cloud of steam started to slowly dispel, restoring their visibility and depriving Pakura of a chance to ambush them.

"Don't lower your guard, Ruka. That's what Pakura-sensei is expecting us to do," Maki whispered. Ruka merely nodded.

Then, it happened. The sound of footsteps. Light and soft, but still audible. And just like Maki was expecting, they came from the direction Ruka was facing. It was now or never.

" I got you sensei!" Maki triumphally thought, as she made a hand seal. "Multiple Razor Cloth Whips!"

More whips made of cloth emerged from under Maki's bandage, and circling around Ruka, lunged themselves at the attacking Pakura. The bandages stabbed themselves into the undead kunoichi, stopped her on her tracks just before she could get close to the Kiri kunoichi.

"We caught her! Attack now, Ruka!" Maki commanded.

"Understood!" Ruka said, as she hastily made several hand seals. "Water Re-"

But then, much to the two kunoichi's shock, Pakura exploded in a fiery blast, violently hurling both women into the air, while burning their clothes and some their skin, before they fell back into the ground with a loud thud. Maki's Cloth Armor protected her from the blast, and while injured, she could continue fighting. Ruka couldn't say the same. Even if the Kiri kunoichi was still alive, the injuries caused by the explosion were too grievous to allow her to continue fighting.

"An explosive clone. Pakura-sensei knew that I would expect her to attack from Ruka's side, and send a decoy to bait me," Maki frustratingly realized, as she fought off the pain and battled to get back on her feet.

However, Maki didn't have time to contemplate on her blunder, as she saw in horror Pakura -this time the real one, she presumed-leaping at her with three flaming orbs spinning around her body. She couldn't fight and protect the injured Ruka at the same time. In their current situation, she could only think in one course of action.

"Sealing Art: Protective Cloth Dome! Sealing Art: Hardening Seal!"

Whips of cloth shot from Maki's body, and wrapped themselves forming a dome around her. As the dome formed, glowing seals started to appear on the pieces of cloth, solidifying and hardening it in order to resist external attacks. One of Pakura's orbs smashed against the cloth dome, making the seals to glow even brighter, but it was unable to breach it. Not that it was going to stop the reanimation from continue attacking.

"I'm sorry, Maki, it pains me to be the one to end your life," Pakura sorrowfully said as she continued bombarding the barrier with more scorching orbs. "But I have no choice in my actions."

...

Meanwhile, not far away from that, Maki's students, Matsuri, Yukata and Mikoshi, following their sensei's orders, stayed away from the zombie ninjas, and resigned themselves to fight against the White Zetsu clones exclusively.

"Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

"Wind Release: Wind Scythe!"

"Manipulated Attack Blades!"

Streams of fire, blades of wind, and flying kunai and shuriken all found their mark, killing or severely maiming many of the White Zetsu clones. Though, no matter how many of them took down, more rose to take their place. It felt like their numbers had no limit.

"I'm starting to get a little tired..." Yukata complained.

"I know, but we have to keep fighting! The more of these things we kill, the easier time will have sensei and the stronger ninjas fighting the zombies!" Matsuri encouraged, as she kicked a Zetsu clone coming close to her. "And if we can beat them, then getting rid of these things will be much easier!"

Mikoshi was going to say something, but the bespectacled youth then saw something through the corner of his eye. He looked up, and saw a multitude of greenish-yellow projectiles arcing towards them.

"Everybody, take cover!" he shouted.

"Get close to me!" Matsuri said. As Yukata and Mikoshi did, Matsuri pulled out her johyo, and made it spin above her and her teammates head as she channeled chakra through it for added power.

The next second, a rain of projectiles that appeared to be made of concentrated powder peppered the area, hitting Allied ninja and White Zetsu clones alike. While the projectiles had a corrosive effect on the human ninja -and the ground as well, as multiple holes were opened by the missiles that missed their mark- the White Zetsu clones were unaffected.

Thanks to Matsuri, thought, both her and her teammates avoided being hit, as Matsuri's spinning johyo deflected a couple of missiles that would have hit them.

"What kind of jutsu is that?" Matsuri asked, as she shook some of the corrosive powder from her weapon.

"I don't know, but it was like nothing I've seen before," Mikoshi said, quickly adjusting his glasses. "It came from the west. And I'd say it was cast by more than one ninja."

"Maybe we should try to find the enemy who used that jutsu and get rid of them," Matsuri suggested. "Otherwise, it's going to make fighting these creatures all the harder."

Yukata and Mikoshi nodded. However, before they could move, the ground started to shake, and a Zetsu Brute emerged from underground. He let out a powerful, inhuman roar, while raising his four muscular arms in an intimidating pose, making Yukata to let out a high pitched shriek.

"It seems the enemy read our minds, and didn't want us to interfere with their snipers," Mikoshi dryly noted.

"Let's get rid of this guy as well," Matsuri said, unimpressed. "Come on Yukata-chan, between the three of them, it will be piece of cake."

"I-If you say so, Matsuri-chan..." the terrified raven haired girl whimpered.

The Zetsu Brute made the first move, and charged towards the trio of Suna ninjas, each of his steps making a booming noise. Closing the gap in less than two seconds, he tried to smash Matsuri with a vertical slam with two of his arms, but both she and her teammates jumped backwards, and the giant Zetsu's fist only hit the ground, cracking a crater of moderate size open.

"Such strength! If that thing hits us, we're done!" Mikoshi observed with some unease.

"Agree! Let's keep our distance and fight from afar!" Matsuri said, as her hands flew through hand seals. "Wind Release: Breakthrough!"

The brown haired girl exhaled a powerful gust of wind at the large Zetsu variant. However, much to her surprise, the mutant Zetsu made a couple of hand seals as well, before opening his mouth and breathing a stream of fire at her. The fire was magnified by Matsuri's wind jutsu, and soon the brown haired girl saw a massive wall of fire ready to engulf her.

"Matsuri-chan!" Yukata yelled.

However, Matsuri already found a way out. Rather than cancel her jutsu, she aimed it towards the ground. The stream of wind she was blowing propelled her upwards, elevating her above the torrent of flames just as it passed under her position. However, before she could sigh in relief, she saw much to her horror that the mutant Zetsu was also in front of her, one of his fists reared back.

" When did he jump-"

Her thoughts were interrupted by the incoming punch, which send her flying back against the ground. She managed to cover herself with her forearms just in time, and the armored vambraces on her forearms prevented her bones from breaking. Still, that didn't made the fall any less painful. The mutant Zetsu landed with a loud boom, and dashed towards the fallen kunoichi.

"It's time for you to die, Suna scum!" the giant Zetsu roared.

That moment, several kunai with explosive notes attached to them landed around the mutant Zetsu, detonating a second after that, engulfing the large creature inside a chain of explosions. As this happened, Mikoshi and Yukata rushed to aid their unofficial leader in their sensei's absence.

"Matsuri-chan, are you okay?" a worried Yukata asked.

"Let me heal you," Mikoshi said, as he placed his hands over Matsuri's worst bruises, and applied the Mystical Palm jutsu.

"Yes... I think so..." Matsuri said, as, Mikoshi's healing slowly alleviated her pain. She looked at her vambraces, which had been completely shattered, and removed them completely, leaving her arms bare. "But yes, that guy is as strong as his appearance suggest."

"Not to mention resistant. Look!" Mikoshi said.

When the clouds of dust and smoke raised by the chains of explosions dispelled, the Zetsu was still there. There were some wounds and burns across his body, but not only did they barely affect the monster, but were slowly beginning to heal.

"Nothing but a direct hit with powerful attacks will bring him down," Matsuri deduced, as she stood back on her feet once Mikoshi finished patching her up. "Maybe a combination between more explosives directed with Mikoshi-kun's Blade Manipulation and Yukata-chan's fire jutsu, aimed for the head."

"Easier said than done. That guy's as fast as he's strong," Mikoshi pointed out.

"Then I'll force him to stop. When I give you the signal, attack," Matsuri said, as he pulled out something from her ninja tool pouch and put it inside her mouth.

"Matsuri-chan, what do you plan to do?" Yukata asked.

Matsuri didn't reply. She pulled out her jōhyō once again, and started to spin it as she ran towards the giant Zetsu. The mutant creature smirked widely upon seeing the Suna kunoichi running towards him.

"What, you didn't have enough? Hehe, very well, if you're so eager to die..." the Zetsu Brute said, as he took a fighting stance.

Matsuri threw her weapon at the giant Zetsu, the dart at the end of the rope easily stabbing into the Zetsu's surprisingly soft flesh. The giant Zetsu, however, grabbed the rope, and pulled Matsuri towards him with all his might. Something that Matsuri already expected, as the force of the pull didn't offset her balance, while pulling out a kunai with her free hand.

Once she reached close combat distance, Matsuri brought the kunai down at the Zetsu's head. Unfortunately for her, the Zetsu was quicker, and grabbed her wrist with one of his arms, while using his two lower arms to grab Matsuri's body.

"That was a mistake, little girl," the Zetsu said with a grin. "Now die-"

However, before the mutant creature could tear the Suna kunoichi in half, Matsuri spat what she was holding inside her mouth, hitting the Zetsu's left eye, before said object exploded into a cloud of smoke.

"AAAAARRGGH! MY EYE!" the giant Zetsu screamed as he unwittingly dropped Matsuri.

The Suna kunoichi quickly pulled out two more kunai, and stabbed them on each of the Zetsu Brute's knees, forcing him to fall on them.

"Mikoshi-kun, Yukata-chan, now!" Matsuri called.

"Blade Manipulation!"

"Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

Multiple kunai with explosive tags attached to them flew towards the Zetsu, before finding their marks, sinking themselves into either his face, or around his head. It was then followed by a stream of fire that detonated said explosives. Multiple chunks of white flesh were splattered everywhere, signaling the fact that the giant Zetsu had indeed been destroyed.

"Yes! We brought him down!" Mikoshi shouted, pumping his fist in triumph.

"Matsuri-chan! That was so brave!" Yukata said, as she rushed towards her friend. "I don't think I would have been able to do that without freezing completely!"

"Thanks. Though, I was quite terrified,. That thing could have ripped me in half easily," Matsuri replied. "Not to mention, I had to make sure the smoke bomb didn't burst inside my mouth and-"

Matsuri's words were interrupted by yet by the sound of nearby explosions. It wasn't less the explosions themselves -which happened quite often around them- and more where said explosions came from.

"That's where Maki-sensei is fighting..." Yukata said in a whisper.

Turning at said direction, they recognized their sensei's protective cloth dome, with Pakura relentlessly bombarding it with her orbs of heat.

Maki's students didn't need to speak. A shared look and a nod is all what they needed before the three of them headed to assist their sensei.

...

Maki was resisting as best as she could her former sensei's onslaught. So far, her defensive seals were resisting, but she could feel them eating more and more bits of her chakra each time Pakura hit the cloth dome. And while Maki would eventually run out of chakra, Pakura didn't have to worry about that.

"Come on... somebody! I need some help!" Maki cried, hoping a nearby ally could lend her a hand. Said cry for help was going to be addressed.

"Don't worry sensei, here we are!" a female voice said.

"Matsuri... no!" she cried. This time, she no longer feared for her life, but for her students' lives instead.

"Wind Release: Wind Scythe!"

"Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

Ignoring her own safety (and that of Ruka's) Maki undid the dome, and saw her three students facing one of the most dangerous ninjas Suna had ever produced. Making a couple hand seals, Pakura generated three of her scorching heat orbs, which started to spin around her body. Maki's eyes widened in horror.

"Get away from her!" Maki shouted. "Come close to me, now!"

Thankfully for her, her students listened, and fell back to their sensei's position.

"Are you okay, sensei?" Yukata asked a bit worried.

"I am. But Ruka isn't," Maki replied, as her eyes drifted towards the fallen Kiri kunoichi. "Mikoshi, can you help her?"

"Her wounds appear to be much more serious than what I'm capable of healing, but I'll do my best," the bespectacled boy said, as he kneeled besides Ruka and started to treat her wounds. Meanwhile, Matsuri and Yukata placed themselves at each side of Maki, and adopted fighting stances.

"So, what's the plan, sensei?" Matsuri asked.

"So, your students returned," Pakura observed, and fixed her eyes on them. "You should have listened to your sensei. This fight is too big for you."

"Maybe. But we aren't going to fight alone! We're going to help Maki-sensei to beat you!" Matsuri proudly stated.

"Like, totally!" Yukata added, her love and pride in her sensei overcoming her fear, even if barely.

"You better take them away from me. I don't want kill the next generation of Suna ninjas, and I don't think I'm able to hold back," Pakura warned them.

"I did try, but they're way too stubborn for their own good," Maki replied, as she inched closed to her two students.

"Too stubborn for their own good? Why does that sound familiar to me?" Pakura asked, sending Maki a taunting look. However, said look was replaced by one of worry and even horror. "Maki, watch out, I'm going to attack again!"

Pakura leaped forward, her three orbs of heated air spinning around her. Maki didn't have to tell Matsuri and Yukata to put some distance.

"Beware of her jutsu. Scorch Release is nothing like any other elemental combination. It works by boiling the water in your body, leaving you a mommified husk," Maki warned them.

"Don't worry, sensei, we will be okay!" Yukata assured her.

"Being confident is good, but this is Pakura we're talking about. Even without her Bloodline Limit, she is still one of the most powerful ninjas Suna has ever produced," Maki insisted. "I will fight her head on. You two cover me and attack when you see any openings."

"Understood," Matsuri replied.

"You got it, sensei!" Yukata added.

"Alright," Maki took a deep breath, and closed her eyes for a second. After opening them, she shoot her former teacher a determined stare, and charged forward. "Here I come, sensei!"

Pakura didn't reply, and merely summoned another two orbs of heat on each hand. Just like how Maki was expected. And now that Pakura had her hands occupied, Maki send several whips of cloth at the undead kunoichi's ankles, which tightly wrapped around them. However, Pakura quickly infused one of the orbs into her hand, and making a chopping motion, the cloth whips were swiftly cut. Pakura repeated the process with the other hand, and tried to punch Maki.

"Aiming for my legs when my arms were busy," Pakura recollected. "Smart, but you aren't the first one to try that!"

Even if Maki managed to jump aside just in time to dodge the fiery punch, she could feel the unpleasant heat warming her skin way too much. Her Cloth Armor wouldn't prove much protection for such attacks.

"Our turn, Matsuri-chan!" Yukata said, the ditzy kunoichi realizing that Pakura was wide open, as she formed hand seals as fast as she could. "Fire Release: Flame Cannon!"

"Certain Kill Treasure Tool Meteor!"

Matsuri launched her johyo at Pakura once again, while Yukata exhaled a fireball in tandem. It didn't appear that the undead kunoichi was in position to dodge, but just like Maki said, Pakura didn't become one of Suna's finest by relying exclusively on a powerful bloodlimit.

"Scorch Release: Heat Blast!"

Aiming one of her hands aside, Pakura released the heated air infused into her hand in the form of an explosion that propelled her sideways, avoiding both attacks.

"No!" Matsuri cried.

"Not bad, girls, not bad," Pakura praised. "Maki trained you good. But-"

Pakura was interrupted when Yukata's fireball, just before passing her, split into three smaller fireballs, two of them turning to each side, and another turning upwards. One of those smaller fireballs managed to hit Pakura in the legs, blowing one of them.

"YES! Direct hit!" Yukata cheered, pumping her fist into the air.

Pakura made a backflip, and landed on her good leg, while waiting for the other to regenerate.

"Now that she can't move as good, we should press the attack!" Matsuri urged.

"Agreed," Maki said. "But let not change the strategy. I'll deal with her directly. And when I tell you, attack again. Use those very same attacks."

"The same? But Pakura-san will be ready for-"

"Do not question me, just do as I say!" Maki insisted. "I know how to defeat her!"

"I hope whatever plan you have, Maki, it will be good to bring me down," Pakura said, still standing on one leg. "And honestly, you should listen to your students. The same attacks won't work twice."

Maki didn't reply. She generated two whips of cloth from the bandages under her wrists, and channeled chakra through them, making them rigid, solid and sharp, like blades of cloth that could be used as if they were swords. Maki engaged her former sensei in close combat, harrasing her with powerful and fast swipes, not letting her use ninjutsu.

" She will try to hit my other leg in order to make me lose my balance completely," Pakura thought, seeing through her former students' movements. "I'm sorry Maki. I thought I taught you not to use the same strategy on the same opponent more than once."

And indeed, just like she foresaw, several whips of cloth appeared from under Maki's bandages, and lunged at her good leg. However, this time Pakura was ready. Rather than aiming for the whips, she changed her target. She brought her hands together, and made several hand seals.

"Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

Maki jumped backwards while covering behind her arms, but she was too close to Pakura, and was unable to dodge the wall of fire, which quickly engulfed her. All she could do was channel even more chakra through her Cloth Armor in order to make it sturdier.

"Maki-sensei!" Matsuri cried.

"Don't worry about me! Attack, now!" Maki urged, as she fell to the ground on her back, her Cloth Armor being on fire on multiple spots.

Matsuri and Yukata followed her orders, and ignoring her sensei's plight, unleashed their attacks once again.

"Fire Release: Flame Cannon!"

"Certain Kill Treasure Tool Meteor!"

Once again, Matsuri's dart and Yukata's fireball flew towards Pakura whom, at that moment, her leg finished regenerating.

"I can dodge the johyo easily. And the splitting fireball, while clever, has a glaring flaw in its design," Pakura thought, as she placed herself in front of the fiery projectile. "The fireball will split in three, two projectiles going sideways and the other upwards. Meaning that the best way to dodge it is standing in front of it!"

And Pakura's prediction turned to be true. When the larger fireball split into three smaller ones, they changed their course and passed her by harmlessly.

"Just as I expect-" Pakura was about to say, when she caught something from the corner of her eye. "What?"

From the ground, Maki launched yet another whip cloth at her. However, probably due her current position, Maki's aim was a little off, and Pakura only needed to sidestep in order to dodge the attack.

"So, you were using your students' attacks as distractions, and tried to catch me off guard," Pakura noted. "Not bad Maki, but-"

"I wasn't aiming at you!" Maki furiously replied.

"Huh?"

That moment, Maki's cloth whip wrapped itself around Matsuri's johyo, who was still moving past Pakura. Maki then pulled the cloth back, making the johyo spin around Pakura, wrapping the rope against her, pinning her arms against her body, before maneuvering it back towards Matsuri, who caught it expertly, and pulled with all her might.

"What the-?" Pakura asked, as she tried to break free.

"Sorry, sensei, but this is the end. Cloth Binding Jutsu!"

Wasting no time, Maki generated even more whips of cloth, which wrapped themselves around Pakura, starting from her legs, before moving upwards, until the undead kunoichi was completely trapped inside a cocoon of cloth. As the final touch, Maki placed a chakra suppressing seal on the cloth prison, making sure Pakura wouldn't be able to escape.

And then, Maki fell on her knees.

"Don't worry, sensei," she sorrowfully said. "Soon you'll go back to your eternal rest."

The solemn moment, predictably, didn't last, as Maki heard her two female students rushing towards her.

"SENSEI!" Yukata cried in joy.

"We did it!" Matsuri shouted, elated. "We beat Pakura of the Scorch Release! They won't believe when we tell them."

"Yes, we did. Good job, girls," Maki congratulated her students. "However, this battle is far from over, and we can't let the enemy free Pakura-sensei. Now go and take her to the rear guard for safekeeping. The ninja there will know what to do with her."

"You got it, sensei!" Yukata said, still high from the victory rush.

"We'll come back as soon as we can," Matsuri promised.

The two girls grabbed the bandage-made cocoon, and leaped away. Maki meanwhile decided to return with her remaining student, and check how Ruka was doing.

...

"Plasma Release: Light of Death!"

The head of the disappeared Sutoku clan fired his signature jutsu at the Uchiha brothers. However, rather than a straight line, he instead moved it in a wide arc, in order to hit both Sasuke and Itachi. Both brothers used the Body Flicker to quickly evade the attack, which carved another furrow into the ground, burning the grass around it.

"The creepy voice in my head told me to decapitate you and collect your Sharingan!" Akashi gleefully said. "And you know what? I agree with him!"

"Many were the fools who tried to steal the Sharingan for their own," Itachi replied. "So far, none of them had succeeded!"

Technically speaking, one man did,. The very same man that was now controlling Akashi like a puppet. But Itachi doubted that Orochimaru would have been able to get his hands on a Sharingan without taking advantage of some chaotic event like the Uchiha insurrection. Still, Itachi hoped Orochimaru wasn't listening at that point.

"There's a first time for everything!" Akashi replied, and Itachi had to suppress a flinch. The undead Sotoku clan head made more hand seals, before firing one of his signature jutsu. "Plasma Release: Light of Judgement!"

Itachi pumped chakra into his legs, and leaped into the air just as the orb of plasma hit the ground where he had been standing on, resulting in another explosion. The shockwave pushed Itachi higher into the air. Something the Uchiha was counting on, but his enemy saw as a mistake. Itachi bit his thumb and started to make hand seals.

"You can't dodge while you're in mid air!" Akashi boasted, as he pointed his index and middle fingers at the older Uchiha. "Plasma Release: Light of Death!"

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Itachi thrust his hand down, creating a sealing array mid air, followed by a burst of smoke, just before the destructive beam pierced it. After a couple seconds, Itachi emerged from said cloud, riding the back of a giant crow.

"Sasuke, now is your chance!" Itachi shouted from the sky.

"I'm way ahead of you!" Sasuke said, as he appeared right behind Sutoku, ready to deliver a swing from his electrified katana to the undead's neck.

Akashi, however, proved once again to have excellent reflexes and reaction time when he turned around and parried the blow with an electrified kunai.

"Trying to catch me off guard won't-"

"Fire Release: Phoenix Scarlet Claw!"

Alerted by several whirring noises coming from above, Akashi jumped back just in time to avoid a flurry of fire-infused shuriken from pelting him. He gritted his teeth and looked at the flying Uchiha with eyes full of hatred.

"Oh, so you plan to blindside me from above. You think you're so smart, don't you?" Akashi growled, as he started to make hand seals. Another sphere of plasma appeared between his hands.

"Plasma Release: Light That Burns the Sky!"

Thrusting both arms upwards, he tossed the sphere into the sky in Itachi's direction. The giant crow managed to evade the attack easily, and it lost between the clouds. Panic crept through Sasuke after his Sharingan analyzed that jutsu.

"Itachi!" Sasuke warned.

"I know," Itachi calmly replied, as his eyes drifted towards the clouds above him. "He didn't hit me because I wasn't his target. Get ready, whatever comes now, it's not going to be pretty."

...

Not far away from there Natsu Hyuga was fighting alongside other allied ninjas against a large group of White Zetsu. Her lack of power meant that she wouldn't be of much help against the stronger reanimated ninjas, so she had to deal with the Zetsu clones and made sure they wouldn't get in the way of the ninjas fighting the undead.

She lamented not being able to fight at Itachi's side, but she tried to find some comfort in the thought that what she was doing was also important as well. Still, she couldn't help but worry about Itachi -and Sasuke, to some extent-, and take advantage of her Byakugan in order to steal a peek at how the Uchiha Brothers' battle was going on.

So far, what she saw didn't fill her with hope. The reanimation Itachi and his brother were fighting not only possessed a ridiculously destructive jutsu, but the man seemed to be motivated by an intense hatred towards the Uchiha, which made the fight rather difficult for the brothers. She saw him prepare an attack that carried an absurd amount of chakra, and tossed it towards Itachi, riding on a giant crow. Much to her relief, Itachi evaded the attack.

" Good," she thought. "Come on Itachi, I know you can defeat this opponent. I have faith in-"

However, Natsu's thoughts were interrupted when her Byakugan noticed something. The last attack the undead ninja had used against Itachi didn't merely disappear into the sky, but its chakra spread evenly among the clouds above them. Her already naturally pale face lost all trace of color when she realized what was going to happen.

"EVERYBODY, TAKE COVER!" she warned.

Sadly, not many people heard her among the chaos of the battle, and the few who did simply asked her what was going on. The answer came in the form of the dark blue and gray clouds turning reddish orange, before golden beams of energy started to rain down from above, creating huge blasts upon impacting.

The golden meteors and the explosions they caused didn't seem to discriminate between Allied ninjas and White Zetsu clones, catching both of them in their blasts. Soon, most fighters were more concerned with dodging the lethal attacks rather than fighting the enemy.

"What the hell is this?" an Iwa ninja asked.

"Who cast this jutsu?" a Kiri kunoichi cried.

"Who cares, run for your lives!" a Konoha ninja shouted in desperation.

Some ninjas with Earth affinities tried to create protective domes made of rock in order to shield themselves from the rain of fiery death, but the meteors blasted through them as if they were nothing. Others tried to use fire, water and lightning ninjutsu to counter the meteors, to varying degrees of success. Even making them detonate prematurely was better than letting them land.

"From what I can see, the meteors have a mix of fire and lightning chakra, meaning that water jutsu are the best way to counter them," Natsu thought. "Unfortunately, unlike Hinata-sama and Hanabi-sama, I don't know how to use elemental ninjutsu. Maybe Hinata-sama should try to encourage our clan to stop looking down on traditional ninjustu and relying on the Gentle Fist exclusively."

Her thoughts were interrupted when her Byakugan caught another meteor that was about to land close to her. She ran away as fast as her legs brought her, seconds before the meteor crashed where she stood seconds before. Even if she managed to avoid the initial explosion, she was caught in the shockwave, which violently hurled her forward, crashing against a small group of Allied ninjas. Thankfully, neither she nor the ninjas that unwillingly cushioned her fall were hurt from the hit.

" If we survive this battle, that's it," the former Branch House member grimly thought.

...

"THE FUCK'S GOING ON!?" Kurotsuchi yelled.

On the good side, the firestorm coming from the clouds was doing a magnificent job clearing the sky out of those annoying flying Zetsu clones. On the bad side, Kurotsuchi risked sharing their fate. She was trying to dodge the incoming meteors, but was having a hard time maneuvering.

" I need to get rid of the Lava Armor, it's hindering my moves!" she thought in realization, and with a single hand seal, the lava armor clinging to her body fell apart, and dropped to the ground below.

Even if she could fly more freely now, the short distance the meteors were coming from also made dodging them much harder, forcing the Tsuchikage to return to ground level.

...

Needless to say, Sasuke and Itachi were also taking the brunt of what was Akashi's most powerful jutsu. And given that they were closer to the reanimated ninja than the rest of the army, more meteors were landing around them. Thanks to their training, skill and the Sharingan, they were able to predict the trajectory of the meteors and jump to a safe place. However, they were nearly caught by the explosions more than once.

The explosions dug multiple craters into the ground, spread flames, and brought down trees struck by the meteors. Soon, Sasuke and Itachi were surrounded by fire and fallen trees, with no place to escape.

"This is your end, Uchihas!" Akashi boasted, before letting out a sadistic laugh. "Now disappear the same way my clan did!"

Sasuke and Itachi continued their deadly dodging game, as the two of them tried to desperately come up with a plan to stop the deranged and powerful undead ninja.

" Given his jutsu, he created the perfect conditions for my Kirin. However, as long as his jutsu is active, I won't be able to use it," Sasuke thought, as beads of thought trickled down his face. It was hard to tell if it was due the increased heat or his growing desperation. Probably both. "And to add insult to the injury, the guy didn't even move. Given that it's his jutsu, maybe the meteors won't hit him... hey, that's it!"

Knowing what to do, Sasuke gripped the handle of his katana, and rushed towards the enemy, dodging the incoming meteors as best as he could. Itachi saw what his little brother was doing, and chased after him.

"Sasuke! What are you doing? This is no time for such reckless actions!" Itachi called him.

"We already tried caution, and it didn't work!" Sasuke shouted back, as he slowly bridged the gap between him and the enemy. His Sharingan gleamed in anticipation upon seeing how close he was.

"And this won't work either, brat!" Akashi shouted.

Suddenly, a meteor landed in front of Sasuke. Even if the Uchiha managed to stop in time to avoid the initial blast, the shockwave hurled him backwards. Itachi managed to grab Sasuke, but the force of the impact made him drop on his butt. His Susanoo quickly formed around the two of them, the Yata Mirror appearing on the left arm raised upwards to shield themselves from the falling rain of fiery death.

" Dammit Sasuke, what the hell are you thinking-" Itachi was about to ask, before he noticed something with his Sharingan. "Oh, I see. Very smart, Sasuke," he whispered.

"You must be a truly exceptional Uchiha in order to master Susanoo to such degree, Uchiha," Akashi said, as his tone seemed to reflect genuine admiration. "That will make my victory over you all the sweeter! And no, that jutsu won't save you from the destructive power of my Bloodline Limit!"

"Destructive indeed. Be careful you aren't hit by your own attack," Sasuke taunted.

Akashi laughed uproarously. "Hahaha! You dumb Uchiha! My jutsu won't target me! The area of effect around the initial casting point is completely safe! I knew you guessed that, given that you were trying to get close to me, but I shouldn't have expected so much from your clan."

"Are you sure about that?" Itachi asked, smirking confidently.

Akashi knew the Uchihas were trying to play a mind game on him. Still, he couldn't repress the urge to look up and prove the Uchihas wrong. He was confident he could spare a quick glance, since his hated foes weren't close enough to attack him. So his eyes moved up...

"WHAT!?"

... and much to his shock, he saw a meteor that was about to land right on top of him,

Akashi let out a yell and jumped away just in time to avoid being obliterated. However, there was no explosion when the meteor hit the ground, much to his confusion. It took him a couple seconds to realize what had happened.

"A fucking genjutsu! I knew it was a trick!" He shouted in anger, before making a hand seal, and send a burst of chakra through his body.

However, as he was doing that, he didn't realize that he had jumped out of the safe zone, and another meteor landed near him. This one did result in an explosion that send him flying away. However, his flight was interrupted when he saw a blade made of golden flames erupting from his chest.

"Wh..what the...?" he babbled, as he turned around. He saw that Itachi's Susanoo was now holding a sword made of golden flames in one of its right hands. A gourd formed in the other right hand, as he felt pulled towards it. "H-How...?"

"Yes, I figured out how your jutsu worked," Sasuke explained. "Though I didn't want you to get close to you in order to get away from the meteors, but to put you under a genjutsu. Whose purpose was to make you leave said safe zone."

"That's how you used that jutsu of yours, right? You stay in one spot and watch how the meteors burn everything else to ashes," Itachi continued. "But if somebody made you leave that zone... you aren't used to dodge your own attacks, are you?"

"S-Shit... !" Akashi cursed, as he was slowly absorbed into the gourd.

"Don't worry, your suffering will end soon," Itachi said, as he stood up. "In the meantime, you shall be sealed."

Once the deranged undead ninja was completely sealed, his jutsu was cancelled, and meteors stopped falling from the sky.

"Finally. His constant yammering was even more annoying than those meteors," Sasuke said, as he got back on his feet, and shook his clothes from possible dust.

"This fight is over, but the battle is far from being won," Itachi said. "Come on, I'm sure there are far more reanimations out there that need to be sealed."

Sasuke nodded, and the two brothers returned to where the main battle was taking place.

...

Meanwhile, back in the thick of the battle, Ran and a few other Allied ninjas were trying to beat Gari. Bodies kept piling around him the longer the fight went on. Some tried to overwhelm him with numbers, but such tactic didn't work given the former Iwa ninja's Bloodline Limit, whose jutsu had a wide area of effect.

This didn't go unnoticed to the undead ninja's enemies, as the Allied ninjas were becoming more and more hesitant to attack him, given the sheer power of his jutsu.

"What's wrong, guys? Don't tell me you're afraid of me?" Gari mockingly asked. His taunt only made the ninja around him take a step back. "Well, if you're not going to move, don't mind if I take the initiative! Explosion Release: Devastating Napalm!"

Gari slammed both hands into the ground, generating a row of explosions in a straight line, killing the ninjas directly caught in the explosions, and tossing those near them around the place, Ran among them.

The Kumo kunoichi tried to get back on his feet, but much to her horror, Gari had decided to target her as his next victim.

"Don't think I forgot about the arm you sliced off!" Gari shouted, ignoring the fact that said arm grew back shortly after, as he prepared another explosive jutsu. "Explo-ACK!"

Suddenly, Gari was yanked mid air by an invisible force, pulling him towards an unspecified point, until he felt a strong hand clamp over his neck.

"W-What...?" Gari asked, realizing that the one holding him by his neck was an attractive blond woman with a piece of cloth covering her left eye. It didn't take him long enough to recognize her.

"Tsunade...?"

"Ding ding ding, winner!" Tsunade mockingly said, before placing her other hand on Gari's head. "Ningendo!"

Using her Rinnegan powers, Tsunade ripped Gari's soul out of his body, which started to fall apart into dust and ashes the moment she dropped it. Satisfied with her one hit kill, Tsunade looked around, seeing Allied ninjas fighting White Zetsu clones and reanimations. Soon, she was joined by more ninjas, all of them medics, such as Shizune and her female students.

"It seems that we arrived just in time, Tsunade-sama," Sakura mentioned.

"Not in time. I can see quite a lot of dead bodies littering the battleground," Shizune pointed out.

"Yes. However, that doesn't mean we can save those who are still alive. Spread out, and help those groups who are having the more troubles!" Tsunade ordered. Her subordinates nodded, and did as she asked. "Now, let's see what else I can do. Shurado!"

Tsunade pointed her arm at an incoming group of White Zetsu clones. Said arm morphed into a mechanical cannon, which started to gather light particles, before it fired a powerful blast of chakra at the group, instantly obliterating the White Zetsu directly hit, and greatly damaging those around them, sending them in every direction.

"Damn, that was even better than during the training!" Tsunade cheered, as her arm morphed back to normal. "Though this Rinnegan shit consumes quite a lot of chakra. Fortunately, there's plenty of food around here. I'm not much of a fan of vegan buffetes, but guess I can't complain. Bansho Ten'in!"

Tsunade spread her arms outwards, as she used the Deva Path to telekinetically pull two normal White Zetsu clones to one of her arms each, just like she did with Gari. The moment she touched them, she started to quickly drain their chakra. The more chakra they were drained of them, the Zetsu started to wither and shrink as if they were plants that have been deprived of water for far too long, before they were reduced to piles of dust.

"Ah, that hit the spot," Tsunade said with a smirk of satisfaction. "Oh look, there's a tormented soul that's in need of salvation! And a good beating since we're at it!"

...

With Tsunade's arrival, the tide of the battle was turned in the Allied Ninja's favor. The reanimations and White Zetsu clones, even the stronger variants, were simply no match for the power of the Rinnegan. Once all reanimations were destroyed by Tsunade, the remaining White Zetsu decided to flee. Or were ordered to flee. Not that it made any difference.

And thus, the first battle of the Fourth Ninja War came to an end with a victory for the Allied Ninja Forces. Despite the victory, it left some people with a bittersweet taste in their mouths, wondering if they would have been able to win had Tsunade not showed up for help.

After that, Kurotsuchi ordered for her division to set up camp in the middle of the battleground -given that the battle has cleared most of the trees and rocks- so the medics of Tsunade's division could start properly healing the wounded.

Meanwhile, at the Mountain Graveyard, Obito didn't say anything or react in any way when one of the Zetsu informed him about their defeat. He merely teleported away, leaving Orochimaru alone in the cave they were using as an improvised command center.

Though, despite being on the losing side and losing all the reanimations he had deployed for the battle, Orochimaru was nothing short of excitement due to the discovery he had made.

"Kukuku... so they gave the other Rinnegan to Tsunade-hime," the Sannin said to no one in particular. "That may complicate things... but also simplify many others. If I play my cards right, I might be able to get my hands on not just one but both Rinnegan!"

Author's Note: Well, here's the end of the first battle of the Fourth Ninja War, with a victory for the good guys. Though, can you call it a victory when they needed reinforcements so soon? Well, maybe future battles will go better. Or not, who knows what kind of aces under the hood both Akatsuki and Orochimaru have...

I just hope that you enjoyed the battles nonetheless. I know that, with the exception of Sasuke and Itachi, and Tsunade towards the very end, most of the battles were focused on minor characters, such as Maki and her students. There are many characters, both major and minor, that I like and I want to give them some moment under the spotlight. Worry not, I can assure you that every character will have their chance to shine during this war.

Next chapter will be the aftermath of the battle, as members of the Second Division relax and reflect on the battles they fought, as well as the challenges that fate is saving for them. Not everything is going to be fighting, or else this story would be exhausting to both write and read.

Thanks to Ookami88 for beta-reading this chapter.

I hope you enjoyed this chapter. Don't forget to share your thoughts in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Aftermath of the First Battle

Author's Note: Even if no one has asked about it yet, I'm going to address this topic now: I'm not going to include the whole "Zetsu can turn into another person, down to their chakra signature", mostly because I feel it would make this arc more complicated than it needs to be.

Anyway, enjoy the conclusion of the first day of battles:

Chapter 103:

Aftermath of the First Battle

or

Sibling Strife

Moon

When they exited the cave where the other end of the chakra portal was located, they were greeted with a sight not unlike earth: mountains, rivers, forests, the kind of environment you would see on Earth. Couple that with a blue sky with a sun bathing the lands above in its light, and one would think they didn't left Earth.

Of course, they didn't take long to realize that they weren't on the Moon's surface, but under it. And the sun that provided light wasn't the same sun that illuminated the Earth, but an artificial construct, probably created and/or powered with the Otsutsuki superweapon. When Hinata looked at it with the Tenseigan, she could see a chakra barrier surrounding it.

" The Otsutsuki superweapon must be there, but I have the feeling that charging headfirst will result in a messy death. We should better look around and try to gather information that may help us in our endeavor," she thought.

With the vast area of vision the Tenseigan provided her, Hinata found several villages around the place, and thus they decided to inspect one of them to see what they could find. Thanks to Sai's giant ink birds, they managed to arrive there in a minimal amount of time. For safety reasons, at Shisui's insistence, they decided to land in the outskirts of the village.

"You know, I told you that the village is completely empty," Hinata insisted. "There are no enemies waiting to ambush us."

"I know, but better safe than sorry," Shisui replied. "I know that your Tenseigan can see very far and nothing we know can hide from it, but there's no harm in being cautious."

"I agree with Shisui-san," Nori added. "This is the enemy's domain. Not just that, but we're very far away from the Earth and thus, there's no way of communication or getting any reinforcements. Let's watch our step."

"Understood. I know what's at stake," Hinata assured them. "Alright, I think we should split to cover more ground. The village isn't too big, so we won't be that far away from each other. Make sure there's always a ninja with you in case enemies appear. Everybody with a Byakugan, keep it active at all times in case Toneri's minions decide to pay us a visit."

They all nodded at Hinata's instructions, form small groups, and scattered around the abandoned village in search for clues.

Forests of the Land of Fire, Second Division Camp, nighttime

As night fell over the Land of Fire, Kurotsuchi's Second Division had just finished setting up their camp for the night. The mood was, overall, cheerful. Despite the number of casualties has been higher than most would have expected, those who weren't mourning the loss of their comrades and friends were celebrating that the war started with a victory for the Ninja Alliance, calling it a sign of a good omen.

The wounded were being treated at the tents that formed the makeshift infirmary, and those assigned guard duty kept watch over the outskirts of the camp until their replacements would take their place in a couple hours. Those who were neither injured nor on watch duty were free to relax, eat something, and spend time with their friends if they were lucky enough to be in the same division as them.

The commander of the division, Kurotsuchi, had no such time to relax, unfortunately. As soon as the camp was set up, she had a ninja from the Yamanaka clan, wearing a helmet that concealed half his face which was connected to a machine, which would greatly expand the range of his abilities, link her up with HQ so she could deliver her report on the battle.

"Congratulations on your first victory as a commander, Kurotsuchi," Onoki's voice said in her head. "I knew you wouldn't disappoint us."

"Thanks, gramps. Though I just wish I could feel the same," Kurotsuchi replied. "I had the feeling that without Tsunade's intervention, the course of the battle would have been much different."

"What matters the most is the result of the battle," Jiraiya's voice intervened. "And that's that we won. Though that only means that the enemy is going to push back even harder now. Kurotsuchi, what information have you gathered on the enemy?"

"I think I'll need to write it down in order to include all the details, but I'll try to give you a summarized version. First of all, the White Zetsu clones. You said that the clones used in the attack on Konoha were all human looking, right?"

" Indeed. Though some of them could merge into a single creature to form a much stronger being," Jiraiya replied. "Did you encounter such variant?"

"None of my ninja reported such thing happening, though one of the Zetsu variants we fought was much larger than normal, with large muscles and additional limbs," Kurotsuchi began.

" Maybe they merged before the battle began?" a new voice, one belonging to an older woman, offered.

" I find that unlikely, Chiyo-san," Onoki replied. "Since my granddaughter alluded to more than one Zetsu variant."

"Right. Other than the larger ones, which we called Brutes, there were Zetsu clones whose right arms, and only the right arms, looked like some sort of mass of tangle vines with sacs, ending in a cannon shaped like a flower. They could fire projectiles made of compressed corrosive spores from great distance. We called those Snipers."

" We can only assume that the Zetsu are undergoing mutations in order to make them more specialized fighters," Jiraiya said. "Anything more?"

"Yes. Some Zetsu grew wings that allowed them to fly. Some of them call them Flyers. I call them Miserable Sons of Bitches," Kurtosuchi growled. "I was planning to oversee and direct the battle from above, but those fuckers completely wrecked my plans."

" An air force. As much as it's painful to admit, that's an smart choice on the enemy's part," Chiyo said.

" Though now that we know that, we can take the proper steps to counter it," Jiraiya said. "If that's all about the Zetsu, what about the reanimations? I believe there were many."

"Indeed. Ninjas from many villages, all of them with powerful Bloodline Limits," Kurtosuchi began. "We managed to capture and incapacitate about half of them before Tsunade's arrival, who took care of the other half. Then, using the Rinnegan's abilities, Tsunade was able to permanently destroy the ones my ninja were able to capture before."

"If I know Orochimaru, I'd dare to say that he didn't even send his strongest minions yet," Jiraiya contemplated. "And is merely testing the waters. I know from his attack on Konoha that he can resurrect former Kages. This time he might not be as inclined as to send them from the get go, and may save them for later."

Kurotsuchi rolled her eyes. If these ninja with Bloodline Limits that made a number on her forces was just Orochimaru testing his forces, she didn't want to imagine what she had to face when the Snake Sannin decided to go all out. She hoped that Tsunade would be close to lend her help. Still, she decided to bit her tongue.

"What are your orders, Supreme Commander?" Kurotsuchi asked.

"For the time being, remain there and hold your position," Jiraiya told her. "Send a warning if you're under attack again. I'll send you a toad if I need you to move your division or just a fraction of it. Now, you and your ninja should take a rest as long as peace lasts."

"Though, make sure you don't fall prey to night attacks!" Onoki reminded her in a mildly worried tone. "Those undead ninja can fight constantly without needing to rest, so Orochimaru may think in a night raid."

"Don't worry gramps, I already assigned many ninja to night guard shifts. I'm not new to this," Kurotsuchi said, rolling her eyes for a second time in a short span -and feeling thankful that her grandpa couldn't see her doing it-. "Kurotsuchi out."

As she felt the mental link vanish, Kurotsuchi exited the tent, and headed to get a much needed snack.

...

Kurotsuchi wasn't the only one who wanted to fill her stomach after spending so much energy and chakra just a few hours ago. Many ninjas were also enjoying an admittedly not all that tasty, but very nutritious dinner composed of ration bars, surrounding the many bonfires scattered around the campsite, illuminating the place with an orange light.

"First day of the Fourth Ninja War, and we're still alive," Matsuri mentioned, before taking a bite of her ration bar. "I guess if we can keep this up until the very end, we will be good."

Mikoshi and Yukata nodded, before the only boy of the team decided to share her thoughts.

"Easier said than done, given all the trouble Pakura gave Maki-sensei," Mikoshi spoke. "Not to mention the other reanimations. And we'll need to win battles without Tsunade's help. She can't be in every battlefield at once."

"Hey, we were doing pretty good, aren't we?" Yukata replied. "Why are you being such a downer?"

"I'm not being a downer, I'm being realist," Mikoshi insisted. "We barely-"

"Yukata is right, you now," a new voice said. The trio of Suna ninjas turned their heads at the source, and saw their sensei taking a seat close to them. "Keeping a high spirit is paramount to win a war. Your teammates need you at your best, Mikoshi-kun. Think how to best keep them alive, not how we're doomed."

"I... I will. Sorry, Maki-sensei," Mikoshi said, bowing his head.

"It's okay, no need to apologize. I know how you feel," Maki said. "You guys are young, and have been thrust into a war. It's normal to be afraid. What it's not acceptable is to wallow in fear. That's what your friends and teammates are for. You can rely on them whenever you need them."

"See? Everything's going to be okay as long as you have us to take care of you!" Matsuri said, as she ruffled the bespectacled boy's hair, in an attempt to lighten the mood, much to his annoyance.

"By the way, Matsuri, this is for you," Maki said, as she handed the brown haired girl a medium sized item wrapped in cloth.

After undoing the cloth wrapping, Matsuri's eyes gleamed with joy upon seeing what her sensei gave her.

"New vambraces!" Matsuri squealed, as she wasted no time and put them on, despite the fact that they weren't in battle.

"The supply caravan arrived not long ago. They brought us lots of new kunai, shuriken, body armors, and medical supplies. I asked if they also had vambraces, and fortunately, they also brought some," Maki explained.

"Thanks a lot, Maki-sensei!" Matsuri replied. "Don't worry, I'll make sure these last longer before they break."

Maki let out a weary sigh. "Please don't do that. Your life is worth much more than some mere forearm guards. If you need to break them to live, do so," the Suna Jonin said, before clearing her throat. "So, this was your first battle in a real war. How are you feeling right now?"

"I'm still a bit shaken from before, but I feel better now," Yukata replied.

"Same as Yukata-chan. I was kind of afraid. And I still am, since we'll be called into battle again," Matsuri replied. "Though I'm not as uneasy now as I was before the war began. I know what to expect now."

"I..." Mikoshi began, his lips quivering, sounding a bit hesitant. "... all the people dying around us... even if most of them were ninjas we didn't even know... it was horrifying."

"It is," Maki sadly agreed with a nod. "And before you ask, no, it doesn't get better the more you see it. If it does get any better, then you should start worrying."

"I see," the bespectacled boy said. "I was so glad I could keep that Kiri kunoichi alive until the real medics arrived the scene."

"You mean Ruka? Yes, I'm sure she's really grateful to you," Maki earnestly told him.

"Sensei, you fought in the Third War, did you?" Yukata asked. "You had to be around our age when that happened."

"You're right about your latter assesment, but no, I didn't fight during the Third War," Maki confessed, surprising her students. "I was a mere Genin, and Genin aren't allowed in the frontlines. At least, in Suna's case."

"And what did you do while it happened?" Mikoshi asked.

"Patrol the village alongside other Genin, and sometimes I was made part of the groups that provided escort to the supply caravans to the front lines," Maki explained. "It was a job I hated, and thought that I could do more in the front lines. Boy, was I naïve back then."

"It's normal to think that. After all the training we undergo in the Academy, and then under a Jonin-sensei... when we do small jobs even a civilian could do, it feels like our talents are being wasted," Mikoshi said. "Though a war might be going too much in the opposite direction."

"Exactly," Maki agreed, nodding.

"What do you think about us, sensei? Do you think we're ready?" Yukata asked.

Maki chuckled in response. "It's a bit late to be asking that, isn't it?" Maki asked, making Yukata look a bit uneasy. She did catch the hidden meaning behind that question, though. "As my students, keeping you alive is my responsibility, and sometimes I feel afraid that you might die out there, maybe because I didn't train you as well as I could, or because I'm not there to protect you. Today you three showed me it's not the case. In fact, I might have been the one biting the dust if it wasn't for your timely arrival."

"Yay! We're useful!" Yukata cheered. Maki smiling happily upon seeing that her words managed to soothe the raven haired girl.

"Of course we are. All of us did a good job during our first day of hell," Matsuri interceded. "Let's keep doing our best so we can help end this war as soon as possible!"

...

Meanwhile, not far away from there, another team was also enjoying some food in peace across another bonfire. One of those team members was also being in the company of his girlfriend, whom he hasn't been with in some time.

"So, how do you feel, Neji-kun?" the redhead asked.

"I'm fine. Just like I was the other five times you asked," Neji told Karin, trying to resist the urge to roll his eyes. "You treated me yourself. Do you doubt your medical capabilities so much?"

"I know. But you used the Celestial Gates. And your body is quite the wreck when you do that," Karin replied. "I want to make sure you're at your best."

"You can breathe in relief knowing that that's the case," Neji insisted. "Gai-sensei, though, might be a completely different story. He had to open up to five Gates. Not only did he need more medical attention, but he'll have to remain bedridden for the next day, at the very least."

Karin's expression turned into a scowl upon hearing that. "I don't like the Eight Gates at all. They may give you a power boost, but given the backlash, I'd say they aren't worth it."

"They can signify the difference between life and death," Neji rebuked. "I only try to use them as a last resort against opponents my current power and skill are not enough to beat."

"If you're looking for a power boost, why don't you ask Naruto to teach you Sage Mode? It's pretty neat, and carries almost no risk," Karin explained.

Naji quirked an eyebrow. "No risk? Didn't you say that you could turn into a statue if you don't control it properly?"

"Eh, that's mostly at the beginning," Karin said with a dismissive hand wave. "Once you learn to control the nature energy and properly mix it with your chakra, it's pretty easy."

"I'm afraid that, for the time being, that won't be an option, given that we're in the middle of a war," Neji replied. "But I may take on your offer once the war is won and we return home."

Karin seemed to be satisfied with her boyfriend's answer, and didn't press the issue any further, letting the two Konoha ninjas fall into a comfortable silence. They spend a couple minutes watching the fire and enjoying their food. Once Karin finished, she took out a paper and a pencil from her backpack, and started to write something.

"What are you writing?" Neji asked, noticing what his girlfriend was doing.

"Writing a letter to my mom, just so she can know that I'm fine," Karin told him. "Though I won't be able to tell her about the details of this battle. Mail is screened to avoid intelligence leaks."

"Wait, why are you writing her? Isn't she part of the Medical Division?" the Hyuga asked. "I remember she told me she works at the hospital as a medic-nin."

Karin shook her head. "Mom knows some healing jutsu, and her chakra has the same regenerative properties as mine, but unlike me she isn't a medic ninja, but a normal medic. Normal medics aren't made part of the army, so she was left in Konoha, working at the hospital. And truth be told, I'm glad for that. That way I won't have to worry about her when I'm in the battlefield."

"She will worry about you as long as the war lasts, though," Neji pointed out.

"I know. That's why I'm writing her," Karin said, this time she being the one repressing an urge to roll her eyes. "Though, now that you bring the topic, what about your dad? I think he's here, right? As in, here in the war, not here in the same division as us."

"He's part of the First Division, alongside Hikari-sama," Neji replied. "While I do worry about him like any son would, I'm confident in his ability and skill to get out of every battle alive. Not that he's alone, though. He had many comrades to rely on."

Karin nodded, as she continued writing her letter to her mother, with Neji sometimes stopping her to ask what she was writing in particular, and even offering some input about what she could tell M ariko. After that, Neji and Karin continued talking with each other until they were too tired to remain awake, and returned to their respective beds.

...

"Today, you used the Rinnegan for the first time in real combat, Tsunade-sama," Shizune observed, as she adjusted the microscope "How was it?"

Tsunade and Shizune were alone in one of the many medical tents that had been used before to attend injured ninjas. Now that the tent was free, Tsunade had her first apprentice do a check on her body, to see if there was any negative side effect. Konan's words about how only a selected few could use the Rinnegan never ceased echoing in her head. Technically, she was among those selected few, but better safe than sorry.

"So far, I didn't feel any different than before," Tsunade said. "Rinnegan jutsu puts a heavy toll on my chakra pools, but as long as I use the Preta Path to keep them full, I believe there's no risk."

"That's something that intrigues me," Shizune continued, as she began her analysis. "How can you do that? You aren't an universal chakra receptor. You shouldn't be able to absorb chakra like that."

"Maybe the Rinnegan converts the foreign chakra to match mine before it's absorbed into my body?" the Slug Princess guessed, though not even she was too convinced about her hypothesis. "I mean, it works, and that's what matters."

"So you didn't suffer any form of exhaustion," Shizune told her.

"I already told you I didn't," Tsunade replied. "Hell, those punks weren't able to land a single hit on me. This little eye is sure something."

"Careful, Tsunade-sama. You don't want to go mad with power, do you?" Shizune advised, though there was a hint of mockery in her tone.

The blond Sannin rolled her eyes. "You know that I take little joy in fighting. I only volunteered to get that eye because I'm the the best one to take on that burden," Tsunade insisted. "Once the war is over, this eye will go into the fire, and I'll get my original eye back. And enough chitchat, focus on your job, Shizune."

"I'm doing that right now," Shizune replied, adjusting the microscope. "Red blood cells seem to be okay, as long as leucocytes... triclycerides are at a normal level and... wait, what's that?"

Worry crept through Tsunade's back as she heard Shizune say that. "What?"

"There's... some sort of unknown enzyme here!" Shizune said, as she increased the focus of the microscope.

"An unknown enzyme? What is it doing? It is a benign or malign one?" Tsunade asked, sounding more worried.

"No, wait, it's not unknown. It's similar to another enzyme present in both Rin and the White Zetsu clones," Shizune said, as she continued her observation. "And it's... it's doing the same thing as that other enzyme. It's taking dead cells, and using them to create new cells."

"But... that's..." Tsunade began.

"Yes. The basis of your grandfather's regeneration, which also slowed down aging," Shizune said. "As we speak, those enzymes are rejuvenating your body."

"Wow... that's... but wait, that can't be the Rinnegan's doing, right?" Tsunade asked. Then, a realization hit her. "Of course! Those Zetsu guys I kept draining of their chakra!"

"How many of them did you drain, Tsunade-sama?" Shizune asked.

"Hell if I know, I stopped counting after twenty five," Tsunade nonchalantly said, shrugging. "Still, this is a wonderful news. Can you tell if the change is permanent, or it will fade over time?"

"I can't tell right now. I'd need to make periodic checks during a long period in which you don't absorb anymore chakra from those Zetsu, something you won't do as long as the war lasts," Shizune said.

"Though I'm inclined to think it might be permanent. We know those Zetsu clones were made from your grandfather's DNA, and you're his direct descendant. It is possible that your Senju chakra assimilated the chakra of the Zetsu clones and acquired some of its capabilities."

Tsunade walked to a nearby table with medical instruments on it, and grabbed a small scalpel.

"Let's make a small experiment," Tsunade said, as she made a small cut on the palm of her hand. Blood started to trickle. As both women watched, they saw that the wound didn't close, and blood continued flowing. Eventually, Tsunade healed the wound herself with the Mystical Palm Jutsu. "No regeneration. Rin would take less than a minute to heal such a small wound."

"Hey, you just absorbed them today, maybe the healing factor hasn't set already," Shizune said. "If you drain more, you may accelerate the effect."

"And it may reverse the permanent damage cause to my body by my Creation Rebirth," Tsunade said in awe, before she smiled again. "Heh, I had a feeling it was me who had to get this eye. I'm never going to ignore my gut feeling ever again."

...

Karin wasn't the only member of Shizune's Medical Squad taking advantage of their deployment to spend time with her boyfriend, as Sasuke and Sakura were also making each other company while resting in front of a large bonfire.

Before that, the pinkette spent quite some time healing the youngest Uchiha's wounds from his battle, which prompted her to ask what did he do to end up so bruised and beaten up. Sasuke told Sakura about his fight alongside Itachi against the resurrected Akashi Sutoku, and his deadly and destructive Plasma Release Bloodlimit.

"So, you had to fight a guy that carried the Bloodline Limit you tried to emulate," Sakura recounted. "There's no way that can be a coincidence."

"Yes. Some might say that fate has a strange sense of humor," Sasuke replied humorlessly.

Sakura merely shook her head and smiled. "Come on, don't be that mad. You already beat that guy, isn't that what matters?"

"Itachi did most of the job," Sasuke complained. "I was mostly in the way. If I could only control the Mangekyo Sharingan better..."

"That's not what you just told me," Sakura countered. "Weren't you the one who risked his life to put that guy under a genjutsu, which allowed your brother to deal the killing blow?"

"I wouldn't have needed to do that if I had a better hang of my powers," Sasuke repeated again. "We might -no, we will fight against even stronger opponents in the future. And a clumsy improvised tactic won't be enough then. I need to fight alongside Itachi as his equal, not be a burden for him to protect."

Sakura frowned, and crossed her arms. "Sasuke, that's not true," she said in a somewhat chastising tone. "And I'm sure Itachi doesn't see you that way."

"Itachi doesn't see me through an unbiased perspective. He's my older brother. Plus, whatever he thinks doesn't matter if it stands opposed to the truth," Sasuke replied.

Sakura sighed, and decided that her boyfriend was way too stubborn to make him change his opinion on himself. If she wanted to help him, she'll have to take a different approach to the Uchiha's problem.

"Does the Mangekyo Sharingan still makes you relieve..." she swallowed a little, as she herself shivered at the memory, despite the fact that she wasn't even there. "... that moment three years ago?"

"Yes. Shisui told me that the flashbacks would cease once I learned to forgive myself. But no matter what I do, they persist," Sasuke said, drifting his gaze down.

"You still feel guilty for that, huh?" Sakura said, placing a finger under her chin. "Did you talk with Naruto about the incident?"

"Many times. He told me that he understands why I did what I did, that I didn't have any other options, and that he would have done the same have our roles been reversed," Sasuke replied.

"Did Itachi and Shisui told you what they did to forgive themselves in order to soothe their consciences?" Sakura continued.

"Shisui swore to use the power he had awakened to help others, and to be the best person he could be. Itachi said that, while he will mourn father and all the Uchihis he killed, he didn't regret his actions since they were for the good of the village, and continues to serve the village as best as he can as a proud Konoha ninja," Sasuke said almost mechanically. Sakura guessed he was repeating what his cousin and older brother had told him without understanding it much.

"And knowing that, what have you done then?" Sakura asked.

Sasuke turned at Sakura, and looked as if somebody had dropped on his head a bucket of ice cold water.

"What do you mean what I have done?" Sasuke repeated.

"You told me what Itachi and Shisui did. Did you do anything in particular? Any kind of resolution or vow?" Sakura asked.

Sasuke took a few moments to gather his thoughts before he could answer, despite his answer couldn't be any shorter. "No," was all he said.

"Maybe that's the problem? That you lack a clear goal to set your mind to. Something that will set you on a path to redemption," Sakura explained.

"But, what I'm supposed to do? I already told you that neither Naruto nor his family are mad at me and understand what I did! According to them, I have nothing to atone for!" Sasuke replied, his frustration building up. "Unlike Itachi and Shisui, I awakened the Mangekyo Sharingan without killing anybody, either directly or indirectly, yet I'm the one having the most trouble getting over it! It would be almost comical if it wasn't so frustrating!"

"Yes, it looks like it. And I can tell that you aren't somebody who doesn't deal with good with frustration," Sakura pointed out.

"Though, if you want my opinion on the issue, I think you're tackling this backwards."

"What do you mean, backwards?" Sasuke asked.

"Don't you see? You're so focused on getting over the side effects of the Mangekyo Sharingan, that you can't see the path in front of you. Take a look at what your brother and Shisui did. They overcame their trauma of the Mangekyo Sharingan not because they aimed to do that, but as a side effect of setting a different goal. Try to emulate them. Set a goal. And you'll see how in the end, you can leave that moment behind."

"Then what could be my goal? Be a better person?" Sasuke asked.
"Am I not good enough?"

"You're a wonderful person, Sasuke-kun. But once again, you're tackling this from the wrong angle," Sakura insisted. "Forget about the Mangekyo Sharingan. Do a little introspection. Look inside yourself, and the solution will appear before you."

"You make it sound so easy," Sasuke said.

"I know it's not. I'm not even an Uchiha, so I can't even begin to imagine what you must be going through," Sakura replied. "I'm only making educated guesses based on what I know about you and your clan."

That comment made Sasuke smirk a little. "You were always quite the smartass."

"And proud of it!" Sakura said in a faux-haughty tone. "Though, if this troubles you so much, maybe you should talk about it with your brother. Where is he, by the way?" Sakura asked, looking around, expecting Sasuke's older brother to be sat near him.

"Itachi doesn't have that much time to spare with me lately," Sasuke said, as he narrowed his eyes at a certain point.

Sakura followed his gaze, and finally located Itachi on another bonfire. He was talking with a young Hyuga woman, probably the same age as him. They were sitting very close to each other, not unlike Sasuke and Sakura, and talking and laughing together. The two of them appeared to be having a nice time. It wasn't hard for the pinkette to notice that something more than mere friendship was building between them.

"She's cute. I think they make a nice couple," Sakura said, smiling at the sight. "Do you know her?"

"Natsu Hyuga. Former Branch House member. Chunin of average ability. She mostly worked as escort and caretaker of the younger Main House Hyugas, such as Hinata and Hanabi," Sasuke said, as his eyes glared daggers at the woman sharing a good time with his brother.

Such hostility didn't go unnoticed to the pinkette. "Whoa there! I only said if you know her, not her professional record! Plus, why do you act as if she's your natural enemy? Has she behaved in an unpleasant way to you or something?"

"No, not really. She's been nothing but polite and gentle towards me," Sasuke replied, his voice almost growling.

"That doesn't make sense. Come on Sasuke, do you think that-" Sakura was about to say, before she stopped herself as a realization dawned upon her. Her mouth curved into a wide, cheeky grin. "Ohhhhhh, I see what's going on here. You dislike that woman because he stole your brother from you, don't you?"

Sasuke frowned upon hearing the pinkette's suggestion. "Don't be ridiculous. Do you think I'd indulge in such childish behavior?"

Sakura's eyebrow arched even more. "Do you really want me to answer that question, Sasuke-kun?" his girlfriend asked in a half mocking, half taunting tone. "Come on Sasuke-kun, that 'I'm so stoic and don't give a damn about anything' façade you put on might fool others, but you can't fool somebody who has been with you for so long. Especially as close as we are now. Deep down, you're somebody who wears his emotions on his sleeve."

"I think you're mistaking me for somebody else," Sasuke replied, crossing his arms, as he averted his gaze in annoyance. "Blond, whisker marks, loud and obnoxious. Some girlfriend you are if you mistake me with him."

"Har har," Sakura pretended to laugh. "Yes, Naruto is also somebody very earnest, the only difference is that he doesn't bother to hide it. Deep down, he and you aren't that different. And right now, you're mad that somebody else is hogging your precious brother's time from you."

"What do you know? You're an only child," Sasuke spat back.

"Perhaps. But like I said before, I'm quite smart, and I have eyes," Sakura insisted. "You always told me how Itachi was always there for you, as long as he wasn't busy with a mission. I believe that the fact that Itachi only spent time with you made you take him for granted."

Sasuke didn't say anything, but Sakura found his silence pretty telling. At least, until Sasuke decided to say something.

"Maybe I do," Sasuke finally admitted. "When I was little, Itachi was the person I admired the most. And I still do. However, he was always busy with high profile missions and training, and I could barely spend time with him. Then the Uchiha Insurrection... happened," Sasuke said, flinching a little upon recalling that memory. "And Itachi went from being my older brother and my role model to being everything I had, alongside Shisui. I noticed that, even if Itachi's workload wasn't any smaller, especially after becoming the Hokage's spymaster, he made more effort to spend time with me."

Sakura placed a comforting hand on her boyfriend's shoulder. "Come on Sasuke-kun, that woman isn't going to steal your brother from you. Shisui-san married Shizune-sensei, and you have me. Don't you think your brother deserves to have somebody special too?"

"I suppose he does," Sasuke admitted.

"Plus, how would you feel if Itachi was mad at me for dating you?" Sakura continued. Sasuke didn't say anything, he merely let out an unintelligible grunt of annoyance. "Yeah, thought so."

"I hope you don't suggest me to befriend her next," Sasuke said, dreading the answer.

"Why not? She and Itachi might end up dating after the war is over. Wouldn't be the most logical action to try to at the very least, try to be on good terms with her? Otherwise, your relationship with your brother is going to suffer as a result," Sakura told him, making the Uchiha to sigh. And his reaction make Sakura frown. "Come on Sasuke-kun, don't be such a sourpuss! You said she's pretty nice, right?"

"She is," he confirmed.

"Then try to put those childish thoughts and try to get along with her," Sakura said, as her face iluminated when an idea dawned upon her. "Oh, I know! When we have time, the four of us should go on a double date! That way, not only you'll get to know Natsu better, but you can also spend time with your brother while we're at it! What do you think?"

"That... doesn't sound half bad."

Sasuke's underwhelming response made Sakura stand up and scowl, as she placed both fists on her hips.

"Not that bad? That's all what you have to say?" she complained.

Sasuke, however, managed to smile a little. "Good. It's, indeed, a good idea. Befitting a smartass of your caliber."

Sakura's scowl disappeared, replaced by a happy smile. She sat alongside Sasuke once again, and gave him a kiss on the cheek. "That's what I wanted to hear."

...

Not far from there, the aforementioned older Uchiha brother was also enjoying some relaxing time with a girl he had hopes she would become his significant other. Still, Itachi didn't hold his breath. Despite he and Natsu clicked from the very beginning, he was aware that it was the conflict around them that brought them together, and wasn't sure if the relationship would continue during times of peace.

That didn't mean that neither Itachi nor Natsu were going to enjoy each other's company for the time being, though.

"How are you doing, Itachi?" Natsu asked. "I heard from the medic-nins that they spent quite some time with you."

Itachi smiled reassuringly at her. "Nothing too serious. Just a case of chakra exhaustion. The fight against the Sutoku reanimation pushed me to my limits."

"I can't imagine what it has to be fighting against somebody of that power, who on top of that regenerates endlessly and has an infinite supply of chakra," Natsu commented, shaking her head. "That jutsu with the fireballs raining from the sky was his, right?"

Itachi nodded. "Indeed. He was a nightmare to deal with. I shiver to think of the ninjas who fought that clan way back in the Warring States Period. Not just one, but a whole clan of them."

"But in the end, you won!" Natsu added, hoping to cheer Itachi up.

The Uchiha smiled, and nodded. "I won indeed. Though admittedly, I don't think if I could have won if it wasn't for my foolish little brother's stunt."

"Foolish? What did he do?" Natsu asked.

"He managed to figure out how that last jutsu worked and how he could exploit it to our advantage. But doing so involved running through a zone where those meteors fell non-stop," Itachi explained. Natsu gasped, and covered her mouth with her hands. "Don't worry, he's okay. I made sure nothing bad happened to him."

Natsu exhaled in relief. "That boy is sure reckless."

"That, he is. I think he was counting on me to realize what was going on, and fortunately for both, I did, and between the two of us we managed to defeat him," Itachi replied, before letting out a sigh. "I think I need to have a talk with Sasuke about doing something like that again in case we're forced to face such a formidable enemy."

"It was risky indeed. But if in the end you got the desired result... isn't that what matters?" Natsu asked. Itachi's eyes looked at her with genuine surprise. "Sometimes, the safe path isn't the best route. Sometimes... you need to take a risk if you want to gain something."

Itachi chuckled in response, making the Hyuga frown a little.

"Did you find anything I said funny?" Natsu asked. "Or do I look like the kind of person who doesn't like risks?"

"The latter," Itachi admitted. "I'm sorry if my assumption offended you."

"No, it's okay. I don't look the part, do I?" Natsu replied, chuckling as she relaxed a little. "I confess that I'm not somebody who took many risks in my life. Not that I had the chance to take them, given the circumstances of my birth. But I did see others taking risks, some of them for my sake and others in the same situation. If it wasn't for them, I would still be a slave in all but name to the Main House."

"You talk about the recent reforms of the Hyuga Clan under Hinata," Itachi pointed out.

Natsu nodded. "Hiashi-sama was a good clan head. Strong and competent, who wanted to keep our clan as powerful as it was. But even if he knew that the clan division was wrong, he was too afraid to upset the status quo. The Hyuga was a clan attached to traditions, and believed that making reforms of such scale would cause infighting."

"And weaken the clan from the inside," Itachi continued, earning a nod from the Hyuga.

"Exactly. However, Hikari-sama and Hinata-sama knew that the clan couldn't be strong if it continued divided as it was. They worked to undo that division, first by abolishing the Branch and Main houses altogether, earning the ire from our more traditionalist clanmates," Natsu explained. "And then we took an even greater risk when we allowed Hinata-sama to use her new power on us so she could remove the Caged Bird Cursed Seal. But in the end, both risks paid off."

"I'm glad that they did. I did hear that life as a Branch House member was awful," Itachi observed.

"It was," Natsu confirmed.

"But sometimes, risks are too great, and not worth the potential reward," Itachi began. "My clan took the risk of launching a coup d'etat against Konoha, hoping that it would allow them to claim the respect and power they were owed. Not only did it fail, resulting in most of the clan wiped out, but it greatly weakened Konoha as well.

Hell, Konoha would have been weakened anyway had the coup been successful."

Natsu shook her head. "Those situations couldn't be more different. The Branch House was genuinely oppressed under the Main House. The Uchihas just wanted more power. And accept my apologies for badmouthing your dead clansmen."

"Apologies accepted, but they weren't needed to begin with, since you only spoke the truth," Itachi replied. "What I'm saying is... is a risk worth taking, if the price are the lives of many people?"

"It would depend on the risk. And the lives. Are they willing to take the risk, or is that choice taken from them?" Natsu replied with a question of her own. "I think one is free to risk their own life as they see fit, but shouldn't endanger the life of others."

"That's a good answer, I admit," Itachi replied. "But would you agree with a loved one putting their life at risk, regardless of how good the outcome may be?"

"You were afraid of losing your little brother, aren't you?" Natsu guessed. "It's normal that you feel that way. I don't have siblings, but I can't imagine-"

"It's not just that," Itachi cut her, shaking his head. "After losing Mother and Father... Sasuke is all what I have. The only thing that could be saved from the old Uchiha Clan. After I failed to stop the insurrection from happening, I had no option but quell it by cutting half my clansmen down, including my own father. I just can't let more Uchihas, much less my own brother, to meet their end before their time comes. I... I can't do it. I try not to let my worry show up in front of him but-"

"Shhhh..." Natsu whispered, interrupting the Uchiha as she moved close to him and placed her arms around his shoulders. "It's okay, Itachi. Like I said, it's perfectly normal to feel afraid for your brother. He's young and confident, and his strength and skill might make him overestimate his abilities. But I saw him in action, and he's as powerful as you are."

"Not as powerful as you think. He still has trouble mastering the Mangekyo Sharingan, and his inability to overcome the trauma that awakened it it's driving him mad," Itachi explained, before he let out a weary sigh. "This is why I didn't want him to awaken the Mangekyo Sharingan, since I feared it would cause Sasuke more troubles than it's worth. I'm afraid that he isn't in the best state of mind to be in the middle of a war."

"You mastered yours. Didn't you offer him some advice?" Natsu asked.

"Both Shisui and I did. Though, in this matter, it's something he has to figure out himself. Our advice can only help him so much," Itachi explained.

"You are pretty close, aren't you?" Natsu asked. "Especially after such... tragedy."

"Maybe not as close as he'd want. Our relationship has a been a little complicated since then," Itachi explained. "Though I want to believe things have been getting progressively better."

"I do believe they got better to," Natsu replied with a nod. "That would explain why your brother hates how I'm spending so much time with you."

"Yeah, that would- wait, what?" Itachi interrupted himself. "Sasuke hates you? When did you get that idea?"

"His disposition towards me has been pretty cold. He wants to be civil, but can't suppress his hostility completely," Natsu explained, much to Itachi's consternation.

"Was he rude to you? Did he tell you to get away from me or something like that?" Itachi asked, fearing the answer.

Natsu, however, merely laughed. "No, not at all. I think that deep down, he knows he's being silly. But he's doing a poor job hiding it. In fact, he's been glaring at me for quite some time. Much to the annoyance of his girlfriend."

"What?" Itachi asked again, as he looked at where Sasuke was. It appeared that Sasuke noticed, and quickly pretended he was looking elsewhere. And just like Natsu said, Sakura was trying to keep his attention on her. He let out a sigh, and shook his head. "That boy... I think I'll have to talk with him about us."

"Don't be too rough on him. I'm sure that he'll warm up to me in time," Natsu insisted. "But I do believe he does want your attention. Maybe he feels safer if he thinks his big brother is close? Though, now that I think about the stunt he pulled earlier, maybe he wants to impress you and earn your admiration?"

"Sasuke already has that, and he knows it. Or he should know," Itachi replied. "One way or another, I better talk to him soon. At least, before we're deployed for another battle."

Author's Note: And thus concludes the first day of the Fourth Ninja War. A couple chapters of battles followed by a chapter of the good guys resting up and reflecting on what's going on. That way, I can also let the readers some time to rest between so much action. Still, I might deviate from this format from time to time.

It's always nice to have the chance to write more Itachi/Natsu. I introduced this couple so late, I was afraid I wouldn't have any time to give it proper focus and development. And given that this is one of the few couples this fanfic has pioneered, well, I think it deserves it, don't you think? Plus I do think they have a pretty nice chemistry.

It's also been a while since the last time I did any Sasuke/Sakura. It's a couple I'm not crazy about (mostly because I don't enjoy writing Sakura that much) and that I'm not sure if I'm writing them right. I still hope I'm doing a good job with them. I'd say "or at least, better than what Kishimoto did with them", but that's not a very high bar to clear, don't you think?

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Next chapter, we'll see Mei Terumi's Third Division. There will be plenty of cool fights, but there's one in particular I've been dying to finally upload. In the meantime, don't forget to leave a reviews with your thoughts on this chapter! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Return of the Blood Mist

Author's Note: And here we come with a new battle of the Fourth Ninja War. Enjoy:

Chapter 104:

Return of the Blood Mist

or

The not-so Magnificent Seven

Turtle Island

"Again!" Fu vehemently insisted.

Killer B chuckled as he shrugged in a condescending manner.

"Girl, I already told you, you can't win, I beat you so hard, your head will spin!" Killer B rapped.

"I said again, goddamit!" Fu protested.

Finally, Killer B complied, and the two of them placed a few good meters from each other, and adopted a fighting stance as if they were going to battle. They eyed each other, as their muscles tensed, ready to strike. The Konoha and Kumo ninjas nearby gathered once again to witness their clash. Then, in a blur, the two of them disappeared, reappearing in the middle, ready to strike each other.

"LARIAT!"

Fu and Killer B hit each other with the latter's signature physical attack, and they remained like that for a second that felt more like a minute. Then, Fu found the air knocked out of her lungs as the force of Killer B's strike overpowered her, and was send rolling backwards in a somewhat comical way.

"Ow yeah! Killer B wins again, his foe writhes in pain! WHEEEEEEEEE!" the jinchuriki rapper said, raising his arm with his hand forming the sign of the horns.

"Uuuuuugh! I'm far more stronger! Why I can't beat you!?" Fu protested as she repetadly hit the floor with her fists in a chidlish manner.

One may ask the reason behind this odd clash of strength. While they were taking a break from their jinchuriki training, B asked Naruto and Fu about how they did became jinchuriki. Much to his surprise, both of them were made jinchuriki almost as soon as they were born. Naruto shared with his fellow jinchuriki the story he heard from his birth parents about Obito's attack the day of his birth. Fu, on the other hand, was made a jinchuriki because her parents were killed during a skirmish with Iwa ninjas, and since she had no other family, she was a conveninet choice.

Killer B also told them his story. How he was chosen to be A's partner when he was the only one to match the power of his Lariat, and a few years after that, he was made the next jinchuriki of the Eight Tails after the previous host was killed by the beast itself.

However, the part that drew Fu's attention the most was the Lariat. She liked the move, asked B to teach it to her, and then challenged B to a duel of Lariats, thinking that her superior muscle mass would be enough to beat her senior jinchuriki. And much to her frustration, her assumption couldn't be more wrong.

"Again!" she insisted.

While Fu and Killer B continued with their little duel of strength, Naruto decided to end the break and continue with his jinchuriki training alone in one of the shores. Killer B had showed them a Tailed Beast's most powerful move, the Tailed Beast Ball. However, before they could do it, they had to learn how to transform into the Tailed Beast itself, something they were unable to do so soon after taming their respective beasts. Still, Naruto wasn't somebody to throw the towel when things turned difficult, and decided that he'll master the Tailed Beast Ball even if he couldn't turn into a Tailed Beast yet.

Even then, Naruto and Fu had made great progress in their training. Without the Tailed Beast's corrupting influence, Tailed Beast chakra proved to be incredibly malleable on top of powerful. Naruto was able to create multiple limbs of golden chakra, either with the shape of arms or tails, or create a single gigantic arm of chakra around his actual arm, in a way that reminded of the Akimichi Clan's Partial Multisize Jutsu.

Fu was also able to sprout multiple limbs, albeit these ones were more solid than Naruto's chakra constructs, and could give them the shape of insect and arthropod limbs, such as the blade of a mantis, the claw of a scorpion, the sting of a wasp or the jaws of a stag beetle.

Despite how powerful and versatile such abilities were, Naruto wasn't satisfied. He wouldn't be unless he could master the Tailed Beast Ball. Not just because it would put them a step closer of ending the war, but because of his own pride and stubbornness, even if he wouldn't admit such a thing.

"Okay, here we go. Sixty-three times' the charm," Naruto tried to motivate himself, as he created four arms of chakra. He used them alongside his real arms to focus the chakra into a single point. Soon, red and blue particules started to gather, mixing together, forming a dark pruple sphere. "Eighty percent negative chakra, twenty percent positive one. I can do it!"

Naruto grew optimistic as the sphere began to grew, but said optimism quickly vanished and was replaced why worry and frustration as the growing sphere started to ripple and break down.

"No no no no no no NO!" Naruto said, before firing the ball prematurely into the sea, where it harmlessly exploded. "SHIT!"

" Nice one, brat. If you keep this pace, you might be able to master it before you die of old age," Kurama snarked.

"Shut up, you furball!" Naruto replied out loud. "Instead of mocking me, you could give me some tips, you know!"

" What tips I could give you. What you're trying to do is like walking to me. What kind of tips can you give somebody who is learning to walk other than 'put one foot in front of the other'?" the Fox asked. "Besides, I don't even use the Tailed Beast Ball the way you do."

"Maybe that's the problem. How do you do it, then?" Naruto asked.

" Didn't you notice when you fought me? You're so unobservant," the Nine Tails chastised. "I gather the chakra between my jaws. Then depending on what I want to do, I either fire the ball directly, or swallow it before releasing the explosion in the form of a blast wave."

Naruto imagined trying to do as Kurama said, which ended with the ball exploding and blowing up his head from his body. Naruto shuddered.

"I'm not going to do that. There must be another way to use the Tailed Beast Ball. I know there is," Naruto said, as he continued his attempts.

...

Border between the Lands of Fire and Land of Frost

It didn't take long for the Akatsuki army to make another incursion into Allied territory. A large Akatsuki army had been spotted marching towards the Land of Frost, probably to invade the Land of Lightning. This time, not only with an army of White Zetsu larger than the one the Second Division faced, but it also included Moon Puppets and an even greater number of Impure World Resurrection zombies. And on top of that, it was commanded by one of the remaining Akatsuki members, Kisame Hoshigaki.

Jiraiya ordered Mei Terumi's Third Division to move and intercept this army before they could make further progress into the Land of Lightning. It was suggested to form a blockade and let the enemy smash against them, but Mei shot down the idea due their inferior numbers, and opted to break the enemy's formation as it advanced. Mei herself and the Swordsmen of the Mist would lead the charge, followed by the division's Chakra Golems for additional support, and the rest of the army would follow suit.

"Commander, I must insist," Kitsuchi had said. "Being outnumbered, a defensive approach is the most sensible solution."

"A defensive approach is the kind of tactic the enemy is expecting," Mei had replied. "And we're going to show them how in Kirigakure we value quality over quantity. This division has six of the seven Swordsmen of the Mist. In both large battles and small skirmishes, their power is best employed on the offensive, not on the defensive."

And while it sounded reckless, the plan worked. With the sheer power the Mizukage and her Swordsmen packed, the Third Division broke the ranks of the White Zetsu army and cut through them like a knife through butter.

"We halted their advance!" Mei called, as she started making hand seals. "Continue fighting until they're pushed back! Boil Release: Corrosive Armor!"

Mei released a cloud of burning mist from her mouth, which surrounded her body completely, her silhouette vaguely visible. As she moved, so did the corrosive cloud around her. Many hapless Zetsu lunged at her the moment they laid their eyes on her, but their flesh was quickly consumed by the burning mist, reducing them to piles of smoking white goo. The Mizukage smirked upon seeing the result of her jutsu.

After her, it was the Swordsmen of the Mist's turn to showcase their power and skill. Ameyuri was the first one to arrive at her leader's side. She flashed a sharp grin upon seeing a large contingent of White Zetsu clones charging forward.

"Oh boy, look at all these dumbasses walking to their deaths!" she happily shouted, as her swords started to crackle with electricity. "Thundersword Ninja Art: Eye of the Storm!"

The redheaded swordswoman started to spin with her arms spreaded forward, as the electricity created by her blades quickly enveloped her, turning herself into a moving electric twister. All the White Zetsu who dared to get close to her ended up with at least two limbs cleanly cut off.

"Haha! What about that, huh? Still wanting more?" Ameyuri boasted, once her spinning stopped. Despite all the Zetsu she had killed or maimed, many more appeared to take their place, not intimidated in the slightest by the kunoichi. "I see you want more. Well, I'm more than happy to oblige!"

"Bluntsword Ninja Art: Earth Breaker!"

Before Ameyuri could go on again, Miyaki leaped from behind, and delivered a powerful blow with the hammer half of the Helmet Splitter, which glowed blue with chakra, resulting in a massive quake, shattering the land and sending a handful of Zetsu flying in every direction.

"Hey, those were mine, you asshole!" Ameyuri protested. "Go somewhere else, this is my zone!"

"This isn't a competition, Ameyuri," Miyaki chastised. "This isn't a game either. We stand a better chance if we fight together."

"Bah, these creatures are nothing but rabble," Ameyuri scoffed. "Where are those reanimations? My blade yearns for a more worthy challenge!"

"You're going to have your challenge soon," Suigetsu said, as he landed near the two women. "Our scouts have reported that several reanimations are heading towards our position on small groups!"

"Good! Let them taste the wrath of Kirigakure's blades!" Ameyuri said, her vigor flying high. "To battle!"

...

"DIE!" a Zetsu Brute said, as he brought down all four of his arms down in a slam. Dosu was able to jump back just in time before being turned into bloody pulp.

"More of these monstrous creatures," he said, as he landed near his teammates. "Let's be careful, one hit from them could mean the end of us."

Just as Dosu said that, the Zetsu brute let out a feral roar and charged forward, using his upper limbs to walk as if he were a primate. As this happened, Kin dashed to the side.

"Don't worry, I have a new jutsu I can use to stop them in their tracks!" she said, as the mutated Zetsu rushed past her, before thrusting both hands forward. "Shadow Hidden Snake Hands!"

A multitude of snakes emerged from under Kin's bracers, and wrapped themselves around two of his arms and the shoulder they were connected to. Much to her teammates' surprise, Kin was able to stop the mutated Zetsu's charge, if only because all the poison the snakes injected into him through their fangs. Still, it didn't take long for the aberration to shake the effects off, and moved his other two arms in order to grab the snakes coiled around him.

"Come on guys!" Kin urged. "Attack before-"

"Wood Release: Wood Binding Jutsu!"

Multiple woden roots emerged from under the Zetsu, and wrapped themselves around his other two arms, immobilizing them completely. Dosu and Zaku saw it was Rin who had come to their aid. The bandaged ninja decided that this was their best chance to strike the monster down.

"Zaku, cover me, I'm going in," Dosu said, as he rushed forward.

"You got it! Heh, Kin isn't the only one who has new tricks under her sleeve!" Zaku said, as he placed his hands as if they were holding an invisible orb, and fired air streams, condensing the air into a sphere. When the sphere reached a large enough size, Zaku thrust his cupped hands forward. "Airwave Blast!"

The air missile hit the Zetsu brute in the head with such force it pushed him backwards, however he was held in place by Kin's snakes and Rin's wooden roots. Before he could recover, though, Dosu was already onto him.

"Resonating Sonic Cage!"

Just like he did when he fought against a similar monster in Konoha, Dosu slammed both his fists against the giant Zetsu's head, creating a cage of clashing, high intensity soundwaves, making the creature's head explode into gelatinous goo. Kin and Rin released their bindings, letting the monster to fall lifelessly on his back.

"Okay, one down, many more to go," Dosu noted, before his one eye rested on Rin. "Thanks for your assistance, Rin-san. Your help shortened this battle considerably."

Rin smiled at him. "I felt you guys could use a hand. This creature-"

Hearing a new attack incoming, Dosu's eye suddenly widened. "Everybody, watch out!"

His teammates and Rin jumped in a different direction just in time to avoid a man with a shaggy afro wearing an Iwa uniform could skewer them with one of his wrist mounted blades. Rin was ready to counterattack, until she realized who this man was.

"This... this has to be a freaking joke..." she said in shock.

In front of her, ready to attack again was Kakko, one of the two Iwa ninjas that captured her during Team Minato's mission to destroy Kannabi Bridge. There was no way that the very same ninja who kidnapped and tortured her with genjutsu was back from the dead and in front of her by mere chance of fate.

"You know, I'm not really sure what happened after you escaped me and Taiseki," Kakko said. "But it doesn't matter! You're not getting away from us!"

"Rin, watch out!" Dosu warned her once again. But in her distracted state, the medic-nin was unable to react in time.

"Earth Release: Rock Crusher!"

Suddenly, many large rocks fell from the sky upon the hapless brown haired kunoichi, quickly burying her under a huge pile of stones. Another Iwa reanimation, a tall and broad shouldered man with black hair and a very intimidating face appeared besides Kakko all of sudden.

"Good job, Taiseki. That girl isn't going anywhere," Kakko noted with a smirk.

Taiseki merely nodded, and looked at the Chunin of Team Anko. "Indeed. We should take care of those other Konoha brats as well."

"More kids. Is Konoha so low on manpower that they have to send kids to the front lines?" Kakko commented with a chuckle. Dosu, Zaku and Kin all adopted defensive stances. "I don't take joy in beating up children, but-"

Suddenly, the pile of rocks Rin was buried under exploded without warning, shattering them, and showering the area in tiny pebbles, and raising a small cloud of dust.

"I'm so sick of tired of people trying to kidnap me," Rin growled, as she walked forward. Upon stepping out of the cloud of dust, everybody could see her eyes were yellow rather than brown, and there were deep green marks under her eyes and on her forehead. She made a hand seal. "It's payback time! Wood Release: Deep Forest Emergence!"

The ground beneath the undead Iwa ninjas started to shake, and before they could react, multiple wooden roots emerged from underground. They jumped away, but no matter where they landed, more roots emerged, until they finally ran out of space, and the roots reached them and wrapped themselves around the two confused men, immobilizing them completely.

"The hell!? That little girl has Wood Release!?" Taiseki roared, as he tried to break free.

"Can't... move!" Kakko said, as he futilely struggled to break free.

Panting with anger, Rin turned at the ex-Oto ninjas, which flinched upon seeing the enraged Sage. However, her expression and body posture visibly relaxed, she let out a sigh of relief, and smiled. "Wow, that was so cathartic! I feel so good!"

Kin let out a whistle. "Damn, that was brutal, girl. Remind me not to get on your bad side."

"That's the power of a Sage to you," Dosu observed.

Before anyone could say anything, though, they heard another whistle. One the ex-Oto ninjas recognized.

"Anko-sensei is calling us," Dosu said.

"Some other reanimation must giving her some trouble," Zaku deduced. "Let's go!"

The members of Team Anko and Rin nodded, and head in the direction of the Snake Mistress.

...

While Anko's students and Rin were fighting against one of those giant Zetsu, their sensei was also in the heat of the battle, facing a couple of Moon Puppets, bombarding her with constant golden chakra blasts.

"That's all you can do, you oversized toys?" Anko asked, dodging the attacks as she tried to come closer. She knew her taunts would have no effect on a mechanical enemy, but she was too used to trash talk her enemies. As she ran, she made several hand seals before pulling a shuriken. "Fire Release: Shadow Clone Flaming Shuriken Jutsu!"

Anko breathed fire into the shuriken, giving it a cloak of flames, before tossing it forward. The moment the burning steel star left her hand, a dozen more appeared around it. The Moon Puppets, however, proved to be more skilled than what Anko or other living ninja judged them by expertly dodging the flaming shuriken, or parrying them with small beams of golden chakra. Once the attack was neutralized, one of the Moon Puppets cupped its hands and summoned another sphere of golden chakra ready to throw at Anko. However, thanks to all the noise going around the battlefield, the puppet was unable to hear a Chakra Golem getting close. The much larger Golem grabbed the puppet by the head, and started to slam it against the ground multiple times.

"Now's my chance! Shadow Hidden Snake Hands!"

A multitude of snakes emerged from under Anko's sleeves, and wrapped against the other puppet's neck before he had the chance to assist its "brother". Anko then pulled the puppet towards her, quickly slapped an explosive tag on its torax, and threw it against a nearby bunch of Zetsu. The ensuing explosion ended the puppet's existence, as well as the White Zetsu clones unfortunate enough to be close to it.

"BAM! Multi kill combo!" Anko cheered. "Man, too bad there was no one to record that swift move-"

Anko was interrupted by a pair of Fuuma Shuriken flying at her from above. The Snake Mistress, however, was able to gracefully dodge them by making a backflip, and the giant steel stars merely hit the ground. A reanimation wearing an Otogakure uniform landed besides the shuriken, and pulled them from the ground. Anko was ready to fight this new foe when she realized who he was.

"Wait a second... Mizuki? Is that you?" Anko asked, narrowing her eyes a little.

"Exactly!" Mizuki triumphantly said, as he pulled the second Fuuma Shuriken from the ground. "You thought you had killed me, but thanks to Orochimaru-sama, not only I live once again, but I am immortal!"

Anko raised an eyebrow, feeling more surprised rather than shocked or disgusted. "Orochimaru turned you into a zombie, one that isn't even in control of his own actions... and you're grateful to him? Boy, you have issues."

"Didn't you hear what I say? I'm immortal now! Not only I'll live forever, but I can't be killed!" Mizuki boasted.

"Okay, a few things wrong with that," Anko began. "First, you aren't immortal. We have ways to premanently kill a reanimation. And second, even you'd live forever, you'd do so as Orochimaru's slave, who would release the jutsu and thus send your spirit back to hell once you're no longer useful to him. Hell, I'm surprised that he bothered bringing you back from the dead, given how mediocre of a ninja you are."

"You spout nothing but foolish nonsense. But what can I expect of somebody who feels unfortunate to have been blessed with Orochimaru-sama as sensei?" Mizuki asked.

"Seriously, did Orochimaru wired your brain to shower him with praise or what?" Anko asked, now being annoyed.

"Enough chitchat! Let's see if you can back up those words with actions! Fight me, and try to defeat me if you can!" Mizuki said in a boastful tone, as he adopted a fighting stance.

"Eh, no, you aren't worth my time. But you know what? I know the perfect adversaries for you to fight against," Anko said, before putting two fingers on her mouth, and let out a loud and sharp whistle.

In mere seconds, her students, as well as Rin, landed besides her. Naturally, Mizuki's presence didn't go unnoticed for the three former.

"You called, sense-whoa! Mizuki-sensei? Is that you?" Zaku asked.

Upon seeing his former students, Mizuki looked like he was going to explode. "The fuck!? What the hell are you three doing wearing those Konoha uniforms!"

"They're my students now," Anko stated, lazily placing a hand on her hip. "And they're going to kick your sorry ass."

"Those three useless failures? Please! Even if I wasn't immortal, they wouldn't even be able to touch me!" Mizuki boasted again.

"Useless failures?" Kin repeated, as her left eye began to twitch.

"If we were failures was because you didn't to teach us shit!" Zaku loudly protested. "Now we're going to show you how much we grew under Anko-sensei!"

"Oh, so you little shits think you already surpassed me?" Mizuki asked, chuckling confidently. "I'd be more than happy to prove you wrong."

As the Chunin of Team Anko prepared to fight, Rin was going to join them, but Anko grabbed her shoulder, stopping her from doing so.

"You don't want me to help them?" Rin asked her former classmate.

Anko shook her head. "They're more than able to beat him. Besides, your Wood Release and Sage power would be better used on their stronger reanimations. Like that one. Is that an Uchiha? Yep, I think it's an Uchiha. I remember the custom uniform they wore during the uprising."

"Alright, let's go then," Rin said, before both kunoichi leaped away.

...

"Blastsword Ninja Art: Bombardment Wave!"

Kumori swung the Splatter in a wide arc, releasing a multitude of explosive tags that flew at the enemies in front of him, which he took no time to detonate. Despite the chain of explosions took down quite a few White Zetsu clones, his main target evaded the attack. A reanimated middle aged ninja with silver hair, squinty eyes, and wearing a black flak jacket similar to those used by Konoha ninjas.

"You'll have to do better than that to match the power of the Uchiha, Kiri scum!" the Uchiha reanimation said, as he started making hand seals. "Fire Release: Great Fireball Jutsu!"

The Uchiha exhaled a huge fireball at the masked swordsman, who once again swung his sword in another wide arc.

"Blastsword Ninja Art: Exploding Barricade!"

The explosive scroll unravelled around Kumori, before it ignited, resulting in a chain of explosions whose blasts were directing outwards, creating a protective field of destruction around Kumori. The explosions managed to negate the fireball, however, the Uchiha reanimation took advantage of the ensuing cloud of smoke to close the gap between the two of them. Kumori raised his sword once again, but the Uchiha proved to be faster, and with a roundhouse kick, smacked the Splatter out of Kumori's hands, and taking advantage of the building momentum, kicked Kumori with his other leg, sending him a few meters backwards.

"You Swordsmen of the Mist think yourselves so great with your tricked out swords, don't you? But you take the sword away, and there's nothing left," the Uchiha taunted, before pulling out several shuriken and tossing them at the masked Kiri ninja.

Kumori rolled to the side in order to avoid the steel starts, before leaping back to his feet.

"The same could be say about the Uchiha and your Sharingan," Kumori replied. "Though in the end, both the Splatter and the Sharingan are tools. It doesn't matter how powerful they are, but how skilled is the ninja who uses them."

"You'll find I'm plenty skilled," the Uchiha zombie replied.

"Let's see it then," Kumori said, as he made a single hand seal. "Water Release: Hiding in the Mist Jutsu!"

In a few seconds, a very dense fog covered the small area the two ninjas were using to fight.

"I'm deprived of my sword, and you're deprived of your superior sight," Kumori said. "Let's see who is the best of us."

" Idiot! Blinding me is useless if you keep blabbering like that!" the Uchiha thought, as he silently rushed towards then pulled a couple of kunai and lunged one forward to where Kumori was. "DIE!"

However, his kunai didn't cut any flesh, but was parried by another kunai. Though it was less the interception rather than who stopped his attack who surprised the Uchiha.

"What?"

Because he found himself looking to a clone of himself, even if the clone had a dark blue tint to his skin and clothes. The clone then pushed the kunai out of the Uchiha's hand and delivered a swing with the other. The zombie and his clone started to trade swings, with neither of them gaining the upper hand, as the reanimation realized much to his anger, the clone was just as skilled as he was.

"You said you needed more than what I had to match the power of the Uchiha. So I hope you don't mind I used some of your power for that," Kumori's voice said from behind.

"Shit!" the Uchiha zombie said, as he pushed the clone back, and turned around for the inevitable attack.

There was a loud clang, and the Uchiha saw that what he parried wasn't a normal blade, but the Splatter.

"And while you were busy fighting that Dark Mirror Shadow Clone, I took the chance to get my sword back. Now do the polite thing, and please stay put until somebody seals you."

Kumori detonated the explosive tags on the sword, blowing the Uchiha's lower half of his body, while the remaining upper half was launched backwards inside a ball of smoke.

"Any sealmaster nearby, can you guys take care of that smoking hot Uchiha?" Kumori asked.

...

Meanwhile, not far from there, two Swordsmen of the Mist battled as well. However, unlike the others, these two were on opposite sides of the war.

"I'm impressed that you sought to fight me again after the beating I gave you and your flunkies in Kiri," Kisame said, laughing a little, as he swung Samehada with one hand at Zabuzā.

The former Demon of the Mist parried, and with an expert twist of his wrist, pushed Samehada aside before lunging at his blue skinned opponent. However, Kisame managed to skillfully dodge Zabuzā's onslaught.

"That was more than two years ago. I knew that our blades would cross again, and thus I've been training non-stop for such battle!" Zabuzā said, as he delivered several powerful swings, which made Kisame fall back.

"You can't-"

However, Kisame was interrupted when the corner of his eye caught the Sewing Needle flying at him, and with a wide swing, he managed to deflect it just before it could pierce his body. The owner of the sword, Suigetsu, landed a few meters away from Kisame, as he pulled the wire attached to his sword to get it back.

It wasn't the end of the attack, as the next second, Chōjūrō and Ameyuri attacked him from two different directions, while Zabuzā and Suigetsu placed themselves in the two possible directions Kisame could jump to in order to avoid the attack. However, contrary to what many believed, there was more to the blue skinned ninja than a mere fancy sword.

"Water Release: Exploding Water Shockwave!"

Kisame expelled a truly massive amount of water from his mouth, forming a torrent that expanded in every direction, and violently dragged Ameyuri and Chōjūrō backwards just before they could strike him down, while forcing Zabuzā and Suigetsu back as well. Kisame smirked upon seeing the result of his work, but the smirk disappeared when the water he had created formed several tentacles which wrapped around his arms and body, and started to pull him down, burying him into the earth.

"Miyako, now!" Kumori's voice called.

"I got it!" Miyako said, already leaping towards Kisame, ready to cut him down with the axe half of the Helmet Splitter.

Kisame struggled against the water tentacles, until he felt Samehada sending a burst of chakra through his body, and the tentacles disappeared, as if they never were there. His limbs now free, he was able to parry the admittedly powerful blow from the blue haired kunoichi.

"Distracting me with a genjutsu while you go for the kill," Kisame said in realization. "Clever. It would have worked on any other ninja, but Samehada can disrupt my chakra if an enemy attempt to ensnare me with an illusion."

"That illusion already served its purpose!" Miyako said, as he moved to strike the axe with the hammer half of her weapon.

However, before she could do such a thing, Samehada burst into a mass of dark blue razor sharp scales, shredding the bandages that were wrapped around it. The scales grew longer and sharper, threatening to impale the kunoichi, forcing Miyako to fall back.

"As you can see, it didn't," Kisame replied, his grin only growing wider, as he swung his sword again. Samehada's hilt stretched to great length, while the sword dashed at a seemingly random rock. Said rock, however, rippled before it disappeared, revealing Kumori, who jumped back to avoid being caught by the sentient sword's jaws. The hilt then retracted back to its normal length. "And hiding from me won't work. Samehada can smell your chakra."

"Shit, not even all of us together can-" Suigetsu began, before he realized of something. He looked at Kumori with an indignant expression. "The fuck!? You can talk!?"

"Yes, we can beat him!" a new voice said, as the Mizukage landed between her loyal Swordsmen. "Kisame might be powerful, even more with Samehada, but he can't stand against the combined power of all seven of us!"

As soon as Mei said that, two reanimations, other two Uchihas, given their activated Sharingan, landed behind Kisame.

"I'm not fighting alone either. I'm part of a larger group, you know," Kisame said.

"That pair of Uchihas won't make much of a difference," Kumori confidently said. "I was able to beat one on my own. With my fellow comrades, they have even less of a chance."

Kisame, however, laughed. "I wasn't talking about them."

"Summoning Jutsu!"

The Uchihas slammed their palms into the ground, and after six bursts of smoke, six more coffins appeared. Each coffin was marked with the kanji of "water" on their respective lids. Said lids then fell forward with a thud, revealing their contents. Six Kirigakure ninjas. The Allied Swordsmen of the Mist and their Mizukage were unable to hide their surprise.

"T-Those are..." Chojuro stammered.

"... the previous Swordsmen of the Mist," Miyako finished.

The first three coffins had three people that a couple years ago were still alive: Jinpachi Munashi, Kushimaru Kuriarare and Jinin Akebino, all of them killed during the Kirigakure Civil war that ended with the victory of the rebels.

"Hey bitches, we're back!" Jinpachi boasted.

"Ready to avenge our deaths and get back the swords that you stole from us!" Kushimaru added.

Jinin Akebino didn't say anything at first, until he spotted Miyako wielding the Helmet Splitter.

"So they gave you my sword in the end, girl," Jinin said. "Make sure you don't dishonor it."

"I'd die before letting that happen, Jinin-san," Miyako said.

Of the three remaining, one was a man that resembled Zabuza, and even dressed in a way similar to him, albeit he was unmasked, had a cross shaped scar under his right eye and a red, grid-shaped tatoo covering his lower jaw.

"Juzo-sensei..." Zabuza muttered.

"Well, well, well, do my eyes deceive me? It's little Zabuza! Though I see you aren't so little now, hehe!" the man named Juzo laughed. His stare hardened as his eyes rested on the Executioner's Blade. "I see you have my sword."

"It's MY sword now, old man!" Zabuza replied defensively.

"No, it's not. You didn't earn it. You were supposed to take that sword after killing me yourself. Yet instead, you waited for somebody else to do your job for you, didn't you?" Juzo said in a taunting manner. "Ah, Zabuza. When they told me about the massacre at the academy, I was overjoyed. I thought I found a worthy apprentice, for only those who know about extensive bloodshed can wield the Executioner's Blade. But you turned out to be such a disappointment..."

"You think I need to kill you so I'm worthy of my blade? Well, guess what, it seems that it might not be too late for that," Zabuza replied, adpting a fighting stance. "I'm not the same confused kid blinded by anger! I'm not afraid if you anymore!"

Mei silently placed a hand on Zabuza's shoulder, who seemed to have a soothing effect on the man.

"Don't let him get to you, Zabuza," Mei whispered. "Keep your head calm. You're better than him, and you know it."

"Oh, look at that, you ended up tamed by some weak woman. It seems there's no limit of how much of a disappointment you can be," Juzo mocked.

"At least I wasn't killed by a mere Genin!" Zabuza fired back. "Is there any more disgraceful way for a Jonin, much less a Swordsman of the Mist, to die?"

While Zabuza continued trading angry shouts with his former sensei, Suigetsu and Chojuro focused on the second of the three remaining coffins, which held a man that greatly resembled Suigetsu, including the shoulder length light blue hair and purple eyes. A person Suigetsu knew better than any other Kirigakure ninja.

"Brother..." Suigetsu said.

"Mangetsu-sensei..." Chojuro said as well, almost in a whisper.

"Suigetsu. I'm happy to see that you're alive," Mangetsu said. "And you finally got one of the Seven Swords. The Sewing Needle, huh? That's not one I would have pictured you wielding."

"I know. But one must work with what is given," Suigetsu replied, chuckling a little, even if his voice was trembling.

Mangetsu's eyes drifted to the bespectacled swordsman. "Chojuro, my apprentice. I'm also happy to see you, and that you still keep my sword. Even if your training wasn't complete, I have faith you made good use of that blade."

"I did my best, Mangetsu-sensei! Every time I swing this sword, I do so to honor your memory!" Chojuro said, almost yelling.

Mangetsu smiled in return. "I'm sure you do. Also, if you guys have all the swords minus Samehada, I take the Rebellion was triumphant?"

"You can bet it was! We invaded the village, and Yagura's forces ended up surrendering. Mei is the Mizukage now," Suigetsu explained. "Though not everything was as clear cut. Turn out Yagura was controlled by Akatsuki, who also captured him for his Tailed Beast."

"I see. That was... very unfortunate," Mangetsu said, shaking his head. "Though, at the very least the Bloody Mist is no more. People from the Land of Water won't fear ninjas as demons anymore."

"Yes. We made plenty of progress on that area. Mei-sama is a very diligent Mizukage, and works diligently to show the entire world that the new Kirigakure is not what it used to be."

As Suigetsu and Chojuro continued talking with the former's brother and the later's sensei, Ameyuri watched in shock and anger the occupant of the last coffin step out of it. A man with long dark green hair, blue eyes and thick lips.

"What the... where am I?" the man asked, a bit disoriented. "And why is a little girl holding my swords!?"

"These are MY swords, asshole!" Ameyuri yelled back, gripping the Thunderfangs even harder. "Go back with the rest of those failed relics, Raiga!"

"Now the numbers are a little more even, aren't they?" Kisame laughed, as he rested Samehada over one of his shoulders. "Seven and seven. Albeit one of you isn't a Swordsman of the Mist."

"Yeah, and six of you don't have swords!" Ameyuri replied, raising her swords above her head for added emphasis. "Numbers mean shit when-"

However, Ameyuri was interrupted when dust and ashes started to gather around the hands of the revived former Swordsmen, creating replicas of the six swords in the hands of the Swordsmen loyal to Mei. Everybody instinctively took a step back.

"You were saying?" Kisame said, before letting out an even louder laugh.

...

Back in the Akatsuki secret lair, Orochimaru was kneeled in front of a board with white and black pellets on it, that he was using to plan his fight, as well as to better monitor his undead puppets. Besides Orochimaru, the only other Akatsuki in the lair was Obito, lazily slouched against one of the cave's wall, accompanied by a small group of White Zetsu clones. Probably to act as some sort of escorts if Orochimaru decided to attack and steal the Uchiha's Rinnegan. Not that they would be of much help if he decided to do so, but for now, he would play nice.

"With this improved version of Impure World Resurrection, I can also create replicas of the weapons the deceased ninjas were holding the moment they were killed. And since all the seven swordsmen died with their swords in their hands..." Orochimaru thought, as he licked his lips in anticipation. "Now, let's take this chance to gather six of the seven swords for my collection. I can take Samehada later, once Kisame lowers his guard."

...

Back in the battlefield, the six undead Swordsmen took a step forward, and flanked Kisame, whom they appeared to consider their captain, and adopted fighting stances. Mei's swordsmen took a step back, looking a little frightened or unsure, with the exception of Zabuza, who kept his cool and held his ground, and Ameyuri, who coped with even more bravado, growling and showing her sharp teeth at the enemy.

"Do not fear, my swordsmen!" Mei shouted, as she took a step forward, moving close to Zabuza. "All of you proved yourselves powerful ninjas of Kirigakure and worthy wielders of those swords! The enemy only has cheap replicas wielded by criminals who fell before us in the past, and they shall fall again! Now stand and fight, and show the world the might of Kirigakure's champions!"

Mei's words seem to have the desired effect, and restored the moral of her ninja, who appeared now less doubtful and more ready to fight.

"Pretty speech, Mei-chan. You always had your way with words," Kisame said, grinning, as he swung Samehada. "Though I think an epitaph would have been more appropriate here, given what's going to happen. Everybody, charge!"

"Swordsmen of the Mist, attack! Show these undead relics no mercy!" Zabuza called, as his fellow swordsmen charged towards the incoming enemy.

Given that they were matched in numbers, the fight split into seven one on one duels. Ameyuri was the first one to charge, and engaged Raiga, her eyes burning with hatred as if the former owner of the Thunderfangs were her natural enemy. Suigetsu decided that he should be the one to face his brother. Miyako faced Jinin Akebino, to show him that she's worthy of the Helmet Splitter. Kumori and Chojuro teamed up against Kushimaru and Jinpachi. Juzo wanted to go after Zabuza, but his former apprentice chose to go after Kisame instead, and ended up facing Mei.

"Who the hell are you, woman!?" Juzo angrily asked, as he delivered a wide swing at the redhead, who dodged it with ease. "You aren't even a Swordsman of the Mist, yet you dare to get in the way!?"

"I dare, yes. Because I am the Fifth and current Mizukage, Mei Terumi," Mei replied, as she started making hand seals. "And my husband doesn't have time to deal with such a little annoyance like you. There's a much bigger fish to catch. Fire Release: Searing Lash!"

A whip made of fire appeared on Mei's hand, which she used to flog the undead swordsman, forcing him to fall back. Still, Juzo wasn't going to let Mei set the pace of the fight.

"Mizukage? YOU are the Mizukage? Just what happened with Kiri after I died?" Juzo said in disgust. "Oh well, let's test if you're worthy of the hat then!" Jumping backwards, he gripped his fake Executioner's Blade with both hands, and the sword started to flow blue as it was infused with chakra, before tossing it at his opponent.

Mei undid her fiery whip, as she started to make more hand seals. "Earth Release: Earth Style Wall!"

The Mizukage slammed her hands into the ground, erecting a wall between herself and Juzo. Thanks to the chakra it was imbued with, the sword was able to break through the barrier, albeit it did so at the cost of much of its momentum, meaning that if Mei just jumped backwards, she could avoid being hit. However, before she could do that, Juzo burst from underground in front of her and grabbed his sword as he flew.

"You're mine!" Juzo said, as he brought his sword down.

Mei, however, was quick enough to weave a few hand seals as she jumped backwards.

"Boil Release: Skilled Mist Jutsu!"

Mei exhaled a cloud of corrosive mist at the incoming swordsman, who was stopped on his tracks as the force of the mist pushed him backwards while his body started to quickly erode. However, Juzo quickly burst into water.

"Oh, a water clone. Should have seen that coming," Mei said nonchalantly, as she started to make hand seals.

The real Juzo burst from underground behind her, ready to skewer her for real.

"Stop acting as if this is some fucking game!" the scarred ninja yelled, as he delivered an horizontal slash.

"Boil Release: Corrosive Armor!"

Another acidic cloud burst through Mei's position, this one more powerful than the one before, corroding Juzo's body with such speed, his forearms fell off from the rest of his arms.

"Shit!" Juzo cursed.

"Still think I'm weak? Or that I don't deserve to be Mizukage?" Mei asked, as she made more hand seals. "Not that I give a damn about what a caveman like you think. Now time to send you back to the place you belong: into oblivion with the rest of the Bloody Mist! Lava Release: Melting Apparition Jutsu!"

Mei exhaled a gigantic stream of lava at the undead ninja. Juzo tried to jump back, but the corrosive cloud eroded his legs until they broke and he fell helplessly on his back. His undead body started to regenerate, but the acidic cloud said regeneration didn't take. And thus, Juzo was buried under a pile of burning lava, leaving him completely immobile. Mei followed the attack with more ahnd seals.

"Water Release: Water Gun!"

Mei spat a stream of cold water at the lava, cooling it down as it solidified into solid rock, producing several hissing clouds of steam. Once the undead swordsman was trapped under a cocoon of stone, Mei placed several chakra suppresing sealing tags to make sure he couldn't be able to break out on his own.

"That's one down," Mei said, before hey eyes drifted towards the spot her husband was fighting Kisame. Zabuza appeared to be holding his ground, but given that Kisame was only using one hand to hold his weapon, it was obvious he wasn't fighting seriously yet. But that could change anytime soon. "Better help Zabuza as soon as possible. Between the two of us, we can bring that monster down."

...

Meanwhile, at another part of the battleground, Mizuki has fighting Anko's students. The turncoat ninja decided to use directly the second Stage of the Cursed Seal, transforming him into a bulky monster of maroon skin, black eyes, and an additional pair of arms ending in a curved bone blade similar to the blades of a mantis, sprouting from his back.

"Fire Release: Cursed Flame Destruction!"

Mizuki exhaled a massive stream of blue fire from his mouth, forcing his former students to jump away in different directions. As he jumped, Zaku tried to move forward, as he aimed his palms at his former sensei.

"Decapitating Air Bullets!"

Zaku fired a barrage of vacuum bullets from the holes in his palms at the mutated ninja, now forcing Mizuki to be the one to retreat, as the bullets blew a trail of holes in the ground, sending bits of shredded grass into the air. Dosu decided to take the opportunity to strike, and dashed towards his former sensei. Once he closed the distance, he delivered a hook with his gauntlet fist.

"You think you can use those pathetic tricks against me?" Mizuki said, as his enlarged hand caught Dosu's fist, squeezing it, crunching the gauntlet as well. "Do you think that I forgot how those gauntlets of yours work?"

Mizuki then turned around, and tossed Dosu away. However, the former Oto ninja managed to regain his balance, and making a backflip mid air, landed on his feet. Zaku and Kin quickly rushed towards him so he wouldn't be alone against his former teacher.

"Now it's my turn to attack! Feel the power of Orochimaru-sama!" Mizuki boasted, as he started to make hand seals. "Earth Release: Earth Dragon Bullets!"

A dragon head made of mud and stone rose from the ground in front of Mizuki, opened its jaws, and fired multiple mud projectiles at the trio of former Oto ninjas. However, Mizuki wasn't done.

"Fire Release: Fire Dragon Blast!"

Mizuki exhaled a stream of fire from his mouth, igniting the mud projectiles.

Dosu's one eye locked onto the white haired man, before slamming both fists into the ground.

"Resonating Echo Tremor!"

Dosu sent a powerful sonic shockwave through the ground towards Mizuki, carving a furrow as it traveled.

"Zaku, Kin, combine your jutsu to counter his!" Dosu commanded. The two of them nodding in unison and taking a step forward, Zaku raising his palms forward, and Kin making hand seals.

"Decapitating Air Waves!"

"Water Release: Water Wall!"

Kin expelled a torrent of water from her mouth, while Haku released two streams of pressurized air and sound. Both attacks combined into a watery storm, putting out all the fiery projectiles and blowing them away, creating several clouds of steam that started to expand in every direction. Then, without saying anything, Dosu charged forward, his arms raised to protect his head and torso. And indeed, he managed to parry the blow of a bladed arm.

"How did you...?" Mizuki, the one who delivered the blow, asked.

"You seem to forget about my extremely acute hearing, sensei," Dosu sneered. "And even with all the noise of the battle around us, I can still sense the vibrations your feet make with every step."

"So that's how you knew I was getting closer. Cheeky brat," Mizuki said, before pushing Dosu back and kicking him in the chest, making him fall on his back. "But that's not going to help you!"

"Summoning jutsu!"

There was a burst of smoke, followed by a brief but powerful gale of wind that dispelled the steam in the air. Mizuki then saw Kin riding a top of the head of a gigantic cobra.

"Look what Anko-sensei taught me to do," Kin said in a taunting manner. "Did Orochimaru allow you to sign the Snake Contract? For how much you praise him, I'm going to assume he did, right?"

"I don't need to summon some armless lizard to do my job!" Mizuki angrily said, as he started to make hand seals. "Fire Release: Cursed Flame Destruction!"

Mizuki exhaled a stream of blue fire, so hot it burned the ground above it even if it was untouched, as it flew towards Kin and her giant snake. With an impressive speed despite its lack of limbs, the giant cobra started to quickly slither around, dodging the deadly fire jutsu Mizuki was projecting towards it.

"This is my chance to strike!" Dosu whispered to himself, as he rushed towards Mizuki. "Resonating Echo Tremor!"

Dosu slammed both fists into the ground, sending a sonic shockwave underground, carving a crack in the ground as it followed. Mizuki, however, knew what Dosu was trying, and would have smirked if he could move his mouth. He jumped aside to avoid the underground attack while keeping the fire jutsu active, but rather than Kin and her snake, which were moving further and further away, he directed the fire towards the much closer Dosu.

"Air Burst Propulsion!"

Before Dosu could be incinerated, Zaku slammed into his former sensei with force of a missile, using the air expelled from his hands to increase his speed. The flames disappeared, as Mizuki's air was blown out of his stomach.

"You fucking-"

Mizuku's curse was interrupted when Dosu quickly bridged the gap between them, and delivered a right hook at him. The white haired man instinctively dodged, and realized a second too late of his mistake when his head felt prey of terrible nausea and vertigo that didn't even allow him to walk straight.

"Kin, now!" Dosu called.

Before Mizuki could regain his balance, he heard a slithering sound growing louder, and the blurry image of a snake appeared in his field of vision. Kin's giant cobra slammed Mizuki with its head, sending him flying against a tree. After that, the cobra wrapped itself tightly against the undead ninja, pinning his arms against his body leaving him completely immobilized.

"And I believe that's a wrap," Kin said, placing her hands on her hips. "Literally."

"Look at that, Anko-sensei was right. We were able to beat Mizuki after all," Dosu observed.

"Of course we did! We're super strong! Anko-sensei said we could beat him, and we totally did it!" Zaku excitedly said.

"That's all good, but we just defeated one enemy. The battle is far from over." Dosu reminded his teammates, especially Zaku. "Let's bring Mizuki to the selamaster ninjas, and then resume the fight."

...

Meanwhile, not far away from there, Kisame and Zabuza were fighting against each other, mostly trading blows with their huge swords. The two swordsmen never stayed still, constantly running and leaping from one place to another, being little more than quick blurs for an onlooker.

"I have to commend you for your bravery facing me again on your own, Zabuza-san," Kisame began, as he delivered a vertical slash with Samehada. "You can't use ninjutsu against me, since my sword will absorb it. You can't also rely on your famed assassination skills since Samehada can track your position by sensing your chakra. All you have are your swordfighting skills, while I have no such limit."

"That's the difference between you and I, Kisame," Zabuza said, as he parried the blow, before pushing Samehada aside and lunging his Executioner's Blade forward. "I always relied on nothing but my own skills to get by. I don't need to use a tricked up sword as a crutch."

"Still trying to hurt my ego so I remove my greatest advantage in a fight?" Kisame laughed, as he moved aside, letting Zabuza's sword harmlessly pass by him. "Come on Zabuza, we both know you're biting much more than you can chew. There's a lot of stake in this war, you shouldn't risk it so badly for your own ego."

"You're really confident I can't beat you, that you can afford giving advice to an enemy?" Zabuza asked, visibly enraged.

"I couldn't have said it better," Kisame replied, grinning widely, as he prepared to attack again. "Besides-"

"Earth Release: Crushing Avalanche!"

Suddenly, large boulders started to fall from the sky towards Kisame, making thundering noises as they impacted against the ground. The shark man tried to dodge most of them, and those he couldn't were shattered to pebbles with a mighty swing of Samehada. When the attack ceased, Kisame saw Mei Terumi landing besides Zabuza.

"You know what? I think you might be right. That sword is too much for me to overcome alone," Zabuza replied, grinning under his mask.

"So I decided to drop by and balancing things out," Mei added.

"Oh, how cute, the lovely couple comes to face me together," Kisame laughed. "However, your Mizukage isn't going to be of much help against me. She has no ninjutsu Samehada can't nullify and absorb. All she will accomplish is in giving me another source of chakra to devour!"

"We aren't afraid of you, traitor!" Mei replied. "Besides, my husband is right! All your power and strength comes from that sword! If we take that sword away from you, the fight will be ours!"

"Your naivety is adorable," Kisame replied, shaking his head. "Do you think you're the first one who tried to separate me from Samehada? As you can see, that tactic never yielded much results."

"There's a first time for everything. Even if Samehada can return to you on its own, you won't be able to use it if I cut your hands off!" Zabuza said, swinging his blade for added emphasis.

"You're so sure of yourselves, aren't you? Okay, I'll take on your challenge!" Kisame boasted as he removed his Akatsuki cloak, revealing his bare chest, and much to Mei and Zabuza's shock and confusion, he jabbed the sword into his abdomen.

"What the...?" Mei asked, confused.

"You... have no idea... of all the things Samehada can do..." Kisame said, smiling evilly. It took a moment for the two Kiri ninjas to realize that there was no blood on Kisame's torax. In fact, it appeared as if Samehada was being absorbed into his own body. And as it happened, Kisame started to transform as well. His head grew elongated and more shark-like. His hair receded, and a fin grew on top of its head to replace it, with two additional fins grew on his forearms. His hands had now webbed fingers, ending in sharp claws. "SAMEHADA AND I ARE ONE NOW!"

"Man, I'm hating that goddamned sword more and more..." Zabuza grumbled, before turning to his wife. "So, taking his sword away isn't an option anymore. Any other ideas?"

Mei smiled, and nodded, before biting her thumb. "Yes, just one. I still have an ace in the hole I've been saving for this very moment. Something I have been preparing since the moment I became Mizukage, and I think this is the best moment to break it out. Summoning jutsu!"

Mei slammed her hand into the ground, producing a burst of smoke. When the smoke cleared, there was a small blue skinned cephalopod with a yellow spiraling shell, large eyes, and very thick eyebrows. Zabuza couldn't help but raise a non-existent eyebrow at Mei's supposed "ace in the hole", while Kisame merely laughed.

"That's it? That's your trump card? Some tiny squid?" Kisame said, laughing out loud. "Heh, if anything, it'll make a great appetizier."

"I wouldn't laugh if I weren't you, Kisame. This is no normal squid, but Rasen-sama, Great Sage of the Depths," Mei said.

"You called me, Mei-chan. I take this is the moment?" Rasen asked.

Mei nodded. "Indeed it is, Rasen-sama. Let's begin."

The small elderly squid climbed Mei's body until he reached the top of her head, while Mei herself started to make hand seals. The Mizukage started to glow with a blue light as her body started to build up chakra.

"Sage Art: Sage Transformation!"

There was a burst of smoke, and when it dispelled, both Kisame and Zabuza were startled to see the result: it seemed that the squid had fused with Mei, and his shell covered Mei's head as if it was a helmet. Her long locks of auburn hair were now long, reddish tentacles that wiggled as if they had life of their own. Mei's teeth were now sharper, looking like her husband's or Kisame's teeth. Her eyes were yellow, and had black marks around them.

"After seeing Naruto's Sage Mode during the Kirigakure Civil War, I knew I had to master it as well, so I asked the squids to teach me how to do it," Mei explained. "I kept this a secret, training on my own during the little spare time I had. Just for this moment alone. Get ready, Kisame! The shame you brought to your home village with your treachery will disappear before the day ends!"

OMAKE: Mei's Alternate Sage Transformation

"Sage Art: Sage Transformation!"

There was a burst of smoke, and when it dispelled, both Kisame and Zabuza were startled to see the result: Mei had shrunk to half her usual size, having the appearance of a little girl. Her hair was now much shorter, its locks looking like the tentacles of an octopus, with two of them falling down, framing her face to the side. But what was more bizarre was a gigantic water gun she was now wielding, filled with orange ink, as the orange droplets that fell from the tip of its barrel was any indication.

Both Zabuza and Kisame stared at the weird transformation, stunned and confused.

"Inkling Mode, success!" Mei said in a squaky, high pitched voice. She then cocked her gigantic water gun. "Come on Zabuza, let's splat the shit out of him, woomy!"

Author's Note: Heh, it's been a while since the last omake, hasn't it ? Before you ask, no, I don't really play Splatoon, but the idea for the omake was just too good to pass.

This is one of the battles I've been wanting to write the most since I was planning the Fourth Ninja War. Kiri is easily one of my favorite villages, and has some of my favorite characters as well. I borrowed an idea from "War of the Biju" involving Kisame leading the zombified Swordsmen of the Mist, while at the same time thought that I could have them fight the current generation of Swordsmen led by Zabuza. And man, I loved getting to write the Seven Swordsmen of the Mist once again.

And Team Anko comes full circle once Dosu, Zaku and Kin beat the man who was once their sensei. It might not be among the most spectacular or decisive battles, but it was important for them. As for having Rin fight the revived versions of the Iwa ninjas that kidnapped her, well, I thought it would be both funny and cathartic.

Though even then, all of the above is just an appetizier, as the next chapter we'll get the main course: Mei and Zabuza versus Kisame. Which, again, allowed me to show another user of Sage Mode in Mei. I know I've said this a million times already, but I love Sage Mode and it pissed me off that so few characters got to master it in canon.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

How are you finding the second battle? Hope it's up to your expectations. Tell me your thoughts in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Water Warfare

Author's Note: Second part of the second battle of the Fourth Ninja War. It features one of the battles I enjoyed writing the most, so I hope you enjoy reading it just as much:

Chapter 105:

Water Warfare

or

Demons, Squids and Sharks

Turtle Island

"Come on... come on... !" Naruto said, beads of sweat running through his hair, as with the help of four other arms made of chakra, attempted to create a Tailed Beast Ball for the umpteenth time. Just like his many previous attempts, the ball appeared to be stable at first, but once it reached a certain size, it grew unstable, before exploding in the blond's face. The blast pushed Naruto backwards a couple meters, before he fell on his butt. He deactivated the golden chakra cloak, and punched the sand in frustration. "GODDAMIT!"

Letting out a despondent sigh, Naruto lied on his back, though a better term would be that he dropped on it, and extended his arms, and looked at the sky. The sun shone brightly, there wasn't a single cloud, and the air was filled with the sound of the waves crashing against the shore and the cries of seagulls. Naruto could also heard steps of somebody walking towards him, but paid the newcomer no attention.

"Man, this sucks," Naruto moaned. "What I'm doing wrong?"

"Struggling to master your new power, Naruto-kun?" the voice of an elderly man said. "You aren't planning on giving up, are you? That would be very unlike you."

Naruto sat up, and saw the Third Hokage standing besides him. He also sat down on the sand.

"Yeah. The Tailed Beast Ball," Naruto explained. "It's a Tailed Beast's most powerful ability. You see, it's-"

Hiruzen raised a hand, interrupting Naruto. "I know. I witnessed that jutsu many times in my life. Both when I fought against foreign jinchuriki, as well as when the Nine Tails ravaged Konoha. I admit they aren't memories I treasure much."

"Wait, a Tailed Beast Ball is powerful enough to wipe a large chunk of Konoha out. How did the village survive that?" Naruto asked in shock. While he saw the destruction caused by the Fox in pictures of the Academy's history books, it didn't look like a Tailed Beast Ball went off there.

"Fortunately, your father was there to help with that," Hiruzen explained. "Using his Flying Thundergod Jutsu, he managed to teleport the Ball far away before it could detonate. Hadn't he intervened when he did... I shiver to imagine the even greater death and destruction such an attack would have caused in the middle of a village as large as populated as Konoha."

"I can relate to that. Obito tried to pull the same shit with his half of the Nine Tails during the Akatsuki invasion," Naruto told him.

"Fortunately, mom and I were there to ensure that such thing didn't happen."

Hiruzen nodded, and his lips curved into a small smile. "Each passing day, I'm so glad that your parents decided to return when they did. I can't imagine what would have been of Konoha if they didn't return. Especially with your birth parents' tragic demise."

"Speaking of which," Naruto began. "I know my birth mom, Kushina, was the previous jinchuriki of the Nine Tails. Was she able to control his power the same way I do?"

Hiruzen shook his head. "No. Kushina rarely, if ever, drew the power of the Nine Tails. Then again, her seal was far more restrictive. So was Mito's."

"How so?" Naruto asked. "What's the point of keeping a jinchuriki, if they can't even use the power of the Tailed Beast within them?"

"Back then, we believed it to be unnecessary. The other great villages were very reliant on their jinchuriki, but Tobirama-sensei didn't want Konoha to follow that path," Hiruzen explained. "He wanted the jinchuriki to be the village's trump card, and wanted our first line of defense and main deterrent for war to be our finest ninjas."

"Like Hashirama was in the day, I guess," Naruto said. He had heard about the legendary First Hokage's power, closer to that of a god than a man -no wonder he was called the God of Ninja-, and was glad that he wouldn't never have to fight a ninja of that caliber.

"Yes, and Tobirama-sensei after him. Tobirama-sensei always wanted to find the most talented and gifted ninjas since they were children, and train them in order to bring out their potential to their fullest. I was one of such kids. And I continued with Jiraiya, Tsunade and Orochimaru. Tobirama-sensei's idea was for Konoha to be known for the quality of their ninjas, first and foremost, and rely on the power of the Nine Tails as little as possible," Hiruzen explained.

As Naruto processed the information, he nodded. "Makes sense, I guess. Though, why would my biological dad would want me to use the power of the Nine Tails, then?"

"If I have to guess, it would be because he knew that it was time to use that trump card," Hiruzen said, placing a couple fingers under his goatee. "While I'm proud of my reputation as a fearsome ninja, I was already long past my prime, and I wouldn't get any younger. Minato knew he was going to die. One of the Sannin was a traitor, and the other two decided to leave Konoha for personal reasons. It's possible that he guessed that being your godfather, Jiraiya would come back, but still thought it wasn't enough. We needed something, anything, that would allow Konoha to keep its edge."

"You know, as good as the Second's intentions were, depending on a few, super powerful ninjas isn't that much better from depending on jinchuriki," Naruto noted, frowning a little.

"Wise words. Jiraiya probably thought the same, that's why he put a bigger focus on the Academy, so we could get a better and stronger generation of ninjas, rather than relying on a couple of prodigies," Hiruzen said, nodding in agreement.

"We still have a couple of prodigies among my generation," Naruto noted. "Neji was called as such. And would have been the strongest Hyuga if Hinata-hime didn't awaken the Tenseigan. There's Sasuke as well, though that's the norm for his clan."

"True, true. But I believe that you're forgetting about somebody, Naruto-kun," Hiruzen said with a knowing smile.

"Who, me?" Naruto asked, quickly catching the old man's implicationns. The blond scoffed dismissively, as he rolled his eyes. "Yeah, sure."

"Don't sell yourself short, Naruto-kun," Hiruzen said. "You learned the Rasengan, a jutsu that took your biological father years to make and your adoptive father months to master, in a mere week. And not just that, but you combined it with elemental chakra, something your biological father was never able to do. Same goes with Sage Mode."

"If I was a prodigy, I would have this stupid jutsu mastered by now," Naruto complained.

"Even prodigies have their limits," Hiruzen said. "Like I said before, there were many things your father, considered one of the strongest and most skilled ninjas Konoha ever produced, was unable to do."

"I'm sure that if he was in my place, he would have mastered this in an instant," Naruto said, letting out a weary sigh. "Dad told me that, when Orochimaru invaded the village, he used Impure World Resurrection on him and Kushina, and upon seeing the elemental Rasengan, managed to replicate it in an instant."

"Because Jiraiya told him the secret behind it," Hiruzen pointed out. "Though, now that you mention the Rasengan, and trying to master the Tailed Beast Ball..."

"What? What about them?" Naruto asked, his curiosity started to peak.

"Apparently, after seeing the Tailed Beast Ball during the Third Ninja War, Minato believed humans could use that jutsu," Hiruzen started to explain. "He tried to replicate it, but he wasn't successful at first."

"Well, of course, you need to be a-" Naruto interrupted himself when he realized the last part of what the former Hokage had said. "What do you mean 'at first'?"

"To put it simply, that's how he came up with the idea of the Rasengan," Hiruzen said. "His attempts to replicate the Tailed Beast Ball failed, as he couldn't emulate the shape manipulation of the chakra. Then he decided to spin the chakra in order to stabilize it. The result was the Rasengan. Naturally, it wasn't as powerful as the jutsu it was trying to copy, but it's still a very powerful one, don't you think?"

"Wow... I wasn't aware of-" Naruto said in awe, before an idea dawned upon him. "Hey, wait a minute! If the Tailed Beast Ball was the inspiration for the Rasengan... then maybe I can use the principles behind the Rasengan to master the Tailed Beast Ball!"

Thanks for the idea, Old Man Hokage!" the blond excitedly said, as he reactivated his chakra mode, and resumed his practice.

"I'm glad I could be of help, Naruto-kun," Hiruzen said with a kind smile.

...

"Bluntsword Ninja Art: Underground Fissure!"

"Bluntsword Ninja Aart: Earth Breaker!"

Jinin charged the axe half of his weapon with chakra, before hitting the ground with it, sending an underground shockwave that cracked the ground as it moved forward. Miyako, however, channeled chakra through the hammer half of her weapon, before smashing it onto the ground, shattering it, and sending many rocks and pebbles flying in every direction, and most importantly, stopping Jinin's attack.

"Not bad, girl, not bad," Jinin said, acknowledging his opponent. "You make good use of the Helmet Splitter."

"I've been training every day since the day I became its owner. I want to be as good as you were in life," Miyako said, as she swung the hammer half of her weapon at Jinin

The undead swordsman started to swing his hammer as well, albeit in circles. "Bluntsword Ninja Art: Hurricane Hammer!"

A powerful tornado raised around Jinin, managing to deflect the incoming attack, before Jinin swung the hammer forward, sending the tornado at Miyako. The blue haired girl put her weapon down and started making hand seals as fast as her hands allowed her.

"Water Release: Wild Water Wave!"

Miyako spewed a massive torrent of water from her mouth at the incoming tornado. The two elemental forces clashed, splashing water everywhere, but in the end, Miyako's jutsu won out, and the tornado was dispelled. Unfortunately, just as the two attacks died down, Jinin leaped at the now unarmed Miyako, ready to strike her down.

"You shouldn't have dropped your weapon, girl. You never drop your weapon," Jinin said in an even but still chastising tone.

Miyako ignored Jinin's reprimand, and quickly pulled a pair of kunai with explosive tags attached to them from her ninja tool pouch, and tossed them at the incoming Jinin. The undead ninja tried to swat them away, but Miyako detonated them before he even had the chance. The explosion didn't catch Jinin inside, but the resulting shockwave managed to push him backwards, allowing the blue haired woman to pick up her weapon.

"A good ninja has more than one weapon, no matter how good it is," Miyako replied.

Jinin landed on his feet, sliding back a bit, before breaking his movement with the help of his copy the Helmet Splitter, by stabbing the axe half into the ground

"Nice save. You won't die easily. That's good," He complimented, as he pulled the axe half of his weapon back.

"I didn't get to become part of the Seven Swordsmen by dying easily," Miyako spat back. "And neither did you, despite your end."

"I guess so," Jinin conceded. Miyako got ready for the next attack, but after waiting for a few seconds, it didn't come. "Let me ask you something girl, given that you have my sword, that Jinpachi and Kushimaru are dead, and that Yagura is no longer Mizukage, I take your side won the Civil War, right?"

"Yes, thankfully we did," Miyako did. "Albeit we didn't enjoy our victory as much as we could. Yagura was mind controlled by the Akatsuki, and we were unable to break the brainwashing before they took him away and extracted the Three Tails from him. In fact, I'm surprised he hasn't been reanimated alongside you guys."

"I see. That was... regrettable," Jinin said. "Is the village stable, at the very least?"

"The village is at the most stable it has ever been. When the truth about Yagura came out, his supporters pledged their loyalty to Meisama and the rebellion," Miyako explained. "In the meantime, we also made efforts to build ties with other villages as well."

"Good. That's all I wanted to know," Jinin said, and without any warning, he charged at Miyako.

The blue haired kunoichi parried the incoming axe blow with the axe half of her Helmet Splitter.

"Don't you regret it?" Miyako asked, as she struggled against the undead man. "Siding with Yagura?"

"No," was his firm reply. "I fought for what I believed was right. If I will go down in history as a villain, then so be it."

"How can you say that?" Miyako replied, before pushing Jinin back and trying to smash him with the hammer half. "If you knew that Yagura was mind controlled, would you have still fought for him?"

"But I didn't know that. Or at least, I didn't have solid evidence about it," Jinin said, as he dodged the hammer blow. "Thinking about scenarios that will never happen, wondering what could have been, it's pointless. All that matters is the present, the future, and what do you plan to do in the former to reach the latter."

"I guess I can't help but agree with that," Miyako said, as she raised her weapon, preparing for an attack. "The future I want is one with no more pointless war and bloodshed. And I plan to reach it by sending you back to the Pure World, where you belong. For starters, at least."

"That's good," Jinin said, mimicking her action. "Then show me what you're capable of! Show me your conviction to do what's right!"

"I shall do it!" Miyako replied, as she dashed forward. "Water Release: Razor Stream!"

Both Kirigakure ninjas dashed towards each other, gripping the axe half of the Helmet Splitter. When they were close enough, they struck, Miyako being the first one to move, delivering a diagonal downwards swipe. However, she attacked too soon, and her swing didn't reach Jinin. The bearded man noticed this, and didn't hesitate to capitalize on his opponent's mistake, and attacked.

SNAP!

"What the...?"

The leather strap that kept both halves of the weapon linked was cut in two. As so was Jinin's head, and one of his arms, both falling from his body, before the body fell back lifelessly.

"What? How...?" Jinin's decapitated head asked.

Miyako wordlessly walked towards him, and brought the axe half of the Helmet Splitter close to his face. It was then when he saw it: an extremely thin and long blade of condensed water, almost invisible to the naked eye, channeled through the blade of the axe, almost doubling its range.

"Oh... I see," Jinin said in resignation, but then he smiled. "A jutsu that's both deadly and subtle. The way of Kirigakure. I like you, girl."

Miyako's victory didn't go unnoticed, and several Sealmaster ninjas landed besides her, and started to seal Jinin before he could fully regenerate.

"Regardless of being at the wrong side of the Civil War, I always admired you, Jinin-san," Miyako began. "You always fought for Kirigakure's future and well being. You were the kind of ninja I wanted to become."

"You shouldn't have done that," Jinin said, surprising the blue haired girl with his chastising tone. "You should have strived to be better than me. And I can say that you did it. You're a worthy wielder of the Helmet Splitter. Just like I did, fight for Kirigakure, fight for what you believe it's right, so when your time comes, you will die without any regrets."

Miyako nodded. "Don't worry... I will."

After Jinin was finally sealed, the Sealmasters took him to the rear guard, so the enemy wouldn't try to release him. And after a few seconds of contemplation, Miyako decided to look for a new opponent. This battle was far from over.

...

Kisame locked his eyes on Mei, as he scanned her new form. He could sense a very powerful chakra radiating from her body. It was almost as if Mei was absorbing the ambient energy around her and making it her own. Such an interesting ability, not even Samehada was able to do.

"So... Sage Mode, hm?" Kisame asked, as he grinned in anticipation. "I did hear from the other Akatsuki that the jinchuriki of the Nine Tails, as well as the Toad and Slug Sannin, mastered such a mode. I wasn't aware that you had Sage Mode as well."

"Afraid?" Mei asked, as he placed a hand on a hip, though she already expected Kisame's answer.

"Afraid? Are you kidding me?" Kisame asked, almost sounding outraged. "You might be the first worthy opponent I face in years! You have no idea how much I wanted to fight a Sage, but they're so rare..."

"I knew you were going to say that," Mei said, shaking her head.
"Don't say I didn't warn you."

"I can smell your chakra... it's like nothing I've experienced before! I'm going to devour all of your chakra, until nothing remains!" Kisame said in excitement, as his own chakra started to flare around him.

"Zabuza, things are going to get ugly," Mei whispered her husband.
"As we are now, Kisame and I are on a completely different level. So please, I must ask you to ignore your pride and let me deal with him myself. I can't fight him and protect you at the same time."

"I'm not going anywhere, woman," Zabuza said, his eyes locked on Kisame. "I'm the captain of the Seven Swordsmen of the Mist, and it's my duty to recover the sword in the hands of that traitor. Not to mention, protect my wife and Kage."

"Zabuza-"

The black haired man raised a hand to silence her. "I may be prideful and ambitious, but I'm not an idiot. I'll let you do all the heavy lifting. I'll stay close to you, and strike whenever there's an opening, or I'll protect you if you happen to be left wide open."

"Understood," Mei said, nodding, before her eyes also drifted to Kisame, who prepared to attack. "Be careful."

"You too."

"Let's start this already! Samehada hungers, and so do I!" Kisame shouted, as he started to make hand seals. Despite having webbed hands now, the shark ninja had no more trouble weaving hand seals than before. "Water Release: Shark Bullet Jutsu!"

Suddenly, a torrent of water exploded around Kisame, swirling around a single spot, taking the form of a gigantic shark. Kisame brought both hands forward, sending the shark-shaped water projectile towards his two foes. Mei, however, wasn't going to stay idle, as she started to weave hand seals of her own, before slamming her palms into the ground.

"Sage Art: Earth Release, Titan Grip!"

The land started to shake, and a gigantic hand made of rock and dirt appeared between Mei and the incoming shark missile. Its stony fingers quickly wrapped around the watery shark, stopping it on its tracks. Mei then closed her hand into a fist, and the giant stone hand did the same, squeezing the shark until it exploded into a million water droplets.

"You think I don't know what you're doing, don't you?" Mei asked. "You expected me to counter that direct jutsu with one of my own and-"

Mei was interrupted when Kisame, surrounded by a cloak of raging water, shattered the giant stone hand by crossing through it, before delivering a vertical slash with his right claw. Mei, however, managed to jump in time, and Kisame only hit the ground, opening a large crater with the force of his blow.

"Thank goodness for the chakra sensing, or else I'd be a goner," Mei thought, still mid air. "He's much faster than before."

However, Kisame wasn't going to give up, and launched himself towards Mei, almost like a living torrent. However, before he could strike her, Zabuza delivered a flying kick to the shark man's temple, breaking his momentum, and sending him flying sideways. Kisame, however, managed to regain balance while mid air and landed on his feet.

"Well done, Zabuza!" Mei praised as her feet touched the ground, before making more hand seals. "Boil Release: Earth's Deep Breath!"

As Kisame charged once again, he started to notice that not only was the ground shaking beneath his feet, but it was starting to get warmer as well. The nature energy overflowing the zone only made the danger more obvious, and jumped away. And just as he did, the ground cracked open, and a massive geyser shot upwards. Even if it failed, Kisame could feel the sheer heat of the boiling water that rocketed into the sky.

"That was close," the shark ninja said. "If I let that-"

However, Mei's jutsu didn't end there, as another geyser exploded close to Kisame, followed by another and another, and another. Eventually, Kisame was surrounded by burning-hot geysers, and had nowhere to go.

"Excellent. Now let's see how you get out of this," Mei said with a smirk, as she made more hand seals. "Boil Release: Majestic Burning Hurricane!"

All the geysers started to form a swirl around Kisame, until they turned into a massive tornado of burning steam. Even if Kisame was able to absorb chakra, he wouldn't be able to absorb all of it before he was cooked alive.

However, deep down, Mei knew that if it was so easy, Kisame wouldn't be a member of Akatsuki.

"Water Release: Greater Exploding Water Colliding Wave!"

Suddenly, a massive watery torrent appeared from inside the steam tornado, dispelling it in almost an instant, before it expanded in every direction, flooding the entire zone, crushing everything on its path beneath gigantic tidal waves. Grinning, Kisame was standing at the epicenter of the ever growing tsunami.

"Oh shit!" Mei yelled, before she and Zabuza were buried by a massive wave.

...

"Water Release: Multiple Water Gun Jutsu!"

"Don't block them, just dodge!" Suigetsu said in a panicked voice.

"I k-know!" Chojuro stammered back.

Mangetsu mimicked a gun with his free hand, and from the tip of his finger fired deceptively large globs of compressed water in rapid succession towards the two Swordsmen of the Mist, which had the foresight of running in different directions. They managed to avoid the deadly watery missiles, which opened large holes in the ground when they impacted.. Some of them still found some marks on some unlucky Zetsu clone or Allied ninja

Given that Mangetsu was focusing on Chojuro, Suigetsu decided it was time to strike. Using water ninjutsu against Mangetsu wasn't going to produce any results, so he dashed as fast as he could, and tossed the Sewing Needle at him. Without having to stop his current jutsu, Mangetsu parried the flying sword with a mighty swing his copy of Hiraimekarei, sending the Sewing Needle back at Suigetsu.

"Shit!" Suigetsu cursed, as he caught his sword back, and engaged Mangetsu in melee.

This forced the older brother to stop firing water bullets at the bespectacled swordsman and focus on his younger brother. Suigetsu started to with a string of aggressive thrusts, but Mangetsu quickly turned the tide in his favor, and countered with more powerful wide swings, as his fake Hiraimekarei glowed blue as Mangetsu channeled chakra through it.

"If there's a silver lining to this mess, is that I'm able to see you one more time, Suigetsu," Mangetsu said as he continued his onslaught. "You've grown since the last time I saw you. You also got stronger."

"I had to, if I wanted to get my hands on one of the Seven Swords," Suigetsu replied, as he managed to stop his brother's attack and lock their blades against each other. "Not to mention that I no longer had you to protect me."

Mangetsu managed to break the blade lock and overpower Suigetsu with more fast swings. One of them managed to slice one of his arms off, which quickly broke down into water, as a few water droplets leaked from the stump. Suigetsu jumped backwards to avoid the last swing, and to give himself some time for his lost arm to grow back.

Then, he noticed something: with Mangetsu none the wiser, Chojuro was able to sneak behind him and was ready to strike. Hiramekarei had more power and thus was more effective on a Hydrification user than Suigetsu's Sewing Needle, which was more suited for capture and torture. He decided that Mangetsu needed to have his attention focused on the younger brother for Chojuro's ambush to work.

"Heh, never thought you'd have it in you, Chojuro," Suigetsu thought, as he smirked. "Guess that all that beatings disguised as training from Zabuza-taicho did pay off, huh?"

As Suigetsu charged forward, ready to impale his undead brother with the Sewing Needle, Chojuro moved to strike.

"Hiramekarei, release!"

Chojuro's balde burst with chakra, said chakra forming a gigantic hammer, which would crush Mangetsu into a puddle of water, giving the Sealmasters enough time to seal him before he could reform. However, just as Chojuro prepared his attack, so did Mangetsu.

"Hiramekarei, release!"

Mangetsu's own sword also burst with chakra, before he split it into to two blades, and started to spin around, turning into a blue razor tornado that both shredded and pushed Suigetsu and Chojuro back. While Suigetsu's own Hydrification technique saved him from any permanent damage, Chojuro lost his flak jacket to the attack, leaving him unprotected.

"Not bad, apprentice. Your stealth got much better since the last time I saw you," Mangetsu told Chojuro, with his back still turned at him. "It would have worked if Suigetsu didn't alert me of your presence."

"WHAT!?" the very outraged Suigetsu asked, his face so contorted with anger it was almost comical. "What did I do!?"

"You smirked while you charged towards me," Mangetsu calmly told him. "And even if I couldn't see him, I knew he had to be close. Your sudden display of confidence despite struggling against me couldn't mean anything else."

"Goddamit... I knew you were good, but I forgot how good you were," Suigetsu said, as a bead of sweat trickled down his temple.

"Suigetsu-san, if may offer a suggestion...?" Chojuro asked. "Your sword might not be the best one to deal with your brother. Ameyuri-san has the best chances against him, given her affinity for Lightning Release:"

"A sensible suggestion," Mangetsu agreed. "Where is she?"

"The girl's fighting the previous owner of her swords, Raiga Kurosuki," Suigetsu said. "She really wanted to prove that she's better than her predecessor. I doubt that girl will want to lend us a hand as long as Raiga is alive. Well, living dead, you know what I mean."

"Then go and fetch her," Chojuro request, as he held Hiramekarei in front of him in a fighting stance. "I'll keep Mangetsu-sensei at bay until you come back."

Suigetsu was going to protest and say that Mangetsu was going to cut Chojuro to pieces without any backup. However, he knew that there was no time to argue, and that Ameyuri was their best bet.

"Alright. Just try not to get killed," Suigetsu said, before leaping away.

With his brother out of the way, Mangetsu turned around, and smirked at the blue haired Kirigakure ninja.

"So, you and me. A one on one. Like in the old times," Mangetsu commented.

"Except that if I lose, I die," Chojuro pointed out.

"If you die to me, that means I made a lousy job training you," Mangetsu said, before dashing forward. "Show me how well I trained you, and how much you improved since my demise!"

...

As Suigestu and Chojuro fought the reanimated Mangetsu, not far from there, Ameyuri was engaged in her own little duel against Raiga Kurosuki. From time to time a bunch of White Zetsu clones would try to interfere with the fight but all their efforts got them was being sliced to pieces by either Raiga or Ameyuri.

For most of the time, they kept the fight close and personal, sparks of lightning flying whenever their blades clashed. However, the two of them had the same idea of jumping back and trying ranged attacks, to test how the opponent reacted to them.

"Thundersword Ninja Aart: Feast of Lightning!"

Both Ameyuri and Raiga stabbed their swords into the ground, releasing a mass of thunderbolts, cutting through the ground as they clashed against each other, resulting in an explosion of lightning bolts that opened a crater in the ground.

"You're strong, girl," Raiga said, as he pulled his swords out of the ground. "Your funeral will be a worthy one."

"Shut up! Of the two of us, I'm not the one who's actually dead!" Ameyuri protested, as he did the same, before raising her swords into the air. "Lightning Release: Depth Charge!"

After a bright blue flash of electricity, Ameyuri was completely coated in a cloak of crackling lightning. Wasting no time, the angry redhead dashed at the undead swordman, trading swords swings once again, even if this time, Ameyuri moved much faster and her blows packed far more power. Raiga didn't appear bothered by her spike in power, though he was pushed back with each blow.

"Your skill with the Thunderfangs is commendable, but there's still much you need to learn before you can get on my level!" Raiga shouted, as he tried to push Ameyuri back.

The redhead grinned, showing a mouth full of sharp teeth. "Really? Let's see how do you like this then."

Ameyuri threw her sword, though not at Raiga, but to the side, as she continued to fight the undead ninja with her remaining blade. The sword she had tossed, crackling with electricity, started to spin around the two of them, flying into Raiga at random times as if it had life of its own, forcing him to split his attention to two opponents at once, one that had no body he could harm.

"Did you know that you can use the Thunderfangs that way?" Ameyuri asked in a teasing tone as she continued her assault. That moment, the flying sword decided to strike, and when Raiga parried the blow, Ameyuri attacked that arm, slicing it cleanly. "HA! Got you, old man!"

Raiga disengaged and jumped backwards.

"Time to cast the kids gloves off," Raiga said, as his remaining sword started to crackle with electricity. "Lightning Release: Lightning Strike Armor!"

Just like Ameyuri moments before him, Raiga's entire body was coated with electricity, which shone so brightly it was almost impossible to directly look.

"Come at me if you dare now, little girl!" Raiga said in a taunting tone, pointing his remaining sword at her.

"I'm not a little girl, you fucker! I'm twenty!" Ameyuri yelled, as she charged forward. "Twenty times I'm going to kill you now! I'm going to cut all your limbs, your head, and whatever pathetic excuse of a manhood you have between your legs, wait until it grows back, and do it again!"

Ameyuri channeled even more chakra into her lightning cloak, making it crackle and shine with more intensity, and she and Raiga clashed again. Despite having an arm, Raiga managed to keep up with the redheaded woman until his cut arm and the sword it was holding regenerated again from ash and dust.

"The armor not only protects him from my attacks while harming attackers, it also increased his speed and reaction time!" Ameyuri thought in realization. "It's like the Fourth Raikage's famed Lightning Chakra Mode, only on a lesser scale. Still, if I don't find a way to counter it, I'm so fucked!"

"What's wrong, little girl? Did you realize your mistake of fighting an actual Swordsman of the Mist?" Raiga boasted.

All of Ameyuri's worries and doubts quickly evaporated, as her temper, as short as her stature, quickly replaced them with pure, undiluted anger.

"STOP CALLING ME A LITTLE GIRL!" Ameyuri bellowed, as the electricity across her body flashed brightly. "That's it, you're so fucking dead right now! Thundersword Secret Art: Eye of the Storm!"

Ameyuri started to spin in place, turning herself into a tornado of lightning, before dashing towards Raiga, carving a furrow as she moved. Raiga merely chuckled at Ameyuri's attack.

"So, spinning it is, then? Fine by me," the thick-lipped zombie said with a chuckle, as he crossed his copies of the Thunderfangs over his head. "Lightning Release: Lightning Dragon Tornado!"

Like Ameyuri, Raiga started to spin, and the lightning coursing through his body started to form a vortex of wind and electricity. Said vortex then took the shape of a dragon. The lightning dragon let out a metallic sounding roar, which was more like a screech, before lunging at the incoming Ameyuri.

Both lightning attacks clashed, and in the beginning, Ameyuri managed to power through Raiga's dragon tornado, however, her advance became slower and slower, until it appeared she might be pushed back. However, all the energy gathered by the two ninjas eventually reached a critical point, resulting in a massive explosion that send both swordsmen flying backwards, leaving a rather large crater in the place of their clash.

"Ugh..." Ameyuri groaned, as she tried to get back on her feet, using her swords as support. "Note to self... never try shit like that again... ugggh..."

"Hey, need some help?" a new voice asked.

Ameyuri was a little startled upon seeing Suigetsu suddenly landing besides her. He faced Raiga, who was also getting back on his feet, and took a fighting stance.

"Get lost, dumbass! I didn't ask for your help, nor I need it!" Ameyuri angrily berated.

"Really? Because it doesn't look that to me," Suigetsu said. Before Ameyuri could protest, he continued. "Listen, you may not need my help, but Chojuro and I need yours. We're fighting against my brother, and he's kicking our asses so badly it's not even funny. Of all of us, your skillset is the most fitting to deal with him."

"I'm not going to do your fucking job. Now scram, I have a relic that needs to be send back to oblivion," Ameyuri dismissively said.

"Goddamit Ameyuri, this isn't a game! Can't you just put your pride and ego aside?" Suigetsu hotly asked, making the redhead glare. "We're fighting a war, for fuck's sake! I can't deal with my opponent on my own, and neither can you! So stop being so fucking stubborn, and let me help you so can help me in return!"

Ameyuri's fingers gripped around her swords, as she clenched her teeth at the white haired ninja. She wanted to yell at him to leave her alone, but she was forced to admit that he had a point. If that dumboass got himself killed, then Magetsu would more than likely move to fight another swordsman, herself included. In the end, common sense won, even if barely.

"Fine, you win," Ameyuri finally said in defeat. "But how do you plan to help me against Raiga, smartass? He has a similar skillset to mine. You'll be nothing but dead weight."

Suigestu merely smirked at her. "Just leave that to me."

...

"Water Release: Underwater Breathing!"

Zabuza barely had the time to made the seals that would allow him not to drown underwater before he and Mei were engulfed by a massive wall of water. The two of them had to strengthen their bodies with chakra as much as they could so the crushing torrent wouldn't break their bodies. The masked man looked at his wife, who appeared to be fine despite the fact that she didn't use the same jutsu as him to breather underwater. However, he could see three gills at the side of her neck -and guessed there were other three at the other side-, and sighed in relief knowing that she'd be okay.

" She'll be better than me. This jutsu will drain my chakra little by little, while I guess that she can brether underwater at no additional cost as long as she keeps that form," Zabuza thought, before his eyes drifted towards Kisame. "And the same can be said of him, if those gills around the shoulders are any indication."

"Now, time to rip and tear!" Kisame shouted, and shot like a missile towards Mei, leaving a trail of bubbles, as he extended his arms and large claws grew from each of his fingers. In no time, he would close the gap between himself and Mei. Kisame was already fast underwater, and when he was merged with Samehada, his speed increased even more.

Mei, however, wasn't going to let the Akatsuki kill her without putting up a fight. She made a hand seal.

"Sage Art: Tentacle Grip!"

Four of Mei's locks-turned-tentacles grew in size and length, and lashed at the incoming shark man. Kisame merely dodged the first two, while slashing at the other two with his claws, cutting them off. Seeing her counterattack ineffective, Mei opted to fall back. Not that she was going to escape from him.

"I'm craving some fried squid!" Kisame said, as he prepared to strike Mei with a claw swipe.

However, Kisame's claws didn't tear soft flesh like he expected, but met metal instead. It took him a second to realize that Zabuza managed to get in the way between Kisame and his prey, and used his Executioner's Blade to parry the attack.

"You aren't the only one who can move fast underwater!" Zabuza said, as he defiantly stared at the shark man.

"Water Release: Multiple Water Bullets!"

Before Kisame could attack again, Mei spat many missiles of highly pressurized water at him, forcing the shark man to fall back, even if briefly, to dodge the deadly projectiles. Making a U-turn, Kisame shot towards Mei and Zabuza once again.

"Zabuza, I'm afraid that not even with Sage Mode I'll be able to match Kisame. At least, not as long as we're underwater," Mei suggested. "We should try to go back to dry land."

"I agree. We can't let him have such a bug advantage," Zabuza said, as he watched Kisame charge towards them again.

"Be ready to swim to the edge of the water. I'll prove some cover," Mei said, as she started to make some hand seals. "Boil Release: Skilled Mist Jutsu!"

Mei exhaled a massive cloud of acidic mist from her mouth, which manifested in the shape of a mass of super heated bubbles that spread in every direction, forming an improvised smokescreen between them and their Akatsuki foe.

" That should be enough to cover our escape," Mei thought, before he looked at Zabuza. "Come on, swim towards the border!"

Nodding in return, both Zabuza and Mei started to swim away as fast as they could towards the edge of the water, taking With the bubble cover, Kisame wouldn't know which direction they took until it was too late. Or at least, that was in theory, given that no matter how fast they swam, it felt like they didn't move at all.

"How wide does this improvised sea spread?" Mei asked, upon noticing that they weren't making any progress.

"It's as if the water moved at the same pace as we do!" Zabuza replied, just as perplexed.

"You can't escape from me!" Kisame's voice said from behind.

Much to their surprise, and a little horror, Kisame managed to power through the barrier of acidic bubbles as if they were nothing, and found the two Kiri ninjas with amazing ease, before lunging at them with the same gusto as a predator hunting their favorite prey.

"As long as I'm fused with Samehada, I can sense chakra! Especially if you're trapped inside my artificial sea, which amplifies my sensing ability!" Kisame boasted, as he dived at them.

Once again, Zabuza put himself between Mei and Kisame, and made a hand seal with his free hand.

"Water Release: Water Clone Jutsu!"

Using the water around him, Zabuza created an army of clones, which instantly dived at Kisame, ready to cut him to pieces. However, this turned out to be a little more than a distraction for the shark man, who was able to destroy them with one swipe of his claws, while absorbing their chakra. Then again, all that Zabuza hoped was that they could give them some time to form a plan.

"Well done, husband," Mei said, as she floated besides him. "But they won't keep him busy for long."

"I know," Zabuza acknowledged. "Come on, let's keep swimming. We can't be that far away from the border."

"Actually, we are. I've been noticing that the chakra in the water doesn't stay still, it moves as well. It's like you said, the artificial sea moves alongside Kisame. As long as he chases us, we won't make any progress," Mei said.

"Then let's split. Kisame can only chase one of us, allowing the other a safe escape. Hopefully, he'll go after me, given that I'm the easiest enemy," Zabuza said, as he prepared to swim again, but Mei grabbed his shoulder.

"No. I won't let you sacrifice yourself like that," Mei said, and continued before Zabuza could protest. "I have another idea. I'm going to the bottom. I need you to keep Kisame distracted a little more. Can you do that?"

Zabuza saw that Kisame just finished destroying the last of the water clones, and was now swimming at them once again.

"Understood. Now go!" Zabuza said.

Mei nodded, and swam to the bottom of the artificial sea, while Zabuza intercepted Kisame once again who was ready to strike Mei down.

"You think you can protect her from me? That's so cute," Kisame said in a mocking tone, as he engaged Zabuza. "In fact, she's the one who needs to protect you."

"Do not underestimate me!" Zabuza said, as he tried to stab at the shark ninja, who dodged Zabuza's blows with insulting ease.

"Give me a reason not to underestimate you then!" Kisame fired back, as he tried to get past Zabuza, seeing how Mei was getting to the bottom. Feeling a little more restless, Kisame went on the offensive, delivering a flurry of claw swipes at Zabuza.. "I don't know what that woman is trying to do, but it will be useless!"

"Samehada is a powerful sword indeed. But its power blinded you, and made you overconfident," Zabuza said as he expertly blocked the blows. However, he couldn't help but worry upon seeing how Kisame's strikes were leaving pretty big dents on his sword. Not to mention that it was becoming increasingly difficult to move underwater. "Come on Mei, whatever are you planning, do it now!"

"If you're so eager to die protecting that woman, then so be it!" Kisame said, smirking menacingly, as spike-like scales grew all over his arms and shoulders. "I can't wait to see her face when I present her your decapitated head!"

Meanwhile, swimming as fast as she could, mei managed to reach the bottom of the artificial sea. Wasting no time, she made several hand seals, before slamming both hands into the ground.

"Sage Art: Earth Release World Breaker!"

Mei allowed herself to float away from the bottom as the ground beneath her started to shake violently. Soon, cracks started to spear and spread in every direction, growing larger and wider, forming a spiderweb of fissures. Many pieces of rock and dirt separated from the ground and started to lazily float around... and that moment, what Mei was aiming for finally happened.

Above Mei, the still fighting Zabuza and Kisame felt a powerful water current pulling them down towards the ground. It didn't take them long enough to realize what was going on.

"That woman... just what the hell she did!?" Kisame said, forgetting momentarily about Zabuza, while trying to swim upwards as fast as he could.

"That's what you get for underestimating her!" Zabuza said, swimming as well, but not taking his eyes from Kisame. "Let's see how you fight us now that you won't have field advantage!"

Soon, the entire artificial sea was drained by the gigantic cracks in the ground, lowering the water level to a meter or so above surface, allowing Zabuza and Mei to merely use Water Walking to stand above it.

"Good job, Mei. That was impressive," Zabuza told his wife.

"A compliment from you? Now, it had to be something truly amazing to deserve something like that," Mei chuckled in return.

"I'll give you more compliments if we manage to kill this guy for good and get Samehada back," Zabuza replied.

"Your sappy and corny exchange might kill me if you keep it for long," Kisame replied, unamused, and pretending to gag.

"What's wrong, Kisame? Don't you like sweetness? I think we all could do with a little more sweetness in our lives," Mei replied, before she placed a hand on Zabuza's shoulder. "You should have seen Zabuza before. Nothing like he is now!"

"Yes, I can see. One of the deadliest, most powerful swordsmen, now tamed and under the control of a weak woman that feeds him lies in order to keep afloat a corrupt system," Kisame fired back, as he once again grew spike-like scales over his arms and shoulders. "Now let's see what YOU taste like!"

As Kisame dashed forward, Mei made a hand seal, and more tentacles shot forward as they grew in size. Kisame, however, started to spin around his feet while jumping from one side to another. With each spin, his blade-like long scales sliced some of Mei's tentacles, and absorbing some of their residual chakra.

That moment, Zabuza appeared behind him, ready to strike him down. However, with a move of his arm, Kisame was able to parry Zabuza's blow with the blade scales of his arms.

"Didn't you listen when I told you I can sense chakra in this form?" Kisame said, sounding a little irritated. "Your silent killing won't be of any use against me!"

Kisame pushed Zabuza's sword backwards, and before the latter could defend, he delivered a wide chop with his other arm. His blade-like scales started to glow blue with chakra, and the moment they hit the Executioner's Blade, they cleanly cut the sword in two, much to the masked swordsman's anger, but above all things, shock.

"Shit, my sword!" Zabuza cursed, as he disengaged Kisame and jumped back to Mei.

"Normal weapons are useless against me, Zabuza. Not even the other Seven Swords are a match for Samehada's power when it manifests through this form," Kisame boasted, before letting out a taunting chuckle. "There's nothing you two can do to cause me or Samehada any harm."

"You okay? Did he hurt you?" Mei asked, a bit concerned.

"I'm mostly fine," Zabuza said. He looked at his sliced sword with sadness and anger. Even if it still could be used, he was only half as long now. "Damn, I'll have to kill a lot of people to repair so much damage..." he then noticed his wife's severed limbs. "What about you?"

"Don't worry, I have a healing factor in this form," Mei replied, as one of her head tentacles slowly regrew. "It takes some time, but it allows me to fight for longer."

"Let's see how well your regeneration those against THIS!" Kisame said in a mocking tone as he clapped his hands together. "Water Release: Divine Maesltrom!"

The water all around the place started to stir and shake, as it started to gather around Kisame, forming a column of spiraling torrent, elevating the shark ninja above the Mizukage and her Captain Swordsman. The gigantic watery column started to move towards the two Kiri ninjas, almost like a tsunami that came back to life.

"You think you can counter that?" Zabuza asked, as he saw the giant mass of water ready to engulf them.

"I'll try," Mei said, as she started making hand seals. "Earth Release: Mountain Sandwich!"

Mei slammed her hands into the watery floor, and two gigantic rock formations raised to the sides of Kisame's titantic whirlpool, depriving it of momentum and splashing the water around as the liquid tornado was crushed. Kisame, however, managed to leap out of the way of Mei's jutsu in time, and started to make hand seals.

"Let's see how well you do against my strongest jutsu! No matter what you do, you won't be able to stop it! Water Release: Great Shark Bullet Jutsu!" Water started to gather around Kisame's arms, which took the shape of a gigantic shark. The blue skinned man then thrust both hands downwards, releasing it at Mei and Zabuza.

"You will be surprised," Mei confidently said, as she started to make hand seals of her own. "Sage Art: Lava Release Pyroclastic Meltdown!"

Mei expelled a barrage of lava projectiles from her mouth towards the coming water shark. The two attacks eventually clashed, resulting in the lava projectiles exploding upon contact in a fiery blast, and struggled to push each other back. Kisame was expecting that his attack would literally eat through Mei's, and absorb its chakra to become even stronger, but for some reason, it was unable to cut through the lava explosions.

"I don't get it. I can feel it absorbing the chakra of the lava release attack. Why it's not pushing forward? Is that woman pouring more chakra into her jutsu than it gets absorbed?" Kisame thought, as he descended towards the water. Then, he noticed something: the intense heat of Mei's lava blasts was slowly but surely evaporating his shark. "That cheeky woman! She knew she couldn't beat my jutsu with brute force, so she opted to destabilize it through heat! I have to-"

"Water Release: Water Dragon Jutsu!"

Kisame felt a spike of chakra below him, and looking down, he saw the water gathering in a spiraling column, before it took the shape of a serpentine dragon. The dragon then let out a roar, and lunged at the still airborne Kisame, was unable to dodge, and was trapped between the watery beast's jaws.

"Forgot about me already? I might not be as strong as Mei, but I can sure be a thorn in your side!" Zabuza boasted, as he made another hand seal.

As the water dragon arched down, Kisame started to absorb its chakra. However, it was too late. Before the dragon could break down into harmless liquid, Kisame was slammed against the floor, making a huge splash. Even if that wasn't nowhere enough to put Kisame down, it did cause no small amount of harm.

" Damn... that... hurt more than what I'm willing to admit," Kisame thought, as he tried to get back on his feet. Being fused with Samehada granted him a healing factor that he could keep running by absorbing more chakra from his opponents. However, right now it wasn't healing him as fast as he was hoping. Splashing sounds warned him that Zabuza wasn't done. And indeed, he was coming at him with his broken weapon.

"Don't think I'm done yet!" Zabuza said, as water started to gather around his ruined weapon, taking the shape of the missing chunk Kisame had cut before. "Water Release: Water Spirt Blade!"

" Excellent! That fool is going to provide me with enough chakra to heal my wounds!" Kisame happily thought, as he prepared to catch the attack. "I only need to-"

"Fire Release: Double Searing Lash!"

Suddenly, Kisame felt searing pain as two whips made of fire wrapped themselves around his forearms, and pulled them back, leaving him defenseless against Zabuza. He tried to absorb them as well, but deep down he knew that he couldn't do it in time in order to stop Zabuza's attack.

"Time to end this already!" Zabuza said, as he delivered an horizontal chop to Kisame's torso. The moment the watery blade made contact and dug into the Akatsuki's flesh, sharp blue scales started to pour from the wound instead of blood or guts. Zabuza continued to dig even deeper, until Samehada was forced out of Kisame's body.

Kisame stumbled forward, falling on one knee, the forced way the fusion was terminated leaving him dazed. Still, he was lucid enough to know that without his sword, he'd be defenseless against Mei. He extended his arm "Samehada, to me!"

Like a loyal dog, Samehada flew towards Kisame. However, Zabuza managed to get in the way, and the sentient sword let out a whimper of pain as Zabuza kicked it away.

"No! Samehada!" Kisame shouted, as he tried to move towards his sword.

"Not this time!" Zabuza said. "Mei, now's your chance!"

Mei nodded, and made more hand seals as fast as her hands allowed her. "Water Release: Water Severing Wave!"

Mei expelled a high pressurized stream of water from her mouth, as thin as a thread. She quickly moved the stream in a wide arc towards Kisame, cleanly cutting his head from the rest of his body, which fell to the ground, motionless.

There was a moment of silence as the two Kirigakure ninjas processed what had happened. Did they win? Was the fight really over?"

"Is he dead?" Mei dumbly asked, as exhaustion caught up to her, and fell to her knees.

Zabuza walked towards the headless body, and kicked it a couple times. "I'm no medical ninja, but I don't think this guy is getting up anytime soon. Heh, just like I said. In the end, he wasn't that good without his precious Samehada."

Speaking of which, the sentient sword managed to crawl towards the dead Kisame, and started to whimper like a puppy who just lost its owner.

"Look at that. It seems Samehada is crying the death of its master," Mei observed, before her expression hardened a little. "It will be the only one to cry his death. Today, justice has finally been done. Our greatest criminal has been punished, and the treasure he stole is finally back to its rightful owners. Zabuza, put this sword on a scroll. Careful not to touch it too much."

"I know how Samehada works. And no, I don't plan to replace my Executioner's Blade with it," Zabuza grumbled, as he pulled out a sealing scroll. "Do you have any idea in mind for somebody to wield it?"

"I couple names, yes," Mei replied with a nod. "But now is not the time to talk about that. Kisame might be dead, but the battle isn't over yet, and our allies need us."

Zabuza nodded back, and after he finished sealing Samehada, he handed the scroll to Mei, and the two of them returned to the main battlefield.

Author's Note: First of all, I'd like to confirm that yes, Kisame is dead. So no, he isn't going to pull the same stunt as in canon by hiding inside Samehada while leaving a decoy corpse behind. By this point, I simply have no more use of him, so dying after giving Mei and Zabuza a fierce battle is the best he can do. So yeah, I hope you guys enjoyed Kisame's last battle, since I had this fight on my mind even before I started with Part II, and I'm so happy to finally be able to share it with you guys.

I also hope that the other fights were also to your liking. I didn't show all the Swordsmen fighting because then the chapter would get too long, and another fight against Kushimaru and Junpachi wouldn't add anything to the story, since they don't have any kind of emotional connection or meaningful bond with the living swordsmen. In fact, I had to move the resolution of those fights to the next chapter since it was getting way too long for my tastes, and I wanted to focus on Mei, Zabuza and Kisame.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

I hope you enjoyed this chapter, and please leave your thoughts in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Calm Waters

Author's Note: And another day of battle comes to an end. Here's the aftermath. Enjoy:

Chapter 106:

Calm Waters

or

Another Day, Another Battle Done

While Mei and Zabuza were fighting against Kisame, Suigetsu was helping Ameyuri to deal with Raiga Kurosuki. The two living swordsmen were staring down at the undead one, who was ready to attack at any moment.

"So, what's your plan to deal with this guy without getting fried?" Ameyuri asked in a whisper.

"I know something that can work. But I need you to act as fast as possible, and cut down both his arms," Suigetsu told her, as he adopted a defensive position. "Will you be able to do it?"

The redhead frowned at him. "Your lack of faith in my abilities is insulting."

"Just wanted to be sure, no need to get so touchy, geez..." Suigetsu said, before he caught something in the corner of his eye. "SHIT!"

For less than a second, the Hozuki clan member took his eyes from Raiga, which the zombie took as a cue to strike him down. Fortunately, Ameyuri was just as fast, and she was able to parry the blow with both her swords. Electric sparks danced from both blades.

"Still doubting my skill?" Ameyuri said, before pushing Raiga back with an oomph, before delivering fast paced swings, forcing the undead ninja into the defensive. That moment, Suigetsu jumped forward, and tossed the Sewing Needle at Raiga as if it was a javeline. Raiga, however, managed to deflect the piercing blade without much effort.

"Ha! Amateurish!" the undead swordsman boasted.

"You think so? How about this then!" Suigetsu pulled the wire attached to the sword to retrieve it back his sword, as he aimed at Raiga with his other hand, making a finger gun. "Water Release: Water Gun!"

The white haired ninja fired multiple bullets of pressurized water at Raiga, but the undead swordsman deflected them with his electrically-enhanced swords, pushing him a little backwards with each shot. Ameyuri dashed to Raiga through his left flank, and decided it was time to attack. Her own swords also crackled with electricity. However, one hand was all what Raiga needed to block the readheaded girl's blow.

"And you aren't much better!" Raiga said, before kicking her back. "You aren't proving to be worth of a good funeral!"

"Kind of ironic, from somebody who appeared out of a coffin. And to the coffin you'll go back!" Suigetsu said, as he tossed his sword at Raiga again.

The result was the same, with Raiga easily parrying the giant needle, and Suigetsu pulling it back with the attached ninja wire. That moment, Ameyuri choose to attack once again, but Raiga's reflexes proved to be far better than they appeared, and expertly blocked her thrust, before pushing the sword aside and sending her tumbling on her back with a powerful kick.

"I'm starting to get tired of you, you cheeky little girl!" the former Kirigakure swordsman yelled, as he dashed towards her. "Die already!"

"Shit!"

Still on the ground, Ameyuri raised both swords to block the incoming swing, but said strike never came, much to her confusion. Raiga's right arm was held in the air, trembling, as if it tried to move but it was unable to.

"What the...?" Raiga said, looking at his immobilized arm in disbelief. That moment, both Raiga and Ameyuri noticed a brief metallic shine, and the two of them realized that his arm was wrapped in ninja wire. Wire that was attached to the Sewing Needle Suigetsu was pulling.

"You thought that by parrying my sword, you'll be safe, didn't you?" Suigetsu said in a mocking tone, as he pulled with even greater strength. "The greatest danger is the one that it's not so easily seen."

"Idiot! You're the one who put himself in danger!" Raiga replied, as his body started to crackle with electricity. Said electricity ran through the wires, until it reached Suigetsu, who started to scream.

"AMEYURIIIIIIIII... !" he yelled between spasms.

The redhead took no time to strike. Raiga raised his other sword to protect his immobilized arm, but the redheaded swordswoman already anticipated what he would do, and fainted to the right, before the true swing came, slicing Raiga's right arm. Not letting him any time to react, Ameyuri moved once again, and sliced the immobilized arm, breaking the connection between Raiga and Suigetsu, much to the watery ninja's relief.

"Like we said before, this is going to be YOUR funeral, nobody else's!" Ameyuri shouted before he kicked the now armless Raiga into the chest, making him fall on his back, before stabbing her two swords into the zombie's chest, and unleash an electric discharge through his body. "Sealmaster Ninjas! Take care of this asshole!"

Fortunately, a couple sealmasters happened to be around the zone, and quickly rushed to Raiga in order to seal his body. While they worked, Ameyuri walked towards Suigetsu. The last Hozuki clansman was on one knee, using the Sewing Needle as a cane, smoke coming from his body.

"Hey," Ameyuri said. "You okay?"

"I've... I've been better..." Suigetsu replied. He looked up, and saw that the redhead was offering him a hand. Suigetsu accepted it, and let her pull him to his feet. "Thank you."

"Nice stunt you pulled there. That was quite badass," the redhead complimented. "Not to say that I wouldn't beat him on my own, but thanks to you, we got rid of him much faster."

"Heh... nice to hear that..." Suigetsu said, as he felt his watery body slowly recover from the electric shock. "So, let's go help Chojuro. He won't last long against my brother on his own."

"Sure. Lead the way, Suigetsu."

...

Mangetsu and Chojuro continued their duel, both Hiramekarei clashing against each other. However, it was quite obvious which one was the most skilled swordsman. Mangetsu was the one dictating the pace of the fight, while his poor bespectacled apprentice could do little other than defend while being pushed back, until he inevitably run out of space to fall back to.

"Come on Chojuro, fight back!" Mangetsu shouted, as his onslaught intensified. "If you keep fighting like this, I'm going to kill you!"

"I'm trying!" Chojuro said, as he tried to put more strength into his blows. However, that didn't change that for every time he tried to attack his former sensei, Mangetsu attacked five times in return. "But no matter what I do, my skill pales compared to yours!"

"Your skill matches my own at the very worst! If that wasn't the case, I would never have chosen you as my apprentice!" Mangetsu yelled, as his swings became more brutal. "Come on Chojuro, show me that I wasn't mistaken! Show me how much you've grown since I last saw you!"

Mangetsu delivered one final swing with his fake Hiraekarei towards Chojuro, but the blue haired ninja reacted in time, and parried it with his own. Mangetsu tried to push forward, but found that Chojuro was pushing back with just as much strength. The bespectacled ninja wouldn't bulge, not anymore.

"You mean it, sensei?" Chojuro asked.

"I'm not one to deliver compliments if I didn't mean them. Life's too short to waste it on lies and deceptions," Mangetsu said, before smiling sadly. "I should know that better even now, given that I'm no longer alive."

Chojuro's Hiraekarei started to brightly glow with chakra, before he pushed his former sensei back.

"I always believed that I wasn't worthy of being your apprentice, sensei," Chojuro said, as he delivered a wide horizontal swing, releasing a crescent-shaped chakra blade at Mangetsu.

Mangetsu's sword glew with chakra as well, and with another strike, shattered Chojuro's chakra blast. "I know. That's why I always made my mission to make you see the amazing potential you possess. Once you see it, you'll become more confident, and will be unstoppable."

This time, the chakra around Chojuro's Hiraekarei took the shape of a hammer, as Chojuro leaped at his former sensei, slamming the hammer down. Mangetsu jumped backwards just in time to avoid the blow, but the resulting hit resulted in a powerful shockwave that pushed Mangetsu backwards, almost making him fall on his back.

"When you died, I thought it was fate's way of telling me that I was never meant to be your apprentice," Chojuro said, pulling his sword back from the shattered ground. "That maybe if you had a more competent apprentice, you would still be alive."

"Neither you nor any other apprentice would have prevented my death, Chojuro," Mangetsu replied. "Yagura's troops outnumbered us too much. Somebody had to stay in order to give the others a chance to escape. I was the best suited to delay the enemy."

Mangetsu raised the sword above his head, causing it to shine even brighter, before slamming it down, sending an underground shockwave at Chojuro, cracking the ground as it traveled and sending many rocks and pebbles flying in every direction. Chojuro tried to jump away in order to dodge it, but one of the rocks hit his glasses, breaking one of his lens, and making him lose balance and fall on his back, dropping Hiramekarei.

"Come on Chojuro, this isn't your end!" Mangetsu yelled, as he leaped at the defenseless ninja, who stumbled to recover his blade.

When Mangetsu brought his blade down, it clashed against metal rather than flesh, but it wasn't Chojuro's Hiramekarei, but the Thunderfans the ones blocking his sword. Wielding them was Ameyuri Ringo.

"Hello, Ameyuri-chan," Mangetsu said, smiling down at her. "Nice to see you."

"Feeling's mutual. AND DON'T FUCKING CALL ME AMEYURI-CHAN, ASSHOLE!" the enraged redheaded said as she channeled electric chakra through her swords, forcing Mangetsu to disengage before they could reach him.

"I'm glad to see nothing was able to keep that temper of yours down. Kunoichi as fierce as you appear only once every generation," Mangetsu said, his smile persisting. "By the way, weren't you fighting Raiga?"

"We already took care of that," Suigetsu said, as he landed besides Chojuro, and helped him back on his feet. "We figured out Ameyuri would be the best suited to defeat you, brother, so I made sure to help her finish her fight as soon as possible."

"A sensible tactic. Now-" Mangetsu said before he was suddenly interrupted when he was hurled backwards. A opened coffin emerged from underground, and Mangetsu was pushed into it, before the lid slammed it closed, and finally vanished.

"Uh? What's going on?" Chojuro asked, as he adjusted his broken glasses.

"Hey, look around us!" Ameyuri said.

Looking around, they could see that the remaining reanimations were also retreating, and so did the few White Zetsu Clones present. It seemed that the enemy had conceded the Allied Ninja Forces another victory in the war.

...

Moon

Hinata and her group had arrived to another place of interest: the ruins of a temple. Despite being obvious that no human being has been near the stone building, given its state of disrepair and the vegetation growing around it, they decided it would be a good idea to check it, since it may give them some insight into the Moon, and maybe the enemy they were going to face.

Shisui was the first one to enter, and once he checked that the place was safe -to no one's surprise-, the rest were allowed in.

On the inside, the temple was just as ruined as on the outside, with numerous puddles of water around the floor, and many piles of debris scattered around, some of them in the process of being claimed by nature, given the number of plants growing on them. Only two things appeared to have survived time: the murals on the walls - the walls that were still standing, that's it- and a large statue of a woman with horns and four arms.

"Well, that certainly looks familiar," Hinata commented, as she walked towards the statue. "Nori-san, I remember seeing that statue in your previous home. Do you know who she is?"

The Moon acolyte walked towards the statue as well, and took some time to admire it. It was partially eroded, and had moss growing all over its legs and spreading upwards, but one could still appreciate its fine craftsmanship.

"I never told you about her? Odd," the priestess said. "Anyway, this is a statue of Kalika, eldest daughter of Hamura. And before you ask, no, she didn't have horns like her father, or four arms. It's the way she was commonly depicted."

"That's... odd," Hinata said.

"It's not that Kalika looked like that, you know," Nori replied. "But there were some myths that spoke that she could turn into some sort of four armed giantess, as some kind of power she developed with the Tenseigan. No hard evidence, but our scholars and historians saw enough mentions of this to be taken into some consideration."

Hinata continued to observe the statue, but her interest quickly evaporated when she was unable to find anything else from it, and her attention was drawn to the murals of the walls, which were already being inspected by other Moon Acolytes and Hyugas.

"Hey, Nori-san, let's check the murals instead," the Hyuga Clan Head suggested. "They may provide us with some hints as to what to expect from the Moon."

"Understood, Hinata-sama," Nori agreed.

Thankfully for the two women, the acolytes already working on the walls had already deciphered what the murals said: it was an historical record detailing the Sage of the Six Paths and his brother, how they defeated Kaguya and the Ten Tails, and how Hamura and his followers left for the Moon, creating a new civilization that would safekeep earth from outworldly threats.

"Interesting," Nori said, as she inspected the last pictures of the mural.

"Something caught your eye, Nori-san?" Hinata asked.

"This," Nori said, as she ran a hand through the picture of a castle that seemed to float in the sky. "According to these glyphs, this is where Hamura and his direct descendants lived. Inside some kind of palace built inside a star."

"A palace built inside a star? That doesn't make sense," Hinata said. "Unless it's some sort of metaphor, right?"

"Not necessarily. Did you notice that, even if we're inside the Moon, it appears that there's a sun that provides light and heat? That's an artificial star Hamura-sama created with his power, and was maintained by the ensuing generations of Tenseigan wielders."

Nori pointed out a symbol that appeared to be an eye with an eight point star inside it, which according to her, represented the Tenseigan.

"That means that Toneri must be powering the artificial sun himself," Hinata said, not knowing how that could be used to their advantage. However, there was something that didn't feel right, that made no sense. The young Hyuga took no time to realize what it was. "No, wait, that can't be right. The Tenseigan was lost for literally centuries, and Toneri and I awoke ours not long ago. If the artificial sun was put out for so long, there's no way all the vegetation could have survived without sunlight."

"Very well, Hinata-sama," Nori praised her with a nod. "What's the conclusion then?"

"That the Branch House weapon powered up the artificial sun instead," Hinata said, before looking up into the sky, through one of the many holes in the temple's ceiling. "That's where Toneri is hiding his weapon. That's where we need to go next."

...

Third Division Base Camp, Nighttime

After Kisame's death, Mei and Zabuza returned to the fight, only to see it dying down as well. Most of the reanimated Swordsmen of the Mist had been put down and sealed, with only Mangetsu, Jinpachi and Kushimaru managing to escape before they could be neutralized. Other reanimations also escaped with their lives (or living deaths) but most of them were sealed and captured.

The next course of action, naturally, was to set up a base so the tired ninjas could rest and the wounded could be healed by medics, and wait until the next supply convoy could replace all the weapons, food and medicine that they had used during the battle and in the aftermath.

Thankfully, the battle has cleared quite a lot of the surrounding forest, leaving an excellent place in order to set up a base camp. Everybody took no time to do so, given that they were both hungry, exhausted and hurt, and wanted to do nothing but to rest and relax.

Though, one ninja couldn't rest no matter how much she wanted to, given that, as the Division Commander, Mei had to report the result of the battle to the Allied Ninja Forces HQ. Mei was now inside the tent designated for communications, covered in sealing tags that both shield those inside from prying eyes. She was sat with her legs crossed in front of a similarly sat Yamanaka, this one wearing a special helmet that amplified his mental powers in order to create a link with HQ.

" You brought us excellent news, Mizukage," she heard Jiraiya's voice inside her heard. "With the death of Kisame and the recovery of Samehada, Akatsuki has lost a very important asset."

"Unfortunately, it didn't come without a cost," Mei replied in resignation. "Kisame alone killed dozens of our ninjas before we could put him down, and many more died to the other enemies. Akatsuki is an even more fearsome adversary than we thought."

" Bah, the important part is that we won, didn't we?" Onoki's voice said. "That means that they lost more people than we did."

" How can you say that, Onoki?" Mei could hear Ao's voice quaver with anger. "Plenty of human lives have been lost! How can you dismiss them like that? Did you lose your tact in your advanced age?"

" Watch your mouth around me, you one eyed Kirigakure brat. I already experienced my fair share of deaths, so don't dare lecture me about that!" The former Tsuchikage replied. "This is a war, and people die in wars! I don't like it anymore than you do, but that's the way it is!"

" You only say that because you know that Kirigakure ninjas are the majority of the Third Division!" Ao fired back. "If it was the division lead by your graddaughter-"

"Ao, enough," Mei interrupted her head of intelligence before things could escalate. "This is no time for such petty quarrels. Onoki-san is right, tragic as it is, we can't fight a war without losing soldiers. This isn't the first time I led my men in battle. And while it never gets any easier, I know what it feels to see ninja under your command die in battle."

Neither Ao nor Onoki continued their argument, much to the Mizukage's relief, and probably those in the HQ with them. Now it would be the best time to divert attention to other matters.

"My ninja will need new weapons, armors, clothes, food and medicine. When can I expect the next supply convoy to arrive?" Mei asked.

" I already sent one the moment news of your victory reached my ears," Jiraiya replied, much to her joy. "It should be there by tomorrow morning. Can you hold up with what you have?"

"I believe we can, Supreme Commander. Though we can't never be sure as for when the enemy will strike again, so it'd be for the best if those supplies arrived as soon as possible," Mei told him.

" They're going as fast as they can, Mizukage. I can assure you that," Jiraiya replied, before he decide to change the topic. "Now, what can you tell us about the enemy? What kind of opponents you and your troops had to face?"

"As expected, most of their forces were composed by those Zetsu clones. The majority were what we called the "standard" variety, but there were several Brutes and Snipers. Fortunately, we knew about them in advance and thus my ninjas weren't caught by surprise, and knew how to deal with them."

" No flyers?" Mei heard Chiyo's voice ask.

Mei shook her head, before realizing that they couldn't see her. "We didn't see any of them. And thank goodness, because this battle was bad enough without the enemy having aerial support."

" If I'm allowed to give my opinion, my guess is that they didn't use their air force because they expected us to counter it," Shikaku chimed in. "It may be a ruse to make us lower our guard, and deploy it once we did so they can hit us when it hurts the hardest."

" Whatever they're planning, it won't catch us off guard. I already devised a plan to put in motion whenever they think they can use the sky against us," Jiraiya firmly stated. "Now, Mizukage, what about the reanimated ninjas?"

"You believed that the first batch of zombies were merely testing our strength before Orochimaru would break out the big names at the right moment. So far, it seems that he decided that the moment has already arrived. The reanimations had many members of the Uchiha Clan, as well as some other strong individual ninjas of many villages, both major and minor. But chief among them were six deceased members of the Seven Swordsmen of the Mist, complete with a fake replica of the sword they used to wield, led by Kisame Hoshigaki. Though you know about that part," Mei explained. "Unfortunately, we were only able to permanently neutralize about half of them, so expect Kushimaru, Jinpachi and Mangetsu to show up again in another battlefield."

" Understood. That was... troubling. We'll make sure to nail them down the next time they show up," Jiraiya replied.

"Supreme Commander, may I suggest that every village makes a list of their strongest or at least well known ninjas? It is likely that we will face more of them and having readily available info would be a big boon," Mei asked.

" Already doing that, Mizukage-sama. Hopefully we'll have a comprehensive and detailed list before Akatsuki decides to strike again," Shikaku told her.

"Understood. I'm glad to hear that," Mei said with a nod. "In that case, I have nothing more to report. Permission to retire, Supreme Commander?"

" Granted," Jiraiya said. "You and your troops did a good job today, Mizukage. You earned a good rest."

Mei opened her eyes, and let out a sigh of exhaustion, before getting back on her feet, and exiting the communications tent. Her mouth curved into a smile when she saw her husband. He had been standing there, probably making sure nobody got close to the tent while she was inside, keeping guard like an angry watchdog.

"You done?" Zabuza asked.

"For the time being, sweetie," Mei said, as the two of them started to walk together towards their private tent. "Dealing with those old drones can be even more exhausting than fighting Kisame."

Zabuza chuckled, smirking under his mask. "Heh, it's on moments like these where I'm glad that I'm not in your shoes."

"What happened to your ambition of taking my place?" Mei asked, quirking an eyebrow. "Were those times in which you had to take over the hat such harrowing experiences?"

"Let's say they... opened my eyes," Zabuza grumbled. "I'm a man of action. The battlefield is where I belong, not caged in an office behind a desk. In fact, I don't know how can you stand such soul-draining job."

"I like to see it as a necessary sacrifice that I have to make in order to keep our home stable," Mei explained. "Plus the pay is pretty good."

"Not as good as all the money I bring with all the S-Rank missions I'm doing," Zabuza replied, sounding a little boasting. "And now that that blue skinned fool finally got his deserving comeuppance, that means that I'm the strongest Swordsman of the Mist alive!"

"I'm sure you are honey. Especially since you helped me so much dealing with Kisame," Mei replied, as the two of them finally arrived at their private tent. Mei sat on her bed, and started removing her boots. "Ugh, I'm so tired, I could sleep for a whole week."

"I feel you. Not even the Civil War back at home was so draining," Zabuza replied, as he sat besides her. "So, you said you have an idea about who's getting the Samehada, right?"

"Yeah. It might be risky, but it's our best bet," Mei replied. "Yagura's son, Dagura. He was training to be a swordsman. From what I heard, he was going to inherit the Helmet Splitter, even if he didn't train under Jinin Akebino himself."

"So, good old Yagura wanted to get rid of Jinin and replace him with his own son. Classy," Zabuza said, letting out a chuckle. "That would explain why did he sent him to the Crimson Citadel instead of having him executed on the spot when he felt his loyalty wasn't genuine. His brat wasn't ready yet."

"Yet being the key word. As a sign of conciliation, I allowed Dagura to continue his training, and keep him as a reserve swordsman in case of you or any of the others fell in battle, given that neither of you have formal apprentices. I wasn't expecting to recover Samehada so soon, so I didn't think he'll get his hands on them. But given the convenient timing, I think he's the best choice."

"Let's hope you're right, and he doesn't turn traitor the moment he gets his hands on Samehada, and wants to avenge his father," Zabuza said.

"Come on, have a little faith in me. I'm a very good judge of character. I mean, I think I made an excellent choice with you, didn't I?" Mei teased.

Zabuza grumbled something she was unable to understand, as he averted his gaze.

"Aw come on, don't go all tsundere on me. I thought that we left that phase behind after our honeymoon," Mei said, smiling mischeviously. She then placed a foot on Zabuza's lap. "Now come on, be a good husband, and give my feet a massage. I could use your expert hands."

"I'm not going to massge your feet," Zabuza replied, as he pushed the foot back.

"Awww, come on!" she begged, sounding like a child asking her parents to buy her a new toy. "Do it, and I let you be the one on top tonight."

Once again, Zabuza grumbled something unintelligible as he begrudgingly started to massage one of Mei's feet.

"You've been the death of my reputation, woman," Zabuza said in resignation.

"Because you know that I'm worth much more than any reputation you might build, sweetie," Mei replied. "Plus, if you care about your reputation that much, you wouldn't have spent so much time taking care of a kid, because-YEOWCH! Careful! " Mei shouted when she felt Zabuzas squeezing her foot with far more force than necessary.

"You know exactly why I took Haku under my wing," Zabuza angrily replied.

"Yes, because you wanted to turn him into your personal weapon, we all know that story," Mei replied, rolling her eyes. "That's why, once his training was complete, you let him go live to another village so he could be with his friends, girlfriend and other loved ones he met there instead of keeping him close to you. Such a heartless monster you are."

Mei expected Zabuza to react even worse to that taunt, but much to her surprise, her husband left that taunt unaddressed.

"I always have faith that that kid will be smart and resourceful enough to stay alive," Zabuza said. "But now, with the war and the kind of enemies we're facing... I wish I could keep him at my side."

Mei removed her foot from Zabuza's lap, and inched closer to him before placing a comforting hand on his shoulder.

"I can imagine how you must feel," Mei began. "But you should remember that Haku isn't alone. He has his friends and sensei to watch his back. Plus, given that you helped train him, I'm sure he's strong enough to survive this whole ordeal."

"I tell myself that," Zabuza replied. "If only we were on the same division..."

"But you are not. Sad as it is, you must deal with it. Listen, I can't afford having you distracted like that," Mei stated sternly. "But if that makes you feel better, I'll pull some strings to give you two some time to catch up, alright?"

"I'll... I'll appreciate that," Zabuza admitted.

Mei smiled widely. "Of course you would. Now come on, you have to do my other foot."

...

"Well brats, you did it! You survived your first day of war!" Anko cheerfully shouted, as she sat among her students, sitting across a campfire. "I guess that you never felt more alive than you do now, right?"

"You can't be serious, sensei," Kin replied, shooting her a deadpan look. "How can war make you feel alive?"

"Because nothing makes you appreciate life more than being in the constant presence of death!" Anko rebutted. "Of course, being ninjas, that's a constant for us, but in times of war the feeling becomes much greater."

"Anko-sensei, I always thought you were insane," Zaku began, as he started to slowly inch away from the purplette. "But never to this extent."

"Aw, come on brats! I'm only trying to make you see the bright side of a grim situation," the Special Jonin said as she pulled several sticks of dango out of nowhere and started to devour them with gusto. "Don't think I'm somebody who thinks war is beautiful or some other nonsense."

"And how did you develop such a... bizarre outlook on war?" Dosu asked, as he carefully measured his next words, for they would touch a sensitive topic. "Was Orochimaru who taught you to think that way?"

Zaku and Kin cringed upon hearing their teammate mention the man Anko hated the most. The three ex-Oto ninjas expected the Snake Mistress to explode in a blaze of anger, but such reaction never came.

"Yeah, pretty much," Anko nonchalantly replied, as she happily munched on her dango. "One of the very, very, very few things that son of a bitch taught me that were worth keeping. I fought under him during the Third Ninja War, just like you guys are fighting under me right now. Did I never tell you that?"

"Not really. You never talk about Orochimaru," Kin replied, now sounding a little more relaxed, given that Anko didn't take offense to the topic Dosu brought up. "Not that we can't tell why."

"Ah, yeah, you have a point. It's kind of hard for me to talk about that asshole without being consumed by the burning anger of a thousand suns. Well, let's try to make an effort," Anko said, as she let out a deep breath. "I think it was like... seventeen years ago? Yeah, that sounds about right. You brats weren't even born yet. I mean, you aren't seventeen, right? Anyway, I'm digressing.

"My team rarely fought in open battles like we're doing right now. Well, both my team and many others. Konoha was outnumbered by both Iwa and Kumo, and our forces were spreaded thin. So we mostly relied on guerilla tactics to disturb the enemy troops from behind, while our powerhouses like the Yellow Flash or the Sannin fought them head on and whittled their numbers down.

"Orochimaru always requested missions that involved high profile targets. Back then, I didn't realize that he did this so he could get his hands on Bloodline Limits for him to study, and hopefully replicate.

That was a pretty big red flag flashing in front of my face, and me none the wiser."

"Orochimaru also allowed you to sign the Snake Contract, didn't he?" Kin asked.

Anko frowned. "Yep. Another of the few things that didn't come with a price tag. Or so I think. When he gave it to me, he told me I was his favorite and that it was a gift for being such a good student, and that more gifts were to come if I continued improving," Anko's hand instinctively rubbed the spot on her neck when the cursed seal used to be, and mentally thanked Hinata once again. "Son of a bitch... anyway, what about you? You used to work for him, didn't the asshole promised you a cursed seal or something like that? Many of his minions carried them, including your former sensei."

"They said that the cursed seals were only for the strongest ninjas," Zaku began. "Given how many people died trying to adapt to them."

"Otogakure's motto was that only the strong deserved to live, and the weak were nothing but stepping stones for those destined to greatness," Kin added.

"For some reason, I don't have a hard time believing that," Anko said, as she rolled her eyes.

"Otogakure had a more... experimental and unconventional approach to training ninjas," Dosu interceded. "Orochimaru believed that normal training could only get you so far, and in order to truly break your limits, you need to go beyond what was natural, and become something greater."

"Body modifications," Anko concluded.

"Exactly. Zaku was the only one brave enough to undergo such process," Dosu continued. "Kin and I weren't so sure. I decided to join the experimental weapons program instead. That's where I got my Melody Gauntlets."

"Orochimaru was also developing a program to grant ninjas Bloodline Limits. I was training to become strong enough to be accepted as a candidate," Kin added. "Orochimaru used to say that humans aren't born equal, that some have either talent or powerful inherent abilities, while others were born with neither, and that he sought to change that."

"That explains how the bastard was able to lure so many people under his wing in order to build himself an army so big," Anko commented, before shooting her students a sharp look. "I'm seriously hoping that your time in Konoha made you realize that all of that was nothing but pure bullshit."

"We realized of that before we even trained under you," Dosu began. "Mizuki-sen... Mizuki rarely trained us, and all our experimental weapons or body modifications weren't enough to beat those Konoha Genin. The fact that the three of us weren't even able to beat that Hyuga girl alone was a real eye opener."

"Though, didn't that girl develop godlike powers or something like that?" Kin chimed in. "I've been close to her, and even if I'm not a sensor I can feel the sheer power of her chakra. And those eyes of her aren't a Byakugan."

"The Tenseigan," Anko told the black haired girl. "Though, by the time you fought Hinata she didn't have the Tenseigan nor any of its assorted powers, so her victory over you was genuine. I hope that taught you that honest hard work pays better than some risky body modification or forbidden jutsu. And before you said that those worked for Orochimaru, you should realize that they came at the cost of hundreds, possibly thousands of lives. Do you really think that Orochimaru cares about his underlings? If he was willing to grant his ninjas exotic powers is because they were convenient test subjects that allowed him to experiment until the process was safe enough to use it on himself."

"You don't have to tell us twice," Kin said, looking down. "So far, we're still alive. Had we continued in Oto, we would be zombies like Mizuki."

"Actually, I have the feeling you would have been used as sacrifices to summon those zombies," Anko stated. "No offense, but I doubt that Orochimaru would have bothered to raise any of you. I'm still wrapping my head around Mizuki being raised, and the only explanation I find is that he found it funny."

Before the conversation could follow, a new voice interrupted them. "Hey there. Mind if I sit with you guys?"

Anko and her students turned around to see Rin Nohara, standing there a bit awkwardly as she awaited their response. Anko smiled and pretty much dragged her to the group.

"What kind of question is that? We used to be classmates, of course you can!" Anko energetically said, as she made Rin sit next to her. "Guys, she might not look the part, but this gal here used to go to the Academy with me. She's-"

"Rin Nohara," Kin interrupted her. Before Anko could ask, she added: "I already met her shortly before we were deployed. Her, and those other Konoha girls."

"Oh, I see. Nice!" Anko happily said. "Anyway, you already know Kin, so meet my boys, Dosu, and Zaku."

"Hello. Nice to meet you," Rin politely greeted.

"Hey, I think I heard of you," Zaku said. "You're that girl who was dead, right?"

Anko bristled, while Rin laughed awkwardly.

"Hehe, I get that a lot-"

"Just what's wrong with you, dumbass? How do you ask something like that to her?" Anko chastised him.

"Don't worry Anko, it's oka-" Rin tried to say, but the Snake Mistress wouldn't let her.

"Nope, don't defend or justify him! Otherwise he won't learn manners," Anko insisted.

Rin chuckled and shook her head. "Oh boy, you're just the same as when you were my age, Anko-san. Then again, it's a bit refreshing to see that some things stayed the same."

"What do you mean, I stayed the same? Come on, I changed a lot since you were gone!" Anko protested, pouting comically.

"Well, for once, you're still addicted to eating dango," Rin said, chuckling a little.

Anko scowled. "Sure, I like my dango, but I don't eat it constantly. Don't exaggerate so much.-"

"I'm not exaggerating!" Rin replied. Then, she placed her finger under her chin as she recalled a memory. "In fact, I do remember this one time back in the Academy where you ate so much dango, that during a sparring session you-"

Dosu, Zaku and Kin saw color disappearing from Anko's face, as she slapped a hand over Rin's mouth, silencing the brown haired medic, who tried to remove the hand keeping her quiet.

"What? What happened during the spar?" Zaku asked, leaning forward in interest.

"NOTHING! NOTHING HAPPENED!" Anko loudly shouted.

"Your reaction doesn't convey such feeling, sensei," Dosu pointed out.

Anko continued to struggle in order to keep Rin silent. "WELL, THAT'S THE TRUTH! AND WHOEVER SAYS OTHERWISE-"

However, much to Anko's horror, Rin managed to remove the muffling hand, and finished her tale.

"While she was fighting Ebisu-san, she let out the loudest fart you could ever imagine!" Rin said, giggling at the memory. "Poor Ebisu-san didn't even know what to do, and he even forfeited the spar!"

As Anko's face turned as red as a tomato, her students to laugh loudly in return. Except Dosu, who wasn't laughing openly, but one could see that the way his bandages covering his mouth were stretching, he was snickering at the very least.

"Oh boy, this is golden! With this girl, we can get so much dirty laundry on Anko-sensei!" Kin laughed. "Please tell us more!"

Then, all of sudden, multiple snakes emerged from under Anko's sleeves, wrapping themselves around the neck of her students and Rin.

"Rin, the next time you reveal any embarrassing past event involving me, all of you will suffer a slow and agonizing death," Anko seethed, as she glared at all of them.

"Come on Anko-san, what I told them wasn't that embarrassing," Rin tried to protest.

"You mean that you have stories even more embarrassing?" Kin asked, elated. The snakes around her neck tightened their pressure. "... which I'm not interested in hearing, and neither are my teammates."

Pleased, Anko finally released her snakes from her students and childhood friends.

"Now, enough talking about my past, let's switch the topic to something less... infuriating," the Snake Mistress said. "Say, did you guys get to watch the Seven Swordsmen in action? The fact that they had to fight a previous generation of Swordsmen made the fight even cooler! Oh, those swords! Who could get their hands on them! My favorite is the one that makes explosions!"

Rin, Dosu, Zaku and Kin had to spend the rest of the night hearing Anko fangirling over the Swordsmen of the Mist and their swords.

...

Speaking of which, the Swordsmen of the Mist -minus Zabuza, who was with Mei- were also sitting around a bonfire, enjoying a warm meal after such a brutal battle. Some other Kiri ninjas also gathered near them, hoping to see, and maybe even talk with the foremost ninjas of their village other than their Kage.

"I might have take it a little longer, but I tell you, I could have destroyed that Raiga creep and his fake Thunderfangs myself," Ameyuri boasted, before taking a bite of her fried squid.

"We know. You only said it about sixty times already," Suigetsu groaned, as he rolled his eyes.

"Because it's the truth!" Ameyuri insisted. "Anyway, thankfully that guy's spirit will be back to whatever hell Orochimaru pulled him from."

"Yeah, and Kisame, Juzo Biwo and Jinin Akebino have been sealed and terminated as well," Miyako added, hoping to introduce some positivity in the conversation. "Of the enemy seven swordsmen, more than half have been eliminated."

"Too bad my brother isn't part of that half, but the one that got away," Suigetsu said, his voice laced with some bitterness. "Well, minus the hell part."

Ameyuri didn't say anything, but his expression visibly softened.

"It had to be pretty hard for you, seeing your brother being made into such a mockery of his living self," Miyako sympathetically said.

"A bit, yeah. Though, admittedly, it was nice to get to talk to him again," Suigetsu admitted.

"Agreed. I always thought that I was an unworthy apprentice to him, but hearing his words of reassurance..." Chojuro chimed in. "It renewed my strength."

"That's why we have to try our hardest to make sure my brother goes back to the place he belongs to," Suigetsu firmly stated. "Orochimaru won't defile my brother's soul and memory any longer!"

"For that, we'll need Ameyuri," Miyako said, looking at the redhead. "So make sure you don't get killed until we face Mangetsu again, okay?"

"Ha! As if any of those pathetic zombies could even be close to kill me," Ameyuri scoffed. "If I didn't know you any better, Miyako, I'd feel like you were trying to get under my skin."

"Given that zombies are so below you, maybe we should have let you fight Kisame," Miyako said, smirking at the redhead. "It took Mizukage-sama and Zabuzataicho's combined power to put an end to him, but I'm sure you would have done it in half the time."

"See? That's what I'm talking about. Now, that's a proper challenge. Too bad they had to call dibs on him," Ameyuri said, taking another bite of her squid. "Chojuro and I got to fight him back when we conquered Kiri, but the coward ran away."

"A-Actually, we only got to fight water clones of him, while Zabuzataicho fought the real one," Chojuro felt the need to correct her. "While we beat the clones, Zabuzataicho could barely hold his ground against the original, and I don't think that even with our help we could have defeated him."

The bespectacled swordsman felt an overwhelming killing intent focused on him, and realized that opening his mouth was a huge mistake when he saw Ameyuri piercing him with a furious glare.

"You really are a glutton for suffering, aren't you, four eyes?" Ameyuri seethed.

"Hey, hey, calm down," Miyako said, placing a hand on Ameyuri. "Don't be mad at the boy because he revealed the truth behind your boasts."

"Besides, you don't need to boast. We all know how strong you are and how hard you worked to be worthy of carrying those blades," a new voice said.

Suigetsu turned around, and saw that besides Chojuro was sitting a man he never saw before. He had tanned skin, shoulder length black hair, a thin moustache and a goatee. He was happily eating some fried beef.

"And who the hell are you?" Suigetsu asked, wondering how this stranger felt entitled to intrude in their conversation. Though for some reason, his voice sounded oddly familiar.

"I'm Kumori. Couldn't you tell?" Kumori said, before nodding at the Splatter besides him.

"THE FUCK!?" Suigetsu asked. "YOU TOOK OFF YOUR MASK!"

"Yeah. How else I'm supposed to eat?" Kumori asked. "Though, even if you don't know what I look like, at least you should have recognized me through my voice."

"I didn't know you spoke! I never heard you speak before today!" Suigetsu angrily protested, before he turned at the others. "Did you guys knew he could speak?"

Much to his shock and growing frustration, all of them nodded.

"He only stayed silent whenever you were present. Said he liked to get a reaction out of you," Miyako said, giggling a little.

"And it was worth it every time. Too bad I won't be able to do that again. Oh well, better end it on a grand note than run it into the ground and let it become stale," Kumori said, shrugging.

"Did you guys saw him without the mask as well!?" Suigetsu asked, his anger not disappearing.

"No, not really. At least, this is the first time I see him unmasked," Chojuro said.

"Same here," Miyako admitted. "And honestly, I was also wondering who was that guy and why he was eating with us."

"Me too. And damn, you're kind of hot," Ameyuri said, letting out a whistle. "Why do you hide that handsome mug behind an ANBU mask?"

Kumori smiled. "So when I take my mask off, the ladies gush about how handsome my face is."

Author's Note: And thus the second day of battles conclude. Hope you found it as good as the previous one, at the very least. This time, the battles were getting to long, so I had to include the end of the minor fights in this chapter. Still, I don't think it messes the flow of the chapter too badly.

And another insight into what Hinata and her team are doing in the Moon. How will their new findings affect the outcome of their mission?

Man, gotta love to write moments between Mei and Zabuzza. Aren't just they the cutest? I hope you enjoyed their interactions here, because sadly they aren't going to appear again in a long time, since we need to move the focus to other divisions as well.

I also appreciated the opportunity to write more development scenes for Anko and the ex-Oto trio. I created the team at the end of Part I, and never had the chance to give it proper spotlight until many arcs later, and again I had to keep them in the background, because I decided that I wanted to give every character Kishimoto screwed their proper dues, which resulted in having a massive cast that can be such a pain in the ass to juggle. Oh well, guess I can't complain since I did what I wanted.

Also, I'd like to point out that yes, I'm aware that Anko is about three years younger than Rin, meaning that they couldn't have been classmates. However, in the flashbacks to Obito's childhood (post unmasking) we do see both Anko and Rin as Obito's classmates. This one of the many, many, many, and I do mean MANY inconsistencies that one can find examining the time period of Kakashi's formative years.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Next chapter, it's time for Mifune's Fifth Division to see some action, and for Kakashi in particular to meet and fight a very important person from his past. I'm sure you all can imagine whom I'm talking about ;)

Anyway, if you enjoyed this chapter, don't forget to review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

White Thunder

Author's Note: And here we begin another day of battles. I'm sure you guys will love this one:

Chapter 107:

White Thunder

or

Father Knows Worst

Island Turtle

As the war raged on, Naruto and Fu continued their training to master their new jinchuriki powers. Naruto tried to apply the Rasengan method in order to master the Tailed Beast Ball, but soon he found it wasn't as easy as he believed, since Tailed Beast Chakra was heavier and much harder to shape and mold than human chakra.

Given that they were making a very slow progress when it came to transform into Tailed Beast mode, Killer B decided to take a different approach to their training, and had them spar using their Chakra Cloak/Armor. His logic was that they needed more time and experience weaving Tailed Beast chakra so pure, and that once they got enough practice, they'll have less trouble reaching the Beast Form.

"Before we run we must learn how to walk, alright? So let's master what you have before you try to reach a new height," the Eight Tailed jinchuriki had said.

And thus, Naruto and Fu spend the next couple days both sparring against Killer B in their newest forms, and seeing them train on their own. They had to hold back during the spars, as per the Kumo ninja's warning, not only they could easily damage the island's ecosystem, but they could hurt Genbu himself.

When they trained on their own, Killer B encouraged them to push their limits and use their imagination to use their new power in new and creative ways. The better they could mold the Tailed Beast chakra, the less problems they'll have achieving its full potential. Part of the training also involved using normal ninjutsu fueled by Tailed Beast chakra, usually aimed towards the ocean.

"Alright guys, you're doing great, in no time you'll be the best!" Killer B cheered with a thumbs up. "But you've been training all morning, how about a little rest?"

In response, both Naruto and Fu fell on their butts, and started to pant heavily.

"Yep, without any doubt, you needed that time out. Anyway, I'm heading to my house to work on a song, though don't think you can slack off, I won't be gone for long!" Killer B said, before disappearing with the Body Flicker Jutsu.

"Man, using Tailed Beast chakra so continuously is so draining," Fu complained. "Killer B-sensei makes it look easy."

"Eh, he has far more experience than us. I bet we'll be on his level in no time, sis," Naruto replied.

Fu raised an eyebrow, noticing that last word. "Uh, what did you call me? Sis?"

"Yeah. You don't like it?" Naruto asked.

"Well, we aren't related. Not that I wouldn't like the idea of having you for a brother, but it's kinda weird," Fu replied.

"We did bond a lot over the past few months. Especially since we're jinchuriki. I like to think of us jinchuriki as family. We're nine of a kind, we have something nobody else has, something that links us and makes us unique," Naruto began, smiling brightly. Though his smile disappeared, as an expression of bitterness crept up his face. "Four of a kind now, thanks to Akatsuki."

"Don't you mean three?" Fu corrected him.

"I'm not leaving Gaara out," Naruto firmly said. "He might not be a jinchuriki anymore, but he was one for most of his life, since even before he was born. He underwent the same experiences as we did, probably even worse, and thus knows the struggle of having a Tailed Beast sealed inside you against your will."

"You have a very high opinion of him, don't you?" Fu asked.

"Yeah. I believe that, even if he wasn't a jinchuriki, he would still be a very precious friend to me. That's why I like to think of him as a brother as well," Naruto earnestly said.

"I see. Well, if that's that important to you, then you can call me your sister... bro," Fu replied, smiling at Naruto, who smiled back. "You know, I always wanted to have a little brother..."

However, Naruto's smile disappeared the moment Fu's smile turned into the most evil smirk he ever saw. In a flash, Fu was onto him, a strong arm wrapped around his neck while she used the other to give the blond a noogie.

"... A little brother to torture to no end! MWAHAHAHAHA!" Fu laughed maniacally, as she harshly rubbed her knuckles on Naruto's head. "Feel my sisterly love!"

"ACK! Get your hands from me, you maniac!" Naruto screamed, trying and failing to break Fu's hold, but the green haired girl was way stronger than him. "I changed my mind! Kaida is the only sister I want!"

"Oh no, no take backs! I'm your sister now!" Fu laughed, as she continued her playful torture.

Eventually, she decided to release the blond, who indignantly protested about Fu's childish antics, while the Taki kunoichi laughed her ass off.

"You're a psycho, did anybody tell you that?" Naruto asked, rubbing his sore scalp.

Fu shrugged. "Eh, I've been called worse," she nonchalantly replied. Then, she rubbed her chin as she started to hink. "Actually... no, I don't think I've been called worse than a psycho."

"Are you this rough with Shino too?" Naruto asked.

Fu snorted, before smiling condescendingly at Naruto. "Please, I'm MUCH rougher with him. Then again, Shino is manly enough to take in all my love," Fu proudly said, though Naruto could see the faint trace of a blush crossing her face. Naruto was going to ask something, but he noticed how the green haired girl's mood noticeably dropped. "Heh, now that you mention him... I wonder what is he doing now... and if he's okay..."

Naruto mentally kicked himself for bringing up the topic of Shino in such thoughtless fashion. Even if he also missed Hinata and was worried for her, Naruto knew Hinata was powerful enough to take care of any Akatsuki that dared to get close to her, Toneri included. Shino didn't have such power to rely on. Sighing, Naruto sat closer to his fellow jinchuriki.

"Hey, don't worry much about him. Shino is pretty strong. Plus, he isn't alone, he has all his teammates covering his back, as well as the rest of the people of the Ninja Alliance," Naruto reassured her.

"I know but... I still wish I could be there with them, and help them," Fu lamented.

"We will be there in no time," the blond said. "Though, I think Shino and the others would appreciate if we had faith in their abilities and trust them to be okay. I mean, I would hate if Hinata-hime or the rest of our friends didn't believe that I wouldn't be able to master the power of the Nine Tails."

"You know what? You're right!" Fu said, sounding determined. "I need to have faith in them, that they can hold the fort until we get there to help."

"Well said! I'm sure that they're kicking plenty of ass right now!"

...

Land of Frost

"Goddamit, we're getting our asses kicked by these guys!" Kiba complained.

The scouts of the Ninja Alliance had discovered another large force of Akatsuki moving towards Kumo. This time, they were moving through the Land of Frost, the only way to access the Land of Lightning through land. Naturally, the Supreme Commander moved the closest division to the Land of Frost, the Fifth Division commanded by Mifune, to stop them before they could set a foot on the Land of Lightning.

This army of Akatsuki appeared to be stronger than the ones fought by Kurotsuchi and Mei's divisions. Even if their numbers were roughly the same, the quality of their troops was significantly higher: there were far more Brute Zetsus on the vanguard and many Snipers on the rear guard, plus more of Toneri's Moon Puppets.

Naturally, there were also multiple reanimated ninjas, especially Uchihas and Hyugas who died during the Uchiha Coup d'etat a few years back. Soon the snowy forest became the third battlefield of the Fourth Ninja War.

Kakashi's Animal Squad had little trouble fighting against White Zetsu clones when Konoha was invaded by Akatsuki. They even took some of the Zetsu merged mutants with some well practiced teamwork and clever strategy. However, fighting against multiple Brute Zetsu was proving to be a completely different beast to tame.

"Fire Release: Blistering Firecat!"

Tamaki exhaled a massive wave of fire that took the shape of a giant firecat. The firecat dashed towards a trio of Brute Zetsu, leaving a trail of burned grass and thawed snow, before it clashed against its target, resulting in a fiery explosion. However, when the smoke vanished, while the giant Zetsu had burns over their bodies -and some parts of them were still on fire- the damage appeared to be minimal.

The closest Brute let out an inhuman roar, and slammed the ground with both fists. It sent an underground shockwave traveling forward, cracking the ground as it moved, while sending rocks and pebbles everywhere. Tamaki, Kiba and Shino were unable to dodge in time, and were thrown off balance.

"Everybody, get up before-" Kiba said, but he was interrupted when something blocked the sun. Looking upwards, he saw that the two other giant Zetsu were leaping at them, ready to smash them to pulp. "SHIT, RUN!"

The three teens and the one dog managed to run in different directions before they could be flattened by the large artificial humans, who opened a large crater when they violently landed down, sending a shower of rocks and pebbles in every direction. Soon, they were joined by the first one.

"Our normal jutsu won't work against these variant of Zetsu. Their strength and durability are simply out of the ordinary," Shino observed. A swarm of beetles emerged from under his shirt, and started to surround the giant Zetsu. However, it seemed they were unperturbed by the Aburame's attacks. "Not only their skin and muscles protects them from external attacks, but their regeneration allows them to heal the attacks that do harm them. Look, the burns caused by Tamaki-san's jutsu have already disappeared."

Once again, the Zetsu Brutes charged towards the three Konoha ninja, their booming footsteps making the ground shake a little.

"Then what the hell are we going to do to beat them!?" Tamaki asked, as she dodged a brutal punch that opened another crater in the ground.

"Yeah, I refuse to rely on the Werewolf Form so early into the battle!" Kiba complained, with Akamaru barking empathically, as they tried to blindside a Brute. "Especially with such unworthy enemies!"

"Like I said before, if external attacks won't work, then you should rely on internal attacks instead," Shino said, while making a hand seal. "Aburame Secret Art: Parasitic Giant Beetles!"

Suddenly, the Brute Zetsu fighting against the Animal Squad stopped on their tracks, and started to scream in pain as they clutched their bodies. Then, Kiba and Tamaki watched in horror as gigantic beetles burst from their bodies, ripping them apart from the inside. Despite being enemies, it was such a gruesome display, Kiba and Tamaki were green around the gills.

"What... what was that?" Tamaki managed to ask.

"An improvement," Shino laconically replied, though he then decided he should elaborate. "In the past, I used my own chakra to enlarge my beetles. But now, I instead introduce the beetles inside the enemies' body, and have them drain their chakra instead to grow. The fact that their growth also destroys the enemies' body from the inside is an added bonus."

"Man... that's fucked up," Kiba said.

"Remind me not to get on your bad side again, Shino," Tamaki said, laughing nervously.

"Do not fret. I would never use this jutsu on a comrade," Shino said upon perceiving their uneasiness. With a hand seal, the giant beetles stood to attention for a second, before launching themselves against a nearby group of normal White Zetsu clones. Their screams soon filled the air. "Plus, we're in a war, fighting against an enemy that won't hesitate to throw at us everything they have. You should use your strongest jutsu from the get go if you feel it's necessary."

Kiba let out a sigh. "Well, guess I'll have to swallow my pri-EH!?" Kiba interrupted himself in shock, as he started to shake. Alamaru whined at him.

"Kiba? What's wrong?" A concerned Tamaki asked him.

"This scent... it can't be..." Kiba said almost in a whisper.

"Well, well, well, look at that. We meet again, Kakashi's brats," a familiar deep voice said.

Turning around, they saw Kakuzu, strongly gripping a terrified Kumo ninja by the neck. In a second, he pierced his victim's chest with his hand, plucking his still beating heart out of it. A mass of threads crawled his arm, took the heart, and buried it under his skin, before stitching the gap in his body.

"And that's the fifth one," the former Akatsuki said, satisfied with his work, before tossing the now lifeless Kumo ninja aside as if he was garbage. "Now I'm ready to get serious."

"Kakuzu..." Tamaki said. "Of course Akatsuki would resurrect their deceased members."

Kiba managed to shake off his shock, and put on a brave face. "Well, it doesn't matter! We already beat you before, and we shall do it again! Plus, we're much stronger than we were when we first faced you!" Kiba yelled, and Akamaru barked in agreement.

"I wouldn't be so sure, Inuzuka brat," Kakuzu said, as he started to menacingly advance towards them. "You overestimate your contribution to that battle. It was mostly the jinchuriki of the Seven Tails and the Hyuga girl with the Tenseigan the ones who did me in, and I don't see either of them here. No ninja without that kind of power can face me and live to tell the tale. Plus, thanks to Impure World Resurrection it's impossible for me to die even if you destroy all my hearts."

"Fire Release: Great Fireball Jutsu!"

Kakuzu suddenly saw a giant fireball coming at him from above. Without panicking, he quickly made several hand seals.

"Water Release: Roaring Waterfall!"

Kakuzu opened his mouth, expelling a massive cone of torrential water, easily putting out the fireball before it could reach him. However, the undead Akatsuki heard the noise of a thousand birds chirping, and out of the water emerged a silver haired ninja with his hand coated in electricity, leaping directly at him.

"Lightning Blade!"

Kakuzu managed to cancel his water jutsu and jump back just before Kakashi Hatake slammed his electrified hand on the spot where he was standing, releasing lightning bolts in every direction that teared the very earth apart.

"Of course, Hatake wouldn't be that far away from his students, would he?" Kakuzu said with a chuckle. "I see you still rely on that noisy lightning jutsu."

"They're right, Kakuzu. We already beat you once, and we will do it again. You were already a relic from a time long past when you were alive," Kakashi said, as he pierced Kakuzu with his glare, while his students moved to stand besides him, adopting fighting poses. "We don't need Fu nor Hinata to put you down!"

"You forget that this isn't like the last time. I'm far from the only enemy you have to face. In fact," Kakuzu's eyes focused on Kakashi. "There's a certain somebody who has been revived for the express purpose of fighting you, Kakashi."

As soon as those words left Kakuzu's lips, a man in a Konoha uniform with white hair dashed past him and charged at Kakashi, wielding a tanto that left a trail of white light as it moved. Kakashi was fast enough to pull a kunai and parry the blow before it could cut him open, but the force of the stranger's onslaught was so big, Kakashi was pushed away from his students.

"Kakashi-sensei!" Tamaki screamed.

"Wait, who the hell is that guy!?" Kiba asked.

At first Kakashi didn't notice who was this new enemy, but after refocusing his sight on him, the silver haired Jonin felt his heart skip a beat. Looking at him with an expression of sorrow was a man with white hair tied on a spiky ponytail, that resembled an older version Kakashi.

"F-Father?" Kakashi stammered.

"Hello, son. Despite the horrible circumstances, I'm happy for the chance to see you again. You've grown quite a lot," the reanimation said, letting out a tear.

Kakashi was too stunned to say anything, though fortunately, not enough as to not defend himself from Sakumo's flurry of swipes, who pushed Kakashi even further away from his students. One of them had already realized the identity of the newcomer.

"That's Sakumo Hatake, the White Fang of Konoha, Kakashi-sensei's late father," Shino said, as he adjusted his glasses. "A hero of the Second Ninja war, strong enough to be considered a candidate for Hokage."

"Then there's no way Kakashi-sensei can beat him alone! Come on, we need to help him!" Tamaki urged, as she was ready to go after her sensei.

However, before either she or her teammates could move any further, their way was cut by two of Kakuzu's masked monsters landing in front of them, and another two to the sides, leaving them surrounded.

"I'm sorry, but I'm afraid I can't let you leave," Kakuzu said in a mocking tone. "Let's give the White Fang and his son some privacy to catch up. Don't worry about your sensei, you will die much sooner than he will."

The four masked monsters charged at Kakashi's students.

...

Meanwhile, at another side of the battleground, Mifune, commander of the Fifth Division, was leading his fellow Samurai against an horde of White Zetsu clones, supported by several Zetsu Brutes, and some Moon Puppets. The White Zetsu were able to morph their arms into long organic blades to parry the swords of the Samurai, and use them to try and skewer them.

The Shogun of the Land of Iron was trading blows with a couple of Moon Puppets, one of them fighting in close combat with a sword made of golden chakra, while another peppered the area with explosive spheres made of the same chakra as well.

"For not being human, I admit you have quite some dexterity," Mifune said as he parried a blow from his enemy, his own katana glowing blue as he channeled chakra through it.

The puppet pushed the katana away and delivered a brutal kick to the old Samurai's stomach, tossing him into the ground. The second puppet conjured a cluster of golden chakra spheres and made them rain over the fallen Samurai.

While Mifune was old, he was far from defenseless. Jumping back to his feet, he fell back as he parried the golden blasts he was unable to dodge in time. Several Samurai, who were seeing their leader in trouble, tried to offer him some assistance, but were stopped by the multitude of White Zetsu littering the battlefield.

"Mifune-sama is in trouble! Whoever can help him, do so!" A samurai captain, who stood out by his blood red armor, called while he delivered a swing of his chakra-enhanced axe at a Zetsu Brute.

"No! Your help is appreciated, but not needed! Samurai, you have your duty, and protecting me is not part of it right now!" Mifune cried, as his sword started to glow brighter as more chakra was channeled through it, while the puppet swordsman dashed at him. "Akatsuki needs more than this unworthy foe to bring me to my knees!"

Mifune rushed forward, ready to meet the enemy. When he was close enough, but not enough for his enemy to strike him, he delivered an horizontal swing.

"DANCING BLADE RISK!"

There was a brief but intense flash of light, and Mifune appeared between the two puppets, who stopped on their tracks. Then, after a few seconds, both human-shaped machines crumbled down into a pile of sliced parts.

"Amazing," a nearby samurai thought. "By releasing the chakra channeled into his sword in the shape of a thin wave, Mifune-sama can slash down an enemy out of the reach of his sword with the same force as if it was in striking distance. He was right, we shouldn't worry about his well being."

Mifune proved this line thought true when, in a single swift swing, managed to slice to pieces more Zetsu -this time, the normal variant-who lunged at him from multiple directions. However, the next enemy Mifune would have to face would prove to be more challenging than the weakest variant of White Zetsu clone.

"Fire Release: Phoenix Sage Fire Jutsu!"

The old Samurai managed to jump back just in time before several small fireballs rained upon the zone, exploding as they touched the ground, but the attack didn't stop there; from the smoke, multiple shuriken emerged, flying at Mifune, making a metallic whirring noise. Channeling more chakra into his katana, the Shogun of the Land of Iron spun his blade, deflecting the steel stars. As the smoke created by the fireballs started to vanish, Mifune raised his katana in a defensive stance, as his opponents came into view and looked at them with a critical eye.

His two new foes were a pair of men, one in his twenties and another good fifteen years older, both wearing a ninja uniform that looked like that wore by Konoha ninjas, except the flak jacket was black instead of green, and the crest on the forehead protector was a fan rather than Konoha's symbol. Still, the red color of the Sharingan, made even more visible by their black scleras, was a dead given for their identities.

"Uchihas," Mifune said, mostly to himself.

"Yeah, it seems that this is our punishment for following that shit Fugaku's lead and try to overtake Konoha," the younger Uchiha said. "Not only we wasted our lives, but we aren't even allowed into the afterlife either."

"Do not disrespect our leader that way!" the older Uchiha chided his younger counterpart. "Fugaku-sama always wanted the best for the clan, and acted accordingly."

"And that worked so well for us did it?" the younger Uchiha snapped, before he felt his body tensing up. He looked at Mifune. "Whoops. Sorry old man. Nothing personal, I don't know who you are -in fact, you don't even look to be a ninja- but whoever's controlling my body wants you dead."

"You should know that, no matter how much you harm us, our wounds will heal in mere moments," the older Uchiha reminded him. "If you value your life, you should try to flee."

"Thanks for your advice. Your concern for my wellbeing is appreciated, but it won't be necessary," Mifune said, as he prepared for the inevitable charge. "Do not worry, soon you'll be back to the place you belong to."

In a blur, the older Uchiha pulled a kunai and dashed at Mifune, who parried the surprisingly powerful blow in time.

" Don't look into his eyes!" the Shogun reminded himself, recalling everything he knew of the now near extinct clan. As he struggled against the older Uchiha in a blade lock, Mifune noticed that the younger one had leaped above him, wielding a kunai on each hand, ready to strike him from above. He tried to disengage and fall back, but his opponent was skilled enough not to let him to.

"Sorry old man, but this is-ARGH!"

The younger Uchiha, still mid air, was interrupted when a black sphere with a faint purple gleam smashed into his arm, tearing it from his body. Three more spheres followed the first one, each blowing a hole in his body, tearing it to pieces. The orbs then flew at the older Uchiha, carefully maneuvering around Mifune, destroying the zombie's arms, heads, and finally body. Neither Uchiha regenerated.

"These are the so called Truth Seeking Balls," Mifune said in realization. "Then that means..."

"... aaaaaand, you're welcome," a youthful voice said.

Mifune looked upwards, and saw Hanabi Hyuga floating above him, hands on her hips, and one leg slowly raised, her body language displaying the typical cockiness you get by mixing unbound power and youth. The four Truth Seeking Balls quickly returned to her, placing themselves behind the young girl's back.

"Hanab Hyuga," Mifune said, as he locked eyes with her. "While I appreciate your assistance, shouldn't you be in your post above the battlefield?"

"Eh, that's why I wanted to talk with you, commander. You see, I caught a pretty big force of flying Zetsu coming here from the south," Hanabi said, Mifune opening his eyes wide. "Soon the skies will belong to Akatsuki. I will try to hold them back, but I alone won't be able to take care of such a multitude. They'll be here in a few minutes, so you should use that time, little as it is, to prepare a way to deal with them."

"Do not worry, young Hanabi, we already foresaw this situation. For the time being, return to the skies and try to eliminate as many airborne enemies as your capabilities allow you," the wizened Samurai said. After the first battle, Jiraiya and the rest of advisors decided to formulate a counter-strategy to curb Akatsuki's newfound aerial superiority. Once it was done, every commander, Mifune included, was told to alert HQ if Akatsuki deployed their air force again.

"Aye aye, commander," Hanabi said, before returning to the sky.

"Somebody contact the communication officer and send an urgent message to HQ!" Mifune bellowed, catching the attention of several nearby ninjas and samurai. "Akatsuki is sending their air force against us, so be prepared!"

"Yes, commander!" a chorus of voices replied.

For the next few minutes, the battle continued normally, when suddenly a chain of explosions shook the ground, sending both Allied ninjas and samurai as well as White Zetsu clones flying in every direction. And from the cloud of smoke raised by said explosions emerged a man that Mifune knew too well. A man wearing an old fashioned Amegakure uniform, the lower part of his face obscured by a respirator. His hands were carrying a menacing-looking kusarigama.

"Ah, samurai," the masked man said. "This certainly brings out memories!"

"Hanzo..." Mifune said, almost in a whisper.

...

Ninja Alliance HQ

"Hokage-sama, we have a report from Mifune of the Fifth Division!" Santa Yamanaka, the HQ's communication officer, yelled. The man was sitting down with a helmet that had multiple cables connected to it, whose purpose was to amplify the Yamanaka's mental powers in order to enable long range telepathy for communication.

"What is it?" Jiraiya asked, though he already could imagine what it could be.

"A large group of the winged variant of White Zetsus have been spotted moving towards their position," Santa replied. "They're also supported by many Moon Puppets riding on flying mechanical bird-like creatures."

"Just like the other time, Akatsuki will want to end this battle through aerial superiority," Onoki guessed. "The last time, it wasn't enough."

"But this time, the ground forces our ninjas are fighting are much stronger and numerous than the first battle with Kurotsuchi's division," Shikaku guessed. "There's only one ninja in that division that can fly, Hanabi Hyuga. And while the girl is one of our most powerful ninjas, not even her will be able to face or even hold such a numerous enemy on her own. This may tip the balance in Akatsuki's favor."

Jiraiya smirked confidently. "Fortunately, I already devised a counter-strategy for this, since I knew it would happen again. Santa, contact Suzumebachi! Tell her to move her division to support Mifune!"

"Wait, wait, wait..." Chiyo interrupted. "Did you create another division? And you handed it to that girl with the bees?"

"Indeed. We believed she was the most suited person to lead it," Ao intervened. "Other than Konan, but we don't want a former Akatsuki in a position of power."

"What kind of division? How it is going to be of help here?" Onoki asked.

Jiraiya's smirk widened. "Easy. We'll counter Akatsuki's air force with one of our own."

...

Back in the Land of Frost

Kakuzu watched as his masked monsters attacked Kakashi's three students from four different sides, pelting them with fireballs, air blasts, streams of water and lightning bolts. So far, they did a good job dodging them, but the creatures' attack was so relentless that the three young ninja were unable to strike back. From time to time, whenever Kakuzu saw an opening, he'll try to land a hit, though they were agile enough to dodge them.

"I might be immortal now, but unlike that fool Hidan, I'm not going to let it turn me into a reckless idiot. Reanimations might not be able to die, but they can be sealed if they're weakened enough. Though, speaking of Hidan..." Kakuzu thought. "Hey, brats, what happened with Hidan?"

Despite being harrassed by many sides by Kakuzu's creatures, Shino took the time to answer the undead Akatsuki.

"Your partner fell at the same time you did. We might have not been able to put him down for good like we did with you, but we found a way to incapacitate him permanently," Shino explained as he dodged a pressurized stream of water, which grazed his hood, leaving a small cut.

Kakuzu let out a sigh. "Somehow, I found that easy to believe. That idiot wouldn't last a second without me holding his hand. Anyway, that's in the past... and so will you soon enough," the undead ninja threatened, before bringing his hands together and forming a hand seal.

Suddenly, two of the masked creatures jumped away, while the other two placed themselves in front of Kakuzu, and opened their mouths. Shino immediately recognized what Kakuzu was trying to do.

"Kiba, Tamaki, watch out! Those masks are the ones using Fire and Wind Release. He plans a combined attack to unleash a blaze of fire with a wide are of effect," Shino said. He bit his thumb and made a five hand seals, before slamming his palm into the ground. "Summoning Jutsu!"

While fire and wind were building up on the monsters' mouths, a giant beetle appeared under Shino's feet.

"Quickly, get on the-"

"Too late! Die!" Kakuzu said.

The two masked creatures unleashed a stream of fire and a cone of gale forced winds. The two attacks merged, the wind amplifying the fire, generating an impressive wall of fire that expanded in a cone forward, scorching the earth as it moved, as well as consuming every tree or plant it touched almost instantly. Shino's beetle took no time to fly upwards, narrowly avoiding the wall of fire, but the same couldn't be said of Kiba and Tamaki.

"NO!" Shino shouted from above.

Kakuzu snorted a laugh, as he commanded his creatures to cease the attack. As the fire dispelled, it was obvious that nothing had survived the fiery assault. "Well, two out of three with this attack. Guess taking down an aerial target is going to be a little-"

Suddenly, the ground started to shake, and cracks started to form in front of the masked creatures. Kakuzu immediately realized what was coming, but wasn't fast enough to command his monsters to dodge, as two tornadoes coated in electricity pierced them as the loud screech of thousand birds filled the air.

"Fang Passing Chidori!"

"Chidori Drill Claw!"

There was an explosion of thread, gore and lightning bolts as two of Kakuzu's monsters were completely destroyed. The two electrical tornadoes stopped spinning, revealing to be Kiba and Tamaki. A second later, Akamaru climbed out of the hole Kiba emerged from.

"What the...?" Kakuzu asked in shock, stumbling back. His eyes looked at the holes from where the two young ninjas had come out. "Oh, I see. You escaped from my wall of fire by digging underground. Clever. Very clever. And that jutsu that looked like Kakashi's..."

"The Hiding Like a Mole jutsu is a very useful technique. Even if you don't have Earth affinity, it can be learned quickly and used very easily," Tamaki boasted. "And it's better for ambushes than the Body Replacement Jutsu."

"And yeah, the Chidori can't be used unless you have a Sharingan or something to avoid the tunnel vision thing," Kiba continued. "But guess what? The Chidori is perfect to add more edge to our physical jutsu. It won't work as an assassination jutsu anymore, but who cares? We're in a war, not infiltrating some closed place."

"I can't believe I lost two hearts so soon to you two again, almost using the same jutsu you did the first time," Kakuzu's two remaining monsters jumped back to him, standing at each side.

Shino's giant beetle lowered so it floated a couple meters above Kiba and Tamaki.

"You were very overconfident in your abilities and experience in life, and it seems that death didn't change such an attitude," Shino admonished. "That's why you're destined to lose against us again. We're much stronger than we were when we battled with you and Hidan in Taki."

"Well said, Shino!" Tamaki agreed.

As they prepared to strike Kakuzu and his two remaining creatures down for good, the sky suddenly darkened. Looking up, the members of the Animal Squad saw a mass of flying White Zetsu clones flocking the sky.

"Well, well, well, look at that. Some excellently timed reinforcements. While you have fun dealing with them, I think I'll restock on the hearts you made me lose," Kakuzu said, as he looked around. "Yes, there are many ninja already dead around that won't miss their hearts," he said before leaping away, his masked creatures trailing behind him.

"Hey, get back here, you bastard! Everyone, after him!" Kiba yelled, Akamaru loudly barking in agreement.

However, before they could run after the undead Akatsuki, the three Konoha Chunin were stopped by several flying Zetsu swooping at them from below.

...

High in the sky, Hanabi was trying to hold back the horde of flying Zetsu from reaching the ground. She decided that using her most powerful jutsu so far would be a good way to thin their numbers.

"Turquoise Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

Hanabi's four Truth Seeking Balls spun around each other, coming closer until they merged into single energy orb. Said orb exploded into a torrent of light blue flames that spreaded forwards in a wide cone. Many flying Zetsu were caught by the blue blazes, being reduced to ashes almost instantly. However, once the flames dispelled, Hanabi saw much to her shock and frustration that many more still remained, flying at her while hollering something the young Hyuga couldn't undestand among so much noise.

She made several hand seals as fast as her hands allowed her, and generated four more Truth Seeking Balls. Despite the Tenseigan coming with a rather hefty and welcome expansion to her chakra pools, Tenseigan jutsu consumed a heavy amount of chakra, and weren't something that could be spammed endlessly. Given how relatively little that first jutsu did to the enemy, she better approach this more carefully.

"Okay, that didn't do much, but what can I-YEOWCH!" the young Hyuga shouted as a golden chakra blast grazed her skin. "What the hell!?" Focusing her sight on the direction from the blast, Hanabi saw several Moon Puppets riding flying mechanical contraptions, while also preparing a barrage of blasts. "Aw damn, I forgot about those guys. They're far more troublesome than the Zetsu. And if I focus on them, the flying Zetsu will go after the people fighting on the ground... well, I guess there's no trying to fool myself into thinking I could hold this many enemies on my own."

Merging two of her two Truth Seeking Balls, she formed a shield shaped like a dome in front of her, and flew towards the incoming Moon Puppets, who greeted her with a storm of golden chakra blasts. However, her improvised shield was enough to block the enemies' attack, and slammed her shield into the closest enemy, destroying it to bits. She then split the shield back into the orbs, shaped them and the other two into spears, and threw them into different directions, impaling the puppets and reducing them to small pieces of scrap.

Not all the flying Zetsu dived down, though; some of them remained in the air, waiting for the puppets to offer an opportunity to strike. And now that the brown haired girl was no longer using those pesky black orbs for protection, it was time to attack.

"She's vulnerable now! After her!" a voice said.

"Not as vulnerable as you think!" Hanabi retorted, as she started to spin around while releasing chakra from every tenketsu. Soon, she turned into a spinning sphere of chakra. "Heavenly Spin!"

The Zetsu unfortunate enough to be close to her were blown away with an incredible force, as if a giant hand swatted a mosquito. Those not as close but still near were also blown away by the jutsu's shockwave, though many recovered just as fast. Then, Hanabi's spin speed started to drop.

"Now she's defenseless! Go!" another Zetsu said.

"Huh?" Hanabi asked, before she realized mid-spin that the Zetsu was right. "Aw, shit!" Hanabi cursed, forcefully stopping her spinning, which resulted in a brief feeling of dizziness. Having seen the White Zetsu flocking towards her, but not having the time to recall her orbs, she thrust an open palm in their direction. "Vacuum Palm!"

Hanabi released a powerful conical vacuum wave towards the White Zetsu, managing to violently push backwards many of them, but did little to stop those on the back, as well as those who dodged, who were starting to converge on her.

"Come, Truth Seeking Balls, come back to- huh?" Hanabi asked, as her expanded vision noticed something floating above her: a blue haired woman flying thanks to large wings made of paper attached to her back. While she didn't meet this woman, she had an idea of who she was.

"Paper Drizzle!"

The blue haired woman flapped her wings once, unleashing a massive storm of razor paper darts, thrown with such accuracy that while they hit every Zetsu close to Hanabi -which was torn to shreds-, Hanabi was left completely untouched. The woman then lowered to Hanabi's altitude, floating besides her.

"Are you okay?" she asked.

"Yeah, thanks for the assist," Hanabi replied, looking a bit uneasy.
"You're the ex-Akatsuki, right? Konan."

"Yes," was her only answer.

Hanabi's stare darkened a little. "My sister told me about you. She fought you and the one with the Rinnegan once. She barely made it out alive."

"You must be talking about Hinata Hyuga. And if you have a Tenseigan, you must be her little sister. Though I'm afraid I don't know your name."

"Hanabi," the young girl replied.

"Alright, Hanabi-san. I'm not going to apologize for fighting your sister that one time. The two of us fought for what believed was right, and she wouldn't have hesitated to kill me if she had the chance. I do acknowledge that she was on the right side, and I do deeply regret the lives I put to an end, or helped others to end," Konan said, before fixing the young hyuga with an unreadable stare. "I do hope that for as long as the war lasts, we can cooperate so this conflict can end as soon as possible. And once such thing happens, if the two of us are alive and want to settle the score, I'll welcome you to fight me."

Hanabi crossed her arms, and frowned. "I do know that Akatsuki is the biggest threat right now, and you're important to beat them, so you won't have to worry about me trying to kill you in the middle of the battle and passing it off as an accident or whatever. Though, I may take on that offer once the war ends."

Konan wordlessly nodded, and looked forward, where more flying Zetsu had gathered. They were all fixing Konan with a hateful glare.

"You! What are you doing here!?"

"You betrayed us!"

"No one betrays Akatsuki and lives!"

"Traitor! Traitor! Traitor! Traitor! Traitor! Traitor! Traitor!"

All the flying Zetsu felt prey to a collective rage, as they all swarmed towards the two floating kunoichi. Hanabi was a little startled, but Konan's face remained stoic and unimpressed. Her wings started to flap, releasing more small paper sheets like a bird molting its feathers. Said sheets of paper folded themselves into butterflies, and started to flock around the incoming Zetsu.

"Your words mean nothing to me. You're just disposable mooks, your fate sealed since the moment you were born," Konan said, making a hand seal. "Now perish!"

The origami butterflies glowed for a second, before they exploded. For almost two minutes, Konan unleashed a chain of uninterrupted explosions. The Zetsu unfortunate enough to be caught by the blast screamed in agony, but their voices were drowned by the thunderous explosions. By the time they ended, there were no Zetsu left. Those had survived got the message, and realized that Konan was too much for them.

"Wow..." Hanabi said in awe.

"The skies are clear! Ninja Allied Air Force, advance and support the ground troops!" Konan said.

It was that moment when Hanabi noticed a large group of ninjas approaching from behind, some of them riding giant beetles -he could tell those were Aburames, given their appearance, clothing and of course, the shades-, others giant bees, while others rode different flying animals like a bat, a pelican, a dragonfly, and so on. The one leading the division was an Iwa kunoichi riding on a giant bee.

"Squads three and four, make sure the sky is free of the Akatsuki!" the Iwa woman commanded. "Everybody else, follow me, do not lag behind! That goes for you, Aburames!"

Despite the woman's orders, Konan made no attempt to follow her. Instead, she looked at Hanabi, and asked: "I know for a fact that Hanzo of the Salamander is here, raised as an undead. Hanabi-san, can you do me a favor and locate him? I imagine you do know what he looks like."

"Eh, sure," Hanabi said, as her Tenseigan scanned the battlefield, and in no time, he found him. "Got him! He's on the western part of the battlefield. He's fighting Mifune-sama and a few of his samurai."

"Understood, thanks for your assistance," Konan said with a nod, before he diving towards the direction Hanabi said.

Hanabi pondered for a second what she should do now, if staying in the air, or go down and try to permanently destroy some of those reanimations. Her eyes caught the portion of the air force that that Iwa woman left there, facing against several flying White Zetsu and even more Moon Puppets.

"Those guys are going to be big trouble if we don't deal with them quickly. The people below can take care of the ground forces," Hanabi said, making her mind, before flying to assist her fellow Allied ninjas.

...

"Water Release: Watercutting Sword!"

The snow around Shibuki quickly melt, turning into water, before gathering on Shibuki's hand, taking an elongating shape, before it formed a sword, just in time as a Zetsu with blade-like arms dropped from above. Despite being made of water, said sword proved to be as hard as steel, and effectively parried the blow from the organic blade. The two of them struggled for a bit, before Shibuki managed to push the Zetsu back. Undeterred, the artificial human charged again, letting out a primal yell to intimidate his opponent. Shibuki, however, ducked the incoming swing, and with a strike of his own, separated the upper half of the artificial creature's body from the lower part, killing it instantly.

"Okay, that was one," Shizuki said, panting a little, as he looked around. His eyes were not so greeted to the sight of many more Zetsu fighting Allied ninjas, as casualties for both sides happened each second. "Thousands still left."

As the Takigakure leader scanned the battleground for his next target -maybe ninjas of his own village that may need his help-, something drew his attention: several Allied ninjas fighting against a single opponent he couldn't see, but instantly recognized the jutsu he was about to use.

"Water Release: Lotus Light Rupture!"

Droplets of water started to form around the group, which took the form of lotus petals. Said water petals started to spin around, unexpectedly exploding when they touched their unfortunate victims. Shibuki paled upon seeing that jutsu, not because of its sheer power, but because he already saw it before. And most importantly, who was the one behind its creation and use. As the young Takigakure leader ran forward, the smoke of the explosions faded away, revealing the caster of the jutsu, confirming Shibuki's fears.

"No... not you..." Shibuki cried, as he tried to suppress the tears forming inside his eyes. "Father..."

Because in front of him, sporting cracked skin and black eyes, was a middle aged man with graying brown hair, a brown goatee, wearing a Takigakure forehead protector around his head, as well as the Takigakure Jonin uniform. This was his deceased father Hisen, the previous leader of Takigakure, who tragically died during the Third Ninja War due the backlash caused by the Hero Water. Hisen seemed to notice his son, and smiled wearily.

"Shibuki? Is that you, my boy?" Hisen asked. Shibuki wordlessly nodded. "I'm very happy to see that you're alive and well. And what a fine man you grew up into."

Despite the sincere praise, Shibuki flinched at those words.

"I... I tried to be a strong ninja like you, father," Shibuki began. "And to be a strong leader as well. But-"

Hisen's eyes widened, as a blade of water formed in his hand, and dashed towards his son. "Watch out, boy!"

Fortunately, Shibuki still had his water blade, and managed to parry the blow just in time. Father and son traded more blows, though it was obvious that Hisen was both the stronger and more skilled of the two, as evidenced by Shibuki being pushed back with each strike.

"You're a strong ninja, son. And I'm sure that you'll eventually surpass me," Hisen encouraged.

"Sadly that's not true. I'm too weak, and a horrible leader," Shibuki said. "Akatsuki attacked our home, and ravaged it to the ground."

"No!" Hisen shouted in horror. "Is Taki truly gone, then?"

Shibuki shook his head. "We managed to retake it, and began its reconstruction, but... we were unable to do it without Konoha's help. We needed somebody else to fight our battles and deal with our enemies."

"Son, do not be afraid nor ashamed of asking for help when an enemy proves to be too much for you alone to beat," Hisen said, as he continued his onslaught. "The safety of Taki's people should be your first priority. Did asking Konoha for help prevented unnecessary deaths?"

Shibuki wordlessly nodded, as he did his best to parry his father's attack. During one of his blows, Shibuki instead moved to the side, letting his undead father trip forward. Hisen tried to regain his balance, but Shibuki landed a powerful hit to the side of his face, sending the gray haired man bouncing against the ground. Taking advantage of this moment of helplessness, he weaved several hand seals.

"Water Release: Water Shuriken!"

The snow around him turned into water, and gathered in the shape of spinning shuriken. Hisen managed to get back on his feet and dodge some of them, but several found their marks, leaving large gashes on his shoulder and legs. However, said wounds took no time to close.

"I know the people of Taki are important, father, but... what will the world think of us if we're so helpless?" Shibuki asked. "How can I help the people of Taki, if I keep our village weak?"

"A weak village can become strong later on! A destroyed village will remain a forever ruin!" Hisen angrily snapped back, as he started to make hand seals. "Son, you know the next jutsu I'm going to use, so I pray you're able to counter it. I don't want to see you die, by my own hand no less. Water Release: Lotus Light Rupture!"

Droplets of water started to form around Shibuki, spinning around him as they took the shape of lotus petals. Fortunately for the young Village Head, he knew what to do in order to protect himself from such attack.

"Water Release: Water Tornado!"

A twister of water formed around Shibuki just in time before the water lotus petals exploded, shielding him from the chain of blasts. When the tornado of water receded, Shibuki wasn't any worse for the wear.

"That's my son," Hisen whispered, smiling in satisfaction and some pride, before the two of them continued their duel.

...

As Kakashi and Sakumo engaged in their own personal duel, they started to move away from the main battleground little by little. The two white haired ninjas took the fight above the ground, jumping from one tree branch to another, trading punches, kicks, bladed strikes, and sometimes ninjutsu. After Kakashi parried yet another blow from Sakumo, the two of them landed on a nearby branch each. Kakashi braced for his father's next attack, but it didn't come.

"Even as a boy, you were such a strong and talented ninja, Kakashi," Sakumo replied. "I always wondered just how strong you'd be when you reached your prime. I'm glad I got to see it, even if it's in such wretched situation."

"Then it's good to see that at least one of us sees the bright side of this situation, father," Kakashi replied. "I was praying that Orochimaru wouldn't bring you back, but given your reputation and skill, it was a fool's hope."

"No hope is ever foolish, son. Losing hope is," Sakumo replied.

"You're not the best one to talk about losing hope, father," Kakashi replied, as he started making hand seals. If Sakumo wouldn't attack him, then he'd take the initiative. "Fire Release: Great Fireball Jutsu!"

Calling forth the Uchiha Clan's signature attack, Kakashi breathed a massive fireball at his opponent. Sakumo's reflexes didn't let him down, and prepared another attack to counter it. After making the hand seals, he brought his hands together, the two index fingers pointing forward, as they crackled with electricity.

"Lightning Release: Piercing Light Spear!"

From the tip of his fingers, Sakumo fired a lightning bolt that flew in a straight line forward, piercing the fireball, making it burst into dozens of harmless embers, before continuing forward. However, he saw that his son was nowhere to be seen.

" So, the fireball was just a distraction, huh?" Sakumo thought, as his body tensed up, bracing for the incoming attack. "Now where did he...?"

Without even turning around, Sakumo thrust his tanto backwards, channeling chakra through it in order to increase the range of his blade, which indeed stabbed into something.

"I hope that wasn't the real you, son," Sakumo said.

To answer his question, Kakashi started to crackle, before he exploded into a burst of lightning, coating Sakumo in electricity. He tried to move, but the electricity severely impaired his movement. Sakumo managed to bring his hands together and form a hand seal. In an instant, the electricity coating his body moved onto his of his tanto, forming a blade made of lightning, and swung it upwards, just in time to parry Kakashi's lightning-enhanced kunai strike, resulting in an explosion of lightning bolts that sent both men flying into opposite directions, both landing onto the cold ground below on their backs. The two of them both jumped onto their feet, and got ready to continue their clash.

"You know, son, I have the feeling that you're not very happy to see me," Sakumo said, sounding a little sorrowful. "And I don't mean being forced to fight against me."

"What I feel right now is irrelevant. All that matters is that I need to put you down, since your existence is a threat to the Ninja Alliance," Kakashi said, lifting his forehead protector covering his left eye, revealing his Sharingan. Sakumo's eyes widene upon seeing it. "Until now, I was merely probing you, testing your strength. The real fight begins now, father."

And, after banishing the torrent of conflicting emotions to the back of his mind, Kakashi charged towards his father, ready to send him back to the place he belongs.

Author's Note: Yeah, as many people correctly guessed, Kakashi will have to fight his father. In canon he had that chat with him when he briefly died during the Pain Assault, but no such thing happened here, so time to face those daddy issues. Then again, there were a few things that the manga didn't touch that I feel should be addressed.

As for Kiba and Tamaki having a version of Chidori, you can have DryBonesKing to thank for the idea. He suggested that it would be nice if Kakashi got to pass his signature jutsu to his pupils, given that Sasuke isn't his student this time around (but then again, Sasuke used the Chidori for evil stuff, so it would have been better if the didn't teach it to him). Of course, I had to modify it to get around the limitations of a lack of Sharingan, but guess that I came up with something workable.

So yeah, next chapter, the Kakashi vs Sakumo battle in full, as well as the resolution of the minor battles.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

If you liked what you read, please leave a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Lightning Clash

Author's Note: Yeah, I'm aware I have several PMs that I need to reply. I'll try to answer them as soon as possible.

In the meantime, enjoy the next chapter:

Chapter 108:

Lightning Clash

or

Father's Day Special

"Come on Akamaru, let's go! Human Beast Combination Transformation: Berserker Werewolf!"

"Let's do it Hina! Human Beast Combination Transformation: Cat Warrior!"

Kiba and Tamaki merged with their animal companions, and after a brief burst of smoke, their human forms were gone, replaced by their animal-like forms. Wasting no time, the two teens leaped forward, ready to rip the flying Zetsu to shreds.

"Hey Tamaki," Kiba said, as he teared the wings from a particularly unlucky Zetsu clone. "I bet I can kill more of these things than you do!"

The cat kunoichi wasn't somebody to leave such challenge unanswered, especially if it came from her long time rival. "Oh, you're on!"

The corpses of the White Zetsu clones started to pile around them as they fought with all their strength. Watching from above, Shino shook his head upon seeing how his teammates once again made light of a dire situation for the sake of one-upping the other. Then again, given their drive and the gusto they were slaying Zetsu clones with, maybe that was a good thing.

"Guess I can stop worrying about them, and focus on the enemy at hand," Shino thought. With a hand seal, he directed his remaining giant beetles to fight against the flying White Zetsu surrounding him. Several tried to attack him from multiple directions, but Shino already had a way to counter them. Spreading his arms, swarms of beetles emerged from under his sleeves, and started to fly around him and his giant beetle, almost like forming a protective barrier. "I'm sorry, but you won't be able to land a solid hit on me no matter where you attack me from."

Such boast proved to be his undoing, as something from below violently hit his giant beetle, causing it to lose balance and accidentally drop Shino to the ground. While he wasn't flying so high to worry about the fall harming him in any serious way, it still hurt.

"Ugh... I dropped my guard..." Shino chastised himself, as he adjusted his shades, while getting to his feet as quickly as he could. He was in a very vulnerable position. He scanned the battleground to see how he had taken him down, and found his answer when he saw Kakuzu with his right arm raised, just as his right fist reattached itself to it. "You..."

"I grew to hate airborne targets. I also grew to hate the people that were involved in my death," Kakuzu said with an angry snarl, as his two remaining monstrosities landed besides him. "And guess what, you happened to be both."

Without having to ask for help, Shino's summoned beetle instantly dived from above towards Kakuzu. And without Kakuzu having to order them to do it, his remaining masked monsters released a torrent of water and a storm of lightning bolts, forcing the oversized coleopterous to change course and fly away in order to avoid the attacks.

"You know, I always felt that people who held grudges were fools, that let petty revenge get in the way of the truly important things in life, like wealth," Kakuzu began, as he started to advance towards Shino. "But given my current state, I think I'm going to indulge into revenge just this time. You'll be a good starting point. Then, the mutt and the cat girl. I shall present your decapitated heads to Kakashi, if he survives his encounter with his father, that's it."

Shino took a step back, and made a hand seal. Kakuzu raised his arm again, and fired his hand at Shino.

"I know you're a ranged fighter, hence the first order of business is to bring you to hand to hand distance!" Kakuzu said.

"Thousand Bee Stings Jutsu!"

Suddenly, multiple razor sharp stings rained over Kakuzu, forcing the former Taki ninja to jump back. He managed to harden his skin in order to make sure the surprise attack didn't harm him, but his jutsu didn't extend to the threads holding his body parts together, and the threads connecting his arm and forearm to the rest of the arm were severed, leaving him one armed.

"Dammit! What the hell was-?"

Suddenly, Kakuzu found himself staring at a gigantic bee, with a smirking Iwa kunoichi riding on its back. Before Kakuzu had time to react, the bee opened its jaws, releasing a torrent of sticky honey that left the undead ninja pinned to the ground.

Thankfully, his masked monsters sensed their master's plight, and quickly went to aid him. Unfortunately for them, the newcomer wasn't going to let them release her prey.

"Sorry Kakuzu, but that's not gonna happen. I read your entry of the bingo book, and I know about those things you create with the heart of your enemies," the giant bee rider said as she made several hand seals. "Bee Bomb Jutsu!"

Suddenly, a swarm of bees appeared out of seemingly nowhere, split in two groups and flew towards the incoming masked monsters. Both Shino and Kakuzu realized that most of the bees were carrying explosive seals. Kakuzu tried to order his minions to turn back, but it was too late. The bees latched onto them, and the Iwa ninja triggered the explosive tags. Kakuzu's monsters were engulfed by a multitude of explosions, reducing them to charred remains.

Before anything could happen, Shino rushed towards the trapped Kakuzu and placed several chakra suppressing sealing tags onto the honey trap, which would ensure that the former Akatsuki wouldn't be able to brute force the way out of the trap. The giant bee lowered its position almost close to ground level, and Shino could hear the woman letting out a mocking laugh.

"An Aburame saved by a member of the Kamizuru clan," the woman said in an almost taunting manner. "And not just any Aburame, but the heir to the clan. How does it feel?"

Shino adjusted his glasses, and looked at his savior. She recognized her as Suzumebachi Kamizuru, current leader of what was left of the Kamizuru clan.

"Regardless of our respective clans' past history, I will always be grateful towards anybody that helps me in battle," Shino said, before crossing his arms and scowling a little. "However, you should do good in revising that attitude. We're allies now, fighting an enemy unlike any other. Petty squabbles have no room in the battleground."

Shino's dressing down erased Suzumebachi's smirk of superiority, and scoffed at him. "Hmpf. You Konoha scum are always so self righteous. I think I wasted enough time with you, brat. I have a battle to win."

As Suzumebachi and her giant bee returned to the skies, Shino shook his head before looking for his next opponent.

...

"A Sharingan," Sakumo said, dumbfounded. "Just... how? Did you take it from an Uchiha corpse or something? How is that the clan allowed you to keep it?"

"First of all, this eye is the parting gift of a precious friend," Kakashi began. He repressed the image of Obito as a member and currently leader of Akatsuki. Even to this day, even after fighting him, he still had a hard time reconciling with the fact that his teammate and the monster who started this war were the same person, and sometimes he refused to believe they were one and the same. "And second, the Uchiha clan no longer exists. As a big clan, at least. Their numbers can be counted with one hand."

"I did see plenty of Uchiha among the reanimations," Sakumo began. "Many Hyugas as well. Son... just what happened to Konoha?"

"Plenty of disasters befell the village. Fortunately, we managed to endure, and came out stronger as a result," Kakashi replied.

"It's a relief that at very least, you're still alive and well," Sakumo said, as his body tensed, ready to attack. "Make sure my body doesn't betray such statement!"

Sakumo leaped forward, his tanto leaving a trail of white light. Kakashi parried once again his father's weapon, and pulling a second kunai, he counter attacked with a series of quick swipes that Sakumo expertly parried, even knocking a kunai out of his hand, Kakashi wasn't deterred, and before parrying another blow from Sakumo, he pulled another kunai and used it to stab his father in the neck. Sakumo was fast enough to catch Kakashi by the wrist before he could do such a thing.

It was then when Sakumo realized that the second kunai had an explosive tag attached to it, which was already ignited. He opened his eyes widely, and tried to tell his son to avoid the explosion, but it proved to be unnecessary, as Kakashi disappeared in a cloud of smoke, leaving a log wrapped in more explosive tags.

There was an explosion, followed by a chain of more blasts, so powerful and in so quick succession that they took down several trees, clearing out a small area of the snow covered forest. From the ensuing cloud of smoke, Sakumo emerged, landing on the giant crater formed by the explosions. He wasn't incapacitated as Kakashi was hoping, but he definitely was far from unharmed. He was missing a whole arm -the one he was holding the White Chakra Saber with- as well as several chunks of his body, including part of his head. Such damage would have been enough to kill a normal man, but alas, it was insufficient for a reanimated ninja.

" Still, I managed to weaken him enough. All he needs is the final blow!" Kakashi thought, as he dashed at Sakumo from behind, his Sharingan focused on his still regenerating form, while electricity coated his right hand as he readied his signature ability. "Lightning Bla-"

"Lightning Release: Lightning Flash!"

Sakumo's body crackled with electricity for a fraction of a second, before a bright white light engulfed the area. The effect was even worse for Kakashi given his Sharingan, and instinctively stopped, cancelling his jutsu, and closing his eyes shut, but still getting ready for a counterattack as long as his blindness lasted.

" He was able to use that jutsu without using hand seals," Kakashi thought, as he gritted his teeth under his mask. "Was he always this good, or am I underestimating him?"

Kakashi opened his eyes slowly, and was greeted by a blurry sight. The copy ninja directed chakra into his eyes in order to restore his eyesight faster, but when the blurry vision was gone, so was Sakumo.

"You're fighting full of anger, son," Kakashi heard Sakumo's voice. He tried to pinpoint its location, but was unable to track it. It felt like it came from multiple directions at once. "You're letting your emotions cloud your judgement."

"I'm fighting my long deceased father that killed himself when I was a mere child!" Kakashi fired back in an uncharacteristical display of anger. "Excuse me if I'm not a paragon of stoicism!"

"Yet I have the feeling that your anger isn't entirely directed at the man who orchestrated this scenario, but at me as well," Sakumo said. "Am I right, son?"

"Just keep talking. That way I can track your position better and end this charade already," Kakashi said, as he nervously looked around, trying to predict where Sakumo's attack will come from.

"Lightning Release: White Fang!"

Sensing the faintest breeze of air behind him shift, Kakashi turned around as he channeled electricity through a kunai, parrying a sword made of pure electricity, that was being channeled through a kunai. Sakumo managed to overpower Kakashi and push him back, before delivering more swings. While the Copy Ninja managed to dodge them all, his flak jacket got a few cuts.

" His specialty was close combat. I can't beat him in that area. I need to put some distance. Let's raise a wall and- no, not a wall, earth jutsu is awful to counter lightning, though there may be something..." Kakashi thought as he continued to jump back from Sakumo's swipes. He realized much to his frustration that his father was only using one arm, while the other was still regenerating. "I can't let him push me into the defensive! Earth Release: Hiding Like a Mole Jutsu!"

The moment Kakashi's feet touched the ground, he quickly sank into it as if it was made of water rather than solid matter. Not that such a just was going to stop Sakumo.

"I'm afraid that's not going to be enough, son. Lightning Release: White Fang Wolf Bite!" Sakumo sadly said, as he slammed his lightning sword into the ground, releasing a mass of lightning bolts in every direction, breaking the ground and releasing rocks and pebbles in every direction.

Among the objects launched into the air, Kakashi was among them, however, the Copy Ninja wasn't as surprised as one would expect, probably because he was already expecting his father's reaction. While mid air, he made several hand seals.

"Fire Release: Phoenix Fire Sage Jutsu!"

Kakashi breathed a volley of fireballs from above towards his father, whose torn arm finished regenerating. Grabbing the kunai with both hands, the lightning sword it was projecting grew in length, and started to spin it so fast, it looked like a disc of light. The spinning lightning sword created a makeshift shield that deflected all the fireballs that would have hit him.

" Just as expected. And while he's doing that, he can't see me," Kakashi thought as he rushed towards him, making hand seals. His hand crackled with electricity as the screech of a thousand birds filled the air. "Now, it's just a matter of landing a strike. Lightning Blade!"

As the White Fang stopped the spinning, Kakashi thrust his lightning-coated hand into Sakumo's midsection. However, Sakumo was fast enough to use his elemental sword's remaining momentum to move it down and intercept Kakashi's attack.

"I know you're another clone," Sakumo stated.

"Then this may not surprise you," Kakashi said, before he exploded into a mass of lightning, surrounding Sakumo. However, the Lightning Clone's discharge was deflected by his lightning sword, and failed to do any harm.

That second, the ground around Sakumo started to rumble, and three Kakashis emerged from the sides and behind him, all three of them with another Lightning Blade already prepared, ready to impale him from three different sides.

However, Sakumo didn't become a living legend by letting himself fall prey to such ambushes. Displaying an amazing, almost inhuman speed, Sakumo started to spin around his feet while pulling a second kunai with his other arm, generating a second lightning sword through it. When Kakashi and his clones landed their strikes, all they hit were Sakumo's elemental swords. The energy clash between all the lightning jutsu resulted in three explosions that destroyed Kakashi's shadow clones, while launching the real one several meters back, painfully bouncing a couple times on his back.

"When you were a kid, you told me you wanted to fight me when you were old enough," Sakumo recalled, his eyes glinting with a sad light. "I presume that this is not what you were expecting, were you?"

"Are you talking about the beating you're giving me, or the fact that you're a reanimation under the control of one of Konoha's greatest traitors?" Kakashi bitterly asked, as he shook off the pain and got back on his feet as best as he could.

"Son, you can't beat me if you keep fighting like this," Sakumo said.

"Shut up. You're nothing special. People might have called you a legend, but I've seen ninjas that could wipe the floor with you," Kakashi seethed. "And you would have seen them, have you not took your life like you did!"

Fueled by anger, Kakashi charged forward. Sakumo smiled inwardly. So, that was what was keeping his son from doing his best. Now that he had that hint, there might be some hope.

...

At another side of the battlefield, other one on one duel took place. This time, between Hanzo the Salamander, former leader of Amegakure, and Mifune, the commander of the Fifth Division. So far, the two of them limited themselves to armed combat, Mifune's katana clashing against Hanzo's kusarigama, filling the air with metallic clanging noises every couple seconds.

"Samurai surely fell low if they are so willing to become a ninja's lap dog!" Hanzo taunted, as he delivered a blow at Mifune's legs.

The samurai expertly blocked before countered with a swing to his neck, which Hanzo parried with the chain of his kusarigama. "We samurai do not meddle in the affair of ninjas and nations that support or employ them. But this war... this war isn't just a matter of ninjas! It's a matter of survival, for all of us!"

Hanzo swung the mace of his kusarigama at Mifune's head. The old samurai managed to duck in time, and taking advantage of Hanzo being wide open, he stabbed his katana into the Ame reanimation's gut.

"That was a mistake, Mifune," Hanzo said.

Suddenly, a purple gas started to leak out of the hole Mifune had made into the man's stomach. He didn't ask what it was, since he could figure it out, and jumped back as quickly as his legs allowed him to, praying that he didn't accidentally inhale some of the gas.

" So, even as a reanimation, Hanzo still keeps that Black Salamander poisonous gland," Mifune thought. "It was careless of me not to assume that."

"Mifune-sama!" a nearby samurai called while tossing his leader a spare samurai helmet.

The Shogun of the Land of Iron took no time to put that helmet on, given that it had a gas mask built on it as well. After thanking his fellow samurai, Mifune looked at Hanzo, who was in the process of making a chain of hand seals.

"You might have stopped me from making hand seals with your twice damned iaijutsu, but my poison bought me all the time I needed to do this!" Hanzo finished, before slamming his hand into the ground. "Summoning Jutsu!"

There was a burst of smoke, and the next second, Hanzo was standing on top of Ibuse, his feared Salamander summon. Upon seeing this, Mifune gripped the handle of his kanata tightly, not taking his eyes from his opponent. The fight had become much harder now.

"Everybody, stay away from Hanzo! Only samurai, or those who are able to avoid the poison of his salamander should face him!" Mifune shouted.

"How brave. Telling the others to save themselves, instead of asking for help when it's obvious that you need it," Hanzo observed. "You samurai didn't forsake your honor, I can concede that."

"A warmonger like you has no right to talk about honor," Mifune said in subdued anger. "Much less to judge somebody else's!"

Hanzo smirked under his rebreather. "Very well then, no more words, just actions! Ibuse, after him!"

The large eyeless amphibian charged at the Shogun of the Land of Iron, small quakes caused whenever its large legs hit the ground. The blade of Mifune's katana started to glow as he channeled chakra through it, before making an horizontal swing, releasing a crescent shaped chakra blast at the incoming monster. However, Hanzo was already expecting such a move.

"Ibuse, now!" the Ame reanimation said, as he jumped into the air.

Ibuse stopped on its tracks, and buried itself underground headfirst. Meanwhile, Hanzo threw the mace half of his kusarigama at Mifune, who wrapped itself around his wrists, pinning them against each other. Upon landing, Hanzo pulled the chain towards him, but Mifune managed to resist and didn't bulge.

"Your resilience is worth praising, samurai, but this is your end. Ibuse, get him!" Hanzo ordered.

The ground beneath Mifune's feet started to shake, as he knew what was coming. He tried to break free from the chain binding his wrists, but Hanzo's pull was too firm.

"Paper Chakram!"

Suddenly, a large sharp ring made of paper descended from above, cleanly cutting the chain holding Mifune in place, and the old samurai managed to jump backwards just before Ibuse emerged from underground and tried to swallow him whole.

" Where did that attack come from?" Mifune thought, as he started to carefully look around, thought without taking at least one eye from Hanzo. Following the direction of the paper jutsu, Mifune saw a blue haired woman floating above him, with two wings made of many sheets of paper coming from her back. While he never met her before, this woman met the description he had given of the ex-Akatsuki member that now worked for Konoha, Konan. "Thanks for your assistance," he said, before smirking a little. "Heh, this is the second time today that I'm helped by a flying kunoichi."

"You're welcome, Mifune-sama," Konan said, as she floated down. "May I ask for a favor in return? I wish to deal with this opponent myself."

"I don't think I can allow such thing in good conscience. Hanzo is not an opponent to be underestimated," Mifune said. "You're welcome to join the battle."

"I'm not somebody to be underestimated either, as many ninjas who fought against me can attest. Those who are still alive, regrettably enough," Konan replied, her amber eyes narrowing at Hanzo.

"Hanzo and I have some history together. I studied his fighting style in depth, and I have the perfect way to permanently put him down."

Mifune looked at Konan, and could see the fire burning in her eyes. He knew that she needed more than a fiery spirit to defeat an opponent of such caliber, but then again, the Shogun of the Land of Iron was also told of Konan's ninjutsu prowess, so it was likely that she could back up her words with actions. Wordlessly, Mifune fell back and went to look for another opponent, though he made sure to stay close in case the bluenette may need his help.

"I take that back what I said," Hanzo said in disgust. "That samurai has no honor left in his old bones."

Konan's eyes narrowed even more, as her mouth curved into an ugly snarl. "The man who ambushed a trio of kids with an army of ninjas because he was too afraid of them dares to speak about honor!?"

"A trio of kids...? Just what the hell are you talking... wait a minute..." Hanzo began.

He then remembered something. A flashback to some years ago. That man with orange hair, piercings, and purple rippled eyes. The very man who put an end to his life, and Hanzo, the man who fought and defeated the Sannin in their prime, the one who anointed them with such title, wasn't even able to touch him. His defeat was so humiliating, he was almost glad when his attacker put an end to it.

...

Amegakure, a few years ago

"Such a disappointment, the legendary Hanzo the Salamander," the purple eyed man said, his voice deep and imposing. "I guess if you aren't fighting against a trio of children with an army backing you up, your skills alone don't take you too far. And Jiraiya-sensei lost to you when he was in his prime? Disgusting."

" Trio of children? Jiraiya-sensei? Who are you? You came here to avenge him?" Hanzo asked, the building panic not allowing him to think coherently. His many wounds didn't help either.. "Just what do you-"

" Silence," his attacker said. He didn't raise his voice, but his commanding tone compelled Hanzo to shut up. "I don't want to hear your voice anymore. I don't want to see you anymore. The mere thought that I once admired you makes me want to hurl. Your mere existence is blight upon this world that I plan to correct right now. SHINRA TENSEI!"

...

Those were Hanzo's last moments, who has been repressed the moment this cursed jutsu brought him to life, but the blue haired woman's words brought to the surface of his mind.

Then, another memory. An ambush he carried out alongside a Konoha high ranked ninja named Danzo, against a trio of Ame ninjas that were growing in power and influence. Better deal with them now before they became a threat. He didn't remember much of that day, the horrible image of that grotesque giant statue as it massacred his ninjas, while letting out nightmarish roars replaced everything else.

Though now, he could remember who were his targets: two boys, one with orange spiky hair, and another one a redhead, plus a blue haired girl. A blue haired girl with amber eyes. The same amber eyes that were now glaring daggers at him. Though while those eyes were full of innocence and fright, those eyes now reflected weariness, regret, and above all else, anger.

"You... that day... you're the girl I took hostage..." Hanzo said in realization.

Konan's snarl turned into a smirk of satisfaction, but her anger did not subside one bit. "Good. So you finally remember us. You know, the first time Nagato wanted to deal with you alone. He didn't want me near, he said that I didn't deserve to get my hands dirty with your blood. Of course, I disagreed, but I didn't want to argue with him. And now... I finally get to avenge Yahiko's death personally. And unlike the last time we saw each other, I have no intention of becoming a damsel in distress."

"You're getting it wrong, girl. It's me who will get to avenge my own death! Ibuse, get her!" Hanzo commanded.

The salamander opened its jaws, releasing a wide stream of purple colored poisonous haze at the flying woman. Sheets of paper started to spin around her, as she made a chain of hand seals before thrusting her arms forward.

"Paper Cyclone!"

The sheets of paper formed a twister that flew towards the incoming stream of toxic fumes. Some of the paper sheets started to glow, revealing themselves to be explosive tags before they detonated, creating a chain of explosions that stopped the attack. From the resulting clouds, the mace half of Hanzo's kusarigama rocketed towards her, wrapping the chain around her ankle. With a mighty pull, Hanzo slammed her into the ground.

"First order of business, bring you back to ground level!" Hanzo said. "Now, for the second and final order of business, to deal the death blow!"

Fast as lightning, Hanzo dashed forward, and sunk the blade half of his weapon into Konan's neck. However, Konan's expression remained unchanged, and no blood seeped from her wound.

"Don't you think I know every one of your little tricks?" Konan asked, as she burst into a mass of papers that enveloped the former Ame leader, forming a cocoon of paper around him.

"What I think is that you're underestimating me!" Hanzo indignantly said as he made a hand seal and escaping the paper prison with the Body Flicker jutsu before the paper cocoon formed completely.

"I would never dream of underestimating you," Konan's voice said. Hearing that it came from above, Hanzo looked up and saw Konan floating above him, but the worrying part were the literally thousands of origami shuriken floating besides her. "Now be torn to shreds and disappear!"

Motioning her hand down, Konan commanded the paper shuriken to rain upon Hanzo and his salamander. However, Hanzo had enough time to weave several hand seals.

"Fire Release: Multiple Flame Plumes!"

Hanzo removed his rebreather before unleashing a wave of fire projectiles towards Konan. The blazing missiles and paper shuriken met in the middle, resulting in a multitude of explosions. However, much to Hanzo's surprise, he saw that Konan's attack was overpowering his.

" What the...? How can paper beat a fire jutsu?" the reanimation panicked. "How can this-"

Hanzo's thoughts were interrupted when the paper shuriken raining upon him suddenly multiplied by one hundred, quickly overpowering his fire jutsu before the attack reached him. He tried to jump back, but even if he only spend less than two seconds being pelted by the razor sharp paper projectiles, it was still enough to torn him to shreds, just like Konan said. With plenty of deep cuts across his body and his four limbs completely rendered useless, Hanzo helplessly fell on his back.

His wounds quickly began to regenerate, but the sight of Konan descending upon him, more papers fluttering around her, told him that he wasn't going to regenerate in time. The papers fluttering around Konan started to move around Hanzo, slowly wrapping around him, forming a paper cocoon.

"It's hard to believe that you were the same man who beat the Sannin in their prime. I didn't believe Nagato at first when he told me how easily he beat you," Konan began, as he looked at him with eyes full of contempt. "Guess that you let your reputation precede you, and didn't keep your skills honed."

"... perhaps I did," Hanzo sadly admitted. He then looked at the papers quickly covering him, and realized of something. "Though, before you seal me... there's something I want to know..."

Konan didn't say anything, but Hanzo took her silence as a cue to ask. It's not that he was going to lose anything for doing so.

"What happened with Amegakure?" Hanzo asked. "I saw some ninjas wearing the Ame uniform around. I tried to avoid them. How is the village doing?"

"Nagato and I ruled the village after you were out of the picture," Konan began to explain, deciding to humor the old man's last request. "Then Nagato died, and I'm the sole ruler of Ame. And as its Village Head, I pledged the forces of Ame, few as they are in comparison to the Great Villages, for the cause of the Ninja Alliance."

"I see..." Hanzo said, looking somewhat relieved. "Regardless of what I did, or said... if there's one thing you can believe about me, is that I cared about my village... given that the village is now yours, make sure it stays strong... and don't let the Great Villages stomp over you..."

"That thing won't happen. Not just because of my leadership," Konan replied. "But because I, alongside others, are helping to build a better world where the bloody conflicts from the past will remain forever in the past."

Hanzo didn't say anything, and let the papers envelop him completely, forming the cocoon. Konan walked towards it, and placed a couple of chakra suppression seals, making sure that Hanzo wouldn't be a danger anymore.

"Nagato, Yahiko," Konan said, rising her gaze to the cloudy skies. "I'll make sure our dream will come to pass. And this time, it will be done properly."

...

"Water Release. Water Bullet Jutsu!"

"Water Release: Wall of Water!"

Shibuki expelled several watery projectiles from his mouth towards his father. Hisen expelled a wide stream of water that managed to stop his son's attack, and still had enough momentum to continue forward, forcing the young Takigakure leader to jump back, just as Hisen prepared his next attack.

"Watch out, son! The next attack is going to be a big one!" Hisen warned, just as he finished the chain of hand seals. "Water Release: Water Dragon jutsu!"

The water of the previous attacks, plus the water from the recently melted snow gathered under Hisen, forming a tornado of water, which quickly took the shape of a serpentine dragon, with Hisen riding on its head. The dragon let out a roar before it lunged at the young Takigakure leader. While panicking, Shibuki decided to counter his dad's jutsu with a similar one.

"I can use that as well! Water Release. Water Dragon Jutsu!"

Another dragon-shaped water construct of similar size formed from the nearby water and snow, and managed to intercept Hisen's dragon. While the two dragons struggled against the other, Hisen leaped into the air, and formed a sword of water on his hand.

" Dammit, the first attack was just a distraction!" Shibuki inwardly cursed, his hands still locked into a seal, pouring chakra into the latest jutsu, before stumbling to generate another water sword to parry his father's incoming blow.

"Son, run!" Hisen warned, as he was about to strike.

"Wolf Claw Strike!"

Hisen saw a white blur, followed by a loud metallic clang, and the next second, much to his shock, there was a huge, feral looking werewolf with white fur between him and his son, parrying his blade of water with his bare claws, that glowed with chakra. The chakra glow increased, taking the shape of crescent shaped energy blasts that violently pushed Hisen backwards.

The sound of a thousand birds chirping coming from above drew his attention, and saw what appeared to be a spinning drill coated in lightning falling on top of him.

"Lightning Release: Chidori Drill Claw!"

Still, Hisen was quick enough to defend himself from the unexpected ambush, and formed more hand seals.

"Water Release: Water Wall!"

Hisen expelled a torrent of water from his mouth at the spinning electric drill, both propelling himself to the ground, and pushing the threat away from him. The drill stopped to spin, revealing itself to be a girl with cat features, wearing bladed gauntlets. Both the cat girl and the werewold landed on the ground on their feet, and rushed towards Shibuki.

"Kiba, Tamaki!" Shibuki said, breathing heavily, still processing the fact that he was alive.

"Are you alright, Shibuki-san?" Tamaki asked.

"I think we cut a little too close. A few seconds late, and who knows what would have happened!" Kiba added.

Shibuki let out a sigh. It appeared to be of relief, but there also of resignation. "Once again, thank you. You came to my aid when I needed it the most."

Tamaki smiled. "Hey, don't sweat it! That's what friends are for!"

"Shibuki," Hisen said, as he walked towards the trio, making Kiba and Tamaki to tense up and adopt fighting positions. "You know these people?"

"Yes. They're Konoha ninja. Part of the group of ninjas that helped us to take down the Akatsuki that nearly destroyed our village," Shibuki explained. "Kiba, Tamaki, this is my dad Hisen, the previous leader of Takigakure."

The two of them winced upon realizing that Shibuki had been forced to fight his own father. Such experience had to be emotionally devastating. Still, they managed to hide their reaction pretty well.

"It's nice to meet you, sir," Kiba said, trying to smile, but in his current form, it appear more like a vicious snarl.

"We don't usually look like this, though," Tamaki was quick to point out. "It's because of a transformation jutsu we're using."

"Don't worry, I've seen ninjas with far more bizarre appearances," Hisen replied. "Though if my son said is true and you helped defend our village, then you'll have my gratitude."

"Taki and Konoha are allies, and we have some good friends in Taki as well," Kiba said. "We did what anybody else would do in our position."

Hisen, however, noticed that his son was less than thrilled with the two Konoha ninjas coming to his rescue.

"Shibuki, what's wrong? Aren't you glad your friends are here to help you?" Hisen asked.

"This is what I previously meant, dad," Shibuki began, sounding dour. "Just like how Kiba and Tamaki had to help me from you, I had to ask other villages to help ours. What kind of leader that makes me?"

"I tell you what: a leader that cares for his village," Hisen firmly stated, as his expression became a little harsher. "Shibuki, needing somebody else's help to do something you can't do on your own isn't a sign of weakness, but of wisdom. Sure, improving oneself and being able to do things on one's own, be an individual like you and me, or a village, is important. But that doesn't mean that we should try to do everything on our own. Not all of us are born equal, just like how not all villages are the same.

"Yet, the fact that you not only kept Konoha's alliance, but strengthened it, shows that you've been a good leader for our village. Think what would have happened if other villages didn't help Taki against Akatsuki. Our beloved home would be a smoking ruin with no hopes of getting it back."

Shibuki stood there, silent, weighting his father's words. Even part of him, the part that loved to put him down, tried to ignore Hisen's wisdom, another part, the rational one, argued that his father was right. Taki had undergone mass destruction, but the loss could have been much greater, and the village was in the process of being rebuilt. As long as Taki existed, there would be hope.

"Yeah, not everybody can get strong on their own. Just because you fight alongside others, that doesn't mean that you're weak," Kiba said. "Or that Taki is. Hell, not even Konoha is strong enough to take on Akatsuki alone! We had to seek the help of many other villages, both major and minor, to do so!"

"Plus, take a look at us!" Tamaki said, chuckling a bit, as she pointed at both herself and Kiba. "We had to merge with our animal companions for a power boost! If that's not relying on others to grow strong..."

Shibuki sighed, though this time, it didn't appear to be a sigh of weariness or sadness. If anything, it appeared like a huge weight had been lifted from his shoulders. He closed his eyes, and shook his head as his lips curved into a smile.

"I've been such an idiot..." Shibuki said, almost in a whisper. He opened his eyes, and fixed a stare on his father. Hisen was almost taken aback to see that the doubts and self pity he could see reflected on his son's eyes were gone, replaced by steel hard determination. "Kiba, Tamaki... help me seal my father, so we can later return him to afterlife where he belongs!"

"Alright!" Kiba said, dropping on all four.

"You got it!" Tamaki said, crouching down like a lioness would before pouncing on her prey.

Hisen smiled. He wasn't even worried when his body moved on its own again, and rushed to attack the trio of ninjas. Shibuki, Tamaki and Kiba also charged forward, ready to meet the former Taki leader in the middle, whose hands were flying through hand seals.

"Water Release: Double Water Blade!"

This time, masses of water appeared around the undead ninja's hands, before they took the shape of swords, one with a straight edge, the other with a curved and serrated brought his arms together in a swift x-shaped motion, making Shibuki to break and jump back, and Kiba and Tamaki turn to the sides. Though, as he moved his swords, they released small blades of water to the sides and the front.

Shibuki managed to deflect all of them with quick swings of his watery sword. Tamaki did the same with her bladed gauntlets, but some razor droplets found their mark and left several cuts on her arms and legs. Kiba, however, was the one who took it the worse, given his lack of weapons to use to defend himself as well as his increased size. Soon, patches of red started to grow around his white fur.

"Kiba!" Tamaki called, concerned.

"I'm okay! You need more than a few superficial cuts to take me out!" Kiba quickly replied. "Focus on the enemy!"

"Right!" Tamaki said, shifting her focus from Kiba to Hisen, as she and her partner charged back at him.

Sensing this, Hisen prepared his next move.

"Water Release: Water Clone Jutsu!"

The water around the area gathered and took the shape of three Hisen clones, all of them already armed with a water sword. However, rather than intercepting Kiba and Tamaki like the feral duo was expecting, they moved towards Shibuki, while the real Hisen went after them.

"It seems that whoever is controlling me considers you two a greater threat than my son," Hisen warned them, sounding a little sorrowful. "I have faith that Shibuki can beat a trio of water clones, though as for you, you better prepare."

"Don't worry, you won't be able to make me bleed twice!" Kiba boasted, as he rushed to meet Hisen. Long chakra blades formed around his claws as he spread his arms, ready for a brutal slashing swipe. Hisen raised one of his swords to attack, while keeping the other low for defense. However, just when it appeared that Kiba was about to strike, he instead dived down, and tunneled underground.

"What?"

"Tamaki, go for it!"

The sound of a thousand birds chirping filled the air as Hisen once against found himself facing a living drill coated in electricity.

"Chidori Drill Claw!"

In such amount of time, all what Hisen could do was raise his water swords in an X shape to block Tamaki's onslaught. Channeling chakra into his swords to make them sturdier, Hisen took the attack head on. Even if his swords resisted, the force behind the attack was strong enough to push him backwards, while the electricity that leaked into his body left it stiff.

The earth started to shake beneath his feet, and Kiba emerged from underground, delivering a brutal uppercut with his chakra-enhanced claws. However, much to his surprise, Hisen burst into water when he was hit.

"What the... was he a clone too?" Kiba asked, outraged.

"No, I believe he switched positions with another clone," Tamaki said in realization. Looking at where Shibuki was fighting the clones, she saw that only one remained, which had to be the real Hisen. "Come on, after him!"

Hisen wanted to turn around and adress the more immediate danger, but Shibuki wasn't going to let him. Creating another water blade on his other hand, the young Takigakure leader delivered a double swipe at his father, who used both his swords to block the attack. Hisen could see that his son's eyes were glinting with renewed confidence.

"So, what do you think about my friends, dad?" Shibuki asked, beaming with pride.

Hisen smiled. "They're incredible. Truly remarkable ninjas."

"I know right," Shibuki said, before his mouth curved into a smile. "I couldn't have retaken Taki without them. And I don't think I could have defeated you without them. That's why I'm going to become much stronger than I am right now, so one day I can be the one who helps them in their time of need!"

Shibuki pushed both of her father's swords to the side with an impressive display of strength, before delivering a kick to the chest that send the reanimated Taki ninja skidding back. Right into Kiba's path, whose front paws burned brightly with chakra as he prepared an attack.

"Wild Howling Strike!"

Kiba delivered a brutal uppercut to Hisen, as the chakra aroundn his paws exploded, and took the shape of a giant wolf head, catching the undead ninja between its maws, and sending it flying up into the sky. As this happened, Tamaki jumped onto Kiba's shoulders, and used him as a springboard to jump into the sky, leaving Hisen below, while her hands flew through hand seals.

"Fire Release: Burning Man!" fire spread around the cat kunoichi, covering her completely in a cloak of flames, as she let gravity pull her body towards Hisen. The former Taki leader tried to weave the seals for a water jutsu, but it was too late. "Blazing Feline Aerial Bomber!"

Tamaki's burning rear impacted against Hisen's chest, both of them pummeling to the snowy grass below, resulting in a massive fiery explosion the moment the two of them hit the ground, spreading embers around, melting the snow, and carving a crater into the ground. When the smoke dispelled, Tamaki was standing besides Hisen, lying on his back with his arms and legs spread, and his body greatly damaged. The Reanimation Jutsu was already working on healing his broken body, but not fast enough to prevent sealing.

"Okay, I think this guy isn't going anywhere," Tamaki said. "I'm going to fetch a sealmaster. Shibuki-san, do you want to say any last words with your father before we seal him?"

Shibuki merely nodded, and walked towards the fallen form of his father as Tamaki leaped away.

"Hey, dad," Shobuki said, a bit sheepishly. "I always wished I to see you again. Be careful with what you wish for, huh?"

"Yes, the circumstances of our reunion weren't the best ones, to put it lightly. But I'm glad that we were able to meet again. Not only because I was able to see my boy all grown up, but because I managed to give you some of the help you needed..."

"Yeah... sorry dad, I didn't want you to see me that way," Shibuki said, as his eyes started to water, but he willed his tears back. "I always wanted to be a ninja you'd be proud of."

Hisen smiled. "You're already that, son. I'm sure you'll be a greater ninja than I was. Just never give up, and remember, don't be afraid to ask others for help if something proves to be too much for you."

"I know, dad. Thank you... and farewell," Shibuki said, before he turned around and walked away. A few seconds later, Tamaki returned with a sealmaster, making sure that Hisen wouldn't be forced to fight against the Ninja Alliance anymore.

...

As Kakashi had stated previously, the real fight began now. No holding back, the silver haired Jonin knew that he had to throw everything he had at his father, or else he would end up dead.

" And being dead means ending in the same place as my old man, and I'm not really in the mood for that," Kakashi chuckled at his own grim joke, as he prepared his next attack. "Fire Release: Phoenix Sage Fire Jutsu!"

Kakashi breathed several small fireballs through his mask towards his father, who travelled in a wide angle, hoping to cut his room to dodge. Sakumo merely jumped backwards and started to make hand seals of his own. Kakashi recognized the seals as part of a water jutsu.

"Can my father use ninjutsu other than lightning?" Kakashi thought in surprise, before the answer came to him. "Heh, of course he can, he was a Jonin."

"Water Release: Great Water Wall!"

Sakumo expelled a massive torrent of water from his mouth, which was enough to put out all the existing flames. However, as the White Fang did this, Kakashi already prepared his next move.

"I can't let him go into the offensive! If I force him to be on the defensive all the time, I will win!" Kakashi thought, his heart pounding each time faster as the masked Jonin former more hand seals. "Lightning Release: Lightning Beast Tracking Fang!"

A mass of electricity fomed around Kakashi's right arm, before it jumped and took the shape of a hound, still connected to Kakashi through a constant thread of lightning, and rushed towards the now wide open Sakumo without finding any obstacles on its path. When it was close enough, the elemental hound jumped into the undead ninja's neck and closed its maws around it, before it exploded into a blast of lightning.

And then Sakumo vanished in a burst of smoke.

"What the...? A Shadow Clone? When did he create it?" Kakashi thought, as panic began to creep through his back, frantically looking around.

"Kakashi, watch out! Do not get caught by this jutsu!" Sakumo's voice said from behind. Kakashi turned to the direction the voice came from, and prepared for the worst. "Lightning Release: Alpha Thunderstrike!"

Sakumo's entire body was covered in electricity, bruning so bright, it was as if a thunderstorm was happening before his very eyes. Thrusting both arms forward, a truly massive cluster of lightning bolts rocketed from the undead man's hands, before they quickly merged and took the shape of a gigantic wolf head.

"Shit, no jutsu I have can counter that!" Kakashi panicked, as he jumped back, trying to put some distance between him and his foe. There was only one thing he could do. Channeling chakra into his left eye, his Sharingan morphed into its Mangekyo form. "Kamui!"

The air in front of Kakashi started to ripple and deform, before reality itself contorted into a spiraling vortex that devoured Sakumo's attack completely. However, it came at a big cost, as Kakashi could feel his chakra reserves quickly draining, and the exertion made him drop to one knee.

Sakumo perceived his apparent weakness, and quickly charged forward, a kunai on his hand. Kakashi did the same, but rather than charge to meet his father, he used it to make a cut on his thumb, before discarding the weapon and making five hand seals.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Kakashi slammed his palm into the ground, forcing Sakumo to break his charge and take a few steps backwards as not to run into Kakashi's summoned ally. However, when the cloud of smoke vanished after a couple seconds, Kakashi was still alone.

"You made me think you were summoning something," Sakumo observed. "Or you did summon something that I failed to see."

"Why don't you get closer and find which one is?" Kakashi taunted his father.

Sakumo's face saddened. "Son, it's quite obvious that you're mad at me."

"Whatever I feel right now is irrelevant. I need to end this fight right here and right now. You're too dangerous of a foe, and I'm one of the few that can put you down," Kakashi said, struggling to keep his voice cool.

"You don't deny it, then," Sakumo said. "But not acknowledging it is just as bad."

"Why do you care so much about how I feel!?" Kakashi shouted, his patience close to snapping. He clutched both fists, and could feel small sparks of lightning crackling around them.

"If you don't calm down and focus, you won't be able to beat me," Sakumo replied. "And if you don't beat me, you will die! Can't you see that?"

"Oh, so now you care about me!?" this was the moment Kakashi's emotional barrier went down. "You didn't care about me in the slightest when you choose to end your own life!"

Sakumo smiled, though sadness did not leave his eyes. "So, that was it. Just like I feared. No wonder you don't have a very good memory of me."

"It's a bit late to apologize, father," Kakashi said, as his hand burst with electricity once more, and rushed forwards.

Sakumo's body moved on its own to pull another kunai, and channel another sword of lightning through it, ready to meet his son's attack.

"It's never too late to make things right, son!" Sakumo said, almost in a pleading tone.

"Really? Do you have a way to reverse time, and fix the childhood I had to spend alone?" Kakashi replied.

Sakumo's expression dropped even further. "I'm afraid not. All what I can say is that I'm very sorry for leaving you alone, son. I'm sorry for giving up into despair, and failing you as a father. If I was stronger, maybe I could have withstood better the shame I brought upon myself-

"Stop," Kakashi firmly said. "You might have done things you should regret, but saving your comrades at the expense of the mission wasn't one of them."

"How can you say that? That choice is what ended up dooming me!" Sakumo said, as he jumped backwards while making hand seals. "Lightning Release: Forked Lightning!"

Bolts of lightning shoot from Sakumo's fingers, heading into multiple directions in a cone towards Kakashi. However, upon hitting the ground, rocks, trees or plants, they would bounce and continue forward.

" Ingenius. I'm definitely copying that," Kakashi thought, as his Sharingan worked to learn that jutsu, while his hands formed the seals of a counter. "Wind Release: Vacuum Great Wave!"

Kakashi formed a sphere of concentrated pressurized air in front of him, before dropping all the pressure and releasing the air forward in the form of a powerful wind, dispelling the mass of lightnings coming at him, and continuing forward towards Sakumo, tearing away the grass in its path. Sakumo tossed several kunai with explosive tags attached to them to the wind attack, and the resulting explosions undid Kakashi's jutsu.

It was then when Kakashi noticed something from the corner of his Sharingan: something metallic glinting with the sun. Upon focusing his gaze on the glint, he could see it was a weapon embedded into the ground.

" That's father's White Chakra Saber! He might have dropped it before," Kakashi thought. "I need to get it back before he realizes!"

"Lightning Release: Double White Fang!"

From the smoke of the explosions, Sakumo emerged, dashing forward, two blades of lightning on each hand. Lightning also manifested on Kakashi's hand, and shaped it like a sword, just in time to parry his father's blows.

"What do you mean, I didn't make the wrong choice?" Sakumo asked. "Had I completed the mission, it would have helped Konoha win the war! Even the people I saved thought so!"

"For a time, I used to think the same. That following the rules, the orders from our superiors, and completing the missions assigned to us was the way of the ninja. But a friend of mine showed me otherwise. Ninjas aren't unfeeling tools bred to kill. We're human beings that breathe, bleed and live. We aren't to be discarded like that," Kakashi rebutted, as he parried a double blow from Sakumo.

"But protecting your friends and loved ones at the expense of the village..." Sakumo began, before Kakashi cut him.

"How can we protect a village full of people we don't know, if we aren't allowed to love and cherish the people we do?" Kakashi asked, as he began his counterattack, pushing his father back. "How can ninjas fight for a village that will send them to their deaths, without taking their lives into consideration?"

Kakashi managed to swipe one of the kunai that Sakumo was using to channel his jutsu out of his hands, and delivered a roundhouse kick to his chest, sending his father flying backwards. Fast as lightning, Kakashi pulled out several shuriken, and after imbuing them with lightning chakra, tossed them at the still flying Sakumo.

With his remaining lightning sword, Sakumo was able to parry the electrified steel stars flying at him. But little did he know, that was only a distraction. He didn't see how several dogs wearing blue clothes and Konoha forehead protectors burst from underground, and slammed against him multiple times, making him drop his other kunai. Despite this, he managed to land on his feet, but the moment he tried to bring his hands together to form a hand seal, but two more dogs, these ones larger than the first few, bit on each on his arms and forced them apart.

Sakumo's eyes had barely a second to register Kakashi dashing at him, Sharingan glowing with a red gleam, and the White Chakra Saber in his hand, its blade crackling with blue lightning. Then, a diagonal, downward slash followed by a burst of ash and pieces of paper. Kakashi was now behind his father, his back turned to him. Sakumo's upper half of his body slid from his torso, both parts falling to the ground lifelessly.

"For forsaking the mission and saving your comrades, they called you trash. A ninja that doesn't follow the rules is trash. But a ninja that forsakes his comrades..." Kakashi said, before turning around, and looking at his father with fire in both his eyes. "... is worse than trash!"

Sakumo looked at Kakashi in awe, new feeling forming a chaotic whirlwind in the very core of his being. "Kakashi..."

"I hated you for leaving me alone, father..." Kakashi said. "But... to this day, I think you made the right choice. I think you are a hero of Konoha, even if I may be the only one who thinks like that. And I teach my students to follow your example."

"... you have no idea how happy hearing that makes me, son," Sakumo said, tears forming around his black eyes. "Again... I'm sorry for being weak, and not standing strong for you. It makes me happy to see the fine ninja you've become, son, and that your convictions hold such strength. Your students are lucky to have you."

"Father, I..." Kakashi began, sounding hesitant. "I might not have another chance to do this, and I think I will regret it the rest of my life if I don't do it now, but... , despite what happened in the end, I'm proud of calling you my father. And I forgive you."

Suddenly, a beam of light broke through the clouds above, and fell right onto Sakumo, much to Kakashi's surprise. And his surprise grew wider when not only Sakumo's regeneration stopped, but his body started to crumble and break apart.

"Thank you, son, even if I don't deserve it," Sakumo said, smiling earnestly at his son. "Now... I can finally... look at your mother... in the eye..."

Sakumo's body crumpled completely, leaving a mound of dust and paper bits, and half buried between them, the corpse of a man, whose face was frozen in a scream of terror, an unlucky victim Orochimaru sacrificed used to bring Sakumo from the afterlife.

"Farewell, father," Kakashi said, looking at the cloudy sky. "Might you finally find in death the honor and peace you were denied in life."

Author's Note: Yeah, a pretty Kakashi-heavy chapter, but I felt that this was I fight I had to do. In canon, Kakashi's issues with his dad seem to stem from Sakumo choosing his comrades over the mission. However, it always struck me as odd that Kakashi had no resentment over his father killing himself, especially when Kakashi himself was so young, so I felt the need to tackle such difficult topic. I think it makes Sakumo's sendoff better, and I hope that you think that as well.

The other fight I've been dying to finally do was Konan vs Hanzo. Nothing against Mifune, but the fact that Mifune's past with Hanzo was established on the very same fight, and that Kishimoto tried to portray Hanzo as some misguided visionary gone bad, instead of the power hungry warmonger he had been portrayed so far, well, it kinda left a bad taste in my mouth. So here, Hanzo finally gets some much needed payback from Konan over the time he kidnapped her which resulted in Yahiko's death. Because when you think about it, it was thanks to Hanzo that Akatsuki came to be.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Also, I got some PMs from people saying that they like the story but don't review because they don't know what to say, since these chapters don't move the plot forward much so there isn't much to say. If that stops you from leaving a review, you don't have to write something super long! Sure, I do love long reviews, but if you don't know what to say, just say that you liked the chapter, and that's it! All reviews make me happy, no matter how long or short they are. So if you liked this chapter, please leave a review! It will make me really, really, really happy!

The Light After the Storm

Author's Note: And here we reach the end of the third day of battles. Enjoy:

Chapter 109:

The Light After the Storm

or

Night whispers

Turtle Island, Evening

Despite Killer B having a pretty big house on the island, he didn't allow anybody inside, claiming that nobody was to invade the privacy of his sanctuary. While Naruto and Fu wondered what did he have to hide, they weren't going to pry and earn the ire of their jinchuriki teacher. And since the Kumo garrison on the island didn't have enough space to house all the Konoha ninjas, they had to spend the night in the open.

Not that they minded, as all of the Konoha visitors were seasoned ninjas that were used to sleep under the stars during missions, even the younger ones. Thankfully, they didn't have to hunt or find their own food, as the Kumo ninjas had that part provided. Though there were a few mutters regarding Choza and how long the food supply would last with him around.

"Hey Naruto," Fu asked, as she took a bite from a roasted boar rib. "Wanna come with me into the jungle to see what kind of animals show up at night?"

"I doubt we can do that. We need to get to bed early so we can be up just at sunrise and continue with our training," Naruto replied.

Fu snorted, as she placed her chin under her hand in a lazy way. "Why? Is not that we're making that much progress anyway. We could try to do something fun just once."

"I also want to sleep," Naruto said, suppressing a yawn. "Trying to master Kurama's chakra is like nothing I've tried before, and I'm exhausted. I'm surprised that you still have that much energy for adventure."

"Maybe we need to relax a little from training, you know? I was always told that focusing too much on a problem might not be good to solve it. Sometimes, it's better to take a step back and let your mind wander for a bit."

"Who told you that? Shino?"

Fu smiled brightly, and nodded. "He's a treasure cove of wisdom, isn't he? He doesn't speak much, but when he does, every word he says is worth listening to."

"Tell Shino his wisdom won't work on me," Naruto said, as he stretched his arms. "I think I'm going to sleep. I'm sure that, if I keep with the training, in the end I'll be able to do it. This isn't the first time that I struggle with a jutsu or a new power."

Fu's face scrunched into an unamused scowl. "I don't think I want you as my little brother. You're way too boring."

"Little? I'm older than you!" Naruto protested.

Fu then stood up to her full height, hands on her hips. "But I'm bigger than you. So much bigger than you," Fu was trying to sound threatening, but her repressed giggles ruined the intended effect. She playfully flicked Naruto's nose. "So, no talking back to your big sister, mister!"

"Now that you mention it," Naruto began, as she looked at the girl toweing over him. "What did you do to have such a hell of a growth spurt? We were the same height when I first met you."

Fu placed a finger under her lower lip, as she recalled the previous years." Well, you can say that I always had a lot of energy," Fu began, shrugging casually. "Shibuki said that I needed to burn all these pent up energy I had in my body, so he devised this super tough training regime to expend my excess energy on it. It was hard at first, but I got used to it pretty quickly. Then he increased the training, but I got used to it again. He continued like that for a year, before he gave up, though I decided to continue the training on my own because it wasn't that bad."

Naruto shot her a blank stare. "I refuse to believe that you got like that just by mere training. I train a lot too!"

Fu gave him a condescending smile. "Not as much as I do, that's for sure," and for added emphasis, she flexed her biceps.

"You're right in doubting her claim," both Naruto and Fu heard Kurama joining their conversation. "Let's say your tenant has something to do with it."

"Hey! Do not downplay my hard work, you furball!" Fu said, angrily poking at Naruto's stomach.

"I'm just stating the truth, human girl. It's not my fault that you're too mentally weak to accept it," Kurama replied in a somewhat taunting tone. "Those wings you can generate isn't the only way Chomei influences your body. You can thank her for your endless stamina and strength."

"That can't be true!" Fu angrily protested.

"It is!" this time, it was Chomei herself who chimed in. "Beetles are among the strongest animals on the planet! They can lift several hundred times their own weight! And naturally, I'm the strongest of them all! So of course, you got a portion of that strength as my chakra mingled with yours."

"Awww..." Fu said, discouraged, as she slumped down. "And here I thought it was all me..."

" Hey, don't get so down, girl! If it's any consolation, you're the most badass jinchruiki I ever had, and you aren't even an adult yet! Imagine what you're going to do before you stop growing!"
Chomei tried to reassure.

"Wait... she's going to grow even more !?" Naruto asked in both shock and horror.

" Not if she doesn't keep a healthy sleeping schedule!" Chomei replied. "Naruto is right, time to go to bed! You still need to work hard to master my power!"

Fu crossed her arms, and pouted childishly. "None of you guys are any fun."

...

Moon

Despite the fact that the sun illuminating the hollow inside of the Moon was artificial, they found that over time, it would increase or decrease its brightness in order to simulate day and night cycles. Something they appreciated, given that it was hard to sleep when your brain was tricked to believe that it was still daylight.

During night, it would not only lower its brightness, it would also mimic the actual Moon. Like a moon inside the Moon.

"Heh," Hinata couldn't help but let out a chuckle at the thought, as her eyes continued to stare at their goal, hanging on the sky.

Right now, they were resting in another small ghost town they found, this one without anything of note. The others were asleep, and Hinata was doing the first guard. The Hyuga Clan Head was sitting on the roof of the town's tallest building, in order to have a better vantage point. She was sure no enemy would attack them now, but one could never be so sure. After all, their enemy didn't sleep.

According to the pictures and other hints they studied from the many temples, they found that there is a huge castle inside that sun, where the Main Otsutsuki family use to live, and presumably, Toneri's base of operations and where he has his weapon stored. Hinata tried many times to use her Tenseigan to see beyond the sun, but found herself unable too.

It seemed that Toneri didn't bring every puppet to the Earth to fight for Akatsuki, and left a sizeable force to defend his home turf. Many days they could see puppets riding flying mechanical beasts, patrolling the area in search for enemies. It was advised to avoid them as not to alert Toneri of their presence. However, by carefully watching them, Hinata realized that they came and went from inside the sun, somehow. That meant that either it wasn't dangerous to fly near the sun, or had a way to safely cross it.

"Hinata-san?" a voice snapped Hinata from her trance. Turning around, she saw it was Sai, Ino's not-quite-boyfriend. "Hello. I came to relieve you from night watch duty."

Hinata smiled, as she let out a yawn. "Good. I was starting to get a bit sleepy."

"In that case, I recommend you to rest. The success of this mission rests on your power, and it wouldn't do us no good if you weren't at your best," Sai explained, keeping a neutral face.

"Um, yeah, sure," Hinata said, as she jumped off of the roof, and floated back to the ground.

She entered one of the empty houses where Nori and another female Moon Acolyte were sleeping, alongside an empty sleeping bag. She got inside the bag, carefully not to awake her companions, and after a couple minutes, she fell asleep.

"Yes, it worked!" a new voice said. A voice Hinata wasn't expecting to hear right now.

The Hyuga Clan Head opened her eyes, and found she was no longer on the Moon.

...

Land of Frost, later that night

Just like the previous two battles, the Ninja Alliance once again stood victorious against the Akatsuki onslaught, whose forces were driven away from the Land of Frost much to the joy of their inhabitants. And while many Zetsu and reanimations managed to escape to fight another day, just as many lost their lives in the battleground. Now, it was their turn for a well deserved rest.

Unlike the other divisions, Mifune's Fifth Division didn't have to erect a base camp in the middle of a forest in order to spend the night. Fortunately, not far away from the battleground, there was a town that they could use as improvised base of operations.

The town's citizens were ambivalent of the ninjas. On one side, they didn't want such a huge army of mostly foreign ninjas -they were okay with those from Kumo- invading their home, but on the other hand, some said that the ninjas would protect them against the Akatsuki forces still roaming there. Fortunately, the Kumo and Shimo ninjas managed to convince them to let them stay.

Of course, that didn't change the fact that most ninjas had to continue sleeping on tents and sleeping bags, since the town didn't have the capacity to house such a numerous army. Soon, the town was surrounded by a mass of tents from every direction.

And right now, in the special tent habilitated for communications, Mifune was in front of a ninja of the Yamanaka clan, the latter connected to a special device that amplified his mind powers in order to create a link with HQ, so the Shogun of the Land of Iron could deliver his report to the Supreme Commander.

" You lead your division to a great victory, Mifune-dono," Jiraiya praised the old samurai. "However, some elements of your report are a little unsettling. If Orochimaru has revived Kakuzu, there might be the chance that other Akatsuki members have been revived as well."

"What other Akatsuki members?" Mifune asked.

" For once, my grandson. The very first Akatsuki who fell," It was Chiyo's voice who answered. "Though admittedly, Sasori won't be much of a threat without his best puppets."

"Is there a chance that Sasori might have a secret stash of puppets that he can use to replenish those he lost the first time he died?" Mifune asked.

" I find that unlikely," Chiyo replied.

" There's also Kisame, who was finally put down by Mizukage-sama and Zabuza-sama not long ago," Ao intervened. "But his sword and main source of strength, Samehada, was recovered and is currently in our possession. Even if Kisame is revived, he won't be as much of a threat as when he was still alive."

" Which leaves us to the most dangerous of the bunch: Nagato," Jiraiya stated, his voice dripping with worry. "There's no way Orochimaru didn't try to revive a Rinnegan bearer."

"If that was the case, why didn't he send it against us already?" Mifune asked.

" I'm afraid I can't tell. Trying to understand the mind of my former teammate isn't something that many people can do," Jiraiya admitted.

" We did observe a pattern regarding the Reanimations," Shikaku interceded. "During the first days, the zombies our forces fought weren't that powerful nor great in numbers. Yet their power and numbers have been increasing with each battle. I think Orochimaru wants to assess the extent of our power before he decides to break out the heavy hitters."

" It does make sense," Onoki intervened. "The reports of the Invasion of Konoha stated that Orochimaru revived their previous Hokages. If Orochimaru's mastery of this aberrant jutsu has increased to the point of being able to summon and control undead in large quantities, I bet he also revived several Kages of all the Great Villages."

" If Hanzo's presence was anything to go by, it is something he might do. Hanzo might not be a Kage in the official sense of the title, but had the power to match against one," Mifune stated.

" What about the Air Force? How did it perform against Akatsuki's flying minions?" Jiraiya asked.

"Their presence was a huge relief for the ground forces. Not only did they keep Akatsuki's aerial mooks from attacking us from above, but they managed to bring us much needed support," Mifune stated. "Especially the members of Iwa's Kamizuru clan. Their help was invaluable in taking down many reanimations in a quick manner."

" They better pull their share of the weight, given how long those brats spent out of the village on that wild goose chase," Onoki snorted.

" Excellent, now we have a good way to prevent Akatsuki from conquering the skies," Jiraiya said, ignoring Onoki's snide comment. "Though I wouldn't put past them to bring up something to regain aerial superiority."

" I find that unlikely, flight isn't an ability that common," Onoki stated.

"Even then, it would be wiser to err on the side of caution, and not underestimate the enemy," Mifune advised.

"Something I can agree with," Jiraiya replied. "I believe there's nothing more to discuss. You did an excellent job today, Mifune-dono. Expect the supply caravan to reach your position soon. In the meantime, you and your troops earned a rest."

"Thank you, Supreme Commander."

Mifune could feel the link between his mind and those in HQ vanish as the Yamanaka ended the connection. Repressing a sigh of exhaustion, the old samurai exited the communications tent - guarded by two samurai, who straightened when their leader passed them-, and looked around the campsite: there were many bonfires with ninjas and samurai sitting around them, using them to heat their food. Others returned from the town, carrying food they probably bought from restaurants and inns, as well as some bottles. He could imagine that it was sake.

"I better keep an eye on the troops. They might want to enjoy some alcohol after such a battle, but I'm not going to tolerate drunken antics among my men," Mifune said to himself, shaking his head. He would ban drinking altogether as long as the war continued, but he didn't want to risk low morale, or worse, a revolt.

He saw a group of samurai, wearing their armor but not their helmets, sitting in front of a bonfire, eating some meat and drinking what appeared to be tea. As expected, they immediately straightened upon seeing their leader.

"Mifune-sama," all the samurai said.

"Yoshiteru," Mifune addressed as the man with the higher rank, a broad shouldered man in his late thirties with a buzzcut and a goatee. "It seems some ninja decided to bring some alcohol from the town," this earned some snorts of contempt from the samurai, and he swore he heard one of them muttering something about lack of discipline. "For the time being, I'm going to let them enjoy themselves a little, but I want you and the rest of the samurai to make sure things don't go overboard."

"Understood, Mifune-sama," Yoshiteru said, bowing quickly, before putting back his helmet, one with horns in order to show his superior rank. The rest of the samurai present did the same. "Leave it to us, and we'll make sure no one brings shame to this division."

Mifune nodded, as he watched the samurai leave, presumably to transmit his orders to their companions.

"I guess I should follow the Supreme Commander's advice and get some rest myself. One never knows when Akatsuki is going to strike," Mifune said to himself once again.

He was heading towards his private tent when something caught his attention: a certain blue haired woman sitting on the roof of one of the houses at the edge of the town, her amber eyes fixed onto the setting sun. The Shogun of the Land of Iron decided that rest could come later, and with a mighty leap, he landed behind Konan, who didn't react in any way to his presence.

"Hello again," Mifune greeted the former Akatsuki. "Do you mind if we talk a little?"

"You're my superior officer. If I did mind, it would be of little consequence," Konan replied.

"This has nothing to do with official matters of the Ninja Alliance," Mifune said, trying to sound friendly. "I witnessed your fight against Hanzo. While I was worried at first, said worries were quickly swept away when I saw the masterful way in which you dealt with him. You're a very skilled ninja, girl. We are fortunate Akatsuki lost somebody like you."

"Thank you," Konan dryly accepted the compliment, but didn't say anything else. They fell into a silence until Mifune decided to break it again.

"I did hear some of what you said during the battle," Mifune continued. "You had some kind of history with Hanzo, didn't you?"

"Yes," Konan replied. "Is it of any interest to you?"

"You could say it is," Mifune said. "You know, I also clashed with Hanzo in past conflicts, when I was much younger. Though I don't think I made much of an impression on him to make him remember me."

"Hanzo was a warmonger. I'm sure a good chunk of the ninjas present here have some kind of history with Hanzo," Konan stated, displeasure evident in her tone. "If not them, then their parents or some family members."

"True. Though few would be the same kind of close and personal history like you and me. Especially you," Mifune pointed.

"I guess you have a point," Konan admitted. "So, you want to hear about my first encounter with that man?"

"If it's not much trouble, yes, I would like to," Mifune admitted.

Konan gave Mifune a bridged version of how her early life was for context, before recounting the horrible experience that claimed the life of the man she loved, and most importantly, the man that would bring true peace to the Land of Rain. She then told him about how they reformed Akatsuki into what it is today, and finally, how Pain put an end to Hanzo's reign, and seized Amegakure for Akatsuki.

"To think that a single man was able to defeat a foe like Hanzo..." Mifune said, trying to keep his awe in check. "The Rinnegan is truly something."

"True. Though as you could see today, the Rinnegan isn't necessary to beat Hanzo," Konan pointed out. "Though I have the feeling that the Hanzo Nagato killed, and the one I defeated today isn't the same Hanzo that served the Sannin their most known defeat. Fighting Hanzo, he felt like he was... off. Sloppy. Like he hadn't had a real fight in years," Konan explained. "Though given how long has been since Hanzo was seen in a battlefield, it might have been the case."

"I haven't been in a battlefield for more than two decades, yet that didn't stop me from keeping my skills honed," Mifune pointed out. "You think Hanzo would fall prey to such indulgence?"

"Given his standing, probably. Very few people wanted to fight him directly, so it's not that unlikely that he took advantage of his fearsome reputation."

Mifune shook his head. "It's always a pity when a warrior of such caliber lets himself spoil like that."

For the first time, Konan stopped looking at the sunset, and gazed at Mifune, one of her eyebrows raising. "Your words carry a lot of reverence for a man as despicable as him."

Mifune chuckled a little. "I can't help it, Konan-san. I will always respect the skill of a powerful warrior, be ninja or samurai, friend or foe."

"You do realize that it's thanks to Hanzo that Akatsuki exists," Konan reminded him.

Mifune, however, shook his head. "In that, you're wrong. Akatsuki, at least in spirit, existed longer before that. If Obito didn't convince you to join him, he would have used another method. Included killing your friend Nagato in his sleep and taking the Rinnegan back. Hanzo was, at best, somebody who fostered a fortuitous situation Obito took advantage of."

Konan weighed the words of the commander of the Fifth Division, nodded in agreement, and let out a weary sigh.

"We're truly insignificant, aren't we?" Konan asked. "If other people can use us as pawns so easily."

"Less insignificant than you think, Konan-san," Mifune reassured her. "And we're only pawns if we allow ourselves to be. And you stopped being one the moment you walked out of that criminal organization."

...

"And the score is: Animal Squad two, Kakuzu zero! Wohoooo!" Kiba howled, with Akamaru happily barking for added emphasis.

"Yeah, we beat that guy once, why did Akatsuki think that sending him a second time would be different?" Tamaki agreed.

Kiba looked at Tamaki, eyebrow cocked. "Whoa, you're agreeing with me? Did somebody smack your head really hard or something?"

"Har har," Tamaki replied, rolling her eyes. "Despite what you might think, I don't disagree with you on principle, only when you're wrong."

"You disagree with me most of the time," Kiba said, frowning a little, as he crossed his arms.

"Because you're wrong most of the time," Tamaki said with a mocking grin as he leaned towards him a little. "Just not this time. So enjoy this fleeting moment of being right and me agreeing with you."

Kakashi's Animal Squad was sitting around a bonfire, enjoying their dinner and something to drink while celebrating victory. Both Kiba and Tamaki were in a high mood and amicably talked with each other, while Shino and Kakashi were silent. While it was par the course for Shino, the silver haired Jonin looked a little spiritless.

"While I hate to interrupt the only moment in which your insufferable bickering doesn't spoil the mood," Shino interceded, pushing his glasses. "I must point out that the credit for our victory over Kakuzu shouldn't entirely go to us. We did have outside help from an Iwa ninja in his capture."

"Ah, yeah, that girl with the scary giant bee," Kiba said, as he recalled the memory of the battle. He then shrugged. "Eh, we would have beaten him one way or the other. She only accelerated the only possible outcome."

"You certainly don't lack confidence in your abilities," Shino pointed out.

"Of course I don't! I mean, it's not that I think I'm invincible or something like that, but I can tell how much I've improved over the past years!" the Inuzuka boasted. "Plus, Kakuzu isn't the only reanimation we fought and defeated. Did you hear about how Tamaki and I crushed Takigakure's previous leader, Hisen?"

"Maybe not as strong as Kakashi-sensei, but close!" Tamaki continued. "And Kiba, Shibuki-san and I totally kicked his butt! Ask Shibuki-san if you don't believe us!"

"You two certainly seem to be in a festive mood," Shino pointed out, suppressing a sigh.

"Why wouldn't be? Today we scored a huge victory!" Tamaki cheered, though truth be told, she wasn't sure if their victory was that decisive or not. Still, a victory was a victory.

"And you should be as well," Kiba said in a mildly chastising tone. "You should be celebrating with us, yet instead you are so dour it looks like you ate a lemon raw!"

Taking some offense to this, Shino crossed his arms and shifted in his seat to give his back to his two teammates. "I don't know what you're talking about. Just because I'm not hollering like you two doesn't mean that I'm not happy for our victory."

There was a moment of silence, until a realization dawned upon Tamaki. She smiled widely and narrowed her eyes at Shino in a mocking manner.

"Ohhhhhhh, I think I know why you're so moddy, Shino," Tamaki said in a teasing manner. "You're mad because that girl with the giant bee wasn't some normal Iwa ninja. I did hear about her clan, they were some rivals or enemies of your clan, weren't it?"

"You can't be right, Tamaki," Kiba interceded, first sounding like he was going to defend his teammate, but soon joined Tamaki in the mockery. "Shino is so obviously above such petty things, he wouldn't let him bother him that much, would he?"

"I think I preferred you two when you were constantly bickering," Shino replied.

"Aw, come on Shino, don't be like that. We're only teasing you," Tamaki said, lightly slapping his shoulder. "Cheer on! Who cares if a member of an ancestral enemy saved your skin? We're here, we're alive, and we won, that's what matters!"

"Well said! Don't you agree with us, Kakashi-sensei?" Kiba asked the silver haired Jonin, but got no answer. "Kakashi-sensei?"

"Huh?" Kakashi asked all of sudden, sounding dazed and disoriented, like he was suddenly snapped from a deep slumber. "I'm sorry Kiba, I wasn't listening to you. You were saying?"

"Aw, not you too!" the Inuzuka protested, throwing his hands in the air. Akamaru whined a little.

"Me too what?" the confused Copy Ninja asked.

"Come on Kiba, be a little more sensitive," Tamaki told the Inuzuka. "Kakashi-sensei was forced to fight his own dad. That must have been quite the crushing experience."

"It was," Kakashi said, letting out a sigh. "And I'd lie if I said that it didn't affect me. But I'm better now. I appreciate your concern, but you don't have to worry about me. I'm better now, promise."

"You know that you can talk to us about any problem you have, right?" Tamaki insisted. "Bottling your emotions can't be good. Especially during times like this."

"Shouldn't I be the one telling you that?" Kakashi asked, as he scratched his temple.

"You know, Rin told us about her time with you when you were our age, and how you used to be back then," Kiba pointed out.

"And how Obito's supposed death affected you," Tamaki continued.

Kakashi let out a sigh that he didn't know was holding. "That girl... always poking her nose on other people's business... if somebody gives her a reason to worry, she won't drop the issue until it's solved. Guess I should be glad she didn't change that much. There's no escape from this one, isn't it?"

Both Tamaki and Kiba wordlessly shook their heads. Shino merely crossed his arms before adjusting his glasses, which reflected the light of the bonfire in an admittedly unsettling way.

"If Rin told you about how I used to be when... when we formed part of Team Minato," Kakashi began, the uneasiness of the memory becoming evident. "Then you know that my ideas of what it meant to be a ninja were markedly different, which were influenced by my father's decision and how he ended up taking away his life."

"Even if thanks to Obito I managed to understand why my father choose his comrades over completing the mission, there was something else I was unable to forgive him for: killing himself, and leaving me alone to fend for myself. I might have been a prodigious ninja, but that didn't change the fact that my age was still in the single digits, with all of what it entailed."

"So even if you gained a better understanding of your father's decision-making, you still resented him for taking his life," Shino summarized.

"Yeah. At first, I tried to make anything to separate myself from him, and I think that taking an opposite worldview was part of that. After Obito made me reconsider... well, then it became even harder. Before I hated my father, and then I had this weird mix of love, respect and resentment, and quite frankly, I didn't know how to deal with it. And thought that the best thing to do was simply not deal with it."

"But why?" Kiba asked.

"He was dead. Nothing was going to change that," Kakashi said with a shrug. "I thought that the best thing I could do was not to dwell on that and move on. Plus, I was still dealing with my whole goddamn team dying one after the other."

"Though in the end two of them weren't dead," Tamaki chimed in, hoping to cheer Kakashi a bit with that fact.

"You have no idea how weird it feels to see somebody alive after accepting that they were dead," Kakashi said, shaking his head. "And then, of course, Orochimaru not only had to revive my father, but he then throws him against me in particular."

"I think it's been long established that that man is quite sick," Kiba said in disgust.

"So all the feelings I bottled for so many years came rushing like a torrent breaking through a damn made of toothpicks," Kakashi said, letting out a mirthless chuckle. "Which I wasn't able to hide, and my dad, clever bastard that he was, picks on them and wanted to help me solve them."

"While you two were battling," Tamaki said, thought it was more a question.

"While the two of us were battling," the Copy Ninja confirmed with a nod.

"And were you able to make peace with him?" Shino asked.

"As unbelievable as it was, we did. He said he understood how I feel, and regretted taking his life. Apparently, he also regretted saving his comrades over completing the mission, but I convinced him he did the right thing. That seemed to bring him some relief," Kakashi said. "Eventually, I mustered the strength to forgive him, because I knew I would never have such a good chance. And do you guys remember how Hokage-sama defeated the zombies of Minato-sensei and Kushina?"

"I believe that, if a zombie reaches a form of closure, the soul will return to the afterlife and the reanimation will be undone," Shino recalled.

"So that's what happened with your father?" Tamaki asked, easily connecting the dots.

"Yes. It was quite... cathartic to watch," Kakashi said, raising his gaze to the night sky above him. "For the first time in my life, I felt like I was finally ready to move on from the past."

"Funny thing, you weren't the only one who had to fight their father returned as a zombie. Kiba and I helped Shibuki-san deal with his dad," Tamaki said once again. "And it seems that Shibuki also had some stuff he really needed to discuss with him."

"Though unlike your dad, Hisen didn't disappear on his own, and we had to seal him," Kiba added.

"It's kind of crazy how many people ended up fighting their dead relatives," Tamaki observed.

"Not as crazy as you may think," Shino intervened. "A man as intelligent as Orochimaru surely took the emotional factor into the equation when he raised his army of the undead. Fighting a strong ninja with unlimited chakra that can't be killed by conventional means is hard on itself, but if we add the distress of said undead enemy being a person close to you, the fight becomes even worse."

"Like I said, that man is sick," Kiba spat, with Akamaru barking in agreement.

"More like diabolical," Tamaki added.

"Indeed. But as we proved him today, that strategy isn't going to work," Kakashi said, smiling under his mask. His students returned the gesture. "Come on, let's enjoy the night, we deserve a little celebration after such victory."

...

"Today's been a good day for the Kamizuru Clan."

To say that Suzumebachi was happy would be an understatement. Sure, there was a lot of joy going around given the Alliance's string of victories, this one being the most recent, but the Iwa kunoichi was indeed ecstatic.

Like most other ninjas, she and her two brothers were sitting around a bonfire while enjoying their dinner, while they discussed the battle that took place that day, as well as making predictions of how the conflict would progress. They made sure to sit along other Iwa ninjas, given their lack of trust in other villages, especially Konoha.

"Yes. It's been a while since we've been in a real battle," an older looking man with tanned skin, a black beard with a moustache added. This man was Kurobachi, Suzumebachi's older brother. Though, despite his seniority, he wasn't the leader of what was left of their clan, given his little sister's superior talent in their clan secret jutsu.

"But with the jutsu we learned from the secret scrolls of the First Tsuchikage, the enemy never stood a chance," a glasses-wearing man with long blond hair that accentuated his overall feminine appearance added confidently. This man was Jibachi, the youngest of the Kamizuru siblings.

The Kamizuru siblings left Iwa in order to search for the First Tsuchikage's secret scrolls, that contained the Kamizuru Clan's most powerful jutsu. They searched in every place they knew their grandfather had been in or was of some significance, to no avail. After almost eight years of search, they were ready to give up.

That's it, until by pure coincidence, they heard of the Bikochu beetle, an incredibly rare insect with an extremely keen sense of smell, which was valuable for trackers for that very reason. After another long and arduous search, they found a specimen of Bikochu ready to lay eggs, and managed to make a newborn Bikochu to smell a piece of cloth that belonged to their grandfather. Eventually, the Bikochu led them to a hidden ninja fortress where the scrolls were stored.

The irony that they managed to complete their mission thanks to a beetle that was previously used by the Aburame clan wasn't lost on them, but they didn't want to dwell on it.

"The best part was probably the face those Aburames made when they witnessed our new powers," Suzumebachi said, letting out a cackle of satisfaction. "Oh, if we only had that scroll during the last war... things would have been MUCH different!"

"You're talking about that Aburame you saved from that one reanimation, don't you?" Jibachi asked, smiling a little.

Kurobachi, however, sneered as he crossed his arms. "Disgraceful. You should have let that kid die. We're fighting this war for Iwa, not for any of the other villages, much less Konoha. If the other nations end up crippled by this conflict, the better for us."

Rather than agree with him, Suzumebachi shot her elder brother a chastising stare. "You should do well to remember, brother, that we're at war with an enemy of a scale unseen before. Maybe Konoha and the Aburame clan were our enemies in the past. And they may be in the future, once this war is won and forgotten. But for the time being, they're allies, and they'll be treated as such."

"You can't be talking seriously!" Kurobachi angrily protested.

"And this, my dear brother, is why I am the one in charge," Suzumebachi said. "Our clan is on thin ice, being the three of us its last remaining members. If we want to come out of this war alive, we will need to be both careful and pragmatic. I'm not asking you to like the Aburames -Kami knows what do I think of them-, but like I said before, they're our allies now."

"I agree with Suzumebachi, brother. There might be a time where we might be on a perilous situation and may need assistance from ninjas from other villages, Konoha included," Jibachi interceded. "And I'd hate that they'd let me die because we were shown unwilling to do the same for them."

"But we won't be in a situation that would require such help! We're not just Kamizuru, but the strongest Kamizuru since the First Tsuchikage, for Kami's sake! Don't you have any pride?" Kurobachi angrily shouted.

"Pride is what caused our clan to fall from grace like it did. I do take pride in my strength and abilities, but not to the point of letting me blind me to reason," Suzumebachi said.

Kurobachi shook his head, and scoffed. "You always had quite the big head, sis. And you only got worse when you caught the eye of Onoki's brat of a granddaughter."

"Tsuchikage-sama may be young and a little naïve, but only a fool wouldn't respect her strength. And most importantly, she has Iwa's interest at heart. That should be enough for you," Suzumebachi replied.

"You know she isn't here. You don't have to butter her up. I know you're working your way into being the next Tsuchikage, but everything has a limit," Jibachi said, snickering a little.

"If you sparred against her like I did, you wouldn't underestimate her like that," Suzumebachi angrily retorted. "Kurotsuchi is strong, and if I play my cards right, part of that strength is going to be mine. Or better said, for the Kamizuru clan."

Kurobachi raised his eyebrow. "What do you mean?"

"Two of Iwa's most powerful jutsu, The Light Boulder Jutsu, created by our grandfather, and the Dust Release, created by his direct successor, are secret jutsu privy only to the Tsuchikages. Kurotsuchi-sama was already a formidable kunoichi in no small part thanks to her Lava Release Bloodline Limit, but adding flight and Dust Release to the mix, she became truly deadly," Suzumebachi explained. "Meaning that, if I manage to convince her that I'm a suitable successor, those secrets will be mine as well."

Despite her admittedly opportunistic thoughts and goal, Suzumebachi liked to think of herself as a loyal Iwa ninja and somebody the Tsuchikage trusted.

"But they will be yours alone only, not part of the clan," Kurobachi pointed out. "They won't allow you to share them with us."

"Maybe not, but I have other ways to increase our clan's power. And that's where you two enter," Suzumebachi said. "I suggested Kurotsuchi-sama the possibility of an arranged marriage between members of the Kinryu clan and the three of us. That way, the next generation of Kamizuru clan members will also have Lava Release on top of our clan jutsu. So far, she seems to be receptive to the idea, and promised me that there would be talks with the head and elders of the Kinryu clan once the war is over."

"You certainly thought this very thoroughly," Kurobachichi noted. "And you're confident your plan will succeed."

"I have to be. I've been planning this for more than a decade to let that much work go to waste," Suzumebachichi said, gritting her teeth. She stood up, and shot her brothers a deadly glare. "That's why we can't screw this up, understood? We need to show Kurotsuchi-sama that we're among the best, if not the best ninjas of Iwa. Even if that means working side by side with Aburame clan. Understood?"

"Clear as water," Jibachichi said.

"Whatever, you better know what you're doing," Kurobachichi huffed, rolling his eyes.

...

Hanabi was sitting cross legged on the roof of a building of the town their campsite was built around. She required silence to do what she was trying, and even if she could still hear her fellow Allied ninjas partying and celebrating their victory below, she was far away enough as for their voices to be low and muffled enough to break her concentration.

Unlike Hinata, Hanabi has never been one for meditation. She never really saw the point of it. Hinata always said that Hanabi was too impatient and impulsive. The younger sister would agree, but she wouldn't consider it something that detracted from their ninja skills. At least not until now.

"Come on..." Hanabi said, letting out a long breath, while focusing her chakra.

Little by little, the muffled voices she could hear from below became more and more faint, until silence reigned uncontested. Hanabi took a couple minutes to realize this, and in order to test if her experiment worked, she opened her eyes.

Much to her delight, she was no longer on that town, but on the weird palace where she met Hamura Otsutsuki the time she awoke the Tenseigan. But instead of Hamura, it was her sister Hinata who was standing in front of her, her eyes looking into the distance, as if her mind was off.

"Yes, it worked!" Hanabi cheered.

"Huh?" Hinata asked, blinking a couple times, as if she had been snapped from a dream. She looked around, confused. "Uh? Where am I...? Hanabi-chan?"

"Hey, sis," Hanabi casually asked. "Before you ask, no, you are not dreaming. This is really me. I'm contacting you from the Earth."

"From the Earth...?" Hinata repeated, as if weighting her words. "How?"

"Remember how Hamura said he's bound to the chakra of those that possess the Tenseigan?" Hanabi asked. Hinata nodded. "Well, that means that the two of us are linked through Hamura's chakra. And I thought, since we're linked by our chakra, then maybe I can use it to contact you, just like Hamura talked to us. Plus, the fact that we're sisters should make the connection even stronger."

"That... was rather ingenious, Hanabi-chan," Hinata praised. Hanabi smiled proudly. "So, how are things going down there?"

"So, far, we're winning. Most of the reanimations avoid me, for good reason, so I'm mostly filling the role of air support. Then they have me permanently destroy the sealed reanimations with the Truth Seeking Balls," Hanabi explained. "I did hear some talks that Orochimaru is waiting to send their most powerful zombies for later, when our numbers are lower and we're more tired. What about you? Did you find that mysterious weapon?"

"We have a good idea of where it might be, but reaching there might become a bit of a problem," Hinata said.

"I see. Well, I was mostly checking on you to see how you were doing," Hanabi said a bit sheepishly. "And for you to see that I'm fine."

Hinata smiled. "It's certainly a reassuring thought. Say, do you know something about Naruto-kun?"

Hanabi shook her head. "As far as I know, he's still training on that super secret island. Man, if the two of you were here, this war would go much more smoothly."

"I'll do my best to complete my mission here so we can go back to Earth and help you there, I promise," Hinata told Hanabi.

...

Mountain Graveyard

Orochimaru was sitting alone in the cave entrance of Obito's lair. The Uchiha had left after a White Zetsu announced their defeat, the third one in a row. The first two battles Obito kept his cool, but now the Sannin could tell the Uchiha's patience was starting to run dry. Even if the Snake Sannin didn't fear the new Akatsuki leader, Rinnegan or not, he didn't want to risk their alliance.

Still, Orochimaru wouldn't consider the battle a complete lost, as he made a discovery regarding Impure World Resurrection. While he was monitoring all the fights his puppet zombies took part in, he could sense his control over Sakumo Hatake slowly slipping. His attention was drawn to the White Fang, mostly to see what the enemy was doing that could break his control over them. It already happened in Konoha, and the fact that he still didn't find what they did unnerved him.

It was then when he found out what it was: personal closure. When Kakashi and Sakumo made amends, Orochimaru could feel his control over the reanimation weaken more and more until it was completely undone, and the reanimation crumbled.

"To think that Impure World Resurrection has such a glaring weakness," the Sannin said in disgust, shaking his head. "Almost sounds like something out of a story for children."

Still, now that he knew this, he could take precautions. Whenever he felt that a reanimation would reach closure, Orochimaru would take direct control of them, overriding their personality with his own.

"Fortunately, this discovery didn't come too late, since I still have my best reanimations in reserve," Orochimaru said, rubbing his hands together. "Alright, the kids' gloves are off. I think I already tested the enemy's strength enough. Time to show the world the true power of this jutsu."

Author's Note: Yeah, mark Orochimaru's words, because they mean business. Let's say that these first three battles were more like a warm up. You probably noticed how nobody of note died so far, right? Yeah, from now onwards, that's going to change. It's not like I'm going to go full Game of Thrones, but expect named characters to die from the next battle onwards.

The part I liked to write the most about this chapter was Konan. Really, I love writing a post-Akatsuki Konan, she's so interesting and there are so many things about her to explore... while Kishimoto wasted a lot of the awesome characters he created, Konan definitely sits at the Top 5. And rest assured, this isn't the last you'll be seeing of her ;)

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Again, if you liked this chapter, don't forget to leave a review. It doesn't matter if it's long or small, every review means a lot to me, and they make me really, really, really happy!

Akatsuki's Counterattack

Author's Note: I'd like to announce that Shinobi420 and Animephilosopher1 had published a side story to this fic focused on Hanabi, titled "Hanabi Gaiden". If you want to read it (and you totally should is a pretty neat story), the fic is on Shinobi420's profile.

Anyway, onto the newest chapter:

Chapter 110:

Akatsuki's Counterattack

or

When bad guys stop fooling around

Ninja Alliance HQ

A few days after the battle on the forests of the Land of Frost, another army of White Zetsu and Impure World Resurrection zombies was detected, this one cutting through the Land of Fire, in direct route to Konoha.

"It seems they alternate their targets between Konoha and Kumo each time. A pattern, perhaps?" Onoki suggested.

"Who knows. That's not important now," Jiraiya said, before he turned towards Ao. "Ao-san, which division is closest to the enemy position?"

Ao focused, as his sensing abilities expanded. In no time, he managed to detect all the nearby friendly ninja in the Land of Fire.

"The Raikage's First Division is the closest to it," Ao said. "There's also Kurotsuchi's Second Division and Tsunade's Medical Division as well."

"Good. Send a message to the Raikage to intercept the enemy. He'll be happy to have a chance to break some skulls," Jiraiya told Ao.

"Shouldn't we move the other two divisions as well? Or one of them at the very least?" Onoki suggested.

Jiraiya shook his head. "Akatsuki probably knows the position of our troops, and they may be baiting us to move all our forces into a single point to leave other areas unprotected. We'll keep those in standby as they're relatively close to the First Division's position."

Suddenly, a ninja -from Suna, given the uniform- burst into the room, holding a sealed folder.

"Supreme Commander, we just received the scouts' report of the details about the enemy forces!" the Suna scout said.

Jiraiya nodded, took the folder, opened it, and carefully read its contents. His expression darkened with each name of the reanimations that have been spotted. It seemed that Orochimaru wanted to reopen old wounds on top of creating new ones.

"Orochimaru... this is a low blow..." Jiraiya growled.

"Something you may want to share with us, Supreme Commander?" Onoki asked. "We're a bit in the dark here."

"Several of the reanimations spotted are Konoha ninjas who died during the Uchiha Insurrection," he then looked at Shikaku, as color left the Nara leader's face. "Including Clan Heads Hiashi Hyuga and Inoichi Yamanaka."

Shikaku's shock was replaced by anger as his expression hardened and his hands were clenched into fists. "My boy and his teammates are part of the First Division. Inoichi wasn't just Ino's father, he was like an uncle for Shikamaru and Choji. Seeing him defiled like that is going to break them."

"I don't want to sound insensitive, Shikaku-san, but if those kids are ninjas, they aren't kids anymore," Chiyo intervened. "They should be ready to face such a challenge."

"And they will face it... but not alone," Shikaku said, before turning at Jiraiya. "Supreme Commander, I know I'm part of the Intelligence Division, but this is a special circumstance. I hereby ask for permission to go into the battlefield."

There was a moment of silence as the Toad Sage locked eyes with the Nara Clan Head. Even if Jiraiya was regrettably out of the village when the Insurrection happened, he did hear some of the details. Among them, how Inoichi died, and how Shikaku watched him die. The man probably blamed himself for his friends' death.

"Maybe Shikaku can help Inoichi find closure, so we can get rid of a reanimation," Jiraiya thought, before making his decision. "Very well then. Permission granted."

"Good. Then I'll go immediately. Even at a good pace, I'll take some time to reach there."

"Leave that to me, Shikaku-san," Jiraiya said before biting his thumb and making five hand seals. "Summoning jutsu!"

Jiraiya slammed his palm into the ground, summoned a large orange toad with dark green markings and yellow eyes. Jiraiya then wrote something into a scroll, and gave it to the toad.

"Gama, please take Shikaku-san to this coordinates. Can you do that?"

Wordlessly, the toad shot his tongue at the surprised Shikaku, before pulling the Nara into his mouth and swallowing him whole, much to everybody else's horror. Then, the toad disappeared in a cloud of smoke. Jiraiya noticed the looks of bewilderment the others were shooting at him.

"What? None of you guys traveled by toad? Stop giving me those looks, he will be fine!" the Sannin said in an annoyed tone.

Forests of the Land of Fire

Fortunately, it took no time for the First Division to intercept the marching Akatsuki army en route to Konoha, catching them still far away from the village.

The Raikage led from the vanguard. He had traded his usual white haori for the standard Kumo flak jacket, which he wore over his bare chest. He hadn't worn such flak jacket since the Third Ninja War, and couldn't help but admit, with a small hint of sadness, that it was fitting that another war would make him put it on again.

The enemy approached, heralded by a cloud of dust. The scouts from the Hyuga Clan already warned that two lines of Zetsu Brutes led the charge. The Raikage had read the reports from the other divisions on these creatures: made from several normal White Zetsu clones merging together, they were much stronger than the sum of their components, had near unlimited endurance, and only extremely powerful strikes or jutsu could put them down for good.

The Raikage smiled. He loved to hear somebody describing an enemy in such terms. When he heard about something being very hard, he couldn't help but test how much of his strength it would take to break it.

"Raikage-sama, they'll be here soon," an Iwa ninja asked. "Your orders?"

The answer came in the form of a burst of chakra, as an aura of blue light and crackling sparks flared around the leader of Kumo.

"They plan to break our formation with an onslaught," the Raikage said. "So we break their formation first!"

And in an instant, the Raikage was gone. In less than two seconds, he crossed the distance between them and the enemy lines, and sunk his fist into the gut of a Zetsu Brute. The force of the punch, coupled with the momentum of his charge added so much power to the hit, that the artificial monster burst into multiple chunks of goo. It happened so fast, his fellow Zetsu didn't notice what had happened.

Which proved to be a fatal mistake as the Raikage, who still kept some momentum from the initial charge, moved to the left and elbowed another Brute, blowing two of his arms and pushing it against another one.

Finally, the Zetsu stopped their charge, realizing that somebody was making a number on their ranks. A Brute charged the Raikage from behind, two of his arms morphing into blades, and tried to skewer him. However, the Raikage proved to be much faster than his enemy, and not only avoided the attack, but placed himself behind the giant creature. He wrapped his arms around the Brute's waist, and suplexed it into the ground with such force, it opened a crater while releasing lightning bolts everywhere, while pushing the enemies away from him.

The Raikage looked back, and saw that his troops didn't even move, watching in awe the spectacle that was his fighting. This brought an ugly snarl to his face.

"What the hell are you looking at!? ONWARDS!" he yelled.

After a couple seconds of silence, the Raikage's order was replied by a chorus of battle cries, and the First Division charged forward, their morale invigorated. Soon, it was the Akatsuki army who found itself at the mercy of an unstoppable enemy onslaught.

...

Despite the Raikage successfully breaking the enemy formation, the first lines at least, the Zetsu Brutes still proved to be very resilient enemies, being able to shake off low and mid power jutsu, while literally ripping in part the unfortunate ninjas who got too close for them.

"Let the Chakra Golems go first!" Shikamaru shouted, as the aforementioned metallic constructs stomped their way forward. Many of them raised their arms, releasing streams of fire from the flamethrowers mounted on their forearms. While they proved to be effective burning the smaller Zetsu, the larger ones were more resilient. "Okay, it's time for us to enter the fray! Ino, with me! Choji, stay behind us and guard our backs!"

"You got it!" the Akimichi replied.

"Alright, let's go!" Ino said, already seeing her first victim, a Zetsu brute struggling against a Chakra Golem, and made a hand seal. "You're mine! Mind Disturbance Jutsu!"

The Zetsu Brute lost control of his body, much to his confusion, and disengaged the Chakra Golem to attack a fellow Brute fighting some Kiri and Kumo ninjas. Another Brute and a couple of normal Zetsu quickly identified the source of the disruption, and charged towards the Yamanaka Clan head.

"Good work, Ino! Keep going forward. Now's my turn!" Shikamaru said, making his clan's signature hand seal as well. "Shadow Imitation Jutsu!"

Shikamaru's shadow darkened and elongated, spreading forward, while also splitting into multiple threads, one for each Zetsu coming towards them. The moment the shadow threads connected with their shadows, the artificial creatures were stopped on the spot.

"Good. Now, stay still while I kill you," Shikamaru said with a smirk, as his hands formed the rat and the bird seal. "Shadow Stitching Jutsu!"

Suddenly, several black needles materialized from the shadows, impaling the Zetsu, who screamed in pain as they were almost instantly killed. However, the Zetsu Brute, even if he was in obvious pain, managed to survive. He even shot Shikamaru a mocking smirk.

"You'll need... something stronger than a few pinpricks to kill me, Konoha scum," the Zetsu Brute said, as he tried to overpower Shikamaru's binding jutsu.

Shikamaru smirked back, as his hands started to do more hand seals. "How about this, then? Fire Release: Shadow Fire Thread!"

A stream of fire moved through Shikamaru's shadow towards the immobilized Zetsu Brute, as if the shadows were trails of oil. Soon, the Zetsu Brute was engulfed by a roaring inferno. The creature let out a scream of pain as the flames devoured his flesh. And that wasn't even the end of it.

"Here, have this as well!" Shikamaru said, as he tossed forward two kunai with explosive tags attached to them. The paper notes detonated the moment the fire touched them, putting the Zetsu Brute out of its misery. "Whew. One down, dozens remain. Wonder if we can do something to-"

"Shikamaru, watch out!" the Nara heard Choji's voice warning him from behind.

Shikamaru pulled out a kunai just in time to see two normal Zetsu clones lunging at him from the flanks. While he could parry the attack of one of them, he'd be at the mercy of the other. Fortunately, Shikamaru didn't have to worry about anything as two giant hands caught one of the Zetsu each, before they slammed them into the ground, killing them.

"Good one, Choji!" Shikamaru praised.

Choji's arms shrunk to normal size, as he smiled at Shikamaru. "Hey, you told me to cover your backs, and I will do that no matter wha-"

"Vacuum Palm!"

Choji was suddenly hit by a vacuum shell on the side of his head, which sent him sprawling on the floor.

"Choji!" Shikamaru cried, and turned to the direction of the attack. There, an undead Hyuga, a man with shoulder length brown hair and delicate features. Main house, given his clean forehead. The man was in the clan's usual battle stance, stood there ready to attack. Shikamaru wasted no time. "Shadow Imitation Jutsu!"

From Shikamaru's shadow, multiple shadow threads rocketed towards the Hyuga reanimation, but the man expertly dodged them, carefully timing his steps.

"I'm sorry, Nara, I wish you no harm, but my actions aren't my own," the Hyuga apologized, as he dashed towards Shikamaru. "Eight Trigrams, Thirty two-"

"Human Tank Bullet Jutsu!"

Shikamaru jumped sideways just as Choji, transformed into a giant spinning meat sphere, rolled forward towards the Hyuga, carving a furrow on the ground as it moved. The Hyuga cancelled his combo, and went for the clan's defensive move.

"Heavenly Spin!"

The Hyuga started to spin, turning into a rotating chakra dome, which formed just in time to parry Choji's attack. Both attacks struggled and grinded against each other, but in the end, the Heavenly Spin proved to be more powerful, and Choji was pushed backwards. The Akimichi heir quickly returned to normal, as he landed on his back, letting out a grunt of pain.

"Choji!" Shikamaru shouted again. But he was unable to assist his fallen friend, since the Hyuga stopped spinning and charged towards Shikamaru. "Shit! Shadow-"

"Lightning Release: Lightning Flash!"

Suddenly, bright white light filled the area, making Shikamaru to instinctively shield his eyes in order to protect them. The Hyuga, however, wasn't so lucky, and thanks to his Byakugan, the damage to his sight was even greater.

"Lightning Release: Thunder Blade!"

As the bright light dimmed down, a dark skinned, red headed kunoichi wielding a katana crackling with electricity passed Shikamaru, rushing towards the blinded Hyuga. She delivered several quick swipes, cutting both the arms and the head of the reanimation, whose body fell on its back lifelessly.

"It seems we arrived just in time," the redhead kunoichi said.

"Karui!" Choji happily said, now back on his feet, and rushed towards her. "Thanks a lot! We owe you one!"

"You'll have plenty of chances to repay me," Karui said, as her teammates Omoi and T quickly went to the fallen reanimation, and started to apply chakra and movement suppression sealing tags. "You guys are okay?"

"I've been better, but I could have been worse," Shikamaru admitted. "Nice timing."

"It was luck that we saw you here. By the way, why didn't you move since the battle began?" Karui asked. "You guys are sitting ducks if you stay in the open like that."

"We were protecting Asuma-sensei before he finished," Choji mentioned, and looked back.

Karui looked at where Choji was looking at, and saw the bearded Jonin sitting on the ground in the lotus position with his eyes closed.

"The hell? What is that guy doing?" Karui asked, half surprised, half outraged. "Finished doing what?"

"Gathering nature energy," Shikamaru said.

And just on cue, Asuma opened his eyes, which were yellow rather than dark brown, and had thin red lines around them.

"Gathering complete. My Sage Mode is ready!" Asuma said, as he pulled out his trench knives. Channeling chakra through them, the knives projected a long blade of blue light. "Whoa! It was never this big before!"

The earth started to rumble, and the Konoha and Kumo ninjas noticed a multitude of White Zetsu clones, lead by three Zetsu Brutes, charging towards them.

"Just like I said before, sitting ducks!" Karui said, before turning towards the Konoha ninjas. "Come on, we need to rejoin the main group!"

"Wait. I think I can take care of this group on my own," Asuma said, taking a step forward. Raising one of his chakra blades, he delivered an horizontal swing in his general direction.

With that move, Asuma released a crescent shaped chakra wave, which flew forward towards the incoming group of enemies. The moment Asuma's attack touched the incoming enemies, they were sliced in half, as if they were made of butter. The wave still carried enough power and momentum to continue flying forward, cutting more enemies until it dispelled.

"Wow..." Karui said in awe. "I really need to learn how to do that."

"I can talk with the guy that taught me senjutsu if you want," Asuma said. "But it will have to be another moment. Now we have a battle to win!"

His confidence reinvigorated by his new power, Asuma rushed forward. Shikamaru and Choji were going to follow him, when that moment a giant toad landed seemingly out of nowhere in front of them. And their surprise grew even further when the toad regurgitated a very disgusted Shikaku.

"Dad!?" Shikamaru asked, as he run towards his father. "What are you doing here? And... what were you doing inside a toad?"

"Hokage-sama said it was the fastest way to get me to the battlefield," Shikaku said, coughing, and wiping slime from his body. "Though I don't think I'll want to do that ever again."

"Yeah, Ino said the same thing when she had to get inside a toad," Choji said, as he and Shikamaru helped Shikaku on his feet.

"Why are you here, dad?"

"I had to come. Our scouts told us that one of the reanimations on this division is no other than Inoichi," Shikaku explained. Both Shikamaru and Choji's eyes grew wide as their mouths were left wide open, though Shikamaru quickly shook off the shock.

"Of course. It makes sense that Orochimaru would revive him," Shikamaru said, shaking his head in disgust. "It was only a matter of time until we had to fight somebody close to us."

"Then Ino..." Choji began.

No more words were needed, as they quickly went to look for their blonde teammate, hoping that they would get to her before she saw her defiled form of her deceased father.

...

"... sixteen strikes, thirty two strikes, sixty four strikes!"

Not far away from there, another Hyuga reanimation was in the middle of a fight. This one, though, was much stronger than the one Karui defeated. At his feet laid the bodies of the ninjas from multiple villages he had just defeated, some of them death, others just unconscious or paralyzed, fallen victim of the zombie's martial prowess.

More Allied ninjas appeared to replace the ones Hiashi had defeated. Two from Konoha, another from Kiri, another from Iwa and one from Ame. The former Hyuga Clan Head was still wrapping his head around seeing ninjas from so many villages fighting together. Despite the fact that other Konoha reanimations gave him an abridged version of what had happened after his death, there were some things that didn't sink in.

"If you wish to defeat me, I'd avoid engaging me in close combat," Hiashi advised, seeing that his new opponents all were holding weapons of some sort, from kunai, to katanas to shotos. "The Hyuga Clan is unbeatable in hand to hand combat, and weapons will do you no good. Try ninjutsu instead."

"Very well then! Thanks for the tip" the Iwa ninja said, as he started to make hand seals as fast as he could. "Earth Release: Crushing Avalanche!"

His companions did the same.

"Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

"Fire Release: Phoenix Sage Fire Jutsu!"

"Lightning Release: Thunderbolt!"

"Water Release: Water Shuriken!"

Large boulders, a stream of fire, smaller fireballs and shuriken made of water flew in perfect formation towards the former clan head. His expression unchanging, he started to spin as chakra was released from his body.

"Heavenly Spin!"

In less than a second, Hiashi turned into a spinning dome of chakra, rotating so fast and with so much momentum that not only he was able to repel the elemental barrage aimed towards him, but created a shockwave that send his enemies flying backwards.

"Unfortunately, you'll need something more powerful than that to make a dent in my defenses," Hiashi said in a somewhat regretful manner. He then dashed forward, his palms flaring with blue chakra. "Sorry. I won't enjoy this anymore than you will."

However, before Hiashi could strike his next victim, he was alerted by the whirring sound of multiple shuriken flying towards him. He broke his charge, deflected some with a few Gentle Fist strikes, and jumped backwards to dodge the rest. That moment, a newcomer entered the battleground, another Konoha ninja, given the uniform.

Though it wasn't just any Konoha ninja, but one Hiashi knew so well.

"Hello, husband. I was praying that you'd be sent to fight a division other than mine. But alas, fate doesn't appear to be on my side."

"Hikari..." Hiashi said, his expression softening, as his heart whirled with a mixture of sorrow and joy. "It makes me so happy to see that you're still alive. Are our daughters okay? And the clan?"

"Both our daughters and the rest of the clan couldn't be better," Hikari said, before turning at the other ninja Hiashi just defeated, who were getting back on their feet. "I'll take care of my husband. I'm among the few who knows how to beat him."

"As you wish, Hyuga-san," one of the Konoha ninjas said, as both he and the rest of his companions left to look for another opponent.

"You were a strong kunoichi when I was alive, Hikari, but even then you were still weaker than me," Hiashi said, as his body slipped into the standard Hyuga fighting stance. "Did your strength and skill grow as much as to eclipse mine during these past years?"

"I'm not sure, but I like to think that they did," Hikari said, mimicking her husband's actions. "Guess that there's only one way to find out."

Without further ado, Hiashi launched himself at his wife, and delivered a flurry of palm strikes. Hikari was able to block or dodge all of them nimbly, as well as deliver a few good hits herself. Still, her hits were barely able to hurt her husband.

"You're indeed better than I remember," Hiashi admitted. "Though sadly the Gentle Fist won't work on reanimations like myself."

"Understood. Let me step up my game then," Hikari said, jumping backwards while making several hand seals, before clapping her hands together. "Water Release: Water Palm!"

Water droplets formed around Hikari, before they gathered on her hands, covering them in a cloak of liquid. Hiashi watched the process with utmost interest.

"Elemental ninjutsu combined with the Gentle Fist... that was the idea Hinata mentioned she wanted to develop..." Hiashi said in awe.

"I'm glad you still remember that. Needless to say, yeah, she succeeded with that. If anything, she took the Gentle Fist to heights you'd be unable to believe. Oh, if only she was here to show you..."

"As much as I'd like to see how my daughters are and how much they've grown, I prefer if they don't see me in such a wretched state," Hiashi sorrowfully said, before charging forward. "Now you'll have the opportunity to test how good that combination is, Hikari."

Hikari began her counterattack, delivering palm strikes that released short but power streams of water when she thrust her arms forward. She quickly reared both arms backwards.

"Water Release: Double Torrent Palm!"

Hikari pushed her hands forward, this time releasing a larger stream of water at her undead husband. Hiashi started to spin as chakra poured from his body.

"Heavenly Spin!"

Once again, the Hyuga Clan's greatest defensive jutsu proved to be enough to keep the former clan head safe.

"I must admit, seeing the Gentle Fist combined with elemental ninjutsu is truly a sight to behold," Hiashi praised.

"You should see what Neji or our daughters are able to do," Hikari replied.

"Unfortunately, it's still not enough to cause me any harm," Hiashi continued, as his body slipped into a fighting stance once again. "For your sake, I hope you have more techniques you can use than the ones you showed me."

"Heh, I knew beating you wouldn't be this easy. Anyway, fortunately, I do have a couple more tricks under my sleeve," Hikari said, smiling confidently as her hands flew through more hand seals. "Water Release: Walking Malestrom!"

Water burst around Hikari in large quantities, gathering around her in the shape of a spinning liquid column. Hiashi narrowed his eyes as he scanned the jutsu through the vision of the Byakugan.

" The water around her is laced with her chakra, hiding her body from the Byakugan," Hiashi concluded. He smirked as his Byakugan instantly deactivated. "Good one, Hikari. That way I won't be able to read your movements as long as I have the Byakugan active."

"Water Needle Palm!"

Hikari started to thrust her arms forward in quick succession, releasing a barrage of water needles at her undead husband. In an amazing display of dexterity and speed, Hiashi managed to parry every single one of them with quick strikes of the Gentle Fist, with the Byakugan still deactivated. Hikari moved forward little by little as she continued her barrage, closing the distance between her and her husband.

Until Hiashi suddenly reactivated the Byakugan.

"Eight Trigrams: Mountain Crusher!"

Thrusting both palms forward, Hiashi released a destructive wave of chakra from them. Hikari was too close to dodge, and took the attack in full, and was violently launched backwards, as the wave of chakra carved a wide furrow on the ground-. Fortunately, her watery cloak absorbed some of the impact, so the damage wasn't as severe as it could have been.

As the Hyuga kunoichi struggled to get back on her feet while rebuilding her water chakra cloak, her Byakugan picked her husband rushing towards her, ready to continue the beating.

"Heh, nice, an opportunity to show him another of Hinata's jutsu," Hikari thought, as she smirked. "Water Release: Heavenly Rainstorm!"

Hikari started to spin in place, as she generated more chakra from her body that she instantly turned into more water, encasing herself into a protective watery tornado, just as Hiashi was about to strike her. The former Hyuga clan head felt as if he was trying to fight a tsunami, and this time it was his turn to be pushed backwards.

"Amazing. Not just the Gentle Fist, but the Heavenly Spin too?" Hiashi asked.

"Like I said, you'd be amazed if you could see Hinata and Hanabi now," Hikari replied, after she stopped spinning. Then, her Byakugan picked up something. "Huh?"

That moment, another Hyuga near identical to her husband landed besides her.

"Hello, Hikari-san. I saw that you were having a little trouble dealing with my brother, so I'm here to offer my assistance," Hizashi said, and without waiting for an answer, he locked eyes with his brother.

"Hello, Hiashi. It's been a while since your demise."

"Hizashi! What are you doing here!?" Hiashi asked, as panic crept through his back. "You need to leave immediately, before I seriously hurt you!"

Hizashi chuckled as if his brother just told him a joke. "Hurt me? Brother, you may have been the first born, but I was the stronger of the two. And I'd like to think that I gotten even stronger since then."

"That's not what I'm talking about! The Caged Bird Seal! I don't think-" Hiashi said, as his body tensed. "I'm sorry, brother."

Hiashi's hands formed the hand seal necessary to trigger the Caged Bird Seal. But much to the former Clan Head's shock, nothing happened. He tried a few more times, but the result was the same.

"What? Why it isn't working?" Hiashi asked, perplexed. "It's because I'm a reanimation now?"

"Perhaps this might shed some light on your doubts, brother," Hizashi said, before removing his forehead protector.

Hiashi gasped upon seeing that his brother's forehead was devoid of any seal.

"The seal... it's gone!" Hiashi said, shocked. "But how? Even if the Main House and the elders somehow agreed to do such a thing, the seal was made to be impossible to remove!"

"It happened after your eldest was appointed the new Clan Head," Hizashi began, as he put the forehead protector back. "As for why and how it happened... both questions have the same answer: the Tenseigan."

"The Tenseigan? What does that myth has to do with anything?" Hiashi asked.

"Hinata has the Tenseigan, Hiashi," Hikari interceded. "And so does Hanabi."

"And the Tenseigan granted Hinata the power to remove the Caged Bird Seal without harming the victim," Hizashi continued. "And yes, most of the Main House and the elders opposed her. But both Hinata and Hanabi have the Tenseigan, and the two of them were on the same page on this issue... who was going to oppose them?"

"Hinata brought the Hyuga to a new era, Hiashi," Hikari said. "The Main and Branch Houses are no more. Now there's only Hyuga. One clan, as it should always have been."

"You saw some of the new jutsu your daughters created. Now, let me show you something that my son did," Hizashi said, as he crossed his arms in front of his face. "Naturally, this is something my son is much better at, but I'm no slouch at either. Gate of Opening, open!"

...

"Mind Disturbance Jutsu!"

The Zetsu Brute was paralyzed on the spot, unable to understand why his body moved on his own and was forced to attack his fellow Zetsu clones. The caster of the jutsu, Ino Yamanaka, couldn't help but let out a chuckle of satisfaction.

"These creatures might be big and strong, but their minds are just as easily to control as the smaller ones," Ino said, mostly to herself.

"The better for me! It's is true that saying about the bigger they are, the harder they fall."

Eventually, her mind controlled giant Zetsu was destroyed by a reanimation, one possessing a powerful Lava Release Bloodline Limit. She was about to mind control that reanimation when her sensing abilities noticed something: among the sea of many chakras around her, she noticed a particular spike of chakra, the kind of spike produced by using mental jutsu, just like the ones from the Yamanaka.

" Is there another Yamanka out there?" the blonde wondered.

"Get away from me! I can't control my body!" she heard some allied ninja scream.

" A Yamanaka is on the enemy side!?" she thought, shocked, as she moved towards the source of the disturbance. "Of course, it has to be a reanimation! They'll need me to counter them, whoever it is!"

As she ran, attacking or dodging Zetsu clones that got in her way, she finally saw several Allied ninjas fighting against each other. Yes, this was the work of a Yamanaka. Whoever he was, as the new Clan Head, she would put an end to it.

"Don't worry guys, I'm here! You won't have... to... fear..." Ino said, before her eyes finally saw the caster in question, and her enthusiasm vanished entirely. "D-daddy?"

Standing there, much to her horror, was the reanimated form of her father, Inoichi Yamanaka, just like how she remembered him, minus the cracked skin and black eyes. She felt as if somebody punched her in the gut, even if, in hindsight, she should have guessed that if Orochimaru wanted a Yamanaka for his army of zombies, Inoichi was the obvious choice. Maybe her subconscious didn't want to acknowledge the possibility and thus didn't bring it up.

"No... not you..." Ino sobbed, as tears started to gather around her teal eyes.

"Ino...?" Inoichi said, finally noticing her daughter. "Ino, is that you?"

"Y-Yes daddy, it's me..." she croaked.

"Dear Kami, you've grown so much," Inoichi said, as he appeared he was ready to cry as well. "Such a pretty young woman. And I'm sure you're an even better kunoichi. I'm sorry I wasn't there to see you grow up..."

"Yes, I'm a good kunoichi, or that's what I like to think," Ino said, forcing the tear backs, her lip quivering, as he held a kunai. "And I'm going to show you how good I am by stopping you!"

"Ino!" a new voice said.

That moment, Shikamaru, Choji and Shikaku all landed besides her, making Inoichi to tense up.

"Guys... !" Ino began.

"We knew that the moment you saw your father, you'd want to face him," Shikamaru began. "But that doesn't mean you have to do it alone."

"Yeah, Inoichi-san was like family for us too!" Choji added.

"It's good to see that you're alive as well," Inoichi said, his face looking relieved. "But where is Choza? Please don't tell me that he-"

"Choza is fine," Shikaku was quick to answer. "He's not with us, as he was chosen to be part of a group for a special mission."

Inoichi sighed again. "Thank goodness I was the only casualty among our families that day." He said. Then, his expression went from relieved to panicked, as his body tensed up. "Guys, watch out, I'm going to attack! Mind Evisceration Jutsu!"

The three teens and one adult opposing Inoichi all fell to their knees while clutching their heads in pain when their brains felt like they were being cut with a burning knife. Their enemies incapacitated, Inoichi pulled a kunai and rushed forward.

"You'll need... something better than that to... put me down, old friend..." Shikaku said, as he struggled against the searing pain coursing through his head, and formed a single hand seal. "Shadow Imitation Jutsu!"

Shikaku's shadow darkened before it stretched and rocketed towards the incoming Inoichi, who gracefully sidestepped it without stopping his charge forward. The shadow split into smaller threads, forcing Inoichi to jump back a bit, but he made evident he wasn't going to stop.

Struggling against the mental pain, Ino reached for her ninja tool pouch, and grabbed a smoke bomb -after her battle with Sai, she decided to carry at least a dozen with her before a mission- and tossed it at her father's feet, filling the area in a dense cloud of purple smoke. Inoichi's body decided it was for the best not to attack blind.

" Good, that bought us some time," Ino thought, as she started making hand seals. "Guys, let me enter your minds you I can connect them to mine! Mind Fragmentation Jutsu!"

Fragments of Ino's mind left her and entered her teammates and Shikaku. She could now see and hear what they saw and heard, and their minds were now linked together, allowing them to share their thoughts without the enemy knowing.

"Good job, Ino," Shikamaru said. "I know that Yamanakas can create mental shields to protect yourselves from enemy psychic attacks. Can you do that with us?"

"I can, but since you only have a tiny piece of my mind inside your head, it won't be as effective as a full shield," Ino replied.

"It will be better than nothing, Ino," Shikaku said. "Shikamaru, you and I will focus on immobilizing him. Ino, make sure to counter his psychic jutsu with yours. Choji, you will be the one to squash him once we incapacitate him. Understood?"

"Yes sir!" the Ino-Shika-Cho team chorused in unison.

"Come on Shikamaru!" the Nara patriarch said, as he and Shikamaru made the same hand seal. "Shadow Imitation Jutsu!"

This time, two shadowy tendrils rocketed out of their shadows towards Inoichi. The undead Yamanaka had no choice but to fall back, lest him be trapped. Ino saw the perfect chance to strike.

"Alright then, my turn!" Ino said, as her hands made four hand seals as quickly as she could. "Mind Clone Switch Jutsu!"

Cloning her mind several times, she transferred them towards several White Zetsu clones near them, and immediately directed them towards her father. The two Naras noticed what Ino was doing, and they directed their shadows in order to force Inoichi into Ino's trap, and indeed, the possessed White Zetsu tackled the reanimation into the ground.

"Great work, guys!" Shikaku said. "Choji, now!"

"Partial Multi Size Jutsu!" Choji made a hand seal as his arms grew in size. He brought both arms up, ready for a downwards smash. "I'm sorry Inoichi-san!"

However, before Choji could smash the former Yamanaka Clan head, several chakra threads shot from seemingly nowhere, attached themselves to the White Zetsu, and pulled them from Inoichi. The undead Yamanaka rolled to the side just before Choji smashed his enlarged fists into the ground, opening a crater.

"What?" Shikamaru asked.

Inoichi made a hand seal, and thrust his hands towards the defenseless Choji. "Mind Disturbance Jutsu!"

"AAAGH!" Choji yelled, as his body started to twitch. "My body... ! I can't control it!"

That moment, a redhead garbed in Akatsuki cloak landed near them, chakra threads attached to his fingers. After dispelling the threads, he pulled out a scroll from under his robe, and unsealed two ordinary looking human shaped puppets from it.

"That was a nice tactic you were doing there. Pity I had to crash it," the puppeteer said. Given his blackened eyes and cracked skin, was a reanimation as well.

"Wait, who the hell is this guy?" Ino asked.

"He's wearing an Akatsuki cloak, and he's using puppets. He must be Sasori. We got word that Orochimaru revived Kakuzu, no wonder he also did the same with other Akatsuki members," Shikamaru said, grinding his teeth in anger.

"Ah, so you know of me," Sasori said, his tone being clam. "Too bad I don't have my best works of art here to show you. Instead, all I have are these pitiful outdated contraptions."

"I couldn't give a crap about your 'art'. You nearly murdered my girlfriend, and you're going to pay for it!" Shikamaru said.

"I murdered many people, yet you're angry for one of the few I failed to kill," Sasori said, and chuckled as if somehow that twist of logic amused him. "And you will join them soon enough."

"I'm sorry, Choji," Inoichi said, as he commanded Choji to attack Shikamaru.

"Shadow Imitation Jutsu!" However, before Choji could get close to Shikamaru, his father intervened, using the clan's signature ability to root him in place. "Ino, try to relieve Choji from the mind control!"

"I'm on it!" Ino replied.

"No, you won't," Sasori calmly said, as he directed his puppets towards her.

One of the puppets grew several blades around its arms and body, while the other opened up multiple slots across its body that fired kunai and shuriken -more than likely poisoned- towards the blonde Yamanaka.

"Ino, don't let those weapons touch you! They're coated in a deadly poison! Remember Kankuro and Temari!" Shikamaru urgently reminded her, as he moved to assist her.

"Ah, the Fourth Kazekage's other two kids, which somehow managed to survive my poison," Sasori said, sounding a little ashamed. "I guess the girl was the girlfriend you talked about? Oh well, it's irrelevant. Given that you didn't expect to see me, I deduce you won't have an antidote for my poison. All the better then."

While Sasori kept Shikamaru and Ino busy, Inoichi took his chance and... ran away from the fight, much to Shikaku's surprise. Knowing that Inoichi could keep Choji under control while he ran away, the Nara Clan Head tentatively released his jutsu, freeing Choji, who felt that his body was under his control once again.

"Choji, are you okay?" Shikaku asked.

"Yeah. My body is my own again, and I don't think he left anything in my mind either," Choji replied.

"Though, why did Inoichi leave? With me busy keeping you immobilized, it was the perfect chance to strike me down," Shikaku said, worried. "What did-"

"Fire Release: Great Fireball jutsu!"

Suddenly, Shikaku and Choji found themselves about to be engulfed by a massive fireball coming from above. Shikaku was able to push Choji away while jumping to the side, allowing the two of them to dodge the initial explosion. Still, they were close enough to it to be caught in the shockwave, which send the two of them flying in opposite directions, before landing on the ground with a painful thud.

"Dad! Choji!" Shikamaru screamed after noticing what just happened.

"You don't have time to worry about others, brat," Sasori said, as he made one of the puppets to shower him with poisoned kunai and senbon.

"Don't worry, son, I'm okay," Shikaku said, coughing as he dust and ashes raised by the explosion got into his lungs. "Hold on, I'm going to-ACK!"

"DAD!"

Shikaku looked down, and saw the blade of a katana coming out of his chest, red with his own blood. He only had a few moments of consciousness before his eyes rolled into the back of his head, as life left his body. The wielder of the katana pulled by kicking Shikaku's lifeless body forward, revealing the identity of the killer.

It was Fugaku Uchiha.

...

"Lateral Bolt of Pain!"

A delivered a brutal horizontal chop to the nearest enemy who had the misfortune of facing him, this time, a Moon Puppet. The chop carried so much force that not only was the puppet instantly split in two, but said halves burst into many pieces of metal and plastic, which were spread across the grassy ground, joining the many, many pieces of White Zetsu flesh and more puppet remains that fought the Raikage.

A had separated himself a little from the thick of the battle, since he needed a lot of space to move and his attacks caused widespread destruction and didn't want any of his ninjas under his command to end as collateral damage.

Several reanimations tried their luck against him, with the same results. Despite being strong ninjas -though the Raikage didn't recognize most of them- with powerful Bloodline Limits, A's combination of unbeatable speed and sheer strength proved to be too much for them, and found themselves overwhelmed.

Though, the Raikage was about to face an enemy that would prove to be more than a match for him.

"Shinra Tensei!"

One moment, A was dispatching a White Zetsu brute, and the next one he found himself flying and crashing against a tree, which was snapped in two due to the sheer force of the impact. Still, the First Division Commander appeared to be completely unharmed.

"What the hell was that!?" the Raikage roared, his nostrils flaring and teeth gritting with anger at being caught off guard like that. "Show yourself, coward!"

The answer came in the form of several whistles. Looking up, A saw multiple missiles flying towards him. The Raikage snorted dismissively, and with his phenomenal speed, dodging them was child's play. And by following the direction the missiles came from, A finally found his ambusher: a redheaded man with an Akatsuki cloak. Though what stood out from that man were his eyes, purple with concentric rings. That washed away every doubt about his identity.

"So, you're the one called 'Pain', right? Akatsuki's former leader," A said, locking eyes with the reanimation. "Of course Orochimaru would bring you back to life."

"That's a name I used to wear, but not anymore. I prefer if you referred to me with my actual name, Nagato," Nagato said, before tilting his head. "Though if you know about me, then you should fall back and come back with reinforcements. I saw you fight and you have power and skill, but not enough to overcome the power of the Rinnegan."

In less than a second, the Raikage was behind him, ready to split him in two with a vertical chop with a hand coated in lightning.

"DON'T UNDERESTIMATE ME!"

"Shinra Tensei!"

Before the Raikage could touch the reanimation, he was violently thrown back. This time, though, he was able to land on his feet, break his momentum, and dash towards Nagato again.

"I know how the Rinnegan works! That jutsu is powerful, but he needs to wait five seconds to use it again!" the Raikage thought, as he blitzed towards the undead Akatsuki. "And with my speed, I can kill you ten times in a row!"

Indeed, Nagato was unable to dodge or even block the Raikage's brutal fist aimed towards his face. However, the redhead merely disappeared in a burst of smoke, leaving a log behind, which was instantly shattered to splinters.

"A replacement!?" the Raikage snarled, as he looked around. "A man of your power needs to use such a jutsu to beat me!?"

The earth started to rumble, as nearby trees were toppled down as something big rushed through the forest. Said something turned out to be a gigantic ox and an equally large rhino, both of them with Rinnegan eyes and black rods on their bodies.

"Impressive monsters," the Raikage calmly said, as he prepared for the assault.

The rhino managed to reach first, and lowered its head in order to gore the Raikage with its massive horn. However, A managed to catch the beast's horn expertly, and while he was pushed backwards, he managed to root himself in place by digging his feet into the ground, stopping the giant animal on its tracks.

"You're going to need something more than big dumb animals to put me down!" The Raikage roared, his chakra cloak flaring bright, as he lift the rhino and used it to bludgeon the giant ox. The strike wasn't hard enough to cancel the summon in one go, but A was sure it would be enough to leave them out of comission for a while.

"Bansho Ten'in!"

The Raikage was once again send flying backwards, though this time he felt as if he was being pulled towards something rather than being pushed away. He braced for the impact, but much to his surprise, his flight was stopped not when he crashed into something, but when a giant lobster claw caught him, pinning his arms to his body.

"How many of this animals do you-" the Raikage was about to ask, when he felt a hand placed on his head.

"Psychic Mind Transmission!"

The Raikage felt how a foreign presence tried to pierce his mind. He tried to expel it, but despite his mental fortitude and unbreakable willpower, the intruder was far too skilled in the arts of psychic ninjutsu, and entered his mind. Suddenly, the Raikage was forced to relieve several memories as the enemy scanned his mind, until he found what he was looking for.

A memory where the Raikage was talking with his brother, Darui, Mabui and other high ranked Kumo ninjas about the decision to send

B and the other two jinchuriki to Genbu the Turtle Island for protection and training. His blood froze upon realizing that such information was now in the hands of the enemy.

"NO!"

Fueled by both anger at his enemies and fear for his brother's life, his Lightning Chakra Cloak exploded with power, pushing the Yamanaka away and forcing the giant crustacean's claw open. When the sea creature lowered its claw again, the Raikage grabbed each end of the claw, lifted it above his head, and using his rage to fuel his strength, tossed it against the edge of the forest, toppling several trees in the process.

"I'm sorry," voice said behind him.

The Raikage turned around, and saw a blond man with blond hair styled in a ponytail, wearing the standard Konoha uniform. His blackened eyes and cracked skin betrayed his identity as a reanimation.

"You," the Raikage seethed. "Just what did you do!?"

"Orochimaru forced me to scan your mind. He was linked to me as I did it," the man replied. "He now knows where the jinchuriki are hiding. I'm sorry, I have no control over my-"

In less than a second, the Raikage crossed the distance separating them, and with a powerful punch, he disintegrated the man's head. A second later, his lifeless body fell on his back. Still, the Raikage knew that he would be back in a few minutes.

...

Mountain Graveyard

"Kukuku... I know where the jinchuriki are hidden," Orochimaru said out loud in a taunting manner.

Obito, who was lazily resting against a rock wall with his eyes closed upon that moment, snapped his eyes opened, and almost jumped upon hearing those words.

"What? Where are they!?" Obito demanded, as he stomped towards where Orochimaru was sitting. "Speak!"

"Calm down, Obito-kun. I don't know the exact location, but I obtained a pretty good hint," Orochimaru said. "Apparently, Kumogakure has a base built on a island that's not an island, but a giant turtle. That's where the jinchuriki are being hidden."

"Clever. Very clever," Obito admitted. "Kami knows how long it would have taken us to find such a place."

"Said turtle moves to a different location every day, meaning that even if you find it, it will be on a different spot the next time," Orochimaru warned him.

"I can take care of that," Obito said, snapping his fingers. Zetsu -the original- emerged from under the ground.

"You called, boss?" the white half asked.

"According to new intel, the jinchuriki are hidden on a mobile island. Said island has to be somewhere in the seas to the east and west of the Land of Lightning," Obito explained. "Tell the Flying Zetsu to explore that area."

"It will be done, boss," the black half replied, as it sunk back into the ground.

"Good work, Orochimaru," Obito said, albeit begrudgingly.

"Regardless of the outcome of this battle, you provided Akatsuki with a decisive victory."

Orochimaru smirked sadistically. "Oh, I can make our victory even greater. Now watch."

Author's Note: Welp, there you go. Say goodbye to Shikaku Nara. While he's somebody who died in canon as well, other people that made it alive to the end of the series will join him soon.

Like I said before, this is where the villains decide to up their game. Not only did they send stronger reanimations, but thanks to Orochimaru cleverly using their non-combat abilities, he managed to find the location of the three jinchuriki. As for why Orochimaru used Inoichi instead of the Human Path, Orochimaru simply isn't aware of all of the Rinnegan's abilities, just the most obvious ones like the gravity manipulation or the chakra absorption. Though, don't expect an attack on the Turtle Island anytime soon, since there are still a couple battles to happen (including the assault on the Moon) before we get to that point.

And while Akatsuki making this discovery is already a victory, some of the reanimations, namely Fugaku and Nagato, haven't shown their worst abilities, but will in the next chapter, and this will get very, very messy.

Onto another fights, there's Hiashi. I know some people are going to be a little disappointed that neither Hinata nor Hanabi was part of the fight, but come on, if those two were involved, they would simply oneshot him with the Truth Seeking Balls and be done with it. Meanwhile, the whole confrontation with Hizashi and the reveal of him not carrying the Caged Bird Seal anymore has been in my mind for literally years.

Thanks to Ookamki88 for betareading this chapter.

So, what are your thoughts on this chapter? Share them in a review! It doesn't have to be a long one, you know, long or short, reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Overwhelming Power

Author's Note: First of all, this fanfic broke 4000 reviews! Man, when I was beginning to write this, I wasn't expecting that this fanfic would get more than 1000 reviews, much less more than 4000. Let's see if we can rise that number to 5000 before the story ends! Shout out to Yamichaos for submitting the 4000th review!

Second, after the Hanabi Gaiden was published, a couple people reached me asking for permission to write oneshots based on the Son of the Sannin universe. I'd like to say that yeah, if anybody wants to write a oneshot, they're free to do, though I prefer if you discuss your potential ideas with me first (gotta keep things consistent).

Now that that's out of the way, enjoy the chapter:

Chapter 111:

Overwhelming Power

or

When you're crazy enough to fight a god

Shikamaru, Ino and Choji stared at the undead Uchiha, who stared back at them with lifeless black eyes. At his feet was the equally lifeless body of Shikaku Nara. Tears streamed from Shikamaru's eyes, his teeth grinding against each other. Ino couldn't suppress her tears either, and covered her mouth with a hand. Choji's eyes were open wide and his mouth left agape, as if still processing what just happened.

"I'm sorry for that," Fugaku dryly said, before he raised his katana in a menacing way. "Now, unless the three of you are strong enough to take down a Jonin, I'd suggest you to fall back and find reinforcements. Despite my best efforts, I can't control my actions."

"That won't be necessary!" a new voice said.

The Ino-Shika-Cho trio was snapped out of their stupor when their sensei landed in front of them, and raised a chakra blade protectively.

"A-Asuma-sensei!" Ino stammered.

"Asuma-sensei, Shikamaru's dad-" Choji began, but Asuma raised a hand to silence him.

"I know. I sensed his chakra vanish all of sudden. That's why I came here as fast as I could," Asuma said, his now golden eyes looking at Shikaku's deceased form. "I may not be able to save him, but I'll be able to save the three of you," Asuma said, before pointing one of trench knives at Fugaku. "My name's Asuma Sarutobi, and I shall be your opponent!"

"I have no choice in who I get to fight. But my body is compelled to kill the strongest enemies first. If you're as strong as you appear, you may convince the one controlling me that I should focus on you and ignore the kids," Fugaku said.

"I can assure you you'll find me a challenging opponent," Asuma insisted. "Shikamaru, Ino, Choji, I can't fight an opponent this strong and protect you at the same time. Get away from here and try to fight an enemy more suited to your power and skill. Don't worry about me, I'll be okay."

Shikamaru didn't say anything, he just wiped his tears, and nodded. He turned back and ran away, with Ino and Choji trailing behind him, much to Asuma's relief. He didn't have time for an argument now. Though his relief was short lived, as he saw Fugaku's hands blurring through hand seals.

"Fire Release: Great Fireball Jutsu!"

Fugaku exhaled a massive fireball, which flew towards Asuma, leaving a path of scorched grass and ground on its wake. Asuma channeled more chakra towards his trench knives, the blades of chakra they were projecting growing longer, thicker and shining brighter, as he raised them above his head.

"Sage Art: Blade of the Wind God!"

Asuma brought down both weapons, slamming them into the ground, releasing two crescent shaped vertical chakra blasts that traveled forward, carving two furrows into the ground as they moved. They cut the giant fireball coming at the leader of the Tactical Squad, splitting it in two, before the wind around the chakra crescents put the fire away.

"Incredible. Despite my jutsu's power and having the elemental advantage, Asuma's attack-" Fugaku said, before his enemy suddenly appeared before him, trench knife raised above his head, ready to deliver a vertical slash.

Time seemed to slow down, and Fugaku's Sharingan analyzed the blade of pure white and blue chakra slowly descending upon him. He could tell that parrying with his own katana, even channeling fire chakra to counter Asuma's wind, would be useless, as Asuma's chakra blade would overwhelm any defense he might put up.

"What's with that kind of chakra?" Fugaku thought, as he started to move aside. "His chakra is far more potent than any human... and the color of his eyes and the red marks around them... what kind of power is this?"

Time started to flow normally again, and Fugaku was able to dodge Asuma's brutal vertical swipe. It released yet another crescent of chakra that carved another furrow, as well as raising a powerful gale force winds in every direction.

" It's Sage Mode, Fugaku-san," a creepy, unnerving voice said in his head.

Fugaku recognized it as the man who had brought him back from the dead. "Orochimaru? You know about that?"

" Yes. Sage Mode is an extremely rare art. Only the most powerful ninjas are able to master it, and even then, you need to sign a contract with an animal tribe willing to teach it to you," Orochimaru said. "I wasn't expecting somebody like Asuma to be able to learn such a mode."

" Then his chances of beating me are high. Good. I already died being the unwitting puppet of a manipulator, I don't plan to continue being another puppet in death," Fugaku mentally replied.

Orochimaru chuckled. "And what makes you think you have a choice, my dear Uchiha? Now continue fighting. I want to see how the abilities of the Mangekyo Sharingan measure up against the unexpected power of Asuma's Senjutsu."

That very moment, Fugaku's Sharingan changed into his Mangekyo form, and made a single hand seal.

"Okuninushi!"

Fugaku's body released a wave of chakra in a single burst, and the air around him looked distorted, as if Fugaku wasn't part of this plane of reality. Asuma, who was on the offensive, jumped backwards while rising a chakra blade in a defensive fashion.

"Interesting. It seems as if you know already what this jutsu does," Fugaku observed.

"Because I do. I didn't see it with my own eyes, but I spoke with somebody who did," Asuma explained.

"If that's the case, then somebody must have pillaged my eyes and used them for their own benefit," Fugaku said, before a scowl developed on his face. "It was Danzo, wasn't it?"

"Yes, it was him," Asuma confirmed. The Sarutobi Jonin could feel Fugaku's anger spiking, and decided that soothing him might be for the best. "Still, Danzo is no longer among the living. Maito Gai and Shisui Uchiha put him down."

"Shisui? Is he still alive?" Fugaku asked. "Wait, what about other Uchihas? Please tell me some of them survived the insurrection!"

"Aside from Shisui, only your sons survived," Asuma explained. "After your death, the rest of your clanmates decided they wanted to follow you to the grave and go down fighting, rather than face Konoha's judgement for their actions."

"Even if reduced to a fraction of what we used to be, it's good to hear that the Uchiha still lives," Fugaku said.

"They aren't the only ones. Shisui is a father of two children. It may take generations, but the Uchiha will reclaim their former glory," Asuma said, before his stare hardened. "And thankfully, their leadership won't lose their way like it did under you."

"I know. I'm sorry for killing your father. I'm also sorry for killing Shikaku Nara, even if it wasn't my intention," Fugaku said sorrowfully.

"You were close, but my father still lives," Asuma said, much to Fugaku's surprise. "And now, I shall put you down for good, so no more lives are endangered by you again!"

Asuma dashed forward, while Fugaku jumped backwards, leaving a trail of four negative colored afterimages that mimicked his movements. The former Uchiha Clan Head pulled several shuriken and tossed them at the Sarutobi Sage, and his afterimages did the same. Asuma delivered an horizontal chop in opposite directions with his chakra blades, creating an X-shaped blast of wind chakra that travelled forward, blowing away all the shuriken.

However, more shuriken came after those, and even more after those. Fugaku and his afterimages unleashed a storm of metal that was able not only of slowing Asuma's attack down, but to stop it completely.

"What the...?" Asuma asked, surprised, as he jumped back from the incoming rain of steel stars, as he made more hand seals. "Fire Release: Great Flame Jutsu!"

This time, Asuma expelled a huge cone of flames, burning so hot, the shuriken melted into puddles of liquid metal in mere seconds, and expanded in width as it moved towards Fugaku. The former Uchiha Clan head tried to move to the side, but was unable to dodge the incoming firestorm, and he was engulfed by a sea of blazing red and orange.

"Even if he's immortal, that fire should be enough to put him down so he can be sealed away before he regenerates," Asuma said to himself, as he watched the flames in front of him quickly disappear. His eyes also returned to normal as Sage Mode vanished. "And good thing, because I used the last of the Senjutsu chakra I gathered before on that attack."

Sure, he still had a Shadow Clone hidden among the trees gathering nature energy, but he wanted to save that for an enemy of similar caliber.

However, when the flames died out, rather than a charred body in the process of regenerating, he saw that Fugaku was very much untouched. Around him was a giant ghostly ribcage, black with red edges, and some fire around it that quickly disappeared.

"Susanoo. Of course, I should have expected that," Asuma said, scowling in frustration.

"You know this jutsu as well," Fugaku observed. "I presume you saw Itachi or Shisui using it."

"Sasuke as well," Asuma added.

Fugaku was a little taken aback, but made no comments on that detail about his youngest son. Then, Fugaku's Susanoo skeleton continued developing, growing arms, shoulders, a neck and a head, followed by muscle, and then skin. Lastly, two black swords appeared on each hand of the construct.

The Sarutobi Jonin seethed as he made a single hand seal. The Shadow Clone gathering nature energy was dispelled, said energy transferring to Asuma, restoring his Sage Mode.

"This is going to be harder than I believed. But I didn't get where I am now by throwing the towel in the face of a challenge," Asuma said, as he channeled chakra through his trench knives, generating two chakra blades through them. "Let's go!"

...

Shikamaru, Choji and Ino had tried to flee and find a more suitable opponent like Asuma had commanded them. Unfortunately, they were intercepted by Sasori, who decided that they would be his next victims. They've been trying to escape from him, but whenever they moved away, one of Sasori's puppets rained poisoned kunai and senbon on them, forcing them to remain in place.

"Doesn't those things ever run out of ammo?" Choji asked, as he ran away as fast as he could from the deadly metal shower, followed by Ino.

"Even the lesser of my creations are still deadly weapons. Do not underestimate my art," Sasori said, sounding somewhat annoyed.

While one of the puppets continued to rain poisoned weapons on the two Konoha Chunin, the other one generated blades around its arms, and dashed towards Shikamaru. The Nara, however was unfazed.

"Shadow Sewing Jutsu: Shadow Cocoon!"

Multiple shadowy threads formed around Shikamaru, and wrapped around him, forming a protective shell just in time to block the strike from the incoming puppet. There was a metallic clang upon impact, but the shadow shield didn't break. At least, until Shikamaru commanded it to.

"Shadow Sewing Jutsu!"

The protective cocoon broke apart again into multiple dark tendrils, which wrapped themselves around the puppet's arms and legs, trapping it.

"Now, time to break this thing!" Shikamaru shouted, as he made a hand seal and used his anger to empower his chakra. The shadowy threads started to apply pressure, and a few cracks could be heard from within the puppet.

"I won't let you," Sasori said in his bored monotone.

Shikamaru looked at the undead redhead, but didn't see him doing anything. That's it, until he noticed something on his shin. Looking down, he saw a chakra thread attached to it. Sasori then moved a finger with the thread attached to it, and Shikamaru's leg was pulled with deceptively strong force, making him fall on his back, while Sasori pulled his now free puppet back.

"Not that I care that much for these oldies, but it's the best I have now. Then again," Sasori said, as he looked around. "There are so many skilled ninjas here... many of them with Bloodline Limits. Yes, I can start a new collection with all the bodies that will be left once this battle is over."

"Shikamaru!" Ino shouted, as she and Choji rushed to help his friend, but another rain of poisoned metal stopped her from doing so.

"Sorry, but no interruptions. That was your father there, wasn't he?" Sasori asked, his eyes locked onto Shikamaru. "I also know the pain of losing a parent to enemy ninjas, though in my case, they didn't die before my very eyes. You must feel horrible. But fear not, soon you'll be free of your misery and will be able to reunite with your dad."

With a hand wave, Sasori directed his puppet to finish the now helpless Shikamaru. However, all of sudden, the air was fill the sound of cracking electricity, a white, blue and red blur crossed the space between Sasori and his enemies, followed by the sound of ropes being snapped, and then Sasori's puppets fell to the ground motionlessly.

"What the...?" Sasori asked, as the chakra threads on his fingers dispelled. "Somebody cut the threads?"

Shikamaru felt a pair of hands grabbing him by his shoulders and helping him back on his feet. He saw that Omoi and T were the ones helping him up. In front of him was Karui, smirking at him.

"Hey man, you okay?" Omoi asked.

"I've been better, but yeah. That was a nice save," Shikamaru complimented.

Karui smirked in statisfaction. "You're welcome. You're lucky we noticed you guys were in trouble."

"Because you were constantly checking on Choji," T jabbed.

"Were in the middle of a battle, leave the goddamn teasing for when we win!" the redhead angrily yelled at her teammate.

"Yeah, I like to tease Karui as much as you, but she has a point," Omoi agreed.

"Karui!" Choji yelled as he ran towards the group. "You saved Shikamaru!"

"I know, I'm great," she said with a nod, and suddenly pulled out several shuriken from her ninja tool pouch, and tossed them towards Sasori. The redhead was trying to reattach his chakra threads to the puppets, but Karui's shuriken intercepted them before he could do so. "Trying to recover your toys while we're talking, huh? Not on my watch!"

"T, you know what to do," Omoi said.

T nodded, put herself behind Shikamaru, and started to make hand seals. Shikamaru immediately realized what she was doing, and crouched down and made a hand seal of his own.

"Lightning Release: Lightning Flash!"

T's body exploded with bright white light, those unfortunate to look at her in that moment, like Sasori, felt like a lightning bolt just fell in front of their very eyes, and instinctively raised his hand to shield his eyes. But just for once, T wasn't using that jutsu to blind her opponent. The bright light, however, had the added effect of greatly expanding Shikamaru's shadow for a few seconds.

A few seconds was all what the Nara needed

"Shadow Imitation Jutsu!"

With a speed never seen before, Shikamaru's shadow stretched and rocketed forward, touching Sasori's shadow, leaving the undead puppeteer completely immobilized.

"This guy won't go anywhere," Shikamaru said.

"Good. T, put some chakra suppressing seals and restriction seals on him before somebody else tries to free him," Karui commanded.

"Understood," the twin braided kunoichi said, as she moved towards the incapacitated Akatsuki.

"Okay, now that we dealt with that creep, I'd like if we went after my dad. He's pretty dangerous, and I feel only I can counter his jutsu," Ino began. She was about to say something more, when suddenly the ground started to shake under her feet. "What the-"

Shikamaru's heart skipped a beat, as he knew what was going to happen. "Everybody, MOVE!"

And indeed, the next few seconds, the ground cracked, before it violently exploded outwards, sending large chunks of earth and dirt flying everywhere, and naturally, the ninjas that were standing there not even a second ago, including Shikamaru and the others. And from under the recently formed giant crack, an equally gigantic black and red centipede appeared.

"What the hell was that!?" T asked, as she looked at the gigantic centipede charging towards a group of Allied Ninjas fighting Zetsu clones. "A summoned animal?"

"Shikamaru! I saw that animal before!" Choji said. "It was-"

"Pain," Shikamaru interrupted. "Yes, that's one of his summons."

"Pain? What Pain?" Karui asked.

"Pain, or Nagato Uzumaki, as we later found, was the leader of Akatsuki, and a bearer of the Rinnegan," Shikamaru explained. "Among his many powers, he could summon a wide variety of giant animals, much stronger than the usual summoned animals." He let out a weary sigh. "Of course, it was obvious that Orochimaru would revive somebody of such power."

"So all the reanimations he sent after the other divisions weren't even his best. It seems that he's been saving his heavy hitters all this time," Karui said in realization.

"That's all nice and good, but you're forgetting about what's important," T cut in. "How do we defeat that guy? Because if he died before, that means that he we can just kill him again. Or hurt him enough to seal him. So what did you guys do the first time?"

"We didn't do anything. It was Naruto who took him down," Shikamaru replied. "And we can no longer count on him."

"Besides, Pain is way too much out of our league," Choji said. "Only somebody with the power of a Kage is a match for a guy that powerful."

"Thankfully, our Raikage is the leader of this division," Karui reminded, and his spirits quickly lifted. "Yes, Raikage-sama will make short work of that guy, Rinnegan or not!"

"I don't know how strong the Raikage is, but I'm really hoping your faith in him isn't misplaced," Shikamaru said, sounding a little skeptic.

"Though, is there something we can do to help?" Omoi asked, as his eyes darted towards the giant centipede. Then, there was another booming thunderclap, and saw more allied ninjas fighting against a giant lobster. "Damn, another one!"

"Those animals are pretty strong, but they can be taken down with enough firepower," Shikamaru said. "Come on, let's go!"

...

"Watch out!" Fugaku warned.

Fugaku's Susanoo's arm, which was holding a black blade with red edges, was brought down onto Asuma. The Sarutobi Sage was tempted to parry the attack and check how he held against the Uchiha's power, but in the end he refused to take the risk. When the Susanoo sword hit the ground, it created a large crack that kept spreading in its general direction, shattering the ground in its wake.

" Such destructive power..." Asuma said in awe, clicking his tongue as he looked at Fugaku, encased inside the giant chakra construct. "Unstoppable offense and iron hard defense... this is going to be a challenging one..."

"To think that every Uchiha has this power buried inside their being..." Fugaku commented, sounding amazed as well.

"The Mangekyo Sharingan was known since the time of Madara Uchiha, how is that you only learned about it now?" Asuma asked.

"While the existence of the Mangekyo Sharingan was known, how to unlock it was not. Madara kept that knowledge to himself, and took it to the grave," Fugaku explained. "It was shortly before my death that I discovered the secret behind its activation."

Asuma rushed forward, and Fugaku's Susanoo tried to slam him again. This time, Asuma moved aside, before leaping at his opponent, raising both chakra blades. The Susanoo lifted its other arm, generating a sword to parry Asuma's attack. Blades clashed against each other, but in the end, Asuma's ended up slicing through Fugaku's Susanoo's, and struck the head of the chakra construct. However, the initial parry deprived his blow of much of its momentum, and only managed to make a small crack on its head.

"Fire Release: Great Fireball Jutsu!"

From within the Susanoo, Fugaku exhaled a huge fireball at Asuma, still clinging to the Susanoo's head, though he was able to jump away before the fiery attack could touch him.

" At the very least, I proved that I can overpower his defenses if necessary, though that alone won't be of any help," Asuma thought, his feet touching the ground, and Fugaku's fireball sailing into the sky. "Though the fact that Fugaku can use ninjutsu while inside that thing is troubling..."

Spikes started to grow all around the chakra construct. Asuma tensed up, and noticed that the spikes were all aimed at him.

"Susanoo: Tsukumo!"

The spikes fired off. Still, Asuma wasn't intimidated, and fast as lightning, started to swing his trench knives as fast as possible, deflecting the lethal needles aiming at him. He then noticed another spike of chakra coming from Fugaku, and realized he was making hand seals. He pulled out a handful of shuriken, and tossed them forward while exhaling fire into them, granting them an aura of fire.

"Trying to overwhelm me like that won't work! You still haven't seen the full extent of my abilities!" Asuma said, as he prepared for the new barrage. "Sage Art: Dual Elemental release: Blades of Fire and Wind!"

The blue chakra blades Asuma's trench knives were projecting suddenly increased in length and thickness, while one of them burst into orange flames, and the other turned bluish white. Asuma continued to deflect the Susanoo needles and the flaming shuriken, but now every swing released a crescent of wind or fire, many of them which hit Fugaku's Susanoo. Said Susanoo moved forward, and tried to smash Asuma with one of its giant blades. This time, the Sarutobi clan member opted to parry the attack, crossing his blades above his head. The impact was powerful enough to sink his feet into the ground, but Asuma, with his senjutsu-enhanced strength, Asuma spread his blades outwards in an arc, releasing a powerful crescent of wind and fire that shattered the Susanoo's blade.

Asuma moved again. The Susanoo's other arm moved to intercept, albeit this time it appeared it was trying to grab him. As he moved, Asuma started to spin on his feet, turning into a deadly tornado of cutting wind and fire, and the other Susanoo arm was shattered as well.

" Yes! If I use the full extent of my power, I can neutralize his offense and overcome his defense!" Asuma thought in triumph. "Now time to end this!"

Asuma moved for the kill, and delivered a double thrust towards Fugaku's position. The elemental blades met with some resistance when they touched the Susanoo's shell, but this one too was shattered. The rest of the Susanoo vanished as Fugaku made a single hand seal.

"Okuninushi!"

Asuma felt a burst of chakra coming from Fugaku, and cursed inwardly as he jumped backwards, leaving a trail of negative afterimages. Asuma's blades pierced the solid afterimages, but doing so reduced his momentum, and he failed to reach the undead Uchiha.

"Shit! I was so close!" Asuma cursed in anger.

"Yes, you were close. I didn't think there was something that could match, much less overcome, the mighty Susanoo in terms of power," Fugaku said, as the Susanoo formed around him again. "However, you didn't see the whole extent of its power. That was merely the humaoid Susanoo. Here's the next stage, the armored Susanoo!"

The chakra construct grew in size, and gloves, vambraces, shoulderpads, a helmet and a chestplate formed around Fugaku's Susanoo, encasing it in armor. Then, a cowl covered its head, falling behind its back forming a cape. Finally, it raised a hand, generating a double-bladed katana.

The Susanoo raised the double bladed katana even higher, and started to spin it. The force of the spin was so great, it raised a small tornado around it. Once it built enough momentum, Fugaku tossed it forward.

"Susanoo: Helix!"

"If I dodge that, it will continue forward, and Kami knows how many allied ninjas will die to that! I need to stop it!" Asuma said, as beads of sweat ran down his temples.

Channeling chakra into his arms, he delivered a swing with both his blades, hoping it would be enough to stop the attack. The black double katana was shattered by the impact, but it produced an explosion that hurled the Sarutobi clan member backwards, landing painfully on his back. And on top of the damage taken, Asuma felt how the last of the nature energy strengthening his body faded away.

"S-Shit..." he cursed, as he tried to get back on his feet.

Fugaku moved forward, and his dreadful Susanoo with him.

"And that isn't even the whole power of the Susanoo," Fugaku said. "Orochimaru wanted me to test how my power did against that of a Sage, and now that he has the answer, he doesn't need me to hold back. Now be prepared for the power of the Perfect Susanoo."

...

"Asurato!"

Nagato raised his arm, which reassembled itself as if it were a machine into a canon. The barrel of said canon started to glow with a white light as it gathered energy, before finally firing a bolt of chakra at the Raikage.

The Raikage, however, proved that his monicker of fastest man alive wasn't an exaggeration when he was able to move fast enough to dodge the incoming bolt. More bolts were fired, but the Raikage, now barely a white and brown blur, dodged them easily as he zigzagged towards Nagato, leaving a trail of dust and blades of grass behind. Unfortunately, Nagato had something the Raikage's speed was useless against.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Once again, A felt like gravity no longer affected his body a fraction of a second before an invisible force launched him backwards. Despite tumbling a few times, he was able to land on his feet, skidding back into the ground. Then, all of sudden, the sidestepped and wrapped his arm around seemingly thin air.

"Ha! You think you can catch me off guard with such a pathetic trick?"

The air behind the Raikage rippled and shimmered, revealing a gigantic chameleon, with A's arms wrapped around the neck of the snake that was attached to its head. The snake hissed angrily, but the Raikage didn't budge. And showing once again that his muscles weren't just for show, the Raikage lifted the chameleon above his head before spinning around his feet, building up so much momentum, a small tornado began to form.

"This... may be a problem..." Nagato observed, taking a step back.

"You can have your repulsive pet back!" the Raikage roared, before launching the gigantic reptile at Nagato.

The undead redhead reflexively raised his other arm, and fired his most used and versatile jutsu.

"Shinra Tensei!"

The chameleon screeched as the force of the Raikage's throw clashed against the gravity blast of Nagato's attack, crushing the animal's body, resulting in its forced unsummoning, leaving a cloud of smoke behind. Said cloud was split in two the moment the Raikage blitzed towards Nagato again.

" Five seconds before he can use that jutsu again!" the Raikage thought, as he closed the distance between the two once again. "But this time, make sure no other animal interferes... there!"

A huge shadow blacked the sun, followed by a loud and high pitched caw, and the Raikage jumped in time just to avoid a gigantic bird gore him with its large and deformed beak, landing on its head, before running through his body. Upon seeing that it had a leg sticking from its back, the Raikage smirked as an idea formed in his mind.

"That was a big mistake on your part!" A said, as he grabbed the bird by the leg, and jumped towards Nagato, dragging the confused animal with him, before slamming it down on the redhead.

"Mistakes like that are easy to fix," Nagato said, making a hand seal.

That moment, the bird was unsummoned, leaving the Raikage empty handed, the sudden lack of the massive weight he was carrying fumbling his balance. Something Nagato took advantage of, as he jumped backwards while casting his hand forward.

"Bansho Ten'in!"

Falling prey to the same feeling of weightlessness, this time the Raikage was pulled towards Nagato's hand, which wrapped around his throat, as another hand grabbed his head.

"I'm sorry. But you're already dead. Ningendo!"

Nagato then moved the hand back, pulling the Raikage's soul away from his body. Or that's what he would have done, if the Raikage didn't grab his wrist, leaving the large man's soul only partially out his body. The two of them struggled as if the soul was a rope in a tug-o-war competition.

"Don't you dare underestimate me!" the Raikage shouted, as he forced Nagato's hand to leave his soul into his body.

"What the...? How are you resisting this jutsu?" the stunned Nagato asked.

The pressure on his wrist intensified, until it burst in a small cloud of dust and paper bits, causing the hand to fall to the ground lifelessly, while the Raikage's soul fully returned to his body. Not giving Nagato another chance, the Raikage delivered a rather brutal kick to the redhead's chest, sending him flying backwards.

Before he could press the attack, the Raikage was alerted by another giant shadow looming over him. He jumped away just in time before a giant bear claw smashed against the ground, opening a crater. The Raikage glared at the newcomer with a mix of frustration and anger.

"Now a panda bear?" the Raikage asked in exasperation. "Just how many of these things can you summon!?"

The panda let out a roar, as it stomped towards the Raikage, letting out a loud roar. The leader of Kumogakure was unfazed. Electric sparks loudly crackled around his body as he directed more chakra towards his Lightning Chakra Cloak.

"Thundering Elbow Smash!"

In less than a second, the Raikage leaped at the Panda, and sank his left elbow into the giant bear's gut with all the strength he could muster, making the white and black plantigrade to tumble and fall on its back as if it was a chopped tree.

"Lightning Combo: Rapid Fire Series!"

A's fist were coated with electricity, and started to deliver a series of extremely fast paced punches towards his opponent. The panda's furry flesh felt soft at first, but suddenly it hardened into something that resembled iron, and the Raikage's lightning-enhanced punches were barely making a dent on it, something the man quickly noticed.

Despite being lying on its back, the giant panda delivered another claw swipe at the Raikage, who jumped back before the slow moving animal could reach it. Several whistles alerted him of danger, and looking up, he saw a multitude of missiles raining upon him. He remained still, letting the missiles fall around him, producing multiple blasts that engulfed him in a massive storm of fire.

Said storm of fire was instantly dispelled as a surge of chakra burst outwards from the inside, revealing the very much unscathed Raikage.

"I could have dodged that pathetic attack had I chose to. But I wanted to see the extent of your raw strength," the Raikage said, looking at how Nagato moving towards him. "And frankly, I'm not impressed. Then again, there's no ninja who has been able to pierce my Lightning Armor."

"I see. Unfortunately for you, what you saw isn't the full extent of my abilities," Nagato said, as his hands started to form hand seals.

A couldn't prepare for Nagato's attack, as the giant panda got back on its feet, and tried to stomp the Raikage, forcing him to jump sideways. And it was that moment when Nagato unleashed his attack.

"Wind Release: Air Bullets!"

Nagato expelled from his mouth several projectiles of compressed air at the Raikage.

" He waited for me to be in the air so I couldn't dodge. Clever bastard," the Raikage thought, as he saw the air missiles coming at him, while trying to position his body in order to avoid as many of them as possible. "I must increase the power of my armor!"

Before his feet could touch the floor again, several air bullets hit the Raikage, on his right forearm, right shoulder, and left side of the chest. Even if the armor greatly reduced the power of the attack, they still drew blood and made him feel pain. He did manage to dodge and outrun the rest of the projectiles once he could run again.

"As expected, if your chakra armor is based on lightning, then wind chakra can pierce it," Nagato observed. "And very few people can match me when it comes to elemental ninjutsu."

"Not just the Rinnegan, but an affinity that beats mine," the Raikage growled, as he fixed Nagato with an angry stare. He also could hear the giant panda stomping towards him again. "Then again, I didn't become Raikage by shying away from a challenging fight!"

The Raikage jumped just in time to avoid the bear's claw swipe, though rather than jumping away from him, the Raikage leaped towards it, and performed a downward kick as he landed on the beast's head.

"Let's get rid of you first! Guillotine Drop!"

As he slammed his foot onto the panda's head with such force, it made it drop into the ground headfirst. As he let gravity pull him towards the panda on the ground, the Raikage aimed his fists down and started to spin.

"Kumogakure Drilling Whirlwind!"

The panda had no time to harden its body, and the Raikage's brutal attack pierced its flesh and skin. Taking critical damage, the creature's summoning was undone, disappearing in a cloud of smoke. As the smoke dispelled, the Raikage pointed a finger at Nagato.

"You're next, zombie," the Raikage said. "And don't think that just because you have wind affinity you have an advantage over me!"

"My affinity isn't just wind, but all five elements. That's one of the many gifts of the Rinnegan," Nagato said, as he started to make hand seals. "Earth Release: Swamp of the Underworld!"

Nagato slammed both hands into the ground, and suddenly the grassy terrain around them turned into a vast quagmire. The Raikage quickly started to sink, but Nagato remained at the top as if it was solid surface.

"I recognize this jutsu, it's from Jiraiya!" the Raikage said, as he struggled not to sink. "So it's true he taught you ninjutsu."

"Yes. Your biggest strength is speed, and this will make sure to curb that. For your sake, I hope you have something to counter this, because I don't want yet another innocent in my conscience," Nagato said in a sorrowful, almost pleading tone.

The Raikage, however, took that as nothing but an insult. A vein in his forehead swelled in pure anger.

"YOU THINK A LITTLE MUD IS ENOUGH TO STOP ME!? A bellowed as his Lightning Armor burst outward with energy. "THINK AGAIN!"

And much to Nagato's surprise, A lunged at Nagato, slower than before but still at a breakneck speed, raising a wave of mud as he moved.

" Incredible, even with such a disadvantageous terrain, his speed is still something to behold," Nagato thought in awe. A chakra rod formed in his hand, as he prepared to endure the incoming clash. Nagato channeled wind chakra through said said rod, and lifted it just in time to parry a brutal lightning-enhanced punch from the First Division Commander.

The rod broke, but it was able to absorb most of the punch's momentum. And it wouldn't be the last thing that was about to be absorbed. Nagato then placed his other hand on the Raikage's chest.

"Gakido."

The Raikage could feel how his chakra was drained into Nagato, as the lightning armor that surrounded his body started to flicker and disappear.

The Raikage mentally kicked himself for making such a mistake. "Shit! His ability to absorb chakra! Since I'm a taijutsu specialist, I didn't pay it much mind, but I should have realized he could have used it to absorb my Lightning Armor!"

Despite the mud reducing his mobility, A jumped backwards as he channeled even more chakra into his receding Lightning Armor, quickly restoring it to its peak strength. The Raikage prepared to attack again, this time reminding himself to be more careful of the chakra-absorbing ability. But before he could resume the battle, a violent tremor shook the entire battlefield.

"What the...?" the Raikage looked around, and immediately saw the source of the disturbance. A gigantic chakra construct, black in color with red edges, about twelve meters in height, of a heavily armored samurai whose face was covered by a mask with the appearance of a Tengu. He was carrying a double bladed katana that was holding with both hands. "What the hell is that!?"

"Susanoo," Nagato's voice replied. "An Uchiha's most powerful ability. I've never seen one before, only heard about it. Seeing one with my own eyes is... breathtaking."

The chakra construct raised his sword, before bringing it down in a descending arc, opening a huge crack in the ground, sending the unfortunate ninjas caught in the strike flying in all directions, and creating yet another tremor.

"Orochimaru was keeping such a powerful ninja under wraps?" the Raikage asked, as he turned towards Nagato. "I see. He didn't want to show his best cards until we got comfortable with the war."

"Unfortunately, this isn't the worst Orochimaru has to offer. If you don't like the Susanoo, you're going to like this even less," Nagato said, as he raised a hand at the Raikage. The Kumogakure leader braced for whatever jutsu the undead redhead was about to unleash at him. But much to his surprise, Nagato raised his hand further, almost aiming into the sky. "Chibaku Tensei!"

...

"Water release: Double Water Palm!"

Hikari thrust both hands forward, blasting her undead husband with a torrent of water. Hiashi countered it with a Vacuum palm, but it was overpowered, and was hit by the powerful stream of water. His Byakugan noticed Hizashi coming closer, but was in no position to do anything, Hizashi's chakra flared with power.

"Eight Trigrams: Thirty Two Exploding Strikes! Two Strikes! Four Strikes!" Each one of Hizashi's palm hits was accompanied by a small chakra explosion that tore some of Hiashi's artificial flesh from his body. "Eight Strikes! Sixteen Strikes! THIRTY TWO STRIKES!"

When Hizashi was finished, Hiashi's body was smoking, missing several chunks of his arms, legs, torso, and even head. He limply fell on his back, as he felt the regeneration starting to kick in. But he knew, much to his relief, that he wouldn't regenerate in time before being sealed. And indeed, a couple of sealmasters landed besides the Hyugas, and quickly went to seal the downed Hiashi.

"Don't worry, brother, soon you shall return to your eternal rest," Hizashi solemnly said. "And return to the afterlife knowing that, while the night we lost you we also lost many clan members, the Hyuga Clan is stronger than it has ever been."

"That's... all what I could have... asked for..." Hiashi said, as his body was wrapped in cloths. "I'm glad... that you two... and my daughters... are doing good..."

With that, the sealmasters took the cloth cocoon away, leaving the two Hyugas alone. Hizashi made a move to walk away, but Hikari remained frozen in place. The former leader of the Branch house walked towards Hikari, and a put a hand on her shoulder.

"Hikari-san, I know better than anybody how must you feel now," Hizashi said emphatically. "But the battle is far from over. We can grieve over reopen wounds once we stand victorious."

"Y-Yes. Sorry about that. Let's meet up with-"

Hikari was interrupted when a tremor shook the battlefield. The two Hyuga immediately focused their Byakugan towards the source of the commotion, and immediately found it: a massive Susanoo armor.

"Susanoo?" Hizashi asked. "Whose is that? Shisui went with Hinata-sama to the Moon, and I'm sure Itachi and Sasuke weren't on this division."

"It's obvious that such Susanoo belongs to a reanimation. Other divisions reported of undead Uchihas," Hikari said, as he tried to piece the look of the caster. Unfortunately, the chakra of the Susanoo acted as a barrier for the Bykaugan's enhanced vision. "Plus, the color doesn't match with the Susanoo we know."

"It's massive. Much larger than the Susanoo of Itachi, Sasuke or Shisui," Hizashi said, trying his best to hide his fear and uneasiness. "How are we going to fight that thing?"

"I don't know," Hikari admitted. "I believe Tsunade-sama or Hanabi-chan wouldn't have any problem destroying that thing down. If we could only contact HQ and-"

Once again, Hikari was interrupted by yet another tremor, except this time it wasn't the Susanoo the source of it.

"Over there!" Hizashi pointed into the sky.

Hikari looked where Hizashi was pointing, and saw a massive amount of chakra concentrated into an extremely small point. She only saw something similar once before in her life.

"Hikari-san, is that...?"

The answer in the form of large chunks of earth being ripped apart, trees uprooted from the ground, and rocks elevating into the sky and pulled into the almost invisible chakra orb. And not just that, but some Allied ninjas and White Zetsu clones were pulled into the forming planetoid as well, screaming in horror as they were buried alive by tons of rocks. The fights ceased, and soon everybody was more worried about avoiding an horrible death than killing the enemies. Most of the Zetsu sunk underground in order to escape the powerful gravity pull, but the human ninja weren't so lucky.

A feeling of overwhelming dread overcame the Hyuga matriarch, and scanned the entire battleground, trying to find somebody whose chakra matched the one from the gravity core. It didn't take her long to find the source of her worries, given that the chakra of the caster was so powerful, it was like a beacon in the night.

She was greeted by the sight of the division commander, the Raikage, in the middle of a heated fight with a redheaded man wearing the Akatsuki cloak. But what drew her attention the most were the man's eyes: purple and with a ripple pattern. Despite the fact that she never saw such a man before, she knew his identity.

"Pain..."

...

"WHAT THE HELL IS THAT!?" Karui screamed, as she tried to stay anchored to the ground through the tree walking jutsu. But the gravitational pull was so strong, it was increasingly hard to do so.

"Chibaku Tensei! One of Pain's most powerful jutsu!" Choji explained.

"You saw this already!?" Omoi asked in shock.

"Pain used this attack when he and Akatsuki invaded Konoha!" Choji replied.

"Once the moon forming about us is big enough, Pain will drop it onto our heads!" Ino told them. "That's why we need to run away from it!"

"How the hell Konoha still exists after Pain used that jutsu above it!?" Karui asked in disbelief.

"Because they were able to counter it, right?" T said, looking at Team Asuma with renewed but still fragile hope. "What did you guys do to stop it?"

"Tsunade-sama and Naruto destroyed it," Ino said. "Unfortunately, we don't have any of them here with us right now!"

Karui looked up at the forming planetoid, and felt dread creeping through her body unimpeded. This kind of power was something not even her admired Raikage would be able to stand against.

...

Upon seeing Nagato's jutsu in action, the Raikage launched at the undead redhead, overwhelming him with a barrage of lightning fast punches and kicks. However, even if he was pushed into the defensive, Nagato was able to withstand his onslaught. The Raikage's desperation grew as he realized that, no matter how much he intensified his attack, the jutsu didn't stop. As it grew in size, it also gained more and more altitude. It eventually grew so big, it was able to block the sun, like a man-made eclipse.

"Impressive, isn't it? You know, outside of training, I only used this jutsu once: to destroy Konoha when I attacked it," Nagato commented, though the lack of pride in his words was evident. "Fortunately, they managed to stop it in time."

"And I will stop it as well! BY STOPPING YOU!" the Raikage bellowed, his Lightning Armor flaring bright.

"I wish you were able to. Like I said before, I killed many innocents in my misguided crusade for a better world," Nagato gloomily said. He then raised his hand, before motioning it down. "And now, even in death, more victims will be added to my conscience."

The Raikage turned around, and saw the planetoid falling down. Even if most ninjas had already moved from the zone where the giant mass of rock and earth was going to land, the resulting shockwave and destruction caused by the crash would cause untold amounts of death. And unlike what happened the last time, Nagato wouldn't bring the deceased back to life.

A had the urge to run towards the falling asteroid, but the rational part of his mind told him that he would only get himself killed. So he was forced to watch impotent how it finally crashed down, resulting in a deafening booming sound followed by a storm of rocks, dirt, dust and human bodies being flung in every direction.

The resulting tremor could be felt from many kilometers away.

...

Mountain Graveyard

Leaning against a stone column, Obito watched how Orochimaru used a makeshift board and some kind of white pellets to direct his army of undead. The Sannin had been smiling and muttering something between laughs for quite some time. It unnerved the Uchiha, but at least it also gave him hopes that maybe this time the battle would go in a different way.

That moment, Zetsu emerged from the ground. He, too, appeared to be pleased.

"Boss, the battle is ours. The enemy has suffered massive casualties, and the Raikage has ordered retreat," the white half explained.

"The reanimated Nagato proved to be quite an asset," the black half added. "His Chibaku Tensei wiped quite the enemy ninja."

"Good to hear that," Obito said, nodding. "About time your abominations managed to bring some results, Orochimaru."

Orochimaru turned at him, and flashed a mocking grin at him. "Yes. Now imagine what you would have done without my 'abominations'. Do you think your pitiful army of White Zetsu would have accomplished anything on their own?"

"Um, sir? What are your orders?" the black half of Zetsu asked, hoping to stop the argument or fight between the two men before it could happen "The enemy is retreating. Should we chase them?"

"Yes," Obito said, his eyes, not leaving Orochimaru. "Our forces must continue pursuit. I'm sure that the Alliance will send reinforcements, but that is of little consequence. How is the search of the jinchuriki hideout going?"

"Our aerial Zetsu have begun the search. The seas to the side of the Land of Lightning are vast, and storms are common over those areas. It might take a while," the white half replied.

"Even if we can't find their location, the news of one of their villages being destroyed will make them come out," Obito said. "Return to the front and continue watching over the enemy."

"At once boss."

And Zetsu disappeared, leaving Obito and Orochimaru alone once again.

Author's Note: I already said in the previous chapter that this battle would be an Akatsuki victory the moment they got their hands on the location of the jinchuriki, but I wasn't done yet. I wanted to to make this not only a strategic defeat, but a tactical one as well, with the Alliance also losing on the battlefield.

There won't be the typical "after action breather" after this chapter, given the way it ended. Mostly since the battle hasn't ended yet. They're now in retreat, with Akatsuki in full pursuit, and in dire need of reinforcements. Who the reinforcements are, I'm sure you guys can imagine.

But that won't be next chapter. Because next chapter... we go to the Moon! Yeah, it's about time for Hinata to face Toneri for the last (heh) time.

Oh, and while Akatsuki learned about Naruto, Fu and B's location, it will be some time until they learn where they are exactly (remember that they're on an island that moves constantly. Even with the knowledge of its existence and the flying Zetsu, it will take some time for Akatsuki to nail their position). There are still a few battles left until Akatsuki try to capture the jinchuriki.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

So, what did you think about the chapter? Tell me your thoughts in a review! Or if you don't feel like leaving a detailed review, I do appreciate if you leave a few words of encouragement as well. Long or short, reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Rise of the Byakugan Princess, Part I

Author's Note: First of all, I'd like to thank deviantart user davidshadow275 for working on a better version of this story's cover art. So far, it's only the lineart, but he told me he's working on a colored, digitalized version.

Second, with this chapter, this story is now more than a million words long! Man, I never imagined I'd write such a behemoth of a story. I remember when I finished writing "The Spellbook", my previously longest fic, and I ended up so exhausted I never thought I'd write anything of epic length ever again, yet here we are.

Now, enjoy the chapter:

Chapter 112:

Rise of the Byakugan Princess, Part I

or

Sharingan vs Tenseigan

Moon

Today was the day. After much scouting, investigating and preparing, it was time for the Moon Assault Squad to, well, launch an assault on the Moon.

Toneri's base was somewhere inside the artificial sun. The Moon Puppets entered and exited through a hole that would appear on the surface when they made a certain hand seal. Shisui was able to copy said hand seal with his Sharingan, but when he tried to open a hole in the sun's surface, it had no effect. The Hyugas watching the hole being and closed realized that only the puppets could open it, given that their chakra was somehow connected to that of the artificial sun.

They also realized that, besides the patrols coming and going, if somebody got close to the sun, several Moon Puppets would fly out of the sun in order to meet the invaders. Fortunately, the Moon Squad knew how to use this to their advantage.

"Everybody, go!" Hinata said.

The Hyuga Clan Head was leading the aerial team, flying on her own. Behind them were the rest of the ninjas -the Moon Acolytes were left on one of the abandoned towns for their safety- were riding on Sai's ink birds, including the former root agent. While success of this part of the mission relied on Hinata, the rest of her team would have a role to play as well.

"Here they come!" Tokuma Hyuga warned, his Byakugan active.

And indeed, that moment, a hole opened into the surface of the artificial sun, and Moon Puppets riding bird-like flying machines poured from it, ready to meet them in combat.

"Shisui-san, you ready?"

"Indeed I am," Shisui replied. He was sharing an ink bird with a Hyuga, sitting cross legged with his eyes closed. When he opened his eyes, his normally black irises were yellow, and there were black marks shaped like wings around them. His yellow eyes then turned red of the Sharingan, before it morphed into its advanced form.

"Sage Art: Susanoo!"

Shisui leaped into the air as the green chakra construct quickly formed around him, reaching its Perfect form, with black marks around its eyes to echo Shisui's. The Uchiha patriarch made two Shadow Clones, who quickly sat cross legged and closed their eyes, gathering nature energy and funneling towards the chakra construct in a constant manner.

"This should make sure I don't run out of Senjutsu juice," Shisui said, nodding to himself, before cracking his knuckles, as he moved in front of Hinata. "Alright, I'll try to draw their attention to me! Hinata, move towards the gate! The rest of you, provide us with cover!"

"Yes, sir!" the rest of the ninjas chorused in unison.

The Moon Puppets gave them no pause, and rained over them a storm of golden chakra blasts. Sai's ink birds dodged and maneuvered around the deadly shots with the same grace and agility as actual birds, while its raiders fired jutsu of their own towards the defenders. However, the initial counter-barrage was only a bit of the things that were to come.

"Lightning Release: Thunder Blast!"

"Sage Art: Fire Release Blazing Murder!"

Hinata extended her hands forward, releasing a myriad of blue-purple lightning bolts at the incoming enemies. Meanwhile, the wings of Shisui's Susanoo covered its body, before quickly spreading them outwards, releasing a mass of ravens made of pure fire. The blazing birds flew towards the enemies, and burst into a fiery explosion upon making contact with them. All in all, those two attacks had cut the number of present enemies in half.

"Hinata, now!" Shisui said, as he flew towards the remaining foes, while Hinata turned towards the artificial sun.

The hole the Moon Puppets had opened was starting to close. As Hinata flew to it, she made several hand seals.

"Oh, no, you won't!" she said, before making several hand seals. "Tenseigan Chakra Cloak! Truth Seeking Balls!"

The Hyuga Clan Head created four Truth Seeking balls, and send them towards the closing hole. The four black spheres merged into a shapeless mass, which Hinata shaped into a large ring, large enough for somebody riding on a giant bird to pass. She placed that ring in the middle of the gaping hole, preventing it from closing.

"There!" She said, nodding to herself. "Everybody, quickly, get inside the sun! It's safe now!"

With Shisui providing cover, the rest of the Moon Team quickly passed through the gate, followed by the Uchiha, and finally Hinata, who undid the black ring, taking back the form of four spheres.

They were greeted by an image that it was just as unreal as it was breathtaking: several small islands floating completely still, around a gigantic stone structure shaped like a crescent moon with a planetoid inside its curve, perfectly mimicking the symbol of the Otsutsuki Branch House. On top of the stone moon was a massive citadel, so large it almost looked like a city.

"I'm seeing an immense source of chakra coming from underneath that building," Hinata told them. "That must be where the weapon is being stored."

"I see it too," an Hyuga kunoichi said, her Byakugan active. "Said chakra seems to be the same the one powering the puppets and their machines. Do you think there's a link between them?"

"More likely," it was Shisui who answered. "Toneri's puppets have been inspected by both Konoha's best sealmasters and Suna's ninja puppeteers, and neither of them were able to figure out how they worked, only that they received their energy from an external source, unlike the Chakra Golems."

"So if we destroy the Otsutsuki weapon, Toneri's puppet army will be shut down," Sai deduced.

"Good. That will make our friends' work on Earth all the easier," Hinata said, as she and her group got closer to their target.

However, the moment they got closer to the citadel, they were once welcomed by a barrage of golden chakra blasts. All around the citadel were turrets armed with double cannons manned by more Moon puppets, focusing fire on them. On top of that, more puppets riding mechanical birds joined the fright, forcing the assaulters to turn back.

"We won't be able to get close to the citadel with so much fire upon us," Sai warned them. "My ink birds can't resist such firepower, and we'll be vulnerable on the ground."

"Hinata-sama, all of our clan have witnesses the great power you possess now. Do you think you could destroy the whole citadel yourself?" Tokuma asked.

"I'll try. Even if I'm not able to destroy the whole citadel, I'm sure I'll at least destroy the defenses," Hinata said, as she extended her hand forward, and her Truth Seeking Balls started to spin in front of her hand, merging into a purple sphere. "Amethyst Wheel Rein-"

Before Hinata could complete her attack, a black sphere, like a Truth Seeking Ball, but much bigger, appeared in the middle of the group, followed by a powerful telekinetic shockwave that blasted Sai's ink birds into black puddles, while hurling its riders away, all of them pummeling to the ground below around the citadel. Hinata's attack was interrupted, as the Hyuga Clan Head was violently hurled forward. Even Shisui's Susanoo send tumbling back.

"What the...? what was that?" Hinata asked, as she regained her balance still mid air. "How did that thing got so close while evading my sight?"

The answer came in the form of the black sphere broke down into a black blob, revealing a hollow interior that held Toneri inside, his Tenseigan Chakra Cloak blazing around him. Said blob then turned into four Truth Seeking Balls.

"He encased himself in a shell made of his Truth Seeking Balls. That's how he was able to evade my Tenseigan," Hinata thought in realization. "Toneri!? How are you here?"

"Hello, my princess. I was expecting you," Toneri said, her mouth curving into a inviting smile.

"You... knew that I was coming?" Hinata asked. "But how? We've been evading all the patrols until now!"

"Indeed, you and your little friends proved to be quite sneaky. And I couldn't afford to go and look for you myself, since I run into the risk of revealing my presence, since I could scare you into running away. But fortunately, everything has transpired according to my plan," Toneri explained, his smile was now of smug pride. "As for how I knew of your presence... you should remember that you and your sister aren't the only ones linked by Hamura's chakra."

It took a second to Hinata to realize what Toneri meant, when the memory of Hanabi telepathically contacting her dawned her. "That conversation I had with my sister! You... you listened to us!?"

"Not the whole conversation. I wasn't the intended target of the message, so I only got a few parts here and there. But I could discern that you were here, to put an end to the weapon my ancestors built in order to free themselves from the tyranny of the Main House's oppression, while I was busy helping Obito with his little silly war," Toneri continued, shaking his head. "I have to admit, that was careless of my part."

Hinata's eyebrow arched at Toneri's last choice of words, striking her as odd. "Little silly war? Don't you... don't you agree with him and his plans?"

"Ah, yes, I know what you're implying, so I'm going to cut the chase and skip directly to the dramatic reveal," Toneri replied. "Turns out you were right. My mind was being manipulated by Obito. I was his slave, and none the wiser about it."

"You... you broke the mind control?" Hinata asked in shock. "But I heard that Kotoamatsukami is nearly impossible to break! Naruto-kun had to be put on the verge of death to do that!"

"I find insulting that you dare to compare me to that blond oaf that you call your lover, but this should be even more proof over my superiority over him. Yes, I was nothing but Obito's thrall, but when Hamura's power developed and reached maturity, seeing the illusion and breaking through it was child's play!" Toneri boasted.

"But then... if you aren't mind controlled anymore... then we don't have to fight anymore!" Hinata said, beaming with joy.

Toneri smiled. "I'm glad to hear that. I do not wish to fight you either."

"Then will you help us stopping Akatsuki?" Hinata asked, sounding hopeful.

Toneri's smile turned into a condescending smirk. "And why would I do such a thing?"

The Hyuga Clan Head was taken aback. "What? But... I don't understand..."

"I might not be mind controlled anymore, but I could see one truth of Obito's plan: the world the Sage of the Six Paths created is a failure. It is beyond saving. It must be destroyed, so something new, and better, can be built in its place, and the Ten Tails is the perfect tool for the job. Obito thinks that by stealing a Rinnegan, he will be able not just to control it, but becoming its jinchuriki," Toneri shook his head, looking amused. "Shortsighted fool. His body lacks the power to contain such power. It will consume him from the inside out the moment he tries to make that power his own.

"However, somebody who has the true power of the Six Paths, like me, can become its jinchuriki without any risks. Once the Ten Tails is done reducing the world down to a more primordial state, I will absorb the beast into my body, and lead what's left of humanity to a new golden age. The power of the Ten Tails will make my rule unmatched, but such thing won't be necessary, since people will see me as the one who saved them from an unspeakable horror, and will follow my lead unquestioningly.

"And you, Hinata..." he extended his hand, reaching her. "You shall be my queen. You're compassionate, strong, and wise beyond your years. You're the perfect queen to rule the new world alongside me."

As Toneri spoke, Hinata's expression went from shock, to horror, and finally settling in disappointment. This time, it was her who shook her head.

"I see. So even without the mind control... nothing changed," she said, before staring at Toneri with eyes full of resolve. "I'm no queen. The world needs no queens or kings, just people to fight for it. Like Naruto-kun, and the rest of my friends and family. Like me. And I will protect the world by defeating you once and for all!"

"I see. So I have to tame you first before you accept your fate. It's okay, I have already foresaw this," Toneri said. "Unlike our previous confrontations, I'm the one with the homefield advantage, and you have no place to run away, nor allies to call for help, except those few that came with you."

"You're always so sure of yourself. Well, you'll see that the people I brought with me are more than enough to deal with you!" Hinata said, as her four Truth Seeking Balls moved in front of her, and merged into a protective shield.

"Susanoo: Fire Release Meltdown!"

Toneri turned around, and saw Shisui's Susanoo floating above him, exhaling a massive, constantly expanding fireball that threatened to engulf Toneri. However, the last Otsutsuki wasn't surprised, and raised his hand at the incoming attack. His Fourth Truth Seeking Balls merged into a golden orb, before exploding, releasing its energy in the shape of a golden beam aimed at the incoming attack.

The chakra beam and growing inferno clashed against each other, resulting in an explosion that pushed both Uchiha and Otsutsuki backwards.

"Hinata, I'll deal with this asshole! You go find and destroy the weapon!" Shisui yelled.

"Understood!" Hinata said, as she quickly flew towards the Citadel's main entrance.

"I won't let you!" Toneri said, as he flew to intercept her, but was forced to fall back when a gigantic drill-shaped spear almost smashed into him.

"And I won't let you," Shisui said, looking at the white haired man from above. He then turned towards Sai, Tokuma and the rest of their team, fighting Moon Puppets while avoiding the fire coming from the Citadel's turrets. "Everybody, follow Hinata and make sure she reaches the weapon unimpeded!"

Shisui was answered by chorus of "yes sir!" and similar responses, before his Sharingan focused on Toneri.

"You seem to be very eager to fight against teens and little kids. Let's see how well you do against an actual adult," Shisui said, as his eyes narrowed in anger. "I still owe you a big one for nearly killing my wife's little brother!"

Shisui's Susanoo dived down, ready to skewer Toneri with his drill lance again. Toneri waved a hand, and send a Truth Seeking Ball to intercept the coming spear, taking the shape of a small shield. However, Shisui's spear cracked it, shattering it into hundreds of small black shards, before coming down, barely missing Toneri, who flew backwards.

"So, you're able to overwhelm my Truth Seeking Balls. First that annoying kid, then that boorish blond, and now you." Toneri said, unamused, as he resummoned the orb that had been destroyed. His Tenseigan flashed for a second, as he fixed Shisui a hard stare. "Your chakra is definitely different than that of a normal human. And similar to that kid and Naruto. I can see that your clones are absorbing pieces of ambient chakra and channeling it towards the armored construct. I was unaware such thing could be done. Perhaps that's what allows you to bypass my defense?"

"Very clever. But that knowledge will do you no good!" Shisui said, as he charged once again. "Without your precious Truth Seeking Balls, you're helpless against a Sage!"

Toneri smirked, as he raised his hand at Shisui. "Oh, I beg to differ. Silver Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

Toneri's four black orbs merged into a silvery sphere, exploding into a typhoon that swallowed Shisui's Susanoo and violently hurled him upwards, until it crashed against the bottom of a floating island, producing several cracks on its rocky surface.

"Did you like that? Because I'm not done yet," Toneri said, smirking triumphantly, his hand still aiming at Shisui, as he summoned four more Truth Seeking Balls to replace the ones that had been consumed. The new ones also merged into a golden orb in front of his hand. "Golden Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

The golden orb once again exploded into an energy beam that flew towards Shisui. The Uchiha, however, managed to move the Susanoo out of the jutsu's trajectory and dodge it the last second. Shisui saw how the golden beam blasted the floating island into millions of tiny pieces of rock and pebbles.

"I can't believe Hagane survived that attack. Either that kid is much tougher than he looks, or Toneri grew more powerful since then," Shisui thought, worried. "Even with Sage Mode, this guy beats me when it comes to raw power. I need to be smart, or I'll end up dead."

Toneri quickly summoned more Truth Seeking Balls, and aimed his hand at Shisui. The balls started to spin around it once again.

" Oh shit, gotta get out of the way!" Shisui thought, as he moved his Susanoo away before Toneri could fire another devastating attack.

"Emerald Reincarnation Explosion!"

This time, the black orbs didn't merge, but merely fired at Shisui, glowing bright green.

"The Truth Seeking Balls can't nullify my ninjutsu anymore, but the way they're glowing is giving me very bad vibes," Shisui noted, as he made a hand seal. "Susanoo: Tsukumo!"

The green Susanoo flapped its wings once, releasing a barrage of large chakra needles of the same color. Then, much to the Uchiha's surprise, as if they had mind of their own, the Truth Seeking Balls started to move in order to avoid the storm of razor-sharp projectiles. Two of the glowing emerald orbs were pierced by the needles, losing their momentum, but the other two reached Shisui, and embedded them into his Susanoo with great force, one of them close to the head, as they started to glow with a brighter light.

"I don't like that..."

Predictably, the orbs detonated, producing two large, green colored explosions, taking a good chunk of the Susanoo's right side, including bits of its head. Still, it was good enough to remain floating mid air.

"Impressive," Toneri said, as he flew towards him, summoning four more Truth Seeking Balls. "That Susanoo is truly impressive. Then again, it's not invincible. In its current state, it won't survive more blasts. Emerald Reincarnation Explosion!"

The black orbs burned with an emerald light as they were charged with chakra, and flew towards Shisui. The Uchiha, however, wasn't going to lie down and take the attack like that. He started to make hand seals as the Susanoo thrust its drill spear forward, which started to spin producing a vortex of wind.

"Susanoo: Fire Release Blazing Vortex!"

Shisui breathed a stream of fire into the drill spear, and when it combined with the wind vortex produced by the drill, it resulted in a roaring inferno that spread forward in a cone. The flames engulfed the coming Truth Seeking Balls, reducing them to ashes. The cone of fire continued forward, forcing Toneri to fall back.

"Now, before he creates more of those annoying orbs!" Shisui said to himself, as he pulled out a Fuuma Shuriken, and tossed it towards the last Otsutsuki. "Shadow Shuriken Clone Jutsu!"

A couple dozen Fuma Shuriken formed around the original, carrying the same momentum, all of them flying towards the white haired man. Shisui, however, wasn't done, and continued making hand seals.

"Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

Shisui breathed a second stream of fire at the flying steel stars, coating them in a cloak of flames.

Even if Toneri didn't have time to summon more Truth Seeking Balls and use them as shields, they were far from the only weapon the last Otsutsuki possessed. He made a hand seal, and air shimmered for a second, before he cast a shockwave from his body that spread in every possible direction, repelling the burning disks before they could touch him.

The attack evaded, Toneri resummoned his four Truth Seeking Balls again.

"A combination of skill and power. It seems that my beloved Hinata isn't the only prodigy hailing from that ninja village," Toneri complimented Shisui, smiling mockingly. "Then again, you're a Son of Indra, so your talent goes without saying. Violence and hatred flow through your veins."

"Just because I'm an Uchiha you think you already know me!?" Shisui growled, gritting his teeth. His Susanoo started to slowly regenerate as his anger empowered his chakra. "You know nothing about me, my clan, or Earth as a whole! You spent most of your life here, watching us from afar!"

"I did watch you, yes, but way closer than you think," Toneri said. "I'm very much aware of your clan's history, up to the conflict that saw its numbers diminished to single digits. You and the other survivors might think you're better than your deceased clanmates, but in reality, you're only pretending to be different from them. Indra's hatred taints your very soul. It's your fate to create and perpetuate conflict."

"Do you know what is my fate as well? To wipe that odious grin from your face!" Shisui said, as his Susanoo lunged at Toneri.

"You will try," Toneri said, making the same hand seal he did to create the shockwave. Then, the large rocks floating around them started to move towards Shisui as if they were meteors. Shisui's drill grinded them into gravel in a few seconds the moment they got close, but this also forced the Uchiha to slow down. Then, Toneri made three hand seals, and more meteors started to gather around him

"I'm sure you'll find this familiar," Toneri said, as rocks started to gather above him, forming a large meteor. "Pain was a man with a vision of a better world and the power to make that vision a reality. Somebody I respected. Hell, I might had agree to continue being part of Akatsuki if he was still alive. But well, I'm digressing. Even if I only saw it from afar, I found his Chibaku Tensei magnificent. So consider this facsimile an homage to him."

The white haired man moved his hand downwards, sending the gigantic conglomeration of rocks towards Shisui. The Uchiha, however, was far from intimidated.

"You're going to find a much larger rock to crush me with!" Shisui said, as he moved his Susanoo upwards, raising its drill lance.
"Susanoo: Worldbreaking Drill!"

The drill spear started to spin again, this time with increased speed, as a vortex of chakra formed around it, making it appear much larger than it was. The moment the giant meteor was upon him, Shisui thrust the drill upwards, grinding the rock into pebbles as soon as it touched it. Cracks started to spread around the meteor, breaking apart into multiple smaller stones by the ever increasing rotation, until it was reduced to a few admittedly large but no longer threatening rocks.

"HA! What about that?" Shisui boasted. "I told you-"

"Golden Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

Shisui saw too late that, while he was busy drilling the meteor, Toneri took advantage of that in order to prepare his most powerful move. Unable to dodge in time, the Uchiha had to watch how the golden beam of energy blasted his Susanoo, violently pushing it back to the vast courtyard surrounding the citadel, opening a crater upon crashing.

Toneri smirked upon seeing Shisui's Susanoo slowly break apart into nothingness. The clones he was using to gather and funnel nature energy were of course gone as well. Still, it seemed that the green chakra construct absorbed most of the blast, sparing Shisui any damage, as the Uchiha got back on his feet with relative ease. However, Toneri wasn't worried. He knew that Susanoo was the most powerful jutsu an Uchiha could use, and he defeated one that was powered by Senjutsu to boot. Deprived of his best weapon, the Uchiha was easy pickings.

"So, I take you aren't going to surrender, are you?" Toneri asked, as he descended, stopping a few meters from the ground level.

"You can bet your pale ass that I'm not," Shisui defiantly said as he unsheathed his tanto from his back.

Toneri chuckled. "So stubborn. Don't you see that you can't beat me? Or do you plan to keep me busy as much as you can in order to buy Hinata the time she needs, even if you have to pay with your life?"

"I can assure you I have no plans of leaving this place as anything other than alive. I have a lovely wife and kids I plan to return to," Shisui said. "I'm willing to die for my family, friends and village, but on this case, it won't be necessary."

"Very well then. At the very least, you'll die with some dignity, Uchiha," Toneri said, smirking condescendingly at Shisui. "But you will die."

Shisui braced as four more Truth Seeking Balls appeared around him.

...

Inside the Citadel

"Lightning Release: Thunderbolt!"

Hinata extended her hands forward, purple electric sparks jumping between her fingers, before a lightning storm erupted from them, zapping the Moon Puppets that were mid air leaping at them. The lightning bolts pushed them backwards while breaking them down to burn and broken pieces of plastic and metal.

"A few down..." Hinata said, before spreading her arms outwards. "Hundreds of them left!"

She released a telekinetic shockwave from each of her hands, hurling away more puppets that were going to jump at her. Before more enemies could jump at her, she dashed towards the door she thought it would lead her to the weapon... before more puppets poured from said door, as well as from three other doors, much to the Hyuga's frustration.

The Hyuga Clan Head let out a weary sigh as she slipped into a battle stance once again. She was past the point of this kind of enemies being a threat to her, but taking care of them was going to be a bother. Not to mention all the time she was going to waste. Shisui and the others were fighting Toneri, and she needed to destroy the weapon as soon as possible. Fortunately, some help was on her way.

"Super Beast Imitation Drawing!"

"Vacuum Palm!"

Several tigers made of ink entered Hinata's expanded field of vision, and pounced at the puppets incoming from the left, and multiple vacuum shells blasted the horde of puppets coming from the right.

"Hinata-sama, we'll take care of this rabble!" a Hyuga kunoichi said, as she engaged a Moon Puppet in direct combat. "You go and find that weapon!"

Hinata nodded. "Understood. Stay safe!" She then turned towards the puppets coming from the gate she was about to cross, and thrust her hand forward. "Lightning Release: Electric Vacuum Palm!"

From her open hand, Hinata cast a huge vacuum shell surrounded by lightning at the incoming group of enemies, which were helplessly blasted away the moment Hinata's attack made contact, hurling them to the sides, leaving an open way for the Hyuga to take.

As Hinata continued flying around the citadel, more and more puppets came to stop her. These ones not dressed as ninjas or warriors, but as butlers, servants, maids and other kind of domestic service. Some of them even had the appearance of children. Still, they weren't enough to stop her. Hinata only needed a wave of her hand to blast them with a barrage of lightning bolts, reducing them to burned piles of scrap, not slowing them down a little.

"Isn't there an end to these things?" Hinata complained as she zapped yet another group of puppets.

Thankfully, the answer seemed to be yes, as the moment she reached the lower levels of the citadel, no more puppets appeared to stop her, much to her relief. It didn't take long to reach her destination: a gigantic chamber holding an equally large golden sphere that somewhat resembled her Tenseigan eyes. It irradiated pure power.

"So, this is the Tenseigan Chakra Vessel..." Hinata said in awe, as she slowly walked towards it. "I can see its power flowing through the whole Moon... powering Toneri's puppets, the artificial sun, all the Otsutsuki technology... what a breathtaking work..."

"Breathtaking indeed," another voice said besides her, making the Hyuga startle a little. "Too bad it has to be destroyed."

"Ha-Hamura-sama?" Hinata asked, surprised. "What are you doing here? I thought you could only appear in my dreams."

"Normally, it would be the case," the old man nodded. "But with you being so close to my creation, I can manifest as an image while you're awake."

"Your... creation?" Hinata asked.

Hamura nodded once again, smiling sadly. "Yes. It was me who created this device in order to help my followers survive in the hostile environment of the Moon, so we could build our civilization. Everything in the Moon is connected to this sphere."

"I see..."

There was some pride, and a little melancholy, in Hamura's voice. The Vessel was a magnificent work of art, and its technology could be used for so much good. This thoughts made Hinata hesitate in her actions. Hamura, however, seemed to notice Hinata's demeanor change, and continued speaking.

"Unfortunately, the tool I created to help my people here was corrupted into a weapon of war, first by the Otsutsuki Branch House to wipe out the Main House, and later by Toneri, to wage war on the people of Earth. Because of that, and the fact that no more people lives on the Moon, it's time for this artifact to be destroyed. And only somebody with Six Paths Chakra can do it safely."

"I... I understand," Hinata replied. "I'll carry out my duty."

No more words were needed. Hinata nodded, and took a few steps forward. She clenched her fists, and two purple lions made of chakra formed around them, crackling with electricity. Lastly, she leaped at the Vessel.

"Lightning Release: Twin Lion Fists!"

Hinata slammed her fists into the Vessel, producing a burst of lightning that coursed through the entire sphere. The giant golden orb started to blink, before it finally burst into thousands of small glowing white spheres, almost like marbles. Though, upon closer inspection, Hinata realized they weren't marbles at all.

"Wait a minute... these things... they're Byakugan!" Hinata said in realization.

"Indeed. The Vessel started as my own Tenseigan and several volunteers' Byakugan, and over the generations, more and more Byakugan were added to it, increasing its power little by little, until it reached enough destructive potential to wipe out an entire country. Even Toneri himself got his eyes removed when he was a child so they could be added to the weapon, " Hamura's image started to waver. "Thankfully, that weapon won't be used to cause more destruction anymore... Hinata, my child... only one thing remains... defeat Toneri... and bring peace... to my brother's world..."

With that, Hamura's image vanished completely leaving the Hyuga alone.

"Understood, Hamura-sama. It's time for Toneri to pay for his crimes," Hinata said, as she turned around, ready to rejoin her squadmates and put an end to everything. "Huh?"

However, much to her surprise, the mass of floating Byakugan quickly poured out of the room as if they had life of their own, like a large swarm of fireflies, much to the Hyuga's confusion.

...

Meanwhile, inside the Citadel, Sai, Tokuma and the rest of the Moon Squad were fighting tirelessly against the puppet army guarding the place, when all of sudden, they stopped fighting and fell to the ground lifelessly. At the same time, the lights that illuminated the place went out, leaving all of them in the dark

"Uh, what happened?" an Hyuga asked. "The puppet's chakra just disappeared all of sudden!"

"Wait, could it be..." Tokuma whispered, before he focused his enhanced sight below, where Hinata should be, until he found her.

"Yes, I can no longer see the source of chakra below the Citadel! Hinata-sama destroyed it!"

"Our mission has been a success then," Sai said, his lips curving into a small smile.

"Indeed," another Hyuga before her eyes drifted where Shisui and Toneri were fighting. "However, Toneri is far from defeated. We must rejoin Hinata-sama and help her bring down-"

She was interrupted when the mass of floating glowing byakugan appeared from behind the gate Hinata had crossed to reach the chamber of the Energy Vessel, and continued their way until they reached outside.

...

Meanwhile, in the courtyard, Toneri and Shisui were about to resume their fight, when the light coming from the artificial sun began to dim. Little by little at first, and faster later, the artificial sun started to break apart, until it vanished completely, leaving the place completely dark. The only source of light was Toneri's Tenseigan Chakra Cloak, though Shisui created a little flame on the palm of his hand in order to see better.

"What's going on?" Toneri asked, before he directed his expanded sight towards the chamber under the Citadel. "No! Hinata reached the Energy Vessel and destroyed it!"

"Haha, yes, well done Hinata!" Shisui cheered. "You lost, dumbass! Without your precious weapon, your puppet army is nothing but a bunch of oversized toys! Now come with us quietly if you want to live."

"The Tenseigan Energy Vessel... created by Hamura-sama himself..." Toneri began, seemingly ignoring Shisui. His lip started to quiver. "The treasure my clan sacrificed our eyes to... destroyed..."

Shisui tensed up. He didn't like where this was going. While the idea of Toneri surrendering wasn't something he considered a big possibility, now it was pretty much zero. If what Toneri said was true, the destruction of the Energy Vessel was a huge cultural and personal affront to him. His building rage would make him go on a rampage.

Toneri then turned at Shisui, and much to the Uchiha's surprise, smirked, and shrugged. "Oh well. Things happen."

Now Shisui was taken aback.

"That weapon was most of your power base. Not to mention all that stuff you said about sacrificing your eyes," Shisui noted. "Aren't you angry at us? Not even a little?"

"Angry' Hmmm..." Toneri placed a hand under his chin, and pretended to be in deep thought. "I guess I should, right? But I just don't feel like it."

Okay, now Shisui was really worried. This was even worse than the previous scenario. The destruction of the Tenseigan Chakra Vessel didn't affect him as much as Shisui and everybody else had anticipated. That meant Toneri knew something everybody else was unaware of. Something that right now, made him extremely dangerous.

And Shisui was now going to learn to which extent.

Toneri extended his hand towards the Citadel, and that moment, a swarm of glowing white lights -thanks to his Sharingan, Shisui could tell they were Byakugan- came from the main door, flying towards the last Otsutsuki. The lights started to latch onto Toneri, until they covered it completely. The mass of Byakugan turned into pure white chakra, forming a sphere of pure white light, forcing the Uchiha to shield his eyes with his hand. Then, after a couple seconds of silence, the sphere of light burst like a balloon, revealing Toneri.

At first sight, Toneri didn't look any different than he did a few seconds ago. But thanks to his enhanced vision, Shisui could see that the strength of his chakra had been multiplied. Startled, and admittedly, afraid, Shisui stumbled backwards. Toneri was now on a completely different level. Not even with his Senjutsu Susanoo could beat him now.

"Ah, that reaction. I guess that thanks to your eyes you realize the situation you're in," Toneri said, proudly smirking. "With my Tenseigan, I can absorb the power of the Energy Vessel into my body, and with it, I can finally do this!" Toneri started to make hand seals, and teal flames burst around him. "Tenseigan Chakra Cloak: Perfect Form!"

All of Toneri's latent power was brought to the surface with a burst of chakra that, for a Sharingan wielder like Shisui, was like looking directly into a lightning bolt. But that was nothing to what followed later. If the Tenseigan Chakra Cloak gave its user the appearance of being surrounded by fire, the Perfect Form made Toneri look as if he was made of fire, with a kimono made of that chakra flames adorned with magatamas covering his body, and a single horn extending from his forehead.

"With these eyes..." Toneri began, his smirk turning into a vicious smile. "I shall destroy the Sage of the Six Paths' world, and create a new one in its place!"

"Toneri!"

Both Toneri and Shisui turned around, and saw Hinata, accompanied by two Shadow Clones, flying out of the Citadel.

"Ah, my princess, your timing couldn't have been better," Toneri said. "As you can see, destroying the Energy Vessel did nothing but make me even stronger. Please, submit yourself to me peacefully. I don't want to fight you again."

"Shisui-san, go with the others. Thanks for your effort, but this enemy is far too much for you," Hinata told him, as she and her clones placed themselves between the Otsutsuki and the Uchiha. "I shall deal with him."

"You won't be able to beat him by yourself!" Shisui said. "His power is much greater than before!"

"I know. But fear not, I have a plan," Hinata said, as she fixed Toneri a stare full of determination.

"Very well then. If you have to fight me again, so be it," Toneri said, shaking his head. "But I won't hold back. I love you, my princess, but if you keep opposing me, you leave me no choice but to use my full power to make you accept your place."

"I would never expect you to be merciful," Hinata replied, as she and her clones charged forward.

Hinata opened the fight with a powerful palm strike that Toneri blocked, but carried so much power it pushed him backwards, producing a booming thunderclap. Then the clones followed suit, repeating the move through from different angles. The trio surrounded Toneri and attacked him from afar before he had any chance to defend himself.

"Vacuum Palm Wall!"

"Lightning Release: Thunderbolt!"

"Lightning Release: Protection of the Eight Trigrams Sixty Four Palms!"

The three Hinatas cast multiple purple lightning bolts, a wave of compressed air and a barrage of lightning needles at Toneri. The Ottsuki merely smirked, and raised his hand forward. A green glowing sphere appeared, which quickly split into eight spheres, revealing to be Truth Seeking Balls once they lost their glow. They then merged and took the shape of a large shield, protecting Toneri. The shield then quickly reverted back to the eight black orbs.

"Eight...?" Hinata asked in shock.

"Yes, the number of Truth Seeking Balls I can summon has doubled. And this is only but an iota of the power I now possess thanks to my Perfect Tenseigan Chakra Cloak," Toneri boasted. He made a hand wave, and six of his eight the Truth Seeking Balls grew and enlogated, taking the shape of gigantic nail-like spears. With another hand wave, he launched them at Hinata, while the remaining two kept floating behind him.

The Hyuga and her clones flew away from the attack in different directions, causing the black speard to split from them as well.

" Toneri has become much more powerful than before, and so quickly..." the Hyuga thought, as she feld from two black spears. She felt how a clone died, and its memories returned to her. "But I can't waver now! I need to hold him back a little longer!"

Meanwhile, in the couryard in front of the Citadel, Sai had just summoned enough ink birds for everybody to ride.

"We can't just stay here," Sai said. "We either have to help Hinata-san deal with the enemy, or we should find a safer place to stay. What are we going to do?"

"As much as it pains me, we can't help Hinata-sama," Tokuma said, shaking his head. "If we tried to help her we'd only get in the way. Even if it sounds cowardly, I think the best we can do is to leave this place so she can fight without having to worry about us."

Tokuma's suggestion was met with murmurs of agreement, as he and the others went to climb the ink birds. Shisui, however, remained in place, intently watching the clash taking place above him.

"Shisui-san," an Hyuga kunoichi said. "We need to leave, now. I know you must feel angry right now, but-"

"It's not that," the Uchiha replied. "There's something wrong. The way Hinata's fighting... it's nothing like other times. She's holding back."

"What do you mean? Are yo suggesting that Hinata-sama is holding back?" another Hyuga asked. "Why she'd do such a thing?"

"No, I think Shisui-san's right," the Hyuga woman replied, as she looked at the fight more intently. "For starters, she isn't using her Truth Seeking Balls, despite being her best asset so far."

"She isn't using Sage Mode either, despite mastering it just like me, and it being the only way to counter Toneri's own Truth Seeking Balls," Shisui added.

"I figured that maybe Hinata-sama would keep a clone or two hidden inside the Citadel to draw nature energy," the Hyuga Kunoichi said, as her gaze drifted towards the large, ornate building. "But there isn't any. One of those two is the actual Hinata-sama."

"She must have a plan then," Tokuma observed. "But what?"

"We'll have to trust her. Now come on, let's get out of here," the Hyuga woman urged the others.

As they got onto their ink birds and fled, Hinata and her remaining clone continued her near hopeless struggle against Toneri. This time, the Otsutsuki wasn't satisfied with letting his Truth Seeking Balls do the job, and went directly after one of the two Hinatas. He grabbed her by the neck, the chakra surrounding his hand glowing brighter than the rest of his cloak, and began siphoning her chakra. "Hinata" exploded into a poof of smoke, meaning it was the other clone.

"Chakra absorption too?" the Hyuga asked in shock.

"Of course I can absorb chakra. Otherwise I wouldn't be able to seal the Ten Tails into my body. The Perfect Mode Cloak is magnificent, isn't it?" Toneri asked, smiling arrogantly. "Now, my dear princess, will you stop this charade already?" Toneri asked in a mocking manner. "Or do I need to use brute force? You saw already you don't stand a chance against me."

Hinata, however, wasn't deterred. "You aren't the first enemy I fought with the power of the Six Paths! Multiple Vacuum Palm!"

Hinata thrust her arms back and forth, sending a barrage of vacuum shells at Toneri, who effortlessly blocked them with his many truth seeking balls. He then waved a hand, and send a single black orb into Hinata, slamming it into her gut, making her double over. The orb then started to glow with an emerald glow.

"Don't worry, I'll make sure you'll sustain minimal damage," Toneri said in a reassuring but still condescending manner, before he made the orb explode.

The rest of the Moon Squad, watching from afar, saw in horror as the explosion send Hinata tumbling towards the main courtyard, loanding with a loud thud.

"Hinata-sama!" many Hyuga screamed.

"Sai, turn the birds around! We need to get to her before that monster does!" Tokuma urged.

Sai was about to do so, when suddenly, something happened that caught everybody else by surprise: "Hinata" disappeared in a poof of smoke.

There was a moment of silence as everybody processed what had happened, including Toneri. His expression went from dumbfounded, to desperate, to anger in mere seconds, as he frantically began to scan his urroundings.

"What? A clone? How...?" he asked, looking around. Despite his vision encompassing the whole area, there was no trace of Hinata. "Where is she? Where is she!? Why I can't find her!? There's no way she could have evaded my sight and escape this place!"

...

Meanwhile, inside the Citadel, surrounded but nothing but darkness, Hinata was floating mid air, in a sitting position with her legs crossed, her hands softly closed and touching each other by the knuckles, as she gathered nature energy.

Besides buying her time for preparing Sage Mode, her clones also served as scouts to gauge Toneri's new power. The fact that he could create eight Truth Seeking Balls as opposed to four was troubling enough, but that chakra absorbing ability was a completely new headache. At the very least, he wouldn't catch her flat footed with those abilities, though Hinata had the feeling that Toneri had more nasty surprises prepared for her.

Since her clones had been destroyed, she could no longer remain hidden. She wished she had more time, but resigned to use the nature energy she had time to collect, hoping it would be enough. She opened her eyes, purple marks appearing around them, stood up, and with a wave of her hand, the sphere she created as a shield broke apart, reverting back to the four Truth Seeking Balls, before flying up to the Citadel's entrance.

"There she is!" an Hyuga said, sounding relieved.

"Her chakra network is saturated with nature energy," another Hyuga said, scanning her with his Byakugan. "Guess she was using the clones as a distraction while she prepared Sage Mode."

Toneri also seemed to be relieved as well.

"So, you were still here after all. Though, I can't still help but wonder how did you evade my sight," the white haired man said.

This time, it was Hinata's turn to smirk. "By copying the same little trick you used to ambush us before: I used my Truth Seeking Balls to hide. Neither the Byakugan nor Tenseigan can see past them."

"So, you hid while you prepared Sage Mode, and send three Shadow Clones to both keep my attention away from the real you and learn about my new abilities. A cunning plan, indeed," Toneri praised.

"Thank you. But flattery will get you nowhere, you should know that by now," Hinata replied, her stare hardening.

"Perhaps. But if my flattery fail to accomplish something, I have power to make up for it," Toneri said, smiling menacingly at her. "Plus your Sage Mode won't do you any good. The Uchiha over there is also a Sage, yet I defeated him even if I didn't have the power I have now."

"You're awfully prone to underestimating your opponents. I thought that your many past defeats would have corrected such habit. I'll make sure this is the last time you make that mistake" Hinata said. "However, before we fight, I'd like to ask you something."

This seemed to amuse Toneri, who smiled in return, mildly curious. "Sure, ask away. I'll answer anything you might want to know, if it's of my knowledge."

"Whose are those eyes you're wearing?" Hinata said, taking Toneri a little aback. "I know they aren't yours, because the Byakugan of a Branch House Otsutsuki can't evolve into a Tenseigan. Not to mention that I know that your original eyes were part of the Energy Vessel."

"Why does it matter whose eyes were this? The man they used to belong to is dead. Now they're my eyes. The eyes that will reshape the world," Toneri boasted.

"During the Uchiha insurrection, several Hyugas witnessed a masked man with a Sharingan and Wood Release, a man we'd later find was Obito Uchiha, taking part in the attack of the Hyuga Compound. Not only did that man kill my father, but then he desecrated his body by stealing his eyes. His, and the eyes of the other Hyugas that died defending their home from the Uchihas.

"Then, years later, you show up all of sudden, as a member of Akatsuki, with those Tenseigan, under Obito's mind control," Hinata said, fixing Toneri a hard glare. "Those eyes are my father's, aren't they?"

"Like I said before, what if they were? He doesn't need them. These eyes are mine because I made them mine. Just like how I will make you mine, my princess," Toneri replied.

"I don't belong to you, and neither do those eyes. I plan to take those eyes back, and return them to their legitimate owner, even if he's no longer alive!" Hinata shouted, as she started to make hand seals. "Tenseigan Chakra Cloak: Perfect Mode!"

Hinata burst into mass of lavender flames, before said flames surrounded Hinata completely. The amethyst flames surrounding her body took the shape of an elegant kimono adorned with black magatamas, similar to Toneri's. Her four Truth Seeking Balls split into two, allowing her to have eight orbs at once, just like Toneri.

This time, it was Toneri's turn to be surprised. "Perfect Cloak? But how...?"

"Again, I did it by copying you. You absorbed those Byakugan to give yourself a power boost and bring the Cloak to its full power. I did the same using Senjutsu. Now we're evenly matched."

Toneri's shock was short lived, and his stunned expression quickly morphed into a smile of satisfaction. "When I think I have you figured out, you find a way to surprise me. No wonder I love you so much. Now, I can fight without holding back and not be afraid of harming you too much."

Hinata scowled. "I will never give you the chance of harming me, or anybody else for that matter. This ends now!"

And thus, Hinata Hyuga, the last heiress of the Otsutsuki Main House, and Toneri Otsutsuki, last member of the Otsutsuki Branch House, engaged in battle for the last time.

Author's Note: It's been a while since we saw Hinata kicking some ass, isn't it? It felt good writing for her again (as for Naruto, you'll have to wait a little longer until he gets back into the spotlight). Well, I know that most of this chapter was Shisui doing the fighting, but that was the appetizer. The main course comes next chapter, and I can assure you guys you're going to love it.

And thus, both Hinata and Toneri have reached the last form of the Tenseigan Chakra Cloak. According to my interpretation of such power, in order to reach the perfect version you need an external power-up to jumpstart the final stage of the Cloak. Hinata used Sage Mode, and Toneri absorbed the thousands of Byakugan that composed the Tenseigan Chakra Vessel. In "The Last", Toneri used the eyes as some form of final desperate attack, but he botched it and Naruto had to save his sorry ass. Still, I liked the idea of using the thousands of eyes as a power-up.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Next chapter, Hinata and Toneri's final showdown! While you wait, tell me what you think about this chapter in a review. Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Rise of the Byakugan Princess, Part II

Author's Note: While it lacked a scene towards the end when it was originally published, the second chapter of the Hanabi Gaiden is now complete.

Now, enjoy the conclusion to the Tenseigan duel:

Chapter 113:

Rise of the Byakugan Princess, Part II

or

Family Feud

Mountain Graveyard

Despite the fact that he had left not even half an hour ago, Zetsu appeared once again inside the cave Obito and Orochimaru were using as a base of operations. Given the look on his face, he didn't bring good news.

"Uh, boss, I have bad news." Sometimes, Obito hated being right. "We just lost Toneri's Moon Puppets."

Of course, the Uchiha didn't guess the extent of such bad news. Orochimaru chuckled, seemingly amused by this turn of events. Obito glared at the Sanke Sannin, before turning back at his right hand man.

"What do you mean that we 'lost them'?" he asked, sounding exasperated. "They couldn't be destroyed, since they're scattered alongside different groups. Did Toneri recall them for some reason?"

"No, I mean..." the white half hesitated, as if trying to look for the most appropriate words. "They just... stopped working."

"What do you mean 'stopped working'?" Obito insisted, not getting what Zetsu was implying -or not wanting to get it.

"Well, one moment they were running as usual and then the next... they all stopped moving and dropped down like they were dead. We can't sense any chakra coming from them," the black half explained.

"And this happened to every puppet among our ranks," the white half added. "How could this happen? It's unlikely that Toneri betrayed us."

"If he did, he would have taken the puppets with him instead of deactivating them," Obito said, placing a finger under his chin. "Still, the why is irrelevant. Our army has lost a good chunk of its strength without them. Not helping that Toneri is still missing," Obito let out a weary sigh, as he pinched the bridge of his nose tiredly. "We need to find that secret island as soon as possible. How is the search going on?"

"The winged Zetsu are still looking. The sea around the Land of Lightning is extense, and the weather can be a hidrance," white Zetsu said in an apologetic tone.

"Send more to help them with the search. We can sacrifice some of our aerial strength," Obito ordered, before he turned at the Snake Sannin. "Orochimaru, do you have anymore reanimations in reserve?"

"A few. Do you want me to send them to the front?" Orochimaru asked.

"Yes. Quality over quantity, though. Send a few of your strongest," Obito told him.

Orochimaru grinned in anticipation. "As you command, Obito-kun."

"If we're able to keep the Alliance distracted for enough time, winning the war won't be a problem," Obito said.

...

Moon

"Golden Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

Toneri's eight Truth Seeking Balls merged into a golden sphere, that exploded in the form of a thick energy beam aimed at Hinata. She, however, merely moved a few of her own black orbs in front of her, and merged and shaped them in the form of a shield. The golden energy beam struck, but it failed to crack Hinata's defense. Toneri was unable to hide a grimace of frustration.

"My turn," Hinata said, smiling confidently, as her Truth Seeking Balls spun before merging into a purple orb. "Amethyst Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

The lavender orb exploded into a storm of purple lightnings, spread in a cone towards Toneri's general area. The Otsutsuki tried to use his own Truth Seeking Balls to block Hinata's attack, but they were destroyed after taking a few lightning strikes, forcing the white haired man to flee from the incoming storm, dodging them as well as he could.

"I can use Truth Seeking Balls to nullify all your attacks," Hinata began. "But thanks to my Senjutsu, you can't do the same. Surrender already, Toneri. I just showed you you can't defeat me."

However, confidence quickly returned to the Otsutsuki, as so did that condescending grin he often had on his face, as he resummoned his eight Truth Seeking Balls.

"Please, you underestimate me. Yes, your new powers provide quite the obstacle to overcome," Toneri made a hand seal, and his black orbs started to glow with a green light. "But any obstacle can be overcome with enough creativity. Emerald Reincarnation Explosion!"

The glowing green spheres launched forward, and Hinata prepared to block them, keeping her guard up just in case it's a distraction of a trick. And indeed, the flying orbs passed by her at high speed...

"What the...?" Hinata asked, as she directed her sight to her back.

... and saw that they were going straight towards the rest of the Moon Squad, which were flying away on Sai's ink birds.

"NO!"

Hinata quickly flew in the same direction, sending her own orbs to the green ones, making them detonate prematurely.

"Three... four... five.. six..." Hinata counted, as she intercepted the emerald orbs, making one last effort to destroy the last two before they could reach her friends.

However, something slammed into her back, sending her tumbling down. She then realized that it was Toneri who attacked her from behind. However, her mind wasn't on Toneri, but on the remaining Truth Seeking Balls that were about to detonate near the rest of the Moon Squad. That is, until another flash of green rose to intercept them.

"Senjutsu Susanoo!"

Shisui jumped from the bird he was sharing with one of the Hyugas, and formed his Susanoo as fast as possible. His drill spear appeared on the chakra construct's hand, and used it to destroy one of the two emerald orbs. The other detonated before it could be destroyed, forcing the Uchiha to use his Susanoo to shield the other from the incoming explosion. The explosion made the green chakra construct burst as if it were a balloon, sending Shisui flying backwards.

Fortunately, one of the ink birds flew towards him and caught him with its talons.

"Good job, Shisui-san! Nice save there!" Tokuma shouted.

"Thanks! But I doubt I'll be able to do that again! So we better move!" the Uchiha replied.

Toneri tried to attack them again, but was swatted away by a gigantic purple hand made of chakra, completely by surprise. Looking down, the Otsutsuki saw Hinata had projected a giant purple arm made of chakra from her palm. As the rest of the squad flew away, Hinata quickly recovered and placed herself between them and Toneri, so the white haired man couldn't harm them again. She fixed the Otsutsuki with an angry glare.

"So, you acknowledge that you can't beat me, so you go after my friends instead, and attack me from behind while I'm busy helping them," the Hyuga seethed. "And you wonder why I prefer Naruto-kun to you? He would never resort to such a despicable tactic in order to achieve victory."

"Everything's fair in love and war, my princess," Toneri said, unperturbed by the insult. He summoned more Truth Seeking Balls. He extended his hand at Hinata, making the orbs to spin around it. "Plus, I do have a way to bypass the protection of your Truth Seeking Balls as well. Silver Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

The orbs merged into a silvery sphere, which exploded into a gigantic cone of wind that not only swallowed Hinata, but it continued advancing until it reached the rest of her teammates. Sai's ink birds burst into blots of ink, while everybody else screamed as they were flung away by the tornado.

" I need to keep everybody close to me!" Hinata desperately thought, as she projected two giant arms of chakra, which in turn split in two, grabbing several of her teammates, and using her telekinetic powers to pull the ones she was unable to catch close to her.

The tornado flung the group towards the ground, with such power it drilled a hole, sending them -as well as many large rocks- outside it, landing on hard rock ground.

Thankfully, none of them were seriously hurt, and all of them were able to get back on their feet soon enough. They realized that they were no longer in the Moon, or better said, inside it, given that the brown soil and green vegetation was replaced by a vast, endless extension of gray rock. It wasn't as dark as before, as something was projecting light onto them. It didn't take them to realize what it was.

"Look at that!" an Hyuga kunoichi said.

Everybody looked up, and saw a dark blue sky filled with stars, as well as meteors that lazily floated around. And between all of them, the Earth in all its majesty.

"That's the Earth," Sai pointed out.

"Then we must be on the Moon's surface," Shisui's deduced. "Come on, we have to-"

"Watch out!"

Suddenly, some of the meteors floating above rained towards them, opening a crater and raising a huge cloud of some where they landed, forcing the Konoha ninjas to scatter in order to avoid being crushed.

Hinata's eyes scanned the area looking for Toneri, something she didn't take too long to given the potency of his chakra. Leaving a trail of dust behind, the Hyuga rocketed towards the Otsutsuki as fast as she could, delivering a palm strike the moment he was in close combat distance. Unlike the previous time, Toneri was able to block and parry her attacks. Even if he was being pushed backwards, he was able to deliver a couple of counterattacks as well.

The two of them continued their aerial struggle. For any onlookers, it might look like a purple flame clashing and chasing a turquoise one, producing shockwaves and thunderclaps every time they crashed. However, there were intricate moves and skilled martial art blows being traded with each clash. Still, it could be garnered that the purple flame appeared to be the stronger party, as it constantly put the turquoise flame on the run.

From time to time, Hinata would generate a giant chakra arm in order to squash Toneri with, but after that first strike, Toneri learned to see those attacks coming and how to avoid them, much to the Hyuga's frustration.

"While admittedly hand to hand combat isn't my forte, we Otsutsuki are no strangers to the Gentle Fist," the white haired man said, smiling in a condescending manner, as he jumped back from a palm strike. "And I'm a very fast learner. You won't catch me off guard again."

Hinata delivered another palm strike, and projected yet again another giant arm of purple chakra. In a fraction of a second, Toneri sidestepped and rushed towards the apparently wide open Hinata, but that moment, the arm of chakra split into two arms of similar size, the second arm stopping Toneri in his tracks.

"I still have a few moves you haven't seen yet," Hinata told him, as both chakra arms retracted back into her body, while she merged her Truth Seeking Balls into a single purple sphere. "Try dodge this! Amethyst Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

Toneri braced for the attack, but much to his surprise, Hinata threw the orb high into the sky, where it exploded into a mass of lightning bolts that quickly rained down upon him., forcing him to jump from one side to another constantly.

"Very clever, my princess," Toneri praised, his smile unwavering, much to Hinata's discomfort. She could tell the ground was starting to shake, as if something big was coming closer. "But I already have the perfect counter."

That moment, a gigantic stone statue of what appeared to be Hamura Otsutsuki emerged from behind a large rock formation. The statue was just the upper half of the body, and two grotesque oversized arms. Toneri was covered under the statue, which acted as a shield for the Otsutsuki. With every lightning bolt, the statue lost a chunk of rock and stone, but if Toneri was worried, he didn't show it.

"Hide behind that statue all you want. I'll destroy it and you won't have anything to use as a cover," Hinata said.

Toneri's smile widened, much to her frustration and worry. "Oh, that's where you are wrong, my dear princess. Observe."

And indeed, much to Hinata's shock, as if time was reversed, the pieces of rock that had been teared from the statue flew towards it, rebuilding the statue, looking almost as if it was never broken.

"Impressed? You should be," Toneri said, as he flew from under the statue. "Now go, my golem! Crush my enemies!"

The statue let out a deafening roar, before dragging its body forward, leaving a wide furrow behind. Hinata floated back, a little unsure of what to do. She was confident she could beat Toneri, but with that unkillable giant statue helping him, she wasn't so sure anymore. Still, defeat or surrender wasn't an option.

"I thought I didn't have to use this so soon, but guess I have no choice," Hinata solemnly said.

Hinata clapped her hands together, and focused her chakra into a single point, and molded it. After a few seconds, she spread her arms with her hands completely open, releasing all the chakra she has been manipulating.

At first, a pair of giant purple chakra arms projected from her palms, growing bigger as they moved, before they split in two as well. Similarly, giant chakra legs of the same color grew from her actual legs. The arms and the legs were soon connected by a torso that appeared from Hinata's body, and from the torso's upper part, a neck and a head formed.

While the body at first appeared to have a very generic form -four arms notwithstanding- it soon started to take shape. The legs and rear became a little curvier, as so did its chest. A long loincloth skirt formed around its pelvis, and extended down all the way to its ankles. An elegant top appeared around its chest. Vambraces formed around all four of its forearms, and leg guards appeared on its ankles.

Lastly, a female face that resembled an older version of Hinata appeared on its head, while long dark hair fell down her back. Two small horns grew on its forehead, while a headdress shaped like a fan with flowers around it formed on its head. Lastly, the humaioid construct opened its eyes, revealing two orbs of white-purplish light.

And floating inside its head, there was Hinata. She made a hand seal, and two shadow clones appeared besides her. They immediately sat in the lotus position, and like Shisui did before, began to collect nature energy and channel it through the chakra construct.

"Sage Art: Avatar of Kalika!"

The Avatar's feet touched the ground, producing a soft thud, and its four arms moved, adopting a fighting pose. After Hinata finally completed her ultimate jutsu, everybody, friend and foe alike, couldn't help but watch in awe at the sheer magnificence of the Hyuga Clan Head's chakra construct, which irradiated both power and beauty. It was still smaller than the Statue of Hamura, but big enough to be a match to it.

"Man... and here I thought that there was nothing like the Susanoo..." Shisui said, chuckling good naturedly.

"That giant avatar of chakra..." Tokuma began, narrowing his eyes at it. "It seems familiar. I swear I saw it somewhere, but I can't put my finger as of where..."

Wordlessly, Sai pulled out his sketchbook, and started to calmly flip its pages, until he found what he was looking for.

"That's because we did," the pale boy said, showing the picture to everybody.

Much to their shock, it was an almost perfect copy of the Avatar of Kalika.

"There were some statues like that in the temples we visited during our initial exploration," Sai explained. "And from what I could hear from the Moon Acolytes, they had some statues like that as well in their previous home."

"Yes, now I remember!" an Hyuga kunoichi said. "The Acolytes said that that's how Kalika was represented by the ancient Otsutsuki. They forgot what was the meaning behind the four arms and the horns. Now it's obvious those statues weren't of her specifically, but of her chakra avatar."

Toneri was also looking with his mouth agape at the Avatar of Kalika. After a few seconds, he was finally able to regain his composure, and ask a question.

"Just... what is that?" Toneri asked, unable to completely shake off the sense of amazement. "I studied all the knowledge my clan gathered about the Tenseigan, and no such thing was ever mentioned!"

"Because the Main House Otsutsuki made sure that no such knowledge fell on the wrong hands," Hinata replied. "Behold the Avatar of Kalika, created by Hamura's eldest daughter as a way to counter Indra's Susanoo."

Toneri's condescending smirk returned to his face once more. "I must admit it's pretty impressive. But I have the same power as you do. I don't know how, but I'll figure a way to replicate that avatar."

"I find that unlikely. The Avatar of Kalika can only be created with Senjutsu chakra. Tenseigan or not, this is something you won't be able to do unless you master Senjutsu and become a Sage like I did," Hinata said. "And do you know who taught me Senjutsu?"

Toneri frowned a little, appearing uninterested. "No, but I'm sure you're going to tell me."

Hinata smirked widely, ready to savor this moment. "My boyfriend, Naruto Uzumaki, taught me how to become a Sage. It's thanks to him that I'm able to harness this power. That's one of the many, many ways that Naruto is superior to you."

Hinata could see the second Toneri snapped, his smirk disappearing, replaced by a snarl of fury, as a scowl developed on his face.

"I'm tired of hearing you talk about that boorish blond! I'm going to make sure that not only is he wiped out from the face of Earth, but that you won't even utter his despicable name ever again!" Toneri yelled, his blood boiling with rage. "Attack, my golem!"

The statue of Hamura let out a thunderous roar, and dragged itself towards Hinata, Toneri floating above it. Hinata commanded her avatar to move and meet the stone giant in the middle, its footsteps producing booming sounds.

Once it reached close combat distance, the statue lifted one of its massive arms and brought it down towards the Avatar of Kalika. Hinata motioned the Avatar to lift its two upper arms, and caught the stone arm before it could hit the chakra construct. Still, the force and momentum of the arm pushed the Avatar back, which dug its feet into the ground to remain still. Hinata made several hand seals.

"Lightning Release: Double Thunder Palm Strike!"

The hands of the Avatar's lower arms crackled with electricity, before it thrust them forward, hitting the statue in the face. There was a flash of purple lightning followed by a thunderclap, electric bolts flew everywhere, and the statue, its face cracked, was pushed skidding backwards.

Before the Avatar could move in order to continue the assault, a storm of green chakra projectiles rained upon the giant chakra construct. Directing her sight upwards, the Hyuga Clan Head saw Toneri floating above her, his hands aiming down, firing green blasts at her. Hinata could feel how the blasts were slowly but surely breaking the Avatar. She then send all her Truth Seeking Balls outside, and formed a dome above the Avatar, protecting it from the emerald assault. The dome wasn't big enough to protect the whole Avatar, but it did block most of the attacks.

Toneri smirked. "You fell in my trap."

The white haired man send his eight Truth Seeking Balls at the Avatar of Kalika, flying past the protective dome, placing them at several points of its body, before they detonated. The chain of explosions made the Avatar stumble backwards, as it was engulfed in several clouds of smoke. However, when the smoke of the explosions vanished, the Avatar only had superficial damage, which Hinata easily repaired by directing more Senjutsu chakra into it. Toneri's smirk vanished.

"Let me guess, you defeated Shisui-san's Susanoo with that attack, and expected the same result with me?" Hinata asked, smirking back at him.

"It was merely a test to see the durability of that Avatar of yours," Toneri replied. "Because make no mistake, sooner or later, I will crack it."

"I'd like to see you try," Hinata replied, scowling at him.

"Is that an invitation, my dear?" Toneri said, as his smile returned to his lips. "Because I think I'm going to take it."

Ground vibrations alerted Hinata that the Statue of Hamura had already regenerated, and was once again charging towards her, its pace much faster than the first time. Toneri elevated above them, and made a hand seal. More asteroids were pulled from above them, and rained towards Hinata. The Hyuga made a couple hand seals.

"Lightning Release: Quad Lion Fists!"

The Avatar's hands clenched into fists, as they were engulfed by balls of amethyst fire. The fire-like chakra took the shape of lion heads, purple lightning crackling around it. Despite its colossal size, the Avatar of Kalika moved rather nimbly, causing small tremors with each step or jump it took to dodge the incoming meteors,, and smashing to pebbles the one it was unable to dodge with its lion-shaped chakra fists.

When the statue jumped at it, the Avatar used its building momentum to deliver such a devastating blow to its face, that the statue was shattered completely, breaking down into thousands of small rocks, scattered away by the shockwave created by the impact.

This time, Hinata was expecting for Toneri to attack while she was busy dealing with the statue. And indeed, she saw him merging his eight Truth Seeking Balls into a golden orb. But rather than the expected energy beam, the orb took the shape of an extremely long sword made of pure chakra. Toneri grabbed the newly created weapon, and brought it down.

"Golden Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

This time, Hinata was ready. She made the Avatar spin on its heels to meet the falling blade, and raising its upper arms -the lion chakra fists were still active- caught the blade before it could hit the Avatar's head. Hinata reflexively tried to counterattack with the construct's lower arms, but due the length of the golden sword, Toneri was too far away to reach him.

And she could see thousands of small rocks gathering and reforming into the shape of the Hamura statue. It didn't take long to realize what was Toneri's plan. As if he read her mind, he pushed down the golden sword with even more force.

"It seems that you're quite in a bind, my princess;" Toneri smugly said, as he watched how the Hamura statue reformed. "What do you plan to do to counter this tactic?"

"How about this?" Hinata asked. "After him!"

Suddenly, the clones that were channeling Senjutsu chakra opened their eyes, stood up, jumped out of the Avatar's head and rocketed towards Toneri.

"You can't use Truth Seeking Balls as long as you're using that jutsu!" the first clone said.

"You thought you made Hinata fell into a trap, but in the end it was her who trapped you!" the second clone said.

Toneri immediately dispelled the golden sword and attempted to resummon his black orbs, but the clones reached him before he could do it, and engaged him in yet another hand to hand duel.

Much to Toneri's frustration, these clones proved to be far more resilient and hard hitting than the ones he had fought before Hinata revealed her trump card. Then again, since Hinata had also reached a greater level of power, it was obvious that her clones would be stronger as well. At first, Toneri had been playing with what he believed to be the real Hinata and her two clones in order to test his new strength. It was now when he realized that Hinata was also probing him as well.

These clones not only fought with increased vigor, but displayed a greater level of skill. One clone would attack, and when Toneri was about to prepare a counterattack, the clone would retreat and the second clone would strike. Even with the peripheral vision, it was increasingly hard to keep his attention on two targets that were so vicious. He attempted to resummon the Truth Seeking Balls, but was interrupted any time he tried to do it, the last one being particularly brutal.

"Lightning Release: Thunder Palm!"

One of the Hinata clones slammed her electrified palm into Toneri's face, sending the Otsutsuki hurling backwards.

"Heavenly Spin!"

The second clone, placed behind Toneri, began to spin mid air, turning into a rotating sphere of chakra the moment Toneri crashed into her. The force of the first strike grinded Toneri against the spinning sphere, before he was launched in the opposite direction. His flight was abruptly stopped when five giant purple fingers firmly wrapped around his body, leaving him completely immobilized.

"I got you," Hinata said, looking at Toneri trapped inside one of the Avatar's lower hands.

The Avatar turned around as the statue finished reforming, and her two clones returned to their original positions, resuming their gathering and channeling of nature energy. The statue let out yet another roar, as it charged forward.

"Tell that thing to stop and lie down!" Hinata shouted at Toneri.

"As long as I'm in danger, it will never stop attacking," Toneri replied.
"And neither will I."

Once again, lion-shaped chakra fists formed around the Avatar's upper hands, ready to welcome the stone monster with a devastating punch. However, the statue halted its charge midway, rose its arms, and slammed them into the ground with as much force as it could gather. The result was a violent quake, followed by multiple cracks quickly spreading towards the purple four armed giantess, throwing massive chunks of earth and stone forward.

While she was surprised by such maneuver, Hinata didn't falter, and made the Avatar destroy the stones raining upon it with powerful and precise punches. Still, it was unable to catch some of the smaller stones, which hit it with a surprisingly deceptive force despite its size. The giant chakra construct fumbled backwards, and for a brief moment, loosened its grip on Toneri.

That brief moment, however, was all what the Otsutsuki needed. He brought his hands together in the form of a hand seal, and his Tenseigan Chakra Cloak exploded in a gigantic blaze of turquoise fire, consuming the purple hand, leaving the white haired man once again free.

"No!" Hinata shouted, as she tried to catch Toneri again, but without being disoriented first, the Otsutsuki proved to be too fast for the lumbering chakra colossus, and easily evaded its hand.

The Hyuga Clan head was forced to direct her attention back to the Hamura statue, who was once again charging towards her, this time showing no intention of stopping. It lurched at the Avatar, which caught the golem mid air by its massive arms.

"Does this thing ever give up!?" a frustrated Hinata asked.

"No, it doesn't," Toneri replied, smiling in satisfaction, as he floated over the two of them. "This golem is something my family created to destroy the Main Otsutsuki Family, and it earned us a good share of victories. It used to be linked to the Energy Vessel, but since I absorbed it, the statue is now linked to me. It will fight tirelessly and without pause to defeat my enemies. No matter how many times you destroy it, no matter how small are the bits you reduce it to, it will always rebuild itself to its original form."

"So you finally admit I'm your enemy, and not your lover who is in denial," Hinata said.

"I admit I was blinded by your beauty and kindness, but now I see we were never meant to be. I'm the last member of the Otsutsuki Branch Family. My ancestors, who sacrificed their eyes to power the Energy Vessel up, live now inside me. A Vessel that you destroyed. Because you, as the heiress of the Hyuga, the descendants of the disgraced Otsutsuki Main House, were destined to oppose me from the very beginning," Toneri said, shaking his head. "It was my heart's wish that we could have ended our ancestor's feud, but alas it wasn't mean to be."

"You're so wrong, Toneri," Hinata replied, as the Avatar and the statue pushed back and forth. "I'm not opposing you because of the past history of our families. I'm doing it because you want to destroy the very world I live in! I couldn't care less about past feuds of people long time dead!"

"You may think that, but that's because you fail to see the subtler nuances that lead to certain events happening. The hidden hand of fate," Toneri replied.

"I'm done hearing you ramble about fate," Hinata seethed. "Though since you like it so much, here's a prediction for you: your fate is to lose against me!"

Toneri chuckled in a condescending manner. "I find that unlikely. You can only beat me if you destroy my golem first. And the only way to permanently destroy it is to kill me. No matter your course of action, none of them shall lead to an outcome where you win."

"Then you may find yourself surprised at what's going to happen next," Hinata said, as her eyes fixed on the golem as well.

The Avatar, who was trying to push the golem back, pulled the rock monster towards it instead, much to Toneri's confusion. The purple four armed giantess spun to the side in order to avoid being slammed by the statue, and without letting the statue go and using the building momentum, spun the statue again, and again, and again, building more and more momentum. A tornado started to form around them.

"What... what are you going to do!?" Toneri asked, looking in shock and confusion at what Hinata was doing. He tried to get closer, but he was nearly smashed by the statue being spun, the blowback pushing him back.

The Avatar was spinning so fast while keeping the statue firmly held, they began to look like a purple and grayish brown blurry tornado. And then, the Avatar stopped all of sudden, and launched the statue into the dark sky above them. The golem roared, as it flailed its oversized arms trying to hopelessly get back to the Moon. However, the rock monster became smaller and smaller, until it could no longer be seen anymore, being lost forever in the vastness of space.

Needless to say, such display left all the onlookers speechless with their mouth agape. Toneri included. He opened his mouth to say something, but only incoherent noises came from it.

"And done. Because of the Moon's much lower gravity, I've been able to launch it much higher than if it we were on Earth. I might not be able to permanently destroy it, but I doubt it will be much of a bother now," Hinata said after the Avatar of Kalika stopped spinning. "Surrender now, or you might follow its fate."

"... you... you..." he began, stammering. "The statue of Hamura... how... how did you..."

Toneri didn't have time to dwell on his confusion and astonishment, as the Avatar of Kalika stomped its way towards him. He flew out of the way just in time to avoid being grabbed again. The current situation snapped the Otsutsuki back to his senses, as rage began to overpower his fear and amazement.

"You surely want to take everything away from me, don't you?"
Toneri seethed as he narrowed his eyes at her.

"You want to take everything away from us," Hinata fired back. "You helped Akatsuki kill countless people, and many more that will die!"

"The world of the Sage of the Six Paths isn't worth saving. If the ninja nations weren't forced to join forces against a bigger threat, they'd continue trying to kill each other;" Toneri insisted.

"That's how you justify the blood of the innocents dripping your hands?" Hinata furiously retorted.

"They were doomed to die one way or another. Their deaths at our hands at the very least will pave the way for a better world."

"No world that needs the death of innocents to come into existence can be deemed as 'better' by any stretch of the imagination!" Hinata replied, as she started to make hand seals. "Sage Art: Lightning Release Divine Lightning!"

The Avatar aimed its upper hands at Toneri, and multitude of purple lightning bolts shot from each of its fingertips in a wide cone. Toneri, meanwhile, charged his Truth Seeking Balls with chakra, making them glow green, and started to spin them around himself as he moved, creating a makeshift shield that deflected the lightning bolts.

"The orbs alone might not be able to nullify your jutsu, but the rotation make them more effective at reflection," Toneri said with a smirk. "I thought about it when I remembered your Heavenly Spin. And that's not the only page I'm going to take from your book! Silver Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

Toneri's Truth Seeking Balls started to spin before merging into a silvery energy ring that exploded into a powerful tornado, swallowing the Avatar of Kalika. Toneri started to move his hands upwards, making the tornado to change its angle so it faced upwards.

" He plans to hurl me into space like I did with his statue!"

Hinata quickly realized, as she commanded the Avatar to crouch and use its four hands to anchor itself to the ground. Still, the wind carried a lot of power, and slowly pushed the giant chakra construct back, threatening to lift it.

Thinking what she could do, Hinata sent her Truth Seeking Balls towards Toneri, but when they were almost caught in the massive wind vortex, Hinata was forced to recall them.

" What can I do? None of my attacks are fast enough to overcome a gale of this potency!" she thought in desperation, as the Avatar struggled to stay attached to the rocky ground. "I'll need something faster than... than..."

Suddenly, a realization hit Hinata. She reached her ninja tool pouch, and pulled out the collapsible chakra bow Tenten had given her.

"Yes, I think this might work," Hinata said, nodding to herself, as she unfolded the bow, the seals on it glowing to life, and generating a purple string made of chakra. Hinata pulled the string, generating a chakra arrow.

"A bow? Seriously? That's the best you can do?" Toneri loudly mocked, letting out a malicious laugh. "Perhaps you weren't as skilled and powerful as I had first thought, princess. Now disappear!"

Toneri increased the power of the wind. Cracks started to appear around the ground where the Avatar was grabbing, before the wind finally teared the ground the chakra giantess was attaching to, and was send flying into the sky This didn't leave Hinata much of a time window.

"Just one shot. But I know I can do it," Hinata said, as she narrowed her eyes. Then, she loosened the string, and two things happened.

The first one was that the arrow was released, and flew straight towards Toneri.

The second was Hinata's Truth Seeking Balls quickly merging into an amethyst orb of pure chakra, placing itself just in the pathway the arrow would take to reach Toneri.

The result was the arrow piercing the orb, and absorbing all its energy, turning into a purple arrow made of pure lightning, which carried enough speed to overcome Toneri's tornado and enough power to finally put an end to the last Otsutsuki.

It should be mentioned, though, that only somebody watching these events in slow motion would have been able to appreciate this string of events. For the onlookers, Toneri included, what it looked like was that Hinata's bow released a lightning bolt rather than an arrow at Toneri. The white haired man was unable to move in time, and the lightning arrow pierced his chest, slamming him against the ground, before it exploded in a storm of lavender lightning bolts.

Toneri let out a scream of pain, the very last sound that would leave his lips.

The tornado finally dispelled, allowing the Avatar to return to the Moon's surface. And after Hinata checked that no chakra came from Toneri's body, she finally allowed herself to dispel the clones gathering nature energy, as well as the Avatar. The Hyuga Clan Head floated herself to the ground, and once her feet touched it, she felt a wave of exhaustion course through her body, making her fall to her knees.

"Hinata!" she heard many voices yell her name before collapsing.

...

Sometime Later

When Hinata opened her eyes, darkness was all what she saw.

She was lying down. It took her some time to notice that she was inside a sleeping bag. Extending her hand and feeling her surroundings, she touched a sheet of tarp, making her realize she was inside a tent. She tried to get out of the sleeping bag. Her body felt numb, but thankfully not sore, so even if she wasn't moving as fast as nimble as she usually did, at the very least nothing hurt.

She wondered what could be outside, tempting to use the Tenseigan's enhanced vision to check her surroundings, but her dizziness dissuaded her from. Plus, her instincts told her that, given where she woke up, she must be among friends.

Pushing the tarp away and getting out of the tent, Hinata's vision was filled with bright orange, some some black blurry figures on it. As her eyesight adjusted, she realized that there was a campfire, with several torches lit around it. There were some people sitting around the campfire, but was unable to identify any of them.

"Hey look, Hinata-sama is finally awake!" she heard a voice that sounded like Tokuma's.

Soon, the Hyuga Clan Head was surrounded by many people: her fellow clansmen, Shisui, Sai, and much to her surprise, some members of the Moon Acolytes.

"Good to see you back on your feet, Hinata-sama. You were starting to worry us," a Hyuga kunoichi said.

"Are you feeling better?" a Moon Acolyte asked.

"Where are we?" the still disoriented Hinata asked. "And... what happened?"

"To answer your first question, we returned to the inside of the Moon," Shisui replied.

"We agreed it was better to bring you to a safer place so you could recuperate in peace. The surface of the Moon wouldn't do," Sai added.

"And to answer your second question, after you finally ended that creep Toneri for good, you lost consciousness," Shisui continued. "We believe due to exhasution. Since you brought the Tenseigan Chakra Cloak to a whole new level, and used it on a pretty intense fight."

"I... I see..." she said, her mind slowly clearing. "How long have I been out?"

"It's a bit hard to tell given that the artificial sun is out, but I think that about two or three days," Shisui replied.

"Two days?" Hinata asked in shock. "And we're still here?"

"We discussed to make the return trip without waiting for you to wake up. But there were concerns that you might not survive the journey back home via the Gate Seal if you weren't rested enough," Nori intervened. "But don't worry, we haven't been wasting time while you were resting. The cave with the portal is not far away from here, so we can return to Earth as soon as we can."

"I see," Hinata said, shivering a little.. "What... what happened with Toneri."

"He's here," Shisui said, pulling a sealing scroll from under his flak jacket. "The forensics are going to have a field day making an autopsy to an actual Otsutsuki. Hokage-sama will be pleased with the secrets his body will reveal to us. Though," Shisui then pulled a second sealing scroll, and handed it to Hinata. "I believe this should be yours."

"Huh?"

"Those are his eyes. Or better said, your father's eyes," Shisui explained. Hinata's face was solemn. "For some reason, they turned back into normal Byakugan when we went to check his body."

Anyway, we heard you saying how you wanted to return your father's eyes to his grave, so there you go."

"Oh... thank you," Hinata said, putting the scroll inside her ninja tool pouch. "After so many years, my father will be able to rest in peace."

"Do you feel ready to return home, Hinata-sama?" Tokuma asked.

"Yes. I'm feeling a little numb, but I guess that's from all the time I spent sleeping," the blue haired young woman replied, hoping that that was the reason behind the numbness. "Hopefully I can shake it by moving it a little."

"Awesome. Everybody, pick up the camp! We're leaving!" Shisui said, clapping his hands twice.

Hinata shivered a little again. "Why it's so cold all of sudden? Or it's just me? Nights didn't used to be cold here."

"The artificial sun is no more," Nori told her. "Hence the temperature is slowly but surely dropping. That's why we had to set up so many torches, since there is no light either."

"Oh. That means that without light and heat, all the vegetation here is doomed to die," Hinata said with a tinge of sadness.

"There's nothing we can do about it," Nori said emphatically, shaking her head. "The Energy Vessel was what allowed living beings to exist in this place. And now that it's gone..."

"I know," Hinata nodded.

"I'll help the others packing the camp. You stay here and relax, we'll be home in no time."

Hinata nodded as she watched Nori walking away. She sat down cross legged, and closed her eyes. While she didn't plan to move anywhere, she wasn't going to relax. She could hear the noise made by her fellow ninjas as they packed up the camp and chattered among each other. Their voices and noise began to muffle and lower, little by little until they could no longer be heard. Hinata then felt another presence with her, and that moment, she opened her eyes.

Once again, Hinata found herself inside of an ethereal looking temple made of fine purple stone. There was somebody there with her, though she wasn't aware of her surroundings just yet.

"Hello, Hanabi-chan," Hinata said.

"... huh? Oh!"

In front of her was a distracted and a bit confused Hanabi Hyuga.

"I hope it wasn't a bad moment," Hinata replied. "I could feel your chakra was at peace, but I might have been mistaken."

"No, it's fine. You didn't catch me in the middle of a battle or anything," the younger Hyuga said. "So, you're going to tell me that your mission was a success, right?"

"Yes. How did you guess that?"

Hanabi smirked. "Because there have been reports of all of Toneri's puppets suddenly going inactive. We all assumed it was you, because, well, what else could have happened?"

"Ah, true. Anyway, besides that, I wanted to tell you that there haven't been any casualties among my team. We'll be back on Earth soon," Hinata told Hanabi.

The younger sister beamed with joy. "That's awesome! Guess the mission went just peachy, right?"

"Eh, not as 'peachy' as you thought. Toneri was here, and proved to be quite the obstacle. In the end we managed to beat him, but it was quite the narrow victory," Hinata explained.

Hanabi's smile disappeared, replaced by a grimace of horror. "What!? That creep was there!? I thought he would be here with the rest of Akatsuki! Did he know that you were going there or something?"

"As a matter of fact, he did," Hinata replied. "He... he was listening to our conversation when you contacted me some days ago."

Hanabi's face fell. "How did he do that!?"

"Hanabi-chan, Hamura's chakra links the two of us. But Toneri also has such chakra, hence we were linked to him. That's how we were able to notice our conversation and eavesdrop it," Hinata explained.

Hanabi's palm slapped her face, as she groaned into her mouth.

"Oh, shit! Shit, shit, shit! I'm so fucking stupid!" Hanabi cursed, gritting her teeth in frustration. "I'm VERY sorry! I don't know what came over me, I swear I'm not usually this careless!"

"It's okay, Hanabi-chan. We're in the middle of a war, to not be able to think clearly. Everybody makes mistakes," Hinata reassured her little sister.

"No, it's not okay! This mistake could have costed you your life!" Hanabi insisted. "You said your victory against Toneri was a narrow one!"

"Yes, but in the end, we won. All's well what ends well. Don't fret about it anymore, okay?" Hinata said, smiling warmly at Hanabi. "I know you must feel bad with yourself, but that won't help anybody. You can keep this in mind if it helps you focus better and not make other mistakes with what's left of the war."

"Okay. I'll do that. Sorry again, though," Hanabi repeated, lowering her head.

"Plus, your blunder did have its good parts. For once, it managed to keep Toneri away from the war, and now he won't be able to harm anybody anymore," Hinata said.

"Guess that's a good thing," Hanabi admitted.

"Yes, and that's not the best part. Tell me Hanabi, have you used Sage Mode in battle?" Hinata asked.

Her little sister shook her head. "So far, I didn't find any enemy that merited such thing."

"Alright. See, during my time in the Moon, I've been studying a jutsu that combines Senjutsu with the Tenseigan Chakra Cloak," Hinata began to explain. "For starters, by using the power boost granted by Sage Mode, you can take the Chakra Cloak to the next level."

"Really? That's awesome! Had I know that, I would have used Sage Mode since the war had begun!" Hanabi excitedly said.

"It's not as easy as using the Cloak when you're in Sage Mode," Hinata said, as if reading Hanabi's mind. "You need to stay very still and concentrated in order to merge both modes, for they will refuse to become one."

"Hey, if you did it, that means it can be done, right?" Hanabi confidently replied. "But don't worry, I'll prepare while I'm not battling so I can have it down by the time the time to fight comes."

"Good," Hinata nodded in approval. "Lastly, I'm going to pass you this jutsu that will be very useful. You'll be able to use it once you reach the highest level of Tenseigan Chakra Cloak with Senjutsu. The name is Avatar of Kalika."

Hinata spent a couple hours explaining Hanabi the details of the jutsu. However, what were a couple hours in their shared mental dimension was only a few minutes in the real world. By the time she snapped out of her trance, the others have already finished packing everything up.

"Ready to go, Hinata?" Shisui asked.

"Yes," Hinata said. "There's no time to waste."

And thus, the group made their journey back to Earth. Hinata was hoping that nothing bad would happen before her arrival, and that Hanabi wouldn't need to use the Avatar of Kalika. However, she was unable to shake a bad feeling off of her body, as if a threat even greater than Toneri or Obito was about to fall upon her friends and comrades.

She prayed such bad feeling didn't come to pass.

Author's Note: And thus, Hinata's character arc comes to an end. Toneri represented the complete opposite of all what Hinata stood and fought for, so his defeat at her hands made the more sense to me than being beaten like Naruto, as in canon.

Another thing I never liked about Toneri was how he was spared at the end (with Hinata even offering him to return with them to Earth. Like, what the fuck, girl? This guy kidnapped your sister, mindraped you into being his lover and attempted to commit planetary genocide. We all know you're pretty kind but everything has a limit). And after all the shit he did, both in this fic and in canon, he deserved to die. Besides, the series hardly did anything with him after that. So yeah, Toneri doesn't get to live here.

While I said that this is the end of Hinata's character arc, it doesn't mean that she isn't going to appear anymore. She will play a major role in the final arc, though it will be a few chapters until we see her return. She still can get a lot of mileage out of the Perfect Tenseigan Chakra Cloak and the Avatar of Kalika.

Speaking of which, now you know the meaning behind the statue with the horns and the four arms. I hope you liked it, because you'll see it more times once Hinata gets back to fighting.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Well, hope you enjoyed this chapter. As usual, make sure to leave your thoughts on it (or just say that you liked it if you don't feel like writing something long) in a review. Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Reinforcements Arrive

Author's Note: And now that the Moon mission is finally over, we return to Earth to see how the Alliance will respond to the First Division's defeat. Enjoy:

Chapter 114:

Reinforcements Arrive

or

Meeting Daddy Again

Land of Fire, shortly after the Tenseigan Energy Vessel was destroyed

After linking up with the Medical Division, the Second Division rushed through the forests of the Land of Fire in order to reunite with the A's First Division, who suffered a defeat at the hands of the Akatsuki army. The news that among those reanimated were Nagato, a Rinnegan bearer, and Fugaku Uchiha, a Mangekyo Sharingan bearer, sent the message that Akatsuki was done playing around, and that they would show their true power.

The charge was led from Tsunade on the ground, while Kurotsuchi was flying above them. Tsunade had ordered the rest of the medics to mingle with the ninjas of the Second Division, so they would be surrounded by people that could protect them at all times (the fact that tsunade didn't need to be protected was left unsaid, and nobody contested it). And for a certain pink haired medic, choosing her the ninja that would protect her wasn't a hard choice.

"It's good to fight together again, isn't it, Sasuke-kun?" Sakura asked Sasuke, smiling a little. "And not just the two of us. Karin and Shizune-sensei as well. The whole team fights together again!"

Karin was running behind them, giving the pinkette enough space to she could share a moment with her boyfriend before the impending battle. Shizune was a few rows behind her students. Still, Sasuke didn't appear to enjoy Sakura's company much, given the Uchiha's sour and silent mood, his onyx eyes aimlessly looking into the distance.

"Hn," was Sasuke's only reply. The Uchiha sounded even more sullen than usual. Something that Sakura did not appreciate.

"A grunt? That's all what you have to say at the chance of the two of us finally fighting together since this cursed war began?" Sakura angrily asked.

This seemed to snap Sasuke from his crestfallen trance, blinking a couple times, before looking at Sakura. He averted his gaze, looking somewhat ashamed. "I... sorry, Sakura. I didn't want to offend you. It's just that... I'm not in the best of moods right now."

"I have noticed. Wanna share it with me? If there's something bothering you, it's better if you take it outside your chest before the battle begins," the pinkette advised him.

After a pause, Sasuke nodded. "I don't know if you heard, but they said that one of the zombies in the army we're about to face is that of my father, Fugaku Uchiha."

Of course, that's all what Sakura needed to hear. She gasped, covering her mouth with her hands in horror. "Oh my goodness! No wonder you're behaving like that! I'm so sorry, that was super insensitive of my part!"

"It's okay. Only the higher ups were aware of the details of the First Division's defeat," Sasuke said.

Such contradiction was immediately caught by the medic kunoichi. "Only the higher ups? Then how do you know it?"

"Because Itachi and I have been tasked with taking our father down. Since we both have Mangekyo Sharingan and Susanoo, they think we're the better suited to deal with him," Sasuke explained. "Not that I like it, but I can see their logic."

"Why don't they let Tsunade-sama fight him? With her Rinnegan she could defeat Fugaku easily."

"Because Tsunade-sama has been tasked with an even bigger threat: Nagato, the former Akatsuki leader, has been revived as well," Sasuke replied.

"Nagato too?" Sakura asked in shock. "Well, in hindsight, it was obvious that he would be among those reanimated. Between him and your father, no wonder the First Division lost. Given the number he made on Konoha, I hope Tsunade-sama is able to deal with him swiftly."

"Me too. Maybe then she can come by and give us a hand with our father," Sasuke dourly noted. "Even if I hate the idea of depending on a single person to save us all the time."

"I might not be Tsunade-sama, but I'll be there for you-"

"No," Sasuke cut her, much to her surprise. "No offense, but if what I heard is true, you won't be able to help us much against our father. And I can't fight and protect you at the same time. I need all my focus for this fight, and that can only happen if I know you're away from him or Nagato."

Sakura opened her mouth, ready to protest. To claim that she was no damsel in distress that needed to be coddled. However, she was able to pick that Sasuke was having a lot of trouble staying focused given who he was going to fight, and he didn't need having to worry about her on top of that. So Sakura chose to swallow her pride.

"It's okay, Sasuke-kun. I'll make sure not to get in the way of your fight," Sakura replied.

For a brief moment, Sakura thought she saw Sasuke's lips curving into a smile.

"Thanks. I'm glad you understand," Sasuke said, nodding. "I promise we'll fight together once this is dealt with."

"Guys, get ready," Karin, who had been silent all this time, spoke for the first time. "I'm sensing a lot of chakras in turmoil a few hundred meters ahead. We're approaching the First Division and the Akatsuki army."

Her two teammates nodded, and mentally prepared to enter the battlefield.

...

From her vantage point in the sky, Kurotsuchi had a perfect view of the battleground before her. Patches of multiple colors mixed with white patches, as flashes of orange, blue and white crossed the battlefield as jutsu were traded between enemies, the earth cracking, craters being opened in the ground, and unfortunate trees being taken down as collateral damage.

While it was impossible to tell apart one ninja from another, it was easy to identify some people by the sheer destruction they were causing. She easily recognized a white blur blitzing through a mass of White Zetsu as her fellow Kage A. Among the reanimations, the two that HQ had warned them about were easy to spot: a large black skeletal figure cutting a swath of destruction among the allied ninjas revealed Fugaku Uchiha's position. And a large group of allied ninjas being blown into the air as if they were ants carried by the wind told her where Nagato was.

"Well, there they are," Kurotsuchi said, as she tapped her earpiece. "Tsunade, do you hear me?"

"Loud and clear, Tsuchikage. Did you find our targets?" Tsunade's voice replied.

"Yep. Fugaku Uchiha is on the top left flank. Though I'm sure you'll be able to see it once you get closer to the battlefield," Kurotsuchi said. "And Nagato is on the center on the battlefield, currently moving towards the bottom left."

"Got it. Any other targets of interest?" Tsunade asked.

Kurotsuchi took another glance at the battlefield, to see if there were other targets that merited a quick termination, when she saw several greenish-yellow projectiles flying towards her from the ground.

"SHIT!" she yelled, as her hands flew through hand seals. "Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

Kurotsuchi exhaled a wide stream of fire that quickly incinerated the corrosive projectiles aimed at her. Looking down, she saw what she believed were Sniper Zetsu, taking aim at her.

"Kurotsuchi? Kurotsuchi!" Tsunade yelled. "Everything's okay? I saw what you did!"

"Some asshole Sniper Zetsu wanting to bring me down. Better take care of them before they become a bigger hassle," Kurotsuchi said, as she flew down.

"Understood. We're going to enter and join the main group," Tsunade said.

...

Back on the ground, while still on the move, Tsunade addressed the troops.

"Alright everyone, we're about to link with the First Division! I want you to spread, find whoever's having trouble, and help them! Once they're safe, push back, understood?" she yelled, not waiting for a response. "There are two targets, both reanimations, that have been deemed as critical: the first one is Nagato Uzumaki, Akatsuki's former leader. I will face him down myself, and I'll try to push him away from the main group to reduce collateral damage. I don't want to see anybody that's not a Kage getting close to our fight, understood? If I'm overwhelmed and need help, I'll ask for it!

"The second target is Fugaku Uchiha. This one has been tasked to Itachi and Sasuke Uchiha to deal with. Again, don't provide any unsolicited assistance, wait for them to ask for help should they need any, or else you might get in the way."

Sasuke felt a bit uneasy upon hearing that. It's not that she said that they were on their own, but the message that taking Fugaku down depended on them was clear.

"That's all. Stay frosty, and do your best!" Tsunade finished.

Soon, the Second and Medical Divisions reached the first, joining the ensuing battle. There were many group of allies ninjas fighting White Zetsu and reanimations, most of them losing. Sasuke felt the urge to help a nearby group with Itachi appeared besides him.

"Everybody have their mission, and we have ours," Itachi said.
"Follow me, I have located Father."

A knot formed on Sasuke's stomach upon hearing those words, but remained silent and followed his brother's lead. Said knot became tighter and tighter as they crossed the battlefield, ignoring the many fights happening around them, until Sasuke's Sharingan caught sight of a man he hadn't seen in almost half his life.

There he was, Fugaku Uchiha., in the middle of breaking an Iwa ninja's neck. A Konoha ninja tried to flank him, but Fugaku turned around and made eye contact. The poor Konoha ninja was paralyzed as the Sharingan Genjutsu took hold of him, his life ending shortly after Fugaku jammed a kunai onto the poor guy's neck.

The deaths happening in front of him allowed Sasuke to push his feelings for his reanimated father aside, at least for the time being, and answer the call to action. He made several hand seals before taking a few shuriken from his ninja tool pouch, and after imbuing them with lightning chakra, tossed them at his father.

Fugaku noticed the attack, his eyes widening upon seeing where the electrified steel stars came from. Still, despite being startled, his body reacted on his own, deflecting or dodging most of the shuriken, with one of them scratching his cheek.

"Scattering Crows Jutsu!"

Suddenly, black filled Fugaku's vision as a dozen crows flocked around him, cawing angrily and pecking him. Despite the pain and his obstructed vision, he was still able to grab Itachi by the wrist before he was about to slap an explosive tag on his back, and hurled him at Sasuke before the younger Uchiha could assist his older brother. Fortunately, both Sasuke and Itachi managed to get back on their feet just before Fugaku got rid of the crows.

"Guess I was being too hopeful thinking that would work and we could end this fight quickly," Itachi muttered, mildly frustrated.

"Trust me, nothing would make me happier," Sasuke bitterly agreed.

Once Fugaku finally recovered, he turned at the Uchiha brothers, his expression still surprised.

"Itachi. And... Sasuke, is that you?" Fugaku asked. "My, you have grown so much..."

"I guess I did," was all what Sasuke thought to say in response.

"I'm glad that you see that you two are still alive and well," Fugaku sincerely said. "I saw many of our clansmen reanimated by that lowly snake. I was told that besides you two, only Shisui survived."

"That's correct," Itachi replied. "For a time, between him and the two of us were the whole Uchiha clan."

Fugaku looked disheartened. "Three people... our once mighty clan... reduced to three members."

A scowl developed on Sasuke's face. "Yeah, and there's nobody to blame but you. You led our clan to its self destruction!"

Fugaku's expression wilted under Sasuke's glare. "I guess I did. I'd say I'm sorry, but nothing that I say or do will undo such a costly mistake. Worse, I'm forced to end even more innocent lives for the sake of another man's ambition."

"And just like eight years ago, it will be me who will have to put you down for good," Itachi said.

"It will be us," Sasuke corrected, as he took a step forward.

"Before we begin, a question," Fugaku said. "I have been told this already, but I need to hear it from your mouths. Itachi, given that you killed me, I presume you have the Mangekyo Sharingan?"

"Your guess is right," Itachi said. "That's why we were tasked to fight you."

"You too, Sasuke?"

The youngest Uchiha didn't say anything, just looked to the side.

"Good," Fugaku said, as his own Sharingan morphed. "Otherwise, I doubt you'd stand a chance against me then."

...

"Ningendo!"

With a swift hand move, Nagato pulled the soul out of the unfortunate Kiri ninja's body, and let it go, killing it instantly, before casually tossing the corpse aside. He turned around, and looked at the rest of his foes, keeping their distance and fighting stance, but clearly too scared to attack the redhead after what they just saw.

"If you don't plan to attack me, then I suggest you to go away and fight somebody else," Nagato advised them.

"W-We can't do that man!" a ninja from Ame replied, trying to keep the stutter out of his voice. "We can't just win this war by running away from our enemies!"

"But can you win it by dying pointlessly against an enemy that outmatches you?" Nagato asked, as he raised an arm. Said arm opened multiple compartments up, each holding a missile, before firing them forward.

The Allied ninjas braced for the worst.

"Shinra Tensei!"

A shockwave seemingly out of nowhere pushed the incoming missiles back, and still had enough force to do the same with Nagato, who was able to stay on his feet. A newcomer landed between Nagato and his opponents with a loud crash, raising a small cloud of dust and dirt.

"Stand back, I'll take care of this guy," the newcomer, Tsunade, ordered the other ninjas. "And tell the others to not to get close to us until I request for help!"

"Understood, Tsunade-sama!" a Konoha ninja said, unconsciously making a head bow, before turning at his comrades. "You heard her, guys! Let's find somebody else to fight!"

Nobody made any objections, and leaped away, leaving the Slug Sannin alone with the former Akatsuki leader.

"So, Nagato," Tsunade began. "We meet again. Far too soon after our last encounter, if you ask me."

"I'm not here out of my own free will, you know," the Uzumaki replied. "Given what you just did... I assume you have one of my eyes under that patch?"

"Did you expect that we weren't going to use your eyes against Akatsuki? Even if I didn't get this eye on a whim, it's an invaluable tool in a fight against Akatsuki," Tsunade explained.

"And the other?"

"Unfortunately, your pal Obito, with some internal help, snatched it," Tsunade said. "We wanted to summon the Demonic Statue and force it to throw the Tailed Beasts up, but the Uchiha bastard bonded with the Statue first."

"Hence this war," Nagato said, nodding. "What about Konan? Is she okay?"

"The girl's fine, kid. She's fighting alongside us. You know, to make up for her past crimes and all that. Time will tell if it's enough or not," Tsunade replied.

Nagato was going to say something, but his body suddenly stiffened for a second, before he started making hand seals. "Tsunade, watch out! Summoning Jutsu!"

Nagato slammed his palm into the ground, producing a large burst of smoke, and from the smoke, a giant ox with Rinnegan eyes emerged, charging at the blond Sannin while letting out a loud moo. The giant bovine lowered its head, trying to gore the Slug Princess with its horns. The Sannin, however, caught the animal by its horns, and using her monstrous strength, stopped it on its tracks.

"Summoning Jutsu! Summoning Jutsu! Summoning Jutsu! Summoning Jutsu!"

Nagato was covered by several bursts of smoke, as he summoned the giant multi headed dog, a giant panda, a giant centipede, and a giant chameleon with a snake for a tail.

"SHIT!" Tsunade cursed. "He's going to summon every possible animal linked to the Rinnegan so I can't summon any! I need to summon some myself!"

Gathering her strength, Tsunade pushed the charging ox backwards while she jumped in the opposite direction, biting her thumb and making five hand seals as fast as her hands allowed her to.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

She felt how a giant rhino was summoned to her presence.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

A giant bird with a large, jagged beak and deformed limbs took off to the sky.

"Summoning jutsu!"

An gigantic lobster came to her aid.

She stopped, feeling that there were no more animals she could call. From the Rinnegan's summoning ability, at least. She still had the slugs, but she didn't want to summon Katsuyu until she had no other options.

"Good job, Tsunade," Nagato praised, even if his voice was stoic and unemotive. "It would have been a shame if you let me summon all the animals of the Rinnegan."

With a wave of his hand, Nagato commanded his summoned creatures to attack, Tsunade doing the same. The rhino clashed against the ox in a duel of horns, the centipede engaged in a fight with the giant bird, and the panda went to face the lobster. Which left the multi headed dog and the chameleon with no one to fight but Tsunade herself, and launched themselves at her.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Tsunade cast a hand forward, releasing a powerful shockwave at the two incoming animals, pushing them backwards, toppling every tree they hit as they stumbled back. She then launched herself at Nagato, and reared her fist back.

"Shinra Tensei!"

This time, it was Tsunade who found herself at the receiving end of a gravitational blast, and was lunged backwards as if she was a fly being swatted away by a gigantic hand. Still, she managed not to lose her balance and land on her feet, skidding across the grass, leaving two furrows on the ground while raising a cloud of grinded dust and blades of grass.

The Sannin was thinking about her next move when all of sudden, Nagato was besides her, looking at her with a stony expression. He then grew two additional pair of arms and used them to immobilize the Sannin.

"I hope you can break out of this hold, because you can imagine what I'm going to do now," Nagato said, as he moved one of his original hands towards Tsunade's head.

Tsunade, however, wasn't afraid. "An impressive hold, indeed. Too bad I have the perfect counter."

And just like Nagato did, Tsunade also grew two additional pair of arms, which she used to break Nagato's hold. The Uzumaki wisely jumped backwards before the Slug Princess had the chance to hit him in close quarters.

"Hmph. Thanks to both having the Rinnegan, the two of us have the same ability. We seem to be at an impasse," Nagato observed.

"Then again, I do have the advantage of experience with the Rinnegan, not to mention a body that doesn't get tired or run out of chakra."

"And I have more experience in general by virtue of being a couple decades older than you are," Tsunade rebutted. "Not to mention all the abilities I have that aren't related to the Rinnegan."

"Let's hope that will be enough to put me down for good, Tsunade. I don't wish to continue fighting for a cause I don't believe for. Enough innocents have died by my hand."

...

"TAKE THIS!"

Sakura delivered a combo of a straight punch and a roundhouse kick towards a trio of Zetsu clones that leaped at her, resulting in them being sent away flying.

"Sakura-san, be careful to your left! One is going to ambush you from underground!" Neji, fighting other Zetsu near her, warned.

And indeed, Sakura felt light tremors on the ground, before another White Zetsu clone burst from underground, his fingers extended as claws ready to eviscerate her. The pinkette, however, was ready and smashed the brass knuckles she was wielding into his face, blowing his head up into multiple chunks of white flesh.

"Thanks a lot!" Sakura told Neji, flashing a quick smile. "So, how are they doing?"

Neji's aimed his vision to his back, where Shizune and Karin were. The two women were sitting on the floor, with her legs crossed and eyes closed, and a bunch of clones around them, acting as bodyguards, preventing the Zetsu from getting close, just like Sakura and Neji were doing as well. The Hyuga prodigy could see the nature energy being drawn into their bodies, mixing with their chakra.

"I say they're still halfway done," Neji told her, as he stabbed his two fingers into the side of a Zetsu clone, before slamming his palm into his face.

Sakura groaned. "Just lovely."

Unfortunately for the two young Sages, Naruto's method of creating two clones and sending them away wouldn't work here. With so many battles taking place across a vast battlefield, there were no places where they could hide a clone without being attacked by a White Zetsu or a reanimation. So they had no choice but gather nature energy themselves in the middle of the battle, and let some clones and their comrades protect them until they were done.

This made protecting them an extra hard job, since not only they couldn't be harmed, they couldn't even be disturbed. Plus the defenders didn't have space to fall back to if they were pushed back by the enemy.

While Sakura and Neji protected them from the front and the clones from the flanks, Lee, Tenten and Gai were protecting them from the rear guard.

"Watch out, a big one incoming!" Neji warned again.

Sakura felt the ground rumble before seeing a Zetsu Brute charging at them, tossing friends and foe alike to the sides if they were caught in his way.

"Yeah, hard to not see that one coming," Sakura said, taking a step forward. "I'll meet him headlong."

"YOU'RE DEAD!" the giant Zetsu hollered.

Sakura merely smirked, as she made several hand seals. "Earth Release: Mud Trap!"

The ground in front of the Zetsu Brute turned into a patch of brea, and the moment the large creature brought one of its feet down, it was stuck there, followed by the other. The giant creature struggled trying to get his legs out of the sucking mud. However, while he did that, he didn't notice Sakura rushing at him, her fist rearing backwards.

"Huh?"

"I think what you wanted to say it's 'I'm dead'," Sakura said, before smashing her fist into the chest of the monster, blowing a hole and sending it flying backwards out of the mud trap.

Far from being intimidated, two more Zetsu brutes charged towards Sakura and Neji, letting out roars of anger in an attempt to intimidate their opponents. Sakura weaved the same sequence of hand seals she did before.

"Earth Release: Mud Trap!"

This time, the pinkette poured more chakra into the jutsu, creating a pool of mud much larger than before. Despite this, the giant Zetsu anticipated Sakura's move and leaped above the trap of brea, landing on the ground with a loud thud, before resuming their charge, one of them reaching the pinkette before the other.

"Die, Konoha scum!" one Zetsu brute said, raising his arm above her. "Wood Release: Thorn Hammer!"

Wooden spikes grew on the Zetsu's large forearm before he brought it down. Sakura, who was ready to block the attack, was forced to jump back instead, let she be shredded by the spikes. The hit opened a crater on the ground, sending small rocks and pebbles in every direction.

"Shit, this guys give the impression of being all muscle and no brains, but they can catch you off guard if you aren't focused, and have access to a lot of elemental jutsu," Sakura inwardly cursed, as she landed on her feet. And much to her horror, she saw the second mutant Zetsu charging at her. "Shit!"

"Eight Trigrams: Palm Spear!"

A blue and green blur dashed in front of Sakura, and saw Neji leaping at the Zetsu Brute and slamming his palm into his face with so much force, not only it broke his momentum, but it pushed him backwards.

"Nice save," Sakura thanked Neji. "A new move?"

"Yes. It uses the speed granted by the Celestial Gates to add more power to a palm strike. Simple in concept, yet effective in results," Neji said.

"Not as effective as it may seem," Sakura said, looking at the Zetsu, holding his face in pain, but not looking that worse to wear.

"Guess I still need to polish it," Neji said, as he narrowed his eyes at the two giant Zetsu.

"And done!" Shizune said from behind. The leader of the Medical Squad jumped to her feet, and slipped into a battle stance. Her eyes were golden instead of the usual onyx, and had pink fang-like marks running down her cheeks.

"Oh, thank goodness," Sakura said in relief. "Now we only need to protect Karin until she's done."

"Good job, guys, let me handle this," Shizune said, as she took a step forward. "Focus on making sure Karin's unperturbed."

"Understood, Shizune-sensei!" Sakura said, as she and Neji jumped back.

The Zetsu Brute Neji had struck his face had already recovered, joining his partner as the two of them stomped towards Shizune. The medic-nin's confident stance didn't go unnoticed to either of them.

"So, you think you can beat us on your own?" one of the Brutes said. "Don't make us laugh!"

"You know, it's not wise to underestimate an opponent," Shizune told them.

"You're the one who's underestimating us!" one of the Zetsu said, as both arms started to grow wooden spikes. "Wood Release: Thorn Hammer!"

Unlike Sakura, Shizune didn't move, and raised her hands to block the hit, expertly grabbing one of the spikes on each hand in order to stop the attack. The black haired woman was pushed backwards a little, but otherwise the attack had no effect on her. The giant Zetsu's ugly face grimaced in anger upon realizing that this small woman was his equal in strength.

"What the...?" he asked.

Shizune smirked. "You aren't familiar with Sage Mode, are you? One of its perks is enhanced strength. I may not be as strong as Tsunade-sama, but I'm not that far from her. But guess the hardened skin makes up for it. And another thing... !"

The earth rumbled as the other giant Zetsu, displaying a deceptively high level of speed, flanked the black haired Sage and tried to smash her. But as he got close, Shizune spun the Zetsu in the direction the second one came, slamming him against the other.

"... is that Sage Mode grants me sensing abilities, so you won't be able to catch me by surprise," Shizune said, wiping her hands, before making several hand seals. "Now, let's see how do you like senjutsu-enhanced elemental ninjutsu! Sage Art: Water Release, Water Exploding Gun!"

Shizune aimed her index fingers at each of the Zetsu Brute, and fired a small water bullet from each of them. The bullets embedded itself into the Zetsus' bodies, before they exploded into a massive torrent of water, destroying the artificial creatures from the inside out.

"Wow!" Shizune beamed, looking at the result of her jutsu. "It's even better than I even expected!"

...

On one of the highest branches of one of the highest trees of the battlefield, a spiraling portal appeared, Obito emerging out of it. That branch was the perfect vantage point to oversee the battle. So far, it appeared to be pretty even, with no side winning ground over the other. Then again, he could see some battles where the Alliance was clearly winning. It could snowball into a defeat for Akatsuki.

Of course, not if Obito had anything to say about it. He dropped down to ground level, and pulled a scroll from under his robes.

"Alright, Madara, you always loved to talk about this shit back in the day. Let's see if it's as strong as you claimed it was," Obito said, as he unfurled the scroll on the ground, revealing a circle made of seals. He made several hand seals, and slammed his palm inside the circle.

The seals began to glow, and the ground around him began to shake.

...

Gai, Lee and Tenten continued protecting Karin by keeping the incoming enemies at bay. So far, none of them proved to be much of a match for the members of the Close Combat Squad.

"Okay, I'm done!" Karin said, jumped on her feet. Her normally red eyes were now golden, with spiral-shaped red marks around them.

"Excellent! That will give us more freedom of movement!" Tenten said. "It's kind of annoying having to stay in the same place all the time."

"Yeah, thank you guys for covering my back! Don't worry, I'm now ready to return the favor, and then some! Let's find an opponent worthy of-" Karin suddenly shut up, as her face grew pale.

"Karin?" Neji asked, walking to her girlfriend. "Is everything okay?"

"A MASSIVE amount of chakra is gathering in that direction!" Karin said, pointing to zone of the forest at the far end of the battlefield.

Neji activated his Byakugan, and directed his sight into the direction Karin pointed. He was also taken aback by what he saw.

"Hey, Neji, Karin? What did you guys find?" Tenten asked.

Suddenly, the ground started to shake, and the trees in the zone Karin had pointed out went down like dominoes, and from the forest, a gigantic creature emerged, probably fifty meters tall. It was humanoid, with the appearance of an ogre, and looked to be made of green wood. Coiled around it was a serpentine dragon, made of the same material. The wood giant began to advance towards them.

"What... what the hell is that!?" Tenten screamed.

"A Wood Giant," was Gai's response, his eyes fixed on the incoming green colossus.

"You... you saw that thing before, sensei?" Lee asked.

Gai shook his head. "Not seen one, but heard about it. One of the First Hokage's most powerful jutsu. It was able to match Madara's Susanoo."

"Wait... does that mean that the reanimated First Hokage is here!?" Lee asked in shock, looking around.

Karin closed her eyes, and expanded her senses. With Sage Mode, her sensing ability was even greater than before, and in no time she was able to scan the entire battleground, as well as several square kilometers worth of area around it. Her analysis done, she shook her head.

"I tried to locate a source of chakra similar to that monster, but I didn't find any," Karin explained. "That thing appeared on its own."

"Well, that's a relief. But let not drop our guards, it could be a trap," Neji reminded them.

"We need to fetch Tsunade-sama. I'm sure she'll be able to deal with this monster in no time," Tenten suggested.

"I don't think that's going to be an option," Karin replied. "I'm sensing her right now. She doesn't seem to be close to done with Nagato. By the time she's done, Kami knows how much death and destruction that thing can cause."

"Well, it's a good thing we have you, Karin-san," Lee said, smiling.

"Yeah, it's a good- wait, what?" she asked, turning at him in puzzlement, and a little dread. "Why do you say that?"

"You're a Sage, right? You must now possess a power beyond any normal ninja. Thanks to Sage Mode, Naruto was able to defeat the Fourth Mizukage and Pain. I'm sure you'll be able to beat that creature!" Lee said, sounding naively encouraging.

Karin looked at the incoming monster, and grimaced. Even with Sage Mode, she doubted she could beat such a powerful foe. She then felt a hand being placed on her shoulder.

"What my teammate failed to tell you is that, while we hope your new power will be instrumental in bringing that creature down, we will fight alongside you," Neji's voice reassured. "Nobody expects you to go against that thing alone."

Karin looked at her boyfriend, nodded and smiled, her confidence restored a little. "Alright, let's go then!"

...

"Okuninushi!"

Fugaku Uchiha's body rippled and flickered briefly in a surreal way, before dashing forward, delivering an horizontal wide swipe with his katana at his two sons. The four negative afterimages going after him mimicked his move, but delivered the swing from different angles and positions, resulting in a storm of brutal swipes that the Uchiha brother were barely able to block.

"So that's Okuninushi," Sasuke said, as he thought in a way to counter such a powerful ability. "Shisui wasn't exaggerating, it turns normal attacks into deadly blows."

"Shisui? How does he know about this jutsu?" Fugaku asked, confused. However, the answer soon popped in his mind. "Wait, Asuma told me Danzo had looted my eyes. I presume Shisui fought against him?"

"Yes, Gai and Shisui fought against him, and used such ability to great effect," Itachi explained.

"Did they defeat the bastard?" Fugaku asked.

"Danzo is indeed dead, if that's what you want to know," Itachi replied. "Too bad they didn't find a way to overcome that jutsu."

Fugaku was about to say something, when his expression went from angry to worried and surprised. "Itachi, Sasuke, watch out!" Fugaku warned, as his hands started to fly through hand seals. "Fire Release: Great Fireball Jutsu!"

Fugaku exhaled a fireball at the Uchiha brothers, which dodged it by quickly sidestepping in opposite directions. However, the afterimages also exhaled more fireballs at them, forcing the two younger Uchiha into the run. Sasuke hid behind a tree, while Itachi used a nearby boulder as cover. Explosions reverberated around them as fire spread among the forest.

"Itachi!" Sasuke yelled, as he started to make hand seals. "Let's end this fight the same way we defeated the guy with the Plasma Release! Fire Release: Burning Edge! Lightning Release: Thunder Blade!"

Sasuke unsheathed his katana and shoto at the same time, the former being covered in flames, the latter crackling with electricity. He then jumped out of his hiding spot, and dashed towards Fugaku.

"Sasuke, no! Wait!" Itachi cried.

But Sasuke was already charging headfirst towards his undead father. Fugaku merely made more hand seals.

"Fire Release: Greater Firewave!"

Fugaku and his afterimages exhaled conical streams of fire from their mouths, which quickly merged with each other, forming an advancing wall of flames, charring the earth below, quickly engulfed Sasuke between the flames.

"Sasuke!" Itachi yelled, trying to frantically find his brother.

Much to Itachi's relief, when the flames died down there was a burned log where Sasuke had been. And Sasuke was now behind Fugaku, ready to strike his back with two elemental weapons. However, two of Fugaku's afterimages turned around and parried the attacks just in time, before a third one tried to strike the youngest Uchiha. Sasuke, however, was able to dodge it and jump backwards.

"Nice one, son. You managed to slip past my guard and attack me from behind. And using two elements at once isn't something people without the proper Bloodline Limit are able to do," Fugaku praised. "You certainly grew into a very skilled and powerful ninja. I wish I was able to see your potential before."

"Would seeing my potential would have changed your mind regarding your idiotic insurrection?" Sasuke sneered at him, his Sharingan flashing with anger.

Fugaku visibly saddened. "No. I don't think it would have. I was blind back then."

"There was a time in which there was nothing I would have wanted more than finally being acknowledged by you, father. Being worthy of the name Uchiha," Sasuke said, tightly gripping his weapons. "But now, even being the best of the Uchiha means nothing."

Whirring noises alerted Fugaku of the shuriken flying at him. The former Uchiha patriarch easily deflected them with the help of his afterimages. Sasuke saw the perfect opportunity to attack.

"Double Elemental Release: Plasma Beam!"

Crossing his flaming katana with his electric shoto, Sasuke fired a beam of flames coated in electricity at Fugaku. The Uchiha father jumped away, and the beam hit the spot where he was standing, resulting in a large explosion. Even if he managed to avoid said explosion, two of his afterimages were destroyed in it.

"Good job, Sasuke! If what Shisui told me also applies here, it will take him some time to replace the lost afterimages!" Itachi said, as he moved to attack as well. "Meaning that now's the time to strike!"

"I'm afraid you won't have the chance," Fugaku said, as he was surrounded by a large black spectral ribcage, which expanded into the upper half of a large skeleton, followed by said skeleton being covered in muscle, then skin, and lastly an armor of some kind. Two blades appeared on each the chakra construct's hands.

"Susanoo already? Well, I wasn't expecting this to be easy," Itachi said, as he replied in kind, his red Susanoo forming around him. He did notice, however, that Sasuke hadn't activated his. "Sasuke?"

"I'm... okay, just give me a second!" Sasuke replied, sounding doubtful, flinching as his purple Susanoo started to form.

"He hasn't overcome the visions yet," Itachi realized. "But sadly, we don't have the luxury to fall back on other jutsu. The few things that can beat a Susanoo is another Susanoo! Please Sasuke, stay strong! This will end soon, I promise,"

...

As the green colossus advanced, Allied ninjas fled from it, lest them be crushed under the wood giant. Unfortunately, some of them weren't fast enough and were trampled by the wooden construct, as well as many White Zetsu clones. Though, while some ninjas fled, others tried to slow down the gigantic monster with their elemental ninjutsu.

"Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

"Water Release: Water Wall!"

"Lightning Release: Thunder Spear!"

Fire bolts, powerful water blasts, lightning bolts, boulders and blades of wind flew towards the wooden giant, chipping away small bits and pieces of its body, but so far it didn't appear to make much damage to its body. The creature seemed to notice the ninjas below it, as it looked down at them. Despite its expressionless face, everybody felt prey to a feeling of overwhelming dread.

Feeling that was amplified a hundredfold when the wood giant raised a hand, and clenched its fingers into a fist, and brought it down at a deceptively fast speed. The fist crashed against the ground, cracking the ground as it was made of cheap plastic, sending large chunks of rock everywhere, flinging both Allied ninjas and Zetsu clones in every direction, and producing a huge tremor that shook the entire battlefield.

The only ninja close enough to the monster unaffected by such destructive display of strength was flying above it, watching in shock and some horror the display.

"So that's Hashirama's Wood Golem..." Kurotsuchi said, glaring at the monster. "So powerful, Hashirama only summoned it against his greatest foes. Not even the Second Tsuchikage was able to beat it. Still, I can't back up from this fight. I might be one of the few people here who can match that beast's power," she said, as she started making hand seals. "Dust Release: Atomic Dismantling Jutsu!"

Kurotsuchi clapped her hands together, and brought them apart, creating a transparent energy cube with a core of white light. She thrust her hands forward, sending the cube towards the green giant. The Wood Golem, however, noticed Kurotsuchi's attack, as the serpentine dragon wrapped around its body moved towards the incoming attack, and opened its jaws, releasing a blaze of strange greenish-yellow flames, prematurely detonating the attack.

It then lunged upwards, trying to catch the Tsuchikage between its jaws, making the young Kage to fly upwards in order to avoid it.

"Shit! That thing has more tricks than mere size and strength!" Kurotsuchi cursed.

Taking advantage of the giant golem focusing on Kurotsuchi, the ninjas from down below launched another barrage of elemental attacks, causing some superficial damage to the beast, which showed no reaction. At first at least, given that he prepared another devastating attack as it raised its fist again. All humans present paled at what was going to happen.

"Oh fuck! I need to stop it before he causes another massacre!" Kurotsuchi said, as her hands blurred through hand seals while diving at the monster. "Earth Release: Weighted Boulder Jutsu!"

Once again, the serpent dragon tried to trap her between its jaws the moment it got close, but Kurotsuchi already expected this and was able to expertly dodge it. The first obstacle overcome, she latched onto the golem's raised fist. The spot Kurotsuchi grabbed turned to stone, and the effect started to spread, petrifying the giant's arm. The golem didn't seem to notice as it prepared to bring its fist down.

"Shit, I have no time to petrify the whole arm!" Kurotsuchi realized, as she slammed her fist onto the petrified arm, shattering it into small rocks and pebbles, before flying away, as the dragon head tried to roast her with its breath of green fire.

...

Down below, there was a single but loud cheer the moment Kurotsuchi managed to avoid the monster from attacking.

"All hail Tsuchikage-sama! We all live thanks to her!" an Iwa ninja fervently shouted.

"Let's attack now that that monster is reduced to just one arm!" a Kiri ninja shouted.

"Do not make any risky moves! That thing might have lost one arm, but it's far from harmless!" a Suna ninja advised.

That moment, the earth started to shake as the Wood Golem began to move. Though, much to their confusion, not towards them to attack again, but towards a nearby cluster of trees. It bent down, and uprooted a large tree with its remaining arm.

"I think one doesn't need a lot of imagination to know what does he plan to do with that tree," Neji said, as he glared at the one armed monster.

"Don't worry, if he plans to chuck that tree at us, I'll kick it back at him!" Lee loudly declared. "Gate of Opening, Open! Gate of Healing, Open! Gate of Pain, Open!"

"Lee, wait! Don't rush like that before knowing what the enemy is going to do!" Tenten advised him, as he gripped his shoulder. "Look!"

In fact, the Wood Golem didn't appear to get ready to throw the tree, or even use it as a weapon. Instead, it brought it to its face... and after opening its mouth, it swallowed the tree whole, much to everybody's confusion. The confusion was turned into shock as vines started to emerge from the stump where its arm used to be, interlacing with each other until they formed a new forearm, and then a new hand. The burnt marks and holes the previous attacks had made on its body were also filled with new wood, restoring the giant back to normal.

Everybody looked at what happened in the deepest of stupors.

"Just..." Karin said, trying not to fumble her words. "... what the hell was THAT!?"

"As a being made of wood, it seems it can heal itself by consuming trees," Neji pointed out, even if that much was obvious. "And given the amount of trees in the area, he has plenty of food to heal itself."

"And it's not that we are going to destroy every tree in the vicinity, are we?" Tenten asked.

"Then what are we going to do?" Lee asked.

"It isn't obvious? Is an enemy has the ability to heal itself, you have to beat it in one blow, so it doesn't have the chance to do so!" Gai energetically said.

"Unfortunately," a new voice began, prompting Karin and Team Gai to turn around, revealing to be Shizune, with Sakura behind her. "That's not something that we can do against an enemy of such power."

"Not even with Karin-san and you being Sages?" Lee asked.

"Sage Mode gives us a lot of power, yes," Shizune agreed.

"But I don't think it will be enough to beat that thing," Karin finished, pointing at the now advancing Wood Golem.

"No, maybe she can," Sakura said, pointing upwards.

The others looked at where she was pointing at, and saw the Tsuchikage, flying around the green wood construct, trying to stop the golem with jutsu of fire and lava, to little effect.

"I learned that the Tsuchikage got Dust Release from her grandfather and predecessor. It's an elemental combination that can reduce a target to dust instantly. If we slow that thing down, maybe she'll be able to finish it in one blow," Sakura suggested.

Everybody seemed to ponder for a moment Sakura's suggestion. While risky and with low chances of success, it was the most sound plan to take that monster down. Neji was the first one to speak up his mind.

"I think she already tried to do that, but the dragon coiled around its body kept intercepting her attack," the Hyuga prodigy said. "I think it's paramount we remove that dragon if we are to succeed."

"Wood is a combination of Water and Earth Release. Meaning that lightning would be the best element to harm that creature," Shizune suggested. "We should gather any Lightning Release user we can find and have them be the bulk of the attack."

"Meanwhile, the rest of us could attack from multiple directions in order to confuse it, or at the very least, prevent it from moving deeper into the battleground," Gai added.

"A sound plan. Alright, let's go!" Shizune said, as she and the rest of her comrades rushed towards the giant made of wood.

Author's Note: Nothing much to say this time. After the change of scenery to the moon, we return when we left it last time, more specifically, just after the defeat of the First Division. They got now reinforcements to turn the tide of the battle in their favor, but, it will be enough?

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Don't forget to leave a review with your thoughts on the chapter! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Battling Giants

Author's Note: Okay, some people complained in the reviews that I made the Wood Golem too small, being only fifteen meters in height. After thinking about it, I realized that those complaints had some merit, and went back to the previous chapter and changed it to fifty meters instead. One of the reasons behind the change is that fifteen meters would be indeed too small for the golem to eat whole trees.

Well, now that that's out of the way, enjoy the new chapter:

Chapter 115:

Battling Giants

or

TIMBER!

"Here it comes!"

The Wood Golem had one of its arms rised, hand clenched into a fist, and quickly brought it down. Expecting what was going to happen, every ninja quickly jumped away in order to put as much distance as possible between them and the green colossus. The fist came down with the force of a thousand hammers hitting a sheet of wood, once again opening another crater, cracks spreading everywhere, chunks of rock flying in every direction.

This time, however, almost no Allied ninja was caught in the localized earthquake, most of them managing to come out of it unscathed.

"NOW! It's time to attack while it's wide open!" somebody called out.

"Let's go, Karin!" Shizune said, as she rushed forward while making hand seals. "Sage Art: Water Release, Water Exploding Gun!"

"Sage Art: Earth Release, Tectonic Fury!"

Dozens of elemental jutsu flew towards the now wide open golem. Shizune fired several water droplets at the giant monster, exploding into torrents of water that opened small craters on it, while Karin pulled a gigantic boulder from the ground below and chucked it forward. The golem, however, managed to recover faster than they anticipated, and with a couple of well timed punches, managed to shatter the gigantic rock the redhead had conjured.

Taking advantage of the golem's predicament, two Konoha ninja, shrouded in green auras, were going for a different approach, though.

"Lee, let's aim for the legs!" Gai said, as he and his protégé rushed forward. "Try to aim for the joint!"

"Understood, Gai-sensei!" Lee replied. The two green clad ninjas leaped forward, and delivered a brutal flying kick to the Wood Golem's shin. "Double Leaf Whirlwind!"

"Sakura, Tenten, let's not stay behind!" Neji said, rushing forward as well. "Aim for the other leg!"

"Right!" Tenten said, before making several hand seals in order to imbue her body with lightning chakra, then she pulled out two swords, aimed them forwards, and started to spin. "Lightning Release: Raging Blade Drill!"

"Cherry Blossom Impact!" Sakura focused as much chakra as she could into her fist, forming a blue flaming aura around it, and punched the giant monster in the other shin as hard as possible.

"Eight Trigrams: Palm Spear!" with the additional speed boost provided by the Celestial Gates, Neji slammed his palm into its shin as hard as he could.

The damage done to the golem's forelegs didn't go unnoticed. There was a sound of wood breaking, and some cracks appeared on the construct's shins, and much to everybody's surprise, the golem stumbled back, and even threatened to fall on its back. However, in the end, it regained balance.

"Not good," Gai said, almost in a whisper, as he narrowed his gaze at the gigantic creature. "Everybody, fall back!"

Knowing that the golem was about to counterattack, every ninja that could heard Gai did as he commanded, and even those who didn't just went with the flow and put distance between themselves and the giant monster again.

In response, the giant golem violently slammed a foot down, creating yet another quake accompanied by a rain of rocks and boulders, forcing the allied ninjas to fall back once again. The golem then uprooted another tree, and swallowed it whole in no time. Not only it regenerated most of the damage taken, but even slightly increased its size.

"Shit, we were so close!" Karin lamented.

"And it seems that it can grow from eating trees as well," Sakura.

"We need to bring that thing down. Or at the very least, stop it from moving," Tenten suggested, before looking at Karin. "Karin, do you think you could do that with your chakra chains?"

"I don't know," the bespectacled girl replied, as she looked at the golem with apprehension. "The only time I tried to restrain something so big was when we faced that other half of the Nine Tails, and back then I had help of people with Wood Release that could subdue it."

"But you are a Sage now. I presume that has to count for something," Neji said,

"I guess it does," Karin said. "Still, the chakra of that thing is ridiculous. Binding it it's not going to be easy."

"Nobody said it's going to be. But we believe you can do it, Karin," Neji assured her. "We just need that thing not to move for a few seconds, so we can take it down for good."

"Hey, what's doing?" Lee asked.

Everybody looked at their giant enemy, and much to their shock, it started making hand seals.

"The hell!? That thing can use ninjutsu!?" Sakura cried, shocked and angered.

The golem finished the hand seal sequence, and clapped his hands together. The very next moment, a few serpentine dragons similar to the one coiled around it sprouted from its body, albeit smaller in size, and letting out roars, lunged at the Allied ninjas as their neck/bodies extended, before they finally detached from the golem's body.

The wood dragons broke through the already shattered ground as if it were water, sending small rocks and pebbles everywhere, while trying to catch the Allied ninjas between their jaws, slam them with their snouts, or crush them with their bodies. This caused the allied ninjas gathered around the golem to spread even further in order to avoid the attack.

One of them went straight towards Karin, almost as if sensing that she was one of the most dangerous foes present. It was right, of course, as the redhead was about to show.

"Oh, my jutsu hurt your master even more than the others, right?" Karin said, as she leaped back, dodging a bite from the wood dragon. Her hands started to fly through hand seals. "I can assure you that this is going to hurt just as much! Sage Art: Earth Release, Tectonic Grip!"

As the wood dragon continued its chase, rocks and pebbles scattered around began to quickly gather together, taking the shape of a giant hand. Once formed, the hand grabbed the serpentine dragon by its midsection, stopping it on its tracks. The dragon started to thrash, letting out loud screeches, but was unable to break free.

"Okay guys, I have this one down! Burn this tree to ashes!" Karin yelled.

Karin's request was quickly replied in the form of a barrage of multiple elemental jutsu coming from the many nearby ninja around her. Blazes of fire, streams of water, blades of wind, lightning bolts and chunks of rock all collided against the dragon's head, blowing it up completely. The rest of the body withered and disintegrated into rotten pieces of wood almost instantly.

Meanwhile, Shizune was dealing with one of the other dragons, both dragging its attention to her, as well as trying to blast it with elemental ninjutsu.

"Sage Art: Water Release, Water Exploding Gun!"

Shizune fired multiple bullets of hypercompressed water from her fingertips. However, the serpentine dragon expertly zigzagged around her attacks, managing to dodge them, with the resulting water explosions merely soaking it.

Shizune was about to prepare her next attack when she felt the earth shake. The ground below her feet cracked open as the dragon's tail broke the surface, and tried to smack the black haired medic-nin, who leaped away, narrowly avoiding the hit.

"It hid its tail underground in order to catch me off guard. Even if they're merely wood constructs, these things have a mind of their own," Shizune noticed, before her feet touched the ground once again. The dragon tried to smash Shizune under its tail again. "That won't work a second time!"

Despite its superficial intelligence, the wood dragon wasn't aware that Shizune's Sage Mode granted her enough strength to catch its tail just before it could hit her. Shizune then gathered all her strength, and hurled the dragon back at the Wood Golem.

"Go back to your daddy!" the black haired Sage yelled.

Sadly, her aim wasn't as good as she was hoping, and missed the Golem by a large margin. The wood dragon crashed against a nearby tree, which was toppled down by the impact. Fortunately, the impact was strong enough to break the serpentine creature in several pieces.

Despite the fact that two of its serpentine dragons had been destroyed, the others managed to keep the rest of the Allied ninjas busy, and taking advantage of their predicament, the Wood Golem advanced once again, the ground shaking with each of its steps. Even with the remaining wood dragons, the rest of the ninjas fell back. That's it, the rest minus one.

Karin stood there, defiantly staring at the incoming colossus. Though aside from determination, her face also appeared to be pensive, as if coming up with an idea.

"Karin?" Sakura asked, upon seeing that the redhead didn't move. "Karin, what are you doing? Come on, we need to get away from that thing."

"I have an idea," Karin said, her eyes fixed onto the approaching giant. "It's kind of risky, but if it works, we'll have a good opportunity to destroy that thing in one hit."

"What? What idea- HEY, WAIT!" Sakura yelled, hurring after Karin, who started to sprint towards the golem. "What are you doing!? Are you insane!?"

"You don't have to follow me!" Karin replied. "Though I could use a bit of your help doing this!"

"Sakura, Karin! What are you two doing?" Shizune yelled. She was going after them, but unfortunately another wood serpent got in her way. "Dammit!"

As Karin and Sakura ran, the earth shook more and more violently with each step the golem took, no doubt the tremors being worse because they were getting close to it. Though Sakura could observe that the footsteps of the wooden construct were becoming deliberately heavier.

"Karin, I think that thing noticed us, and it's trying to stop us!" Sakura warned the redhead.

"What makes you think that?" Karin asked.

The golem delivered another stomp, this one with enough force to crack the earth even further, and send a rain of boulders and rocks towards the incoming kunoichi. The two of them managed to nimbly dodge the incoming chunks of rock, and use their chakra enhanced strength to destroy those they were unable to dodge.

"Well, that wasn't as bad as I thought," Sakura said.

"HA! That's the best you have, you oversized vegetable doll?" Karin taunted.

It seemed the golem heard the two kunoichi, because the next stomp carried much more power. It produced a shockwave that spread outwards in a circle, tearing the ground apart, sending the two kunoichi flying into the air.

"WHOA!" the two of them said at the same time.

"Regain your balance! We're almost there! We can't let this thing stop us!" Karin said, as she managed to land on her feet on the unstable land. She then jumped from one flying chunk of rock from another, followed by Sakura.

"I still don't know what the hell do you plan to do!" Sakura protested, following the redhead.

"You'll see shortly! Almost there!" Karin said, her feet touching the ground again. "Now rush forward and don't stop!"

"Karin! We're getting close to that thing's feet!" Sakura urged, panic seeping through her voice.

"I know! Use a mud jutsu to make sure it doesn't stomp the ground again!" Karin told her.

Even if she wasn't sure of the plan, Sakura started to make hand seals. "I'll need to put quite a lot of chakra into it to trap that thing. And even then, it won't last for long!"

"I only need a few seconds! If you can buy me that, I can do the rest myself!" Karin said.

Sakura reluctantly nodded, finished her seal sequence, and slammed both palms into the ground.

"Earth Release: Mud Trap! Earth Release: Crushing Avalanche!"

That moment, the ground between the golem's feet turned into mud. A tiny patch at first, but it quickly spread outwards, forming a large brea pit, deep enough for the golem to sink its feet into. It tried to break out of the trap, but the mud restrained its movement. Sakura's second jutsu manifested in a series of large rocks appearing above the pit of mud and falling onto it, creating a pathway that Karin could use to cross without being trapped.

"Well done, Sakura! Now get over here!" Karin told her, as she rushed under the golem's legs, hopping from one rock to the other, until she reached the other side. And once she was at an appropriate distance, she made her move. "Adamantine Sealing Chains!"

Multiple chakra chains shoot from Karin's chest, guts, arms and hands, small at first, but growing in size as they moved towards the golem. The chains wrapped around the arms, legs, body and the serpentine dragon coiled around its body. The redhead then grabbed all the chains, and using chakra enhanced strength in combination with the senjutsu enhanced strength, gave a mighty pull.

The golem, who was trying to remove the chains clinging to its body, was pulled backwards a little, but nowhere near enough to make it fall on its back. The wood colossus managed to pull the chains back, forcing Karin to direct chakra to her feet in order to stay stuck to the ground.

"Karin, hold on!" Sakura said, as she crossed the mud pit through the rocks she had created. "Help is on the way!"

Sakura quickly rushed towards Karin, and helped the redhead to push the golem down. However, even with the two of them combining their strength, it wasn't enough to topple the mighty green monster.

"It's too big!" Sakura said, as she continued to pull. "The rest need to push it from the front, so we can pull it from behind!"

"Hopefully the others will realize what we are doing!" Karin said.

The rest of the ninjas fighting the golem had fell back in order to escape from the shockwaves and tremors caused by its stomps. Fortunately for Karin, it happened to be the case, since Neji was observing the two kunoichi with a mix of interest and fear through his Byakugan. At first he didn't know what they were trying to accomplish, but once Karin released her chains, it was crystal clear.

"Neji? What are they doing?" Gai asked.

"They aren't trying to topple that thing on their own, are they?" Tenten asked.

"That's exactly what they're doing," Neji said, his eyes still fixed on them. "But they're unable to do it on their own."

"Then what are we waiting for? We should help Sakura-san and Karin-san! Especially now that that monster has been stopped on its tracks!" Lee said.

"Lee is right! Come on, we can't let this opportunity pass!" Gai enthusiastically agreed. "Everybody, let's go!"

Following Gai's lead and rallying cry, the nearby Allied ninjas all charged forward once again, firing elemental jutsu, while others leaped at the golem and struck it with all their might. Shizune, thanks to her senjutsu enhanced strength, and Gai and Lee, thanks to the Celestial Gates, were able to deliver quite the blows to the mighty golem, who started to tumble back.

While this happened, Karin and Sakura continued pulling the golem down from behind, and their efforts, with the help of the other Allied ninjas, finally paid off, as the golem lost its balance, and started to fall down on its back.

"Yes! We did it!" Karin said, as she looked in triumph at the toppling figure of the Wood Golem. However, she noticed that Sakura wasn't besides her anymore, but was running away like crazy.

As a shadow loomed over her while growing larger, it dawned upon Karin that the golem was about to fall right on top of her.

"SHIT! WAIT FOR ME!" Karin cried, as she run away as fast as she could.

The golem's back hit the ground -fortunately, Karin was able to escape in time, with a couple seconds to spare- once again producing a shockwave that made the whole earth tremble. That moment, Kurotsuchi flew down and started to bark orders.

"Quickly! Destroy the wood dragon wrapped around its body!" the Tsuchikage urged. "Before it gets back on its feet!"

"I'm on it!" Lee said, as he ran across the golem's body, rushing towards the dragon. The wooden serpent noticed both Lee and its intentions, as it tried to snap him between its jaws, but the green clad Special Jonin was too fast. Channeling as much chakra as he could through his body, Lee made his move. "Konoha Great Whirlwind!"

Lee jumped and delivered a spinning roundhouse kick that pretty much shredded the dragon's head into tiny bits of wood.

"Yes! Well done, Lee!" Gai cheered.

Not wasting any time, Kurotsuchi started to make hand seals, before clapping her hands together. "Everybody, move away from the golem, or else you might be turned into ashes! Dust Release: Atomic Dismantling Jutsu!"

Kurotsuchi brought her hands apart, summoning a cube of white light. She threw the cube at the fallen giant, and this time there was nothing to intercept it. Pouring as much chakra as she could, Kurotsuchi enlarged the cube of light until it covered the whole golem. There was a bright flash of light, and the cube disappeared. Where the golem once lied, there was now nothing but a rectangular shaped mark.

"Yes! The golem is no more!" a Kumo ninja cheered.

"All hail Tsuchikage-sama! It was her who sent it into the oblivion!" an Iwa ninja said.

"Hey, two Konoha kunoichi helped as well! Don't leave them out!" a Konoha ninja protested.

Before it could escalate into something uglier, Kurotsuchi intervened.

"Enough!" Kurotsuchi yelled. "We might have defeated a mighty foe, but this battle is far from over! We can celebrate later, now find some more enemies to kill!"

The Tsuchikage's orders had the intended effect, and soon most of the Allied ninjas dispersed across the battleground, in order to put an end to the remaining enemies.

"Commander," Neji called, as he walked towards Kurotsuchi. The Hyuga had his Byakugan fixed on her. "Are you okay? You may act tough, but I could see that you expended quite a lot of chakra on that one jutsu."

"I know, but I need to keep a brave face. The troops can't see their commander look weak," Kurotsuchi said. "It would be bad for their morale."

"It would be worse if they saw you die," Shizune interjected. "Come on, let me patch you up. I can do something to curb your exhaustion for a bit."

The Tsuchikage wanted to protest, but the rational part of her told her that she should listen to the black haired medic-nin. Sighed in defeat, the young Kage floated down towards Shizune.

...

As the battle against the Wood Golem happened, in another part of the battleground another fight was also making the ground tremble. Not because any of the combatants were as big as the aforementioned golem -though they were bigger than a normal human, that's for sure- but because whenever their blades clashed, the power behind each of the strikes faced against each other produced a shockwave that made the floor quake.

Two chakra constructs, one vibrant red, the other pitch black, with the shape of the upper half of humanoids encased in heavy armor. Itachi's was wielding a sword made of yellow flames on one hand, and a shield in the other, while Fugaku's was wielding two long katanas on each of its hands. So far, they did nothing but trade blows, but Fugaku was able to parry every one of Itachi's strikes, much to his frustration.

"I can't see any gap in his defense that I can exploit," Itachi said, his Sharingan carefully analyzing every centimeter of his enemy. "Even if I already defeated Father once, the situation changed too much. Any advantage I might had over him is long gone."

"Itachi!" Sasuke shouted. The elder brother looked at Sasuke, who didn't summon his Susanoo. "Let's attack from afar! The two of us together!"

"Sasuke, why aren't you using Susanoo as well?" Fugaku asked, the same question crossing Itachi's mind. "I thought you had the Mangekyo Sharingan!"

"I don't need it to beat you!" Sasuke spat back, though Itachi doubted his younger brother could back up that claim. "Come on, Itachi!"

Itachi nodded. The shield on his Susanoo disappeared, and its now empty hand summoned three spinning magatama linked by a circular thread, which were launched towards Fugaku's Susanoo as if they were a shuriken.

"Yasaka Magatama!"

"Amaterasu!"

Sasuke ignited the magatamas with his jutsu, forming a ring of spinning black flames. Fugaku's Susanoo brought its katanas together, merging them into a double bladed sword, and started to spin it as fast as it could. The double sword spinning raising a powerful wind, but that wasn't the move's purpose. Instead, the spinning blade served as an improvised shield that deflected the flaming magatamas, sending them away.

The chakra katanas caught fire, but Fugaku solved that problem by simply tossing them away, dispelling them and letting the black flames to fall on the ground, before instantly generating two new katanas, and joining them together into a new double blade.

"Dammit, no effect," Sasuke cursed, as he flinched, clearly fighting to stay on his feet.

"He has problems even with just Amaterasu. No wonder he refuses to use Susanoo," Itachi noted, as he worriedly looked at his brother. "Sasuke, are you okay?"

"Don't worry about me! Focus on the enemy in front of us!" Sasuke snapped.

Sasuke wasn't merely trying to distract Itachi from his issues, as Fugaku was preparing to attack. The black Susanoo raised its double sword above its head, and started to spin it again. A powerful tornado started to form around Fugaku's Susanoo, but the Uchiha brothers doubted that once again the wind was the attack.

And their assumptions turned out to be right when the black Susanoo tossed the spinning double blade at them.

"Sasuke, behind me!" Itachi cried.

Sasuke thankfully moved behind Itachi's Susanoo. As the spinning double blade flew towards them, raising powerful winds, Itachi quickly resummoned the Susanoo's shield on its left hand, and put it between itself and Fugaku, parrying the blow. The double blade continued spinning, grinding against the shield, resulting in a shower of sparks spreading everywhere. Eventually, both the shield and the double blade were sent flying away in different directions.

"Not even the Yata Mirror was able to completely nullify an attack of such power," Itachi lamented. "This is going to-"

"Itachi, watch out!" Sasuke cried.

Itachi's Sharingan registered Fugaku and his Susanoo moving to close combat distance, both blades coming down from different angles for a devastating strike. The elder brother only had time to raise his Sword of Totsuka in order to parry both blows. Still, his Susanoo was unable to absorb the force behind the double strikes, and was pushed backwards.

"Itachi!" Sasuke repeated, before turning his eyes towards Fugaku. The youngest Uchiha formed hand seals as fast as he could before unsealing a Fuuma Shuriken, which was instantly imbued with both electricity and fire. He tossed the shuriken at the enemy Susanoo, while making more hand seals. "Double Elemental Release: Plasma Shadow Clone Shuriken Jutsu!"

The flying star of steel, fire and lightning replicated itself a dozenfold, just before they all crashed against the black and red Susanoo, resulting in several explosions of fire and electricity. Sasuke was hoping that all the chakra he had spent on that jutsu was worth it, but when the smoke dispelled, he was disappointed to find that the damage done was lesser than what he expected. Fugaku's Susanoo had some missing chunks of armor, but that was about it.

"An impressive attack, son," Fugaku praised. "The last time I saw you, you were barely able to use the clan's signature jutsu. Yet now you're able to use two elements at once."

"Now you realize of my potential, don't you?" Sasuke bitterly replied. "One can go far when you have a willing teacher or mentor."

"Unfortunately, such attack won't be of help in the long run. If you expect to defeat me, you should use Susanoo," Fugaku told him. "Your brother can use it, why can't you?"

"This has to be a joke. Even in death, you can't help but compare me to him," Sasuke replied, his eyes flaring with anger.

"It is not my intention to put you down, but in this situation, it's inevitable," Fugaku began, his stare hardening. "If you can't use Susanoo, then you can't help your brother. Worse, not only you aren't helping him, but you're forcing him to protect you while he fights me. You're nothing but a distraction to him."

"SHUT UP!" Sasuke roared, a purple aura flaring around his body, followed by his Susanoo forming and taking shape.

" This is bad. Father's words only made Sasuke even more unbalanced. Now he uses his anger to maintain his Susanoo, but that won't last long," Itachi worriedly thought. "I need to end this fight as soon as possible!"

Itachi poured more chakra into his own Susanoo. Itachi started to float as his Susanoo's lower half developed, first the bones of two legs, followed by muscle and skin, and finally armor. Fugaku, however, showed that his skill with Susanoo was at least on par with his eldest son's, and Fugaku's Susanoo also reached the full armored humanoid stage.

Sasuke's Susanoo didn't reach that stage.

"So, it's going to be you and me, son," Fugaku bitterly said, as a memory came to his mind. "Like our last encounter."

"And just like in our last encounter, I shall be the one to come out on top!" Itachi said, as his Susanoo stomped forward.

...

Meanwhile, apart from the rest of the battles, Tsunade and Nagato continued their duel, each of them aided by the animals they were able to summon, many of them locked in a duel of their own, while Tsunade fought Nagato, his multi headed dog and his chameleon. Nagato was forcing Tsunade on the defensive by showering her with missiles generated by the Asura Path. Taking advantage of her predicament, the chameleon opened its mouth, ready to snatch the Sannin with its tongue.

Tsunade, however, already expected this and extended her hand towards it.

"Bansho Ten'in!"

The giant chameleon was yanked towards Tsunade by an invisible force, and the moment it was close enough, Tsunade sank her fist inside the reptile's flesh. The punch was hard enough to undo the summon.

"Yes! One vermin less-"

Tsunade was interrupted when she saw the giant multi headed dog ready to pound her. Unable to use the Deva Path again, the blond Sannin was forced to jump back. And it was that moment when Nagato choose to strike, as his hands weaved through hand seals.

"In your current predicament, you can't avoid this attack," Nagato announced, as he finished his jutsu. "Wind Release: Wind Scythe!"

Nagato motioned his arms in a wide arc outwards, creating several crescent shaped blades of wind, which flew towards the airborne Tsunade. Unable to use the Preta Path while she was moving, Tsunade did the only thing she could: call one of her summons for help. Said help came in the form of the giant bird, who dived down and shielded Tsunade from the wind blades with its own body. Not only had Nagato's jutsu enough power to cause enough damage to dispel the summon, leaving a cloud of smoke behind, but there were still a couple of blades of wind left that continued their way towards Tsunade. The blond woman braced herself as the attack connected, leaving deep gashes on her left arm and right side. Blood quickly began to pour from them.

"Heh..." Tsunade said, as she quickly brought one hand to the side, where the worst wound was, and started to heal it. "You managed to land a pretty good hit. Not bad, kid."

Nagato didn't say anything. That moment, the earth started to rumble, forcing Tsunade to jump away once again, a second before the giant centipede broke through the floor, sending rocks and pebbles flying in every direction.

"As famed as a medic you are, you won't have the time to heal your wounds," Nagato said, sounding like he was warning her.

"Kid, one doesn't get to be the best medic who ever lived if I was unable to heal myself while fighting," Tsunade retorted, sounding almost offended, as her feet touched the ground, her healing uninterrupted. "There's more to being a medic than mere medical knowledge."

"Let's hope you can back up those words with actions," Nagato said, remaining still.

That moment, both the centipede and multi headed dog rushed her. Fortunately, she could sense that her lobster had defeated Nagato's giant panda, unsummoning it. She mentally ordered the lobster to come to her and help her deal with the animals harrasing her. Unfortunately, lobsters weren't exactly known for their speed on land, and it wasn't close to her.

The first one to attack was the centipede, who slammed its head against Tsunade. She almost felt her body jumping away on her own, but she realized that was what the enemy was expecting, and instead of dodging it, she stopped healing herself and took the attack head on, grabbing the centipede by its mandibles. The dog then moved to attack the apparently defenseless Tsunade. "Apparently" being the key word, as with a mighty heave, Tsunade hurled the giant arthropod against the large canid, sending the two of them rolling aside.

Tsunade wasted no time and continued healing her injured side, and that moment, she could feel the rhino she had summoned being destroyed by Nagato.

"Shit, there goes another of my animals. Guess Nagato decided to focus on them while I'm busy, so he can overwhelm me with numbers," Tsunade thought, realizing the redhead's plan. "Now I only have one animal left."

Speaking of which, the giant lobster finally managed to reach her position. And just in time, as the centipede and the multi headed dog were back on their feet, and ready to attack again. The dog charged first, its many heads barking furiously, but it was intercepted by the lobster, who tackled it away. That still left the centipede to deal with Tsunade.

"Basho Ten'in!"

Of course, there was also Nagato himself, as the redhead reminded her through his actions. Tsunade was yanked from her position and hurl into the air towards Nagato. The centipede attacked in tandem, ready to eviscerate the Sannin between its jaws. Tsunade, however, was far from helpless, and cast her right hand towards the giant arthropod.

"Shinra Tensei!"

The gravitational push not only hurled the giant centipede back, but it also propelled Tsunade backwards, away from Nagato and the rest of his beasts. Nagato, however, wasn't going to give Tsunade any time to breathe, and his hands quickly flew through hand seals.

"Water Release: Wild Water Wave!"

Nagato expelled a huge conical shaped torrent of water from his mouth at the still airborne Tsunade. The Slug Princess, however, wasn't impressed.

"I saw what you were doing there, but it won't work this time!" Tsunade said, just as she landed with a loud boom, the ground cracking beneath her high heeled shoes, seconds before being engulfed by the incoming torrent. She raised a single hand forward, which started to glow with a white light. "Gakido!"

Through the power of the Preta Path, Tsunade absorbed the water jutsu, converting it back to pure chakra and adding it to her own reserves.

"Not bad kid, but you miscalculated!" Tsunade gloated.

"I can assure you, I did not," Nagato calmly replied.

That moment, Tsunade felt the earth rumble. Her one visible eye widened upon seeing the giant ox charging towards her, while letting out a loud bellow. Tsunade panicked, as she was still absorbing Nagato's jutsu, and thus couldn't move. She tried to absorb it as fast as she could, and finished just when the ox was on top of her. Tsunade jumped back to avoid being gored by the giant beast's horns, and even if she was able to dodge the horns, she was hit by one of the animal's legs, which send her flying, until she crashed against a tree, who promptly snapped in two.

Fortunately, despite her age, the Slug Sannin was resilient enough to withstand such a powerful hit. She could felt a couple broken ribs, though.

"Oh boy, this is going to hurt so bad tomorrow," Tsunade lamented, as she started to heal herself as fast as she could. And to make matter worse, she felt the last of her Rinnegan summons being defeated by Nagato and the rest of his animals. Tsunade was now alone while Nagato still had the multi headed dog, the centipede and the ox. "Well, shit."

"Tsunade," Nagato called. "Even with the Rinnegan, you're no match for me. I suggest you mimick the same thing the Raikage did, and run away before I take your life. I don't want more innocents on my conscience."

"Touching, but you know I can't do that," Tsunade replied, as she got back on her feet.

"You can't let your pride to get in the way. Orochimaru knows you have my other Rinnegan, and wants it for himself," Nagato said, sounding more worried. "Obito already has the other Rinnegan, you can't let this one fall in the wrong hands."

"Let me assure you that your concerns have been taken into account, and that no Akatsuki lackey, either willing or unwilling, will take this eye from my socket," Tsunade replied. If she could keep him talking, she could buy more time to heal herself. "Plus, I'm the only one capable of taking you down. You're too dangerous to let other people join this fight."

"You shouldn't be afraid to risk the lives of your comrades for the sake of defeating me," Nagato insisted. "I'm among Orochimaru's most powerful reanimations. Defeating me will deal Akatsuki a big blow."

"Like I said before, you don't have anything to worry about," Tsunade said, as she wiped some blood from her arm with her finger, and smeared it on her palm. "You WILL be defeated."

"Excuse me if I'm not that convinced," Nagato dryly said, as his remaining animals converged to him. "I have two Rinnegan eyes, while you only have one, not to mention that I'm more experienced wielding its power. All your summons have been destroyed, while I still have some at my side. So far, it appears that this fight will be solved in my favor."

"Good point. But you see, I have a little something that you don't have. A certain summon that's going to tip the battle in my favor," Tsunade said, as she made five hand seals. "Summoning jutsu!"

Tsunade slammed her hand into the ground, making Nagato and his animals to tense up, bracing themselves for whatever Tsunade was going to summon. When the initial burst of smoke dispelled, there was a small slug at Tsunade's feet. The slug quickly climbed Tsunade, and perched herself on the Sannin's shoulder.

"You ready, Tsunade-sama?" the slug asked.

"Indeed. You can begin now, Katsuyu," Tsunade said.

"That was your ace in the hole?" Nagato asked blankly. "I was aware you have a summoning contract, but I expected you to summon something bigger to counter the animals still under my command."

"Don't judge an opponent based on her size," Tsunade said, as she closed her eyes. That moment, blue marks appeared around her eyes, and when she opened them, they were golden instead of their usual hazel. "Or else you might get a nasty surprise!"

Tsunade quickly dashed towards Nagato, but the redhead reacted just in time, raising a hand towards her.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Tsunade was once again blown away by an invisible force, though unlike the other times, it did little harm to her. Meanwhile, Nagato jumped backwards while ordering his beasts to attack her at once.

"So, you have Sage Mode. Given that Jiraiya-sensei and Naruto had it, it shouldn't be a surprise," Nagato commented.

"Of course. I wasn't going to be the only one in my family to be left out," Tsunade said, as she regained balance, eyeing the giant animals charging at her.

"Good. That might give you an edge against me. After all, it was what allowed Naruto to beat me," Nagato said, looking now a little more hopeful.

"Oh, you have no idea, kid," Tsunade said, making the ram seal.

"Sage Art: Gracious Deity Gates!"

Suddenly, massive red torii fell from above on top of the giant animals, pinning them to the ground, leaving them completely immobilized. Several torii also fell on Nagato, but the undead ninja, being smaller and much faster than the lumbering animals, was able to dodge them expertly. Despite Tsunade's new power and his own unwillingness to fight, his body would continue fighting towards the very end.

"Do you like that? My grandfather created that jutsu!" Tsunade said.

"Now you proved to be more dangerous than initially assessed, I will be forced to use my most powerful abilities," Nagato said, as he cast an arm upwards. "Chibaku Tensei!"

Nagato shoot a gravity core the size of a marble into the sky, which quickly began to pull chunks of rock, tree branches, dirt and everything it could attract in order to form a satellite.

"On no, you won't! Not that shit again!" Tsunade shouted, as she leaped into the forming planetoid. The memory of how she almost lost Jiraiya -not to mention Konoha's potential destruction- due that jutsu was still fresh in her mind. She let the gravity core pull her into the forming planetoid, but once she was there, she resisted the pull and punched her way to the core.

Konan had explained to her in detail how every Rinnegan jutsu worked. The Chibaku Tensei was a sphere of superconcentrated chakra that generated a powerful gravitational field in order to form a planetoid. In order to disable that jutsu, the sphere of chakra needed to be destroyed.

Despite the enhanced endurance and resistance provided by Sage Mode, it was increasingly hard to dig her way to the core when more and more rocks were being blasted onto her body. Still, she was able to reach it relatively quickly. She placed her hand onto the core before more rocks could be pulled.

"Gakido!"

Using the Preta Path, Tsunade absorbed the gravity core, disabling the jutsu. The rocks that had been gathered to form the satellite quickly fell to the ground. Rather than fall, though, Tsunade took advantage of her position in order to leap at Nagato, who once again raised a hand to defend himself.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Tsunade was once again blasted backwards. However, she then grew another pair of arms, and fired the hands from those arms like they were missiles, while remaining connected to the forearms through cables. Tsunade's detached hands latched onto Nagato's shoulders just as she touched ground, before reeling the cables in, pulling Nagato towards her. And, after reaching close combat distance, she placed a hand on his forehead.

"Don't worry kid, this will be over soon," Tsunade empathically said. Nagato didn't say anything, he merely smiled. "Ningendo!"

Tsunade pulled Nagato's soul out of his artificial body, and let it return to the afterlife, where it belonged. Without a soul, Nagato's body quickly crumbled into a pile of dust and paper bits, revealing the corpse of the unfortunate victim Orochimaru had used to revive the redhead. The blonde Sannin let out a sigh of relief.

"Okay, one less headache," she said to no one in particular. She turned around, and run back towards the bulk of the battle. "Time to put an end to this."

...

At the same time Tsunade fought Nagato, Itachi and Sasuke continued their duel against Fugaku. Or more especificaly, Itachi and Fugaku fought each other within their respective Susanoo, while Sasuke watched impotently.

Itachi had proved in the past to be a superior swordsman to his father, and he believed that that would translate to the fight between Susanoo, only to find out how wrong he was. He didn't know why - but suspected that the fact that Fugaku was a remotely controlled reanimation had something to do with it-, but Fugaku's Susanoo moved much faster than Itachi's, and its blows were delivered with far more dexterity, attacking with quick, wide swings that were difficult to parry and pushed Itachi's Susanoo back.

Fueled by rage, Sasuke managed to bring his Susanoo to its armored form, but was unable to reach the full form. Still, deciding that it was better than nothing. A purple chakra bow appeared between the Susanoo's hands, and fired multiple arrows at Fugaku's Susanoo. But much to Sasuke's frustration, the black Susanoo parried them expertly with its double sword, almost making it appear as if it wasn't even paying attention to Sasuke. In a certain manner, it wasn't.

"Dammit!" Sasuke cursed, as his Susanoo wavered, his rage no longer being able to sustain the chakra construct, as the anguish and despair he felt over the idea of accidentally killing Naruto washed over his being, making him fall to his knees. "It's no good... I can't use the Mangekyo Sharingan... and without it, I can't help Itachi! Useless! Useless!" he shouted, slamming his fists against the ground.

He raised his gaze, and saw, unsurprisingly, Itachi being pushed back even further by Fugaku. This seemed to snap Sasuke from his brief pity party and return to his sense.

"No, there's no time to whine. Mangekyo Sharingan or not, I need to find a way to help Itachi," Sasuke said, as he got back to his feet and ran towards the two chakra giants. "Or else father's going to kill him!"

Itachi's Susanoo was struggling more and more against Fugaku's vicious attacks. Even if Sasuke couldn't harm Fugaku directly, if he could provide some distraction, it would buy his brother some seconds to breathe. His hands flew through seals.

"Fire Release: Great Fireball Jutsu!"

Sasuke breathed a fireball towards Fugaku's Susanoo, which had its back turned on him. The fireball hit its mark, but it didn't appear to cause enough damage. Undeterred, Sasuke breathed more fireballs, all of them hitting its mark. This time, they had the intended effect, as the black and red Susanoo turned around, its ugly visage focused on the youngest Uchiha.

"Sasuke, what are you doing!?" Fugaku called. "Get away from here!"

"Shut up, father!" Sasuke yelled back. "I will help Itachi no matter what!"

Sasuke didn't stop, and continued shooting fireballs at him. This time, Fugaku's Susanoo either moved aside to dodge them, flying into the sky until they were no longer seen, or blocked them with his double bladed sword, as it stomped towards him.

However, the youngest Uchiha had already accomplished what he set to do. Fugaku was no longer focused on Itachi, which gave him some much needed time to regain his force, and launch a surprise attack from Fugaku's back. However, much to his shock, Fugaku's black Susanoo sidestepped, allowing Itachi's red Susanoo to stumble forward, before the former delivered a brutal kick to the later, making Itachi's Susanoo fall to the side.

"That was careless on your part, Itachi," Fugaku said, sounding half disappointed and half worried.

"ITACHI!" Sasuke yelled, as he rushed towards his fallen Susanoo.

Unfortunately for Sasuke, Fugaku didn't forget about him.

"Sasuke, run!" Fugaku warned him.

He winded up the arm holding his double blade, before he tossed it at Sasuke. The youngest Uchiha could do nothing but stare at his incoming doom, his Sharingan allowing him to see the deadly blade coming at him almost in slow motion, but still not slow enough to dodge it. Then, there was a red blur, and Itachi's Susanoo suddenly appeared between Sasuke and the flying blade, parrying it with the sword of Totsuka. Unfortunately for Itachi, his weakened Susanoo was unable to absorb the force Fugaku's double blade carried, and was blown backwards, falling on its back.

"Itachi... !" Sasuke shouted again, this time his voice sounding weaker. His eyes shifted from Itachi's wrecked Susanoo, to Fugaku's incoming one. Once again, a feeling of despair took hold of his body, as an horrible realization dawned upon him: not only he wasn't even able to provide assistance to Itachi, but his presence was a distraction, forcing his older brother to protect him and take hits aimed at Sasuke.

Is this how it was going to end? After all his training, battles, experience... was this his end? Being killed alongside his brother by the raised corpse of the father that neglected him? Just because he wasn't able to overcome the trauma of awakening the Mangekyo Sharingan?

Rage flooded once again. Though, unfortunately, it wasn't the kind of rage one could channel into strength, for Sasuke himself was the target that rage. He hated himself for allowing this to happen.

" You're so focused on getting over the side effects of the Mangekyo Sharingan, that you can't see the path in front of you. Take a look at what your brother and Shisui did. They overcame their trauma of the Mangekyo Sharingan not because they aimed to do that, but as a side effect of setting a different goal. Try to emulate them. Set a goal. And you'll see how in the end, you can leave that moment behind."

Suddenly, Sakura's words from days ago echoed inside his head. Sakura... even if it was a bitter consolation, Sasuke was glad that his girlfriend wasn't there to see him. Not only because he didn't want her to witness his demise, but because he didn't want her to see him in such a sorry state of mind.

" Sorry, Sakura. I did try to follow your advice, but I was unable to," Sasuke mentally replied.

" Don't say your goodbyes so soon. I know it takes more than this to get rid of you, Sasuke-kun."

" Sakura? Is that your voice I'm hearing in my head?" Sasuke replied. "Or am I'm going insane now? I know the Mangekyo Sharingan can drive someone insane. It happened to Obito."

" Am I the real Sakura? That doesn't matter. What matters is what are you going to do now. It's not too late. You can still unleash the true power of your eyes, Sasuke-kun. You're not thinking clearly."

" No, I'm not," he admitted . "Facing father again... it awakened in me feelings I thought that left behind. How cold he was towards me. How he always forced me to live under Itachi's shadow. How when he finally warmed up to me it was because he had a disagreement with Itachi. And how he led our entire family to its doom for a mad quest for power."

" Not the best moment to overcome the trauma of awakening the Mangekyo Sharingan. But not an impossible task either. You should have done this before, but you can still do it now. There is still time."

" Always the optimist. Sorry, but I don't think I can set up a goal right now," Sasuke bitterly replied.

" Yes. Yes you can. Tell me, Sasuke-kun, what do you want?"

" It isn't obvious? I want to master the Mangekyo Sharingan so I can help Itachi, and don't be a goddamn dead weight he has to risk his life to protect!" Sasuke mentally shouted.

" No, that's not what I mean. What do you want, Sasuke-kun? What do you want to do with your life? What's your reason to be a ninja? What do you fight for? Every action you take, every fight you enter, every enemy you slay... what's the purpose behind those? What do you wish to achieve?"

" I... I want..." Sasuke began, as the ground shook, Fugaku's Susanoo dangerously approaching with each step. "I want to be a strong ninja. So I can protect what little family I still have. So I can make them feel proud of me."

" Good! What else?"

" I want... to clean the Uchiha name. The Uchiha Insurrection will be something that history will never forget, but I want future generations of Uchiha to be unburdened by such tragedy caused by their shortsighted ancestors. I want future generations of Konoha ninja to look at us again like they did in the past, with awe and admiration."

" Yes! But there's more, isn't it?"

" I want to be happy. I want my family to be happy. I want to see Shisui and Shizune-sensei's children to grow up into strong ninjas so they can look at them with pride. I want to see my brother happy after how much he suffered for me and for the village. I want to tell my girlfriend how much I love her, and that I'm looking forward to the future we have together..."

" Splendid! But I can still feel there's something else left..."

" Yes," Sasuke thought, as he got back on his feet. He could slowly feel how the despair and anguish slowly disappeared, being driven away by steel hard determination and burning hot righteous anger. His body felt lighter as the weight of the burden he carried since that fateful day was lifted from his shoulders. He glared at the incoming Susanoo. The pattern of his Eternal Mangekyo Sharingan formed on his eyes, as a purple aura surrounded him. "I want to find the one responsible for all our misery, the one that started this war... AND MAKE HIM PAY FOR IT!"

Purple light exploded around Sasuke, as his Susanoo formed around him. Skeleton, muscle, skin, and armor. And then legs. His Susanoo then grew in size until it almost matched Fugaku's. A sword appeared on its right hand, while an hybrid between a bow and a shield appeared on its left wrist.

"So... you finally did it," Fugaku said, his lips curving into a small smile. "Your Susanoo looks impressive."

"Just wait until you see it in action!" Sasuke said, as he commanded his Susanoo to advance forward.

Once again, Fugaku was forced to fight one of his sons. Sasuke managed to land few good early hits, but once Fugaku got a taste of Sasuke's Susanoo's fighting style, he was able to block and parry the youngest Uchiha's blows, and return them in kind. Eventually, Fugaku gained the upper hand, and just like he did with Itachi, pushed Sasuke back with a series of devastating blows with his double blade.

"I'm afraid that your second wind won't be enough to match me, son," Fugaku said, as he struck the purple Susanoo, making it fall on its back, producing a tremor. The black Susanoo raised its double sword over its head, before it brought it down.

However, Sasuke's Susanoo wasn't struck. All of sudden, Itachi's red Susanoo was between the two of them, parrying the blow with the sword of Totsuka.

"Maybe not. But between the two of us, we'll be able to beat you!" Itachi said, as he pushed the enemy Susanoo backwards. Sasuke's Susanoo got back on its feet. "You okay, Sasuke?"

"Yeah! Let's go!" Sasuke said.

Now finally fighting together, the two brothers fought their father. One would attack, forcing Fugaku to parry the blow, and before their father had the chance to counterattack, the other would strike at him, forcing him back. With this tactic, they locked their father on the defensive, depriving him of a way to attack them.

"Keep going Sasuke! Sooner or later, we'll be able to find an opening good enough for a killing blow!" Itachi encouraged.

"Yes!" Sasuke replied.

This time, the two of them brought their swords at once, which Fugaku blocked with the help of his double bladed weapon, struggling against the two brothers.

"Yes, between the two of you, you might have a chance at beating me," Fugaku said. "Unfortunately, this Susanoo isn't at its strongest level. I can still bring it to its perfect form."

Suddenly, Fugaku's Susanoo grew in size again, becoming broader and one head taller than Sasuke and Itachi's. The chakra construct developed a pair of feathered wings on its back, and an ugly mask resembling a tengu. A katana appeared on each of his hands, and merged them together by the handles, creating an even larger double blade.

"I hope you're prepared for THIS!" Fugaku said, as his Susanoo moved to attack.

The Perfect Susanoo moved forward, delivering a powerful blow with its double sword. Itachi's Susanoo took a step forward, and raised its shield to block it. Fugaku was undeterred and kept pressing the attack, forcing Itachi to fall back as he blocked the strikes with his shield or parried them with his blade. Then, all of sudden, Itachi jumped backwards and moved aside, dodging the attack.

"Huh?"

Purple filled Fugaku's vision as he saw Sasuke's Susanoo aiming an arrow at him. Sasuke let loose, and fired a purple bolt of chakra. Fugaku's Susanoo deflected the bolt expertly, but Sasuke fired more arrows in quick succession, forcing Fugaku's Susanoo backwards as he parried them, swinging its double blade.

"Yasaka Magatama!"

Itachi reminded Fugaku that he was still in the fight by firing several red magatama-shaped projectiles. Fugaku tried to deflect them as well, but his Susanoo was still reeling from Sasuke's onslaught, and was unable to block all of them. The magatamas exploded upon contacting, pushing the black Susanoo backwards.

"Not bad. Nice teamwork there," Fugaku praised. His Susanoo managed to regain his balance, and gripping his double sword, its blades started to glow with chakra. "But watch out! You still haven't seen what this Susanoo is capable of! Susanoo: Earth Piercing Heavenly Blade!"

Fugaku's Susanoo stabbed one end of its double blade into the ground, releasing a conic underground shockwave forward, tearing apart the earth as it traveled, sending rocks and chunks of earth everywhere.

"Sasuke, behind me!" Itachi yelled.

As Sasuke hid behind his brother, Itachi channeled more chakra into his Yata Mirror, which increased in size, and slammed it into the ground. The underground shockwave clashed against the shield, producing a huge explosion. However, even if the explosion managed to crack the shield, it protected the rest of Itachi's Susanoo.

"Sasuke, now!" Itachi said.

"You don't have to tell me!" Sasuke replied.

Sasuke's Susanoo jumped from behind Itachi's, and started firing purple chakra arrows at Fugaku's Susanoo. The Perfect Susanoo flapped its wings, and jumped into the sky.

"You won't evade me!" Sasuke shouted, as he started to make hand seals. "Susanoo: Infernal Release, Black Burning Arrows!"

Sasuke continued firing arrows at the airborne Susanoo, except this time they were coated in the black flames of Amaterasu. However, despite its huge size, Fugaku's Susanoo was fast and nimble enough to dodge all of them, and the arrows disappeared into the sky.

"Itachi, I have a way to end this fight for good," Sasuke said. "But we need to bring him back to ground level. I suppose you can't reach the Perfect Level?"

"I'm afraid not," Itachi replied, looking upwards. Fugaku's Susanoo was flying in circles above, them, like a bird of prey ready to strike its unsuspecting prey. "But I don't need to in order to bring him down!"

Then, much to Sasuke's surprise, Itachi undid his Susanoo.

"Itachi? What the hell are you-"

"I can't reach him with my Susanoo active. But I'm light enough for yours to throw me at father's Susanoo once its close enough. If I can latch onto him, then I can bring it down."

Sasuke looked at him, as if judging his idea. His face was a stony mask.

"Very well then," Sasuke said, as he commanded his Susanoo to pick Itachi up. "Just be careful."

"Watch out, here it comes!" Itachi warned.

And indeed, that was the moment Fugaku had decided to swoop down at them, raising a powerful gust of wind as he flew dangerously close to the ground.

"Now!"

With all his might, Sasuke hurled Itachi at the incoming Perfect Susanoo. Itachi's own Susanoo started to form around him, starting with the ribcage, but before it could properly develop, the hand of Fugaku's Susanoo extended forward and caught him between his fingers, shattering it, before flying back into the sky.

"You had a good plan, son. But you should remember that, even if I couldn't hear you from above, the Sharingan allows me to read your lips," Fugaku said in a chastising tone, watching his son struggle inside the giant chakra construct's grip. Blood started to trickle from Itachi's mouth. "I'm sorry son, I didn't want it to end like this."

"You have many reasons to be sorry, father," Itachi said. "But my death won't be one of them."

Itachi closed his eyes, and all of sudden, an explosion of light came from the former Clan Heir, blinding Fugaku. The former Uchiha Clan Head screamed as his eyes were seared by the burning light, made even worse by the enhanced vision provided by the Sharingan. The Susanoo unwittingly released Itachi, dropping him.

Itachi then wiped some blood from his mouth, and made hand five seals.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Itachi thrust his bloodied hand down, producing a burst of smoke, and from the smoke, a giant raven emerged, braking Itachi's fall.

"You shouldn't trust your Sharingan so much, given that it failed to see the flashbang I hid in my hand," Itachi whispered to himself. "Fly above him!"

The giant black feathered bird obeyed, and placed itself and Itachi above the still blinded Fugaku. Itachi's eyes morphed into his Eternal Mangekyo Sharingan form, as he aimed his vision at Fugaku's wings.

"Amaterasu!"

Black flames erupted around Fugaku's Susanoo's wings, consuming them almost instantly. Without wings, the so called Perfect Susanoo plunged towards the ground below, crashing with a thunderous boom.

The Impure World Resurrection's regeneration quickly healed the damage to Fugaku's eyes, allowing him to see again. Despite being wingless, the rest of his Susanoo was still in one piece. He'd only need to pump more chakra in order to regrow its wings and take to the sky.

"This is the end, father," Sasuke said.

Fugaku turned to see his son's purple Susanoo, its sword raised towards the sky, and its left hand coated in a mass of lightning.

"Sasuke? What are you going to-"

Fugaku was interrupted by a thunder. Looking up, he saw that the sky was covered in dark storm clouds. He could see the flash of light produced by lightning jumping from one cloud to another. It was then followed by a draconic figure made of pure lightning emerging from the clouds. Just what kind of jutsu was that?

"Susanoo: Kirin Lightning Blade!"

Suddenly, Sasuke's Susanoo rushed forward, its blade still raised. A powerful lightning fell from the sky, landing on Sasuke's Susanoo's blade, acting as a lightning rod, supercharging it with electricity, before the electrical blade was brought down.

Fugaku's Susanoo manifested once again its double bladed sword in order to parry the strike. However, it proved to be useless as Sasuke's attack cut through his defense as if it was made of butter, before striking the Susanoo itself. All the energy stored in the blade was released at once resulting in an explosion of white light that disintegrated Fugaku's Susanoo, as well as Fugaku himself.

Of course, being a reanimation, not even disintegration was enough to put Fugaku for good, and the bits of paper and dust he was reduced to quickly gathered and formed, regenerating his body. And once he was finally regenerated...

"Urk!"

... the Sword of Totsuka pierced his back, and went through his body, emerging from his chest.

"It is done," Itachi said. "Now I will seal you, father. And once Impure World Resurrection is undone, I'll release your soul into the afterlife."

"I... thank you, son," Fugaku said. "Thank you."

"Is there anything you want to say before I seal you?" Itachi asked.

"Since you're giving me the chance... yes," Fugaku weakly said. "Itachi... I'm sorry for the way I treated you. For what I forced you to do that night. I can't imagine what your life has been after that. Still, I'm proud to see that you become such a strong and loyal ninja, and that your conviction hadn't wavered since the last time I saw you."

Sasuke, his Susanoo no longer active, was now walking towards the two. He hadn't completely heard what Fugaku was saying, but he was able to read his lips. He walked closer, imagining, or at least hoping, that his father would have some last words for him.

"Sasuke," Fugaku said. "Come closer."

Said hope turned out to be true. "I'm here, father."

"Sasuke... I'm sorry the way I treated you too. How I wasn't the father you deserved to have. I tried to excuse myself by saying that being a Clan Head didn't leave me enough time to spend it with you, but we both know that that's a lie. I can't imagine either how the repercussions of my ill fated insurrection affected you, given that you were so young. But... I'm very happy and relieved to see the fine young man and ninja you turned out to be. I couldn't ask for a better son, Sasuke. All I ask you now is to follow the same path you're walking right now. You and your brother will be the ones to give the Uchiha Clan back the honor I made it lose. I love you, son."

"I... I love you too, father," Sasuke said, as his eyes started to get wet. He mentally chastised himself for getting so emotional, but he struggled to fight the tears back.

Itachi took Fugaku's silence as his cue, and sealed him completely inside the Susanoo's gourd.

"Hey, brother," Itachi said, as he walked towards Sasuke, the red Susanoo fading into nothingness. "Are you okay?"

"No," Sasuke replied. "But I will be."

"This fight had to be very hard on you, Sasuke," Itachi said, placing a hand on his shoulder, and slowly pulled him into a hug.

"Is this what you felt when you had to fight all of our clansmen eight years ago?" Sasuke asked.

"More or less. Though I think it was worse back then," Itachi told him. "After all, our clansmen were living people back then."

There was a moment of silence, as the two brothers stood there, motionless. After a minute, Itachi spoke again.

"I believe the battle is still going on," Itachi said, finally breaking the hug. "Now that we're done with this, we should go with the others, and help them."

"Agreed. But..." Sasuke's voice wavered. "Just give me a second."

Itachi smiled at him. "Of course."

Thanks to Sasuke's Kirin, the dark storm clouds around them started to disperse, allowing light to flood the forest around them. And as the Uchiha brothers looked at the shining sky, they could feel how the emotional wounds that had been there since that fateful night eight years ago were finally beginning to close.

Author's Note: And thus, with Sasuke finally learning to forgive himself and mastering the Mangekyo Sharingan, his character arc finally comes to an end. Gotta say, thinking how he was going to do it was a bit of a pain in the ass, mostly because I'm not that confident writing for Sasuke. I hope that it wasn't too corny. And to clear any potential confusion, no, the voice Sasuke heard wasn't Sakura talking to him via telepathy, but a part of Sasuke's subconscious which happens to sound like Sakura, since she's been the one trying the hardest to make sure Sasuke forgives himself. Oh well, I'm glad I can finally put that behind me.

Some people might be a bit upset that Mikoto wasn't featured. Originally I was planning to have Mikoto be part of the battle, but I discarded her for two reasons: the first being that, lacking a Susanoo, wouldn't contribute much to the fight. And second, I felt that her presence was a little redundant, and that Fugaku was just enough. You may say that I could have her fight somebody else, but then her fight wouldn't have much emotional weight behind it and she'd feel like a wasted character. So seeing no winning options, I simply choose not to use her.

Even if not as emotionally charged, I hope you guys also enjoyed the resolution of the battles with Nagato and the Wood Golem.

Next chapter, the aftermath of not just this battle, but the battle the First Division lost as well. In the meantime, don't forget to leave a review with your thoughts on this chapter, regardless if it's a long or a short one. Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Embers

Author's Note: After the last chapter, this story has now more than two million pageviews! Wohooooo! I never imagined that I'd write a story with more than one million, much less two. Thanks a lot to all of you guys, you made it possible.

Now, onto the next chapter:

Chapter 116:

Embers

or

Some rest at last

Undisclosed Location, a few days before the present time

"There he is!"

"Don't let him escape!"

"Be careful, that guy can kill you in one hit if you let him!"

Jugo was a man that, above all things, appreciated the quiet and calm.

Calm that he was denied due to being born with a Bloodline Limit that brought his most primal, animalistic, and downright violent impulses to the forefront, transforming him into a sadistic monster, both on the inside and the outside. His only hope was to seclude himself on a cave and pray that nobody would get close to him, since he didn't want to have more blood on his hands.

That's it, until a certain white haired man arrived, an Otogakure ninja by the name of Kimimaro Kaguya. Not only did Kimimaro managed to subdue Jugo when he succumbed to the rage and the violence of his curse, but introduced him to Orochimaru, a man who promised to help Jugo if he allowed the man to research his genes. Naturally, Jugo accepted.

Jugo spend most of his time under Orochimaru locked inside a cell, not that he would have wanted anything else. From time to time, Kimimaro would visit him and tell him about the missions the last member of the Kaguya clan completed. Then, one time Kimimaro requested Jugo to accompany him to a mission, to capture some old ninja from Iwa. Kimimaro almost lost his life to the dreaded Itachi Uchiha, but in the end, the mission was a success, and Orochimaru only lost one man to the enemy.

Then, Kimimaro visited for what he felt would be the last time in a long time, to tell him about the war that was going to happen. The days following that, silence reigned. The base was almost entirely empty, devoid of any activity. The only visits he received were the Oto ninjas who brought him food and water twice per day.

Until one day, the silence was no more. He could hear screams, shouts, metal clashing against metal. He was then released by an Otogakure ninja, and his words made no sense.

"There has been a revolt! They outnumber us! You have to help us!" the Oto ninja cried.

Those were his last words, as the man was then slain, much to Jugo's surprise, by another ninja also wearing Otogakure's uniform. So, these people would dare betray Orochimaru-sama? He would make them regret it.

At first, Jugo had no trouble beating the ninjas who tried to fight him, only needing a smidge of his curse to even the odds and stay at a comfortable advantage. Then, she showed up. And with a few jutsu, she showed that he wasn't a rival to her. The orange haired man decided that the best thing he could do was to escape and find either Kimimaro or Orochimaru-sama, and warn them about the betrayal among their own ranks.

So that's how he found himself running away from men that by all accounts should have been his comrades, but were now his enemies.

"Earth Release: Mud Trap!"

Suddenly, the ground beneath Jugo's feet turned into a pit of mud, breaking his escape, as he started to slowly sink. This trap would stop most ninjas, but most ninjas weren't Jugo. Activating his curse, Jugo grew several tube-like appendages on his back. Said appendages fired jets of chakra, propelling the orange haired man upwards, allowing him to escape.

Escape which was also short lived as the ball end of a kusarigama wrapped its chain around his ankles, making him drop to the ground. Growling, Jugo pulled the chain, and the hapless ninja with it, towards him, before slamming his fist on the man's face, sending him flying backwards. He didn't know if the man was dead or not, and frankly he didn't care.

More traitors landed around him, weapons drawn. They were cutting his escape, but not for long. All he need was-

"Wood Release: Wood Binding Jutsu!"

Too late. Multiple wooden roots broke from the ground beneath him, and quickly wrapped themselves around his body and limbs, immobilizing him completely.

"Well done," the jutsu caster, a young white haired woman in an Otogakure uniform, said as he landed near them. She walked towards Jugo, and smiled. "Now he won't escape."

Jugo growled at her. "We always knew that there were traitors among our ranks. But you, Orochimaru-sama's own daughter, to be one of them, is beyond shameful."

Hebiko's face morphed into a mask of fury, stomped towards Jugo, and slapped him across the face. "Traitor!? You think I'm a traitor!?" she screeched. "It was our beloved father who abandoned his son and my brother to Konoha! Then he promised me that he wouldn't rest until he was back with us, but he lied! He lied to me, and lied to him!"

"You were the one who killed Kabuto, right?" Jugo asked, as he now realized who was behind the silver haired medic-nin's mysterious death. "You now lash at Orochimaru-sama by killing people he considers valuable."

Hebiko turned around, and seethed. "I'm done with Orochimaru. I want him to pay for his betrayal, to lose everything he has and cherish. Though my reasons behind killing him were more pragmatic rather than emotional."

"Then what do you want to do with me?" Jugo asked.

Hebiko turned around, and gave him an unnerving smile. "You're a bargaining chip. Wood Release: Blooming Garden!"

That moment, flowers started to grow on the roots that were immobilizing Jugo. They reached maturity in a few seconds, and upon blooming, showered the orange haired man with glittering yellow pollen. The moment he inhaled that pollen, Jugo fell deeply asleep. Tentatively, Hebiko released Jugo from the restraining roots, and he fell to the floor like a puppet whose strings had been cut. Yes, he wouldn't move in quite some time.

"It is done. Bind him, and cover him in chakra suppressing seals. I saw him in action, and while he lacks finesse, his raw power is impressive," Hebiko ordered. Two of her men were already picking the unconscious Jugo up, and dragged him away. "Then burn this place down. We're already done here."

"Yes ma'am!" the rest of the ninjas say.

"Once we finish this task, what are we going to do next?" one of her ninjas asked. "Where are we going?"

"To the Ninja Alliance HQ," Hebiko said. "It's about time to get my brother back."

...

Land of Fire, Nighttime, present time

After the battle was over, Division Commanders A, Kurotsuchi and Tsunade ordered their troops to find a suitable place for a base camp. The first order of business was to attend the wounded and gather the dead. The second order of business, naturally, was to report HQ of the result of their battle. The three of them were now inside the Communications Tent, with Ino Yamanaka being the one linking their minds to those in HQ.

" Congratulations for your victory," Jiraiya's voice said, sounding satisfied. "This will bring us one step closer to put an end to this war."

A grumbled, clenching his fist. "This wasn't much of a victory if we needed no less than three divisions to break their advance."

"I'm afraid I'll have to give it to the big guy," Kurotsuchi agreed with a nod. "We've been winning most of the battles, but I have this feeling that Akatsuki is just playing with us. The quality of the reanimations have been increasing with each passing battle. I'm afraid of what are they going to throw at us next."

"Tsunade and her Rinnegan were of much help this battle, but she can't be in every battle at once," the Raikage concluded.

" I see your point. We're suffering many casualties," Jiraiya's voice said, as Shikaku's image flashed in their minds for second. A tear dropped from Ino's eyes hidden by the psychic enhancing helmet. "But so is Akatsuki. We destroyed many of their Zetsu Clones, as well as their reanimations."

"But Orochimaru can replace the reanimations we kill, can't he?" Kurotsuchi asked.

" Technically yes, but I'm afraid it won't be that easy," Jiraiya replied. "Impure World Resurrection needs a living sacrifice to reanimate somebody, and I presume Orochimaru isn't in position to kidnap people to kill. Also, according to our research of the jutsu, the piece of DNA used to revive the intended target is consumed by the jutsu, and I'd bet the royalties of my Icha Icha series that Orochimaru used most of his available DNA of the deceased ninjas to create this batch of zombies. The fact that we haven't seen any of the zombies we previously destroyed support this claim."

" Still, to let such line of thinking drop our guard when we don't have hard evidence to sustain it would be beyond foolish," Chiyo's voice chimed in.

"Relax, nobody said anything about dropping our guard," Tsunade replied, rolling her eyes. "If anything, I'd say that things will get even harder from this point onwards. There are many ninjas that Orochimaru could have resurrected but we haven't seen yet. Like former Kages."

" Did Orochimaru resort to do that in the past?" Ao's voice asked.

" Indeed. When he attacked Konoha a few years ago, he had brought the First, Second and Fourth Hokages with him," Jiraiya explained. "The fact that he was able to resurrect my former apprentice is especially troublesome, given that his soul should be sealed inside the stomach of the God of the Dead."

"And now that he has a much greater mastery of the jutsu, he will resurrect them, as well as more Kages to bolster Akatsuki's forces," A said.

The Raikage clenched his fist even harder when he realized that his late father, the previous Raikage, would be among those resurrected. The Third Raikage was one of the strongest ninjas Kumo ever produced, being more than a match for the Eight Tails, and needing an army of ten thousand Konoha and Suna ninjas fighting him for three days straight until he finally died of exhaustion.

He wondered if he'd be able to fight his father if his worst fears went to pass. He heard how Fugaku Uchiha, who was among the reanimations that contributed to his previous defeat, had been fought and destroyed by his two sons. He didn't want to imagine what those two kids had to feel while they were fighting that mockery of their deceased father.

Then there was also the Copy Ninja Kakashi, who also had to put down his own father, the White Fang, as well as the father from Takigakure's young leader. And of course, the father of the Yamanaka girl that was now linking their minds with HQ, the one who had scanned his mind looking for the jinchuriki's hideout.

"By the way, I have bad news," A interceded. "During my division's battle with Akatsuki, a reanimation of what I've been told was the former Yamanaka Clan head," Ino flinched upon hearing that. The fact that her father was still out there tormented her. "Managed to ambush me and scan my mind. Despite my best efforts, he was able to pry from my mind the location of the three jinchuriki."

"What!?" Tsunade said, almost screaming, turning at him.

" These are grave news indeed," Onoki's voice said.

" Raikage, you know that island. What are Akatsuki's chances of finding it?" Jiraiya asked. His tone was firm, but the Raikage could tell that there was worry in his voice.

"I'd say null, since I gave explicit orders to move the island daily to minimize the chances of being found," A replied. "But if they have those flying Zetsu looking for it from the sky... I'd say they do have a chance to find it."

"That would explain why we saw so few flying Zetsu lately," Kurotsuchi said, placing a hand under her chin. "They must be using them to scour the skies. I think we should send reinforcements to the island."

"No. If we do that, Akatsuki might follow them and find it even faster," A countered.

"I agree with the Raikage," Jiraiya said, "I'll send a messenger toad to tell them to keep their eyes open, and to expect a potential attack. Anything else you might want to tell me?"

"Oh yes, there's something more," Kurotsuchi said, before looking at Tsunade. "And given that Tsunade is with us, she may offer some insight on the subject."

Upon hearing this, Tsunade raised an eyebrow.

"What is it, granddaughter?" Onoki's voice asked.

"Today Akatsuki send a new weapon against us. Not a new kind of Zetsu or reanimation but... a colossal creature made of wood," Kurotsuchi said. "I heard some Konoha ninjas called it a 'Wood Golem', and is related to the First Hokage."

"A Wood Golem?" Onoki's shocked voice said. "Good grief!"

"I take you're familiar with the creature. And that it's not good news," Kurotsuchi said.

"Yes. The Wood Golem was my grandfather's most powerful jutsu that didn't involve Senjutsu," Tsunade said. "It's powerful enough to match any Tailed Beast in combat. And you say that you fought against one?"

"Well, not me alone. I had hundreds of other ninjas backing me up. Some of them Sages, from what I've been told," Kurotsuchi said. "But if it wasn't for Dust Release, I don't think we would have been able to put that thing down for good."

"This begets a question," Jiraiya interceded. "HOW did Akatsuki managed to summon a Wood Golem?"

"It isn't obvious? Somebody among Akatsuki's ranks with Wood Release created it," A replied. "After all, both Obito and those Zetsu monsters have the cells of the First Hokage."

"Is not that simple," Tsunade said, shaking her head. "Like I said before, the Wood Golem was one of my grandfather's most powerful jutsu. No other Wood Release user in Konoha, either born with it like my youngest daughter or gained it through artificial means like Tenzo or Rin Nohara were able to replicate a jutsu of such scale."

"Indeed. That's like saying that any Water Release user should be able to flood a coast city with a tsunami," Jiraiya agreed.

"It is as we feared," Chiyo's voice was heard. "Akatsuki hasn't even deployed their most powerful assets yet. I'm sure that wasn't the only giant golem they have in reserve."

"Did any of our scouts find the location of Akatsuki's base?" A asked.

"Unfortunately, we didn't," Jiraiya replied. "We do know that at the very least, Orochimaru has to be relatively close to his reanimations if he wants to directly control them."

"Some of our best sensors are working on it, but given the jutsu's range, it leaves us with quite a vast area to search," Ao's voice interceded.

"Let's hope Naruto and Fu can finish their training soon," Tsunade said, letting out a sigh, her arms crossed. "Not only are they in danger, but I'm afraid we're going to need them in the front lines."

"Yes. I'd say that Akatsuki has yet to do their worst," Kurotsuchi said, shaking her head.

"Fortunately, our casualties are lower than Akatsuki's, plus we still have the Fourth Division completely fresh," Jiraiya replied, trying to sound positive. "So, anything else you need to report?"

The two Kages and the one Sannin looked at each other, but none of them said anything.

"No, we believe that's all," A said.

"Very well then. In that case, let's wrap this meeting up. Go and have some rest," Jiraiya said.

Ino undid the mental link, and everybody left the communications tent.

...

As with every other aftermath of a victorious battle, the mood around the Allied Forces was that of celebration. Many ninjas were sitting around bonfires, sharing meals, chatting with each other, and having a good time, as they enjoyed the feeling of surviving another battle, and that the fact that with each victory, the war'd end was a little closer.

Not everybody was in the mood for celebrations, though. As with every battle, many ninjas lost their lives. And those who died in the line of duty had friends and loved ones, some of them who were also part of the same division. And while many learnt of their loved ones' deaths after the battle, others were unfortunate enough to see their friends and family dying before their very eyes.

Such was the case of Shikamaru Nara. After he saw his father being gutted by the zombie of Fugaku Uchiha, the now Nara Clan Head remained strong for the sake of his friends and comrades, and pushed his feelings of sadness and sorrow away, and continued to do so until reinforcements arrived.

Though, now that the immediate threat was finally over, Shikamaru didn't have to repress his feelings anymore. That's why he looked for a place away from the large crowds, sat down, and cried his eyes out, until his eyes could shed no more tears. It made him realize something: when Inoichi died so many years ago, he thought he could understand how Ino felt, given that both he and Choji were pretty close to her dad. However, now that it was his own father who died, he realized it was much worse.

"Hey."

Shikamaru looked up, a bit startled, since he wasn't expecting anyone to find him there. Then again, if there was someone who could that, that was his Jonin-sensei Asuma.

"Oh... hey," Shikamaru greeted back.

"Do you mind some company?" Asuma asked, noticing Shikamaru's reddened eyes. "It looks like you need it."

Shikamaru didn't say anything. He did want to be alone, but the rational part of his brain told him that talking to a friendly face would do him good. The young Nara nodded, and the Sarutobi Jonin sat besides him.

"First of all, let me tell you I'm very sorry," Asuma said, placing a hand on Shikamaru's shoulder. "Even before taking you under my wing, I was close with your dad. He was a great man. He didn't deserve to die like that. He didn't deserve to die in this war, either."

"Just like how Ino's dad didn't deserve to die in the Uchiha insurrection, along with many others," Shikamaru said, letting out a mirthless chuckle. "You know, I should have expected this. I mean, we're ninjas, death is part of our job description. You hear missions going wrong and ninjas dying all the time, but those are people you don't know, and you think it's never going to happen to you... until it does."

"We might be ninjas, but we're also human," Asuma told him. "Feeling sad for those who left us behind is only natural."

"I know..." Shikamaru said. "You know, I'm happy that Choza was assigned to that Kumo secret island, away from the battles. At least one of us will still have a father when all of this ends."

"Also, why are you here, all on your own?" Asuma asked. "Given what you're going through, you should share how you feel with your friends. I'm sure they'll make going through this much easier."

"I didn't want to bother them... and I didn't want them to see me like this," Shikamaru replied, his voice almost a whisper. "Plus... I wanted to be alone."

"Yes, I can understand that feeling," Asuma said, nodding. "But in my own experience, that's never good. You have wonderful friends, Shikamaru. Friends who are in this very same division. Don't push them away when you need them the most."

"Your own experience?" Shikamaru repeated, as the gears in his brain started to turn, and quickly realized whom he was talking about. "Oh, right, Biwako Sarutobi..."

"My mother, yes. She died the night the Nine Tails attacked, though ironically, she wasn't killed by the beast, but by that damn Uchiha traitor," Asuma said almost in a growl, his hand clenching into a fist at the memory. "And I wasn't the only one who lost family or friends that day. My wife also lost her father. Kakashi lost his sensei."

"Iruka-sensei also lost his parents that night," Shikamaru remembered.

"Yes. This life is far from easy," Asuma said. "That's why relying on others when we're at our lowest moments is so important. The pain didn't go away in an instant, and in a manner of speaking, it never went away. But my friends and remaining family made that pain a little less unbearable."

"There you are!" a new voice said.

Shikamaru raised his eyes, and saw Ino and Choji approaching him. While maybe not bad as him, the two of them looked like they also did their own share of crying.

"Shikamaru... what are you doing here?" Choji asked.

"Asuma-sensei?" Ino asked.

Asuma didn't say anything, and merely nudged Shikamaru. The young Nara got up, and took a step towards his teammates.

"I... sorry guys..." he felt like crying some more, but his reddened eyes were completely dry. "I just wanted to be alone..."

"No, it's... it's okay..." Ino said. "I felt the same way when... when my dad died."

Then, without any warning, Choji pulled Shikamaru into a hug, hug that Ino joined in as well.

"Hey man... just so you know... we're here for you, okay?" Choji asked, tears streaming from his eyes.

"You were there for me when my dad died, and I'll be here for you as well," Ino added, crying as well.

"Yeah! We're the Ino-Shika-Cho! As long as we have each other, nothing can stop us!" Choji said, trying and failing to reel in his tears.

"I... thank you... thank you guys..." Shikamaru replied, his voice quivering.

...

Meanwhile, at other side of the camp, while a member of the Koniha 15 was mourning the death of his father, another reunited with his.

"Father," Neji said.

"Neji!" Hizashi said in surprise, rushing to greet the young man. Hikari was slowly walking behind him, leaving the man enough space as not to intrude with the reunion. "My son! I'm so glad to see you're okay! How have you been?"

"I've been good, father. Despite the constant danger, I never felt myself in danger." Neji reassured him. He then looked at Hikari, and bowed. "Hikari-sama."

"Come on Neji, you can drop the honorific already. I'm not the Clan Head anymore. 'Aunt Hikari' would be fine," the woman said.

"I'm sorry Hikari-sama, I mean, aunt," Neji replied, bowing again. "Even if I treasure being free from the yokel of the Caged Bird Seal, there are some habits that are a bit hard to break. Anyway, I can see that the two of you have been doing good. You don't appear to have any kind of visible wound."

"Physical, maybe. Our wounds are more internal, boy," Hizashi said.

"Your father and I were forced to fight the undead reanimation of my late husband," Hikari said, as she averted her gaze.

A frown developed on Neji's face, as he clenched his fist. "Of course. Hiashi-sama was a formidable ninja. It's only logical that Orochimaru would decide to recruit him for his army of abominations. I trust you dealt with him?"

"Yes. My brother returned where he belonged," Hizashi said. "Still, fighting him was a harrowing experience."

"There were many of our clansmen that that traitor raised as his undead slaves," Hikari said, her face contorting into an angry grimace. "Not only Akatsuki was responsible for the greatest blow our clan ever suffered, but now they have to reopen old wounds and rub salt into them."

"This war is unlike any other ever fought, indeed," Hizashi said. "Akatsuki is not only using brute force, but they expect to demoralize us by forcing us to fight our late loved ones. We must not fall to such cheap tactics."

Hikari let out a weary sigh. "I know. But it's easier said than done."

"You weren't the only ones fighting a loved one. I heard that Sasuke and Itachi Uchiha had to fight their father," Neji told them. "I managed to catch some of the fight through my Byakugan, and I can confirm that they were the only ones capable of fighting him on even terms."

"Poor kids. They didn't deserve that," Hizashi said, shaking his head. "Let's hope they don't have to go through such horrible experience again."

Neji couldn't help but raise an eyebrow. "I must say, I wasn't expecting you to show so much sympathy to the Uchihas. Did Natsu getting close to Itachi changed all your perception of them?"

"Itachi Uchiha helped evacuate our weakest clan members during the Akatsuki's invasion of Konoha. We owe him a lot," Hizashi explained.

"Plus, we know that neither him, nor Sasuke or Shisui are like the rest of his clansmen who betrayed the village for power," Hikari added.

"Too bad there's still one Uchiha left that's a rotten apple," Neji replied, reminding his father and aunt of Obito.

"Indeed. But thankfully, his days of undermining Konoha will soon come to an end," Hizashi said. "Not only is he's losing more and more troops with each battle, but he also lost the puppets from that Toneri man."

"Really?" Neji asked.

"There were reports from a couple battlefields of the puppets suddenly stopping working all of sudden," Hizashi explained. "And we haven't seen any more since those news arrived."

"Then that means that Hinata's mission was a success," Hikari said, placing her hands over her heart. "Hopefully she will come back to us soon enough."

"And with her help, the war will end even sooner."

...

"There you are!"

Choji was a bit startled by the girl shouting behind him, but when he turned around and saw Karui walking towards him, he smiled.

"Hey, Karui!" he said, waving at her, as he walked towards her as well, meeting the Kumo Kunoichi in the middle.

"So..." the redheaded kunoichi began, rubbing her arm, looking a bit uneasy. "... how is your friend?"

"You mean Shikamaru?" Choji asked. Karui nodded. The Akimichi heir's expression understandably saddened a little. "Not too good. But that's as expected. He saw his dad being killed in front of him. That's not something he's going to recover from soon. Though he said he's going to make an effort in order to keep his head in the war."

"Poor guy. It has to be tough, to repress his feelings like that," Karui replied, as she and Choji started to walk together towards nowhere in particular. "But maybe that's how he chose to honor his father's memory. I still remember when the news of B-sensei's capture of Akatsuki reached us. Both my teammates and I were so devastated... and I decided that the best we could do is to continue with our jobs to the best of our ability for that same reason, albeit in our case we were lucky he turned out to be alive."

"Shikaku was Konoha's Jonin Commander, and he took his job pretty seriously, so yeah, I can believe that that's what he'd want Shikamaru to do. At least, as long as the war continues," Choji said, sounding downtrodden.

"So, where is he? I don't know him much, but I want to give him my condolences," Karui sympathetically said.

"Um, he said he felt tired and went to his tent right now in order to sleep," Choji told Karui, who deflated a little.

"Well, he isn't going to get much sleep with all the noise going around us," Karui said, looking around to all the celebrating ninjas around them, as well as the multitude of bonfires.

"Eh, besides his intellect and strategical skills, one of Shikamaru's biggest talents is being able to sleep pretty much anywhere and anytime," Choji replied, making the redhead chuckle a little. He then sobered up a little. "We better let him rest. He might feel a little better tomorrow."

"If I don't see him, please give him condolences on my behalf," Karui requested.

"Will do," the Akimichi replied.

There was a moment of silence. Then, Karui began to think about something Choji had said earlier, and asked: "Were you and your friend's dad close?"

"Yes. Our clans have been pretty close to each other, as well as Ino's clan," Choji began. "And thus, Shikaku was not just like an uncle, but like a second dad to me and Ino."

"I've never heard of three clans being that close to each other," Karui noted. "Or at least, being so close yet still remain relatively independent."

"Yeah. I know our clans are something of an aberration. Before the time of the villages, some clans would make alliances here and there, but never permanent or even long term. Our clans, though, became so close upon realizing how our unique jutsu worked so well with each other," the Akimichi Clan heir explained.

Karui looked pensive, as if analyzing Choji's words. "Well, I kind of understand that. After all, clan unity was the foundation of the ninja villages. Yours started earlier than the rest."

"Though, speaking of clans, and now that I think about it... I don't think you ever told me your last name," Choji told him.

"Oh. Well, I do have a last name, but in Kumo, we don't give them much importance, so we don't use them that often. Mostly for legal matters and stuff like that," Karui told him.

"That's... pretty odd," Choji said.

"That's how Kumo rolls. The first Raikage wanted to make sure that his ninjas were Kumo ninjas first, everything else second, as a way to create unity and avoid clashes between the clans that formed the fledgling village, so he wanted to downplay clan identity in favor of village identity," Karui explained.

"Heh, I don't think if such thing would have flown in Konoha. The clans that formed it, mine included, were very proud of their name, history and identity," Choji mentioned.

"Well, people didn't nod and happily accepted such thing at first. The original clans that formed the nascent Kumo were like that as well, if history books were anything to go by," the redhead continued.

"That's why the first Raikage, in order to set example, not only did he give up his clan name, but his own name as well, and merely adopted the name 'A', as a symbol of being a servant of Kumo first and foremost. The following Raikages did the same as well."

"Wait, so your Raikage isn't really named 'A'?" Choji asked. "Well, it makes sense, having a single letter for a name is kind of dumb."

Karui couldn't help but giggle. "I see. I'll tell my teammate T what do you think of her name."

"W-wait! I said that without thinking!" Choji sputtered, as he shook his arms wildly. "I mean, one letter names can be kind of cool... !"

"Relax, silly," Karui said, chuckling a little. "I don't plan to tell her anything. But yeah, thanks to our first Raikage, one letter names became kind of common in our village."

"Still, I better watch my tongue from now onwards. I'd hate to accidentally insult one of your friends," Choji sheepishly said.

...

Despite the recent victory, both for the Ninja Alliance and on a personal level, Sasuke wasn't in the mood for parties. That's why, instead of joining the others in their celebration of their recent victory, the youngest Uchiha decided to stay on a place away from the main camp, albeit not too far away, for cautionary reasons. Finding a not too tall tree, Sasuke climbed it and sat on one of its highest branches, and looked at the starry sky.

After so long, he finally did it. He had mastered the Mangekyo Sharingan. No matter how many times he used it, he wasn't forced to relieve that horrible moment from his past. The complete powers of the Uchiha were now at his disposal. And all he had to do was to follow the advice from his pink haired smartass of a girlfriend.

"She's never going shut up when I tell her about it," Sasuke chuckled good naturedly.

However, even then, dark thoughts managed to push their way into his mind. Had he realized the key to mastering his power sooner, maybe he should have been able to complete some missions that ended in failure. The fight against Akatsuki to stop them from capturing Yugito being chief among them.

"Had that battle gone differently, maybe Akatsuki wouldn't have been emboldened to start a war with only five Tailed Beasts. Not to mention that we would have one more perfect jinchuriki among our ranks," Sasuke said in realization. However, Sasuke then did something his past self would have never done: pushing those negative thoughts away. "No! There's no use in lamenting about the past. All that I can do is make sure the future is better. I can't obsess over a single issue, that's why I was unable to master the Mangekyo Sharingan."

"You should latch onto that train of thought. It would do you a lot of good," a new voice said. "In fact, I'd say it's doing you a lot of good."

Sasuke turned around, and saw his Jonin-sensei perched on the same branch. She then sat beside him. "Do you mind some company?"

Sasuke merely shrugged. "Knock yourself out."

"I heard about your battle against the reanimation of your father. Itachi-kun and you did a pretty good job," Shizune said. "And you managed to master your Mangekyo Sharingan just in time. I'm proud of you."

"Thank you, sensei," Sasuke replied, averting his gaze so his teacher wouldn't see the faint blush across his face.

"So, what are you doing here all by yourself?" Shizune asked. "I'd figured out you'd be with Sakura. Or with Itachi."

"Sakura is helping Tsunade watching over some injured in grave condition. I think her shift will end in a couple hours," Sasuke said, before a scowl developed in his face. "And Itachi is with Natsu."

Shizune flinched upon hearing how Sasuke practically spat the name of Itachi's almost-girlfriend. "Wow. You're not that fond of that girl, are you? I'm glad that you were okay with me dating and later marrying your cousin."

"Not you too..." Sasuke groaned.

"Yeah, Itachi already told me you aren't that fond of the girl," Shizune said, giggling a little.

"If you're going to tell me that I'm being irrational and petty, save it," the Uchiha scoffed.

"While you ARE being irrational and petty, I'm going to tell you that," Shizune said. "I know it's just a phase, and that you'll eventually learn to accept that your brother has the right to love someone like you and Shisui have."

"Whatever."

Shizune's smile didn't falter. "Anyway, let's talk about something more positive. Like your victory today. Did it make you feel good?"

"It felt like... like a door of my past that had been opened for years has finally been closed," Sasuke replied. "Seeing father after so many years wasn't a pleasant experience, much less being forced to fight against him. But now that I did, I feel... liberated."

"The Uchiha Insurrection left many wounds that took very long to close," Shizune agreed with a nod. "What most people don't realize is that the remaining Uchiha were just as hurt as the rest of Konoha."

"Hearing father saying that he regretted what he did helped. As well as the fact that at least we got to say goodbye to each other, unlike that time," Sasuke said, letting out a sigh he didn't know was holding. "It would have been nice if I had the same chance with mom but... on the other side, I would have hated seeing her as a other undead slave of Orochimaru."

"Many people are being forced to fight deceased loved ones," Shizune said.

"What about you, sensei? Are you afraid that Orochimaru might raise from the grave a deceased loved one?" Sasuke asked. Then again, he couldn't think in anybody that Shizune could consider precious that wasn't still alive. "Now that I think about it, I don't think you ever told us about your family other than Tsunade."

"Because, for a good part of my life, Tsunade-sama was all my family," Shizune replied. "My parents died on a mission when I could barely speak, and before Tsunade-sama took me under her wing, it was my uncle Dan who raised me. In case you don't know, Dan was Tsunade-sama's former lover. He tragically died during the Second Ninja War. It was his death who prompted Tsunade-sama to abandon the village and become a vagrant."

"Was he strong?" Sasuke asked.

"Very," Shizune said with a nod. "There were talks that, once the Second War was over, he'd succeed the Third as the new Hokage. But alas, it couldn't be, and it wasn't until Minato took the hat that Sarutobi-sama retired. Not that his retirement lasted that long."

"A powerful ninja with potential to cause emotional damage to our two best medics. Then surely Orochimaru brought him back from the dead," Sasuke stated.

Despite the possibility, Shizune remained unperturbed. "I think I may jinx it, but I don't think there's anything Orochimaru has to throw at us that can take us down for good."

"You seem awfully confident in us," Sasuke noted.

"How can I not be, after seeing the amazing work you did today?" Shizune smiled at Sasuke. "Especially now that you're stronger than ever."

Strong. Yes. That word resonated in Sasuke's mind. After awakening the Mangekyo Sharingan, Sasuke felt powerful. But his control of said power was very little. Not anymore. Now he felt truly strong. Because the burdens of the past weren't slowing him down anymore. Yes, he felt he could take down any enemy.

Fate, however, would take Sasuke on that statement soon.

...

Ninja Alliance HQ, Land of Fire, Next Day

Iruka Umino had never been in a war before. The closest thing to an actual battle he had been in was the night the Nine Tails attacked Konoha, and the night the Uchiha Clan rebelled. Two nights that would never forget, no matter how much he tried. So of course, the idea of being deployed to a war didn't appeal to him in the slightest, even if he was ready to lay his life down for the sake of his village.

So, when he was assigned to the Ninja Alliance HQ Defense Platoon -because of his skill with defensive and barrier ninjutsu-, to say he was happy was an understatement. Of course, he didn't voice those thoughts out loud, he didn't want to appear like a craven to both his fellow Konoha ninjas and the ninjas from other villages he was working alongside at the moment.

Then again, it has been almost a decade since Iruka had been an active ninja the strict sense of the word. Shortly after being 18, Iruka was asked to fill a temporal position as a teacher at the Academy. While reluctant at first, he grew to love the job, to the point that he applied to become a full time teacher. Even if Iruka continued training and honing his skills on his own, he saw very little combat during that period.

So, needless to say, Iruka was glad that that he was assigned to a position that, even if the possibility of being attacked was there, it was quite small.

The explosions that rocked the entire area made the teacher realize that a small probability doesn't mean zero.

"We're under attack!" an Iwa ninja cried.

This managed to alert all the ninjas inside the building, who poured outside of it, kunai, shuriken and other weapons ready. From the forest around the place, ninjas wearing Otogakure uniforms leaped into the ground, weapons ready as well.

"The thick of Akatsuki's army have been the White Zetsu clones. But Orochimaru still has his own army of ninjas," Iruka thought, pulling out a kunai, joining the fray. "I guess his plan is to attack the brains of the Alliance so the rest of the divisions lack any tactical support and intelligence."

"How the hell didn't our sensors notice enemy ninjas getting so close to our base?" an Ame ninja protested.

"Who knows! Now shut up and keep fighting!" a Kiri kunoichi replied. "We need to push them back!"

Suddenly, the ground started to shake, and a giant snake burst from the floor, sending the poor ninjas that were standing on that spot flying in multiple directions. The snake then opened its huge jaws, and more Oto ninjas poured from its mouth.

"Guss that explains how they were able to evade our sensors," Iruka bitterly said.

"Damn! A giant snake means that Orochimaru is here!" a Konoha ninja cried. "Hokage-sama! We need your help!"

"Don't call for the Hokage, you idiot!" Iruka chastised his fellow Konoha ninja. "Don't you realize that maybe that's what the enemy wants?"

"Orochimaru isn't the only one who's able to summon snakes," a feminine voice said. "Wood Release: Deep Forest Emergence!"

The earth started to shake again, and this time, multiple wooden roots grew around them, forming a small forest almost instantly. The Allied ninjas leaped away as soon as they could, but others weren't fast enough to do so, and found themselves trapped when multiple vines and branches wrapped around them.

"Wood Release: Deep Forest Bloom!"

Flowers started to grow all over the wooden trees and vines, and upon blooming, sprayed a yellow powder into the air.

"Try to hold your breath!" Iruka warned, as he covered his mouth and nose with his forearm.

Unfortunately, the warning came too late, as most of his companions inhaled it, and soon fell to the ground, weirdly enough, the Otogakure ninjas were able to stand inside the clouds of pollen, yet they didn't look any worse for the wear.

" The balaclavas!" he thought in realization. "They must have air filters inside-"

Unfortunately for the teacher, he didn't realize of the Oto ninja sneaking behind him, until he slammed his elbow onto his neck, knocking him out cold.

The battle was over. All the allied ninjas had been neutralized. The commander behind the attack, Hebiko, walked across the small battlefield, examining and nodding in approval of the work her and her men had done. She stopped a few meters in front of the gates of the Allied Ninja HQ. Nobody else had exited the building after the initial wave of defenders poured from it. Probably because they thought she was trying to lure them to a trap or something.

Not that she was going to give them any choice, of course.

"Jiraiya! Come outside and show your face!" Hebiko yelled. "These ninjas are still alive! If you don't show up, I'm going to start killing them one by one!"

Fortunately, the artificial human didn't have to wait long for the white haired Sannin to exit through the building's front gate, hands in the air, trying to ease her into not doing anything rash.

"Here I am. There's no need for blood to be spilled today," Jiraiya said in a conciliatory tone. His eyes then fixed upon the young woman's face. "What do you want, girl? Or better said, what does Orochimaru want?"

Hebiko bristled upon hearing the name of her creator, however, she was able to rein her more wild impulses in before she could lose her composure. She couldn't afford to make any mistakes here.

"I'm not working for that man anymore," Hebiko seethed. "I'm here of my own volition. I want to-"

"Earth Release: Rock Prison!"

"What the-?"

After a quick tremor, large rocks burst from underground, slamming into Hebiko and the Otogakure ninjas, trapping them inside stone cocoons, leaving only their heads visible. They struggled to break free, but the rocks were too solid.

"You think you can waltz in here, harm our ninjas, and make demands to the Supreme Commander?" a gruff voice was heard coming from above.

Hebiko looked up, and saw an old man floating above her. Despite his small size and somewhat comical appearance, she could feel the power that irradiated from his small form.

"Nice timing, Onoki," Jiraiya thanked the former Tsuchikage, who nodded in return. "Make sure the unconscious ninjas are brought inside and tended over. From this point onwards, I can continue by myself."

"Don't get too cocky. Or lower your guard," Onoki said in an almost chastising tone. "I'm aware this girl has some connection to you, but don't let that blind you."

Ignoring the Tsuchikage, Jiraiya walked towards the clone of his daughter.

"Release me at once!" Hebiko protested, as she continued to struggle to break free.

"I think not. It isn't much better to talk like this? I'm usually not that keen on hostage situations. Unless I'm the one keeping the hostages," Jiraiya said. "Now, you said that you were no longer working for Orochimaru. Care to elaborate about that?"

After struggling some more, Hebiko decided to finally gave up. Sighing, she looked at Jiraiya in the eye, glaring daggers at him.

"Orochimaru abandoned my brother to Konoha. He promised that he would rescue him, but he has made no attempts to do so. I want him back," Hebiko told him.

Jiraiya let out a mocking laugh. "And you thought that if you came here and kidnapped a bunch of our ninjas, I'd trade him for them?"

"I might be young, but I'm not a fool. I only made this to make you come out," Hebiko replied. "I brought actual bargaining chips for you. One that can help you end this war."

This, naturally, drew Jiraiya's attention. "Okay kid, spill the beans. What is it? If I deem your information worthy, I may release your brother."

"Sorry, but no. First of all, release me. I won't negotiate with you if I'm unable to move or defend myself," Hebiko demanded.

"You take me for an idiot? I do that, and you either try to kill me on the spot, or run away," Jiraiya said, crossing his arms. "If there's something Orochimaru excels at, that's being a master of escape. And I'm sure you surely picked up a couple things from him."

"Your brats already defeated me. Am I that threatening to you?" Hebiko mocked.

"I already made many mistakes because I underestimated my enemies. I'm simply being cautious. But I think we can reach a compromise," Jiraiya said, before biting his thumb and making several hand seals. "Summoning Jutsu!"

Jiraiya jumped back, and slammed his palm onto the ground, producing a burst of smoke. From the smoke, a giant toad wielding a shield and a sasumata appeared. Jiraiya then channeled chakra into his fist, and slammed it against Hebiko's stone prison, shattering it.

"Try anything funny, and Gamaken here will make you into his snack," Jiraiya threatened, pointing his thumb at the toad. "Now start talking. For your sake, don't make me regret my decision."

Hebiko started rolling her shoulders. "I have to admit, you're far harsher than I expected."

"Were you expecting a different treatment?" Jiraiya asked. "You might look like my daughter, but you aren't Kaida. And as much as it pains me, you are still loyal to Orochimaru."

"I'm not!" she protested, without realizing that she had yelled. She took a deep breath in order to calm herself down.

"What about those ninjas?" Jiraiya asked, nodding at the Otogakure ninjas around them. "How are they following you if don't work for Orochimaru anymore?"

"They no longer work for him either. I convinced them to follow me instead," Hebiko said. "Orochimaru has his way with words and know how to pick people that would see him as their savior. But once you show them proof of how Orochimaru really is, their loyalty isn't as unshakeable as the bastard expected.

"Now, a token of good faith. These are gifts with no strings attached."

Hebiko snapped her fingers, and more Otogakure ninjas hidden among the trees jumped into the open. One carried a giant scroll, while others were holding what appeared to be an unconscious orange haired large man. Jiraiya paid no attention to the latter, but had an idea of what the large scroll was.

"Is that...?"

"The Forbidden Scroll that a Konoha deserter stole during the Uchiha Insurrection and gave it to Orochimaru?" Hebiko finished, as if reading the Sannin's mind. "The one and only. Well, that might not be accurate anymore, given that Orochimaru probably made copies of it. But I thought you'd appreciate having it back."

"That's... an attentive gesture. Thank you," Jiraiya said. His voice, however, made no effort to hide the fact that that wasn't going to be enough. Still, that wasn't the only thing the cloned woman brought. He finally looked at the unconscious man. "Who is that guy?"

"His name is Jugo. We believe him to be the last member of his clan. He possesses a Bloodline Limit that allows him to draw nature energy and use it to undergo a body transformation. Doing so, however, renders him insanely violent as long as the transformation lasts," Hebiko explained. "And before you ask what does he has to with anything, Jugo's DNA is the basis behind Orochimaru's cursed seal."

That, naturally, drew Jiraiya's attention. Even if they had means to destroy the Cursed Seal now thanks to Hinata and Hanabi, the chance of learning how it worked was too good to pass. Not to mention that it would deprive Orochimaru from branding more innocent people with that seal. Plus, having a way to remove it that didn't involve Hinata or Hanabi would be a nice plus.

"A very valuable asset indeed," Jiraiya said with a nod.

"And like I said, these two gifts come with no price tag attached. A symbol of my good faith," she insisted.

"I see. If these aren't your bargaining chips, then what you plan to give me in exchange of your brother has a much greater worth, am I right?" Jiraiya asked. "Okay, let's hear it."

Hebiko smirked, almost expecting that question. "I know where Orochimaru is hiding."

Silence.

Jiraiya fixed his eyes on hers, as if trying to peek into her very soul. Hebiko, meanwhile, continued smirking, as if knowing that she was the one holding all the cards. After a few moments thinking, the Sannin decided to make his counter move.

"If what you're saying is true," Jiraiya began. "Then I can simply have you captured and your mind scanned by a Yamanaka, right?"

"First, yes, what I said is true. Second, you're really bad a bluffing," Hebiko mockingly replied. "You have my brother under your custody. You should already know that Orochimaru carved into our skulls protective seals that prevents our minds from being scryed. Otherwise, Orochimaru wouldn't have abandoned my brother so easily."

"You bring a valid point," Jiraiya replied. "Then again, how do we know that the information you have is genuine?"

"You don't know. You'll have to trust me. Then again, it's not that I didn't try to prove I can be trusted, right?" Hebiko replied.

"Your gifts were very nice, but you introduced yourself by attacking my ninjas. That doesn't spell trust to me," Jiraiya rebutted.

"That might be true, but none of them are seriously injured, much less dead. I knew I wasn't going to make a good impression with bloodshed." Hebiko answered back. "However, you shouldn't think about it that much. You win nothing by keeping my brother prisoner, Orochimaru has no use of him. And you could end this war much sooner if you take Orochimaru out of the picture. I'd do it myself, but I'm not strong enough, not by a long shot, to pose a credible threat. So far, only a Kage level ninja can be a match for him. Hell, not even one, you might need a few. Anyway, what's going to be?"

Jiraiya looked at the young woman, trying to discern if she was being truthful or not. He could tell, though, that he desperately wanted her brother back. And her anger at Orochimaru seemed genuine. The Snake Sannin wasn't somebody that thought people working under him were human beings worthy of consideration. This was a man who indirectly killed almost fifty babies in his attempt to reproduce Wood Release.

Wordlessly, Jiraiya pulled out a small, empty scroll, and started writing something. After a couple minutes, he summoned another toad. This one, however, was a palm sized red toad wearing goggles.

"Kosuke, go to Konoha and give this to Ibiki Morino, from Torture & Interrogation," Jiraiya said, as he handed the scroll to the toad. "Tell him it's an urgent matter."

"You got it!" the toad said, before disappearing in a poof of smoke.

Jiraiya then turned at the silver haired woman. "It's done. I sent orders for your brother to be released and be returned here."

Hebiko narrowed her eyes. "I won't reveal Orochimaru's location until I see him."

"I wasn't expecting you to," Jiraiya said, as he turned around, and walked towards the HQ building. "Now excuse me while I do some preparations."

"What are you going to do now?"

"Ask Tsunade-hime to come back," Jiraiya said. "I'm going to need her in order to make sure that snake doesn't escape."

Author's Note: And thus Hebiko makes her move, thankfully moving the plot a little forward! And yeah, it was her who killed Kabuto. Those of you who said Zetsu guessed wrong, sorry.

A lot of writers have expressed having difficulties writing for Juugo in fanfics where Hebi/Taka doesn't exist, and I'm no exception. Karin is an Uzumaki, and to a lesser extent can be used to flesh out Kusa, while Suigetsu has a strong ties to Kiri and the Seven Swordsmen through his brother. But Juugo has almost nothing to work with, given we hardly know anything about his past or background. And while I did try to include him in the story and give it a role, nothing worked. So yeah, that was me trying to write Juugo out of the story in a not too inconspicuous way.

Despite being his Jonin-sensei, I don't think I've written that many moments between Shizune and Sasuke, so let's try to fix that, shall we? Plus, hey, I'll take any excuse to write more Shizune, because she's a joy to write, and is able to play an excellent foil to a lot of characters. It makes me sad to see how very few writers bother with her at all.

Hope you also enjoyed another moment of Choji and Karui bonding a little more. I'm going to take any chance I can get to flesh out these two and their relationship.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Well, as you can see, we're heading into the meat of the war. Next chapter, we'll see Rasa's Fourth Division fight (and about time, because they haven't had their chance to shine yet, while the Second Division had two so far). In the meantime, leave your thoughts on this chapter on a review. No matter how long or how short, reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Sandstorms

Author's Note: Well, here we are. After 17 chapters of war, the Fourth Division is finally getting some love. Enjoy:

Chapter 117:

Sandstorms

or

Battles of Gold and Silver

Ninja Alliance HQ

A couple hours after the attack led by Hebiko, calmness reigned once again in the Ninja Alliance HQ. The Allied Ninjas had already been healed from any injury by the medics, and the summoned animals were no longer there.

Thankfully, it didn't take long for Tsunade to arrive at the HQ building, given that the campsite of the First and Second divisions hadn't been stationed that far away. Naturally, the Slug Sannin tensed up upon seeing several Otogakure ninjas standing around, but given that Jiraiya, as well as many other Allied ninjas were also there, and they weren't fighting, she decided not to do anything rash.

"Here I am, Jiraiya. The message said that it couldn't wait," she then eyed at the balaclava wearing ninjas. "Do you mind explaining what the hell's going on?"

"Yes, I imagined you'd have a lot of questions, seeing what's going on." Jiraiya said, before motioning to a white haired young woman clad in Otogakure uniform, minus the balaclava. "Hime, meet Hebiko. Hebimaru's sister. She claims she no longer supports Orochimaru, and wants to help us."

Tsunade raised an eyebrow, and glanced at the clone of her daughter. Hebiko just stared back, her expression unreadable.

"I assume she isn't helping us out of the goodness of her heart," Tsunade said.

"She asked her brother to be released into her custody," Jiraiya explained. "She returned the stolen Forbidden Scroll, and handed us a man with a Bloodline Limit that's the source of Orochimaru's cursed seal. And given that she claims to know where that bastard is hiding, I decided it's a small price to pay."

"I see. And are you sure that this brat isn't taking us to a trap?" Tsunade asked, eying the white haired clone suspiciously. "While those gifts you said she brought were nice, maybe Orochimaru is done with them and doesn't need them anymore."

"I know, but this is too good an opportunity to pass," Jiraiya said. "Besides, I already know what to do in case it happens to be a trap."

"Supreme Commander, somebody's coming!" a ninja warned. "From the south!"

Everybody turned in the direction the watchman had said, and saw a burly man in a black trenchcoat jumping from one tree branch to another. Jiraiya smiled.

"Ah, Ibiki Morino is here. He came earlier than I expected," Jiraiya said, watching the head of Torture and Interrogation dashing towards them. Behind him were several masked ANBU, two of them carrying a restrained white haired man. In no time, Ibiki's party landed in front of the group.

"Greeting, Hokage-sama. Here's your special delivery," Ibiki said.

"Thank you. You arrived here pretty quickly. Good, because with the matter at hand we can't afford to waste any time," Jiraiya said with a nod.

Hebiko's eyes widened upon seeing her brother, though she was smart enough not to rush him. She merely walked towards him slowly.

"Hebiko?" Hebimaru asked, noticing his sister for the first time. He smiled widely. "Oh Hebiko, I knew you wouldn't abandon me!"

Hebiko smiled back. "Orochimaru may abandon you, but I never will as long as I'm alive," she said, before turning at Jiraiya. "He doesn't appear to be injured, and he definitely isn't a fake. Alright, release my brother, and Orochimaru's location will be yours."

"Not so fast, girly," Jiraiya said. "I'm not going to release this guy until you give us the location first."

A scowl developed on Hebiko's face. She clenched her fists as she prepared to give the Hokage a piece of her mind, but upon seeing her brother again, she forced herself to calm down. She was so close to get him back, she wasn't going to let anybody, not even herself, to ruin her chance.

Grumbling, she pulled a scroll under her flak jacket, and tossed it at Jiraiya. The Hokage caught it with one hand, and unfurled it. It was a map of the Elemental Nations. There was a mark on the top part of the cape between the Lands of Sound and Waterfall. Jiraiya deduced that's where Orochimaru was hiding.

"I never thought he would be that far away from the battlefields. If he's really there, then we would have never found him," Jiraiya thought, worry growing with each second. "What is the range of that jutsu to allow him to stay that far away?"

"You already have what you wanted. Now release my brother!" Hebiko demanded.

Jiraiya closed the scroll, and nodded at Ibiki. The ANBU quickly undid all the restrainings and removed the chakra suppressing seals that stopped him from using jutsu. Hebimaru quickly rushed towards her sister, the two of them greeting the other with a hug.

"I'm... I'm so glad to be with you again. And to be out of that horrible cell," Hebimaru whispered.

"It's okay, brother, it's over," Hebiko said, patting his back.

The clone twins broke their hug, and Hebiko turned at Jiraiya. "You kept your word. For that, you have my thanks. I wish you luck brining down Orochimaru. Unfortunately, I'm afraid I can't help you anymore. Come on brother, let's leave this place."

Hebiko and Hebimaru leaped away, followed by the rest of the Otogakure ninjas, leaving the Allied ninjas alone. Meanwhile, Jiraiya, Tsunade and the rest of the Allied ninjas went back to the HQ building.

Jiraiya immediately broke the hopefully good news of how he had traded one of his prisoners for Orochimaru's potential location to the rest of his advisors.

"Those are good news, indeed," Chiyo said with a nod. "If we can take that man out of the war, Akatsuki will lose their strongest assets."

"Indeed," Onoki said with a nod. "First, we'll need to form a strike team out of our best ninjas. May I suggest-"

"Sorry, Onoki-san, but no such team will be formed," Jiraiya interrupted him. "Only two people will go and confront him: Tsunade-hime and myself."

"What?"

"You can't be serious!"

"Just two people...?"

"I know, I know!" Jiraiya said, raising his hands in self defense, hoping to calm the others down. "I know it sounds harebrained-"

"Beyond harebrained," Chiyo remarked.

"-but it's the best possible plan, for a multitude of reasons. "Jiraiya began. "First, Tsunade-hime and I have been his teammates for years. We know him and how his mind works better than anybody. And we're both Sages. We're the best suited to fight him. Second, Orochimaru is a master of escape. If he learns that we located him, he will move to somewhere else. That's why the team going after him has to be as small as possible, in order to minimize the chances of him fleeing. Plus we need our best ninjas on the battleground."

"We also need you here, Supreme Commander," Ao interjected. "The reason you were given such position was so you would coordinate the war effort. What are we going to do in your absence?"

Jiraiya looked around, as he was trying to think of a potential substitute. His eyes then landed on the former Tsuchikage. "Onoki, given that among all of us, you're already a veteran with three wars on his belt, so you're the most fit for it, I hereby name you acting Supreme Commander as long as I'm busy hunting Orochimaru down."

Onoki smirked a little, "Heh, things must be serious if you, a Konoha ninja, is relinquishing your position to an Iwa ninja."

" Temporarily relinquishing my position," Jiraiya insisted, as he narrowed his eyes.

"Sure. I'm past the age of having lust for power. Don't worry, you can count on me," Onoki said with a nod.

"Going back to your previous point," Chiyo intervened. "Even if it's just the two of you, Akatsuki has many spies and watchers. The chances of you being spotted are still there."

"Yes, but if it's the two of us, he won't run away. Because Tsunade has something Orochimaru desires more than anything else," Jiraiya said, turning towards his wife.

Even if nobody said anything, the answer was obvious: the Rinnegan. Tsunade, however, didn't appear that convinced. She walked towards her husband, and began to whisper him.

"Jiraiya, you already used the Rinnegan as a bait to lure an enemy out once, and look what happened," Tsunade told him, sounding a little upset. "Do you want to take that risk again?"

"The situation is different this time. I may be using the Rinnegan as bait again, but as a bait that can punch back. Come on princess, we could beat Orochimaru ourselves even if you didn't have that Rinnegan," Jiraiya insisted, the volume of his voice matching hers. "This is an opportunity too good to pass."

Tsunade sighed. She wanted to exercise more caution, but she knew that caution wouldn't win the war or save potential lives, only decisive actions would do that.

"Alright. We'll do as you say," Tsunade agreed.

"Excellent! We better head out immediately. We'll take a few days to reach Orochimaru's hideout," Jiraiya said. "And the sooner we take him down, the sooner this war will come to an end."

...

A couple days later, Land of Lightning

It seemed that, after numerous attempts at breaking into the Land of Fire, Akatsuki had directed their latest attack into the Land of Lightning. Rather than crossing underground through the Land of Frost like they did in previous battles, this time they decided to use a coastal invasion. Given that neither the Zetsu clones nor the Reanimations needed to breathe, they walked through the sea floor until they arrived at the coast.

Fortunately, Rasa's Fourth Division was in the area to put a stop to their advance. They managed to arrive just in time to stop them from tainting the Land of Lightning with their presence. The Fourth Kazekage and the division's foremost ninjas were at the front, looking at the incoming mass of enemies.

"So far, mostly White Zetsu, and a few reanimations here and there," Rasa observed. "It seems Akatsuki lost those Moon Puppets for good."

Darui, who was besides him, clicked his tongue. "Dammit, I'm seeing a familiar face there."

Rasa turned at the Raikage's right hand man, and raised an eyebrow. "A friend or family of yours?"

"Eh, not exactly," Darui said, pointing to a pair of undead Kumo ninjas waddling through the water. They were tall and imposing, and completely identical, if it wasn't for the different colors of their headress-like hairs. "Those are Kinkaku and Ginkaku, two of Kumo's most infamous ninjas. They're as powerful as they're sadistic."

"Just lovely," Rasa said, rolling his eyes.

"Orochimaru has a vast knowledge of every village's best ninjas. That man's far from a dullard," Darui noted.

"Any idea on how are we going to beat them?" Rasa asked, sounding a little exasperated.

"Like I said, they're strong, skilled, and are used to being overwhelmed by numbers," Darui explained. "Fortunately, I'm very familiar with them and their fighting style. I feel I can take one of them down, but I can't match the two of them together, so I'll need strong backup, commander."

"How about if we separate them?" Rasa suggested.

"Many people already tried that in the past, it rarely worked. In fact, they will expect it," Darui replied, making the Raikage to curse something under his breath. "Fortunately, we have no shortage of powerful ninjas here." Darui replied.

"My three children are also Sages as well. But I'd wish I didn't have to waste them on a couple of enemies when there are so many to beat," Rasa complained.

"They're getting closer. Sorry, but we have to fight them now before they get close to the coast," Darui said, as he took a step forward. "With your permission, I'll deliver the first strike. I have the perfect jutsu for it."

"Alright, I'll prepare and-" Rasa said, before something in the sky caught his eye. "Hey, what's that?"

"YAHOOOOOOO!" a scream was heard from the sky above, as an artificial looking white bird swooped down. Riding it was a man with long blond hair wearing an Akatsuki cloak. "Missed me, you bitches?"

And Deidara didn't come alone. An horde of Flying Zetsus trailed behind him. Soon the air was filled with a cacophony of flapping wings and hollering.

"Darui-san, change of plans!" Rasa said, as golden started to pour from the canisters attached to his belt. "Whatever you were planning to do, aim to that guy in the sky!"

"Got it!" Darui replied, as his hands weaved hand seals as fast as he could. "So dull. I was planning to start with the Black Panther, but that won't work on an aerial opponent. Anyway, try this on for size! Storm Release: Laser Circus!"

Darui brought his hands together, their index and middle fingers aiming upwards. A sphere of white energy formed around his fingers, before it exploded outwards into a multitude of beams towards Deidara and the flying Zetsu. Alongside Darui, many ninjas in the first line of defense also fired elemental jutsu into the fire, however, most of them missed their marks, since the winged Zetsu proved to be too nimble.

Darui's jutsu fared a little better. The energy beams hit Deidara's giant clay bird, as well as many of the Zetsu surrounding him. However, the blond Akatsuki member managed to jump before his aerial mount went down, and summoned an even larger dragon made of clay.

"Heh, not bad, hn," Deidara said, as he fed the mouths in his hands some explosive clay. They quickly chew it, before being spat in the shape of small birds. "You're not bad with explosions and destruction. But you're nothing but an amateur compared to me! Now taste my art!"

Deidara waved his arms outwards, releasing a flock of small clay birds. Then, all of sudden, there was a chain of multiple bursts of smoke, and the clay birds had multiplied tenfold. They spread out, and dived at the ninjas below them, detonating when they touched the ground, producing a chain of explosions that killed any ninja that was caught directly in them, and sent flying those lucky enough to survive the initial blast.

"Everybody, move forward! I can make a path with my art!" Deidara commanded, as he prepared another salvo of explosive clay birds.

"Commander, those explosions created breaches in our formation!" Darui told Rasa. "What are your orders?"

"Shit!" Rasa cursed, as he formed a shield of golden sand.

"Everybody, fall back! We need to regroup and rebuild our ranks!"

...

Ninja Alliance HQ

As the Fourth Division fought Akatsuki, Ao and other sensors were monitorizing the battle. The eyepatch-wearing Kirigakure ninja frowned upon seeing how badly the battle had begun.

"Flying Zetsu. It's been a while since we had to deal with those pests," Ao thought. "Onoki-sama, the Kazekage's division is having troubles with the Akatsuki! Apparently, they've been surprised by a battalion of winged Zetsu, and they've been forced to abandon the coast and fall back into the mainland. Should we deploy our air force?"

The old Iwa ninja frowned deeply. It didn't take long for a difficult battle to present itself as soon as he was given temporary command. Fortunately, Onoki wasn't a newcomer to this kind of situations, as his more than half a century of experience could attest.

"How big this Zetsu battalion is?" Onoki asked. "It is as big as the other times?"

"No. I appears to be at half the numbers this time, Onoki-sama," Ao told him.

Onoki grumbled something, looking pensive. After a few moments that felt longer than they were, the former Tsuchikage opened his mouth. "This smells like a trap. That clone brat already proved that our location is more vulnerable than it looks. Maybe they want us to send our air force to face them, and then send the other half to another target."

"Still, we can't afford to lose ground to these criminals," Chiyo intervened. "We should send at least some of our flying forces to reinforce our positions in the coast."

"It sounds reasonable, but we can't just-"

"Onoki-sama, the Akatsuki Deidara is leading their air force!" Ao announced, interrupting the former Tsuchikage.

Onoki's face contorted into a mask of unbridled anger. "WHAT!?" he roared. "SEND OUR AIR FORCE! ALL OF THEM! I WANT THAT BASTARD DEAD BEFORE THE END OF THE DAY, YOU HEAR ME?!"

Silence followed the Tsuchikage's out of nowhere outburst, as those present wondered if there was more to Deidara besides being a mere Iwa misssing-nin. Ao was among them, but he simply nodded and carried his orders. "Send a note to the Ninja Allied Air Forces! Move towards the designated coordinates!"

...

Back in the Land of Lightning coast, as the defenders were pushed back into the mainland, while Akatsuki's forces rushed in, and engaged the Allied ninjas in hand to hand combat. Meanwhile, Deidara led the Flying Zetsu into attacking the Allied ninja from above.

While the Zetsu merely swooped down and tried to slash a ninja with their sharp talons, Deidara dropped a cluster of explosives towards the densely packed zones, not caring that some Zetsu were caught in the blast, leaving both friend and foe as charred corpses, or sending them flying into the air. Many times the Allied Ninjas tried to bring him down with ranged jutsu, but the blond was fast enough to avoid them.

"Sorry, your earth bound losers!" Deidara laughed as his dragon dirbbled between a stream of fire and a barrage of rocks. "But you won't stop me from sharing my art! A battle is the perfect blank canvas for me to use!"

Deidara dropped another salvo of explosives, resulting in another chain of blasts. When the smoke vanished, there were more Allied Ninjas and White Zetsu either dead or injured. Among them, however, there was also a large dome of ice, with several cracks on it. The dome then quickly fell apart into multiple ice shards that quickly melted, revealing Haku, Kurenai, Yakumo and Hotaru.

"Nice work, Haku," Kurenai praised her student, as her eyes fixed on the flying Deidara.

"Should we go after him?" Haku asked her sensei. "I believe that, until the Air Force arrives, we're the only ones able to deal with him."

"I will deal with that psychopath myself," Kurenai said. "I need you to stay here and watch over Yakumo."

"As you say. Still, I can't help but feel worried that this opponent might be too formidable," Haku insisted. "After all, we did fight him together the last time, and proved to be a match to our combined power."

"I'm aware of that. Don't worry, I'll ask for help if I feel overwhelmed," Kurenai said with a nod, as her hands weaved hand seals. "Still, given that I have fought him quite a few times, I think I can defeat him this time around. Wind Release: Riding the Hurricane!"

A tornado developed under Kurenai's legs, pushing her into the air as it grew, allowing the Genjutsu mistress to fly into the air, and went to meet Deidara. Both Hotaru and Yakumo were watching the jutsu in awe.

"Whoa... I didn't know Kurenai-sensei knew how to fly!" Yakumo said.

"Yeah, that's sure some jutsu!" Hotaru agreed.

"Naruto was the one to invent that jutsu," Haku corrected them. "He taught it to both Kurenai-sensei and myself, since Hinata-san can fly on her own. Unfortunately, I can't use it since it consumes chakra to keep it active, and my reserves aren't that big."

"Anyway, we can talk about that later. There's a battle we need to win," Haku urged the girls.

...

In another part of the battlefield, the Gold and Silver Brothers, Kinkaku and Ginkaku, were laying waste to the Allied ninjas with a combination of brutal taijutsu and ninjutsu. None of the attackers were even able to land a hit on them.

"Lightning Release: Golden Spear!"

Yellow lightning appeared around Kinkaku's hand, which condensed into the shape of a spear. Swinging his elemental weapon in wide arcs, Kinkaku parried the blows and ranged jutsu Allied ninjas sent his way, while at the same time stabbing and slashing those who were close to him.

"Wind Release: Silver Swords!"

Two swords made of wind appeared on Ginkaku's hand, and when the silver haired brother swung them, they released blades of wind of powerful cutting power, slicing through rocks and human meat alike.

"This rubbish is hardly worth the effort, Kinkaku," the younger brother said.

"Indeed, Ginakaku," the older brother agreed. He then stabbed his lightning spear into the ground, releasing a barrage of lightning bolts through the earth in every direction, shattering the earth, and electrocuting the unlucky Allied ninjas caught in the area of effect.

"But keep fighting! Maybe we may find somebody worthy of us among all these rabble!"

"Water Release: Great Water Wall!"

Suddenly, the two brothers found themselves about to be crushed by a gigantic wave of water rushing towards them. However, they were fast enough to jump away the moment the wave came crashing down, and skidded on the rushing water skillfully. However, that water attack was merely a distraction for the true ambush.

"What the...?" Kinkaku asked, noticing golden glittering in the air.
"Gold...?"

"Brother?"

"Magnet Release: Golden Sand Coffin!"

Suddenly, a mass of golden sand formed around them, and started to swirl. Kinkaku was fast enough to jump away, but his silver haired brother wasn't, and was quickly trapped inside a cocoon of golden sand.

"Ginkaku!" the golden haired man yelled.

"Darui, go!" a voice said.

He didn't have time to mourn his brother's fate, as a dark skinned kumogakure ninja wielding a wide cleaver crackling with electricity leaped at him. Kinkaku parried the attack with his lightning spear. They traded blows with one another, until Kinkaku's lightning spear succumbed to Darui's fast and powerful, shattering into a thousand golden sparks. Kinkaku disengaged his foe, and jumped backwards.

"Not bad," the Kazekage said, as he landed besides Darui. "We got one of them, at the very least."

"It would have better if we dealt with the two of them in one swift strike, but this will have to do," Darui replied, as he eyed at the golden haired man. "Just one of them is quite the dull opponent for the two of us."

"Who are you calling dull, you disrespectful brat!" Kinkaku yelled, as he pointed an angry finger at him. "Do you have any idea of I am?"

"I don't think there are any Kumo ninjas who don't know you two, Kinkaku-sama," Darui said in a tone that was somehow a mix between mocking and respectful. "But right now, who you are doesn't matter. All that matters is that you're a threat to the Ninja Alliance, so sorry, but you're going down."

"I might not be from Kumo, but I got good intel on you," Rasa added. "And with your brother gone, you have no chance to defeat us."

"Oh? You think so?" Kinkaku asked, grinning widely as if he knew something Rasa and Darui ignored. He then opened his mouth wide, and regurgitated what appeared to be a large red and white fan.

Darui's visible eye widened upon seeing the fan. "Is that...?"

Rasa also tensed up, guessing that such thing wasn't a mere fan.

"Coil of Wind!"

Kinkaku swung his fan, releasing an unbelievably powerful gust of wind that blew not only Rasa and Darui back, but many of the ninjas and White Zetsu clones close to them. And more importantly, it destroyed the sand prison Kinkaku was trapped in, leaving him free to move again. Wasting no time, he quickly jumped back towards his brother, while Darui and Rasa got back on their feet.

"Shit!" Rasa cursed. "That thing was strong enough to undo my Golden Sand Coffin from that distance?" the Kazekage growled.

"That's the Banana Palm Fan, a legendary tool that it's said to be created by the Sage of the Six Paths himself," Darui began to explain. "By merely swinging it, it can create an extremely powerful and wide elemental attack, of any of the five basic elements."

"That sounds like a lot of trouble," Rasa said.

"And if Kinkaku has the fan, then..." Darui trailed off.

Indeed, the now released Ginkaku produced a strange white broadsword whose corners were shaped like flames, a large gourd, and a rope that glowed with a golden light, tied to that gourd. Then, as if it had life of its own, the rope wrapped itself around Kinkaku's free arm.

"... of course they have the other three tools," Darui said, his eye narrowing at them.

"Let me guess, something I should worry about?"

"Short answer, yes. Sorry if I don't give you any details, but it would take far too much time we don't have, commander," Darui replied. "For the time being, all you need to know is this: don't let that rope touch you."

"Understood," Rasa replied.

Kinkaku and Ginkaku both grinned, and prepared to attack.

"They tried to separate us, Ginkaku," the older brother said.

"Indeed, Kinkaku. I didn't like that," the younger brother replied, baring his teeth. "Not in the slightest."

"Neither did I. I say, let's give them a taste of their own medicine!" Kinkaku slammed the Banana Palm Fan into the ground. "Coil of Earth!"

The jutsu manifested into a row of rocks as large as one story houses bursting from underground towards Rasa and Darui, forcing the two living ninja to jump into different directions to avoid the attack. And before he could even land, Ginkaku was already on top of him, sword raised. Darui was able to block the blow, but not the brutal roundhouse kick following it, which send him crashing against the ground.

And while Darui struggled against Ginkaku, Rasa had to deal with the golden haired brother.

"Magnet Release: Golden Sand Shuriken!"

Grains of golden sand gathered in front of Rasa, taking the shape of shuriken, which flew towards the undead ninja. Kinkaku's mouth twisted into a grimace.

"I don't like you. No one has the right to use gold against me, much less some Sunagakure desert cockroach!" Kinkaku roared, as he swung the fan again. "Coil of Fire!"

The fan produced a massive cone of flames that quickly melted Rasa's golden shuriken, forcing the Kazekage to jump backwards in order to avoid the fiery attack. He felt a chill travel down his spine as Kinkaku grinned at him. And unfortunately, he was so focused on his enemy that he didn't notice Darui flying towards him, until the Kumo ninja crashed into the Kazekage.

"They're yours, brother!" Ginkaku shouted.

"Good job Ginkaku!" Kinkaku said, as he rushed towards the fallen duo, who got back on their feet as fast as they could. The golden rope around his arm uncoiled, and he swung it against them as if it was a whip. Rasa and Darui were hit before they could jump away. "Bind and draw out, Golden Canopy Rope!"

Rasa and Darui felt like something was traveling their throats and forced itself out of their mouths, and much to their horrors, they looked what appeared to be their very souls.

"My turn! Curse them, Seven Star Sword! Record the, Crimson Gourd!" Ginkaku said, as he cut a piece of their souls with his large cleaver, and finally, said pieces were absorbed into his gourd.

Two words appeared on the flat side of the Seven Star Sword:

DULL

SAND

"Well... shit," Darui cursed.

...

Meanwhile, not far away from there, the Sand Siblings were fighting against an horde of advancing White Zetsu clones, some of them who were rushing towards Temari. The blonde kunoichi smirked, and wounded her fan back.

"Sickle Weasel Jutsu!"

Swinging her fan in a wide arc, Temari produced a powerful gust of wind that blew them away, aside from making several deep cuts into their flesh. She turned around to face another potential group of attackers, when something in the sky caught her eye; it wasn't those flying Zetsu or Deidara, but several greenish-yellow projectiles, leaving a trail of dust of the same color, flying in an arc towards them.

"Temari, watch out!" the Suna kunoichi heard Kankuro calling.

Tamotsu, Kankuro's puppet that carried a large shield, landed besides Temari, and covered her with its shield, its seals glowing with a blue light as chakra activated them.

"Mechanical Great Light Shield Block!"

The glowing seals projected a blue cone of chakra that protected Temari just in time for the acid spore missiles landed upon her. The projectiles harmlessly crashed against the shield and disintegrated.

"Nice save," Temari thanked her brother, as she looked at the direction the projectiles had come from. Even if they were hard to notice among the large crowd of enemies, the blond kunoichi could see several Zetsu clones whose right arms were several vines braided around each other, ending in a large flower. "Those bastards brought some snipers as well to pick us off from the distance."

"Then we better get rid of them!" Kankuro replied, while he was directing the Sasori Puppet with his other hand, making it burn some of the Zetsu clones with its palm-mounted flamethrowers. "Gaara, you come with us?"

The readhead was also fighting the artificial cloned creatures, burying them in sand, or slicing them with blades of sand. However, only part of his attention was in this battle, as most of it looked at how Kurenai was engaging Deidara in an aerial fight. Even if Gaara's face was as stoic as ever, anger was growing within him as he remembered the last time he faced the Iwa missing-nin. That battle costed him his village's Tailed Beast, and almost his life.

"No. I saw another enemy more worthy of my attention," Gaara said, as a sandstorm started to form around him, and he started to float as a cloud of sand started to form under his feet. "I'm sure you will manage without me."

Just when Gaara was about to leave, both he and his siblings were caught by a powerful wind that threatened to pull them away. The Sand Siblings directed chakra to their feet in order to attach themselves to the ground.

"What the hell's going on?" Kankuro asked.

Following the directing of the wind, Temari found the answer. "Over there!"

There was a giant animal, probably a summon, vaguely looking like an elephant with orange fur, huge tusks, and the legs of a feline predator. Its mouth was open wide, creating a suction force in the form of a strong, continuous wind that pushed the Suna ninjas towards its mouth. And rising on the head of the animal was an black haired old man with a scarred chin and a Sharingan on his left eye.

"What the hell's that thing? A summon?" Temari asked, as she stabbed her folded war fan into the ground for anchoring herself better.

"And who the hell is that guy?" Kankuro asked, as he forced his mind to recall if he ever saw him in the past. "Wait, is that a Sharingan?"

The man on top of the vacuuming summoned animal started to make hand seals.

"Wood Release: Deep Forest Emergence!"

Just as the orange animal closed its mouth, stopping the suction force, multiple wooden roots emerged around the Sand siblings, threatening to trap them.

"The fuck!?" Kankuro loudly yelled. "Who the hell is that guy!?"

"Gaara!" Temari called, ignoring the puppeteer's question.

The readheaded nodded, and waved his hand. "Sandstorm Shield!"

A tornado of sand formed around the trio of Suna ninjas, protecting them from the incoming wooden vines. They grinded against the sandstorm, grinding against it in an attempt to bypass it, but found themselves unable to. That didn't stop the jutsu's caster, who made a hand seal and pumped more chakra into the attack, summoning even more wooden vines from the seemingly barren desert land.

That moment, the man flinched, and noticed that the air around him was starting to become colder at a rapid pace. Stopping the jutsu, he jumped away.

"Ice Release: Certain Kill Ice Spears!"

Multiple giant spears made of ice formed above the summoned animal and its rider, before they fell down, hitting the animal and undoing the summon, but failing to impale the man.

"You were right, Yakumo-san. That's Danzo right there," Haku said, as he and Yakumo landed besides the sandstorm.

Danzo turned around, and fixed his eyes on Yakumo, making the girl flinch a little. His expression, however, was as stoic and emotionless as ever.

"Akuma. So you're alive," Danzo commented. "I wasn't expecting to see you here."

"Yakumo! My name is Yakumo!" the girl angrily protested. "Don't even dare to call me by that horrible codename ever again!"

"Just as I feared. So, you turned your back on me and Root. After everything we did for you," Danzo replied. He looked around, as if he was trying to assess the situation. "Then again, given what's going on, I doubt that either Konoha or any of the ninja villages is going to survive this conflict."

"Do you underestimate Konoha that much, Danzo?" Haku asked, sounding visibly angered. "Do you really think it's going to go down that easily?"

"Konoha used to be great when the Senju brothers ruled it. But they made the mistake of letting Hiruzen take the reins of leadership," Danzo said, as he started to make hand seals. "Wind Release: Vacuum Sphere!"

Danzo spat several bullets made of compressed air from his mouth at Haku and Yakumo, who were forced to jump in different directions in order to avoid the attack. The Ice Release user started to make hand seals.

"First of all, let's neutralize that Sharingan. Water Release: Hiding in the Mist Jutsu!"

Haku took a deep breath, and released a huge cloud of mist from his mouth. The mist engulfed the entire area, engulfing the three combatants, leaving them blinded.

"If you hope to defeat me, you'll need more than such a basic trick," Danzo replied, as he started to make hand seals. "Wind Release: Great Breakthrough!"

Danzo exhaled a powerful gust of wind from his mouth, quickly pushing the mist away, leaving the battlefield the same as a moment ago. While Danzo could see Haku, Yakumo was nowhere to be seen. This didn't seem to faze the leader of Root in the slightest, who continued to make hand seals.

"Wood Release: Wood Binding Jutsu!"

Wooden vines and roots emerged from underground, wiggling and lashing angrily as if they were alive. However, rather than lunging at Haku, they all wrapped around the undead Root ninja, immobilizing him completely.

"How-?"

"Well done, Yakumo!" Haku said, as he started to form more hand seals of his own. "Ice Release: Breath of Winter!"

Haku took a deep breath, and releasing a huge cloud of frigid fog, covering the ground in a thin layer of ice as it spread and moved towards Danzo. However, the former leader of Root was far from defenseless. Even if he was restricted, he was able to pull a kunai, and throw it in front of him. His Sharingan caught his reflection on the blade for a fraction of a second, but that was enough to cast a genjutsu that was reflected at him. Said genjutsu overrode the one Yakumo put him into, breaking the illusionary restraints, and jumping away before Haku's jutsu could freeze him completely.

"What?" Haku asked in shock.

Yakumo reappeared besides him, just as surprised. "How... how did he managed to break...?"

"Don't forget who trained you to use your power, girl," Danzo said to the brown haired kunoichi, his voice cold as Haku's ice. "You wouldn't think I'd pick a thing or two about how to counter it just in case? Even if I had the mistaken belief that all my agents were completely loyal to me, I always made sure to have a way to counter their abilities in case they turned against me."

While only appearing once every couple generations, the Kurama Clan's brand of genjutsu was one of the most feared Bloodline Limits who ever existed, given not only was it a genjutsu that could cause bodily harm to the victim, but it was impossible to break using conventional genjutsu dispelling techniques. Not even the Sharingan or the Byakugan were enough to counter it.

But alas, while normal means didn't work, it wasn't impossible to break. Given that genjutsu affected the chakra of the mind, Danzo came up with an idea to counter it: use Yamanaka mind jutsu to alter his own mind in order to shield himself from said genjutsu, or at least lower its effects on him. And luckily for Danzo, one of his elite and most trusted agents, Fuu, was a member of the Yamanaka clan. In no time, the two of them came up with a series of ways to use the Yamanaka's jutsu to undo Yakumo's genjutsu.

Of course, Danzo was smart enough not to share such information with anybody. He was tempted to kill Fuu in order to leave no loose ends, but in the end he decided against it. Fuu was one of his most effective minions, and replacing him wouldn't be easy.

Yakumo's face twisted into a grimace of anger. She clapped her hands together. "You think so? Let's see how well you do against this then! Demonic Illusion: Hellscape!"

From Danzo's perspective, the entire battleground burst into flames, with the sky turning red with black clouds, as earth had turned into Hell itself. Danzo could feel how the air's temperature raised instantly as the fires spread around. Still, his expression was unfazed.

"An impressive jutsu, Akuma. I always wondered what our enemies felt when they were caught inside one of your illusionary traps, and now I can experience it myself," Danzo said, before nodding. "I made a truly outstanding job with you."

"Is that pride I'm sensing? I thought you believed that ninjas shouldn't have emotions," Haku retorted. "Misplaced pride, may I add."

"Am I being prideful? Perhaps. It's not that my current predicament can get any worse," Danzo said, his voice remaining stoic. "Then again, I'm going to make the most of a bad situation, and use this fortuitous encounter to punish a traitor to Root."

"You're welcome to try, you decrepit monster!" Yakumo defiantly replied.

...

" This has to be a punishment for my extreme foolishness in life," Harusame bitterly thought.

That was the only explanation the bespectacled Kirigakure Jonin could come up with for his current predicament. One moment, he was trying to extract the Six Tails from his precious student, then there was darkness, and then he was among the living again, only he was unable to control his body, and was forced to fight against what appeared to be a coalition of all five Great Villages and some minor ones, alongside more deceased ninjas raised as zombies - Harusame recognized a few he knew they were dead- and an army of weird plant like, chalk skinned humanoid creatures with green hair, called White Zetsu clones.

And as much as he tried not to fight, he was unable to. His will wasn't strong enough to reclaim control of his body.

"Sealing Art: Mark of Thunder!"

Harusame slammed his hand into the ground, and a lot of circular sealing patterns started to spread around him, glowing with a white in intermittenet patterns.

"Watch out, don't step inside the circle of seals!" Harusame warned. If he couldn't control his body, at least he'd try to minimize the damage he was forced to commit. "If you do-"

"AAAAAAAGGH!"

The screams of many ninjas who didn't hear him filled the air, as they stepped on the seals accidentally or didn't see them form, causing the seals to produce an electrick discharge, shocking their bodies into paralysis. Their screams didn't end there, as many nearby White Zetsu clones took advantage of the situation, and moved for the kill.

Harusame sighed, lamenting the more deaths he was being complicit. "I'm sorry, I just-"

He was interrupted when he saw multiple bubbles headed into their general direction. The White Zetsu merely stared at them dumbly, while Harusame's eyes opened wide in shock, and felt his legs forcing him to jump backwards.

"This jutsu... !"

The bubbles glowed with a blue light, before they detonated, obliterating the Zetsu.

"There's no doubt. It was his jutsu. He must be here!" Harusame said.

Fortunately, whoever was controlling him agreed with him and decided to take him towards the caster of that jutsu.

...

A few moments earlier

While this wasn't the first fight Hotaru had been in, it was her first big battle for sure. Still, she decided that she shouldn't bite more than she could chew, and stick to fighting enemies that weren't too strong, like those White Zetsu clones.

"Time to use these jutsu I developed. This is for you, sensei," Hotaru whispered, as she took Utakata's old bubble, and blew several bubbles while infusing them with chakra. "Water Release: Explosive Bubbles!"

The bubbles flew towards a group of White Zetsu who just had felled several Allied ninjas, and detonated. The explosion obliterated them.

"Yes!" Hotaru cheered. But her cheers turned into an "eep!" when several kunai flew from the resulting cloud of smoke, forcing her to jump back in order to avoid them.

A man emerged from the cloud of smoke, a Kirigakure middle aged ninja wearing glasses. "You, girl!"

"Me?" Hotaru asked.

"That jutsu! Where did you learned it?" the man asked.

"It's a jutsu my sensei used to use. I copied it by watching him," Hotaru replied, taking a defensive stance. "Why do you want to know?"

"I used to have a student who had a similar jutsu. Using bubbles to fight isn't something many ninjas use," the old man replied. "Was your sensei a tall, slim man, with brown hair, a bang covering one of his eyes? Named Utakata?"

"Yes, that was him!" Hotaru replied. "You know about him?"

"Yes, I did. Far better than most," the man replied, now sounding sorrowful. "My name is Harusame, and I used to be Utakata's sensei."

"H-Harusame?" Hotaru repeated, as her eyes grew wide. She remembered that name. Once Utakata started to opening up to her, Utakata revealed that the reason behind his defection was how his sensei betrayed him, and tried to remove the Tailed Beast inside him for some unknown purpose. "Then why-"

"Watch out, girl, I'm going to attack!" Harusame interrupted her, as his hands started to fly through hand seals. "Water Release: Water Wall!"

Hotaru didn't just stay there and waited for the attack to hit her. She blew more bubbles as she spun around her heels. "Water Release: Bubble Barrier!"

The bubbles merged around her into a single, giant bubble that held Hotaru inside, just when Harusame expelled a torrent of water from his mouth. The torrent hit the protective bubble, but despite its apparent frailty, it managed to hold the attack back, before it burst.

"Well done, girl. Utakata trained you well" Harusame said, as he pulled a kunai and dashed towardsa Hotaru.

The blond haried woman parried the attack with the bubble pipe, which, like the bubbles it blew, proved to be far sturdier than it looked.

"Thanks. Utakata was a great sensei," Hotaru said, as she pushed Harusame back, and delivered a powerful kick to his stomach, making him tumble backwards. "The best sensei I could ever have."

"Where is he now?" Harusame replied, as he regained his balance. He didn't miss how Hotaru was talking in past tense, and he was fearing the worse.

"Unfortunately, he is no longer with us," Hotaru replied, as her hands flashed through hand seals, before blowing more bubbles. "Killed by the very same people who plunged the world into another war! Water Release: Dancing Bubble Flight!"

More chakra-charged bubbles flew towards Harusame. The undead Kiri ninja pulled out several shuriken with one hand while making one handed seals with the other hand. "Lightning Release: Lightning Shuriken!"

Harusame threw the electricity imbued steel stars towards the incoming bubbles. However, when they were about hit them, they moved as if they had life on their own, dodging the attack. The bubbles homed into the undead ninja, forcing him to retreat. He threw more kunai and shuriken towards the bubbles, but they kept moving around, dodging and evading his attacks.

"What's with this jutsu? Uta-kata never had anything like this!"
Harusame thought, as his body moved on his own. "Maybe this girl is strong enough to beat me?"

One bubble managed to land on his leg, blowing it up, stopping him on his tracks, and allowing the rest of the bubbles to reach their target, resulting in a chain of explosions.

"Did I get him? Yes!" Hotaru cheered, pumping her fist into the air. However, when the smoke from the explosions dispelled, all that was there was a charred log. Hotaru's face dropped. "Of course, there's no way a newbie like myself is going to take down Uta-kata-sensei's Jonin-sensei."

"Unfortunately, you're right," Harusame's voice said from behind her. Hotaru quickly turned around, and adopted a defensive stance. "I know it must not be the best moment to ask, but understand I have no other opportunity to ask this: did your sensei tell you about me? About what happened between us?"

Harusame pulled several kunai and threw them at Hotaru. Hotaru grabbed her bubble pipe and used it to deflect them as well as she could.

"Yes! He told me you wanted to extract the Tailed Beast inside him!" Hotaru replied. "He never understood why did you betray him!"

Harusame sighed, looking between sad and ashamed. "No wonder he reacted the way he did. It might not look like it, but I was trying to help my student. The Six Tails... I knew how much of a burden it was for him. I was afraid that he wouldn't be able to carry it. That's why I wanted to relieve him from that burden."

"Help him? How?" Hotaru yelled. "Extracting the Tailed Beast would have killing him!"

"I know! That's why I spent years researching a way to extract a Tailed Beast without killing the host!" Harusame replied. His excitement, however, was brief. "But looking back, I think I was blinded by my enthusiasm. I couldn't even tell if the extraction method would have worked as intended. Guess it was a good thing I was the one who died and not him."

Then, all of sudden, Harusame burst into a puddle of water.

"A clone? No!" Hotaru looked around, trying to find the real one.

"Water Release: Water Dragon Bullet jutsu!"

Hotaru was alerted by a roar, and out of nowhere a serpentine dragon made of water attempted to ram into her from one of the flanks. Hotaru jumped backwards, dodging the initial onslaught. However, the dragon twisted its body and charged its head at her again, forcing the blond kunoichi to be the one onto the defensive.

"Water Release: Bubble Dome!"

Hotaru blew more bubbles around herself, which merged into one large bubble, just in time as the dragon slammed into her. Even if the bubble didn't break, the dragon carried enough force to move it, slamming it against a tree. The force of the impact caused the tree to topple, and Hotaru's protective bubble burst. Fortunately, the Kiri kunoichi was barely hurt.

"You're strong, girl. Ukatata had trained you well," Harusame said, as he landed in front of her. "But I'm afraid his training won't be enough to defeat me. Fall back if you wish to live. Or return with reinforcements. My student is dead, and I can't help but feel it was my fault. I don't want his student's death on my conscience."

Hotaru's first reaction was to protest, to tell that man not to underestimate her. But then she remembered Ukatata's last words to her:

Live. Enjoy life to its fullest, don't be chained by the past, and make sure that when your time comes, you can look back and smile knowing you have no regrets.

Hotaru gritted her teeth as she fought tears. As much as she didn't want to, she couldn't risk her life against this man. If she died, then Ukatata-sensei's sacrifice would have been in vain. She reached into her ninja tool pouch, pulled out a smoke bomb, and used the ensuing cloud of smoke as a cover to fall back from the enemy.

...

Meanwhile, high into the air, Deidara and the flying Zetsu continued their assault on the Allied ground forces.

"You can run, you cry, but there's no escape from my art!" Deidara hollered as he prepared yet another salvo of clay bombs.

"Wind Release: Great Breakthrough!"

Suddenly, Deidara's clay dragon was hit by a powerful gust of wind, causing him to lose balance and drop all his clay explosives to the ground.

"Everybody down there, vacate the area! Those are bombs!" a female voice said.

Deidara turned around, his one visible eye angrily narrowing at the one who dared to get in the way of his art, and much to his growing rage, it was the same raven haired Konoha ninja that had been a thorn to his side lately. She was no longer wearing that red shirt with the white bandage-like dress, but a standard Konoha uniform.

"You again! The goddamned genjutsu bitch!" Deidara yelled, glaring at the floating Kurenai.

"How rude," she said, rolling her eyes, but smiling at the thought of making the missing-nin so mad. "Though, I can assure you that that wasn't a genjutsu."

"Oh really? Well- hey, wait a second," Deidara said, finally noticing something. "How the hell are you flying on your own? Is that another genjutsu?"

Kurenai smirked in a taunting manner. "Perhaps. Why don't you come and find if I'm real or not? If you can trust your senses, that's it."

"Release!" Deidara made a hand seal while sending a burst of chakra through his body in order to cleanse any illusion placed on him. Kurenai was still floating in front of him. "So you're real after all. Well, even if you know how to fly without the help of the ice girl, you aren't a match for me if you're alone!"

Deidara thrust both hands forward, releasing several clay insects that flew towards the genjutsu mistress. Kurenai was forced to fly away. She grabbed a handful of shuriken from her ninja tool pouch, and tossed them at the incoming clay creatures, nailing them with complete accuracy, causing them to prematurely explode.

A shadow alerted Kurenai of a threat coming from above. Looking up, the genjutsu mistress saw Deidara's dragon above her, just in the moment it spat a ball of clay at her.

"Die already!"

Kurenai was able to move away just in time to avoid the explosion. The clay dragon, however, continued its assault, firing more explosives at the escaping genjutsu mistress, her ears ringing from enduring the loud noise of the explosions going off so nearby. While he was able to dodge all of them, she was hit by the shockwave of one that blasted dangerously close to her, sending her tumbling towards the ground.

"Haha, yes! Direct hit, bitch!" Deidara cheered, before laughing maniacally. "Now do me a favor and splat against the ground below!"

Kurenai tried not to panic at the thought of her impending death. She knew she only had a few seconds to restabilize the Riding the Hurricane jutsu before she could hit the ground, and she had to do it as she was tumbling downwards.

"Come on, come on, you can do it!" Kurenai thought, as she tried regain her stance as she pushed more chakra downwards. "This can't be my end!"

"Yeah, die-WHAT THE HELL?" Deidara screamed.

That moment, Kurenai's fall was stopped when her back hit something with a round surface. Something that was floating in the air, and slowly moved upwards. It was soft to the touch, but surprisingly solid. And strangely enough, it was wet to the touch.

"A... bubble?" Kurenai asked. It was then when she noticed that she was lying on top of a large bubble.

"Thank goodness I was able to catch you in time," a new voice said. Kurenai turned around, and saw that Kiri ninja friend of Haku. Hotaru, she believed was her name. She was also flying, sitting on top of another large bubble. "Kurenai-san, right?"

"Yes, I'm Kurenai," the genjutsu mistress said. "Thanks for the save. I owe you one."

"You're welcome," Hotaru replied, smiling at the Konoha Jonin. She then directed her eyes towards Deidara, riding on his clay dragon, and said smile turned into a frown. "Akatsuki. The same people who captured my sensei and those like him. Even if that man didn't do it personally, I feel like I'll be avenging Utakata-sensei if I help you take him down."

"Your help is appreciated. I thought I would be able to defeat him on my own, but guess I was over my head," Kurenai admitted. She then jumped off the flying bubble, and reactivated her flying jutsu. "Wind Release: Riding the Hurricane!"

Hotaru once again blew several bubbles from her pipe after making several seals.

"Water Release: Water Bubble Drift!"

The bubbles started to float around, quickly growing in size until they reached the same size as the bubble the blond kunoichi was standing on.

"You think you can beat me with mere bubbles!?" Deidara yelled, feeling insulted. "Don't you dare to mock me or my art!"

Deidara tossed a couple of explosive insects at Hotaru. The Kiri kunoichi quickly jumped from the bubble just a second before the clay insects detonated, destroying it. Fortunately, the bubbles she had created served as perfect platforms for her.

"I might not be able to fly like you or Kurenai-san, but I can keep up with you two in the air!" Hotaru boldly claimed. "Ready, Kurenai-san?"

Kurenai nodded and smiled confidently. "Ready as I'd ever be," she said, before shooting Deidara a look of determination. "It's about time we end the career of this so-called artist."

...

"Magnet Release: Golden Tsunami!"

"Coil of Water!"

Rasa summoned a torrent of golden sand to bury the Gold and Silver brothers under it, however, with a wave of the Banana Fan, Kinkaku summoned a torrent of water. Both attacks clashed, neither of them overpowering the other, but did its job in stopping Rasa's attack.

"Damn! No matter what I try, that damned fan counters it with an elemental jutsu!" Rasa mentally cursed. "I should ask for help, but if the men see their commander struggling with a single enemy..."

Darui and Ginkaku were trading blows as they moved across the battlefield, landing on the surface of the impromptu miniature sea Kinkaku had summoned with the Banana Fan. The silver haired man was now using the Seven Star Sword as if it was a normal sword, engaging Darui in a duel of blades. While Darui so far managed to keep up with the undead ninja, he knew it was a matter of time until he grew exhausted and made a mistake.

"You're not bad, brat!" Ginkaku said, his sword locked against Darui's. "But if you're the best Kumo can currently offer... I must say that the village must have gone to shit after we died!"

Darui narrowed his one visible eye, the anger of Ginkaku's insult giving him a brief but vital energy boost to push the undead ninja back, and switch to some genjutsu. "You'll be sorry for saying that! Lightning Release: Black Thunder Blade!"

Darui's broadsword started to crackle with black electricity, before tossing it at Ginkaku. The silver haired man merely smirked, and when the blade was close to him, he parried it with the Seven Star Sword, tossing it away.

"Nice try kid, but-"

"Storm Release: White Tiger Thunder Fang!"

Darui brough his hands together, releasing a mass of lightning bolts that flowed like water, all flying towards Ginkaku, before they merged, taking the shape of a tiger. The tiger lunged forward, letting out a roar, as it pounced towards the undead ninja. Ginkaku, however, wasn't fazed, as he simply jumped away in time to dodge the attack.

"No matter what you try, you wont-HUH?"

Much to his surprise, he saw the cleaver covered in black electricity flying towards him as if it had life on its own. He was fast enough to parry the attack once again, sending the sword away. However, while he was doing that, he didn't see the elemental tiger twisting its body and pouncing towards the undead ninja once, again, sinking its claws and fangs onto his body, piercing it. No blood was spilled, but dust and paper bits.

Darui calmly walked towards the now immobilized Ginkaku as his cleaver returned to him, casually catching it by the handle.

"I'm sorry I had to be so rough, but I hope at least I made you change your opinion on Kumo," Darui began.

"That sword... how did you...?" Ginkaku asked, as he uselessly struggled against the white tiger. Electricity coursed through his undead body, keeping it paralyzed.

"Black Lightning. You already died long before the man who invented this variant of Lightning Release rose to prominence," Darui explained. "More powerful than normal lightning, as well as more malleable and easy to direct. The trade off is its heavier chakra cost and not being as fast. But once you master it, it's invaluable. Now, I'm sorry to tell you this, but your time in this world is over. You will be sealed, and then permanently destroyed."

Ginkaku was going to open his mouth, when something caught his attention. A huge smirk spread across his mouth, something Darui noticed, which caused the young Kumo Jonin to tense up.

"You say you're sorry?" Ginkaku asked, sounding almost excited.

"Yes, I am. People say that I apologize a lot, but I can't help it," Darui continued. "Because yes, I'm truly sorry to see-"

"CAPTURE HIM, CRIMSON GOURD!"

Suddenly, the Crimson Gourd tied to Ginkaku's waist began to suck Darui in, much to the Kumo ninja's shock.

"What? But I didn't say-!"

Darui wasn't able to finish what he was saying, and was sealed inside the gourd. With him out of the picture, the elemental tiger keeping Ginkaku down quickly broke down into a thousand shatters of gliteering sparkles, releasing him. Ginkaku got back on his feet, and looked at the Seven Star Sword.

"Heh, who would have guessed," Ginkaku chuckled.

Where there was once written the word "DULL" now it was replaced with "SORRY".

...

Meanwhile, as those fights took place, the Sand Siblings were still inside the sandstorm Gaara had created in order to shield them from Danzo's attack. Despite Danzo had stopped attacking them, the Kazekage's youngest son had kept the storm active.

Unperturbed, the three siblings were sitting cross legged, with their eyes closed, completely immobile and silent. Or they were, until Temari got back on her feet.

"Okay, I think I'm done," Temari replied. "I hope you guys don't take long. I can sense dad's in trouble."

"I'm done too!" Kankuro replied, getting up as well. "Gaara?"

Gaara didn't say anything. He merely opened his eyes, which were now golden instead of teal. Dark blue marks that resembled Shukaku's body marks were around them. He then got up, and looked at his elder siblings: their eyes were also golden, with Temari having oval-shaped teal marks around theirs, while Kankuro's marks were angular and crimson.

"Yes. I have entered Sage Mode as well," Gaara replied. With a wave of his hand, he commanded the sandstorm to stop. "Let our enemies cower in fear at the sight of our new powers."

Author's Note: You know, at first I wasn't going to use Kinkaku and Ginkaku, given that their only role in the manga is obviously to provide Tobi with Nine Tails chakra to resurrect the Ten Tails, but in the end I decided to include them, since they're powerful ninjas with unique abilities that lend themselves for fun fights. Speaking of which, regarding the words of the Seven Star Sword... truth be told, I don't know how often Rasa says the word "sand", but given that it's the name of what he uses to attack, as well as his village, I felt it made sense. Originally, his word was going to be "gold" for similar reasons, but in the end I changed to "sand". And poor Darui, the same event that saved him in the manga bit him in the ass here.

While writing this chapter, I was SO GLAD that in the end I didn't make Yakumo as prominent as I originally intended, because "unbreakable genjutsu so powerful it makes the brain believe it's real" is such an OP ability that writing fights for her would have been a major hassle. Thanks a lot to DryBonesKing, who helped me to come with the idea of using Yamanaka mind jutsu to counter Yakumo's normally unbreakable genjutsu.

Given that the chapter ends with Gaara and his siblings about to use Sage Mode for the first time, there's something I'd like to say about it: some people in the reviews have complained about how I'm making Sage Mode less special and unique by giving it to so many people. Thh thing is... it is really such a bad thing? You see, one thing I like about Sage Mode is that it's a power-up that's not tied to the genes, as it's so common in Shonen genre, such as with the Super Saiyan or the Sharingan and all its evolutions. And thus, it can be used to keep other characters relevant power-wise, and give them new abilities. So yes, I'm willing to make Sage Mode less unique if the payoff is making many interesting characters strong enough to be relevant during the endgame.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

I hope you enjoyed the first part of the battle. While you wait for the second one, don't forget to drop a review, no matter how long or how short, I love them all! Reviews make me really, really, really happy.

Children of the Sand

Author's Note: Well, here it is, the last chapter of 2020. Consider it an earlier Christmas present. Enjoy:

Chapter 118:

Children of the Sand

or

Sibling Quarrel

Land of Lighting

"Hey Kinkaku, are you dealing with these worthless worm?" Ginkaku said, as he landed besides his brother.

"I am. He's more resilient than I thought," Kinkaku replied, as his black eyes looked on the angry Rasa mockingly. "Say, did you kill your guy or...?"

"Sealed him," Ginkaku said, as he patted the gourd tied to his belt. He let out a loud chuckle. "Hehehe, you're not going to believe what happened, brother! But I assure you, you're going to laugh so hard...!"

Rasa's eyes looked at the gourd. "So, Darui is inside that thing. Is he still alive? Anyway, I better try to snatch it out of him. Even if I can't save Darui, at least I'll stop that guy from sealing me in as well."

"Hey, Kazekage! Think fast!" Kinkaku shouted, as he waved his Banana Fan. "Coil of Fire!"

The Banana Fan produced a huge wave of flames. Rasa leaped backwards as he motioned both his arms in an arc. A tide of golden sand burst from underground, quickly flowing forward in order to meet the advancing wall of fire. While the golden barrier managed to hold the fire for a few seconds, the gold quickly melted into a large mound of liquidified metal, allowing the fire to continue unimpeded.

And if that wasn't bad enough, Ginkaku was running parallel to the fire at a breakneck speed, ready to sink the Seven Star Sword into Rasa's soft flesh.

"Sage Art: Magnificent Sickle Weasel Jutsu!"

Rasa felt something latch onto several parts of his body -they felt like chakra threads- before he was pulled backwards by a colossal force. As this happened, somebody blew an extremely powerful gale. The gale clashed against the wall of fire, the two elemental forces struggling. However, the wall of fire was unable to overcome the blast of wind, and soon Kinkaku saw the fires he had summoned pushed back against him.

"What!?" the golden haired brother asked in shock. "Coil of Water!"

While Kinkaku summoned a torrent of water to nullify his own attack, Ginkaku suddenly found himself about to be buried by a tsunami of sand -normal sand, not the golden kind that Rasa was using- forcing the silver haired sibling to fall back and regroup with his older brother.

"Father, are you okay?"

Rasa looked back, and found himself staring into his oldest son's eyes, which were golden for some reason. Gaara and Temari soon joined him, their eyes also golden as well.

"I'll live," he replied. "The color of your eyes and the scale of your attacks... is that Sage Mode?"

Temari smirked. It was rare the occasion where their father praised them, so she was going to savor the moment. "Yeah, this is it. That trip to Konoha was quite productive for us, huh?"

"Did you find any intel on the enemy, father?" Gaara asked, his face stoic as ever. "We only saw a part of your battle, but I can tell the opponents are formidable ones."

"Their chakra is really potent," Kankuro added. "And it feels oddly familiar."

"You're right, these enemies are like nothing you ever faced before," Rasa began. "The guy with the golden hair, Kinkaku, has a fan that allows him to cast barrages of any of the five elements. And don't touch the glowing rope wrapped on his other arm. If you do, Ginkaku, the other brother, will use that sword to take a piece of your soul and store it inside that gourd."

"You will be cursed, and if you say your most used word, he'll absorb you into that gourd," Rasa continued explaining. "Darui got himself caught. I don't know if he's still alive, but you should try to get that gourd back to see if we can release him."

"Understood, father," Gaara said with a nod. "Leave them to us."

Kinkaku and Ginkaku watched how Rasa fell back while his children took a step forward. Ginkaku snarled in anger.

"What the hell!? You think you can escape from us and let a trio of snot nosed brats do your job!?" the silver haired ninja roared. "Come back here and fight us like a man!"

"Pipe down, Ginkaku," the older brother said. "There's something off about that trio of brats. Don't drop your guard."

"Whatever. Let's make mincemeat out of them. Kinkaku, make an opening with the Banana Fan!" Ginkaku asked.

Temari quickly prepared her war fan, while sand burst around Gaara. Kankuro readied Tamotsu and Sasori, while unsealing from a scroll a third puppet, one that was covered entirely by a long dark brown cloak with a hood.

"If these guys are as strong as father say, I'll use Sairen as well," Kankuro said, shooting multiple threads from a single finger to bind and control the newest puppet.

Kinkaku prepared to attack. "Let's see your little fan stop mine this time! Coil of Earth!"

The golden haired brother waved the Banana fan once again, unleashing a row of huge rising rocks towards the Sand Siblings. Kankuro and Temari leaped into opposite directions, but Gaara remained immobile. He then thrust his hand forward, and torrents of sand started to merge into an orb in front of him.

"Sage Art: Magnet Release, Sand Bullet Storm!"

The orb fired hundreds of sand bullets at huge speed, each bullet carrying destructive power inversely proportional to their size. The minuscule sand projectiles shattered the row of rising rocks as if they were soft sandstone, forcing Kinkaku to jump back.

"Well done Gaara!" Kankuro said, as he moved Sasori towards the leaping brother. "Sasori will take care of him!"

Sasori's gut compartment opened, revealing a thick metal cable ended in an harpoon-like head wrapped around a pole. The cable fired, its harpoon stabbing itself into Kinkaku's chest. Before Kinkaku had any time to react, Sasori rocketed after him, displaying two poles at the back of its hips, with blades that started to rotate as chainsaw blades. Each of the blades cleanly cut each of Kinkaku's arms. Lastly, Kankuro fired two chakra threads from his index finger, pulling the arms back, letting them fall behind him. The arms quickly dissolved into a pile of dust and paper bits, which returned to Kinkaku in order to regenerate, but the weapons remained there.

"Kinkaku!" Ginkaku cried, upon seeing his older brother deprived of his weapons. He turned at his closest opponent, who happened to be Temari, and snarled at her. "You will pay for that, Suna trash!"

Temari merely smirked, basking herself in her enemy's anger. "Somehow, I find that unlikely. Wind Scythe Jutsu!"

Temari swung her fang, releasing a single, yet massive crescent-shaped blade of wind towards the silver haired brother. Ginkaku parried the wind blade, which exploded into a burst of wind that expanded in every direction, pushing him backwards with such force, his fingers lost its grip around the Seven Star Sword.

"Great! Now, I'll use Sairen to get the last tool!" Kankuro said, moving his third puppet.

Sairen pulled out a large bow from under its cloak. Seals around it started to glow with a blue light, as a string of chakra formed between the ends of the bow. Sairen then pulled the string in quick succession, firing large arrows made of chakra at Ginkaku. The silver haired zombie tried to dodge them, but some of them found their mark. And one of them in particular managed to break the rope that tied the Crimson Gourd to Ginkaku's belt.

More chakra threads shot towards Ginkaku, some snatching the flying sword, and the other pulling the Crimson Gourd from him.

"And that's all!" Kankuro said, as he caught the Crimson Gourd, while letting the Seven Star Sword fall behind him with a clang. "Let's see what they do without their weapons!"

Kankuro then opened the Crimson Gourd, which quickly spat Darui out. The Kumo Jonin stumbled for a bit, before he fell on one knee.

"Whoa, there!" Kankuro quickly went to help Darui, helping him back on his feet. "You okay, man?"

"Y-Yeah," Darui said, as his sense of balance slowly came back. "Thanks for rescuing me. And sorry for allowing myself to get caught."

"Eh, don't sweat it," Kankuro said with a shrug. "Listen, we just disarmed those assholes. Take their fancy weapons away while we seal them."

"Uh, you might have disarmed them, but they're far from harmless," Darui warned Kankuro. "In fact, they now will-"

Darui was interrupted when the Sand Siblings suddenly sensed a very familiar chakra. A kind of chakra they knew belonged to Naruto. But the source of said chakra wasn't Naruto, but the Gold and Silver brothers. And much to their shock, they saw how an aura of red burning chakra started to spread around their bodies.

"Hey Ginkaku," Kinkaku growled. "I don't know about you, but I'm really pissed at these brats."

"I'm with you, Kinkaku," Ginkaku replied, sounding just as furious. "Let's paint the sand with their blood and guts!"

...

"Wood Release: Wood Clone Jutsu!"

Wood growths started to form around Danzo's body. Said growths took a humanoid shape as they grew in size, turning into perfect replicas of Danzo, jumping around him and forming a circle. Yakumo's Demonic Illusion: Hellscape was still active, still, the wooden clones moved without difficulty through the burning battlefield. Yakumo and Haku both took a step back, as they adopted defensive stances.

"Such cruel irony, that when I have all the chakra to bring the potential of my body modifications to the surface, I have to do it to destroy the village I helped to build and defend," Danzo lamented.

"Consider it your personal hell!" Yakumo shouted, not offering any sympathy to the former Root leader, as she started to make several hand seals. "Demonic Illusion: Army of One!"

Multiple Yakumos suddenly appeared around the original and Haku. Outnumbering the Danzo clones two to one, they quickly engaged the wooden dopplegangers. Haku took the opportunity to launch an attack, as his hands blurred through hand seals. "Ice Release: Crushing Glacier!"

Haku slammed his foot down, creating a row of rising large chunks of ice with very sharp edges in Danzo's direction. Danzo replied with a jutsu of his own.

"Wind Release: Greater Vacuum Wave!"

Danzo took a deep breath, exhaling a blast of super compressed air that crashed into the coming ice, shattering it into hundreds of shards, though without the power to completely plow through the jutsu and reach Haku. However, much to Danzo's initial surprise, the ice shards stayed still mid air, before they flew towards Danzo as if they had life of their own.

"It shouldn't be surprising, given who your Jonin-sensei is," Danzo calmly said, as the tomoe of his Sharingan started to spin. "But such weak tricks will be useless against me."

The shards all vanished into nothingness, the illusion unable to continue under the mighty watch of Danzo's stolen Sharingan.

"The illusion did its job," Haku's voice replied. "Ice Release: Demonic Crystal Ice Mirrors!"

Suddenly, multiple floating mirrors made of ice formed around the original Danzo. The mirrors were placed in a way that it looked like a dome, leaving the undead ninja no room to escape. Every dome reflected Haku's image.

"An impressive jutsu," Danzo praised. "Not only you have a rare Bloodline Limit, but the talent to use it. It's a pity Jiraiya watched you so closely, or else I would have made you into a Root agent. With my guidance, I could have brought all your potential to the surface."

"I already have two teachers. And I doubt that either you or one of your associates could have done half the job they did with me," Haku replied. "Normally I try to purge myself of negative emotions such as anger and hatred in order to fight properly. But in your case, given how much damage you caused to Konoha, the village you were supposed to protect... I think I'm going to indulge into some anger."

"Then that will be your doom," Danzo replied.

Haku didn't say anything, and started to jump from one mirror to another, moving at such a speed the naked eye is unable to follow, throwing senbons at Danzo the extremely brief instants he was outside of the mirrors.

Danzo managed to parry many of the senbons with a kunai, but despite his Sharingan, he was unable to stop all of them and many others found their mark. Not that it mattered, as the moment the regeneration kicked in, they were pushed out of his body.

"An impressive jutsu. But your little needles won't damage this body in the slightest," Danzo replied.

"I know. I was just testing you," Haku said from within the mirrors, as a pair of ice swords appeared on his hands. "Let's see how well you do against this."

Haku attacked again, delivering slashes with speed and precision. Once again, despite his Sharingan, Danzo was able to parry only half of his strikes. Every time Haku slashed Danzo, even if it was a superficial scratch, ice would start to grow over the wound. After several strikes, half of Danzo's body was covered in frost.

"With all that frost, it should be nearly impossible for him to move," Haku thought, as he prepared for the final strike. "Now all that's left is to encase him into a block of ice and add some chakra suppressing seals."

However, as Haku prepared to attack, he noticed something odd: Danzo had lost all his color, his skin, hair and clothes taking a very dull shade of brown, almost as if he was made of...

"A Wood Clone?" Haku asked aloud, as he stepped out of the mirror. "It's Naruto-kun's tactic. How can I have been fooled by a move that I've seen hundreds of times?"

However, Haku's self directed anger was forced to take a backseat when the Land of Water native realized that, if Danzo left a decoy, Haku wasn't the target, but Yakumo. Worried, he stopped channeling chakra into the mirrors, allowing them to dissolve into nothingness, as he rushed towards where he last remembered seeing Yakumo.

"Yakumo-san, watch out! Danzo escaped my mirror prison! One of those clones is actually him!" Haku warned her.

"Got it!" Yakumo replied with a nod. "Don't worry, he won't catch me off guard! I'm almost done with his clones! One of them has to be the real one!"

"Fools," Danzo's voice said, albeit it didn't come from any of the clones. "Wood Release: Wood Binding Jutsu!"

Multiple wooden vines burst around Haku, wrapping themselves around the Konoha ninja's body before he had time to react, pinning his arms to his body, and leaving him immobilized.

"You thought I was going after the girl," Danzo said. "Yet you never thought that I could be using her as a bait to make you drop your guard. You and the other ninjas in your generation have power and skill unlike any other, but lack discipline and a cool mind."

"Haku-san!" Yakumo shouted, as he formed a hand seal.

Danzo's head turned around, his Sharingan glinting red. "Don't even try to put me under a genjutsu. It won't work."

Yakumo took a step back, and adopted a defensive stance. Danzo made a hand seal, summoning more vines around Haku that would stop other ninjas from helping him from the outside. Ignoring the now secured Haku, the former leader of Root took a step forward.

"Given that you're the last members of two clans with powerful Bloodline Limits, Orochimaru prefers if I catch you alive," Danzo told her. "Consider yourselves lucky."

Then, Danzo dashed towards Yakumo before she could cast another genjutsu or ninjutsu attack, and engaged her in close combat. Even in his old age, Danzo never neglected training and was a force to be reckoned with. And now that Orochimaru had returned him his youth, his physical capabilities were at his peak. Very few ninjas could match Danzo in sheer hand to hand combat.

And Yakumo wasn't a ninja made for direct combat. Thanks to Tsunade's treatments, her body became strong enough to endure the physical hardships of being a ninja, but taijutsu was still by far her biggest weak point. While she was fast and nimble, Danzo would only need one good hit in order to crack her bones and leave her completely hopeless.

"Ice Release: Crushing Glacier!"

Danzo turned around too late to see a row of huge sharp edged chunks of ice rising in his direction, before one of them slammed into his gut, and sent him flying backwards, landing on his back.

"Ice Release: Crystal Bird!"

Haku breathed out a massive gust of cold, frigid air. The air condensed into solid matter, taking the shape of a large bird. The ice bird then flew towards the still downed Danzo, crashing into his body. The resulting explosion of frost and cold air encased Danzo's body inside a block of solid ice, leaving only his head and shoulders exposed.

"What...? How...?" Danzo asked, unable to repress his shock. "I had pinned you down! And I made sure nobody could release you from the outside!"

"'From the outside' being the key words," Haku replied, unable to repress a smug smirk. "I managed to break out from the inside."

"How? Even if you can make seals with one hand, I immobilized both your arms!" Danzo replied.

"Easy. Yakumo-san helped me," Haku said. "See, she used a genjutsu on me to make me think that my arms were free, allowing me to make hand seals. In reality I was unable to, but my brain believed I did and my chakra network reacted accordingly, allowing me to use my ninjutsu without hand seals."

"That genjutsu from before... I wasn't the target. No wonder I didn't feel anything," Danzo said in realization.

"Good job, Yakumo-san. Now, let's seal him for good," Haku replied. Yakumo nodded, as the two of them walked towards the frozen man.

Unfortunately for them, Danzo still had one ace under the hole. His lone Sharingan changed shape into a more complex pattern

"Okuninushi!"

Suddenly, two negative colored translucent Danzo copies jumped from his body, lunging at Haku and Yakumo, startling them and forcing them to jump back as they attempted to parry the sudden attacks. Other two replicas appeared besides Danzo, and shattered the ice keeping him prisoner, releasing him once again.

"It just doesn't end with this man, does it?" Yakumo irritably grumbled, as she parried a blow from a Danzo afterimage with a kunai.

"So it seems. Come on, we have to keep fighting. We've been close to beating him before, I know we can do it," Haku reassured her.

Yakumo nodded, and the two of them resumed the battle against the former leader of Root.

...

Meanwhile, in the air, Kurenai and Hotaru continued their fight against Deidara. The blond Akatsuki looked at the genjutsu mistress floating in front of him, and the Kiri kunoichi standing on a floating bubble near her. He fed the mouths inside his palms explosive clay, which they began to chew.

"Once again, you show that you're unable to beat me on your own, you genjutsu bitch!" Deidara said, before his mouth hands spat more clay figurines shaped like birds. "Your shitty illusions have nothing on my wonderful art!"

Deidara threw the bird clay figure forward, which started to flap its wings as it flew towards Kurenai. The Akatsuki member made a hand seal, and a dozen more clay birds appeared around the first one. Hotaru, however, was ready to act.

"Don't worry, Kurenai-san, I got this!" Hotaru said, as she made several hand seals. "Water Release: Bubble Prison!"

Placing her lips around the mouth of Utakata's pipe, Hotaru blew a flurry of small bubbles, which slowly flew to intercept the clay birds. However, as if they had a brain of their own, the birds easily flew around the bubbles, dodging them.

"What?" the Kiri kunoichi asked in shock.

"Those things can move autonomously! Don't try to intercept them with slow moving projectiles!" Kurenai warned her, as she flew away from the incoming clay birds, while making several hand seals.

"Wind Release: Wind Wall!"

Kurenai exhaled a wide cone of wind that pushed the incoming bird backwards, some of them detonating. However, many others managed to avoid exploding prematurely, and continued their flight towards the genjutsu mistress. The raven haired woman, sensing how her chakra levels dropped to half her full reserves, decided that she couldn't continue relying on Riding the Hurricane, and cancelled it while landing on one of Hotaru's bubble platforms.

"Hotaru-san, see if you can create more of those bubbles to move around!" Kurenai said, as she pulled several kunai from her ninja tool pouch. "I'm afraid I won't be able to fly on my own anymore."

"Got it!" Hotaru replied, as she started blowing more of said bubbles.

As more bubbles formed around them, Kurenai jumped from one to another, infusing the kunai with her chakra for added power, and tossing the chakra-charged weapons at any of the birds that flew towards her, making them to explode prematurely, engulfing the area into a huge cloud of smoke. Kurenai jumped out of the cloud of smoke, landing on a bubble platform.

"Hotaru-san, this Akatsuki is a ranged specialist! We need to get close to him in order to have any hopes of victory!" Kurenai told her.

"Understood! I'll make sure all the bubble platforms stay close to him!" Hotaru replied.

"Good luck with that! My clay dragon is not only a devastating weapon, but also serves as an excellent aerial mount!" Deidara boasted, and to prove his point, he made his dragon dive, before flying up again, while doing several spins. Hotaru's bubbles tried to keep up with the clay creature's speed, but had a hard time doing so. "What do you think about that, hn?"

"Your pretty aerial tricks won't help you defeat us," Kurenai defiantly replied.

"Oh really? In that case, how about THIS trick, hn? I remember it gave you quite the trouble the last time!" Deidara said, as he started making hand seals. "Explosion Release: Explosive Clay Hive Queen!"

The clay dragon spat a blob of clay, which burst into a cloud of smoke. And from said cloud of smoke, the familiar view of a large giant insect with a disproportionately large abdomen emerged.

"Hotaru-san, watch out! That thing can create explosive insects of its own!" Kurenai warned.

And to prove Kurenai right, the Clay Hive Queen spat several balls of clay that quickly took the shape of small insects, which quickly buzzed off towards the two kunoichi. Hotaru prepared her pipe.

"Don't worry, Kurenai-san, I've got this!" Hotaru confidently said, as she started to make hand seals. "Water Release: Water Bubble Prison!"

Hotaru blew another flurry of bubbles towards the incoming insects, but once again, the insects easily dodged the slow moving bubbles, and continued their flight towards Kurenai and Hotaru. When they reached them, they latched onto their bodies, and detonated before they could remove them from their skin. High pitched screams filled the air as the two women were engulfed by a chain of explosions.

"Ha! Yes, take that, you bitches! Heh, that was so easy..." Deidara said, basking in his victory. That's it, until a thought dawned upon him. "... too easy, now that I think about it."

The Akatsuki then made a hand seal, and send a burst of chakra through the rest of his body. And much to his frustration but none to his surprise, he saw the cloud of smoke slowly vanishing into nothingness, replaced by his Hive Queen and explosive insects being trapped inside of bubbles. And while Hotaru was there, Kurenai was nowhere to be seen.

That's it, until he noticed a shadow being cast over him. Deidara looked up, and saw Kurenai leaping at him from a bubble platform, kunai in hand.

"Shit!" he yelled, as he tried to make his dragon fly away.

But too late. Kurenai landed just behind him, and as Deidara turned around to face her, she tried to plunge her kunai into the Akatsuki's chest. Deidara managed to catch Kurenai's wrist with one hand, and when the Genjutsu mistress tried to punch him with the other, he also grabbed her other wrist with his free hand. The two of them struggled against the other for a bit, until, there was a crunching noise.

"AAAAAAAAAAAAHHHHH!" Kurenai screamed, as blood started to pour from her wrists.

"HA! Did you forget how I create my art?" Deidara mocked, grinning savagely. "Having mouths in the palms of my hands can be quite useful, don't you think?"

Kurenai changed strategy, and started to kick Deidara instead, aiming for the groin. But much to her surprise, she didn't get the reaction she was expecting. Hell, it almost appeared as if he wasn't even feeling any pain at all.

"Don't tell me you're actually a woman," Kurenai grimaced, as an inopportune flashback of her mistakenly believing that Haku was a girl when she first met him played in his mind.

Deidara's grin widened. "Oh, it's even better than that!"

Then, Deidara lost all color, both his hair, skin and clothes turning grayish white, the same kind of shade as the clay dragon they were standing on. Kurenai's lost all color on her face when she realized that she was immobilized by an explosive clone. Said clone started to glow as it began to gather and accumulate chakra. The Genjutsu Mistress tried even harder to break its grip, but to no avail.

"Kurenai-san!" Hotaru's voice called from besides her. "Water Release: Water Severing Wave!"

Hotaru expelled a thread of super compressed water, severing the arms of the clone, and releasing the raven haired woman. Kurenai jumped with a few seconds to spare before the clone exploded. Hotaru then blew into her pipe as if it was a blowgun, firing a single water blob at Kurenai. When the water bullet was just below her, it suddenly turned into another platform bubble, breaking her fall.

"Ow..." she whined, as she rubbed her pained, blood covered wrists. "Thanks for the save, Hotaru-san."

"Thank me later, we still have to beat that guy!" Hotaru replied.

That moment, Deidara -presumably the real one- emerged from the cloud of smoke produced by the explosive clone, riding on his dragon, who apparently, was undamaged from the blast.

"I'd like to see you try!" Deidara hollered. "I saw you fight and now that you need to weave seals in order to cast your thrice damned genjutsu! Try to make hand seals with your wrist like that!"

Rather than being intimidated, Kurenai merely smirked confidently.

"Perhaps I don't need to make hand seals to make my illusions, Akatsuki," Kurenai replied. "Take a look behind you."

Despite knowing it was a trick, Deidara turned around, and much to his shock and anger, he saw a small army of Allied ninja, all riding flying animals, mostly insects such as bees and beetles, but there were some birds and even a bat as well. He wasn't that surprised - he had heard the Allied Shinobi Force had an air force- but didn't believe that they managed to arrive to the battle in such a convenient timing.

His first instinct, naturally, was to try to dispel the genjutsu Kurenai put him under, even if he couldn't recall when that happened.

"Release!"

A burst of chakra waved through his body, disrupting his chakra network. But the aerial army remained there, in place.

The next confirmation that it wasn't a genjutsu came in the form of the Flying Zetsu. A second ago, they were busy harrasing the Allied ground forces -they already learned through the hard way not to get close to Deidara, as the mad bomber wasn't one to care about collateral damage- and immediately took off and went to meet the new enemy in battle.

"What the...?" Deidara said, as he narrowed his eyes at something that caught his eye.

Because among the ninjas riding giant flying animals, there was one who appeared to be flying on their own. A blue haired individual carried by large wings that appeared to be made of hundreds of sheets of paper.

"No way... no fucking way!" Deidara yelled.

"What's wrong? What did you see that caused you so much distress?" Kurenai asked in a mocking tone. Hotaru was with her, helping wrap her wrists with some bandage she carried.

However, Deidara was no longer paying attention to the Genjutsu Mistress nor Utakata's former apprentice. Because the winged ninja, ignoring the Flying White Zetsu fighting the rest of the Allied Air Forces, split from the group and flew towards him. And as the winged ninja flew closer, Deidara could identify her.

"Konan... !" Deidara screamed. "The fuck are you doing fighting with the enemy!?"

"Greetings, Deidara," Konan said in her usual stoic tone, seemingly ignoring his rage and indignation. "After so much time, we see each other again."

"Don't try to win me with pointless politeness!" Deidara roared. "You fucking traitor!"

"I'm no traitor. I was always loyal to Nagato and his vision of a better future," Konan replied, now sounding indignant herself. "And such vision can't hope to happen with Akatsuki under Obito's rule. Only Naruto Uzumaki and his friends and allies can take us to a better tomorrow."

"Spare me your bullshit! Do you think that you can just quit Akatsuki like that!?" Deidara roared, his nostrils flaring with anger.

"Yes," was her answer, delivered in a tone that made her intentions and convictions clear. "And given that my former enemies show me mercy and the chance to redeem myself for my sins, I shall show you the same courtesy. Leave this corrupted version of Akatsuki, Deidara. There's still time to do the right thing."

"HA! You think that, after you and your boyfriend strongarmed me into joining your little club, I'm going to let you betray us and walk away unscathed? Well, THINK AGAIN!"

"A regrettable answer. But not an unexpected one," Konan said, as her wings expanded. She then looked at Kurenai and Hotaru, both standing on a platform bubble a few meters below Deidara. "You no longer have to deal with this man. Leave him to me."

Wordlessly, Hotaru nodded and commanded the bubble platform to float down back to the ground.

"You think you and your little origami figures can take on my art, hn? HA!" Deidara yelled, as his clay dragon shot a clay projectile at Konan.

The former Akatsuki member quickly evaded the explosive missile, which detonated a few meters behind her. Deidara's dragon continued firing explosive projectiles at Konan, but the bluenette dodged them expertly. Soon the air was filled with the loud thunderclaps of explosions and the black clouds of smoke they left behind, but Konan was never harmed. That's it, until one of the explosions caught her too close, and burned a little of her left wing, making her to tumble down.

"Haha, yes!" Deidara said, as she threw more clay figurines at her. "Now disappear already!"

Several birds made of explosive clay left Deidara's hand and dived at the falling Konan. Upon seeing them, Konan wrapped her wings around herself, forming a barrier of paper. The moment the birds hit her improvised shield, it was engulfed by a chain of explosions.

"And BOOM! Traitor gone!" the blond Akatsuki cheered, as he looked down at the clouds of smoke below him. "Though being part of my art was too good of an end to-"

Deidara was then alerted of a weird noise coming from below. Tiny wings, like those of a bird, flapping. But not just one or two, but actually hundreds. Then, much to his shock, a swarm of hundreds upon hundreds of origami butterflies emerged from the cloud of smoke, gathering in front of him. The paper swarm split in two, revealing Konan, completely unharmed.

"I already experienced your art before, and it's just as disappointing as it is now," Konan said, narrowing her eyes at the blond. "Now, let me show you a taste of what my little origami figures can do."

Konan motioned her arm forward, and the swarm of origami butterflies launches itself at Deidara. After letting out a curse, the former Iwa nin quickly turned his dragon around and made it fly as fast as it could, with the paper swarm trailing after him. Deidara sent more explosive clay figurines towards the paper menace.

"Burn already!"

Multiple explosions burned many of Konan's paper butterflies, but many more emerged from the resulting cloud of smoke, almost if Deidara's attack didn't have any effect on it. He continued flying around, but the butterflies were restless.

"Paper Chakram!"

Deidara saw how a large ring made of razor-sharp papers flew towards his dragon at a breakneck speed. He tried to maneuver it in order to dodge it. However, he was too slow, and the paper weapon sliced a piece of the clay dragon's wing. With its wing damaged, the dragon could no longer fly in a stable manner, and it spiraled down, until it crashed against the ground. The impact threw Deidara from the dragon's back, and landed painfully on his back.

"S-Shit..." he cursed, as he pushed the pain away and tried to get back to his feet.

However, as he did, the butterflies finally reached him, and started to latch onto his body. Soon, he was completely encased inside a cocoon made of paper, completely immobile. Looking up, he saw Konan looming over him, staring at him with eyes full of contempt.

"I wanted to offer you the same opportunity it was offered to me, but I should have known that you would reject it," Konan began. "You're nothing but a sadist with a twisted and sick fascination with destruction. The world will be a better place without you."

"Fuck you... you b-bitch!" Deidara said, as he tried to spat a glob of blood at her. "I'm an artist!"

Konan merely frowned. "And now, you're going to die. So tragic, the end of an artist," Konan made a single hand seal as she narrowed her amber eyes at Deidara. "But rest assured, Deidara, at the very least, I'll make your demise into a work of art."

Konan's statement was followed by yet another chain of explosions, resulting in loud bangs and bright flashes of fire, followed by a cloud of smoke. And when the smoke dispelled, there was nothing left of Deidara.

Akatsuki had lost another of its members.

...

The Sand Siblings watched in awe the sight before them. A few moments ago, the Gold and Silver brothers looked like any other human, but with the cracked skin and black eyes of the reanimations. Now, they were larger, covered in a deep dark red thick chakra cloak, with five tails of chakra forming behind them, the tail in the middle being much larger than the other two.

"That's... that's the Nine Tails' chakra..." Temari said, trying to make sense of what she was feeling. "How do these two guys have the Nine Tails' power?"

"That's an irrelevant question," Gaara interjected. "What we should ask ourselves is what are we going to do to beat them now that they revealed such a power."

"Okay... maybe these two guys aren't going to be as easy as we thought," Kankuro nervously mentioned.

Temari shot her brother an annoyed look. "You think so!?"

It wasn't just the physical appearance that had changed. While the Sand Siblings could feel the hidden power behind the chakra of the Kumo Missing-nin thanks to their Sage Mode, now that power wasn't hidden anymore. It was the difference between seeing a lake of still magma inside a crater, and watch it erupt from a volcano.

"Enough. I don't want a discussion at such an inopportune time," Gaara told his older siblings in a firm tone. "The enemy is a formidable one, but we can beat them. A pale copy of the Nine Tails' powers won't be enough to bring us down."

"Is that a challenge, little ginger?" Kinkaku -or Ginkaku, it was hard to tell them apart in their transformed state- asked, his claws digging into the ground.

"It's a statement," Gaara replied, unfazed.

Suddenly, the ground around Kinkaku exploded as he dashed towards Gaara, leaving a trail of dust behind, ready to smash Gaara's head between his enlarged, clawed arms. However, Gaara's sand proved to be just as fast, getting in the way between the two, forming a thick barrier. Said barrier also grew multiple spikes of compressed sand, but they were unable to pierce the chakra cloak.

Temari choose that moment to attack, and leaped in front of Gaara.

"Sage Art: Wind Release, Hands of the Wind God!"

Temari swung her war fan, producing a powerful tornado that, even if it blew the sand away, it also elevated Kinkaku into the air. The pseudo-jinchuriki trashed wildly trying to remain on the ground, but without nothing to anchor himself to, his efforts were useless. Fortunately for him, an anchor was going to be available.

"Kinkaku!" Ginkaku shouted, as he shot his largest tail towards his airborne brother. It seemed that Ginkaku could enlogate that tail at will. "Grab onto me!"

Kinkaku was snapped of his fury, and mimicking his brother's moment, also enlogated his largest chakra tail towards the ground. Both tails wrapped around each other. Ginkaku then dug his hands into the ground in order to anchor himself to it, successfully stopping his brother from being carried away from the wind.

"Great job, Ginkaku!" his older brother praised.

"And that's not all, runts! Now watch this!" Ginkaku said, as he heaved the tail holding his brother down.

"Everybody, move!" Gaara warned, as he and his siblings jumped back in opposite directions, while watching in horror how the airborne Kinkaku was brought down like a giant hammer.

"CRIMSON METEOR!"

Ginkaku slammed Kinkaku into the ground, making the earth shake with a booming thunderclap. The ground exploded when the elder brother hit it, the resulting shockwave opening a large crater into the ground, with many cracks appearing around it and slowly spreading around, and sending waves of dirt, dust and mud into every direction.

"Shit, the force behind that hit..." Kankuro said, trying to keep his balance from the still shaking earth. "If we were hit by that..."

"Not even Sage Mode would have allowed us to survive," Gaara coldly stated.

"So we better keep our guard at all times! We might have the power to beat them, but the reverse is also true!" Temari warned her little brothers. "Plus they have much more battle experience than us!"

When the clouds of smoke and dirt vanished, Kinkaku was standing in the middle of the newfound hole in the ground, looking unscathed despite the powerful impact.

"Heh, that was fun, Ginkaku. We never went all out since that chump Tobirama," Kinkaku laughed.

"Hey, Kinkaku, don't you think it's my time to have some fun?"
Ginkaku said, echoing his brother's laugh.

"I do think that, Ginkaku," Kinkaku said, his emonic grin widening, as his white glowing eyes fixed on the sand siblings. "You brats are going to enjoy this."

Then, while the two brothers were still bound together by their tails, Ginkaku curled himself into a ball, with his tails wrapped around his body, while Kinkaku started to spin on the spot, dragging Ginkaku in a circle. He continued spinning at an incresingly high velocity, to the point that Ginkaku was no longer dragged through the ground but carried through the air. The spinning speed continued to increase, and a tornado started to form around them, with powerful gusts of wind reaching the Sand Siblings.

"SPINNING CRIMSON MORNING STAR!"

Then, much to their shock, Kinkaku started to move towards them as he continued spinning.

"Temari, Kankuro, attack at once!" Gaara ordered, as he moved his arms forward, commanding it to attack. "Wind Release: Multiple Sand Bullets!"

"Red Secret Move: Puppet triad!"

"Wind Release: Great Sickle Weasel Jutsu!"

Gaara's sand gathered above him into a single, massive blob, before it fired a barrage of sand missiles. Kankuro made the Sasori puppet to fire a barrage of kunai, while Sairen fired a multitude of chakra arrows from its chakra bows. Temari swung her fan, releasing a powerful wind current. The three attacks merged together into a single, destructive force, aimed for the incoming brothers...

... and were unceremoniously deflected away by the powerful spinning force Kinkaku was generating.

"What the hell!? They shrugged off some of our best moves like they were nothing!" an angry Kankuro protested.

"That's like that Hyuga defensive jutsu they have. The Heavenly Spin I believe it was called," Temari noticed.

"Does that jutsu has a weak spot, or a way to break it? Something that we can use?" Kankuro asked.

"The uppermost part of the spinning dome is the most vulnerable spot. However, with the protective winds they're generating, an attack from above would be impossible," Gaara said, as his eyes studied the incoming brothers. Then, he dropped to one knee, and slammed his hand onto the ground. "They're also vulnerable from an attack coming from below."

As the Kumo brothers moved towards them, they didn't notice that the ground started to shake. Then, a stream of sand shot from underground as if it were a geyser, sending Kinkaku, and by extension, Ginkaku, into the air, hollering and screaming profanities. Gaara waved his arms, and the sand surrounded the flying brothers, ready to encase them in a gigantic sand prison. He then clenched his hands into fists.

"Sand Coff-"

However, both Kinkaku and Ginkaku roared in unison, letting out a powerful chakra pulse that repelled the sand away as if it was the shockwave of an explosion.

"Quickly, while they're still mid air, aim for their tails!" Gaara told his siblings. "We have to stop them from using those combo attacks against us!"

Kankuro and Temari nodded.

"Wind Release: Wind Scythe!"

"Mechanical Light Arrow Shot!"

Temari swung her fan again, this time generating several crescent shaped blades of pressurized wind, while Kankuro's hooded puppet fired a large, thick chakra arrow. Both attacks hit on the pseudo-jinchuriki's tails in the part where they were wrapped around each other, breaking their physical connection, a few seconds before they landed on the ground.

"Now, to separate them," Gaara said, as he slammed both hands into the ground. "Great Sand Barrier!"

From the middle point between Gaara's hands, the former jinchuriki of the One Tail unleashed a row of rising sand pillars, bifurcating the field, and forcing the two brothers

"Kinkaku!" Ginkaku shouted.

"Forget about me! Let's tear these brats apart! We don't need the other to do such a thing!" Kinkaku replied, as he started to run on his fours towards the Sand Siblings, leaving a trail of dust behind. Sensing what his brother was doing, Ginkaku also rushed forward.

"Here they come!" Temari said.

"I know. Temari, prepare to block Kinkaku. Kankuro, you take on the other one," Gaara commanded.

"Understood," Kankuro replied, as he put himself to Gaara's right, while Temari took the left flank. "What are you going to do? Do you have a plan?"

"Yes, I do have a plan," Gaara replied. "Albeit it hinges on them not being allowed to work in tandem against us again, so try your best to keep them separated."

"Leave it to us!" Kankuro said, mmaking several hand motions to move his puppets. "They won't see what hit them!"

Kankuro's three puppets moved towards the incoming Ginkaku, with Tamotsu in the middle, its shield already prepared to block, and Sasori and Sairen a little behind it to its sides. Ginkaku, however, wasn't going to take the obvious bait.

"You think you're the first puppeteer I fight?" Ginkaku roared, as he continued running on all fours. "If you think I'm going waste any time with your little toys, you must not have a brain inside that ugly head of yours!"

"So cute. He thinks he has a chance," Kankuro chuckled, as he made a hand seal. "Sage Art: Maelstrom Shield!"

Tamotsu's shield opened up in four sections, revealing a multitude of sealing patterns under its primary shell. The seals started to glow with a blue light, and the air in front of it started to twist and swirl, as if reality itself was being teared apart.

Despite Ginkaku was trying to steer away from Tamotsu, but no matter what he did, it felt like he was being railroaded into running straight towards the shield bearing puppet. He stopped on his tracks, snarling angrily.

"I don't know what trickery is this, but it won't work!" Ginkaku said, as he raised his face while opening his jaws. Energy particles started to gather above it, forming a dark red sphere of Tailed Beast chakra. "Tailed Beast Ball Barrage!"

Ginkaku caught the energy ball inside his mouth, before spitting it in the form of multiple chakra blasts, sailing in arcs above the puppets towards Kankuro. However, much to Ginkaku's surprise and anger, the chakra bolts all altered their course so they would fly into Tamotsu's shield instead. The attack landed, resulting in a chain of explosions. However, when the smoke from the blasts dispelled, Tamotsu was there, its shield unscratched.

"Oh yeah, ranged attacks aren't going to work either," Kankuro replied. "That's why the jutsu is called 'Maelstrom Shield'. It will draw everything to it. Avoiding it is impossible."

"If I can't avoid it, then I shall smash through it!" Ginkaku roared, the berserker pseudo-jinchurikin no longer caring that he might be playing into the puppeteer's hands, as his growing rage clouded his mind. He quickly reached Tamotsu and raised a clawed hand to tear it to shreds.

Kankuro smirked.

"Mechanical Light Shield Counter Blast!"

All the energy from Ginkaku's claw swipe was absorbed and gathered into an orb of energy at the middle of the shield. The energy of that orb was released in the form of a conical chakra blast, hurling the pseudo jinchuriki backwards, skidding against the ground.

"And that's not all!" Kankuro said, as he started to make move hand and finger movements. Sasori opened several compartments around its body, revealing various weapons; Sairen removed its cloak, revealing its full appearance: a puppet with streamlined humanoid appearance. It then pulled a second chakra bow, and combined it with the first, forming an X shaped bow with two chakra strings that crossed in the middle. It pulled the two strings, generating four chakra arrows. "Sage Art: Black Secret Technique, Performance of the Warring Puppets!"

Sasori fired a multitude of kunai, senbon and shuriken from its body mounted weapons, some of them on fire, others coated in poison, others with explosive tags attached to them. Sairen let loose, firing its four chakra arrows at once, flying in an arc towards Ginkaku. When they reached their highest point, they split into dozen of smaller chakra arrows, and they arced down towards the undead ninja. The barrage of steel and chakra projectiles, engulfing him inside a chain of explosions.

...

While Kankuro dealt with Ginkaku, Kinkaku, at the other side of the sand barrier, fought Temari. Like his brother, he let the animalistic feelings overwhelm his body and mind, and start running on all fours towards the Suna kunoichi. So far, the only thing inside the older brother's mind was pure, unadulterated anger and hatred.

"Wind Release: Great Wind Protective Wall!"

Temari swung her war fan, creating an extremely powerful gust of wind in order to push the incoming Kinkaku back. The pseudo-jinchuriki, however, avoided it by quickly digging underground.

"He can use Earth jutsu as well?" Gaara asked.

"So it seems," Temari said, as her eyes darted to the ground.
"Normally I'd be worried, but thanks to Sage Mode, I can sense exactly where he is."

Temari then folded her war fan, and raised it above her head while running forward. A blue aura started to form around the fan as Temari channeled chakra through it.

"There!"

Temari slammed her folded fan into the ground as if it was a club. Between Temari's Senjutsu-enhanced strength and all the chakra she had been channeling into the weapon, the impact managed to crack the earth, opening a hole, blowing chunks of ground and dirt away, and more importantly, forcing Kinkaku out into the open.

"SHIT!"

"Gaara, try to catch him while he's airborne!" Temari yelled.

"Understood," Gaara said, as he waved a hand.

Part of the sand forming the barrier shot towards Kinkaku in the form of a powerful stream. However, the eldest of the Gold and Silver Brothers wasn't going to go down so easily. Kinkaku opened his jaws, and energy particles started to gather in front of them, taking the form of a dark red sphere of chakra. After a couple seconds, Kinkaku's jaws closed around the sphere.

"Tailed Beast Lightning Cluster!"

When Kinkaku opened his jaws again, a torrent of red lightning bolts came from it, blasting the wave of sand, which allowed him to hit the ground safely and continued forward. The attack didn't run out of fuel just yet, as he continued to breathe more bolts of destructive chakra from his mouth.

"Wind Release: Wind Wall!"

Temari blew her fan, this time downwards in a vertical motion, creating another wave of wind in order to stop the incoming the incoming beast shaped man. However, despite the powerful wind, Kinkaku was able to remain anchored to the ground thanks to the claws at the end of his fingers, and continued his advance even if it was at a slower pace.

Then, they all heard a series of explosions from the other side of the sand barrier. The three of them could feel how Ginkaku's chakra weakened considerably. Kinkaku stopped on his tracks, looked between shocked and outraged.

"Ginkaku! No!" the golden haired brother shouted.

Kinkaku lowered his body, and after a couple seconds, leaped into the air, easily going over the sand barrier. Spikes of sand grew over the barrier in an effort to catch him, but he was too high.

"Okay, I wasn't expecting he could do that," Temari said, admitting how amazed she was. "But I guess that we should have seen it coming."

"It is of no consequence," Gaara calmly said. "Kankuro has been able to incapacitate the other brother, and this one has already fallen into my trap."

"He has?" Temari asked, confused.

"Yes. Now let's hurry, we need to help our brother."

...

Back to Kankuro and Ginkaku, the younger brother had now reverted to his human form, the Senjutsu-enhanced bombardment being too much for him to handle. Aside from his chakra cloak, he had lost both legs and an arm. He could feel them slowly regenerating, as well as his chakra, but not fast enough before stopping Kankuro from sealing him.

"GINKAKU!"

With a loud boom, Kinkaku, still in his chakra cloak, landed near the fallen Ginkaku. Perhaps his older brother could buy the silver haired man enough time to regenerate.

"Ginkaku! Who did this to you!?" his brother roared. Looking around, he saw Kankuro, as well as his three puppets he was controlling through many chakra threads. "You! It was you!"

Kankuro smirked. "I always love when somebody recognizes a work well done."

Kinkaku didn't take just jest kindly. As his rage reached new heights, his chakra cloak burned brighter, his body grew in size, and moving his head back, he let out an extremely loud roar. He then started to rush towards Kankuro on all fours, his footsteps leaving smoking holes in the ground, and a trail of fire behind him. The Sage Puppeteer gulped, and hoped that Tamotsu would be able to withstand this onslaught as it did with the younger brother.

"Temari, now!" Gaara's voice said.

"Sage Art: All Encompassing Vortex!"

Temari landed in front of Kankuro, and blew her fan a single time, producing an extremely powerful hurricane. In his feral state, Kinkaku didn't even think in attaching himself to the ground like he did before, and was elevated into the air. As the hurricane kept growing, it also managed to suck the fallen Ginkaku in.

"Time to end this," Gaara said, as he held out an open hand towards the hurricane. The sand barrier broke apart into a shapeless mass of sand, and Gaara directed it towards the hurricane, wind and sand merging into an intense sandstorm. "Kankuro, Temari, prepare the sealing tags!"

"You got it!" Kankuro said, as he and his sister got ready.

Gaara then closed his open hand into a fist. "Imperial Sand Burial!"

Suddenly, the raging sandstorm stopped, and all the sand condensed into a solid structure shaped like a pyramid, falling to the ground with a loud thud. As soon as it did, Temari and Kankuro rushed towards it, and slapped many chakra suppressing sealing tags around it. Chains of sealing symbols spread from the paper tags, covering the pyramid entirely.

The three Sages could sense how the chakra of the two brothers receded, until they could no longer sense it.

This fight belonged to the Sand Siblings. And soon, the rest of the battle going around them would follow.

Author's Note: You know, one thing I didn't like about Kinkaku and Ginkaku is that they relied too much on the Sacred Tools to fight, and had no jutsu or ability they could call their own, that's why I had them lose them so relatively quickly. I also thought I could expand a little more their abilities as pseudo-jinchuriki, given that Kinkaku only goes on a short rampage before he's sealed away. Anyway, I hope you liked my version of their fight.

Say, did you like the bullshit I came out with Yakumo helping Haku to use ninjutsu without hand seals? Yeah, stuff like that is why I'm so glad I didn't end up making her part of the regular cast. That ability of her is way too OP.

And boom goes Deidara! Man, it's amazing that the guy managed to survive so damn long into the story. While I wanted to keep him alive for longer than canon did, I wasn't planning it to be so long. But I just couldn't find the right moment to off him, so he ended up outlasting more important members like Kisame or Toneri. Oh, and some people, as well as the TVTropes page, wondered how he was recruited into Akatsuki since Itachi never joined them to begin with. It was Pain and Konan themselves who brought him into the fold. And unlike Itachi, who used genjutsu to defeat him, you can bet Pain was a lot more... forceful.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Guess we'll see each other again next year. I wish you guys a Merry Christmas and happy holidays, and above all else, to make out of this cursed year alive. See you in 2021!

And of course, don't forget to leave a review with your thoughts on this chapter. Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Sandstorm Subsides

Author's Note: First of all, Happy New Year, my dear readers! Let's hope 2021 turns out to be at least an improvement over 2020.

So, due how many people have Sage Mode in this fic, there's some confusion over who has it and who hasn't (many readers mentioned they were under the impression Kurenai was a Sage), so here's a list of all the current Sages: Naruto, Jiraiya, Tsunade, Hinata, Hanabi, Shizune, Shisui, Asuma, Karin, Rin, Gaara, Kankuro, Temari, Fu and Mei.

Now, enjoy the next chapter:

Chapter 119:

The Sandstorm Subsides

or

The Tutorial is Over

Turtle Island

As it was usual for Naruto after he befriended the Nine Tails, the blond Jinchuriki was at the edge of the shore of the island, trying to master the Tailed Beast Ball. Turns out, his hypothesis was correct, and spinning the ball like with the Rasengan helped stabilize the volatile chakra of the Nine Tails. However, while it made it easier, it didn't mean that it solved the problem, since Naruto still had trouble to master the jutsu completely.

The blond had lost count on how many times he had tried just today, but he had a feeling that he was close to it. He was using his two arms to hold the sphere, as well as four additional arms made of golden chakra to keep the sphere stable and the rotation going. It seemed that this time he was going to do it.

"Come on... come on... !" Naruto said, as beads of sweat trickled down his neck, his golden-red eyes fixed on the sphere of chakra, expecting to destabilize and blow up at any moment.

But the moment never came. The sphere was stable. The fast rotation held the chakra in place.

" Heh, guess you finally did it, brat," Kurama praised his host. "Not a true Tailed Beast Ball of course, but an acceptable facsimile you can rely on until you master the real thing."

"Thanks. I guess," Naruto replied. Even then, he still was unsure about when the grumpy Fox's compliments were genuine or mocking.

" Now throw it, and see the effect," Kurama told the blond.

Naruto nodded, and careful not to stop the rotation, he brought his arms back, before tossing the Tailed Beast Ball into the ocean. The sphere traveled in a wide arc for a couple hundred meters, until it crashed into the water, producing a decent sized dome-shaped explosion.

" Not bad, brat. For the first time, definitely not bad," Kurama said.

"Hey yo, Naruto, that was a pretty neat Tailed Beast Ball! It seems that you finally surpassed that wall!" a voice said behind him.

Naruto turned around, and saw Killer B standing there, arms crossed, with his lips curved into a small smirk.

"Heh, thanks," Naruto said, rubbing the back of his head. "Though, Kurama said I still have a long way to go until I can master his chakra completely."

"Hey, no worries, getting used to Tailed Beast Chakra takes some time. Just keep training like you've been doing, and you'll be fine!" Killer B rapped. "I myself had to do a lot of wait until I was able to turn into Number Eight! So don't worry, you'll get there, and in the meantime, prepare."

"Though, now that you mention it, it's been a while since the last time I tried the Tailed Beast form. Hey Kurama, you think that with all the progress I've made I can do it now?" Naruto asked.

" I find it unlikely, but there's no hurt in trying," Kurama said, with a shrug. "No hurt for me, of course. It will probably hurt a lot for you."

Naruto felt like saying something, but decided not to dignify that with a response. Instead, he clapped his hands together and focused his chakra. Thinking in the form of the Nine Tails, the chakra cloak started to grow, first in the form of a shapeless glob, then, little by little, it started to take the form of the fox, first growing arms and legs, then the head, then nine stubs that would grow into the nine tails. Or that was the plan, because the chakra construct fell apart halfway transformation.

"Dammit!" the blond yelled, as he punched the sand. "I thought I was going to do it this time!"

"Like I said, you're still not ready, the Nine Tails chakra ain't steady! But worry not, the chakra of number nine will be fine in no time!" Killer B said. "Though, I must ask, is there anything that makes you worry? You're pushing yourself hard, there's no need to hurry."

"There is, though, There's a war out there, and the sooner we finish our training, the sooner we'll be able to help them," Naruto said, as he looked into the horizon. "People from our villages are dying every second, fighting a war to protect us. I don't want more people to die than those who did already."

Killer B sighed, but nodded, understanding where the blond came from. "Listen, Naruto, I know what you mean. Wars are ugly, they are never clean. It's a sad reality we have to face, sometimes ninjas die so others don't have to take their place. If we just go out now we'll play into Akatsuki's hands, by staying here we protect our homelands."

" Heh, wish you were this responsible when I asked you not to fake your own death to go on a vacation, B," Gyuki intervened, making his host frown, and getting a chuckle out of Naruto.

"Shut up, Number Eight, I didn't ask for your opinion! B needed that vacation, he ain't nobody's minion!" Killer B protested.

Naruto shook his head. "I don't think that's the problem. I think I'm already used enough to Kurama's chakra, especially after all this training," Naruto explained. "But when I try the Tailed Beast Form... I don't know, it feels like I'm missing something. How did you manage to achieve the Tailed Beast form?"

B seemingly grew pensive, as he placed his hand under his chin.

"Jinchuriki are two being sharing a single body, the two need to agree, or the result will be shoddy. If you want to get the job done, the key to that is to work as one!" Killer B explained.

"Work as one, uh?" Naruto replied, trying to make sense of B's explanation. "But Kurama and I are already working as one. We became friends, and he allows me to use his chakra freely... it is because we aren't close enough?"

His heart was starting to hurt. Naruto decided to leave that for later.

"By the way, where is Fu? I don't see her," he asked.

"She finished her training, she said she was tired. Headed into the jungle, playing with the animals there gets her all fired," Killer B explained. "And I believe you should take a rest too, you won't make any progress if you're exhausted, get it, fool?"

Naruto let out a sigh of defeat. "Okay. I'll cut my losses and celebrate that I sorta managed to master the Tailed Beast Ball."

Killer B nodded, and the two jinchuriki walked out of the beach. Still, Naruto wasn't going to take any days off. He had a feeling in his gut that he needed to master the power of the Nine Tails as soon as possible. He would need it to face the war's final challenge.

And he wasn't wrong.

...

Fourth Division's Camp Base, Nighttime.

Soon after Kinkaku and Ginkaku's defeat, the Sand Siblings quickly moved to incapacitate other Impure World Resurrection zombies, who proved to be far less challenging than the Gold and Silver Brothers. This caused the tide of the battle to quickly shift in the Alliance's favor, and the Akatsuki, realizing this, ordered the White Zetsu to retreat and their reanimations to be recalled.

Unfortunately, one of the reanimations that was successfully recalled before it could be sealed away was that of Danzo's, meaning that they'll have to deal with the crafty old man again.

After their resounding victory, Rasa ordered his troops to move back to the coast and build their base there, with better defenses this time in order to better avoid a future possible attack by the enemy by sea. By the time they were done, night fell over them, and the Allied ninjas sat around bonfires in order to enjoy a well deserved meal.

Rasa, as the commander, had the duty to report the result of the battle to the Ninja Alliance HQ, thanks to a Yamanaka clan member linking their mind via telepathic jutsu.

" Good job protecting the Land of Lightning, Kazekage," Onoki congratulated the brown haired man. "Especially given the caliber of the reanimations you and your men had to face against."

"Thanks. It wasn't an easy task, I can assure you," Rasa replied.
"Those guys were tough. And that was before they revealed their hidden power."

" The Gold and Silver brothers were pretty high in our list of potential future reanimations. I find a bit odd that Orochimaru waited until now to send them," Onoki chimed in.

" If Orochimaru is sending his heavyweights now, that can only mean two things," Chiyo intervened. "Either Akatsuki is nearing their endgame and is preparing for one final push, or they're getting desperate. Neither of them foresee good things for us, but I wish it was the latter's case."

" By the way, how were you able to subdue those two monsters, Rasa?" Onoki inquired. "I fought them in my prime, and they gave me one of the hardest fights in my life."

"Thankfully, my children picked up quite the useful skill from the Supreme Commander's son when I sent them as part of the relief group to help Konoha reconstruct after it was attacked by the Akatsuki," Rasa explained. "Sage Mode. I'd say that right now, all three of them are far stronger than I am."

" A father should always feel proud when a child surpasses him, Kazekage," Onoki replied.

" These recent developments are surely making me rethink my stance on alliances with other villages," Chiyo mused. "Given the results..."

" Continue with your report, Kazekage," Onoki told him.

Rasa nodded, as he continued. "Other notable reanimations we had to deal with was Danzo Shimura," Rasa continued. "Unfortunately, he escaped."

"Danzo was also in the list among the most likely candidates to be brought back," Ao intervened. "The Supreme Commander added him to the list himself."

"By the way, when you requested the help of the air force, it was mentioned that Deidara was leading them," Onoki intervened. "What about him? Did he escape again? Or was he killed or captured?"

"Ah, the man who kidnapped my son," Rasa replied, sounding sour. "Yes, he was taken down. By that ex-Akatsuki woman. Nothing would have made me happier than killing that bastard myself, but I do appreciate the irony of his demise coming at the hands of one of his fellow Akatsuki."

This seemed to please Onoki. "Good, good. The world is a better place now that that traitor is no longer among the living."

"Still, I wouldn't put past Orochimaru to revive him as well," Chiyo said.

"We haven't had any signs of Kisame being revived after his death. Then again, he might have been keeping them as a reserve force for an emergency," Ao stated.

"It's a possibility. Though something that troubles my mind is that I feel Orochimaru hasn't revealed his best assets yet," Rasa said. "According to what the Supreme Commander told me, when Orochimaru first attacked Konoha, he brought back its past three Hokages. Given that he's now proficient in the jutsu enough to resurrect hundreds of ninjas of great power... it seems suspicious that he hasn't deployed any previous Kage against us."

"The quality of the reanimations increases with each battle. I assume we will see former Kages very soon," Chiyo said.

" Let's hope we're ready for when such moment arrives," Onoki noted. "Anything else to say, Kazekage?"

"Nothing at all," Rasa replied.

" Very well. In that case, let's conclude this report here. Expect a convoy with supplies in the next hours," the acting Supreme Commander said.

Rasa nodded, and the mental link was broken.

...

Kurenai, her two students Haku and Yakumo, as well as Hotaru, were sitting on benches across a bonfire, enjoying their meals after a rather harsh day of battles. Despite the victory, though, the mood was a little somber, because among other things, none of the four ninjas present had managed to beat the enemies they faced, either because they managed to flee, or because they needed additional help to deal with them.

The mood didn't go unnoticed by Kurenai, who decided to try to cheer them up a little. "Well, another day, another victory for the Ninja Alliance. We're a little closer to the definitive end of the war now."

"I guess so," Yakumo said. "It would have been nice if we got to capture and seal Danzo, though. That old bastard will show up again, and cause more misery."

"Don't be too hard on yourself, Yakumo," Kurenai said, placing a hand on her shoulder. "Even in his old age, Danzo Shimura was one of the strongest ninjas Konoha ever produced, being close in power and skill to our very own Third Hokage. Not to mention all the body modifications he had, such as Hashirama's cells or Fugaku Uchiha's Mangekyo Sharingan. The fact that you and Haku managed to hold your own against him was really impressive."

"Not to mention that he was familiar with your Bloodline Limit and devised a way to counter it," Haku added. "The deck was stacked against us, yet we prevailed."

"Wait, Danzo knew how to counter your jutsu?" Kurenai asked in shock, leaning forward. "I thought Yakumo's genjutsu could only be countered with more genjutsu!"

Yakumo looked a little upset, not happy with having to talk about Danzo's accomplishments, especially since they were about neutralizing her. "Well, since my Bloodline Limit affects the victim's minds even more than normal genjutsu, so he thought about using Yamanaka mental jutsu to create shields inside his mind in order to repel or undo my illusions."

Kurenai never felt so dumb in her life. It was so simple, yet so brilliant. How is that nobody thought about that before? Had she asked a Yamanaka for help to deal with Yakumo when she was struggling to keep her powers under control, perhaps a lot of lives could have been saved, and Yakumo wouldn't have to go through several years of hell under Root as one of Danzo's human puppets.

"Yakumo, I'm so sorry!" Kurenai said, shaken by guilt. "Had I thought of that, a lot of tragedies could have been averted."

Yakumo grabbed Kurenai's hand, and smiled at her. "It's okay, sensei. It's in the past."

"But... your parents could be alive! And you could had a normal life!" Kurenai continued. "Had I been a better sensei and ninja, none of this-"

"Kurenai-sensei, stop," Yakumo told her, shaking her head. "Like I said, it's in the past. I might hate Danzo, he might be many things, but stupid isn't one of them. Quite the opposite, in fact. Plus, Danzo was always compiling information on how to neutralize enemies, both already existing, and potential ones like me at the time. He was very good at that."

"I... okay, I'll stop, for now," Kurenai agreed, though Yakumo frowned a little at the last part. "We have a war to win, and I can't afford to let anything distract me. None of us can."

"That's a good mindset to have. The next batch of enemies we'll have to fight against will be even stronger than these ones," Haku pointed out.

"Yeah, the reanimations are getting tougher and tougher. The one reanimation I fought against, a Kiri ninja named Harusame, also kicked my ass," Hotaru said a little bashfully. "Then again, he was Uakata-sensei's Jonin-sensei, so I had no business fighting him at all. Then I went to help Kurenai-san with that Akatsuki and... the results were the same."

"It's very hard to fight an airborne enemy when your means to flight are rudimentary at best," Kurenai replied with a nod. "Had I have Haku's assistance, like the last time we fought him, we would have brought him down for good."

"The important part is that Deidara did meet his end today. The fact that it wasn't at your hands wasn't important," Haku stated. "A job done is a job done, no matter how or who did it."

"Guess that's something Zabuza would say, hm?" Kurenai mentioned.

"Yes. Pragmatism is a must in the life of a ninja. Even without Zabuza-sama's guidance, it's a lesson I could have learned over time myself," Haku said. "Unlike your battle, our job wasn't finished, meaning that Danzo will eventually come back."

"Though, it's not that what happened today was anything new," Hotaru pointed out. "I did hear that Mei-sama's division was only able to nail about half of the reanimated swordsmen."

"You may be right. But Orochimaru won't have the element of surprise if he uses the same reanimation more than once," Kurenai mentioned. "Reanimations can't get any stronger than they were when they died, can they?"

"I'm not really sure, but I'd say they aren't," Hotaru guessed. "Not that they weren't strong as hell to begin with."

"What I mean is, we fought them, we know what jutsu they have. Perhaps not all of them, but many of them," Kurenai began.

"Meaning that we can come up with a counter strategy in order to fight back against them the next time they show up. It's an advantage they have that we should capitalize."

"The ones who fought against Danzo the most were Shisui-san and Shizune-san. Shisui-san isn't here, but Shizune-san is. Perhaps we could ask her about what abilities Danzo used against her and Shisui-san when they fought him in the Valley of the End," Haku began.

"And I guess Mizukage-sama must know something about Harusame, given that he was the Jonin-sensei of one of Kiri's jinchuriki," Hotaru said, resting her chin under a finger. "Plus-"

Suddenly, Hotaru grew very quiet, and her eyes became wide as plates. The Kiri kunoichi looked as if she just saw a ghost. Or something worse.

"Hotaru-san?" Haku asked, a little worried. "Are you feeling well?"

Hotaru didn't reply, at least at first. The blond girl needed a few seconds to snap back to reality and process Haku's words. "Huh? Oh, yes, yes, I'm fine! Very fine!"

"Are you sure?" Kurenai asked, raising an eyebrow. "Because the way you're acting... that does not suggest that you're fine at all."

"I may be a little shaken from the battle. This is my first battle after all," she quickly said, as she stood up. "I think I may need to take a walk in order to clear my mind out."

"Okay..." Yakumo said. "Just do what you think is best for you, Hotaru-san."

The Kiri kunoichi then left the bonfire, leaving the three Konoha ninjas alone. All of them shared looks of worry.

...

Meanwhile, in another bonfire, Gaara, Temari and Kankuro were also having dinner, and talking among each other. Naturally, their mood was much brighter, given their victory over the Gold and Silver brothers.

"We just defeated two of Kumo's most infamously strong ninjas," Kankuro began, overflowing with excitement. "Who actually killed Konoha's Second Hokage. Who were immortal and had infinite chakra. And we beat them! Without breaking a sweat!"

"I wouldn't dare to say 'without breaking a sweat', Kankuro," Gaara told his older brother. "Even if we beat them, the Gold and Silver brothers proved to be formidable adversaries. Had not be for Sage Mode, I doubt we would have beaten them, even before they used the power of the Nine Tails they had within them."

"Come on Gaara, try to enjoy the victory we had today," Kankuro said. "This is going to look great on our record sheet!"

"Strange as it sounds, I'm with Kankuro here," Temari interjected, much to the puppeteer's surprise. "Those two psychos had to be among Orochimaru's strongest reanimations. The fact that we beat them not only means that we deprived the enemy from two of its strongest assets, but that we can take almost anything Akatsuki throws at us."

"That sounds awfully a lot like tempting fate, sister," Gaara replied. "There is always a stronger opponent waiting to cross path with you. As long as this war lasts, we should remain vigilant."

"Well said, son," a new voice said.

The three siblings looked up, and saw their father, the Kazekage, walking towards them. Though when he arrived, he didn't sit with them.

"Father," Gaara said. "Did you finish your briefing with the HQ?"

"Yes, thank goodness. I preferred to have to deal with Jiraiya. The way that old midget questions me gets on my nerves," Rasa said in a low voice, gritting his teeth. "Let's hope Jiraiya comes back from his trip soon."

While the news of the attack on the HQ, as well as Jiraiya and Tsunade going on a mission to kill Orochimaru was a strict secret for obvious reasons, with only the Division Commanders and other high ranking members of the Alliance being aware of it. Though, given their status, the Sand Siblings were among those few privy of the secret.

"Did you get any update on how their mission is going?" Temari asked, in a similar low voice.

"Not at all. Then again, I doubt they're sending messages telling us how close they are to the target," Rasa said. "If there's a target to begin with."

"Bummer," Kankuro said. "Let's hope they can end this soon enough. Depriving the enemy of all the reanimations at once would make this war end in a jiffy."

"We can't put all our hopes on something that comes from such an unreliable source," Rasa said. "I'm afraid we'll have to win the war the old fashioned way. Still, given the display of power you three did today, it gives me hope that we can end this with less casualties than I initially feared."

"I hope you are not upset because we defeated an enemy you weren't able to beat, father," Gaara said, cautiously eyed his progenitor and military leader.

"In another time, I would have been. Now... not in the slightest," Rasa said, letting out a sigh. Then, he walked towards the bench they were sitting at, and sat besides them. "That Sage Mode is sure something."

"I know, right? I wish we had that when Deidara and Sasori ambushed us that time. We would have kicked their asses so hard...!" Kankuro said, grinning maniacally, making punching motions.

"Speaking of which, I did heard that the Akatsuki, Deidara, had been killed. By that other Akatsuki, no less," Temari said.

"I still wish I was the one to put an end to that man's life, but I'll be content with the thought that he got his just punishment and won't be able to hurt more people again," Gaara said, nodding a little.

Temari started to mentally count, as her mouth moved without making any sound. "So... with Deidara out of comission, and Kisame also killed by the Mizukage... and given that the Moon Puppets stopped working a few days ago, Toneri must had bitten the dust... the only Akatsuki members still alive right now are Obito and Orochimaru."

"The two most dangerous members," Gaara said, nodding. "Taking them down will be much harder than the others."

"Fortunately, Orochimaru is already living on borrowed time, if what we know is true. No matter how powerful he became, there's no way he can stand to the Supreme Commander and Tsunade-sama as they are now," Kankuro confidnetly said.

"Yes, I'm sure their Sage powers will bring them a swift victory," Rasa agreed, before letting out another sigh. "If I knew the true power behind Senjutsu, I would have sent you three to Konoha long before I did."

"What about you, father? Wouldn't you want to learn how to use this power as well?" Gaara asked.

"I would. But my position as Kazekage leaves me little time to do much training. And from what you guys told me, it took a lot of days of intensive training until you got down the basics," Rasa replied.

"You can always take a few days off," Kankuro suggested, before his face scrunched into a frown. "Now that I think about it, I don't remember seeing you taking any days off."

"That's because I didn't," Rasa said. "Others might do it, but I can't stand the thought of leaving the village in somebody else's hands when I can do the job. I couldn't wait for the Kage Summit to end for that very reason."

"Well, maybe you should. At least when this war is over," Temari said.

Rasa turned at Temari as if she had grown a second head. "Have you lost your mind? That's when the village is going to need me the most!"

"Okay, I give up," Temari said, throwing her hands into the air. Kankuro groaned, while Gaara stayed silent. "We only wanted you to unwind and maybe spend some time with the children you barely raised, but whatever."

This seemed to have some effect on Rasa, who was taken aback, and started to rethink of what he just said.

"I'm... sorry," he began, sounding like saying that word strained him. "I know I've been far from the best father. But once this is over, I'll try to make it up to you. I remember when I almost lost all three of you, and one of the things I regretted the most was not being there for you while you were growing up."

"You mean it?" Temari asked, narrowing an eye at him.

"Yes," Rasa said, looking at them with genuine pride. "I know I don't say this very often, but... I'm very proud of the persons and ninjas you've grown into. And you did it without my help. I'm sure you three will lead our village to a great future once I'm no longer here."

Surprisingly, Gaara smiled. "Thank you, father. We will continue making both you and our village proud."

...

Konan, as per usual, was alone. Often deliberately avoiding the rest of the ninjas she fought alongside with. She knew trying to fraternize with them was an exercise in pointlessness who would only lead to strife and conflict, the last things the Ninja Alliance needed right now.

Fortunately for her, despite being widely known as a former Akatsuki member, nobody sought her out. Nobody tried to attack her, kill her, or even verbally berate her. They probably understood that doing so wouldn't end well for any of the parties involved. Or didn't understand that, but knew they could get into trouble with the high command, given that Konan was a very valuable asset.

Until now, that's it.

A small square of paper appeared between the bluenette's fingers, and turning around at an impossible speed, she tossed it at the feet of her stalker, who yelped in shock, while jumping in the air.

"I don't know what are your intentions," Konan said, amber eyes narrowing at the other ninja, a girl with blue eyes, blond hair, and a prominent forehead, wearing a Kirigakure uniform. "But approaching me was a mistake."

"Perhaps," the Kiri kunoichi said, fear disappearing from her eyes as her blue gaze met Konan's amber. "But I felt it's something I had to do. Though, first, answer me this: do you know who I am?"

Konan scanned the Kiri kunoichi from head to toe, her face remained frozen in a neutral expression. The bluenette finally spoke.

"You are the partner of the Jinchuriki of the Six Tails. Nagato and I battled you, as well as Naruto and two of his companions, on Nagi island a few months ago," Konan said. The Kiri kunoichi appeared to be surprised that Konan remembered her. "I don't think I ever learned your name."

"My name is Hotaru," Hotaru said, her voice quivered a little in an attempt to sound firm. "And the jinchuriki you and your partner kidnapped and murdered was Uta-kata. He was a person, not just some container for a Tailed Beast."

"And let me guess, you are planning to avenge his death at our hands," Konan replied, as she turned her back at Hotaru. Her tone was factual, and there wasn't a hint of mockery or regret. "If you feel you must do that, wait at least until the war is over. Then again, you might have to fight other people over the right of ending my life. My stay in Akatsuki created quite a few enemies, not without reason."

"I don't plan to kill you," Hotaru replied, as her hands clenched into fists. "I know of your power, and I know you could kill me without putting any real effort."

"Then why are you here? Do you want me to apologize to you? To tell you how much I regret having a hand in Uta-kata's death, as well in the deaths of all the people Akatsuki killed, either directly or indirectly?" Konan asked again. "I have no problem doing that, but it won't bring Uta-kata back. It won't even relieve your grief in the slightest either."

"I know that already. I'm here... because I wanted to ask you something," Hotaru said, fighting back the tears that formed at the corner of her eyes, as the memory of her beloved sensei's last moments played in her mind. "Why? Why did you do it? What were you expected to gain?"

"I thought every ninja was briefed about Akatsuki's plans and motives. Or don't you even know why are so many villages fighting for the jinchuriki of two villages?" Konan asked.

"I know Akatsuki's motives," Hotaru said. "But I want to hear them from your mouth. A member, who was directly involved in Uzakata-sensei's demise. A member who used me as a bait to force him to sacrifice himself for my own sake. I want you to tell me what were you thinking exactly when you and your partner were fighting us."

Konan turned around and started to walk away. "This is a waste of our time-"

"It's not for me!" Hotaru yelled, as she walked towards Konan, grabbed her by the arm, and forced her to turn back at Hotaru. The former Akatsuki member didn't resist. "It's not for me."

"Why?" Konan asked. "Shouldn't it be easier if you simply saw me as some kind of irredeemable demon?"

"Because I know you aren't a demon," Hotaru replied. "Today, you saved my life and Kurenai-san's life. That Iwa Akatsuki was on the verge of defeating us, but you fought and killed him before he could finish the job. You even offered him a chance to leave Akatsuki."

"I was offered the chance to atone for my sins, and my sins aren't smaller than Deidara's. He deserved just as much," Konan said. "But I know what awaits me once the war ends and I'm no longer useful. I'll spend the rest of my days inside a cell. Perhaps that's why Deidara didn't want to leave Akatsuki. He knew that he would only have a life if Akatsuki won. Though I find that just as unlikely. Obito would probably dispose of him once he was no longer useful."

"Yet you're here. Fighting to undo your wrongs, even if you know that you won't evade the punishment for your crimes," Hotaru pointed out. "A truly evil person... a person like that wouldn't do that. So I want to know what drove a person like you to commit the crimes you did, to bring misery to so many people."

Konan looked at the younger woman with skeptical eyes. Still, she decided that there was no harm in humoring her.

"In that case, you better sit down. The story is not a short one."

Konan started to tell her tale: how she and Yahiko found Nagato. How all three of them were found and trained by Jiraiya, after the latter found about Nagato's Rinnegan. The foundation of Yahiko's Akatsuki. The Third Ninja War. Hanzo and Danzo. Yahiko's death. Finding Obito. Nagato's transformation into Pain, the birth of Pain's Akatsuki. The jinchuriki hunt. The Invasion of Konoha. And lastly, the confrontation with Naruto, followed by Nagato's death.

"From the day we were born, Nagato, Yahiko and I were surrounded by death. We lost most of our loved ones at an early age. Then the two of us lost Yahiko. And we... we wanted that to end. We wanted to create a world where no kids would lost their parents before they knew how to talk and walk, because ninjas were forced to fight and die in wars started by other people.

"Have you ever been so consumed by despair, that you'd do anything for it to end? For somebody to reassure you that things would get better? That there was more to this world than pain, loss and suffering?" Konan asked. "I would have killed myself a long time ago, if not because Nagato told me that the best way to honor Yahiko's death is to live and create a world that would make him proud."

"Would Yahiko be proud of all the people you killed? Of all the suffering you brought into this world?" Hotaru asked.

"I know he wouldn't," Konan said, her voice being firm. If Hotaru was expecting her question to shake Konan, she failed. "It took Naruto fighting us again to make us realize the error of our ways. However, my convictions hasn't changed. I still want to create, or help to create, at least a world better than the one I had to live in. That's what keeps me going. That's my 'reward', so to speak.

"Well, you asked me about why I do the things I do, both in the past and in the present, and I answered it in the most honest way possible," Konan said. "Is that all, or is there something else you also want to ask me?"

"No, that's all," Hotaru said, letting out a sigh she didn't know she was holding. "I... I don't think I'll ever forgive you for what you did."

"I don't expect you to," Konan said. "I killed somebody who was precious to you, and you hate me for it. The cycle of hatred isn't something everybody can break. I know that better than most people."

"However, listening to you made me understand quite a few things. About you, about the world... about the ninja system currently in place..." Hotaru said, as she sat up. "All my life, I wanted to be a ninja. But I never had a solid reason for me to want such a thing. If I am to stop more people to lose their loved ones like I lost Utakata-sensei... then I need to stop people like your younger self from becoming people like your present self."

"Yes... it would have been nice if there were more people like you and Naruto when I was your age," Konan said sadly.

Deciding the conversation was over, Konan started to break down into a multitude of paper sheets, which folded themselves in the form of origami butterflies, all flying away, leaving Hotaru alone.

"Well, that didn't went as bad I as feared."

Or, at least, she thought she was alone. Startled by the sudden voice coming from behind, Hotaru yelped and turned around in shock, seeing Haku appearing out of nowhere, as he dispelled the genjutsu that kept him hidden.

"Haku? You... you've been there the whole time?" Hotaru asked.

"I had to. When we saw you going after Konan, somebody had to make sure you didn't do something stupid," Haku explained.

"Kurenai-sensei wanted to go herself, but she thought that I was the better choice, given that we knew each other for longer."

"Wait... you realized that the reason I reacted that way was Konan?" Hotaru asked, incredulous.

Haku stared at the blond kunoichi flatly. "We're ninjas, Hotaru-san. Kurenai's a full Jonin, and I'm a Special Jonin despite my young age. We both noticed Konan walking past our bonfire, and the way you reacted to it."

"Then why didn't you guys say anything, and acted like nothing happened?" Hotaru asked.

"Do I need to repeat myself?" Haku asked, sighing a little. "Besides, we wanted to give you a chance and see if you were able to restrain yourself. And I'm glad to see that our faith in you wasn't misplaced. Sorry for spying on you like that, I can imagine some of the things you said weren't meant for privy ears."

Hotaru visibly deflated. "No, it's okay, it... it doesn't matter anymore. Sorry if I worried you guys. I felt I needed some closure on Utakata-sensei's death, and thought that facing his killer would bring it to me."

"Did it bring the closure you sought?" Haku asked.

"A little," Hotaru said. "You know, the saddest part is... Konan isn't a bad person. Under different circumstances, I think we could have gotten along..."

"In a way, I understand what she went through," Haku said. "I also grew up in a country torn by war and hatred, and that hatred deprived me of my parents. However, I was found by Zabuza-sama, and then I met Naruto, Hinata and Kurenai-sensei. While Konan... was found by Obito."

"Then let's make sure such thing won't happen again," Hotaru said with renewed determination. "First, let's end this war. And then, we will make sure to create a new world. One where the circumstances that led to Akatsuki's creation will never happen."

"Yeah, let's," Haku said with an approving nod. "You know, I'm sure that if Utakata-san could see you now, he'll be proud of the ninja you've grown into."

Hotaru smiled in return. "Yes. I will create a world that will make my sensei proud."

...

Mountain Graveyard

"Well, another defeat. And on top of that, we just lost Deidara," Obito grumbled, as he walked back and forth through the cave both he and Orochimaru were using as a base of sorts. "Your reanimations are proving to be such a huge help," he snarled.

This time, Orochimaru didn't keep his friendly façade, and met Obito's glare with one of his own. "The Ninja Alliance is proving to be more resilient than either of us predicted. Though, if the course of the war is going so badly on our end, imagine how little you would have accomplished with your army of Zetsu clones and the few Akatsuki members left."

"And that fool Deidara got himself killed. By Konan no less," Obito said, clenching his fists as rage filled his body at the thought of that traitor. "I'm going to make sure that bitch's death is slow and painful. Nobody crosses me and lives to tell the tale."

Orochimaru felt tempted to say something, but decided that riling Obito up even more would be counterproductive. Instead, he decided to try to calm him down.

"Things aren't as bad as you think, Obito-kun. You can still grow more Zetsu clones. And I can summon again the reanimations that have been destroyed," Orochimaru suggested. "As long as I round up a few hundreds of people to use as sacrifices, that is. We can recover from our losses much faster than the Ninja Alliance can. If this become a war of attrition, they will inevitably lose."

"We can't afford to reach that point, Orochimaru. This is a race against the clock. We need to catch those three jinchuriki and feed their Tailed Beasts to the statue as soon as possible," Obito insisted.

Orochimaru raised an eyebrow. "I wasn't aware that we were working under a timetable. Obito-kun, is there something you are hiding from me?"

"As if you didn't hide secrets from me either," Obito said. "You're older than me, didn't you hear the saying that the life of a ninja is measured in secrets, and that the moment they have none, their life ends?"

"Yes, I probably heard it before you were even born. I'm very old, after you so sagely noted," Orochimaru replied. "But I'm asking because this secret may affect me as well. I'm sure you'll understand my concerns, Obito-kun."

Fotrunately, before the argument could escalate any further, Zetsu - the original one- emerged from the ground. Strangely enough, he was smiling.

"Hey boss, good news!" the white half happily said.

"The only news I would consider good is that the Flying Zetsu have finally located that moving island the jinchuriki are hiding at," Obito humorlessly said.

"Well, you're lucky then, because that's exactly what we were coming to tell you!" the black half said. "One of the flyers has already latched onto the turtle, and is releasing spores that can only be tracked by other Zetsu."

"We can find them, and they have no way of realizing that their position has been compromised," the white half added with glee.

"Well, it seems that this farce of a war can finally reach its end. Let's cancel all our offensives, and move all our forces to intercept the island," Obito said, now sounding more content. "Make sure none of the jinchuriki escape."

"If we do that, the Alliance will find about us and they'll move to intercept us, like they've done every time we tried to get behind the enemy lines," Orochimaru suggested. "I thought that would be obvious. No wonder we're losing the war if our leader is such a poor tactician."

Obito's good mood evaporated. His glare pierced Orochimaru. "What do you suggest we do then, oh mighty strategic genius? Your record when it comes to war against Konoha is far from spotless."

"This is what we'll do: we'll continue waging war against the Alliance in order to make them think that nothing has changed, and while their attention is focused elsewhere we'll send a small team of reanimations to infiltrate the island and kidnap the jinchuriki," Orochimaru said. "I have several reanimations in reserve who are both powerful fighters and have the right skillset to shut down a jinchuriki."

Obito wasn't convinced. "A small team might not be enough. What if the ninjas stationed there just keep them busy while the jinchuriki escape? We'll lost all the advantage we have now."

"I already planned for that, and devised a contingency plan," Orochimaru assured confidently.

Obito let out an exasperated sigh. "Very well then. If this is our best chance, proceed."

Orochimaru grinned widely.

...

Next Morning, Turtle Island

A boat slowly sailed through a sea covered in a very dense fog. It was manned by several White Zetsu clones, since they were the ones who knew where to go. There were also several cloaked people on board as well, but they didn't appear to be part of the ship's crew.

Soon, a large silhouette could be seen in the distance. What appeared to be a large being covered in spikes. The White Zetsu at the helm smirked wickedly.

"Land ho," a the helmsman said.

Naturally, this drew everybody's attention, who quickly moved to the prow of the ship in order to see their target. One of the cloaked figures clicked their tongue.

"We took too long. The sun is already rising," he complained. "I think it would have been better if we managed to catch them at night."

"Eh, it's more fun that way. I want to get my hands dirty," another cloaked figure said.

"I think that, from this point onwards, you guys can go on foot," another White Zetsu said.

"I'm sensing a very powerful barrier surrounding the island," one of the cloaked figures, who had feminine voice, said. "They'll know we're there the moment we set a foot there."

Another cloaked figure took a step forward. He pushed his cloak back, revealing to be the last member of the Kaguya Clan. "It doesn't matter. Even if we lose the element of surprise, they can't send reinforcements nor ask for help of any kind. They're doomed to perish against us."

Kimimaro then jumped out of the ship, and the seven other cloaked figures quickly followed him, using chakra control to walk on water. Two of them were lagging behind the main group, though. One of those cloaked figures glared at the other one through his glasses.

"To think that Orochimaru-sama would make me work alongside you..." one of the cloaked figures said, gritting his teeth clenching his fists.

"I'm not happy with my lot in undeath either," the second figure said in a raspy male voice. "Complaining about it won't solve anything. Though, this is nothing new to you, Kabuto. You were a servant of Orochimaru in life, and continue being so in death."

"Shut up, Danzo!" Kabuto snapped. "You ruined my life! You made me kill the only parent I ever knew and loved! My only consolation is that somebody also put you in your place!"

"Hey, the shitheads on the back, pipe down, you morons!" another cloaked figure shouted, a flash of red hair visible under the hood. "We don't need to draw even more attention than what are going to!"

"While I may be bound to serve Orochimaru, I do not wish for his plans to succeed, so I don't have to follow your orders," Danzo calmly replied back.

"Enough, Tayuya," Kimimaro said. "We're close. Jirobo, Kidomaro, Sakon and Ukon, go ahead and scout the area for us. We will follow you then."

The reanimated members of the Sound Five nodded and quickly went forward, leaving the other five figures behind.

"You know they're going to get annihilated, right?" Tayuya asked. "Those morons are too weak to deal with whatever ninjas are escorting the jinchuriki, much less the jinchuriki themselves."

"I know. Like I said, they are merely scouts. Though if they can annoy the enemy, the better. I'm not expecting them to win this battle for us," Kimimaro said, as he turned his head back and looked at another of the cloaked figures behind him, a woman. "Orochimaru-sama provided us with an specialist for such a task."

Author's Note: Man, the more I write Konan, the more I like her character. It pisses me more and more the fact that Kishimoto killed her so soon in such a cruel way in canon when, apart from being one of the biggest badass ladies of the franchise, she has such a deep character that makes her a treasure trove for deep and philosophical moments.

Funny thing about that moment with Konan and Hotaru: it was completely unplanned. In fact, the two of them ending up on the same battlefield was pure coincidence on my part, and in fact, I was a bit worried that this chapter was going to end up being way too short. Then I realized that I had one of the killers of Hotaru's beloved sensei and companion in the same division as her, which in my mind they were BEGGING for a scene together. A scene I hope you enjoyed reading as much as it was for me to write.

And with this chapter... the first part of the War Arc concludes, and the second part begins! The side characters already had ample time to shine, and from now onwards, the plot will move at a much more steadier pace. The next chapter, the story will focus once again on Naruto, Fu and Killer B as Akatsuki launches an attack on the Turtle Island!

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

I hope you're excited for the next part of the story as much as I am. What will be the result of the raid on the Turtle Island? While you wait for the next chapter, leave your thoughts on this chapter (and if you feel like it, predictions for the next) in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Attack on Genbu Island

Author's Note: What is this? An update way ahead of schedule? Yep, that's exactly what it is. As many of you know, I don't upload new chapters as soon as finish them (or better said, as soon as my betareader checks them), but I try to keep many chapters written in advance so I can keep a regular updating schedule. However, given that, as of this writting, I'm currently writting the second to last chapter (chapter 132), I believe that I can now update this story far more often without worrying about running of already written chapters. Aren't you guys happy?

We're into the home stretch now, people. To quote a certain Star Wars movie, this is where the fun begins. Enjoy:

Chapter 120:

Attack on Genbu Island

or

Teenage Ninjas on a Turtle Escape from Mutants

Genbu the Turtle Island, early in the morning

As it was usual for them, Naruto and Fu woke up as early as the sun started to rise in the horizon, bathing the giant turtle pretending to be an island in light, slowly driving the shadows away.

With a loud yawn, Naruto woke up, stretching his muscles as he started to climb out of his sleeping bag, placed at the base of a large tree. The rustling noises he was making, coupled with the increasing sunlight, woke up Fu as well, who was sleeping at the other side of the tree.

"Hey, Fu, you awake?" Naruto asked, as he started to change into his usual clothes.

"Morning, Naruto," Fu's voice came from the other side of the tree, still sounding a little drowsy. Naruto imagined she was changing as well. "And yep."

A few minutes later, the two jinchuriki were now fully changed, and after placing their sleeping bags on their respective backpacks, they started to walk towards Killer B's house. The jinchuriki of the Eight Tails liked to wake up early as well, since watching the sunrise filled him with inspiration to write songs. Or so he said.

"So, ready for another day of training?" Naruto asked.

"Yeah. But I'm more ready for breakfast," Fu said, laughing a little. "I feel way hungrier since I started working on mastering Chomei's chakra."

"Really?" Naruto asked, raised an eyebrow. "Because I feel like eating the same as normal."

"Your bodies are getting used to our chakra, which is way more potent than your puny human chakra," the Nine Tails chimed in. "Hence it makes you consume more energy than usual, which translates into a greater appetite."

"But I don't feel anymore hungry than I usually do," Naruto pointed out.

There were a large flock of birds who flew into the sky, cawing loudly, as if flying away from a predator. Fu found it a bit odd, but Naruto paid them no mind.

"Because I don't think it's physically possible to eat more than you usually do," Kurama snarked. "Honestly, I'm surprised you don't look like an Akimichi, given that you eat like one."

"Hey, I'm still in a growing-"

Naruto was suddenly silenced by a golden arrow piercing him with such force, it hurled him backwards. The suddenness of the moment was so great, the green haired girl needed several seconds to process what just happened.

"Naruto-"

"Earth Release: Earth Mausoleum Dumpling!"

Suddenly, a huge shadow was cast over Fu, and much to her horror, the Taki kunoichi saw an absurdly large boulder flying at her. She barely have any time to mutter a curse before said boulder buried her into the ground, producing a loud booming noise.

Two ninjas landed on the area, one of them on top of the giant rock that had crushed Fu. They were wearing the same uniform consisting on a beige tunic with an all white Yin-Yang crest on it, a large purple rope serving as a makeshift belt, and black pants. But the most eye catching element about them was their inhuman appearance: they both had dark red skin with cracks running through it, black eyes with yellow irises, and one had multiple warts on his body, and the other had six arms and three eyes.

They were Jirobo and Kidomaru, two members of the Otogakure elite squad known as the Sound Five. They had died alongside Sakon and Ukon more than three years prior, but walked among the living again thanks to Impure World Resurrection.

"And done!" Jirobo laughed. "This was such an easy job. And Orochimaru-sama made it appear as if we were going to struggle."

"I hope you didn't kill her," Kidomaru said, looking at the giant rock with a bit of worry. "I know jinchuriki are tougher than usual, but you went a bit overboard. We might be dead already, but Orochimaru-sama will torture us into insanity if we fumble this mission."

"Nah, she's still alive. I can feel her chakra," Jirobo said. "What about you, huh? That arrow was pretty brutal."

"I deliberately avoided any vital spots. He should be wounded but fine," Kidomaru assured. "Anyway, I better go fetch him before-"

"What the-?" Jirobo said, as he was almost thrown off balance.

He could sense how Fu's chakra was skyrocketing, while an incredible force pushed the giant boulder upwards from above. Jirobo was forced to jump down, and much to his astonishment, he saw Fu climbing out of the hole she had been pushed into, while carrying the giant boulder above her head as if it weighed nothing. She then tossed the boulder into the air, when it disappeared among the clouds, while she pierced Jirobo with an anger filled glare.

"I don't know who the hell you are. Or what the hell you are," Fu seethed, taking notice of Jirobo's monstrous appearance. "But that was a mistake. You're going to need something more than a little pebble to crush me."

Jirobo was intimidated at first, and took a step back, but upon reminding himself that he was immortal, he held his ground and adopted a fighting stance.

"So, you're strong, and have a bit of muscle, so what? You can't beat us no matter how hard you try!" Jirobo fired back. "And I can crush you with a force much greater than that boulder! I'm going to smash you so badly, you're going to wish for me to grant you the mercy of a quick death!"

"Oh really? Well then, I'm going to punch you so hard that... uh..." Fu began, as she tried to come up with a good one liner. Meanwhile, in the distance, Jirobo's boulder fell into the sea, making a huge splash. "I'm going to punch you so hard, that you'd wish I didn't punch you so hard!" Fu replied, proud of her awful, awful comeback.

"Ha, I'd like to see-"

However, before Jirobo could finish his line, Fu crossed the distance separating them in an instant, and delivered an uppercut with all her strength, raising a gust of wind in every direction. The uppercut send Jirobo flying into the sky, disappearing into the clouds as well, but unlike the boulder that Fu had thrown either, he wouldn't fall back into the planet, but go into orbit.

Kidomaru watched the whole exchange in horror, as he realized just how outclassed he was against this enemy.

"Shit, I'm out of here!" Kidomaru said, as he started to run away. "This game's difficulty level is way above my pay grade!"

However, Kidomaru didn't go too far, as a hand of golden chakra caught him, and pulled him back again. The six armed zombie saw Naruto, enveloped in a bright golden shroud of chakra, the chakra making one of his arms disproportionately large. Naruto was holding the arrow Kidomaru shot at him on the other hand.

"I knew this was familiar," Naruto said, as he shattered the hardened wax arrow on his hand. "So Orochimaru decided to bring you losers back to life? Innocent dying is always a tragedy, but the fact that people have to die to bring scumbags like you back..."

"You know him, Naruto?" Fu asked.

"Unfortunately, yes. This guy and some of his friends who worked for Orochimaru tried to kidnap my little siblings three years ago," Naruto said. "He and three more died, but other two survived, and then went to help Orochimaru with Roshi's kidnapping. Still, these guys were an okay challenge for us when we were Genin and newly minted Chunin, but compared with the power we have now... I almost feel insulted."

"What are we going to do with him?" Fu asked.

"We can't kill him. As in, we literally can't, these reanimations are immortal, they regenerate endlessly," Naruto explained. "The best solution would be to immobilize and seal him. Though given that you sent the other guy into outer space, you think you can do the same to this one?"

"Maybe, but if immobilizing is an option, I do have a simpler solution," Fu said, before pointing all of her ten fingers at the restrained Kidomaru, and shoot chakra threads at him. The chakra threads quickly covered his body, encasing him inside a cocoon that completely restricted his movement. "And done! Can you make some chakra suppressing seal?"

"In my sleep," Naruto said, as he placed the cocoon on the ground, while placing a hand on top of it. A seal was formed, followed by chains of sealing symbols that wrapped themselves around the cocoon, securing it completely. "This guy won't go anywhere."

"Good," Fu said with a nod. "Though... how did this guy got here? Wasn't this place supposed to be super safe so Akatsuki wouldn't find us?"

"That's... a rather troubling thought," Naruto said, as he directed his gaze towards a cluster of trees. "Perhaps those guys over there can provide us with some answers."

...

Naruto wasn't looking at some random cluster of trees. That's where Sakon and Ukon, also in their second cursed seal forms, were hiding, overseeing Jirobo and Kidomaru, ready to strike in case they needed the twins' help. But upon seeing how easily the jinchuriki had taken the two Oto reanimations down, the remaining two turned around and ran away. The thought that Orochimaru was allowing them to abandon their mission didn't even cross their minds.

"Shit, this is too much for us! Why the hell Kimimaro thought in sending us against such powerful targets?" Ukon asked.

"Who cares? Just shut up and run!" Sakon chided.

"DOUBLE LARIAT!"

Suddenly, the twin reanimations felt their necks being slammed by a pair of dark skinned muscular arms, sending them tumbling backwards, where two other people quickly restrained them.

"Sorry, but this place is for my vacation, no one can enter here without my invitation!" a dark skinned man wearing sunglasses and a Kumogakure uniform said. They realized he was Killer B, the third jinchuriki on the island. The ones restraining them were clones of him as well.

"Hey, B-sensei!" Naruto said, as he and Fu landed besides him. "You found the other two!"

"You knew we were there?" Ukon asked. "How? You are not a sensor!"

"Funny thing about this mode," Naruto said, as he closed and opened his hand. "But something I noticed that I can do when I'm using the Kurama Chakra Cloak is that I can sense people's negative emotions. At least when they aren't too far away from me. So yeah, trying to use stealth against me is useless unless you can hide your killing intent."

"There's a more important question. How did you find this place? The turtle island leaves no trace," Killer B interrogated.

"I don't think that's important right now. It seems these guys aren't the only ones who came here. Akatsuki knows about this place, and we're under attack right now," Naruto said. "Come on, we need to seal them and find the rest!"

"Seal, you say? Leave it to me, then lead the way," Killer B made a hand seal. "Sealing Art: Octopus Hold!"

The Killer B clones restraining Sakon and Ukon turned into blots of ink that completely covered the Oto reanimations, before hardening into pitch black cocoons. Naruto was about to put chakra suppressing seals on them, but it wasn't necessary as seals appeared on their own.

"You know fuinjutsu too? Neat," Naruto asked, clearly surprised, but if his smile was anything to go by, pleased by said surprise. His smile disappeared, as he reminded his fellow jinchuriki of the situation at hand. "Though, I'm sure there are more people in the island, and much stronger than these guys."

As if on cue, all three of them could hear the sound of several people running towards them. Fu and Killer B tensed up, but Naruto was oddly relaxed.

"Calm down, they aren't enemies. Didn't you just hear what I said?" Naruto asked.

And indeed, soon they saw a group of Konoha and Kumo ninjas in front of them, including the likes of Yugao, Hayate, Tenzo, Choza and Motoi, with the Third Hokage leading the group. All of them looked ready to battle.

"I've sensed some intruders! I can't believe that they got past me and got so far into the island!" Yugao said, sounding panicked. "Are you guys okay?"

"Yep. Nothing we couldn't deal with!" Fu replied, flexing a bicep for added emphasis.

"I believe the enemies you just beat were a mere scouting force. Orochimaru wouldn't risk his strongest reanimations like that," Hiruzen pondered. "However, that brings us to the troubling conclusion that Akatsuki has found the location of this island."

Motoi looked as if he had been struck by lightning. "But... that's impossible! No one has ever been able to track this place!"

"They could if they had a mole among us," Choza suggested.

Naruto, however, shook his head. "If there was a mole, I would have sensed their ill intent. In all the days I've been here training in the Kurama Chakra Cloak, I didn't sense such thing."

"Maybe they did, if they had aerial scouts," Hayate interceded, before coughing a couple times. "Still, wondering how the island was found was irrelevant. This place is no longer safe. We need to evacuate Naruto-san, Fu-san and B-san to somewhere else before-"

Naruto, Yugao and Hiruzen tensed up, quickly adopting fighting stances, followed by everybody.

"Yugao-san? Hokage-sama? Naruto-san?" Tenzo asked. "Did you sense more enemies?"

"Yes," Hiruzen said, frowning. "In greater numbers, and much stronger than the ones Naruto-kun and Fu just beat. And some of them have chakra that feels... oddly familiar."

"Hey..." Fu said, as she was trying to listen to something. "Do you guys hear that?"

"Hear what?" Naruto asked. That's it, until he started to hear the sound as well. It was a familiar sound, one that, for some reason, did not bring pleasant memories.

"A flute..." Fu said.

And then, Naruto finally realized why the sound was familiar, and why he didn't like it.

"Guys! Watch out! We're about to be put under a genjutsu! Dispel it before it takes hold!"

Naruto quickly brought his hand together, forming a hand seal, ready to send a burst of chakra through his body, but much to his frustration, he was too late. He watched in horror how his hands started to melt into a disgusting mass of liquid flesh, soon followed by the rest of his arms. He fell to the ground when his legs also turned into jelly.

The blond jinchuriki saw in horror how the rest of the ninjas around him fell to the ground as well, unable to fight the dreadful genjutsu. Following that, he sensed more enemies landed around them in a circle.

"That's it? That's all it took to bring a former Hokage and three jinchuriki down?" a voice asked. It sounded distorted, but it felt familiar to Naruto.

"Don't underestimate them, Kabuto. The genjutsu won't last long," another voice said, this one sounding raspier.

The intruders continued talking among themselves as they approached the fallen ninjas, probably to immobilize and restrain them. Meanwhile, Naruto was forced to see how his body continued to melt.

"Come on, come on... Sakura and Haku were able to break out of this genjutsu on their own," the blond reminded himself. "Yeah, they're genjutsu specialists and I'm not, but given the amount of power I have now, breaking out of a genjutsu should be a cakewalk!"

Naruto continued to try to break the illusion with nothing but his force of will, as he tried to disrupt his chakra the best way he could. Somebody watching would say that his efforts were doomed.

Until the illusion broke. Naruto's body returned to normal. He was able to move freely once again.

"Uh? Hey, I did it!" Naruto thought in joy.

"Like hell you did!" Kurama scoffed. "You have me to thank for saving your sorry ass! Again!"

" Wait... were you who undid this genjutsu? Are you able to do that, Kurama?" Naruto asked.

" Did you forget the best way to break a genjutsu? If you can't disturb your own chakra yourself, you need a partner to do it for you," Kurama explained. "So you're welcome. And before you ask, yes, this means that as long as you have me covering your back, no genjutsu will affect you."

" Really? Whoa, thank you!" Naruto excitedly said.

" Now take advantage of the fact that they still think you're harmless to sneak a sucker punch," Kurama suggested.

Naruto didn't need to be told. Like a golden missile, he leaped to his feet and launched himself forward, slamming his first into the nearest cloaked figure. The force of the blow pulled the figure's hood back, revealing to be a middle aged man with a cross scar on his chin, and, surprisingly enough, a Sharingan eye. That was a familiar face, but Naruto could swear that he had saw that man somewhere else.

"He broke the genjutsu!" another of the cloaked figures said, as he and the others quickly leaped back. He removed his cloak and tossed it away, revealing himself to be Kimimaro Kaguya, who quickly went into his Cursed Seal Second Stage.

Naruto could see that Fu and Killer B had also broken out of the genjutsu, probably the same way Naruto did, and quickly freed the others as well. Soon, the entire group was back on their feet, ready to fight.

"I can't believe this is the second time such thing happens!" the voice of a woman screamed, as Tayuya, already in her Second Stage Cursed Form as well, joined Kimimaro and the reanimations. "What's with you fuckers resisting genjutsu like that!?"

"Don't act surprised, it had already happened before," Kimimaro said, before looking at Danzo, who was already back to his feet.

"Danzo!"

Despite not wanting to follow that order, the former leader of Root started to make hand seals. Or better said, his body did so without any input from his part.

"Wood Release: Nativity of a World of Trees!"

Suddenly, the earth started to shake, and large green wooden roots emerged from underground, causing the Konoha and Kumo ninjas to disperse.

"Watch out for the Wood Release!" Hiruzen said, his Adamantine Staff already smashing the nascent wooden vines into splinters. "It can bind Tailed Beast chakra!"

"It must be the reason as for why he was brought here," Tenzo said, using his own Wood Release techniques to counter Danzo's. "He must be the one tasked with the mission to subdue and catch the jinchuriki."

"Taking him out should be our main concern then!" Motoi suggested.

"While what you say is technically true, my former subordinate, your assesment couldn't be more wrong," Danzo said, as his eyes darted towards the last cloaked figure, the one still hooded. "I'm not the one who's supposed to catch the jinchuriki. She is."

That moment, the last hooded figure uncovered herself to reveal a woman wearing an elegant, almost regal white dress, with a passing resemblance to Tsunade. Her cracked skin and black eyes betrayed her nature as a reanimation. She had red hair, neatly combed and styled into two buns, with two sealing tags hanging from said buns. There was also a small, diamond shaped purple mark on her forehead, similar to Tsunade's seal.

Nobody seemed to recognize that woman, except one person: Hiruzen Sarutobi, who looked aboslutely crestfallen.

"Mito-sama... " he said, his eyes full of sadness. "No... not you too..."

"Saru? Is that you?" Mito said, tilting her head and narrowing her eyes a little. "You look so old..."

"Indeed, I am old. Yet, due sad irony, you now look much younger than the last time I saw you," Hiruzen replied.

"It's good to see that at the very least, you're still alive. Unlike this idiot of my apprentice," Mito said, casting a glare at Danzo, who didn't even react. "No need to explain, Danzo had already told me all I need to know regarding the situation we found ourselves in."

"In that case-"

"Watch out!" Mito suddenly said, her eyes open wide in shock. "Adamantine Sealing Chains!"

Mito threw her hands forward, and three chakra chains shot from her, one from each of her palms, and another from her chest, phasing through her clothes without destroying them. The chains quickly wrapped themselves around the necks of Naruto, Killer B and Fu. The moment the chains touched Naruto, his golden chakra cloak vanished. Fu and Killer B tried to call the power of their Tailed Beasts, but found they were unable to.

"What the hell!?" Fu said, as she tried to remove the chakra chain from her neck.

"I can't access number eight's chakra, this ain't cool! This redheaded lady is making me look like a fool!" Killer B protested, as he tried to cut the chains with one of his blades.

"They're an Uzumaki secret jutsu!" Naruto said, struggling to get free as well. He was able to break free from Karin's chains, but these ones were way sturdier. "They can bind chakra just as good as- ACK!"

Mito gave a mighty pull, dragging the three helpless jinchuriki towards her.

"And it's done!" Kimimaro said. "Cover Mito while she takes the jinchuriki away!"

"And you think we're going to let you?" Tenzo replied, as he started to make several hand seals. "Wood Release: Laughing Monk Jutsu!"

Three hands made of wood emerged from the ground below, and wrapped their fingers wound Mito's chains in an iron grip, stoping the Uzumaki reanimation from going any further, and allowing Naruto, Fu and B a small respite. They were, however, still unable to access their powers.

"The chains! Destroy those chains!" Tenzo called.

The Kumo and Konoha ninjas quickly went to do what Tenzo had called, while the reanimations and two Oto ninja quickly prevented them from doing so, forcing the jinchuriki's esocrts to engage them in combat.

Kabuto then rushed towards Tenzo's wooden vines, his hands glowing as he readied his Chakra Scalpel to cut them down. However, before he could get any closer, he was stopped by Hayate, whose own chakra blade parried Kabuto's scalpel.

"As long as we're here and we can fight, you won't take Naruto, Fu or B away from this island," Hayate said, locking eyes with the undead silver haired ninja.

"You don't get it, do you? You already lost!" Kabuto said, as he delivered a strike with his other hand, forcing Hayate to step back. "Akatsuki knows the existence of this island and how to locate it, no matter how much it moves! There's no safe place for the jinchuriki to go!"

"It doesn't matter!" Yugao said, as she joined the fight with a katana thrust, relieving some pressure from Hayate, forcing Kabuto to deal with her as well. "We will protect them no matter what!"

"You can't even protect yourselves!" Kabuto replied, as he was slowly driven away from the main battle by Yugao and Hayate.

Meanwhile, Choza decided it was his time to intervene. He brought his hands together as he began to mold chakra.

"Butterfly Mode!" a pair of chakra wings that looked like those of a butterfly appeared on the redhead's back, as he started to lose weight. "It seems that for this fight, we can't afford to go for anything less than our very best! Butterfly Bullet Bomb!"

Choza clenched his hand into a fist, which was quickly surrounded by a fiery shroud of blue chakra, while dashing forward towards Mito Uzumaki, still trying to pull her chains from Yamato's wooden bindings. Danzo, however, wasn't going to let him. He made several hand seals.

"Earth Release: Earth Style Wall!"

Danzo slammed his hands on the ground, erecting a large wall of solid stone between Choza and Mito. However, the Akimichi was far from fazed.

"A little wall isn't going to stop THIS!"

Choza brought his chakra-charged fist forward, completely obliterating the wall Danzo had erected, and producing a powerful gust of wind that blew away the chunks of rock and earth in pretty much all directions. The shockwave of the hit managed to hit Mito, but not with enough force to make her undo her chakra chains.

However, Choza's attack did manage to open a clear path to Mito, a path that Hiruzen was able to use. Displaying an incredible speed for a man his age, Hiruzen rushed forward, unsealed a Fuma Shuriken, and threw it forward while making several hand seals.

"Shadow Clone Shuriken Jutsu!" the lone Fuma Shuriken were now a dozen. "Fire Release: Fire Dragon Bullet!"

Hiruzen exhaled a massive stream of fire in the direction of the shuriken, coating them in a cloak of flames, while also burning the wooden Danzo had created. Mito, however, refused to let go of the jinchuriki, as she started to make hand seals of her own.

"Water Release: Wild Water Wave!"

Mito exhaled a truly massive cone of water towards the incoming shuriken, not only dousing the fires, but the power of the water stream pushed them aside.

"Give up, Hiruzen. No matter how strong you are, you are not a match for sensei," Danzo said, as he traded blows with Choza.

Hiruzen, however, smirked, and made more hand seals. "You always had an habit of underestimating me, Danzo. Earth Release: Earth Crushing Jaws!"

Hiruzen slammed a single palm into the ground, and under Mito's chains, a dragon made of solid rock emerged, its jaws closing around the chains, snapping them instantly, causing them to dissolve into nothingness. The moment that happened, the jinchuriki could feel the block on their powers wasn't there anymore. Naruto and Fu activated their chakra cloak and armor, respectively, while Killer B generated several tentacles from his back, wrapping a tentacle around the waist of each of his fellow jinchuriki, and using other three to spring himself back.

"The jinchuriki are free! Protect them! Make sure the woman with the chains nor the man with the Sharingan and Wood Release get close to them!" Motoi said.

"No! Let us fight!" Naruto insisted. "We're the strongest here! We have the best chances at beating them!"

"Mito, make sure they don't escape!" Kimimaro ordered.

Mito had no choice but to obey. She made several hand seals. "Sealing Art: Rift between Heaven and Earth!"

Mito slammed her hand into the ground, generating a circular sealing array that expanded outwards several hundred meters in a matter of seconds. Then, the sealing array started to glow, generating a chakra dome, leaving everybody trapped inside of it.

"WHOA!" Naruto said in shock, as he gawked at the gigantic shield around them. "Just... how powerful is that woman?"

"That's Mito Uzumaki, brat," Kurama chimed in. "The First Hokage's Wife, and my first jinchuriki. She might not be as strong as her husband, but she's not somebody to be underestimated. A master of both fuinjutsu and elemental ninjutsu. "

A scowl developed on Naruto's face. "Of course. I should have expected that she would be among those revived by Orochimaru."

"Wait..." the fox said, sounding uneasy. "Don't you feel...?"

"You, the kid named Naruto," Mito said, noticing Naruto in his Kurama Chakra Cloak. "Given that you possess half the Nine Tails' power, I'm going to assume that Kushina-chan is dead."

"Yes. She died the day I was born," Naruto told Mito. "She was my mother."

"I see," Mito said, as she directed her gaze down, looking crestfallen. "Makes sense. Only an Uzumaki can hold the power of the Nine Tails. I see you attained some degree of mastery over its power."

"I did. And his name is Kurama, by the way. He isn't an 'it'," Naruto punctualized.

"What? The fox has a name?" the Uzumaki woman asked, tilting her head in confusion. "Anyway, that's not important. The important part is for you to defeat me. Only then you'll be able to undo my barrier jutsu and escape this place. However, it won't be easy. Orochimaru revived me because I have the right skillset to deal with you."

"Not to sound arrogant, lady, but between Fu, B and me, there's no way you can-WHOA!"

Naruto was taken aback when he was suddenly overwhelmed by a wave of power, and the next second, Mito burst into golden light, her body shrouded in a chakra cloak similar to Naruto, only with a more orange hue rather than a yellow one.

"I don't know how, but Akatsuki has bound my body with the half of the Nine Tails in their possession," Mito explained. "There's a black nail made of a material I don't know jabbed in the back of my neck. I sense that's what binds the fox's power to this body. Remove it, and beating me will be much easier."

" B, I think you should go all out here. This woman was already serious trouble before she revealed her full power," Gyuki advised.

"I got it, Number Eight, I think it's time to throw around our weight!" Killer B rapped, as he started to grow into his Tailed Beast form. As he transformed, he noticed the barrier Mito had erected, and an idea crossed the rapper's mind. "Hmmm... that barrier looks rather steadfast. Wonder if it can survive one of my blasts!"

Once he transformed fully, Killer B opened his jaws and started to gather chakra inside a sphere for a Tailed Beast Ball. Unfortunately, this wasn't unnoticed by the enemy. Danzo, who was fighting Choza, disengaged the Akimichi and moved to stop Killer B.

"I'm afraid I won't let you do that," Danzo said, as he started making hand seals. "Wood Release: Wood Dragon Jutsu!"

Danzo summoned a huge wooden dragon that quickly wrapped itself around Killer B's huge form, its jaws clamping around his mouth, aborting the Tailed Beast Ball, and leaving him completely immobilized.

"Don't worry, sensei! I'll save you!" Fu said, as her six wings appeared on her back, and quickly flew towards the immobilized Tailed Beast. Her hands quickly morphed into giant blades shaped like the pincers of a stag beetle. "Time to cut some bad weeds!"

"Jinchuriki of the Seven Tails, watch out!" Mito warned her, as she cast a hand upwards.

Multiple chains shot into Fu's direction, forcing the Taki kunoichi to change the course of her flight in order to dodge them.

"Oh shit! Oh shit! Oh shiiiiiiiit!" Fu yelled, as she tried to dodge the chains as best as she could, while deflecting those she couldn't with her organic blades, a situation that was already familiar for the young woman. "Man, I'm getting flashbacks to the Chunin Exams!"

"I'll take care of her!" Naruto said, as he pulled out his Wind Blade, generating a blade of white chakra as he channeled his own. He noticed the blade was longer and shone brighter than he usually did. "Heh, I can't wait how strong this thing is when I use Tailed Beast Chakra to fuel it!"

Unfortunately for Naruto, Mito still had another hand that she aimed at him, shooting more chains, forcing the blond to parry the chains with his wind blade, while jumping back. He bit his thumb, and made several hand seals.

"Okay, I think we are going to need additional help," Naruto said, before slamming his palm into the ground. "Summoning Jutsu!"

There was a huge burst of smoke, and once the ensuing cloud dispelled, Naruto was sitting at the top of a green skinned toad with a pair of huge swords at his back.

"Gamahiro! See that woman over there with a glowing chakra aura similar to mine?" Naruto asked, pointing at Mito. "Help me take her down!"

"You got it, Naruto!" Gamahiro said, as he unsheathed both of his katanas, and leaped towards Mito. He brought one of his katanas down, but the Uzumaki reanimation was able to dodge the blow.

"You're a toad summoner too?" Mito asked. "I guess you were trained by Jiraiya of the Sannin, weren't you?"

"Right on the money," Naruto replied. "He's my adoptive dad. Oh, I just realized! Since Tsunade is my adoptive mom, that makes you my adoptive great-grandma!"

"I wish you didn't tell me that. Now you're making me feel even worse, knowing that not only I'm fighting a fellow clan member, but the son of my beloved granddaughter," Mito sorrowfully said.

"... oops. Sorry," Naruto sheepishly apologized, before his determined expression returned. "Though it's any consolation, you won't be able to harm either me nor my friends. I'll make sure of that."

As Naruto continued to fight Mito, Fu was finally free and started to cut the wooden roots keeping Killer B prisoner. Danzo tried to get in the way, but Tenzo and the Third Hokage got him busy. Kimimaro, who was fighting Choza, noticed this, and realized that something needed to be done. That moment, Tayuya landed besides him.

"Hey, great leader, this shit ain't working!" the redhead said. "What are we going to do? Orochimaru-sama is going to skin us alive if we return empty handed!"

"That's why such thing won't happen," Kimimaro stated. "Tayuya, let's use the level three cursed form. We'll need it to fight enemies of this caliber."

Orochimaru had been able to improve his cursed seals to the point that their users could unlock another transformation. It increased the user's powers even further than the first two levels combined did, but it also put a huge strain on the body and had a moderate risk of causing a fatal organic failure. However, the two last original living members of the Sound Five knew it was a gamble they needed to take.

A dark purple aura surrounded their bodies as they started to mutate even further. Tayuya's body started to elongate in an unnatural manner, while her legs merged into a single limb, with the appearance of a tail that seemed to form part her lower body. Multiple legs started to grow to her sides, giving her the appearance of a giant centipede with the upper half of a human body instead of a head. Tayuya's arms also grew longer, splitting into two, with the upper pair of arms ended in long bone blades, and the lower pair ended in long hands.

Meanwhile, Kimimaro started to grow in size as well, his muscles swelling as spiked bone plates started to form around his body, forming a natural armor. His head lost its humanoid shape, and gained a reptilian appearance, with a pair of twisted horns growing from his temples, and two curved fangs coming from his lower jaw.

"Oh yes, this shit feels incredible!" Tayuya said, basking in her newfound power. "To think that I've been afraid of using this power!"

"Let this be a lesson to never doubt Orochimaru-sama's power," Kimimaro said, as his eyes laid on Choza, Tenzo and the Third Hokage. "Now, time to teach said lesson to our enemies! Dance of the Seedling Fern!"

Kimimaro slammed his hands onto the ground, and a field of bone blades burst from underground, in the direction of the three Konoha ninjas. Hiruzen and Tenzo jumped aside, but Choza instead decided to hold his ground. The moment several bone blades burst from underground ready to impale him, he reared his fist back, and delivered another devastating punch, shattering the bone blades before they could even reach him.

"Is this all you have-ACK!"

"Dance of the Clematis: Flower!"

In less than a second, despite his hulking form, Kimimaro was able to cross the distance between him and the Akimichi Clan Head, and impale him with a giant drill made of bone. Choza opened his eyes wide in shock, before life left his body.

"CHOZA!" Hiruzen yelled, as he quickly rushed towards Kimimaro, wielding the adamantine staff.

Hiruzen engaged Kimimaro in a close combat duel, the last member of the Kaguya Clan trying to impale the old Hokage with his bone blades, but Hiruzen was able to parry and dodge them expertly despite his advanced age. And while he did manage to land a few good hits, none of them managed to break Kimimaro's bone plates, no matter how much anger he used to power his strikes.

"Not even the Adamantine Staff is making a crack! The bones he generates outside of his body may be more fragile, but that armor is as sturdy as the hardest of steels!" Hiruzen angrily thought, as the desire to make Choza's killer pay ate him from the inside. "No... I must fight with a calm mind. I can't fight just to avenge a fallen comrade. The jinchuriki... we have to protect them!"

However, Hiruzen's concentration was disrupted by the sound of a flute. The same flute Tayuya used to put them under a genjutsu. And indeed, upon looking at the direction the music was coming from, he saw the redhead, now in the form of some sort of human/centipede hybrid with long arms ending in claws, playing the flute while she used her many bladed legs to cut down the wooden vines Tenzo was using to attack her.

"Tenzo, fall back!" Hiruzen said, as he jumped back while sending a pulse through his chakra network in order to disrupt it. "Do not let her put you under that genjutsu!"

Too late. Hiruzen saw in horror how Tenzo fell to his knees, unable to do anything as the music trapped him inside a illusionary hellscape. Tayuya was ready to impale him with several of her bladed limbs.

"NO!" Hiruzen said, as he tossed the Adamantine staff at Tayuya, hoping to hit her in time.

But much to his horror, Kimimaro jumped in, and kicked the staff away before it could reach the mutated Oto kunoichi. Tayuya then stabbed Tenzo multiple times, putting an end to his life.

" Hey old man, get out of the way! Killer B is ready to slay!" the voice of Killer B in his Tailed Beast form boomed. Hiruzen turned around, and saw that Fu had finally released the Kumo jinchuriki from its wooden bindings, who was charging forward.

"Do your worst, B-san," Hiruzen said, as he moved to the side, in order to leave the eight tailed behemoth much needed space.

Killer B then sent all his tentacles to smash the two mutated Oto ninjas, who dodged them the best way they could. Kimimaro jumped from side to side, and while Tayuya couldn't jump in her new form, she was able to quickly crawl away from the giant limbs trying to crush her.

" You think you can evade me as long as you aren't still?" Killer B rapped. "You need something more than that to counter my skill!"

The two Oto ninjas seemed to forget that Killer B also had two arms on top of his eight tentacles, and closing a hand into a fist, he slammed it into the ground. He missed, but the shockwave he created was so big, Kimimaro and Kaguya were sent into the air, where they were unable to avoid the tentacles from wrapping around their bodies, leaving them immobilized.

" Gotcha!" he cheered.

"You got shit!" Tayuya screamed back, as she sank some of her bladed limbs onto the tentacle's flesh, while Kimimaro sprouted multiple bone spikes from his body.

Despite the piercing pain, Killer B managed to keep a hold of them.

" You know how to cause pain, but not enough to make me strain!" Killer B said, as he flung Kimimaro and Tayuya into the air. "Now prepare to meet your end, your punishment for attacking my friends! TAILED BEAST BALL!"

Killer B quickly charged a Tailed Beast Ball inside his mouth, before swallowing it, and releasing it in the form of a destructive wave of chakra. The wave engulfed Kimimaro and Tayuya, who were reduced to ashes in a matter of seconds. The wave still had enough power and momentum to smash into the barrier Mito had created, albeit it was unable to crack a hole in it.

" The barrier... we need to destroy that barrier..." Hiruzen thought, as he looked back. He could see that Naruto and Gamahiro were fighting against Danzo, who had summoned his Baku, while Fu and some of the Kumo ninjas were dealing with Mito, who had created several Shadow Clones to assist her. "B-san, I know how we can undo that barrier in order to let you, Naruto-kun and Fu-san to escape! But in order to do so, you have to distract Mito-sama!"

" Distract the golden lady. Consider it done," Killer B said, as he shrank, turning back to his human form. "Maybe if we focused on her first we would have won."

Killer B unseathed the seven swords strapped to his back, tossed them into the air, and grabbed them with his arms, legs and mouth, much to Hiruzen's astonishment.

Meanwhile, thanks to Naruto and Gamahiro's teamwork, the ninja and the giant toad managed to cause enough harm to Danzo's Baku in order to dispel it. Unfortunately, Gamahiro didn't notice how the real Mito had slipped out of the fight with Fu and the other ninjas, and was sneaking towards him.

"Sealing Art: Unsummoning Jutsu!"

"What...?" was all Gamahiro could say, as a circular sealing pattern appeared around him, followed by the green toad disappearing in a cloud of smoke.

"Gamahiro!" Naruto shouted.

Before Mito could engage Naruto, Killer B intruded into the fight, then rushed towards Mito, leaped into the air, and let out a loud "Wheeeeeeeeeeeee!"

Mito's attention was naturally drawn to the incoming attacker, and jumped back in order to avoid the swords that were raining upon her. Fu, having noticed Mito getting away from her, realized where the real one was, and locked onto her once again. She tried to capitalize on Mito's predicament, and tried to gore her with a mantis blade she had turned one of her arms into, but Mito generated a blade of water in order to parry it.

"Damn, this old lady is good!" Fu said, as she pushed against Mito, but the Uzumaki woman held her ground.

"Did nobody tell you that calling a lady old is extremely disrespectful?" Mito replied, sounding genuinely offended.

"Eh, I'm somebody who tells things like they are?" Fu said with a shrug, before turning her other arm into a scorpion claw, and tried to slash her.

"Wind Release: Vacuum Blade!"

Fu was reminded that Danzo was still part of the fight when several shuriken shrouded in wind chakra flew towards her. Fu was forced to jump back and fly into the air in order to dodge them. Meanwhile, B engaged Mito again, the two of them trading blows in close combat, though it was quite obvious that Killer B had the upper hand. Meanwhile, Naruto was preparing his next move: With the help of several chakra arms, Naruto was holding a large dark purple spinning sphere of chakra on his hands.

"B-sensei, watch out!" Naruto said, as he rushed towards Mito. Killer B saw his fellow jinchuriki and nodded, before jumping away, leaving Naruto a clear way for his fellow Uzumaki. "I'm sorry, Mito-baachan! Tailed Beast Ball!"

Mito jumped back, and made a hand seal. More chakra chains shot from every part of her body, but rather than sending them towards her enemies, she wrapped them around her own body, forming a metallic protective cocoon, just in time before Naruto slammed his improvised attack against her. The ensuing explosion shattered the chains instantly, and Mito was hurled backwards, bouncing on her back several times. Her body was wounded, but not enough to stop her from continuing the fight, and said wounds were quickly healing.

However, Naruto had already done what Hiruzen wanted. He landed besides Mito, while a pair of his Shadow Clones freed Fu from having to fight Danzo. Hiruzen pulled a paper tag and slammed it onto Mito's back.

"Sealing Art: Void Touch Seal!"

The seal on Mito's back started to glow with a blue light, before it was consumed in a flash of blue fire. The next second, the chakra dome that kept them imprisoned started to flicker, before it broke down into chakra bits that disappeared into nothingness.

"Yes! Good job, Old Man Hokage!" Naruto praised.

"Unfortunately, it won't be long until Mito-sama is able to cast another barrier, so you should take advantage of that and flee this island!" the Third Hokage said, as Mito quickly jumped to her feet, and prepared to attack. "I'll stay here and hold these zombies back as long as I can!"

"What!? No way we can let you do that!" Naruto protested. "If we fight together, we can win! I know it! We have three jinchuriki on our side!"

"Naruto-kun, this battle right now is meaningless!" Hiruzen said, as he parried with the Adamantine Staff a flurry of chains Mito shot at him. "Akatsuki knows of this place, meaning that keeping you three on this island is no longer a safe option! You need to go back to the continent and head to the Ninja Alliance HQ! Now it's the safest place for you three!"

"But you will die if we leave you here!" Naruto protested.

"Don't underestimate me, Naruto-kun. I have been the Hokage with the longest reign for a reason," Hiruzen said, smirking at the blond. "Now go! Choza and Tenzo died protecting you! Don't make their sacrifices meaningless!"

"But-"

" Brat, he's right," Kurama interrupted. Naruto clenched his fists in anger. "I know you don't like it, but deep down, you know what you have to do."

"What are you doing, standing there like an idiot? Go!" Hiruzen yelled.

This seemed to snap Naruto from his trance, as he directed his eyes towards Fu. "Fu! We're leaving! Take me and B-sensei out of this place!"

"What about the others!?" Fu shouted back.

"We will be fine! The most important thing is to ensure that Akatsuki doesn't get their hands on you!" Hiruzen shouted, as his hands flew through hand seals. "Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

Hiruzen exhaled a massive stream of fire towards Mito. The Uzumaki woman's answer came in the form of an equally impressive water jutsu. However, despite the elemental advantage, it was unable to push Hiruzen's fire jutsu back, ending in a tie.

Fu nodded, and dived towards the ground, grabbing Naruto and Killer B's hands with her own, and flying into the sky, using the clouds as a cover. Hiruzen sighed in relief upon seeing that the jinchuriki were safe for the time being.

"'We will be fine'?" Danzo repeated, as he finished destroying Hiruzen's Shadow Clones. "You shouldn't have lied to the jinchuriki like that, Hiruzen."

"I didn't lie to them. We will be fine as long as we manage to keep them safe," Hiruzen replied, as he started to make hand seals. "Earth Release: Earth Dragon Bullet!" A large dragon head made of mud formed in front of Hiruzen, and fired a barrage of mud projectiles at Mito, while the Third Hokage made more hand seals. "Fire Release: Fire Dragon Bullets!"

Hiruzen exhaled a huge stream of fire, igniting the mud balls and turning them into fire blasts. Mito replied in the form of more hand seals.

"Sealing Art: Iron Curtain!"

Mito stomped her foot down, generating a line of sealing symbols in front of her. The seals started to glow, producing a purple wall of chakra that easily blocked Hiruzen's combo attack.

"Okuninushi!"

Hiruzen saw his former friend, now undead puppet, dashing towards him, wielding kunai shrouded in wind chakra, with four negative colored afterimages following after him. Danzo delivered a series of quick swipes that were replicated by his afterimages with the same amount of power. Hiruzen blocked each of them with the Adamantine Staff, but was unable to stop Danzo from putting him on the defensive.

"You know you can't win, Hiruzen. Why aren't you trying to escape with your life?" Danzo asked, as he continued his assault. "Mito-sensei and I are reanimations. No matter how long we fight, we will never get tired. Not only are you a regular human, but you're long past your prime. This fight won't last long."

"I have my reasons to fight!" Hiruzen replied, managing to smack one of Danzo's kunai out of his hand, and deliver a strike to his head. Unfortunately, one of the afterimages parried it.

And while they fought, Mito's hands formed new hand seals for her next move.

"Wind Release: Wind Scythe!"

Mito released multiple crescent-shaped winds of blade, forcing Hiruzen to disengage Danzo in order to jump back and dodge them. A couple of them managed to graze his armor, drawing some blood. His feet skidded when they touched land again, threatening to make him lose balance.

"Danzo is right, Saru," Mito added. "Don't waste your life fighting us."

"It's not a waste," Hiruzen replied, breathing heavily. "Every second I fight you, is another second you aren't chasing after Naruto-kun and the others. Because I know my former pupil, and he won't pass this chance to kill me, especially if he can use the wife of one of my senseis and my former friend as tools of his will," Hiruzen boldly declared, before making several one handed seals. "Lightning Release: Lightning Staff!"

The Adamantine Staff started to crackle with electricity as it was covered in lightning. Hiruzen then dashed forward, ready to face Mito was again, who braced for the attack. Danzo, however, wasn't going to be left out and made several hand seals.

"Wood Release: Deep Forest Emergence!"

More wooden vines were summoned, getting in the way between the Third Hokage and Mito. However, much to their surprise, Sarutobi stopped his dash, and threw the staff forward. The spinning staff shattered the wooden barrier thanks to its lightning coat, and when Mito was about to parry it, changed course and rotated around her, before smacking her in the back of her head.

"Sorry, Mito-sama, but it needs to be done," Enma apologized from within the staff.

Meanwhile, Hiruzen changed course and headed towards Danzo. He pulled out a sealing scroll, and unsealed a large broadsword while making several hand seals.

"Fire Release: Burning Edge!"

Mustering his remaining strength, Hiruzen delivered several swipes at Danzo with his flaming sword. Danzo used his wind-enhanced kunai to parry some while dodging others, but was reminded that Wind was a poor choice to counter Fire.

"Tell me, Danzo, given how you trained your Root ninjas to be mere puppets... how does it feel to be one?" Hiruzen asked, as he pressed his attack. "And I'm not just talking about now, but the knowledge that you have been an Akatsuki pawn all this time!"

"Does my response matter? Does anything I say will help or change anything that happened before?" Danzo replied, as he pulled several shuriken and threw them at his former friend.

Said shuriken were easily parried, with Hiruzen even grabbing a couple for himself. "Yes, yes it does! You ended up being an Akatsuki pawn because you stole Shisui Uchiha's eye, which was then stolen from you by Obito! Not only the Uchiha Insurrection could have been averted, but it was thanks to you that Akatsuki got so many Tailed Beasts!"

"I don't regret taking Shisui's eye. It was too dangerous. Who can assure us that Shisui won't use his mind control powers against Konoha?" Danzo replied.

"Shisui has been an exemplary ninja, one whose loyalty to Konoha has never been questioned other than by you!" Hiruzen replied, destroying one of Danzo's afterimages with a fiery swipe. "You always say that everything you do is for Konoha's sake, but all your actions have done nothing but weaken it!"

"Perhaps that might be true, but I'm not the only one whose faults weakened Konoha," Danzo replied. "If you didn't hesitate to kill Orochimaru when you had the chance, there wouldn't be reanimations laying waste through the Elemental Nations."

"Orochimaru is a longtime mistake I plan to rectify!" Hiruzen replied.

"No, you won't," Danzo countered.

"Sealing Art: Unsummoning Jutsu!"

That moment, Hiruzen felt Enma, who was keeping Mito busy, disappear, the jutsu that summoned to the island undone.

"Adamantine Sealing Chains!"

Danzo capitalized that second of distraction, and lunged forward, delivering an horizontal swipe at Hiruzen with his wind-enhanced kunai. Hiruzen managed to jump back, but he wasn't fast enough to dodge the attack completely, allowing Danzo to slash his chest, drawing even more blood. Hiruzen then felt his ankles being wrapped by a chain, making him lose his balance and fall facefirst into the ground. Mito then retracted the chain, pulling Hiruzen towards her, while more chains bound his body, leaving him completely immobile.

Hiruzen looked upwards, and saw Mito ready to strike. However, her brown eyes were now pure white, and her mouth was curved into an extremely evil smirk.

"Sweet dreams, Sarutobi-sensei," Orochimaru's voice came from Mito's mouth, as Mito raised her fist, which shone with a golden light.

Mito then brought the fist down, impaling Hiruzen's chest. Hiruzen's mouth opened, spitting mouthful of blood as he tried to say something, but all the sounds that came from it were unintelligible gargles. That moment, Mito's eyes returned to normal. She blinked a couple times, before realizing what had happened.

"Saru? Saru! No, nooooooooooo!" Mito wailed, as she hugged the corpse of who once had been the star student of her husband and her brother in law.

Danzo watched the scene with a solemn expression, as a torrent of emotions boiled inside his artificial body.

"Fighting to the very end. Such a dignified death. Even in that, you proved to be my better. Farewell, my old friend."

...

In a nearby forest, Yugao and Hayate had finished fighting Kabuto. The pair of swordsmen managed to pin Kabuto to the ground by stabbing several chakra-infused kunai on several parts of his body.

"Great. This guy won't go anywhere," Yugao said, smiling at her victory.

"Indeed. Now let's go and help-" Hayate agreed, before covering a cough with his mouth. "We should go back and help the others."

Kabuto, however, rather than being angry, was smugly smiling.

"Your victory today means nothing. You have only seen a fraction of the power Orochimaru-sama commands!" Kabuto said.

Then, much to the couple's shock, the kunai pinning him to the ground were swatted away by an invisible force which also brought Kabuto to his feet. A coffin appeared behind him, and Kabuto was pushed inside it, before the lid slammed against the coffin, finally sinking into the ground.

...

Mountain Graveyard, that very moment

"So, you failed again," Obito said, exasperated. "I'm starting to regret making this deal more and more."

"I haven't failed, Obito-kun," Orochimaru said. "The plan is going as I have foreseen it."

"The jinchuriki escaped! All three of them!" Obito snapped, piercing Orochimaru with an angry glare. "What's good any foresight if in the end the result is failure!?"

"The result isn't failure. The jinchuriki might have escaped, but right now, based on the position of the Turtle Island, they only have one place to go. A place away from all the battlegrounds, and thus a place where they won't be able to ask for help," Orochimaru explained.

"If we send forces to that zone, the Alliance will catch wind of what's going on!" Obito replied.

"We won't have to send anybody, because I already have an agent in place," Orochimaru said, smirking confidently. "One of my best reanimations, who happen to have no equal when it comes to jinchuriki hunting."

"Very well then," Obito said. "But keep in mind, this will be your last chance. No more screw ups."

"No more screw ups," Orochimaru echoed.

...

Land of Fire

Among the forests near the northern coast of the Land of Fire, a figure stood still. He could be mistaken for a statue, but said figure was very much alive. Alive in a roundabout way, that's it.

" The time has come," a voice said inside the figure's head. He opened his eyes, which were full of anger and frustration at his current predicament. "Now go, and capture the three jinchuriki. Let nothing and no one stop you."

The figure, unable to resist, obeyed the commands, broke his quietude, and leaped forward.

Hashirama Senju was on the hunt.

Cocoon Chamber, Undisclosed Location

During the past few days, the second cocoon the eight White Zetsu clones have been feeding and taking care of began pulsating with increased frequency. They remembered that such thing happened when Rin's cocoon was ready to open, so despite their excitement, they kept their emotions in restrain and continued taking care of the cocoon as best as they could.

This cocoon, however, started to do something Rin's cocoon didn't do: as the pulsations hastened their pace, it began to glow white with chakra. The faster the pulsations became, the more it glowed. And the last day, it glowed so brightly, it was almost like looking directly into the sun.

And lastly, it opened.

It wasn't like Rin's cocoon, though, which merely split into four parts almost like a flower blooming, spilling its green colored, sap-like liquid contents and the body of the newly restored girl. This cocoon exploded with chakra, instantly vaporizing the Zetsu clones attached to it, flooding the galleries with a burning light, killing everybody unfortunate enough to be caught in the blast.

And when the light finally faded, the chamber was completely empty, except for one man, standing alone in a puddle of green sap. The man had fair skin, a slim but muscular body, and long, wild black hair that fell down his back.

For a few moments, the man didn't move. He then moved his hand towards his face, tentatively flexing his fingers, before curling them into a fist, and throwing a few punches into the air.

Then, that moment, Zetsu, the original one, emerged from the ground. He looked at the newcomer, and smiled.

"I see that you're finally back," the white half said.

"You took a bit longer than we expected," the black half added.

At first, the newcomer didn't seem to notice Zetsu. Then, without even turning at the plant creature, he asked: "How long has it been?"

"Sixteen years, boss," Black Zetsu replied. "A lot of things happened, as you can imagine. We're close to reach our goal, but there's still much to be done."

"I can imagine that. First, bring me some clothes. And fill me in about what had happened since the last time we spoke," the man ordered.

"As you order... Madara-sama," the white half replied.

Author's Note: First of all, sorry if the battle wasn't that good. Writting a battle with so many fighters on both sides it's rather challenging (hence why I cheated a little by having Yugao and Hayate push Kabuto away from the main kerfuffle). And even if it was kind of obvious, congratulations to all the people who guessed the mysterious woman was Mito. In fact, it couldn't be Kushina since I myself stated that neither she nor Minato were going to appear again after they helped Naruto defeat Kurama.

For those of you who complained about the lack of deaths in the war so far... yeah, hope you guys are satisfied. And trust me, these are far from the only deaths you are going to see now. As I said before, we're heading now into the endgame, and the stakes will be raised appropriately.

You know, I always regretted not killing Hiruzen during the Uchiha Insurrection, given that I hardly did anything with him. I realized a little too late that Hiruzen is a character that doesn't have much to do if he isn't wearing the Hokage Hat. And indeed, I heard other authors that had him step down as Hokage but keep him alive also had similar problems with him, and end up killing him anyway. Oh well, at the very least, I hope his last battle as well as his death were memorable moments.

There's also Tenzo and Choza dying as well. As for Tenzo, I always struggled what to do with him (even as the sensei of Hanabi and the Senju twins) and he wasn't very high in my top favorite character list, so off he goes. As for Choza, so like Shikamaru and Ino, Choji can also take his place as the head of his Clan at the same time as his teammates, as well as to show that, contrary to what Jiraiya believed, the island wasn't devoid of danger.

But I'm guess that what many of you found the most interesting is the last scene of the chapter. Yes, Madara has finally woke up, and is ready to wreak havoc.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Naruto, Fu, and Killer B had escaped the island, but they got out of the frying pan to land into the fire, as a full-powered Hashirama is ready to hunt them down. How the jinchuriki trio will do against the most powerful ninja who ever lived? You'll find soon enough. In the meantime, don't forget to leave your thoughts on this chapter in a review. Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Hashirama Senju, the First Hokage

Author's Note: Here comes one of the battles I've been dying to write the most. I hope you guys like it:

Chapter 121:

Hashirama Senju, the First Hokage

or

Gotta Catch'em All (Tailed Beasts)!

Land of Fire, Coastline

After a couple hours of flying above the ocean, Fu and her two passengers managed to finally land on solid ground. Fu looked exhausted, B appeared neutral, but Naruto was impatient to make their next move.

"Come on, we should get moving," Naruto said, as he started walking. "We need to find friends or allies, and soon. Akatsuki still has their eye on us."

"Ouch..." Fu said, as she rubbed her shoulders. "Could we rest for a bit? I'm kind of sore after flying while carrying you guys for so long."

There was a moment of silence. Naruto was going to protest, but looked at B, who nodded.

"The girl made quite an effort, let her catch her breath. We need some rest as well, or the next fight may result in our death," Killer B sagely advised.

Even if he was unhappy, Naruto decided to agree with Killer B. Fu let out a sigh of relief, and plopped on the ground.

"I swear I don't need much time. Just a few minutes," Fu promised.

While Fu sat down, Naruto and Killer B remained standing. Nobody said anything for the next few minutes, nor did anything. B usually tried to take advantage of moments of clamness to think and write up some new lyrics, but all he did was stand there, arms crossed.

Naruto was the same. He was thinking in all the people that died on that island: Choji's dad, Choza; Tenzo, who was Hagane, Kaida and Hanabi's Jonin-sensei. More than likely the Third Hokage, Naruto's parents' Jonin-sensei and father figure. He hoped that Yugao and Hayate were okay, he didn't want to see another of his friends losing his parents. And then, another grim thought crossed the blond's mind.

" Just... how many people have died already in the war?" Naruto wondered. "Are all my friends all right? Their families? There's no way they're going to come out of this unscathed."

" There's no point in dwelling on that, Naruto," Kurama interceded. "The only thing that matters is to end this war as swiftly as possible. You can mourn their deaths later."

Naruto clenched his fist, angry at the fox's lack of tact. But deep down, he knew Kurama was right. There was nothing he could do for those who had died, but he could do something for those who were still alive.

"Number Nine has a point. What are we going to do now?" Killer B asked, apparently hearing what Kurama said. "You guys still need more training, but in our current situation I can't see how."

"The Old Man Hokage told us to go to the Allied Ninja Forces HQ. That we'd be safe there," Naruto said.

"Great! Let's go there then!" Fu happily said. She then looked around, as if trying to ascertain her surroundings. "Though, do any of you know where it is? Because I wasn't told."

"Me neither," Naruto said, looking at Killer B, who just shrugged and shook his head. "Just great."

"Well..." Fu began, fidgeting with her index fingers. "We obviously can't wander around until we find it, so... maybe we should try to find one of the Allied Divisions? We can be safe with them."

"I don't like the idea of putting a target on their backs with our presence, but right now that's our better option," Naruto said.

"We still have the problem that we don't know where to find them," Killer B interceded. "And while we wander, we might be found by those Akatsuki scum."

"Sage Mode might of be of help here. With the sensing ability that provides, it will be easy to track them. Large concentrations of people means large concentrations of chakra, something we should be able to pick up," Naruto said.

" Uh, question!" Chomei chimed in. "Why didn't you guys use Sage Mode when we were fighting those zombies?"

Naruto turned around, looking at Fu -or better said, Fu's stomach- in shock. "Wait... we can use your chakra cloaks and Sage Mode in unison?"

" Of course you can. Why did you thought it wasn't possible?" Kurama replied.

"I... nevermind," Naruto said, dropping his head in defeat, wondering how many lives he could have saved if it wasn't for his stupidity.

" Don't feel bad, Naruto," Gyuki interceded. "The island was lost the moment Akatsuki learned of its location. Sage Mode would have changed very little there."

Naruto seriously doubted it, but decided not to argue with the ox-octopus. He couldn't afford to waste anymore time. It was time to end this war. Naruto sat down, and started to gather nature energy. Upon seeing him, Fu did so as well. After a few minutes, orange marks appeared around Naruto's eyes, while butterfly-shaped green marks appeared around Fu's. The more nature energy they gathered, the more their sensing ability expanded.

At first, all they could sense were animals and wildlife. When they finally started to sense human chakra in numerous quantity, they could tell they were just townspeople. However, as they continued their efforts, they finally noticed a large concentration of chakra of great intensity.

"I sensed something!" Fu excitedly said.

"Me too! To the southwest!" Naruto said, as he stood up and looked into that direction.

"In fact, I swore I sensed the chakras of Lee, Tenten and Neji!" Fu added, as she jumped to her feet.

"I sensed Kaida, Hagane and Sasuke as well. It must be the division they've been assigned to," Naruto said.

"That's good enough to me, let's go!" Fu excitedly said.

"Wait a second," Naruto said, as he bit his thumb, and started to make hand seals.

"What are you doing?" Fu asked. "Do you plan to summon something?"

"Yes, a messenger toad," Naruto replied. "I'm going to send a message to dad in order to tell him what happened and what's going on. Hopefully we'll get some help soon."

Naruto then slammed his hand into the ground, producing a burst of smoke as the summoning took place.

...

Konoha, Hyuga Estate

Quiet.

That's how Hinata described everything around her. Not only her home, which was devoid of more than two thirds of its usual clansmen because of the war, leaving only the children, the elderly, and the service staff -which they now had too little to do given how few Hyugas were currently in the Estate-, but the village as well.

Konoha felt like a ghost town, while her home felt like an abandoned mansion, even if it had still a couple dozen people on it. Which only helped to make the Hyuga Clan Head even antsier. Yet here she was, forced to stay confined in her home.

The moment Hinata returned, the first thing she wanted to do was fly straight into the nearest battlefield, presumably the one where her sister or her mother where fighting right now.

"Have you lost your mind? You need to rest right now!"

"The fight against Toneri left you drained. You need time to rest before you can head back to the front lines."

"The First Hokage went back to fight in the war immediately after his fight with Madara Uchiha, and we all know how that ended. He wasn't invincible, and neither are you."

From her clansmen, to the Moon Acolytes, to the non-Hyuga ninjas that had accompanied her like Sai and Shisui, all of them told her that going right now to the war was suicide. And as much as it pained her to admit it, they were right. Some of her clansmen scanned her with their Byakugan, and warned her that her chakra levels, while not as low as to present a risk for her health, they were too low for an actual battle.

"If I'm being forced to stay here, I better try to enjoy it," the young woman said in resignation, as she lazily finished eating her yakisoba.

Then again, after spending so many weeks on ration bars, homecooked food was a gift for her taste buds.

That moment, one of the cooks entered the dinning area. He appeared to be pleased that Hinata's dish was pretty much empty.

"I hope the food is to your liking, Hinata-sama," the cook replied.

"It was as excellent as the last time I ate here, Ichikawa-san," Hinata replied.

"I'm glad to hear it," the chef said, nodding in satisfaction. "We all know you're itching to leave for battle once again, so I hope that our food not only will help you recover your strength as quick as possible, but it will make your stay here pleasant."

"Yes. I can feel my chakra slowly getting back to its usual levels," Hinata said. "The clan's medics told me that I will be ready to go after a day or two of rest and proper food."

The chef nodded once again, before he snapped his fingers. "While eating proper nutritive food is important, I believe you also deserve a little whim given how hard you've been fighting for us, Hinata-sama."

A maid then entered the dinning area carrying a tray full of cinnamon buns. The Hyuga Clan Head's mouth began to water upon witnessing such a heavenly sight. She didn't even remember when was the last time she enjoyed her favorite meal.

As she bit the sweet, sweet pastry, she did remember when it was: Naruto bought her some as an apology gift for the way he behaved with her after the failed Roshi mission. She couldn't help but wonder how her boyfriend was doing now.

"Just wait a little longer, Naruto-kun," Hinata thought. "We will be fighting together soon."

...

Madara Uchiha's Secret Lair

Madara was finishing putting up his old armor. After getting cleaned up and dressed, the former Uchiha Clan Head asked his minion about what had happened during the decades he had been hibernating inside the cocoon.

Zetsu told Madara all what Obito had done, such as the recruitment of Nagato, the creation of Akatsuki, how they managed to capture six and a half Tailed Beasts, but the other two and a half were proving to be exceptionally resistant to capture, to the point of losing half their members trying to do so. Then came the war against all five Great Ninja Villages, plus some of the lesser ones. Things... weren't going that well for Akatsuki.

But that was in the past. Now that Madara had completed his rejuvenation process, things would go better now.

"What about the test subject?" Madara asked.

"She's meeting our initial expectations. She has access to Wood Release as expected, her chakra pools expanded considerably, and her healing factor surpasses that of Hashirama himself," the black half began to explain.

"We also believe she inherited Hashirama's affinity for nature energy as well, given that she has mastered Sage Mode in a rather short amount of time," the white half added.

"Interesting... hearing her progress, it makes me want to find an opponent to fight as soon as possible," Madara said, as he adjusted his old vambraces.

"Are you sure you don't want the new armor, boss?" the black half of Zetsu asked. "That museum piece won't take you very far."

"Save it for later. This armor was how people remember me, and I want to appear the same way as in their memories," Madara replied.

He then closed his eyes, and expanding his senses. Madara has always been a pretty powerful sensor, but thanks to Hashirama's cells spliced into his, he could now cover the area of a small country in mere seconds. It didn't take him long to find a large mass of chakra, a huge concentration of human beings.

"Boss? Should we go and catch the remaining jinchuriki?" the white half suggested.

"There will be time for that. First, I want to test my new powers," Madara replied, opening his eyes and turning around. "I sense an army not too far away from here. They will be the perfect opponent to test my might. Take me there."

"As you say, boss," the white half agreed.

...

Meanwhile, in the northern part of the Land of Fire, after a few minutes of rest, Naruto, Fu and Killer B began their journey towards the front lines. Naruto and Killer B were jumping from one tree branch to another, while Fu flew a few meters above them. At the pace they were currently going, they hoped that they would reach the Allied Division a little before sunset. That was, of course, if there were no unforeseen events that would delay them.

Too bad Akatsuki loved throwing unforeseen events at its enemies.

As they advanced, Naruto's necklace started to glow with a greenish-white light, something it hasn't done in quite some time.

"Naruto?" Fu asked. "What's with your necklace?"

"I don't know," Naruto replied, as he looked at the jewel hanging from his neck with worry. "This necklace is imbued with the First Hokage's chakra. It only glows when-"

"Wood Release: Nativity of a World of Trees!"

The earth started to shake, and gigantic wooden vines emerged from down below, tearing down the already existing trees, the area being flooded in green. Fu yelled and flew even higher into the sky, while Naruto and Killer B were forced to jump onto the emerging vines. Naruto pulled his Wind Blade, while B unsheathed two of his short swords, and started to cut all the vines that were coming at them.

After a couple minutes, the jutsu finally stopped, even if the new gigantic forest remained. Naruto quickly activated his Kurama Chakra Cloak, while Fu was covered in the carapace plates of the Chomei Chakra armor. Killer B was surrounded by a cloak of bright maroon chakra that gave him horns and eight tails.

"Another enemy that can use Wood Release. Will these nasty surprises ever cease?" the jinchuriki of the Eight Tails asked as he looked around.

"The scale of this jutsu is nothing I've seen before," Naruto said in awe. "Neither Tenzo, Kaida or even Rin in Sage Mode can-"

"Naruto! B-sensei! Over there!" Fu pointed to a large vine arc.

The two male jinchuriki saw a man standing on the large wooden vine: a tan skinned man with long, straight dark brown hair. He was wearing an antiquated red armor, as well as Konoha forehead protector tied around his head. His cracked skin and black eyes betrayed his nature as a reanimation. And while that wasn't a face Naruto and Fu had ever seen in person, they both had seen it for days in the Hokage Monument.

The three jinchuriki immediately felt their Tailed Beasts squirm in both anger and fear.

" Oh shit, not him!" Gyoku cursed.

" This is going to suck so much..." Chomei whined.

"Of course Akatsuki would resurrect that son of a-" Kurama began, his words being muffled by growls of anger.

"Naruto, isn't that guy...?" Fu began.

"Yes," Naruto said, as he locked eyes with the man in question. "The First Hokage. No wonder my necklace is glowing."

"The First Hokage, hm? He looks to be pretty strong. This looks like it's going to be a pretty intense fight, am I wrong?" Killer B asked.

"'Intense' doesn't even begin to describe it, B," Gyuki said, sounding a little panicked. "That man was the one who fought and subdued me without breaking a sweat, before selling me to Kumo."

"Me too," Chomei stated. "Hashirama has the power to bind us to his will, and we can't do anything about it."

"So that was their plan all along, huh?" Kurama said in realization. "The initial attack on the island was just a ruse to put us in the open, where Hashirama would capture us."

"Well, First Hokage or not, no such thing is going to happen! All of us are as strong as a Kage, plus it's three on one! We can beat him!" Naruto said energetically.

"Watch out, he's preparing another jutsu!" Fu warned, upon noticing Hashirama making hand seals.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Hashirama slammed one hand onto the vine he was standing on, but rather than a cloud of smoke followed by some sort of summoned animal, Hashirama summoned a coffin with the Uzumaki symbol on it. The lid fell forward, and its occupant stepped outside, who turned out to be Mito Uzumaki.

"Oh shit, not those two together!" Kurama cursed.

Naruto gulped, sharing the fox's concerns and fear. He had experienced firsthand what Mito was capable of on her own, he didn't want to imagine what it would be to fight her alongside a godlike ninja like Hashirama.

"Mito-chan?" Hashirama asked, taken aback. "You too?"

"Hashirama," Mito said, looking at her husband. "I see that you're also a slave of this aberration of a jutsu."

"The saddest part is, this isn't even the first time," Hashirama said, letting out a weary sigh. "Though, I don't see my brother nor that Minato guy this time around."

Minato. That name sounded familiar to Mito, but she couldn't put her finger when did she hear it.

"At the very least we haven't been summoned in Konoha this time around," Hashirama said. "I would have hated if more innocent lives were on my conscience."

"Too bad I can't say the same," Mito sadly replied. "Our puppetmaster forced me to end Saru's life."

"You... you were forced to kill Saru!? No!" Hashirama cried, his eyes opening wide, before they narrowed in anger, as his fist clenched. "I don't know how, but I'll make sure that traitorous bastard pays for this."

"The best we can do is to make sure we don't cause anymore damage. And to do so, we need to help our enemies to seal us away," Mito replied, before looking at the jinchuriki in front of them.

Hashirama looked at Naruto, Fu and Killer B. "Those three appear to be our targets. Do you know them?"

"The jinchuriki of the Seven, Eight, and Nine Tails, respectively," Mito explained. "Orochimaru, the man who summoned us, is part of a criminal organization that seeks to collect all Tailed Beasts. Those three are the ones who still remain. Albeit the jinchuriki of the Nine Tails only has half the beast within his body, the other half being bound to me once again."

"If they're jinchuriki, no wonder Orochimaru saved us for them. Wait... I'm sensing a familiar chakra... is he wearing the necklace I gave Tsuna?" Hashirama said. He then took a step forward, and cupped his hands around his mouth to increase his voice. "Hey, jinchuriki of the Nine Tails! Are you a Konoha ninja?"

"My name's Naruto!" Naruto replied. "And yeah, I'm from Konoha!"

"Nice to meet you, Naruto! My name's Hashirama, albeit you probably know who I am, given that I was told I'm on history textbooks now!" Hashirama said. "Anyway, if you hope to defeat me, you need to find this man called Shisui Uchiha! Only he can break the control the caster of the jutsu has over our bodies!"

"I'm afraid Shisui is a bit busy right now!" Naruto replied.

"Oh. Well, that's very unfortunate. You aren't going to like what's coming next, then. Wood Clone Jutsu!" Four Wood Clones emerged from Hashirama, and placed themselves around him. Both the original and the clones started to make hand seals.

"Fire Release: Great Fire Destruction!"

"Water Release: Water Colliding Wave!"

"Earth Release: Tectonic Upheaval!"

"Lightning Release: Wrath of the Thunder God!"

"Wind Release: Breath of God!"

The three jinchuriki watched in shock how Hashirama and his clones breathed a massive stream of fire, a gigantic wall of water, a storm of lightning bolts, an extremely powerful gale, and raised gigantic rocks from underground, meshing all of them in a single, massive elemental attack that advanced towards them, devouring everything in its way.

"WHAT THE HELL!?" a shocked Naruto asked, as he tried to come up with what to do to counter such a massive combination attack.

However, Naruto didn't have to do anything, as one of Killer B's chakra tentacles wrapped around his waist, before he was thrown into the air, and much to his surprise, he was caught by Fu.

"Number Seven, time to take us to heaven!" Killer B said, extending another of his chakra tentacles towards Fu.

The Jinchuriki of Chomei grabbed it, and lifted the Kumo ninja into the air, and the three of them were able to dodge the deadly attack.

"What the hell was that, kid? You never froze mid-battle before!" Kurama chastised.

"I'm sorry, it's just... the scale of those attacks was unreal! And from all five elements!" Naruto replied, shocked. "I didn't know that the First Hokage could do that!"

"What, you thought that all Hashirama has is the Wood Release? You humans and your habit to simplify everything..." Kurama said, shaking his head. "There's a reason as for why he was called the God of Ninja, and it wasn't just because of his power and Bloodline Limit. Yes, he's a master of all five elemental ninjutsu, medical ninjutsu, genjutsu, is an expert fighter with pretty much any weapon..."

"So we have our work cut, don't we?" Naruto asked.

"Yes. And don't forget that Mito is still there!" Kurama warned.

And indeed, Naruto saw a golden-orange blur blitzing towards them. More chains shot from many parts of her body. Naruto, however, was ready to counter it. After releasing himself from Fu, he quickly pulled out a sealing scroll from his ninja tool pouch, and unsealed a Fuma shuriken, which he quickly threw in Mito's direction, before making several hand seals.

"Shadow Clone Shuriken Jutsu!"

The single shuriken became a dozen, clashing against the incoming chains, deflecting them elsewhere, while some others managed to hit Mito herself, which stopped her momentum.

" Good one, Naruto. Now here comes the other bastard!"

Kurama warned

And indeed, like Kurama said, Hashirama was leaping at them, holding a huge broadsword between his hands, almost as big as Zabuza's Executioner Blade. Upon seeing him, Killer B released himself from Fu as well, and used his chakra tentacles to usheathe the rest of his swords.

"Hey Naruto, let me take a crack at this guy!" Killer B said, as he rushed towards Hashirama. "My skills with the blade will make this man cry!"

The Kumo jinchuriki engaged Hashirama in a duel of swords. Despite the size of his blade, Hashirama swung his broadsword as easily as if it was a mere tanto, making Killer B realize that he wasn't going to have the speed advantage as he imagined.

Still, the jinchuriki of the Eight Tails wasn't somebody to frighten easily, and deflected Hashirama's blows by redirect them to the sides -he knew better than trying to parry a blow from such a big weapon-, while counterattacking with the swords he was holding with the chakra tentacles, even managing to land a few slashes on the First Hokage. Unfortunately, he was uanble to make any real harm.

"You're a good swordsman, Kumo ninja," Hashirama praised. "I would have loved to test my skill against yours had we met in another life!"

" Hmmmm... my skills alone aren't leaving any mark..." Killer B mused, ignoring the First Hokage's words. "Perhaps they need a little more spark!"

When Hashirama delivered another swipe, Killer B instead decided to parry instead of deflecting, but when he did, he channeled lightning chakra through his sword. As his sword crackled with electricity, it managed to slice a clean piece of Hashirama's broadsword.

"Whoa!" Hashirama said, as he jumped back before Killer B could deliver another slash at him, and looked at his ruined blade. "Well, look at that. You're even better than I thought!"

"Of course I am, ya fool! Those who think who can compare with the great Killer B are nothing but tools!" Killer B boasted.

Taking advantage of Hashirama's surprise, Naruto ambushed him from one of his flanks, ready to strike the zombie Hokage down with his Wind Blade. However, Hashirama was still able to sense him, and parried Naruto's elemental sword with his ruined broadsword, which got another chunk sliced off. Hashirama jumped back, and Naruto tried to chase after him.

"Naruto, watch out!" Fu warned from above.

That moment, the four Wood Clones Hashirama had created surrounded Naruto and engaged him in a fight from every direction. Naruto smirked in return.

"You think you can use clones against me? ME?" Naruto asked, sounding half amused and half insulted. Without putting his Wind Blade away, he made a hand seal. "Shadow Clone Jutsu!"

Several dozen Naruto clones popped to life among bursts of smoke, quickly overwhelming the Hashirama clones. However, the clones had already fulfilled their purpose of buying the First Hokage some seconds to weave seals and use his next jutsu:

"Wood Release: Deep Forest Bloom!"

Once again, Hashirama created a dense forest out of nowhere, forcing the three jinchuriki to back off. However, large flowers began to bloom from these new trees, and started to release large clouds of pollen. Soon, the air was saturated with the pollen, taking on a yellowish hue.

" DO NOT BREATHE THAT POLLEN!" Chomei practically screamed.
"If you do, you're dead!"

And indeed, the Naruto clones that were further from the real one were unable to escape from the yellow pollen cloud, and they instantly fell on their faces, unconscious, before they all dispelled in bursts of smoke.

" Actually, that pollen isn't lethal, but puts to sleep to those who inhale it," Gyuki felt the need to correct his fellow Tailed Beast. "... but given the circumstances, it may be synonymous of death, so yeah, don't breathe it."

"That's easy for you to say! We can't fight without breathing!" Fu replied.

"Fu, you and I both know Wind jutsu! Let's try to blow the pollen away!" Naruto suggested.

" Even if you do, the flowers will just pump out more," Kurama helpfully reminded them.

"In that case, the flowers will have to go as well, if we don't want to fall prey to their smell," Killer B suggested.

" I don't think Hashirama and Mito are going to make it easy for you to do any gardening, though," Gyuki pointed out.

"Nobody said this was going to be easy, if it was it would be cheesy," Killer B replied.

"Well said!" Naruto said, as he started making hand seals. "Ready, Fu?"

"Ready!" Fu replied, her hands forming seals as well.

"Wind Release: Cyclone Vortex!"

"Wind Release: Great Breakthrough!"

Upon finishing the sealing sequence, Naruto thrust his hands forward, casting a huge horizontal cyclone, while Fu expelled a huge wall of air from her mouth. The two wind attacks merged into a powerful hurricane, and it quickly dispersed the cloud of pollen.

"Wow..." Hashirama said in awe. "In all the times I used that jutsu, not a single person ever thought in using a Wind jutsu to dispel the pollen!"

"I don't think a normal Wind jutsu would have been enough, husband," Mito replied. "Then again, those two are jinchuriki with mastery over their Tailed Beasts, so they have enough power to counter ours. Maybe there's hope they can beat us."

The flowers, however, continued pumping more sleeping pollen into the air. However, the jinchuriki moved in order to destroy them before they could release more. Though, as Gyuki pointed out, the pair of reanimations weren't going to just stay idle and let them do it, as the pair of older ninjas quickly jumped into intercept the jinchuriki.

"I'll take care of the flowers! Shadow Clone Jutsu!" Naruto made his favorite hand seal, creating a dozen or so of clones, which began to move towards the direction of the flowers. "Fu, I'm going to need some cover!"

"You got it!" Fu said, as she made the tiger hand seal while opening her mouth, releasing a cloud of sparkly dust scales. "Hiding in the Scale Powder jutsu!"

Fu clapped her hands together, and the whole area was flooded by bright white light flooded the area, blinding Hashirama and Mito. Naruto and his clones already closed their eyes in order not avoid being blinded, while Killer B's sunglasses negated the blinding light. The light receded quickly, but that was all the time Naruto and his clones needed to destroy all the flowers with explosive notes.

Meanwhile, Killer B and Fu jumped forward, and engaged Hashirama and Mito in a close combat duel (again, in Killer B's case), pushing the two reanimations back.

"Whoa! They countered my jutsu completely!" Hashirama said in awe, albeit he also sounded rather excited. "Not even Madara was even able to do that! Jinchuriki or not, these ninjas had a very fine upbringing and training!"

"I don't know about these two, but the jinchuriki of the Nine Tails is Tsuna's adoptive son," Mito told her husband.

Hashirama gasped loudly, and a huge smile appeared in his face. "Really!? Are you really the boy Tsuna told me about the other time!? That's great! I'm so glad to meet you, boy! I'm your great-grandfather, Hashirama!"

"You are the First Hokage, I know who you are!" Naruto replied. "Plus you introduced yourself earlier!"

"Sorry, sorry!" Hashirama said, laughing awkwardly while casually parrying a few slashes from Killer B. "I can get a bit excited when I meet a new family member, and I kind of lose focus of what I'm doing!"

"Hey, cut the chatter, it's me you have to fight! Ignoring your opponent is a huge slight!" Killer B protested, as he intensified his onslaught.

"You'll have to excuse my husband, jinchuriki-san," Mito replied, as she herself ignored Fu while her body fought on her own. "He can be a bit silly sometimes. Still, try not to underestimate him, he can be a fierce warrior when he puts his mind to it."

"Not that I want to!" Hashirama added, as he briefly disengaged Killer B, and unsealed a pair of large swords, one being straight, the other with a curved edge, from the large scroll he was carrying on his back. "Much better! I prefer to fight an armed opponent when I'm armed myself!"

"I thought you said you didn't want to fight seriously!" Fu protested.

"I don't want to, but if I'm forced to, I might as well enjoy it!" Hashirama said, as his duel against the Kumo jinchuriki became more even.

"Like I said, my husband can be a little silly," Mito replied.

"Unfortunately, what comes next isn't going to be as silly!" Hashirama warned, as his two swords started to glow with chakra. "Strong Sword: Helmet Splitter!"

Hashirama projected through his blades swords of chakra that were twice as long and thick as the swords he was holding, and brought one of them down in a vertical downward slash. Rather than parrying it, Killer B wisely dodged to the side, with the sword releasing a gigantic crescent chakra blast that cut a giant furrow in the ground, while also shredding all the trees that were caught in its path.

Taking advantage of his building momentum, Hashirama made another cut with his other sword, this time horizontal, while also releasing another crescent shaped blast of chakra. However, rather than trying to dodge it this time, Naruto generated four giant arms of golden chakra, and attempted to stop the slash himself. After struggling with the chakra blast for a bit, the golden arms managed to shatter it into thousands of blue sparks that quickly disappeared.

"Whoa... !" Hashirama said in awe. "Adopted or not, you're indeed Tsuna's kid!"

"Thank you. Though, if you liked that, you're going to like this even more," Naruto said, before orange markings appeared around his eyes. He raised an arm, which generated other arms around it, and used them to create a spinning shuriken of wind chakra. "Wind Release: Rasenshuriken!"

Naruto threw the deadly disc forward, the air being filled with a loud whirring noise. Hashirama quickly started to make hand seals, ready to counter Naruto's jutsu.

"Wood Release: Wood Golem jutsu!"

Hashirama slammed his hands into the ground, and a golem emerged from it. First the head, then the upper body, then the arms, lower body, and lastly the legs. The moment the arms materialized, one of the hands quickly went to grab the Rasenshuriken. However, to the first Hokage's surprise, the chakra shuriken exploded into a sphere of destructive razor winds, shredding the hand of the golem to splinters, as well as almost destroying its whole arm.

"So, Sage Mode already, Naruto?" Fu asked, noticing the marks around Naruto's eyes.

"I think this enemy deserves it," Naruto replied.

"In that case, don't mind me if I join you!" Fu said, making a hand seal.

Back in the coast Fu had landed with her fellow jinchuriki, there were two Shadow Clones of Fu and a single Shadow Clone of Naruto gathering nature energy, before one of the former disappeared, just like the Shadow Clone of Naruto a few moments before. Despite the distance, it only took a few seconds for the nature energy to transfer to Fu's body, the Sage Mode manifesting in the form of green marks with the shape of butterfly wings.

While they normally couldn't create many clones if they had clones gathering nature energy, their limit had expanded now that they had access to the full power of their Tailed Beasts.

"You kids are Sages too?" Mito said in amazement.

"The newer generations are such a wonder, aren't they, Mito-chan?" Hashirama replied.

"Indeed. Unfortunately, that display of power is going to force me to go all out as well," Mito replied, before her orange-golden aura exploded in a torrent of light, shapeless at first, but taking the form of a translucent Nine Tailed Fox as it grew up, until it reached its full size, with Mito floating inside its head.

The colossal fox-shaped chakra construct let out a roar, as it stomped forward, and tried to smash Naruto with one of its paws. Naruto, however, was fast enough to shoot an arm of chakra towards the airborne Fu, who pulled him out of danger.

"What the hell is that!?" Naruto asked.

"It seems that Mito has complete control over my other half," Kurama noted. "And without you unable to do the same... this complicates things."

"If you can keep that pesky Hashirama out of our way, B and myself will deal with that woman!" Gyoku offered, as Killer B started to transform into his Tailed Best form.

"Leave it to us!" Fu replied. "That Golem looks all big and terrifying, but Naruto showed it's far from invincible!"

That moment, the Nine Tails avatar opened its jaws and started to form a Tailed Beast Ball between them. However, Killer B quickly tackled the orange-golden beast, forcing the incomplete attack into the sky, when it safely detonated. As Killer B pushed Mito away, Naruto and Fu prepared to fight Hashirama and his one armed golem.

"No wonder Orochimaru send me to catch you three. I can't imagine any other ninja being able to carry such task," the First Hokage said. "However, given the abilities I saw you display, I have faith that you can overcome anything I throw at you!"

"Man, it's amazing how he has more faith in us beating him than ourselves..." Fu said with a nervous chuckle.

A tremor shook the land. Naruto looked to his right, and saw Killer B and Mito duking it out in their Tailed Beast forms, neither of them gaining an advantage over the others. Then, the blond realized that, while Mito was able to nullify summons, she was now busy battling Killer B, so maybe he could call for some help while dealing with Hashirama. He bit his thumb and made several hand seals.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Naruto slammed his hand into the ground, which was followed by a huge burst of smoke. When the smoke dispelled, he was standing at the top of Gamabunta's head.

"Hey there, kid," Gamabunta said. "Gamahiro told me about the pickle you got yourself in. Something about Mito Uzumaki coming back from the death? Anyway, glad to see you're still alive and kickin'."

"Thanks, boss," Naruto replied. "Though, I'm not out of danger yet. Could you lend me a hand against that guy?"

Gamabunta narrowed his eyes at the enemy. "Wait... isn't that guy... isn't that guy the First Hokage?"

"Yeah, he was-"

"You summoned me to fight the freakin' First Hokage!? Did you lost your mind, kid!?" Gamabunta hollered. "First your pops expects me to fight the goddamn Nine Tails, and now you summon me to fight the God of Ninja? What's with you crazy blondes!?"

"Calm down, boss! Fu and I are going to be the ones fighting Hashirama. I need you to provide some support. Mostly by distracting that Wood Golem," Naruto said, pointing out at the green giant. "I mean, it's lacking an arm, so how hard can it be?"

"The golem just ate a tree, and the missing arm it's starting to grow back," Fu pointed out, as she hovered over Naruto.

And indeed, there were several wiggling vines that were slowly growing from the stump where the arm used to be.

"It ate... a tree?" Gamabunta repeated.

"In that case, you should try to beat it as fast as you can, before it grows back," Naruto dryly advised.

"There's never a dull moment with you, huh?" Gamabunta said in resignation, as he unsheathed his short sword.

"Oh, so you're a Toad Summoner?" Hashirama asked, curious.

"Given that you were adopted by Tsuna, I thought you'd be a Slug Summoner."

"Slugs are more for medics. And son of Tsunade or not, I absolutely suck at medical ninjutsu, other than doing a very basic version of the Mystical Palm jutsu," Naruto explained. "I got the Toad Contract from my dad."

"I've never fought against a Toad Summoner, but I heard that Toads don't let anybody sign their contract. Then again, you, as well as your companions, showed me that you're far from an ordinary ninja. Let's go then!"

With surprising nimbleness, Gamabunta dashed forward, and delivered a diagonal downward strike with his short sword on the golem, which was caught by its remaining hand. As the giant toad and the wooden construct struggled against each other. Hashirama choose that moment to leap at Naruto, his two swords ready to cut him to pieces.

Naruto smirked, and leaped to meet him mid air. Naruto's Wind Blade clashed against Hashirama's swords, struggling on a blade lock for a bit, before Naruto's superior senjutsu-enhanced strength drove the First Hokage back. As Hashirama was pushed back, Fu flew to intercept him, as she unsealed something from a large scroll.

"Hey, you aren't the only one able to use Wood Release!" Fu said, as much to Hashirama's shock, she unsealed her weapon of choice, a gigantic log. "Meet Arbor-chan!"

Hashirama didn't have time to react as Fu slammed the giant log against him, sending him flying towards a cluster of trees, producing a booming noise and raising a cloud of smoke as the undead Hokage hit the ground. The force of the impact managed to topple several nearby trees.

"Nice hit!" Naruto said, giving his fellow jinchuriki a thumbs up.

"Thanks! It was one of my best moves," Fu said, casually resting the giant piece of wood on her shoulder. "Do you think that was enough to bring him down?"

Suddenly, three large serpentine dragons made of wood emerged from the place Hashirama landed on, with Hashirama himself riding on the head of one of them. While he had multiple wounds across his body, none of them were bad enough to incapacitate him, and they were healing at a fast pace.

"I guess that's our answer," Fu replied. "Okay, new plan, I distract him, you nab him with a Rasenshuriken?"

"He won't fall for something so simple," Naruto replied, shaking his head. "Hitting him with a Rasenshuriken might be enough, but making sure the attack lands will be trickier."

They had no more time to plan, as the three Wood Dragons were already onto them. One of them tried to trap Fu between its jaws, prompting the Taki kunoichi to swing her giant log at her. However, the dragon bit onto the log, and pulled back in order to take it from Fu's hands, the two of them struggling against the other.

"No! No! Bad tree dragon! That's not a chew toy!" Fu chastised, as she and the dragon pulled back and forth.

The moment the second dragon got close to Naruto, the jinchuriki of the Nine Tails generated two large arms of golden chakra, and used them to grab the dragon by the jaws, keeping them from closing. Even with the enhanced strength of both senjutsu and Kurama's chakra, Naruto still struggled to keep the dragons' jaw from closing. Still, he was confident he could keep them opened enough time to make his next move, and began to quickly make hand seals with his real arms.

"Wind Release: Wind Scythe!"

Naruto spread his arms in an arc, creating a crescent shaped blade of pressurized air that flew forward, cutting the Wood Dragon in half as if it was made of paper.

"Piece of cake," Naruto said, before looking to the right in order to check on Fu. Much to his surprise, the girl was still trying to get her giant log back from the Wood Dragon, and Hashirama was about to strike her from her unguarded flank now that she was distracted.

"Fu, watch out!"

"Be careful, girl! I'm coming for you!" Hashirama warned as well, as he was ready to strike her down.

However, despite Fu seemingly not paying attention to the incoming danger, she generated a giant insect arm ending in three long claws from her left shoulder, just in time to parry Hashirama's blow, much to the First Hokage's surprise.

"HMPF!" Fu grunted, as she managed to finally wrestle the large piece of wood from the dragon. The moment the dragon lunged at her again, Fu slammed the log against it, blowing its head clean from the rest of its body. "Hah! That'll teach you- HEY!"

Hashirama's arm turned into a mass of wooden vines, wrapped themselves around Fu's log, yanked it from her hands and tossed it away.

"ARBOR-CHAN!" Fu screamed, before narrowing her yellow eyes at Hashirama. "You're so fucking dead!"

"Technically, I'm dead right now," Hashirama replied. "Sorry for your weapon, though. It wasn't my intention. Strong Sword: Helmet Splitter!"

Hashirama jumped from his dragon and leaped at Fu once again, ready to cut her down with her chakra-enhanced swords. Fu raised her right arm, and from her forearm she generated a large tower shield in the shape of a scarab shell just in time to parry the attack, resulting in a shockwave that shook the nearby trees, but the shield resisted the impact without cracking.

Fu then pushed Hashirama's sword aside, while her other arm morphed into a sting-shaped sword, and thrust it towards the reanimation, but parried it with his other sword. Naruto took advantage of Hashirama's predicament, and leaped at him, his Wind Blade above his head. However, Hashirama's remaining Wood Dragon intercepted Naruto, while the First Hokage continued his fight against Fu.

Then, that moment, Naruto could feel Gamabunta being unsummoned. He looked at where the giant toad had been fighting the Wood Golem, only to see the latter surrounded by an already disappearing cloud of smoke. The golem also had regenerated his lost arm, and wasting no time, stomped his way towards Naruto and Fu.

Naruto also spared a glance to where Killer B and Mito Uzumaki were duking it out in their Tailed Beast forms. So far, the fight seems to be going in Killer B's favor, but it didn't appear to end any time soon. He had to bridge some of the gap between them and their enemies.

"Even if he was a Boss Summon, guess I shouldn't have expected Gamabunta to be a match for something able to fight both the Nine Tails and Madara Uchiha's Susanoo on even terms," Naruto said in resignation. "Fu, how well are you doing against Hashirama?"

"Ehh... not very well!" Fu replied, as she blocked yet another of Hashirama's powerful sword strikes with her shield. "Can you lend me any help?"

"Not yet! Gamabunta had been defeated by the golem, and it's coming towards us!" Naruto warned his fellow jinchuriki. "I'll try to deal with the golem myself, but you have to keep Hashirama busy for a few minutes! Can you do that?"

"I'll try!" Fu replied.

"Very well then," Naruto made his favorite hand seal. "Shadow Clone Jutsu!"

Five clones appeared around Naruto, three in front of him, and other two to his flanks.

"You know what to do," he said.

The three clones in front of him all dashed towards the incoming golem, and started to pelt him with various elemental ninjutsu attacks, as well as explosive tags. Meanwhile, the original Naruto held his Wind Blade in front of him, while the other two clones started to pour and shape chakra into it, as if Naruto was preparing a Rasenshuriken.

While Naruto dealt with the golem, Fu fought against Hashirama as best as she could. Even with the Chakra Armor and Sage Mode, he was proving to be an exceptionally tough adversary. She decided it was time to break her biggest attacks if she hoped to stand a chance alone. Her hands flew through hand seals as fast as they could.

"Sage Art: Water Release, Majestic Maelstrom!"

Fu expelled from her mouth a massive amount of water. The water took the shape of an expanding, spinning cone of liquid that flooded the entire zone. Hashirama, however, stabbed both his swords on the ground, and made more hand seals as well to prepare a defense.

"Earth Release: Earth Style Titanic Wall!"

Hashirama slammed both hands into the ground, raising a truly colossal wall of rock and earth, taller and thicker than the walls that protected Konoha. However, despite the scale of the jutsu and elemental advantage, Fu's water jutsu managed to break through the earth wall, shattering it to multiple rocks, and flooding the area around the First Hokage.

Hashirama quickly recovered his swords, and started to jump across the floating rocks that were being carried by the current of Fu's gigantic water jutsu.

"Mostly impressive, young kunoichi!" Hashirama praised, as he raised both his swords, which started to project a giant cloak of blue chakra. "I'm sure you'll be able to withstand this! Strong Sword: Celestial Slash!"

Hashirama brought both swords down, releasing a powerful wave of chakra that cut down the mass of water, splitting it in two, while it moved towards Fu, carving a furrow as it advanced forward, sending large rocks everywhere. While Fu's mobility would allow her to avoid the blast, the flying rocks were trickier to avoid, and in many cases she had to punch them away.

"Wood Release: Wood Dragon Jutsu!"

Fu saw another serpentine green dragon coming at her from below, and was too slow from stopping it from trapping her between its jaws. While inside the dragon's maws, Fu turned both her arms into huge mantis blades, and used them to slice the dragon's head open from the inside, freeing herself. But before she could do anything else, Hashirama was already on top of her, and delivered a flurry of powerful sword strikes that the jinchuriki parried as well as she could.

"Naruto, are you done yet!? I could use some help here!" Fu cried, as she generated yet another scarab shell shield on her forearm in order to block Hashirama's attacks.

Meanwhile, the Wood Golem had destroyed all of Naruto's clones and moved towards the original, the earth shaking with each of its heavy footsteps. The clones, however, had already bought him all the time he needed. With the help of other two clones that he already dispelled, he infused his Wind Blade with enough chakra that it had grown four times in length and three times in thickness.

"Alright, you big dumbass, time for some extreme haircut," Naruto said, as he moved his gigantic Wind Blade a little, producing a gust of air. When the golem was in range, Naruto leaped at it, while raising his Wind Blade over his head. "Sage Art: Planetary Wind Blade!"

In one swift motion, Naruto brought his Wind Blade down, releasing a giant vertical blade of wind that moved forward at an imperceptible speed. At first, nothing happened. After a second of delay, there was a huge burst of wind coming from Naruto. Then, the golem was bisected in two from head to toe, while several trees behind it exploded into clouds of shredded wood and cut leaves. The two split halves of the golem fell to one side each, before they broke down into thousands of tiny wood splinters.

" Well, Hashirama's mighty golem, defeated in a single blow," Kurama commented, as he began to sound uncomfortable. "Given that that thing fought me evenly, I don't know how to feel right now."

" It wasn't that easy, I had to put all my remaining Senjutsu chakra into that attack," Naruto mentally replied, sensing how the Sage Mode perks were disappearing, as he returned back to normal. He turned around, seeing that Fu and Hashirama stopped fighting, in order to gawk at his spectacular display of power. Emboldened by their reactions, Naruto allowed himself to smirk and gave Fu a thumbs up. "Now I'm done! Let's deal with the First Hokage already!"

However, before Naruto could join Fu, a large shadow was cast above them. Looking up, they saw it was Mito in her Nine Tails form flying through the air, being at the receiving end of one of Killer B's powerful punches, before she landed with a deafening boom on the ground, flattening several trees, and causing a small tremor. Naruto leaped back, while Fu flew high into the air.

" Everybody, stand aside! Except for you, please stay open wide!" Killer B said, as he formed a Tailed Beast Ball between his jaws. "TAILED BEAST BALL!"

The Tailed Beast Ball hit the Nine Tails chakra construct, resulting in a massive explosion, clearing a whole area of trees. When the explosion subsided, the Nine Tails chakra construct was no more, only Mito, lying face down in the middle of a crater. Still, it seemed that the Nine Tails construct had cushioned most of the blast, and she only had several minor wounds, meaning she would be back on her feet in no time.

It was then when Naruto saw the black stake lodged on the back of her neck. Not taking any chances, Naruto dashed at Mito, and send a claw made of golden chakra towards the nail. Mito's body turned golden as she called the power of the Nine Tails bound to her, but before she could use it, Naruto managed to pull the nail out of her body, and the golden chakra flickered before it finally disappeared.

And for good measure, Naruto also placed a couple explosive notes on her back, which he made sure to detonate now that she no longer had the power of the Nine Tails to protect her.

"Quickly, somebody seal her, now!" Naruto urged.

"I'm on it!"

Fu quickly dived towards the lying Mito, and started to wrap her body in chakra thread that produced through her fingers, unless she was completely encased inside a cocoon. She caught the cocoon and carried it towards Naruto, so the blond could place several chakra suppressing seals on it. Fu then created a Shadow Clone which took the cocoon and took it away. Naruto let out a sigh of relief now that one of their enemies was down for the count, even if it was the weaker of the two.

"Yes, one down, another one to go!" Naruto cheered.

"Yeah! Hashirama's strong as hell, but without Mito, between the three of them we can beat him for sure!" Fu agreed, her mood renewed.

Killer B began to shrink back into his human form -while still wearing his Gyuki Chakra Cloak-, given that it was pointless to use that form against a powerful Wood Release user like Hashirama, plus there were no more giant enemies, and quickly rejoined his fellow jinchuriki.

"Yeah, the three of us kick plenty of ass! At the end we will be the one standing, you will have your back on the grass! Oh yeah!" Killer

B rapped.

"Yes, you truly have an amazing power," Hashirama praised. "I met a few jinchuriki in my lifetime, but none of them had the level of dominion over their Tailed Beasts' power as you three display. How did you do manage to bind such creatures to your will?"

"That's the thing old man, we didn't," Naruto replied. "We befriended them. The reason we have access to most of their power is because they allow us to."

Killer B then grew uncharacteristically serious. "There was a time were I saw Number Eight as nothing more than a mindless creature, a savage beast. But upon learning more about him, we got along and became good friends, at least."

"Yeah, I myself also saw Chomei as something I needed to keep prisoner inside me, instead of a living being that lives and feels," Fu replied. "But now I know that there's more to Tailed Beasts that meets the eye!"

"Chomei...?" Hashirama asked.

"Oh, that's her name," Fu clarified.

"... they have names ?" Hashirama asked, his shock growing with each passing second.

" Naruto," Kurama said. "Please switch with me. I want to talk with this... individual."

Naruto closed his eyes for a moment. When he opened them again, they were no longer golden-orange, but blood red with slitted pupils.

" Hey, you asshole," Kurama's voice said from Naruto's mouth.

Hashirama was taken aback by the sudden change of timbre and tone of the blond's voice. Despite his legendary denseness, it didn't take long for him to realize what was going on.

"You're... the Nine Tails..." he said almost in a whisper.

Kurama scowled. "Yes. And the name's Kurama, by the way. And yes, we Tailed Beasts have names. Why is the idea so alien to you? So you could pretend we aren't living beings?" he asked, not expecting Hashirama to answer that question. "After you captured me and my siblings and forced us into human hosts, we Tailed Beasts have been treated as nothing but two things: weapons to use and threats to contain. Being kept inside the darkness of the pocket dimensions created by your seals. Away from the world, and from each other. Often experiencing such torture that it would drive the mind of the strongest human to insanity if they had to experience it for a single day, much less several decades.

"Naruto, however, didn't look at me as a monster, despite the fact that I killed many of his kinsmen, his parents included," Kurama continued. "He said he didn't want to see me suffering anymore, he didn't want me to continue holding onto my hatred for your race. He trusted me, despite the fact that I gave him no reason to trust me at all. He was willing to make the first step, to put himself in a vulnerable position, to risk his life, so he could improve the relationship between humans and Tailed Beasts."

"I..." Hashirama began. "I don't know what to say..."

"Saying that you're sorry for the way you treated Tailed Beasts could be a good start," Fu softly suggested.

Hashirama, however, shook his head, and clenched his fists. "No. I can't be sorry for the way I acted. You Tailed Beasts are way too dangerous, too powerful. And people like Madara could put you under their control with amazing ease. Had I not defeated Madara during our final battle... I don't want to think what he would have done to the village with you as his thrall. I couldn't allow for such thing to happen again. What I was supposed to do?"

" How about talking to me, at the very least!? Maybe we could have reach an agreement, make an alliance! Do you think I have any lost love for Madara after he made me his slave?" Kurama exploded. "You and Madara were WAY more powerful than the average ninja! How would you feel if somebody decided that you're too powerful and a danger to the world, and hence not only you, but all your loved ones need to die for the sake of the rest of the world!?"

"I... no, I couldn't have taken such a risk..." Hashirama said.

" At the very least, you could have tried ," Kurama snarled. He then relinquished the control back to Naruto, as his eyes returned to the previous orange color, and the slitted pupils became dots again.

Hashirama was going to say something, when he felt that his body was about to move again on his own.

"I'm afraid we'll have to end this discussion here, since my puppetmaster wants me to continue the fight," Hashirama said, as he sealed his swords back into the scroll when he carried all his weapons. "Right now, I'm going to go all out. However, I do have hopes that fellow Sages like you two youngsters will be able to weather what I'm about to unleash on you."

"Yeah, we aren't going to- hey, wait a minute, what do you mean by fellow Sages ?" Naruto asked, as a very cold chill ran down his spine. The blond had a very, very bad feeling about what's going to happen next.

Hashirama clapped his hands together, as his body surged with energy and power, a gust of wind blowing from where he was standing on. His eyes turned yellow as green markings similar to those Rin carried appeared under his eyes and on his forehead. "Sage Mode!"

Naruto's mouth hung open in shock. "HE HAS SAGE MODE TOO!?" The blond desperately screamed. "AND HE CAN ENTER SAGE MODE INSTANTLY!?

" Again, God of Ninja, kid," Kurama said. "Still, I have faith you can kick his ass."

Hashirama made a hand seal. "I suggest you not to stay still if you want to avoid my next attack! Sage Art: Gracious Deity Gates!"

Suddenly, a massive red torii gate fell from above where the three jinchuriki were standing, burying itself into the ground while releasing a wave of mud and earth. It would have trapped the three jinchuriki with them if they weren't fast enough to dodge it. However, it didn't stop there, as more gates continued to fall from the sky, prompting the three jinchuriki to split apart and move in different directions.

"Thank goodness we're fast enough to make it miss! Just what kind of jutsu is this?" Killer B asked.

"Kurama?" Naruto asked.

" No idea. I never saw Hashirama use this jutsu before," Kurama replied, shrugging a little. "Again, God of Ninja. Don't lower your guard for a second."

" Don't forget about Hashirama! He can still attack you while the gates drop from above!" Gyuki reminded the human ninjas.

And indeed, that moment, Killer B saw Hashirama above him, who had thrown a Fuma Shuriken.

"Shadow Clone Shuriken Jutsu!"

The giant shuriken turned into several dozens of them, and a rain of sharp steel fell upon the Kumo ninja, ready to tear him apart. Unimpressed, Killer B cast his hands towards Hashirama, placing his chakra tentacles around them. He quickly formed a dark purple sphere of chakra.

"Tailed Beast Ball!"

The Kumo ninja fired the ball upwards, exploding upon touching a shuriken. The explosion engulfed the rest of the shuriken, nullifying Hashirama's attack.

"Ha! If you want to beat the great Killer B you'll need-WHOA!" Killer B was interrupted as he was almost buried under the weight of a falling torii gate. "That jutsu made me interrupt one of my rhymes! I'm going to make sure that man pays for such a heinous crime!"

" B, focus on the battle, dammit!" Gyuki exasperatedly said.

Meanwhile, Fu tried to fly closer to Hashirama while expertly dodging the falling torii gates, as a plan formed inside her head.

" The gates don't seem to fall near him. If I get close to him, I'll be safe from those gates!" Fu thought in realization.

" But... being close to him may be what Hashirama is planning," Chomei advised Fu.

" I doubt he's able to match the combination of my physical strength and your power," Fu retorted.

" Okay but... try not to underestimate him, oka?" Chomei pleaded.

When she was getting closer, Fu turned her forearms into blades shaped like the jaws of a stag beetle, and tried to gore him from behind. Hashirama, however, managed to dodge the attack despite not seeing it. Fu continued delivering blade swings, while Hashirama dodged them while making hand seals.

" The hell how is he- oh, right, Sage Mode grants him sensing abilities," Fu reminded herself.

" Hashirama was able to sense chakra without Sage Mode, though," Chomei told her jinchuriki. "Now brace yourself!"

"Wood Release: Adamantine Fist!"

Suddenly, a gigantic arm made of wood burst from under Fu, and punched her into the sky, the green haired girl letting out a scream as she was sent flying.

"Fu!" Naruto shouted, witnessing his fellow jinchuriki in troubles, as he rushed to his aid.

Hashirama, however, wasn't done, and weaved more hand seals.

"Wood Release: Triple Wood Dragon Jutsu!"

Three more Wood Dragons appeared, one going towards Naruto, the other towards Killer B, and the last one going upwards, following Fu. However, the Taki kunoichi managed to regain her balance mid air, and glaring at the dragon coming at her, prepared her counterattack. She dived down footfirst as she started to spin while her body was covered in a cloak of wind chakra.

"Sage Art: Takigakure Typhoon Kick!"

Fu spun with such speed, she became a living tornado. When the Wood Dragon reached her, it tried to clamp its jaws above her, but all it managed was to get itself shredded to tiny splinters. Consuming the last remnants of nature energy in her body, Fu's brutal attack plowed through the serpentine dragon until it reached Hashirama, who jumped back at the very last second. When Fu hit the ground, she opened a large crater while producing a shockwave strong enough to throw Hashirama off balance for a few seconds.

A few seconds was all Killer B needed in order to capitalize on such opportunity, and rushed towards Hashirama while dodging the still falling torii gates.

"You have something big to pay for!" Killer B said as he spun around his feet, slamming all his eight chakra tails into Hashirama, sending him flying. "This is for making me stop that rhyme before! Naruto, Fu, make him suffer some more, leave him all sore!"

Naruto and Fu nodded, and both made the same hand seal, dispelling the last clone they had gathering nature energy, reactivating their Sage Modes. Fu started to make hand seals, while Naruto, with the aid of several chakra arms, began to prepare his most powerful jutsu.

"Wind Release: Rasenshuriken!"

"Sage Art: Water Release: Majestic Malestrom!"

Naruto threw the Rasenshuriken at Hashirama, while Fu expelled a massive torrent of water in the form of a spiraling vortex. The two attacks converged into a gigantic shuriken of wind and water. As Hashirama saw the terrifying attack coming towards him, he prepared a desperate defense.

"Wood Release: Protection of the Forest!"

Multiple wooden roots emerged from Hashirama's own body, and grew and twisted around his body, forming a protective shell. However, said shell was obliterated when the double elemental shuriken touched him and exploded into a sphere of razor sharp winds and severing water blades. However, the protective roots did save him from being caught in the epicenter of the attack, and was instead violently pushed towards the ground by the ever expanding sphere of water and wind. The undead First Hokage was slammed against the ground with such force, he opened a gigantic crater upon impact, raising a wave of mud and earth everywhere, as well as sending large rocks and earth chunks into the air.

Both Naruto and Fu, and then Killer B, waited expectantly. They had noticed that the Gracious Deity Gates had stopped, but they weren't sure if that attack was enough to put Hashirama down long enough for him to be sealed. They could sense his chakra was still quite strong.

"Hey, that was quite impressive, you guys! Though, we should seal him fast, and not let him catch us by surprise," Killer B suggested.

"Agreed. He may be strong enough to resist sealing, but not to continue fighting us," Fu said.

Naruto nodded, and three jinchuriki quickly ran towards Hashirama's crater, ready to put an end to such a long and tiresome fight.

Unfortunately for them, the First Hokage still had one last card to play.

"Sage Art: Wood Release, Veritable Thousand-Armed Kan'on!"

As Naruto and Fu felt a gigantic spike of chakra, the earth started to shake as the colossal wooden figure of a Buddha, with his hands clasped in a prayer. Thousands of arms grew from statue's back in countless concentric rows, their shape resembling of the tail of a peacock. Once it raised to its full height, not only did the statue dwarf the trees around them, but it was large enough to make Tailed Beasts seem like mere housepets.

The titanic wooden construct began to move, dragging itself forward, crushing everything under its massive weight. The three jinchuriki once again stared at the titanic wooden construct with their eyes wide and mouths agape, their brains trying to process the sheer size and scale. If anything, it helped them understand to what extend Hashirama was the God of Ninjas.

"Just... what... WHAT THE HELL IS THAT!?" Naruto screamed again.

"Naruto, remember when I told you about Hashirama and Madara's last duel, and you asked me how did Hashirama defeated Madara despite the latter had me fighting for him? Well, that's how," Kurama explained, sounding infuriatingly non-chalant. "The Thousand-Armed Kan'on is Hashirama's most powerful jutsu, the ultimate combination of Wood Release and Senjutsu. The good news are that, if you're able to beat that, Hashirama won't have anything else to throw at you. The bad news, though, is that no one has been able to beat it so far."

"What the hell is with this guy? Just when you think that you have him, he reveals a new trick to screw you up," Naruto complained. Deep down, he was starting to develop some grudging respect for Madara Uchiha and his desire to fight and surpass such an inexplicably powerful individual.

"Don't tell me that you plan to give up," Kurama asked, almost in a mocking tone.

"I didn't come so far by giving up," Naruto replied. His sight rested on Fu and Killer B to his side, who looked as shocked as he, and even a little terrified. "And that thing might have never been beaten, but there's always a first time for everything."

Kurama nodded and smirked. "Well said! Come on guys, just fight a little longer, you're almost there!"

"I think I should get back to my Tailed Beast Form, our chances will be better if I transform," Killer B said.

"Don't bother. That thing is designed to fight Tailed Beasts and similar sized opponents. It will have a harder time hitting you the smaller you are," Kurama countered.

"I agree with Kurama. Let's test that thing to see how strong it is. Once we gauged its power, we will come up with a strategy," Naruto said.

"Sure thing, bro!" Killer B agreed.

"You got it!" Fu replied.

While Naruto and Killer B rushed towards the gigantic Kan'on running, Fu flew upwards towards its head. She could see that Hashirama was standing on top of it, but the First Hokage didn't make any attempt at attacking them himself. And soon, he was going to show why he didn't need to. The arms sprouting from the statue's back quickly shot forward, their hands curled into fists, ready to pummel all three jinchuriki into fine paste.

"WHOA!" Naruto shouted, as he dodged a giant wooden fist, just to almost be crushed by another one.

"This kind of attack is insane! If they hit me, I'll be nothing more than a bloody stain!" Killer B said, as he also tried to dodge as well as he could. "Hey, Number Nine, you already fought this thing before, what can we do to bring it down to the floor?"

" Didn't you hear me? This thing has never been defeated!" Kurama insisted. "The one time I fought against it, I was wearing an armor made of Madara Uchiha's Perfect Susanoo, and I'm still sore from the beating I took!"

"Then what can we do? We can't just be on the defensive forever!" Naruto replied.

"Guys!" Fu said from above, as she flew down to them, dodging the giant fists coming at her. "I've been trying to attack Hashirama directly, but those giant fists won't let me get close! Did you guys got any luck?"

"We can't attack either unless the storm of giant punches become more bearable!" Naruto replied.

"Hey, Number Nine, you already know how to do the Tailed Beast Ball! Perhaps two of them at once will be enough to make that big boy fall!" Killer B suggested.

"Not a bad idea, but I can't do any jutsu if these rain of giant punches doesn't stop anytime soon!" Naruto protested.

" Also, we're being pushed back," Gyuki interceded. "It won't be long before Hashirama corners us against a cliff or something."

" You're right, but, how are we going to stop that thing from moving?" Chomei asked.

That moment, Fu smirked. "Leave that to me."

And before anybody could say anything else, Fu rocketed forward, flying close to the ground, nimbly dodging the giant fists that crashed around her with the force of meteors.

" What is that girl planning to do?" Kurama asked . "Is she trying to stop the Kan'on on her own?"

"If I know Fu... yeah, that's exactly what she's trying to do," Naruto said in resignation.

" All she's going to accomplish is getting herself killed." Gyuki dryly said.

"Perhaps not. If she reaches the construct's base, the fists won't be able to reach such a place," Killer B said.

" Figured you'd agree with her. It takes one to know one," Gyuki said in exasperation.

However, B proved to be right. Upon closing enough distance between herself and the construct, the wooden arms were unable to reach her. The Thousand Arms were like siege weapons, designed to bring down large targets. You couldn't use a catapult or a ballista to target an opponent at blank range.

Upon finally reaching the Kan'on, Fu placed her hands on the wooden platform the Buddha wooden statue was resting upon, dug her feet on the ground, and pushed in the opposite direction.

"Come on, come oooooooooooooooooon!" Fu shouted, as she mustered every last bit of her strength. She thought that, between her natural strength being enhanced by Chomei's influence over the years, plus the additional boon provided by Sage Mode, she would be able to stop that thing from moving.

Hashirama was watching this from above, looking stunned at the girl's moxie and boldness, though even he had to agree that her plan was probably more stupid than brave.

"What did make that girl think that she can stop the Thousand Armed Kan'on on her own? While possessing a lot of might, no human being, jinchuriki or not, can stop this jutsu on their own," Hashirama said.

But much to his surprise, he realized that the speed at which the wooden construct was advancing was starting to slow down. Little by little, but it was starting to become noticeable after a few moments. Fu's feet generated several claws in order to anchor herself to the ground, while also spawning multiple arms ended in claws that also attached themselves to the ground in order to secure her position.

And finally, the Kan'on stopped moving. Hashirama looked down, speechless, his mouth agape and eyes wide open.

"That girl... how could she...?" Hashirama began.

"Three, two, one..." Fu counted.

"Just what do they feed that girl?" the First Hokage loudly asked.

"... aaaaaaand there it is," Fu said, rolling her eyes.

Meanwhile, Naruto and Killer B could only watch in surprise and awe.

"She... she did it..." Killer B said.

"Man, if Shino survives the honeymoon, he'll be my hero," Naruto added.

" What are you doing, you pair of dumbasses! Attack now before the girl gives in!" Kurama reminded the humans, snapping them of their shock.

"R-Right, Number Nine! Let's go for a combo, that should do fine!" Killer B suggested.

"Actually, I have a better idea," Naruto said, as he made a single hand seal, creating a handful of clones. "B, I have a plan not only to take down that thing, but Hashirama as well. However, I need you to do as I say."

"I'm listening, Number Nine, how are we going to combine?"

"First of all, enter your Tailed Beast form, and when I tell you, throw this clone into the air," Naruto said, as one of his clones walked close to the Kumo jinchuriki. "Make sure he has a clear shot at Hashirama."

" What are you going to do then, Naruto?" Gyuki asked.

Naruto generated several arms of chakra, and between them and his other clones, he started to prepare the biggest Rasenshuriken he had ever created. Rather than a Rasengan, the base would be a Tailed Beast Ball, and the clones would infuse it with Wind Release chakra. As the jutsu grew in size, Naruto was forced not only to enlarge the chakra arms supporting it, but create even more.

"Hey you guys, what are you doing!?" Fu distressingly called. "My arms are going to break anytime now, so you better not be wasting all this time I'm buying you!"

"Fu, when I tell you, stop pushing the statue back! And try to move to the side away from the giant fists' range" Naruto said, his jutsu almost ready. "Now!"

Fu did as she was told, and flew to the side as fast as she could. The Kan'on once again started moving at its usual speed. Several of its giant arms from its back prepared to rain pain over them again.

"Octopops, now!" Naruto called. "Get away from that thing as well!"

" There you GO!" Killer B said, as he launched the Naruto clone into the air with as much force as he could, before turning back and dragging his body away.

As he did this, dozens of giant wooden arms shot from the Kan'on's back, ready to smash Naruto to pulp. However, before the fists could connect, Naruto's jutsu suddenly vanished, and the blond jinchuriki disappeared in a cloud of smoke.

" Uh? What did Naruto do?" Killer B asked.

" Up there!" Gyuki told him.

The Kumo ninja looked upwards, and saw that the Naruto clone he had launched into the air was now holding the giant Tailed Beast Rasenshuriken with both arms. The jinchuriki of the Eight Tails quickly realized what had happened.

" Oh, I see, he used Substituion with a clone, that was pretty cool!" Killer B said in realization. "And from that angle, he has a direct hit to that fool!"

"Sage Art: Tailed Beast Rasenshuriken!"

Naruto threw the gigantic wind shuriken downwards. Hashirama tried to direct the statue's wood arms to intercept it, but most of them had been used to smash ground targets, meaning that he was now defenseless. All he could do now was jump out of the statue, or else the jutsu would obliterate him as well.

Hashirama jumped away a few seconds before Naruto's attack connected, resulting in a massive explosion of chakra and razor sharp winds that quickly shredded the statue to splinters. It also produced a shockwave so powerful, it send a gust of wind in every direction that threatened to take down nearby trees. And naturally, it threw Hashirama off balance, and the undead Hokage started to spiral down towards the ground.

Just as Naruto had been expected.

"He can't dodge now! Finish him off!" Naruto told Killer B.

"Alright, here comes quite the big blast! Time to finish this battle at last!" Killer B said, as he formed a Tailed Beast Ball as fast as he could between his jaws. He then swallowed the ball, before opening his mouth, releasing a cone of pure destructive energy. "Tailed Beast Wave!"

Hashirama could do nothing but watch how the destructive wave came close to him. Even with the extra resilience provided by Sage Mode, an attack of that power would leave him too wrecked to continue fighting, and the three jinchuriki could seal him before the Impure World Resurrection's regeneration could restore his body.

He smiled.

"To think that there are people able to beat my Thousand Armed Kan'on..." Hashirama said. "This generation of ninjas is truly outstanding..."

The wave of destructive energy engulfed him, and the fight was over.

...

Ninja Alliance HQ

Naturally, the news of the attack on the Turtle Island caused quite the commotion on the Alliance HQ. Onoki barked orders while the rest of the advisors tried to come up with ideas on how to find and secure the now vulnerable jinchuriki before the Akatsuki did.

Fortunately, none of those ideas would be needed.

"Onoki-sama, I believe we found the jinchuriki!" Ao said, as he and other sensors used the Sensing Water Sphere to scan the country. "A huge spike of chakra coming from the north!"

"Do we have any divisions there?" Onoki asked.

"The closest is the Kurotsuchi's Second Division, but they're too far away to be them! They have to be the jinchuriki!" Ao assured.

"In that case, they're our priority. Send a message to my granddaughter with the new orders. I know they just came from a battle, but their rest will have to wait! This is too important!" Onoki ordered.

"As you say, Onoki-sa... WHOA!" Ao said in shock.

"What? What's wrong, you one-eyed kid?" Onoki asked.

"Another spike of chakra. This one less than a kilometer away from the Second Division. I believe it's an enemy," Ao said, sounding now more worried and less energetic. A chill of dread ran down his spine. "The power of this new chakra... is something I never sensed before."

...

Hashirama's broken body laid on the ground. He was missing both his legs, his entire left arm, a chunk of his right arm, and the left side of his face. If his innards were nothing more than dust and ashes, Naruto would have probably thrown up. Even if the regeneration was already kicking in, he knew it would take some time before he could move again.

"Fu, seal him before he can get back," Naruto told the Taki kunoichi.

Fu nodded, and started to wrap Hashirama's body in chakra thread.

"Congratulations on defeating me, you three. No one has been ever able to beat me when I used the Thousand Armed Kan'on, but you managed to do it," Hashirama said, smiling. "You give me hope for the future."

"Thank you, Hokage-sama," Naruto sincerely replied. Killer B didn't say anything, but nodded respectfully.

"That power you three displayed... that was the power born from humans and Tailed Beasts working together... not as master and slave, but as equals... if only I had knew," Hashirama chuckled sadly. "I don't know if the Tailed Beasts inside you can hear me, but for all that it's worth... tell them that I'm sorry for what I did, and how I treated them."

The three Tailed Beasts did hear Hashirama. They didn't say if they accepted the apology, but they didn't rejected it either.

"Also, that necklace... you're one of Tsuna's sons right?" Hashirama asked. "She told me she had two sons when I was revived the first time."

"Yeah. Though I'm adopted," Naruto said, as he held the chakra jewel on his hand. "Mom gave me this when I graduated from the Academy. I had it with me ever since."

"Good. Make you live so you can pass it to your descendants, like Tsuna and I did," Hashirama replied.

"Don't worry, I will," Naruto reassured.

"Guess that's all. Make sure you end this war as soon as possible," Hashirama said. Suddenly, his peaceful expression disappeared, and was replaced by one of shock and even panic. He tried to warn the jinchuriki, but before he could Fu finished encasing him inside a tight cocoon of chakra threads, while Naruto and Killer B placed seals around it to secure it.

Before he was sealed, Hashirama had sensed a presence, not far away from there. A presence he hadn't felt in decades. An extremely powerful presence.

Hashirama realized in horror that he wasn't going to be the biggest obstacle the people of Konoha and their allies would have to face.

...

Second Division Base Camp

Kurotsuchi was relaxing inside her private tent after another hard won battle, which had ended a couple hours ago.

The battle had left the young Tsuchikage with a sense of unease for as long as it lasted. While the White Zetsu clones were numerous, and even had some aerial reinforcements, the reanimations this time around weren't that strong, which went against Intelligence predictions of Orochimaru sending increasingly powerful zombies against them.

Her instincts told her that this was a trap. Orochimaru wanted them to lower their guard so he could strike them with an unsuspecting attack, so she made sure to carefully watch over the battlefield as she took care of the winged Zetsu. The Zetsu's numbers were whittled down, the reanimations were dealt with, and when it became obvious Akatsuki had lost yet again, they cut their losses and retreated.

And the dreaded surprise attack never came.

So she did the same thing she had done in this situation and ordered a base camp to be set up. She contacted her grandfather, and requested medics to heal the wounded, as well as Hanabi Hyuga to destroy the sealed reanimations. They arrived in record time, and quickly got to work. It seemed that today wasn't going to be very eventful.

And once again, her instincts proved her wrong.

"Tsuchikage-sama!" an Iwa ninja hollered, as he basically broke into the tent.

"Whoa, calm down! Where is the fire?" Kurotsuchi asked.

"A new enemy! Please, you have to come with us!" the Iwa ninja shouted, in an almost pleading tone.

"A new enemy? How many?" Kurotsuchi said, jumping to her feet, ready to fight.

"Just one," the Iwa ninja said. Upon seeing his Kage's face of incredulity, he added. "But not just any enemy. It's no other than..."

...

From a small cliff overseeing the Second Divison Base camp, two figures stood there. One clad in the familiar Akatsuki black robe with red clouds, and the other in an extremely outdated metal armor.

"It is as you said, Zetsu," Madara said, as he saw all the ninjas gathering around the hill, ready to battle. "While they aren't exactly the same as in my time, I do recognize most of those uniforms. They belong to the Five Great Ninja villages."

"This one's being led by Iwa's current Tsuchikage," the white half began. "Onoki's granddaughter, Kurotsuchi."

"Interesting," Madara smirked. "I will take pleasure seeing how good she dances in comparison to her grandfather. Enough waiting, let's get started."

Author's Note: And thus Hashirama and Mito are finally defeated. Unfortunately, Naruto, Killer B and Fu are now too exhasuted to continue and they'll have to spend the night resting.

Something I forgot to say in the previous chapter: a lot of you have been asking me to give Naruto the Hiraishin. And I did consider it for some time before I decided against it. And these past two chapters validated my decision. Because if Naruto had the Hiraishin, I wouldn't be able to write these chapters, since the moment the island was attacked, he could just grab Killer B and Fu (hell, maybe everyone on the island) and teleport them to safety. Because, cool as I agree it is, a lot of people don't see how incredibly broken something like the Hiraishin is.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Next chapter, Madara is up and ready to wreck havoc. Be afraid. Be very afraid. In the meantime, don't forget a review with your thoughts on this battle, and perhaps what you think it's going to happen the next one, and how many people are going to die. Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Terror of Madara Uchiha

Author's Note: Well, here it is, the moment so many of you have been waiting for. Also, the longest chapter in the entire story. Enjoy the bloodbath:

Chapter 122:

The Terror of Madara Uchiha

or

Sorry, no funny alternate title this time

Second Divison Base Camp, Land of Fire

"Is that really Madara Uchiha?"

"He doesn't look like a reanimation..."

"It can't be the real Madara Uchiha! He died long time ago!"

Up on the hill, Madara smirked, amused by the effect he was having on the Allied ninjas. Even if they weren't convinced of the authenticity of his identity, the sensors had to be noticing the immense power of his chakra.

"I see some people have doubts about my identity. Reasonable, I suppose. But let me assure you that yes, I am indeed Madara Uchiha in the flesh. You may have heard that I died in the battle against Hashirama Senju, way back during the First Ninja War. News of my death were grossly exaggerated."

Of course, Madara wasn't going to reveal that he did die against Hashirama, and it was thanks to the forbidden jutsu Izanagi that he managed to cheat death.

"From what I've been told, it seems that you already met my main associate, Obito Uchiha," Madara revealed, prompting the murmurs to grow even louder. "Yes, while I'm not a founding member, you could say that I'm affiliated with the organization known as Akatsuki. Figured I'd make clear for what side I'm fighting for.

"Now, I can hear that many of you are still having doubts about the validity of those claims, especially my identity," Madara said, as he took a step forward. "Allow me then, to dispel those doubts with something only the real Madara Uchiha could provide."

Madara then jumped from the hill, landing with a loud thud, and raising a small cloud of dust. He looked at the crowd of ninjas gathered in front of him, his naturally black eyes turning red as they shifted into the Sharingan, as he flared his chakra a little so non-sensors could feel its sheer, raw power. The effect was immediate, as a wave of panic washed over the ninjas of the Second Division, making them tremble and hesitate.

Madara smirked, and took a step forward, flaring his chakra again, causing most of the ninjas on the first lines of the front to take a step back in fear. Another step, and the fear grew more. Another step-

"Stand firm!" Kurotsuchi yelled, as she hovered above her troops. "Madara or not, powerful or not, he's just one man! He can't hope to take on all of us! So I don't want to see any of you hesitate, you hear me? We fought enemies far more fearsome than this guy!"

"Yes, Tsuchikage-sama!"

"As you order, commander!"

"Yes commander! We won't let you down!"

Soon, a chorus of cheers and affirmative answers filled the air, as the fear was lifted, replaced by a wave of battle euphoria.

"A girl that flies. That must be the granddaughter of Onoki Zetsu told me about. She has more spunk than the big nosed brat, but she's just as big mouthed," Madara thought, unable to repress a smirk.

"Nice job cheering up your troops, girl. But soon, you're going to see that your earlier fear was more than justified. Time to dance!"

And with that Madara decided to stop playing intimidation games, and charged towards the Second Division.

"Everybody, charge! Crush that guy!" Kurotsuchi ordered.

Kurotsuchi's order was replied by a roar of affirmations, followed by many battle cries, and every ninja of the Second Division charged forward, ready to put down this man who claimed to be Madara. The two forces finally clashed, and the initial result were dozens of Allied ninjas being sent flying by the sheer force behind Madara's charge.

As the former Uchiha Clan Head forced his way into the middle of the bulk of the Second Division, Allied ninjas swarmed him from every direction. Unfortunately for the latter, trying to overwhelm Madara with sheer numbers was proving to be useless. The rogue Uchiha moved fast, had excellent footwork, perfect awareness of his surroundings, and his strikes were fast and deadly.

He would parry or deflect every strike aimed at him with sheer speed and precision, and counter with a single lethal blow. Whenever somebody attacked him from the flanks, he sidestepped and used the attacker's momentum against them, making them to hit an Ally ninja instead. And Madara never stayed in the same position for more than two seconds, making attacking him from behind impossible. His Sharingan gave him an accurate prediction of what his enemies would do, to the point that from his point of view, it almost felt like fighting opponents in slow motion.

He even used the enemy's numerical superiority against them. Sometimes, rather than incapacitate or kill an enemy ninja, he would grab them and use their body as a living shield, making the other Allied ninjas to stop, and Madara would capitalize on said hesitation by beating them with the body of the ninja he was holding hostage. When kunai or shuriken were thrown at him, he would expertly catch them and toss them towards other Allied ninjas. Someone even had the bright idea of tossing several kunai with explosive notes attached to them. He tossed one back at the Iwa ninja who tossed it first, and tossed the others in different directions. The action was followed by several explosions and screams of pain.

Soon Madara grew bored of fighting bare handed, and stole a katana from a Kumo ninja and grabbed a kunai a Suna ninja sent his way. Now that he was armed, he only needed one precise swing to a vital spot in order to end the life of his opponents, swings his enemies didn't even have time to block or dodge. Pools of blood starting to form across the green grass as Madara killed an Allied ninja with each passing second.

Kurotsuchi was flying above the battle, a cube of light ready to fire already in her hands.

"Come on, I only need one clear shot to end this asshole, but I can't fire without hitting my men right now," Kurotsuchi gritted her teeth as she watched Madara slaughter her troops. She always loved the sheer destructive power of the Dust Release, but now she was realizing of a really big downside.

"This is getting boring. Is there anybody among these rabble that can provide for a challenge?" Madara asked.

"Konoha Whirlwind!"

Suddenly, Madara saw a young man surrounded by a green glowing aura, dressed in a green jumpsuit, sporting a ridiculous bowl haircut - that reminded him of Hashirama in his youth- and equally ridiculous thick eyebrows, ready to deliver a roundhouse kick. Madara smirked, took a step back to dodge the kick, and lunged forward to sink his kunai into the poor sod's neck.

However, much to his surprise, the teen continued to spin, and using his building momentum, delivered a kick with his other foot, swatting the kunai out of Madara's hand. Then, after completing a 360° turn, he launched himself towards the Uchiha, and assaulted him with a barrage of punches and kicks. Even with the Sharingan, Madara was having trouble following and predicting the young man's moves, as his speed and strength was way superior to that of the enemies' he had been fighting.

"He's even averting my gaze, almost as if he had been trained to fight against somebody with a Sharingan," Madara noticed. He then saw that his green clad opponent pulled something out of his ninja tool pouch, very quick, and in a way that Madara didn't see what it was. "Huh?"

His young opponent tossed the object to the ground, raising a cloud of black smoke, which he used as a cover.

"A smoke bomb. Not bad, but-"

Madara was interrupted when he saw the cloud of smoke shifting slightly. He leaped back just in time as a barrage of shuriken and kunai emerged from within the cloud, as he swung his katana in order to parry the weapons that would hit him. His Sharingan warned him that some of the kunai and shuriken were imbued with lightning chakra, and thus he avoided those instead.

While he was busy deflecting the rain of steel -now that the cloud was beginning to dispel, Madara could see they were being fired from a sealing scroll by a girl with brown hair styled in twin buns- the same green clad kid from before was charging at him, together with man who was dressed in the same green jumpsuit and had the same ridiculous hairstyle. Still, that didn't change the fact that they were moving at such insanely high speed that his Sharingan was having trouble following them.

"Come on Lee! The two of us at once!" the green clad man said.

"I'm behind you, Gai-sensei!"

"DOUBLE MORNING PEACOCK!"

Gai and Lee launched a barrage of fast and powerful punches at Madara, their fists moving so fast, they produced fireballs of the resulting air friction. Madara wasn't even able to counterattack, just block and dodge the lethal punches at best as he could. Still, he wasn't worried or nervous in the slightest; far from it, he was smiling, satisfied by the challenge provided by his green clad opponents.

"Yes! This is more like it!" Madara said, almost laughing.

Gai and Lee finished their combo by launching a fiery punch each towards Madara, which he shielded from by crossing his arms in front of him, the resulting fiery explosion sending the Uchiha skidding backwards.

"Hehehe, not bad, but you-"

Madara was interrupted when a new opponent, an Hyuga by both his looks and his activated Byakugan, rushed towards him. Like Gai and Lee, he was also surrounded by a green glowing aura.

"Eight Trigrams: Double Exploding Palms!"

The Hyuga slammed both his glowing palms into Madara, resulting yet again in another explosion, sending the revived Uchiha even further away from the bulk of the army, this time bouncing on his back rather than skidding. Still, he was able to regain balance and land on his feet again.

"Yes! Now that he's far away from my troops, there's no risk of accidentally killing them!" Kurotsuchi cheered, as she readied her deadly attack. "Dust Release: Atomic Dismantling Jutsu!"

Madara was encased by a cube of white light, which started to glow brighter, before flashing briefly, the cube and everything inside it disappearing, Madara included, if he wasn't fast enough to dodge it before he could be vaporized.

"Shit!" Kurotsuchi cursed, as she began throwing more cubes of light at Madara, the Uchiha dodging all of them. Unfortunately, she had to stop herself from spamming the attack, or else her chakra reserves would be empty in seconds.

Upon seeing that he was relatively safe, Madara took a second to gather a little of his breath,

"It seems there are indeed some worthy ninja among you lot," Madara said, his Sharingan scanning the crowd in front of him. "I think that was enough warm up, don't you agree? Let's start taking this fight a little more seriously," Madara said, as he starting making hand seals. "Fire Release: Majestic Destroying Flame!"

Madara expelled a stream of fire, that quickly widened into a gigantic wall of flames, big enough to engulf half the Second Division, much to said ninjas shock and horror.

"Water Release users, counter that jutsu, now!" Kurotsuchi hollered.

Once again, Kurotsuchi's words snapped her troops out of their fear induced stupor, and those with water affinities quickly began to form hand seals.

"Water Release: Water Wall!"

The combination of dozens of water jutsu formed a tsunami large enough to at least negate Madara's gigantic fire attack. There was a loud hiss as water was evaporated by the flames, and battlefield was covered in a thick cloud of steam as a result. Kurotsuchi could see how Madara took advantage of it and dashed inside the cloud.

"He's trying to engage us in close combat again!" Kurotsuchi warned. "Sensory ninja, keep track of his movements! Wind Release users, dispel the steam this instant!"

Inside the cloud of steam, Madara once again began to slaughter Allied ninjas unimpeded, the lack of visibility not slowing him down in the slightest. He was about to execute a terrified Kiri ninja, when he suddenly stopped, as he was astonished by something he sensed.

"This chakra... ! How it can be...?"

"Wood Release: Deep Forest Emergence!"

The ground started to shake around Madara, and soon, the Uchiha was surrounded by multiple wooden vines. Madara managed to nimbly dodge them before they could grab a hold of him. However, his mind was focused on something else.

"No, it's not his chakra. Plus, the scale of the attack is too small to be him," Madara guessed. He tracked the source of chakra, until he finally found its origin: a girl no older than thirteen, with spiky white hair styled into two long pigtails. "I see. A descendant. She doesn't look like Hashirama in the slightest, but her chakra is too similar not to be related to him. She has potential, but she's too young and lacks the power that comes with age and experience. Perhaps I could kill her family in order to motivate her to become strong enough to beat me? She might have the potential to be an enemy as challenging as Hashi-"

"Wood Release: Wood Dragon Jutsu!"

Madara was startled upon sensing another spike of Wood Release chakra, mostly because this one came from another source other than the white haired girl. A serpentine dragon emerged from underground, and lunged at Madara. Following the dragon towards its point of origin, Madara could see that the caster was a brown haired girl, a couple years older than the white haired one, with purple marks on her cheeks, and green marks around her eyes and forehead, identical to those that appeared on Hashirama when he used Sage Mode. The girl was strangely familiar to him, but it took him very little to recognize her.

"Oh, I remember you now," Madara said, as ghostly blue ribcages formed around his body, before they generated a gigantic blue skeletal arm. The Susanoo arm grabbed the Wood Dragon by the neck, and slammed it against the ground, shattering it to pieces. "You're the broken girl Obito brought to me, hoping that I could save you before it was too late."

"So you're the one who made me like this," Rin replied, her yellow eyes narrowing in anger.

"And you're complaining? Not only you are alive, but you now possess a power most men could only dream of having!" Madara replied, as his Susanoo vanished. "You should be fighting alongside Obito's side, yet here you are, spitting on his love for you and my gift."

"Gift? Ha! Don't pretend like you did it out of the goodness of your heart. I was nothing but a test subject, right?" Rin asked. "The second cocoon... it was you inside it, am I right?"

Madara couldn't help but smirk. "Clever girl."

Before the conversation could continue, the corner of Madara's eye caught a projectile flying towards him from above. He managed to jump aside just as the projectile opened a large hole in the grassy ground. Three more projectiles followed the first one, which he also dodged, and the Uchiha could see they were perfectly round black orbs with a purple gleam.

"Truth Seeking Balls? Who is powerful enough to...?" Madara asked in shock, as he saw the orbs return to their master, and floating in the air above the bulk of the division was yet another young girl, the same age as the white haired one, covered in a cloak of magenta chakra flames. " Another flying girl. Her chakra is extremely potent. Can it be Six Paths Chakra? But how can somebody so young-" Madara stopped his train of thought, remembering one of Zetsu's reports about the current Hyuuga clan head and her sister possessing an advanced Byakugan, supposedly coming from Sage of Six Path's brother, who lived in the Moon. While finding this information pretty farfetched, the fact that it was Zetsu who said it, and the fact that Akatsuki did have a member claiming he came from the Moon with said advanced eyes, not to mention the girl that was currently facing him, Madara had to accept this reality... for now.

The Hyuga with the Tenseigan sent the four truth Seeking Balls at Madara again. Despite being the first time he saw them, Madara knew of their existence and what they could do, meaning that he had to avoid them at all costs. Fortunately, the Uchiha had the perfect strategy to counter them. Like he did before, he managed to incapacitate and grab an Allied ninja, one from Konoha, and used him as a human shield, intercepting a Truth Seeking Ball that was aimed for him. The poor Allied ninja died on the spot.

"SHIT!" Hanabi cringed, as she hastily recalled the Truth Seeking Balls.

"You have power, girl, but you won't be able to tap into your full potential as long as you care about the life of worthless maggots!" Madara spat, as he threw the corpse of the ninja the Tenseigan-wielding Hyuga had inadvertently killed. The corpse crashed against her, and was knocked out of the sky.

"Hanabi!" the white haired girl with the Wood Release cried, as she went to check on Hanabi.

"Wood Release: Wood Binding Jutsu!"

Madara sensed the girl Obito asked him to save gathering and shaping chakra for another attack, and indeed, wooden roots emerged under his feet and tried to wrap around him. But before they had the chance to, Madara reactivated the ribcage of his Susanoo, which he used as a protective shield. No matter how hard the wooden roots constricted the ghostly ribcage, it didn't crack.

"Don't bother. You might think you have a great power compared to your peers. We may have undergone the same rejuvenation process and have the same power, but compared to me, even with Sage Mode you are nothing but an insect," Madara said, as he started to make hand seals. "And now that I think about it, I haven't used any of my new powers yet. Well, let's kill two birds with one stone, and show you the difference between the level of our powers! Wood Release: Deep Forest Bloom!"

The whole battleground started to shake while multiple cracks opened around it, as many, gigantic wooden roots and trees started to emerge. As they grew and spread around the area, flowers started to bloom around them. Said flowers began pumping yellow pollen into the air. While the Allied ninjas didn't know what were its effects, they were wise enough to realize they shouldn't get near it.

"What the hell? He can use Wood Release too?" Kurotsuchi asked in shock.

"Don't breathe that pollen!" Rin warned, as she covered her mouth and nose with her hand. "Or else you'll be knocked out!"

Despite Rin's warning, though, the clouds of pollen saturated the air around the battlefield, and many ninjas inadvertently breathed it. The effect was immediate, and they fell to the ground, completely knocked out. Kurotsuchi looked at this, and gritted her teeth.

"Wind Release users, blow the pollen away!" she ordered, as she elevated higher into the air in order to avoid breathing the pollen, while making several hand seals. "Everybody else, destroy those goddamned flowers! Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

Kurotsuchi exhaled a large stream of fire towards a nearby flower, while other ninjas did the same, mostly using fire and lightning jutsu, and a Konoha kunoichi with brown hair styled in twin buns unsealed a gigantic shuriken that she used to cut the flowers down.

Madara, however, merely smirked in amusement at his enemies' attempt at destroying the flowers.

"You care about those flowers too much," Madara said, shaking his head, as he started to make hand seals. "Wood Release: Mass Wood Clone Jutsu!"

Wooden Madara clones started to emerge from the roots and trees across the battlefield. Said clones quickly jumped out of the trees once they were fully formed, and started engaging the Allied ninjas. The Wood Clones proved to be just as skilled and deadly as the original, if much more fragile. Madara watched in slight amusement and some disappointment, how the vast majority of the enemies struggled to deal with jutsu that weren't even that powerful.

"These clones only have a ten percent of my total power, yet they're giving you as much trouble as my real self," Madara said boredly, crossing his arms as he watched the carnage unfold. "How can you call yourselves-"

"Water Release: Wild Water Wave!"

"Lightning Release: Thunder Spear!"

Madara was snapped out of his arrogant monologue when he sensed two attacks aimed at him. He was soon under the shadow of a large tsunami that threatened to crush him under tons of water. Madara, however, was able to jump into the air just as the wave crashed against the ground, and landed on the surface of the mass of water. That moment, however, a spear-shaped lightning bolt hit the water, electrifying it, and zapping Madara.

"Agh!" the Uchiha grunted, though it was more due being caught by surprise, rather than the pain produced by the electric attack. He saw in front of him the white haired girl with the Wood Release, next to a white haired boy that looked identical to her, only a bit taller and with broader shoulders, as well as much shorter hair. "Oh, it's you again. And your brother, I presume?"

"We're your opponents. That's the only thing you should concern yourself with," the boy replied.

"Why? That's a boring outlook to battles. I want to know everything about my enemies," Madara said, chuckling a little, as if the whole battle was nothing but a big game to him. "Say, are you two related to Hashirama Senju?"

"Yeah, we're his great-grandkids," the girl replied. "Name's Kaida, and this is my brother Hagane. And we're going to resume the family tradition of kicking your ass so hard you won't be able to sit down without remembering us."

"So, Hashirama's Bloodline Limit finally manifested once again after neither his children nor grandchildren inherited it," Madara noted. His eyes then rested on Hagane. "Can you use Wood Release like your sister?"

Hagane scowled upon hearing such a question. "No, I don't. Not that I need it to fight you or anybody else."

"Regrettable," Madara said, shaking his head. "But even then... I can still see something special about you. Yes... it seemed that you inherited something from my rival as well. Hashirama was able to enter Sage Mode instantly and draw nature energy without having to stay still. The way I see how your chakra differs from your sister's... I see you inherited that from him, so you aren't a waste of genes like the rest of his offspring."

"So, do you plan to fight me yourselves? While I can see you have potential and power for two so young, you are no match for me, not even before gaining all this power," Madara said.

"Perhaps you would have defeated our great-grandpa if you weren't so arrogant and full of yourself," Hagane said, as he held out a fist to his sister. "Ready, Kaida?"

Kaida nodded, and bumped her fist with his. "Ready!"

Hagane started to transfer some of his senjutsu chakra to his twin sister, as the two young teens started to make one handed seals with their free hands.

"Wood Release: Kanzeon Lotus King!"

Hagane and Kaida slammed their free hands into the ground, as a giant wooden statue of a praying monk rose from the ground. There were multiple arms growing from the statue's back, and the statue had five small heads encircling its head. The twins were standing at the top of the statue's head.

"How do you like this, huh?" Kaida taunted.

Some of the many arms growing on the giant wooden monk's back shot forward, ready to smash Madara to pulp. The Uchiha, looking unimpressed and even bored, began to jump and leap from one side to another in order to avoid the wooden fists. After one fist almost graced his shoulder, the Uchiha smirked.

"Definitely not bad, for a couple of young brats, that's it," he said, as he continued dodging giant punches. "You two definitely have potential. Maybe one day you'll be able to create the real deal."

"I'll give you a real deal!" Kaida said, as she made a single hand seal. "All is Suffering!"

The small heads encircling the giant wooden monk's forehead started to glow with chakra, and each of them released a stream of one of the five elemental nature attacks. Madara merely leaped backwards, dodging the blast, but had to shield his eyes with his arm to protect them from the wind and pebbles raised by the ensuing explosion.

The giant wooden monk advanced again, the small heads glowing with chakra as they prepared to fire again.

"That attack is pretty powerful. Let's see how well it does against mine," Madara said, as he began to make hand seals. "Fire Release: Majestic Demolishing Flame!"

Madara exhaled a huge stream of fire towards the incoming quintuple elemental blast. Unlike his previous fire jutsu, instead of being spread in a cone, the flames were focused into a single, thick stream. Both attacks clashed in the middle, but Madara's jutsu proved to be the superior one, and started to push the statue's multi elemental stream towards it, much to the twin's shock.

"How is he able to overpower our jutsu!?" Hagane asked. "Is he just that strong?"

"Let's worry about that later! Now do something before he burns us alive!" Kaida asked, her voice raising an octave.

Hagane dropped to his knees and slammed his hands onto the top of the statue's head. "I'm on it!"

Hagane's body was surrounded by a glowing white aura, as he used his Bloodline Limit to empower the chakra construct even further. The wooden statue's eyes began to glow with a white light, as so did the five small heads releasing the elemental attacks. The five elemental streams became thicker and larger, and they began to push Madara's fire attack back towards him.

"Yes! Good job, bro!" Kaida cheered, pumping a fist.

While Madara was still casting his fire jutsu, he began to weave even more hand seals.

"Wood Release: Wood Binding Jutsu!"

The earth shook for a moment under the giant wooden statue, as large wooden roots burst from underground, and wrapped around it, threatening to make it tumble, and making it fall backwards, causing the five elemental attack to shoot upwards instead of towards Madara. Unimpeded, Madara's fire jutsu barreled towards the statue, setting it ablaze. Kaida and Hagane managed to jump out of the head just a second before being incinerated.

They landed on the ground, and saw the statue broke down into many pieces of burning wood. Kaida turned around, and pierced Madara with an angry glare.

"Hey, that's cheating!" Kaida protested, gritting her teeth.

The Uchiha smirked. "Cheating, she says. You're such an adorable kid," Madara said in a condescending tone, shaking his head and chuckling a little. "Do you have anything else to offer, or was that your last hidden ace? Because that last trick didn't even push me to use Susanoo."

Suddenly, both Madara and the twins sensed a surprisingly powerful chakra strike coming from behind them. Turning around, the twins saw a giant chakra construct in the shape of a horned, four armed woman stomping their way towards them. Inside the head of said chakra construct was Hanabi, with two clones at each side sitting in the lotus position, drawing nature energy and funneling it towards the chakra giantess.

"Thanks for keeping him distracted while I gathered nature energy for the Avatar of Kalika, guys!" Hanabi said from within the construct. "Everybody, stand back! I'll deal with Madara myself!"

The Senju twins nodded, and quickly leaped out of the way, leaving Madara alone against the chakra colossus. The Uchiha didn't move, he simply let his arms fall to the sides.

"So, you're able to produce cheap imitation of a Susanoo," Madara said, raising an eyebrow. "Hmmm... still, I can see that this 'Avatar of Kalika' radiates power. Perhaps you'll give me a better dance than the rest of these fools," Madara commented, as he started to make hand seals. "Let's test how resilient it is. Wood Release: Wood Dragon Jutsu!"

Another serpentine wooden dragon burst from the ground in front of Madara, and lunged towards Hanabi's chakra construct. The dragon tried to wrap itself around the Avatar's body, but the Avatar used two of its hands to grab it and keep it in place, and the other two to deliver brutal hand chops that cut the dragon in three parts.

"Well, that wasn't half bad," Madara complimented.

Hanabi didn't say anything, and had the Avatar chuck the pieces of the Wood Dragon at its creator, while making several hand seals herself.

"Fire Release: Crimson Phoenix Flare!"

Hanabi breathed a massive stream of fire that quickly took the shape of a bird. As it barreled down towards Madara, it engulfed the pieces of the wood dragon, setting them on fire. In response, Madara generated the upper half of his humanoid Susanoo. It was a creature that looked like an ogre with rock or armor-like skin. Each of its two arms split into two forearms at the elbow, and it had two faces whose chins bifurcated into two spikes. The Susanoo quickly batted away the pieces of burning wood tossed at him, and managed to weather Hanabi's fire jutsu with relative ease.

"Alright, let's see how well your 'Avatar' does against a real Susanoo," Madara boasted, as his chakra construct reached its full form and size, growing a lower body and a pair of legs, leaving Madara floating in the middle of its chest. Two glowing blue undulating blades appeared on two of its hands. "Let's dance!"

Madara's Susanoo moved forward, and began the duel with a vertical slash, and Hanabi's Avatar stopped the swipe by grabbing it by the blade with one of its hands. The blade released a wave of energy in every direction, strong enough to threaten to break Hanabi's Avatar, but it resisted. The Avatar pushed the sword away, and used the other two hands on its side to deliver a double palm strike to the Susanoo, with enough force to make it tumble backwards for a bit.

"Not bad. Let's see how well you do against this then!" Madara said, as his Susanoo delivered a cross shaped chop with both swords, generating an X-shaped energy shockwave towards Hanabi.

Hanabi made several hand seals, as her Avatar prepared to withhold the attack.

"Fire Release: Crimson Phoenix Flare!"

Hanabi once again exhaled a cone of fire, which clashed against the incoming X-shaped blast before it could take the form of a bird. Even if Madara's attack cut through hers, it did the intended job of slowing it down. The Avatar then thrust all its four palms forward in a quadruple strike, dispelling Madara's attack, and generating a shockwave that expanded in every direction.

Madara then charged forwards, ready to strike Hanabi's Avatar down with his two chakra swords. The Avatar, however, started to spin in place, generating chakra streams that spun with it as well, as well as raising a tornado around it.

"Six Paths: Heavenly Spin!"

Madara brought one of his swords down, but was deflected by the Avatar's spinning force. Even if the spinning wasn't as fast as the one done by a human being, and thus couldn't produce a spinning chakra dome, it had enough power to act as a repulsive barrier.

"Well, well, it seems that your so called Avatar is more resilient than I thought," Madara said, sounding a little annoyed.

"Still think this is just a cheap version of the Uchiha Susanoo?" Hanabi smugly asked, placing her hands on her hips.

Madara smirked, seemingly amused at Hanabi's bout of confidence. "It's certainly more powerful than I first imagined. I wasn't expecting somebody not even old enough to bear children to display such amount of power."

"Complimented by the one and only Madara Uchiha. Man, that's going to look so good on my record," Hanabi said, as her Avatar took again a battle stance. "But not as good as 'the kunoichi who defeated Madara Uchiha!'"

"Confident, are you?" Madara said, quirking an eyebrow. "While that construct of yours is a good match for my Susanoo in its humanoid stage, let's see how well you handle it in its armored form."

This gave Hanabi pause. "Armored... form?"

Madara didn't say anything, as blue armor plates began to grow around the chakra construct, covering it completely, while also increasing in size, going from being around the same size as Hanabi's Avatar, to the Avatar only reaching a little below the Susanoo's neck. Through her Tenseigan Hanabi could see the chakra forming this new Susanoo was much stronger. She visibly gulped upon realizing that she no longer had the upper hand against her opponent.

"And just like that, your confidence is all gone," Madara said in an insultingly jovial tone. "Then again, you should feel proud of yourself. The number of enemies that pushed me to use this form of my Susanoo can be counted with one hand. So, I'll make the most of this rare opportunity."

Without further ado, Madara's armored Susanoo charged forward, cracking the earth beneath its feet. A katana formed on the Susanoo's hands, and in less than a second, delivered a powerful blow at the head of Hanabi's Avatar. The Avatar managed to jump away and avoid the swing in time, but even if the initial strike missed, the sword released a wave of cutting chakra forward. Making several hand seals, Hanabi ignited the Avatar's hands on fire.

"Fire Release: Double Burning Palm Strike!"

Using its lower arms, the Avatar delivered a double palm blow at the incoming wave of chakra, shattering it into thousands of tiny dots of lights. Even if it took her some effort, the fact that she was able to nullify Madara's attack restored some of her previous confidence.

"My turn!" Hanabi said, as she made the Avatar to rush forward.
"Eight Trigrams: Several Hundred Palm Strikes!"

Once it reached close quarter combat, the Avatar assaulted Madara with an onslaught of palm strikes with all its four arms, moving so quickly, most people could only make a magenta blur. The Susanoo raised its arms in order to protect itself. Each hand struck with both power and precision, pushing the Susanoo back a little with each hit. However, despite all the strikes landing, they failed to make a dent on the Uchiha's formidable defenses.

"What the...? I'm not making any damage!?" Hanabi asked in shock and indignation.

The Susanoo managed to block one of the palm strikes, and with a mighty shoulder bash, it pushed the Avatar backwards, taking several steps back and threatening to fall on its back. Fortunately, Hanabi was able to keep it in balance.

"There's a reason as for why I call this from the Armored Susanoo, little Hyuga," Madara said with a smirk. "But a good defense isn't the only thing this form has. Now behold!"

Madara's Susanoo charged once again. It raised its arms, and a katana of chakra appeared between its hands. It brought the weapon down in a downward slash, which Hanabi's Avatar blocked between the palms of the hands of its upper arms. However, while it stopped its momentum, the blow carried so much power that the hands of the avatar were blown to bits.

"WHOA!" Hanabi cried in shock, sensing part of her Avatar disappear. She hastily focused her chakra into the hands in order to regenerate them.

However, Madara wasn't going to give her any time to catch her breath. The Susanoo continued its assaults, with both brutal sword slashes and devastating stark punches. Hanabi tried to block every hit, but each strike chipped away parts of Hanabi's Avatar, while pushing it backwards, leaving her almost no room to counterattack.

"While you're still weak, I can see you have potential as well. Perhaps once you reach maturity, you might provide a decent challenge," Madara judged, as he made a single hand seal. The Susanoo held his free hand, and a trio of magatama-shaped chakra projectiles, spinning around an invisible axis. "But for now, I'm done with you. Yasaka Magatama!"

The Susanoo threw the magatamas at Hanabi's Avatar. She could see the sheer amount of power the attack carried, and thus she tried one last desperate move.

"Heavenly Spin!"

Broken as it was, the Avatar of Kalika began to spin in place, as protective chakra streams began to spin around it as well. It managed to gain enough speed for when Madara's projectiles impacted, resulting in a trio of explosions. Unfortunately, the Avatar's defense wasn't enough, and the explosions obliterated what was left of the Avatar. The explosions also hurled Hanabi towards the ground, landing with a loud thud. The chakra cloak around her dissipated, revealing her true appearance.

Inside his Susanoo, Madara crossed his arms and smiled, satisfied with his work.

"The power of the current generation of ninjas might be a little disappointing, but the power of the current generation of little girls is truly something," Madara commented. The former Uchiha patriarch then noticed two powerful chakra signatures closing in. "Oh? A new challenger-"

"Amaterasu!"

Suddenly, Madara's Susanoo burst into black flames from head to toe. The black fire began to quickly devour the chakra construct at an alarming rate. Madara tried to push more chakra into the Susanoo in order to repair it and put out the fire, but no matter what he did, the fire simply didn't disappear, nor slowed down in the slightest.

"What kind of fire jutsu is this...?" Madara wondered aloud as he abandoned the Susanoo, which quickly collapsed into nothingness, before the black flames could consume him.

That moment, two individuals, men wearing high collared clothes typical of the Uchiha, both young but older than the little girls he had been fighting against, landed in front of him. And indeed, the Sharingan blazing in their eyes confirmed their identities.

"In that case, you might be interested in seeing..." the older one began.

"... the power of the current generation of Uchiha," the younger one finished.

Madara eyed the two newcomers, as if sizing them up. He could sense the power of their chakra was nothing to scoff at. He didn't need to look at their eyes to know that these two had the Mangekyo Sharingan, given that the only kind of Uchiha chakra that felt like these two's was the one of his sadly late brother, Izuna.

"Well, well," Madara said, smiling again. "Look at that. At first glance, you two both look and feel powerful. Old enough to have some combat experience, but still in your prime. It seems that the gods above were generous enough to bless me with an actual challenge. What are your names? We're family, after all."

"If you really want to know, my name's Itachi, and that's my little brother, Sasuke," Itachi said.

"Sasuke," Madara repeated, grimacing as if he ate something sour. "Like the Sarutobi Clan head? Whose elder son was Hashirama and Tobirama's protégé. Such an unbecoming name of an Uchiha."

"You don't like my name? Too bad," Sasuke replied, scowling a little. "Because it's the name of the ninja that will send you where you belong: two meters underground."

"Speaking of which, how can you be alive?" Itachi asked. "We already know thanks to Rin Nohara how you returned to your prime and gained Wood Release, but that doesn't explain how you survived your final fight against Hashirama Senju. He brought your body to the village, where it was confirmed as dead, and that it was indeed you. Tobirama spent the next few months performing an extensive autopsy on your body, before finally giving you a burial on an unknown location. There's no way you could have feigned death for such a long time."

"Ah, yes, that's quite the mystery, isn't it?" Madara asked, as if the question amused him. "The answer is way simpler than you think, my esteemed clansman. You sure look like somebody familiar with the forbidden jutsu Izanagi."

"Izanagi?" Itachi repeated.

"Like... the jutsu Danzo used to avoid death?" Sasuke asked, as he recalled Shisui and Shizune's recount of the battle. "How? While Izanagi can undo death, it only works in a very short timeframe!"

Madara smirked. "Why? Who decided that? Izanagi is a jutsu that allows to rewrite reality on a personal level. You can rewrite your death immediately if you wish so, but you can also delay it so your death is undone at any amount of time afterwards. Had Tobirama destroyed my corpse, it would have been my end, but I knew that, even when he was done with it, he wouldn't want to cast it away and would keep it in a proper condition."

"So once we kill you, we'll make sure to burn your body so not even ashes remain," Sasuke stated. "Thanks for sharing such knowledge with us."

"You presume that you can kill me," Madara said with a chuckle. He then slipped into a fighting stance. "Anyway, enough chitchat! It's been very long since I danced with a fellow Uchiha! Show me the power of your generation!" Madara's hand flew through hand seals. "Wood Release: Deep Forest Emergence!"

The earth around the Uchiha brothers was split as big, thick wooden roots emerged from underground, and spread towards the two Konoha ninjas. Sasuke and Itachi were quick to answer, their hands also weaving hand seals as fast as they could.

"Fire Release: Great Fireball Jutsu!"

"Fire Release: Phoenix Sage Fire Jutsu!"

Sasuke breathed a massive fireball towards the incoming mass of roots, while Itachi exhaled a volley of smaller fireballs for support. The two combined fire jutsu set the growing roots ablaze, successfully stopping Madara's attack.

Then, a katana blade burst from Itachi's chest. The older Uchiha brother coughed a streak of blood.

"ITACHI!" Sasuke screamed, upon noticing Madara impaling Itachi from behind.

"You might be an Uchiha, but your Sharingan must be a poor one if you didn't see me sneak from behind you," Madara taunted, as he twisted the blade inside Itachi. "Perhaps you aren't the worthy opponent I pegged you as."

Then, much to Madara's surprise, Itachi turned his head back at him, and smiled. "Then what comes next may change your opinion on me."

And "Itachi" burst into a murder of cawing crows, which started to fly around the former Uchiha Clan head, molting black wings as they cawed loudly, while pecking Madara with their black beaks.

The former Uchiha Clan head snarled. "Using a genjutsu against me. You have some nerve, brat," Madara said, as he used his own Sharingan to break the genjutsu.

The world around Madara flickered for a fraction of a second before it returned to normal, just in time to catch Sasuke about to strike him with his lightning-enhanced katana. Madara jumped back to avoid it, but then Sasuke delivered an horizontal swing with his other hand, holding a shoto whose blade was coated in flames, which Madara also dodged. Still, Sasuke was undeterred, and continued his assault, delivering quick swings from multiple angles and directions, though Madara managed to either dodge them, or block them by parrying Sasuke's wrists.

"One can put me in a genjutsu, and the other is able to manipulate two elements at once. Yes, you two have talent. Of course, I shouldn't expect any less from my fellow clansmen, should I?" Madara said with a grin, as he started to make hand seals. "I don't know about you, but I think I'm done with warm ups. Let's get to the good parts, shall we? Wood Release: Deep Forest Emergence!"

More large wooden roots emerged from under Sasuke and Itachi's feet, quickly wrapping around them and hoisting them into the air. Madara then manifested his Susanoo in its humanoid form, and generating a sword on each on its arms, brought them down in order to obliterate the Uchiha brothers. However, the brothers manifested their own Susanoo as well, breaking free of their wooden bindings, and jumping away just in time to avoid Madara's strike.

Sasuke and Itachi's Susanoo continued to develop until they reached their humanoid forms. Sasuke's Susanoo pulled the string of its shielded bow, generating a purple chakra arrow, while magatama beads-like projectiles appeared on Itachi's Susanoo's hands.

"Susanoo: Arrow Strike!"

"Yasaka Magatama!"

Purple chakra arrows and red chakra projectiles flew in combination towards Madara's Susanoo, who tried to deflect them with both its swords, but was unable to block all of them, and many found their marks, resulting in several explosions that chipped away a few chunks of Madara's Susanoo.

"Yes! Yes! This is what I was talking about!" Madara said, growing more excited by the second. "Show me what you're capable of!"

Madara's Susanoo progressed to the Armored form, and charged towards the Uchiha brothers, the ground beneath its feet breaking with each step. Sasuke and Itachi continued firing projectiles at it, with Madara blocking some and tanking others, but the Armored Susanoo didn't break as easily as the humanoid one. Before he could reach close quarter combat, the blue Susanoo leaped above them. Sasuke and Itachi started to weave hand seals.

"Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire Jutsu!"

Both Sasuke and Itachi fired a flurry of dragon-shaped fireballs at the incoming Susanoo, half of them missing and flying into the sky, the other half crashing into it, but not making any effect. Madara's Susanoo landed in the middle of the other two chakra constructs with a loud crash, blasting them to the sides with the sheer force of its impact, almost falling on their backs due losing their balance.

Setting his eyes on Sasuke, Madara made his Susanoo move towards the younger brother, and struck the purple chakra construct with a large katana. Sasuke's Susanoo raised his shielded bow in order to parry the blow. While it resisted the attack, the shield cracked a little, much to the young Uchiha's worry. He generated a katana on the Susanoo's free hand and used it to stab Madara, but the blue Susanoo easily deflected the blow to the side, before taking Sasuke's Susanoo down with a powerful shoulder bash.

Before Madara could continue his assault, several explosions on his Susanoo's back nearly made it fall on its face. Turning around, he saw Itachi's own red warrior charging at him, wielding a sword made of golden flames. Madara parried Itachi's swing, managing to stand his ground, before shoving the older brother with a powerful kick.

"Come on, you started so well! Is this the extent of your full power?" Madara asked, a little disappointed.

He sensed a spike of chakra coming from behind him, and his Susanoo jumped aside just in time to dodge an arrow from Sasuke's Susanoo, this time coated in the black flames of Amaterasu. Sasuke fired more arrows, this time at Madara's Susanoo's leg, forcing it to jump. While in the air, Sasuke kept firing amaterasu-coated arrows, most of them missing and getting lost into the sky, but a couple of them managed to find their mark. Pushing chakra into his left eye, Sasuke had the black flames spread all around Madara's Susanoo. Still, his enemy refused to abandon the chakra construct.

"Either you get out of your Susanoo, or the black flames shall consume you, leaving nothing but ashes," Sasuke prodded.

Madara merely smirked in return. "That's what you want, don't you? To force me out of my Susanoo and into the open. But this Susanoo form has a couple surprises."

Madara made a hand seal, and the armor covering his Susanoo, some of which was burning the fires of Amaterasu detached from the main body, falling to the ground. Another coat of chakra plates instantly formed around it.

"Your little trick with the black flames won't work a second time," Madara replied.

"Don't worry, I have more little tricks," Sasuke said, as a thunderclap was heard in the distance. "Your Susanoo won't be able to survive them."

"You youths are so overconfident," Madara said, sounding between amusing and insulted. "Very well then. This isn't something I use against any enemy, but given your skill, the blood ties that bind us, and the excessive confidence you exude, I'm going to include you among the exclusive list of foes I have used this against!"

Madara's armored Susanoo grew in size once again, reaching one hundred meters in size, becoming twice as big as Sasuke and Itachi's, its armor taking the form of those worn by samurai. Its head was completely covered by a long-nosed mask that resembled a Tengu. A pair of large wings ended in hands grew from its back, the hands holding a pair of sheaths that held two katanas made of the same chakra as the Susanoo.

"Behold the magnificence of the Perfect Susanoo, and despair!" Madara boasted, spreading his arms in a dramatic fashion. "Only Hashirama was able to defeat this Susanoo! What do you plan to do against this, young Sasuke? Do you think you have a way to fight against me as I'm now?"

Sasuke looked up at the immense chakra construct, but much to Madara's surprise, didn't look intimidated or afraid in the slightest.

"That's quite the big Susanoo. Even bigger than father's," Sasuke mentioned, as the sword of his Susanoo was coated in black flames, while the other hand was coated in lightning. More thunderclaps could be heard from above. "But it will go down the same way. Itachi, you ready?"

From behind Madara, Itachi's Susanoo readied its Sword of Totsuka, but made no attempt to attack.

"As ready as I'll ever be, brother," Itachi said. "We must not fail."

"We won't!" Sasuke said, as he dashed towards the blue Susanoo, flaming black sword in one hand, lightning chakra in the other. He leaped at Madara.

Madara snarled in disgust. "Charging at me so recklessly with an inferior Susanoo," Madara said, as his own Susanoo unsheathed one of its katanas. "You will pay your foolishness with your life!"

"Infernal Release: Susanoo, Kirin Blazing Lightning Blade!"

As Madara's Susanoo delivered a swing at Sasuke's, a lightning bolt fell from the sky and struck the sword of Sasuke's Susanoo, supercharging it with electricity, as he brought it down. His lightning and amaterasu-enhanced sword cut through Madara's as if it was made of butter, before it struck the chest of Madara's Susanoo. All the energy stored in the blade was released at once resulting in an explosion of white light and black flames.

While the backlash of the explosion destroyed Sasuke's Susanoo, sending the younger Uchiha spiraling down to the ground below, Madara's Susanoo had taken the brunt of the blast, and was vaporized almost instantly. Madara himself survived the explosion, since his Susanoo absorbed most of the blast, but he was sent flying backwards, in Itachi's direction. Seeing his chance, Itachi moved towards Madara, and swung the Sword of Totsuka at him.

The sword impaled Madara, the blade piercing his chest and coming out of his back.

"YES!" Sasuke cried, excited to see that the plan they used to disable Fugaku had worked a second time. All Itachi needed to do was seal Madara, and the battle would be over.

Which made Sasuke wonder why Itachi wasn't sealing Madara. Looking at his elder brother, Itachi looked like somebody who was struggling to do something. A cold chill ran through Sasuke's spine.

"Itachi!" Sasuke called. "Seal him already! What are you waiting for?"

"I'm trying to! But I can't seal him for some reason!" Itachi said.

"What do you mean you can't seal him!?" Sasuke replied, as his fears started to become reality. "I thought that once you hit an enemy with that sword, it was over!"

Then, Madara wrapped his fingers around the sword of golden flames, and much to Itachi's shock, he began to absorb it into his body. And when he was done absorbing the sword, the rest of his Susanoo followed, pulling it away from Itachi. Madara crouch-landed on his feet, his face looking downwards, partially obscure by his wild long hair.

"Well, that was a close one," Madara said as he slowly rose up. "You two have both power and work really well together. You remind me of the days when my brother Izuna and I used to fight each other. However, what you have it's not enough to beat me."

Madara rose his head, his face being visible, and much to Itachi and Sasuke's shock, his eyes were no longer the red and black colors of the Eternal Mangekyo Sharingan, but purple concentric rings.

"Rinnegan!? How...?" Itachi asked, when a memory dawned upon him. "Of course. Any Uchiha sufficiently powerful can awaken the Rinnegan by combining their Yin half of the Six Half Chakra with the Yang half the Senju and Uzumaki possess."

"I see you did your homework," Madara said, smiling contently. "If you know the Rinnegan, I guess you must have met Nagato, am I right?"

"How do you know about Nagato?" Sasuke asked.

Madara chuckled. "Who do you think Nagato's Rinnegan used to belong to?"

"Wait... Nagato's Rinnegan wasn't his? It was yours? But... how!?" Sasuke asked again. There were far too many questions inside his head.

Something that Madara apparently noticed.

"It's a long story, but guess I can summarize it. Let's say that, after my fight with Hashirama, I managed to bite off a piece of his flesh in order to obtain his essence. I cultivated more of his cells and implanted them into my body. In time, I managed to gain Wood Release, but the Rinnegan didn't manifest until many decades later. I was a withered old man, and while I could experiment a little with my new powers, I knew letting the world know about my survival in such state was suicide.

"Among my new powers, I was able to summon the Demonic Statue of the Outer Path, and using its power, I managed to create an artificial creature from Hashirama's cells that I called Zetsu. I also devised a way that, even if it could take time, it would bring me back to my physical prime and merge my power with Hashirama's in a more efficient way.

"I knew I could use Zetsu and his clones to act on my behalf, but wouldn't be able to carry my plans on their own. I needed somebody to carry out my plans to bring the Ten Tails back to life while I underwent the rejuvenation process. I had my Zetsu scout for potential candidates to bear my Rinnegan, and Nagato was the most promising.

"That's why, shortly before I met Obito, I had my Rinnegan extracted and transplanted into Nagato by Zetsu. Obito found Nagato and convinced him to carry out my plan. I was expecting that by the time of my rebirth, they should be close to finishing, but alas, his progress wasn't as good as I was hoping.

"But let's not dwell in negativity, shall we?" Madara said, as he raised both his hands towards Sasuke and Itachi. "Let's have some fun first with the powers I was never able to test in an actual battle. Bansho Ten'in!"

Both Itachi and Sasuke were pulled by an incredibly powerful invisible force towards Madara. Itachi, however, quickly generated his Susanoo, using one arm to catch Sasuke, and the other to anchor himself to the ground. Sasuke also generated the ribcage and one arm of his Susanoo in order to punch Madara, but the Uchiha elder simply jumped back in order to avoid the attack.

"Not bad. Let's see what else I can do," Madara said, as two pairs of arms burst from his sides.

The four additional arms then opened up and reassembled into weapons, as if they were machines. Madara then fired a barrage of missiles and chakra beams at the Uchiha brothers, who were forced to split apart and run away in order to avoid the attack, even if barely.

"Itachi! He's pushing us into the defensive!" Sasuke warned his brother. "We need to counterattack, now!"

"Agreed. Fighting from afar isn't an option if he can absorb our ninjutsu," Itachi said. "Let's attack from a different flank each!"

Gripping their katanas, the Uchiha brothers dashed towards Madara, who continued to bombard them with missiles, chakra beams and streams of flames, which they deflected with their Susanoo. As they got closer and prepared to strike, Madara's additional arms disappeared as he held his two arms towards the incoming brothers.

"Shinra Tensei!"

The air shimmered for a second, followed by an explosion of kinetic energy, that ripped part of the ground and send Sasuke and Itachi flying backwards, their weapons blown away from their hands, before painfully landing with a thud back on the ground.

"He was already a monster before, and now with that Rinnegan... how are we going to beat him?" Itachi asked, sounding desperate.

"Come on Itachi, I know you have a hidden ace in the hole prepared for a situation like this!" Sasuke said, sounding also a little desperate. "Some kind of secret ninjutsu or forbidden jutsu, like a genjutsu that traps him inside an infinite loop or something similar?"

"Sasuke, this isn't the time nor the place to suggest such nonsense," Itachi said, as he got back to his feet as well as he could. "And I'm afraid I have nothing that may turn the tide of the battle in our favor. The Rinnegan is the most powerful doujutsu for a reason, and one of the most powerful ninjas who ever lived is using it against us."

Madara didn't give them any time to recover or plan a new strategy, as he held his hands towards them once again.

"Bansho Ten'in!"

Just as they got back to their feet, Sasuke and Itachi were once again violently pulled towards Madara by an unseen force. The Uchiha brothers were too disoriented to properly manifest their Susanoo in order to counter Madara's jutsu like they did it the first time, while Madara himself generated his Susanoo once again up to the humanoid form, a blade of chakra on each hand, ready to kill his kin with a single strike.

"It pains me having to kill such talented clansmen like yourselves. Too bad you choose the wrong side of this conflict. Now-"

"Wood Release: Wood Binding jutsu!"

That moment, wooden roots emerged under Madara's Susanoo, wrapping around its body and arms, leaving it completely immobilized, stopping him from delivering the finish blow to Sasuke and Itachi, who were also caught by a pair of smaller roots. Madara turned around, and saw Rin Nohara, piercing him with a yellow glare, her hands locked into a hand seal.

"Earth Release: Crushing Avalanche!"

Several gigantic rocks appeared around Madara's Susanoo, burying it completely. Unfortunately, both the rocks and the roots were blown away when Madara's Susanoo advanced to the Armored form.

"The test subject. I had forgotten about you," Madara said, looking annoyed of being cheated of his execution. His lips curved into a smile as an idea dawned upon him. His Susanoo started to vanish. "Then again, given that you're here, and you're still in Sage Mode, let me try something. Bansho Ten'in!"

Madara raised a hand at Rin, and the brown haired medic yelped as she was pulled towards the evil Uchiha, his fingers wrapping around her neck once she was close enough to him, and before Rin could fight back, he violently slammed her body against the ground, with such force it opened a small crater.

"Senjutsu is something that takes a lot of time and effort to master, but according to Zetsu, it's almost like a second nature to you, isn't it? Can you imagine what's the reason?" Madara asked. "Gakido!"

Madara started to absorb Rin's chakra, saturated with nature energy. Rin's yellow eyes began to revert back to their natural brown, and her green facial marks started to vanish little by little, as they began to appear on Madara's face. As his sensing ability heightened, he could sense Sasuke and Itachi dashing towards him, in a desperate attempt to either save the girl or prevent Madara from growing even more powerful. Probably both. Not that it mattered, as Madara casually manifested his Susanoo once again, and with a swipe of its arm, he swatted the Uchiha brothers away as if they were mere insects.

Once he drained all the senjutsu chakra of Rin, he released her. The girl didn't made any attempt to run away from him, or even get back to her feet. It appeared that having so much chakra drained left her in a dazed state. Oh well, she'd recover soon thanks to her regeneration.

"Yes, I can feel it now. Normally, one would need to stay still for some time in order to gather nature energy. But Hashirama was able to do so instantly and when he moved. Wood Release was far from his only unique ability," Madara said, as his eyes drifted towards a certain chakra signature, one belonged to Hagane. Looking into such direction, Madara saw the white haired Senju treating the Hyuga with the Tenseigan, while his sister helped other ninjas to fight some of the remaining Wood Clones. He heard a pained grunt coming from below, and looking down, saw the barely conscious Rin stirring. "I have no more reason to keep you alive. But then again, Obito would be very... disappointed in me if he heard that I let you die," Madara said, shaking his head. "Plus it would be a waste after all the resources I poured to repair your broken body."

Madara moved from the spot Rin was lying on, and gave a look at the battlefield. He had sensed that more than half of his clones had been destroyed already, and the rest would soon follow. Then again, Madara could sense that no present ninja was a match to his current self right now. He considered to have the Wood Clones use Susanoo to finish things off quickly, but discarded the idea. He had a better way to end this battle.

"Oh, Hashirama, if you only were here... if you could witness the current height of my power... no matter how strong I became, I'm sure you'd manage to give me a challenging fight, unlike the rabble before me. Then again, even if I can't get more good fights from these people..." Madara then raised his hand to the sky. "... I can still use them to test the limits of my new power. CHIBAKU TENSEI!"

A marble sized, black colored gravity core appeared on Madara's hand, before it shot into the sky. Once it reached enough altitude, it grew in size, before splitting into six identical gravity cores, and shot into different directions, positioning on different parts of the battleground.

Then, the cores became active, and started to pull matter towards them. And that moment is where the horror truly began.

...

As the fight against the real Madara happened, Team Gai was facing several of the many Wood Clones Madara had created. After scanning them with his Byakugan, Neji claimed that they only possessed a small fraction of the original's power. Still, a small fraction of Madara's power wasn't something to take lightly, given that said clones had been able to defeat and even kill veteran Jonin.

Lee was engaging a clone in a duel of punches and kicks. Madara was fast, but between Lee's insane speed without his weights and the boost provided by three of the Celestial Gates opened, it was the green clad teen who was marking the pace of the fight. During one of their exchanges, Lee managed to wrap his arms around Madara's extended arm as he aimed for a punch.

"Neji, get ready!" Lee said, as he started to spin in place, with such speed, a small tornado formed around him. When he had built enough momentum, he tossed the clone in the Hyuga's general direction.

"Heavenly Spin!" Neji turned into a spinning dome of chakra, just a second before the Madara clone was slammed against him. The combination of the powerful rotation and the force Lee had used to throw the clone was too much, and it burst into thousands of wooden splinters.

And not far from there, Gai and Tenten were also fighting another Wood Clone. Said clone had the same troubles keeping up with Gai as the other one with Lee, especially since, unlike Lee who fought bare handed, Gai had pulled out his trusted nunchakus for added power. Gai channeled chakra through his weapons, increasing their range and power, and producing powerful blasts of wind even if they missed their mark.

"Ha! After fighting the original, these clones are nothing but a joke!" Gai boasted, as he dodged a roundhouse kick from said clone. Taking advantage of the clone's brief but crucial lack of guard, Gai kicked him hard on the chest, sending him flying backwards. "Up you, Tenten!"

"You got it!" Tenten said, as she unsealed a pair of bladed tonfas from a sealing scroll. Her tonfas started to crackle as she channeled lightning chakra through them, and delivering a few precise slashes, Madara's wooden clone was reduced to shreds.

Their fights done, Team Gai gathered together in order to quickly plan their next move.

"Alright, two clones less. There can't be that many of them left," Lee excitedly said. "Once we're done with them, we shall help the others deal with the real Madara!"

"Indeed, these clones are providing a good warm-up for the real deal," Gai agreed. "Now let's-"

Suddenly, the earth started to violently shake, making them to lose their balance and almost fall. Rocks and pebbles that had formed as collateral damage from the fights happening around the place started to float and fly into the air, quickly followed by small chunks of earth being teared from the ground.

"What the hell!?" Tenten asked, as she tried to keep her balance. "Neji?"

The Hyuga prodigy activated his Byakugan in order to find the source of the quakes, and took no time to find it. A couple hundred meters into the air above them were six incredibly dense spots of chakra, pulling dirt, pebbles, rock, earth and even leaves and branches towards it, quickly growing in size, and taking the form of small planetoids. Of course, all the ninjas without a doujutsu were able to see them once they reached enough size.

"This..." Neji began, sounding alarmed. "I only saw this once before..."

"We all did..." Tenten said, looking up in horror. "This is the same jutsu that Pain guy tried to use to destroy the village, isn't it?"

"Except there are six of those giant rocks instead of just one..." Lee said, his excitement quickly vanishing, replaced with fear. "And we don't have Naruto-kun nor Tsunade-sama or Jiraiya-sama to stop them to begin with."

Gai looked at the forming planetoids, as he tried his best to come up with a solution. But no matter how much he racked his brain, nothing came up. The one time he saw such jutsu in action, it was thankfully stopped before it could have been used to flatten the village. He wasn't there the one time Nagato, now an undead reanimation, got to use it against the First Division, but he heard of how much death it resulted in.

And now, there were six of these things to deal with. There was no other option,

"I doubt they could stop all of them even if they were here," Gai somberly said. "There's only one thing to do. Everybody, run! Run as far away as possible, as fast as you can! Our only chance to survive this attack is to stay as far away as we can from when they hit the ground!"

Everybody who heard Gai seemed to agree with him, and started to run away while telling the others to do so as well. Soon, every member of the Second Division was running away in pretty much every direction.

...

Madara watched in amusement as his enemies tried to outrun his attack, the mere sight of his sheer power sending them into a collective panic. Of course, it would be useless, since Madara had placed the gravity cores in order to cover as much area as possible when they impacted: five of them circumventing the bulk of the division, and the sixth one in the middle. Perhaps a few of them would escape the carnage that was about to unfold, but the rest of them would perish.

Once the planetoids reached the appropriate size, Madara motioned his hand down, letting natural gravity to the rest of the work.

...

Panic increased tenfold once they saw the planetoids coming down. But no matter how much they run, they wouldn't be fast enough to avoid the crash's area of effect. Naturally, those trapped in the middle had it the worst, since even if they could avoid the central meteor, they would still run into one of the peripheral ones.

However, one kunoichi, Kurotsuchi, noticed this, and tried to mitigate the effects of the catastrophic jutsu. Even if she had the best chances to avoid the attack thanks to her flight, she would never forgive herself to do such a cowardly thing and left her men to their fates. While everybody else ran away, Kurotsuchi placed herself floating just below the central meteor.

"I might not be able to stop this monstrous jutsu completely, but I'll be damned if I don't try to minimize the damage!" Kurotsuchi said, as she started to make hand seals. "If I can destroy this meteor, I know I'll save the lives of hundreds of ninjas!"

After finishing the sealing sequence, she clapped her hands together, creating a square of white light between them. Normally, she'd just encase the target inside the square and then execute the jutsu, but in this situation, the target was way too big. Fortunately, that was only one of the many ways Dust Release could be used, albeit that one was the most chakra efficient one.

"I don't know if I have enough chakra for this jutsu, but at least I have to try," Kurotsuchi said, as the square of light between her hands was compressed into a ball of white light. "Dust Release: Obliterating Lightwave!"

The white orb between her hands exploded into a torrent of light, expanding upwards in the form of a cone. The cone managed to break through the falling meteor, growing in size and width as the young Tsuchikage poured more and more chakra, until the cone engulfed the meteor almost entirely. There was then a flash of white light, and the meteor was almost completely gone, with only a few small chunks of rock that the jutsu had failed to cover, but their size made them harmless.

Due to all the chakra she had used for her jutsu, Kurotsuchi felt her head becoming light as a wave of numbness washed over her body. She was unable to sustain her Light Boulder Jutsu, and fell to the ground below.

"Tsuchikage-sama!" an Iwa ninja cried.

"Quickly, somebody catch her!" another one pleaded.

...

Kurotsuchi wasn't the only one to try to stop one of the meteors, as another pair of ninja knew they had to soften the blow of Madara's attack at any cost.

"Come on Sasuke, the two of us at once!" Itachi said, as he and his younger brother glared at the meteor closest to them.

"AMATERASU!"

A mass of black flames burst from the meteor's bottom part, and started to spread around it, as it slowly began to eat the rock and ground forming it. However, with the speed the planetoid was coming down, and slowly the black fire was spreading, they doubted they would be able to consume it completely.

"Dammit, that thing is too big!" Sasuke said, as he focused as much chakra as he could on his left eye. "Not even the two of us... !"

"Keep the jutsu up, Sasuke! We can't stop it right now!" Itachi insisted.

"Hey, maybe I can lend you a hand!" a new voice said. The brothers couldn't turn around to see the newcomer, but they recognize the voice as that of Hagane Senju. The white haired boy placed his hands on each of the Uchiha's shoulders. He started to glow with a white aura, which quickly spread to the brothers as he placed a hand on their respective shoulders. "Have some senjutsu boost!"

The effect was instant, and the black flames trying to eat the falling meteor roared as they burst into a black inferno, so hot and fiery that the air around it began to look distorted. The reinvigorated black flames began to quickly cover and devour the meteor, reducing it in size as it was consumed into nothingness.

"Sasuke, dispel the black fire now before somebody gets hurt by it! What's left of the meteor isn't a threat anymore!" Itachi commanded.

"Got it!"

As quickly as it appeared, the black flames were snuffed out at the brothers' command, leaving only a very small chunk of the original meteorite.

...

Despite Kurotsuchi, Itachi and Sasuke's valiant efforts, four of the initial six meteors managed to crash into the ground. While no ninja was directly crushed under the gigantic pile of rocks, many of them were fell prey to the ensuing shockwaves, which teared the very earth apart, producing a violent quake that sent large chunk of rocks into the air, as well as toppling many trees down.

Needless to say, countless ninjas fell victim to such attack apart that teared the very foundations of the earth apart.

Not even moving from his spot, Madara was contemplating the results of his devastating jutsu, his arms crossed, and a neutral expression on his face. Then, behind him, Zetsu emerged once again.

"An outstanding jutsu, boss," the white half praised. "You were already able to decimate armies single handedly before your rejuvenation, but you managed to take it to a whole new level."

"That Nagato brat wasn't able to form more than one meteor at once," the black half added. "Yes, with you, catching the jinchuriki is going to be piece of cake."

Madara, however, appeared that he wasn't listening to his minion. His Rinnegan eyes narrowed at the sight in front of him, as he caught multiple figures still moving around. His lips curved into a slight grimace.

"It seems that this jutsu isn't as outstanding as you had dubbed it, Zetsu, given that there are still quite a few survivors out there," Madara noticed. "Probably because they destroyed two of the meteors. Now, what would be the best way to deal with the survivors...? Oh I know! I can't believe I didn't try this before!" Madara said, as he bit his finger, and made five hand seals. "Summoning jutsu!"

...

Land of fire, Northeast of Madara's battlefield

"ARGH!" Naruto screamed, as he doubled over. He was rushing forward alongside Killer B and Fu when he was assaulted by an unspeakable pain.

"Naruto!" Killer B said, concerned. He quickly appeared besides the blond, placing a hand on his back. "Naruto, what's wrong? What's causing pain in somebody so strong?"

"Kurama... it feels..." Naruto said in a whisper. "It felt as if some force was trying to rip him away from me. Thankfully the seal kept him in place."

" This chakra... " Kurama said with an angry grow. "No! It can't be! He's dead! He should be dead!"

" Kurama? What's wrong? Who are you talking about? Who should be dead? " Chomei asked.

Kurama uttered two words: "Madara Uchiha."

...

Back to the battlefield

Madara couldn't hide his disappointment when nothing came out of the burst of smoke produced by his jutsu. He was really seeking to unleash the Nine Tails on those fools, now that Hashirama wasn't there to spoil his fun.

"The summoning failed. I should have expected it, given that the beast is sealed inside a jinchuriki. Still, it was worth a try," Madara said, before his eyes looked at the horribly wounded survivors scattered around the battlefield. "Oh well, if I can't use the Nine Tails, guess a second round of meteors will have to do."

And with a sadistic chuckle, Madara raised his hand to the skies once again.

...

Carnage.

That was the only word that could describe what had befallen to the Second Division. Corpses of fallen ninja were scattered around the area, though some might be just unconscious and not really dead. The many rocks and fallen trees were splattered with blood. The few survivors called the names of their friends, hoping to find them alive, while others tried to futilely drag the bodies of those still alive but too wounded to walk, while pleading for a medic to come.

"Kaida! Hanabi!" Hagane yelled, as he frantically looked around.
"Kaida!"

The white haired Senju boy had survived thanks to Itachi and Sasuke, who used their Susanoo to shield him, as well as other lucky ninjas who happened to be around them, from the flying chunks of rocks and trees. Now, he was trying to find his sister and his other teammate, followed by Sasuke and Itachi.

"Hey, weren't you supposed to be a sensory ninja?" Sasuke asked.
"Can't you just sense them?"

"I'm trying," Hagane replied. "But I feel kinda dizzy, and I can't sense very well. I expended too much chakra while helping you destroy that meteor."

"Itachi!" a new voice said.

Itachi turned around, and saw Natsu running towards him. The former Hyuga Branch House kunoichi appeared to be good enough to walk on her own power, but her uniform was torn to shreds, and had many bleeding wounds, one of them on her forehead.

"Natsu!" Itachi called, as he went to meet his not-quite-yet girlfriend. He noticed her Byakugan was active. "Natsu, are you okay!?"

"I've been better, but I'll manage," the Hyuga replied. "Thank goodness both you and Sasuke-kun are okay."

"We won't be okay if we stay here for long," Sasuke stated. "Madara is way too strong for us. We must leave before he decides to give us the coup de grace."

"I won't leave without Kaida and Hanabi!" Hagane interjected.

"I was looking for Hanabi-sama as well. Don't worry, I know where she is," Natsu said, pointing in a seemingly random direction.

Hagane looked into said direction. At first he didn't see anything, before he looked something green. Something that appeared to be a dome made of wood. His eyes widened upon realizing what it was.

"That's a shelter made of Wood Release!" Hagane cried, as he rushed towards it. "Kaida!"

The two Uchihas and the Hyuga followed the Senju boy, and the four of them removed all the rocks under it as best as they could. Once there were no more rocks, Hagane forced two of the vines forming the dome apart, and entered inside. He sighed in relief upon seeing not only Kaida, but Hanabi as well, who was still unconscious. Rin was also there as well, her Sage Mode once again active, if the marks on her face were of any indication.

"Brother!" Kaida said, as she quickly rushed to hug her twin. "I'm so glad you're okay!"

"It was thanks to Sasuke and Itachi that I'm alive," Hagane said. "And I'm also glad that you and Hanabi are okay. Or all the okay somebody in a coma can be."

"Don't worry, I've been checking on her," Rin reassured. "I'm positive she'll wake up in a few hours."

"We don't have a few hours. Come on, we'll carry her as we get out of here," Sasuke urged.

Suddenly, the earth started to rumble.

"What the...?"

...

Kaida and Rin weren't the only ones who had the idea of creating a protective dome to shield themselves from all the flying debris caused by the four meteor impacts, as Maki also created a shield of cloth reinforced with fuinjutsu, big enough not just to protect her students, but a few other ninjas as well, among them was Ran, the Kumo kunoichi she had befriended during their first battle.

Among them was also Kurotsuchi herself. While she managed to remain conscious, she could barely stand on her feet thanks to exhausting most of her chakra.

"Sensei," Matsuri broke the silence, her voice quivering with fear. "I think we should leave before that Madara guy goes onto another rampage."

"I agree with Matsuri-chan! That guy is way too strong for us!" Yukata whimpered, as tears of terror rolled down her cheeks.

"The battle was over the moment he used that insane attack to decimate our division," Maki agreed. "Still, we should make sure we aren't noticed so he doesn't come after us. We'll have to carry the division commander with us and protect her," Maki said, looking at the weakened Kurotsuchi.

"I'll go outside and check if it's safe to-" Mikoshi was about to say, as he was interrupted by another quake.

...

"Okay, on three, everyone push up," Gai instructed. "Ready? One, two, THREE!"

While Gai, Lee and Tenten had been able to dodge the gigantic collateral damage of the four meteor impacts, Neji wasn't so lucky, and during a brief moment, the brutal quakes made him lose his balance and fall to the ground just as a large rock landed on his leg, leaving him completely trapped. Fortunately, his teammates and sensei were quick to come to his aid once the initial devastation subsided.

Gai, Lee and Tenten all pushed up a large rock that was crushing Neji's leg. Once the wounded Hyuga was able to crawl out of it, they dropped the boulder back on the ground, which made a loud thud.

"Neji, are you okay? Can you walk?" Lee anxiously asked.

Neji tried to move his wounded leg, and winced in pain when he tried to do so. "I'm afraid not," Neji replied, before activating his Byakugan in order to examine his pained limb. "It doesn't appear to be broken, but I don't think I'll be able to put any weight on it."

"In that case, we'll carry you," Lee said, as he helped Neji to get back on his feet, while allowing the Hyuga prodigy to rest his body on Lee's, with Lee placing one of Neji's arms around his shoulders.

Tenten was quick to help Lee, and placed Neji's other arm around her shoulders as well.

"Okay, time to get out of here," Tenten said, looking around, as if trying to find where Madara was hiding. With all the clouds of dusts that had been raised, it was a bit hard to tell. "This is going to hurt a bit, Neji, but we need to move fast if we want to leave this place alive."

"It's okay, I can-WHOA!" Neji said, as another quake almost made him fall to the ground again.

"What... what's going on?" Lee asked, as he frantically looked around.

"Up in the sky! Look!" Neji warned.

The four members of Team Gai looked up, and much to their horror, saw six more gravity cores pulling earth, rocks and dirt towards them, in order to form six more meteors. Paralyzed by horror, the four ninjas spent a few moments looking at the meteors forming and growing in size, with their eyes wide open and their mouths agape, trying to process what they could do.

"Again... he's going to do that again..." Tenten said, almost in a whisper. Her face then became a mask of pure terror. "We need to get out of here as soon as possible! Come on you two!"

"No!" Neji protested. "Leave me here! I can't walk, and I'm only a burden to you! If you leave me here, your chances of surviving will be all the greater!"

"We aren't going to abandon a teammate!" Lee angrily replied. "How you dare to suggest such an horrible thing! Tell him we will never abandon anybody, Gai sensei!" Lee asked his mentor. However, Gai didn't reply. His eyes were still fixed on the meteors above them. "Gai sensei?"

While Gai heard his student, he didn't say anything. As he looked at the meteors, hundreds of thoughts raced his mind. Mostly related on how he could get his students from this hell safely. On one side, he agreed with Lee; he'd die before leaving one of his students behind. On the other hand, Neji had a point; carrying him would slow them down, and they needed to move as fast as possible in order to avoid Madara's catastrophic jutsu.

" Perhaps using the Celestial Gates..." Gai wondered.

The green clad Jonin looked around, and saw his fellow division members in similar situations: some of them tried to run away as fast as they could, others tried to take their wounded friends and comrades with them. And others had seemingly accepted their fates, and were simply hugging while crying into each other's shoulders.

" And then what? No, my students will never be safe in a world where Madara Uchiha still exists. I need to put an end to this... right here and right now," Gai clenched his fist in determination as he took a decision.

"Gai-sensei!" Lee called him once again.

This time, Gai turned around, and gave his students his trademark smile. "Lee, you have nothing to worry. No one will be left behind. I promise that the three of you will live to see another day. To see many other days."

Lee smiled and nodded, his faith in that his sensei could do anything unwavered. Neji, however, wasn't as optimist.

"Gai-sensei, you can't make such a promise," Neji gravely said.

"That's where you are wrong, Neji," Gai said, before closing his eyes, and taking a deep breath. When he opened them again, his students could see that something inside him had changed. There was something about the way Gai was looking at them that made them feel uneasy. Very uneasy.

"He's looking at us as if... as if he's never going to see us again..."
Tenten thought, as a chill ran down her spine.

"Tenten, Neji, Lee. I've been your teacher for almost five years, and I can say without any doubt that they have been the best years of my life. You've been the best students any teacher could have, and I feel grateful for being said teacher," Gai began.

"Gai-sensei? What are you-?" Lee began, but Gai interrupted him.

"Lee, despite your lack of ability to use ninjutsu or genjutsu, you still had the burning determination to become a ninja no matter what, even if you could only rely on taijutsu," Gai began. "And look at yourself now! You're almost a Jonin! And you managed to reach this level through nothing but sheer hard work. Konoha is lucky to have you among its ranks.

"Neji. For most of your life, you were also burdened by something you didn't ask nor desired. But you didn't let that define you, and you managed to show everybody the immense potential within you. While some things may be set in stone, there's no fate but the one we carve for ourselves. So keep working on creating the fate you want to see.

"Tenten. Even if your initial dream of being like Tsunade didn't pan out, it did work in a different way: you were able to grow into one of the finest kunoichi this village had the luck to have. Just like how Tsunade was your inspiration, I'm sure plenty of little girls will be inspired by you to take the path of the ninja in order to be more like you.

"All in all, what I want to say is... I can't feel more proud of being your sensei, and I love you."

Lee was moved to tears by Gai's heartfelt speech, but on the inside was a little confused as to the why of it. Neji was averting his sensei's gaze, already guessing what was going to come next. Tenten, meanwhile, knew the truth deep down but struggled to accept it.

"G-Gai-sensei...? Why are you saying this?" she asked, almost on the verge of tears. "Why are you talking... as if you're bidding us farewell?"

Gai's expression hardened. He turned his back at them, and let out a heavy sigh.

"Because... this is a goodbye, Tenten," Gai said.

"Goodbye?" Lee repeated. "Why...?"

"Neji is right. We can't carry him with us and still move fast enough to avoid the meteors. But we can't abandon him either. We can't abandon any of our comrades," Gai said, as he spread his arms around for added emphasis. "That's why I'm going to stay back and put an end to this."

"What? Gai-sensei, you're mad! You saw Madara's power! No matter how strong you are, what can you-" Tenten began, but was cut off by Lee.

"The Gate of Death," Lee said in realization, as tears trickled down his cheeks. "You plan to open it in order to match Madara's power."

"But the Gate of Death... once it's opened, the user will... will..." Tenten choked on her words.

"Will it be enough?" Neji asked.

"I don't know. But right now, it's our only option," Gai said. He looked up once again, and saw that the meteors were almost as big as the first time. Madara would drop them on their heads any moment. "Come on, we can't waste anymore time, you need to leave this place now!"

At first, they hesitated for a moment, before they nodded.

"Goodbye, Gai-sensei. I will never forget that you were the first person who saw potential in me when others only saw a failure," Lee said.

"We will make sure your sacrifice isn't in vain, Gai-sensei," Neji added.

"The world will forever remember your brave sacrifice, sensei!" Tenten said.

Gai smiled, and gave his students one last thumbs up. Lee and Tenten turned around, and leaped away while carrying Neji on their arms. Gai then directed his eyes up again. The meteors were now fully formed, and began their descent.

While everybody else tried to run away, Gai began to run forward.

"So this is what you felt when you gave your life to save mine and my teammates', right, dad?" Gai thought, smiling at the memory. "I always wanted to be a ninja you'd be proud of, dad... you'll tell me now if I did reach said goal..."

"Gate of Death... OPEN!"

Chakra flowed unimpeded through Gai's entire body as all the dams in his chakra network were wide open. A blue aura flared around his body, quickly turning fire red, while his skin also turned dark red in color, and his eyes became entirely white, glowing with an eerie light. His body emitted so much heat, the ground around the Konoha Jonin started to burn.

Gai set his sights on his first target, a meteor that was the closest to the ground. The empowered Konoha ninja leaped towards it, breaking the ground he was standing on with the sheer strength he now possessed, and leaving a patch of scorched earth. In less than two seconds, Gai reached the meteor, and punched it with all his might. The meteor shattered and broke into thousands of tiny pebbles as if it was made of fragile sandstone.

" One down! Five more to go!" Gai thought, as he tried to locate the meteor second closest to the ground. "That one!"

Once again, Gai smashed into the meteor like a red missile, blowing it up to tiny rock chunks with a demolishing kick. The third one soon fell to Gai's might.

"Halfway done! Come on, just a little more!" Gai told himself. "I have enough power to destroy all of them and then take on Madara!"

...

At first, Madara was watching in amusements how those ants that pretended to be ninjas were about to be crushed under the weight of his godly power. He could see and hear their terror and desperation, and he reveled on them. While Madara was somebody who preferred fighting challenging opponents rather than crush weak ones, he did take pleasure in making unworthy opponents suffer and scream as much as possible.

After all, there were few things that disgusted Madara more than weakness.

Then, that red missile happened. Appearing out of nowhere, and destroying one of his meteors like it was nothing, Then another. And another. Madara was too stumped watched how this unknown element nullified one of his strongest new jutsu so casually, to the point that he didn't even attempt to stop it. Though, after regaining his bearing, he decided not to. After all, he was lamenting how there was nobody among this rabble able to give him a good fight, so this was a welcomed surprise.

Once this unknown but immensely powerful warrior was done destroying all of Madara's meteors, it leaped towards the Uchiha himself, landing on the ground with a thundering boom. The former Uchiha Clan Head could feel the sheer power this new enemy was radiating. Strangely enough, behind the terrifying appearance granted by the fiery aura that surrounded him, the man was oddly familiar to Madara.

"Wait a minute..." Madara said, as he narrowed his eyes. "You're that green clad fool with the ridiculous hairstyle that tried to fight me before!"

"Indeed. The name's Maito Gai. And you're far from the first person that calls me a fool," Gai said, as he slipped into a fighting stance, his flaring aura spreading a patch of scorched earth around him. "But this fool will put your reign of terror to an end!"

There was an explosion of dust and dirt as Gai opened a large crater on the spot Madara was standing on. If Madara was so much a fraction of a second slower, he would have been pulverized by Gai's devastating punch.

" He's so fast I can hardly follow his movements!" Madara distressingly thought.

While the Uchiha was still mid air, Gai launched himself upwards and delivered a brutal uppercut Madara was unable to dodge, before sending him back to the ground with a devastating kick. Gai was about to finish Madara with a drop kick, but the Uchiha wasn't harmed enough as to not move out of his way.

"You... you had this incredible power inside you the whole time... but you didn't use it until now... why...?" Madara said, as he manifested his Susanoo around him. As the gears inside his head began to work, he quickly came up with an explanation. "Chakra pours out of your body like a roaring waterfall. Every punch and kick you throw feels like a thousand enemies punching and kicking at once... oh, I see. This power... you're pretty much burning your entire life in order to convert it into sheer power. This battle... even if you manage to beat me, it will be your last. Disappointing. And here I thought that I had finally found a worthy opponent."

Gai, however, smirked. "This will be my last battle, yes. But this battle is the one that matters to me the most! I don't care what will be of me afterwards, or what do you think about me!"

As Madara's Susanoo reached its Armored form, Gai launched himself forward, delivering another mind-numbingly powerful punch, one so powerful it produced a gust of wind as a result. Madara tried to slash Gai with the Susanoo's sword, but Gai's reaction times were too fast and was able to easily avoid it. The punch left a crack on Madara's Susanoo's chest as it was forced backwards.

"Alright, not bad, but how-"

Madara was interrupted when his Susanoo was smashed with an overwhelming force from behind, cracking it as well. Then another hit from the sides. Then the opposite side. Then the flank. Then the opposite flank. All what Madara saw was a red blur moving around his Susanoo, who was being thrown around like a gigantic ragdoll.

"I can't follow his movements, he's too fast!" Madara said, his eyes quickly darting around in order to locate his evasive opponent. His Susanoo was again victim of a powerful slam coming from the flank. "But his attacks do have a pattern... meaning that his next hit will come from... THERE!"

The Susanoo quickly turned around and swung its sword towards the incoming Gai. This time, the sword hit its mark, its flat side slamming against the Konoha ninja's body, breaking Gai's momentum, and sending him crashing back into the ground. Madara took advantage of the pause to restore the cracks in his Susanoo, while also taking it to its perfect form.

"You certainly gave me quite the beating, both to my body and to this Susanoo, with that technique of yours," Madara said, as his Perfect Susanoo stomped towards Gai, who jumped back to his feet. "But if that's the best you can do, then I'm afraid to tell you that your sacrifice, while noble, will be a pointless one."

"Even if I don't defeat you, my sacrifice wasn't pointless, since I managed to stop that jutsu of yours from killing the rest of my division, and I made you focus on me, giving the others a chance to escape," Gai said, as he took a weird battle stance, one that involved him being on all fours. "And I still have one hidden ace in the hole... one that will take you down for good!"

Madar smirked. "Oh? Alright. Show it to me then, So far, no one but Hashirama has been able to make a dent on this Susanoo. But perhaps you may be an exception."

That moment, Gai's fiery aura flared once again, and it grew into a roaring inferno. Gai's clothes started to burn down, as volcanic-like glowing red veins started to spread around his body. His eyes started to burn with an orange light, as if they were two burning coals. The earth started to shake as a patch of burned ground spread around Gai's position.

Then, Gai's red aura started to stabilize and slowly took the shape of a fiery dragon. The Konoha Jonin shot forward, leaving a trail of burning earth with each step, before leaping at Madara's Susanoo, the dragon roaring with him. Madara's Susanoo quickly generated a sword of chakra on each hand, and delivered a cross-shaped slash at Gai, who made no hint to avoid the attack.

"NOW BURN AMONG MY FLAMES OF YOUTH, AND TURN TO ASHES, MADARA!" Gai hollered, as he readied his body to deliver a flying kick. "NIGHT GUY!"

The Susanoo swords found their target, but Gai plowed through them as if they were made of cheap wood. It also shattered the Susanoo's armor as if it was made of weak glass. Gai's foot connected with Madara's chest, violently pushing him out of his giant chakra construct, as the two of them continued flying high into the sky.

"This man... ! Just what is he... !?" Madara asked, as he was forced to vomit blood from the internal damage Gai's brutal kick had caused.

The volcanic veins around Gai's body started to burn with greater intensity, as his whole body glowed with a fierce red light. And as Gai expended the last of his chakra, his body exploded in a red blast, instantly burning to ash. The explosion sent Madara flying at least a kilometer away., before he painfully landed onto the hard ground.

...

Back on the ground, Neji was being carried by Lee and Tenten, while the three of them, as well as many other survivors tried to get away from the battlefield as fast as possible. While Lee and Tenten didn't dare to look back, Neji was monitoring the battle through his Byakugan. Then, the Hyuga prodigy winced as a flash of chakra blinded him for a few seconds.

That moment, they heard the explosion. And the three young Konoha ninjas finally knew that was the moment their beloved sensei had ceased to exist.

Author's Note: Rest in Peace, Maito Gai.

While some of the deaths in my fic happen on a whim, this wasn't one of them. I already decided that Gai was going to die fighting Madara even before I posted this story. Not because I hate Gai (far from it) but because I felt it would have made more sense if he had died in canon, given that his death had a lot of buildup, as opposed to Neji's death, which came out of nowhere. My guess is that, after killing Neji, Kishimoto didn't feel like piling even more grief on Lee and Tenten by killing their sensei so soon after that, so he had Naruto heal him with his new bullshit plot bending powers.

Does this mean that Neji will survive this time around? We'll see ;P

For the record, I'd like to clarify that Madara is still alive (there's no way he's going to die so soon), he will be on the sidelines for the time being, recovering before making a return. I know that Gai nearly killed Madara when he was the Ten Tails jinchuriki with the Eight Gates, but keep in mind that this Gai had to spend a lot of his power destroying those six meteors first before he could take his shot at Madara. Then again, I always found TTJ Madara rather underpowered. Even TTJ Obito put a much better show.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

So, what do you think about my version of Madara's return? Leave your thoughts in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Picking Up the Pieces

Author's Note: And after the darkest chapter of the entire fic (so far), here comes a much needed breather. Enjoy:

Chapter 123:

Picking Up the Pieces

or

Licking Grievous Wounds

Land of Fire, a couple kilometers to the west of the battle between the Second Division and Madara Uchiha

"Argh... urk... damn... damn madman..."

Madara was on the ground, in a puddle of his own blood, grunting in pain, unable to move. Or what was left of him. Gai's final attack had blown away the Uchiha's entire lower half, as well as a chunk of his torso, leaving only his mangled and battered upper body, his right arm, and his head. Naturally, a normal man wouldn't have been able to withstand such brutal dismemberment, but thanks to the healing factor he got from Hashirama's DNA, which was even greater than the original, he managed to cling to life.

"But you failed... hahaha... you failed... !" he gloated, before he was interrupted by a violent coughing fit. "You died... for nothing..."

Madara was feeling lightheaded, probably due to all the blood he had lost. Thankfully, all his wounds were now closing, preventing further blood loss. Though even if his regeneration was already kicking in, it would take quite a lot of time to regrow all the body parts he had lost, and even more to regain his former strength. Gai may have failed to kill the Ghost of the Uchiha, but he made sure he would be out of commission for quite some time.

At that moment, Zetsu emerged from the ground just besides his fallen master.

"Oh boy... this... this isn't good..." the white half said in horror.

"Did you reach to that conclusion on your own?" the black half snarked, before taking a look at Madara. "Though, I didn't think there was anybody to leave the boss so fucked up... thank goodness that guy died during the battle..."

"Obito-sama is going to be very mad when he finds out..." the white half added. "Very, very mad."

"It can't be helped. Come on, let's take him back to the lair so we can treat him," the black half suggested.

The plant creature then grabbed the barely conscious Madara, and both of them sunk into the ground until they disappeared completely.

...

Unnamed Territory between the Land of Waterfalls and the Land of Sound, Nighttime

Jiraiya and Tsunade were sitting in silence in front of a small campfire. It might appear that they had their eyes fixed into the fire, but in truth they weren't looking at anything in particular. They had just finished having some light dinner, even if neither of them had any appetite. They needed a full stomach if they hoped to have enough energy to defeat Orochimaru.

The reason behind their gloomy mood was Naruto's letter. While they were making their way towards Orochimaru's hideout, Kosuke the messenger toad appeared in front of Jiraiya with a scroll that Naruto had written for him. Jiraiya felt his heart skip a beat upon hearing that, given that if Naruto did such a thing then an emergency must have happened.

And unfortunately, he was right. The letter not only revealed that Akatsuki had learned of the location of the Turtle Island, but launched an attack in order to capture the jinchuriki. Fortunately, Naruto, Fu and Killer B managed to escape, but several Konoha ninjas lost their lives, including Choza Akimichi, Tenzo, and their sensei Hiruzen Sarutobi.

"I can't believe sensei's dead..." Jiraiya began, sounding downcast. "I sent him to the island to babysit Naruto because I thought it was a safe place away from the frontlines, yet..."

Tsunade placed a hand on his forearm. "Don't blame yourself. Remember it was me who came up with that idea."

"But it was me who agreed to it," Jiraiya replied, placing his own hand on top of Tsunade's. "I could have just told that old fool to go back to his house and let us do the fighting, but no, I had to take the easy way and make him part of the war..." Jiraiya said, letting out a tired sigh.

"Sensei was always a warrior at heart," Tsunade said. "He was born during the last years of the Warring States Period, and became a ninja during Konoha's most tumultuous years. Not to mention that he's a veteran of all three wars. He wasn't like you or me, who were born in periods of peace and only went through our first war when we were adults."

"That's why I wanted him to stay in the village to begin with," Jiraiya replied. "That man has done more than enough. He deserved to sit this one out."

"And Tenzo... man, Kaida and Hagane are going to be devastated when they learn that their Jonin-sensei is dead as well," Tsunade said, shaking her head.

"To think that I was this close to send the twins with Naruto to the island for protection..." Jiraiya reflected.

Tsunade looked at him, perplexed. "You what?"

"I was worried about them, and I told them that I wanted them to be with Naruto, to help and support him in his quest to master the power of the Nine Tails," Jiraiya said, before chuckling a little. "Of course, they saw through my lie instantly. Even Kaida. They realized of my intentions, and pointed out that just because they were my kids, I couldn't give them a special treatment."

"As their mother, I would have agreed with you, though," Tsunade said, leaning his head back. "But Kami knows that had I been the one in their place, I would have protested even louder."

The two fell again into a silence, with only the crackle of the flames in front of them making any noise.

"Some leader I am," Jiraiya dejectedly said.

Tsunade looked at him with concern in her eyes. "Jiraiya, why are you saying that? You've been doing a great job so far, both as Hokage and Supreme Leader of the Alliance."

"I appreciate your support, Hime, but we both know you're only saying that because you're my wife," Jiraiya replied with a sad smile. "This war happened to begin with because I foolishly let Akatsuki get their hands on one of the Rinnegan because I had the brilliant idea of using them as a bait to lure Danzo out."

"The war would have happened anyway," Tsunade countered. "And nobody would have guessed that Danzo was under Obito's mind control."

"I've also sent Shikaku Nara to his death by allowing him to go to the battlefield because Inoichi was spotted," Jiraiya continued. "Shikaku was our best strategist, and now we lost a critical member of our intelligence division."

"Shikaku was a Jonin. You had reasons to trust he could stay alive in the battlefield," Tsunade rebutted.

Jiraiya was going to say something, but closed his mouth, chuckled, and looked at his wife. "You're going to find a justification for every one of my failings, aren't you?"

"You can bet I am," Tsunade said with a confident smirk. However, said smirk disappeared quickly, replaced by a scowl and a solemn expression. "Jiraiya, we're now at the most critical part of the war. Our son and the other two jinchuriki are out there in the open, vulnerable, and Akatsuki won't resist the temptation of catching them. If I were the enemy, I'd send whatever forces left into one final offensive in order to act as a distraction while sending somebody capable of capturing the jinchuriki.

"Orochimaru had the reanimations of my grandparents all this time, yet he kept them under wraps until Naruto and the others were no longer protected," Tsunade pointed out. "I'm sure that that bastard still has more heavyweights in reserve, and he will send all of them soon. We're now going to face Orochimaru. If we can beat him, we'll be able to undo the Impure World Resurrection, depriving the enemy of their strongest asset. And if we're to do that, I can't have you doubting yourself when we're so close to end this."

Jiraiya was left a little taken aback upon hearing that light reprimand. After regarding his bearings, though, he smiled again. "Guess you're right. I'll have time to mop over my failings as a leader once we're done with this shit."

Tsunade rolled her eyes, but smiled good naturedly. "Honestly Jiraiya, drop it. You're being annoying. No one expects you to do a perfect job. In fact, I believe that out of all the potential candidates, you were the best, both to be Hokage and to be the Supreme Commander of the Alliance. And I'm not saying this just because I'm your wife."

Jiraiya held his hands defensively. "Hey, I'm not going to argue with you anymore. I don't think I can get anything out of it except a headache."

"Good," Tsunade said, and nodded.

Again, another moment of silence. Aside from the fire, they could hear a couple owls hooting.

"So... do you think we can take on the bastard?" Jiraiya asked. "I mean... I know you have the Rinnegan, but will it be enough? By this point, Orochimaru must have integrated quite a few Bloodline Limits into himself as well. Fighting a man with that many abilities... it's going to be tricky."

"Not to mention that we can't even kill him," Tsunade added. "Or else we won't be able to undo de jutsu and destroy all the reanimations at once."

"Do you really think that we can convince him to undo the jutsu?" Jiraiya asked, skeptical. "Orochimaru is too far gone. He will fight us to death, either his or ours, and the guy loves nothing but himself, meaning we can't use anything or anyone else as leverage against him. I know it won't destroy all the reanimations at once, but we already have you and the Hyuga sisters to destroy them permanently."

"Perhaps we could trick him," Tsunade suggested. "Put him under a genjutsu or something...?"

"I'm not that good with genjutsu, and neither are you. Plus, with that Sharingan of his, I doubt he wouldn't be able to easily break it," Jiraiya countered.

Tsunade was starting to become frustrated. Her nose scrunched up as she began to think what else they could do.

"Give it up, Hime. I'm not looking up to it, but we'll have to kill the bastard," Jiraiya said, hoping to make his wife reconsider.

Suddenly, an idea dawned upon Tsunade's mind. The scowl in her face disappeared, replaced by a smile of realization.

"Of course. Yes, we'll have to kill him," Tsunade said. "That doesn't mean we can't undo the jutsu ourselves after that."

Jiraiya raised an eyebrow, a little confused. "What are you thinking?"

Tsunade smiled confidently. "I just had an idea of how we can force Orochimaru to undo the jutsu. This is the plan..."

...

Mountain Graveyard

"Again. Your aberrations failed. Again," Obito seethed, as he angrily paced around the cavern that they were used as an improvised command center. "The three jinchuriki were out in the open, with no support and no place to hide, ripe for being caught. AND YOU LET THEM ESCAPE!"

Orochimaru was somehow able to keep a calm façade as he endured Obito's tirade, the last of many. He had to admit that the Uchiha had a point, his reanimations weren't as effective as they should have been. They were immortal, indestructible ninjas with unlimited amount of chakra, that were forced to obey the fallen Sannin's order to the letter. On paper, that would make them the perfect soldiers, but the Alliance was taking them on with surprising ease.

The answer would be that the jutsu has a weakness that Orochimaru hadn't anticipated. The answer would be, what weakness?

" Even discounting Tsunade and the Hyuga girls with the Truth Seeking Balls, many of my reanimations have been defeated rather quickly," Orochimaru reflected. "Seeing that they were unable to kill them, the enemy decided to seal them instead. Maybe the zombies still exist, but if they can't fight, that's irrelevant."

"You had the reanimation of Hashirama Senju as your slave, and you're telling me that wasn't enough to capture three jinchuriki?" Obito asked, incredulous, as he threw his arms into the air. "All you have to do is capture them, and then the war would have been won!"

" Obito's right. I thought that between Hashirama and Mito, they would be able to subdue the three jinchuriki. Hashirama is the most powerful ninja that ever lived, and he and his wife had the perfect skillset to counter a jinchuriki, yet the combined power of the three jinchuriki turned out to be greater. How can that be possible?"

"It seems that I made miscalculation while gauging the power of the targets," Orochimaru admitted, yet his confident demeanor didn't change in the slightest. "I don't know what they've been doing on that island, but the increase in power of the jinchuriki of the Nine and the Seven Tails has been... meteoric, to say the least. Given that it was so easy to make them abandon that giant turtle, it seemed that they didn't have enough power to match Mito, much less Hashirama."

"Didn't somebody tell you that you have an awful habit of underestimating your opponents?" Obito sneered, as he stomped towards him. "You think yourself you're so clever, so cunning, so strong, and then you let yourself be defeated by those same enemies you deemed as your inferiors."

"We haven't lost yet," Orochimaru said. "The jinchuriki are still out there, in the open. I still have plenty of strong reanimations that can take them on. This time, I'll overwhelm them with numbers instead of relying on a single, powerful puppet."

Obito was going to reply, when Zetsu emerged between the two of them. Even if the dual being was trying to hide it, it was obvious that he was bringing even more bad news.

He let out a tired sigh, and rolled his eyes. "What now?"

"Uh... you better come with me, boss," the black half said, as he eyed Orochimaru, while extending his arm at Obito. "This is... something you need to see."

Wordlessly, Obito grabbed Zetsu's hand, and let the plant creature pull him into the ground through his odd way of teleportation, leaving Orochimaru alone in the cavern.

...

Forests of the Land of Fire, Nighttime

After their excruciating fight with Hashirama Senju and Mito Uzumaki, the jinchuriki trio of Naruto, Fu and Killer B wanted to do nothing but rest. Even if they knew that people were counting on them, they wouldn't be of much help if they arrived on the battlefield completely exhausted. Of course, there was the problem of finding a place to hide in order to escape from Akatsuki's ever vigilant gaze. Fortunately, the three jinchuriki came up with a rather ingenious idea.

After finding a good cluster of trees that would help cover their position, Fu used her chakra threads in order to create a large hollow cocoon that could be used as an improvised shelter. Naruto and Killer B then created and applied as many seals of protection, camouflage and privacy as possible in order to make it impossible to find. That would mean that their allies wouldn't be able to find them either, but it wasn't a risk they could afford to take.

Now, the three of them were sitting around a fire -thankfully, the makeshift shelter had a hole at the top to let the smoke out- quietly enjoying some rest and dinner. Unfortunately for them, the only food they had with them right now was some instant ramen Naruto had with him inside sealing scrolls. Not that they were complaining, it saved them from hunting, and they were hungry enough to eat pretty much anything.

They dined in silence. That's it, until, from a burst of smoke, a small frog appeared before Naruto. The blond quickly slurped the noodles they were in his mouth, almost choking on them. However, just before Naruto could greet the messenger toad, Fu's hand shoot towards the newcomer and caught him.

"Yay, a frog!" Fu cheered. "We can dine frog's legs with the ramen!"

"Hey, what the hell are you saying!? First, I'm a toad, not a frog! Second, what's that talk about eating me!?" the toad complained, as he broke free from Fu's grasp.

"A toad? Like the ones Naruto summons?" Fu asked, scratching her head. "But those are much bigger..."

"We toads come in every size and shape!" the toad protested, before he turned at Naruto. "Hey there, Naruto. I sent your message to your pops as you asked me."

"Kosuke! So great to see you back!" Naruto cheered, a little louder than he was hoping. "So, did you tell my dad about what happened? Will he do something about us?"

"Eh, yeah, I did, but..." Kosuke began, as he rubbed the back of his head, while averting Naruto's gaze.

"But what?" Naruto asked.

"Jiraiya wasn't where you said he would be. He wasn't at the Ninja Alliance HQ," Kosuke revealed, much to the three humans' surprise. "He and Tsunade were in a forest, I think far to the north."

"... what?" Naruto asked, looking stumped. "What the hell were they doing there?"

"From what Jiraya told me, they've located Orochimaru's hideout, and he and Tsunade are going to face him," Kosuke told him. "Let's hope they put that snake monster down."

"Hey, that's good, right?" Fu asked, looking back and forth between Naruto and Killer B, who didn't appear to be any happier.

"Orochimaru's the one behind the reanimations, so if they beat him, the enemy will lose its strongest minions!"

Killer B looked back at her, and shook his head. "If the big boss is out, there will be no help. And the bad guys are going to keep making us yelp."

"Pretty much," Naruto agreed.

"Oh," Kosuke lamely said, looking down. "Hey, do you want us to take you to Mount Myoboku? You will be safe there."

Naruto shook his head. "I'm not going to abandon Killer B and Fu. Not to mention all the people out there fighting and dying for us. They've already done enough, they need our help."

"You sure?" Kosuke asked. "It could be arranged for your companions to be transported there as well, even if it may take a little time..."

"I'm sure," Naruto said, nodding. "Though, don't worry, I won't do anything stupid. I'll ask to be reverse summoned if the situation gets ugly, but I plan to use that as a last resort."

"Very well then. You're strong, and your pals also seem to be just as tough, so I trust you'll be good," Kosuke replied with a nod. "I'll tell the others to get ready to assist you as well as Jiraiya."

"Thanks, I'll appreciate that," Naruto replied.

"And if you need to send another message to your pop, don't hesitate to summon me," Kosuke said with a smile. "Anyway, I'll be taking my leave now. Bye!"

And Kosuke disappeared in a puff of smoke, leaving the three jinchuriki once again with nobody but each other. They continued eating in silence until all three of them finished their instant ramen. When they did, Fu decided to strike up a conversation.

"Man, that Hashirama dude was crazy strong," she said, as she leaned against the wall of the shelter-cocoon, while placing her hands behind her neck. "I hope they don't make us fight a reanimation stronger than that one."

"I find that unlikely. Hashirama is the strongest ninja who ever lived in recorded history," Naruto mentioned. "Orochimaru can't have somebody stronger because such person doesn't exist."

"I think you're forgetting about certain someone, that tree man has nothing on the great Killer B, son," Killer B boasted. "And he was lucky my big bro wasn't here, between the two of us we wouldn't taken more than five seconds to make him disappear!"

Naruto rolled his eyes, but chuckled at his fellow jinchuriki's rap, while Fu giggled.

" Well, maybe not somebody stronger, but I can think in somebody just as strong as Hashirama," Kurama interjected. "Madara Uchiha."

Naruto frowned upon hearing the name, and angrily crossed his arms, remember the pain he felt when the Nine Tails was almost ripped out of his body by a Summoning Jutsu. "Are you sure it was him? Because if Orochimaru got a piece of his DNA then..."

" While nobody knows where the Second Hokage buried Madara, Orochimaru has proved to be crafty and resourceful, so I wouldn't put past that man to get his hands on a DNA sample of Madara," Kurama said.

"Well, regardless of how strong that Madara is, if we beat Hashirama, we can beat him in the case we have to fight him again, right?" Fu asked, sounding like she needed to be reassured of that.

"Of course! Madara was never able to beat Hashirama, something you guys did do, so you shouldn't worry too much," Chomei helpfully encouraged.

"Then again, the fight against Hashirama was more narrow than I would have liked, so I don't look forward any similar fight," Gyuki tiredly said. "And from what I heard, Madara was crazy strong too."

"There was also our old man and his brother, but I find very unlikely for Orochimaru to get DNA from two people who died almost a millenium ago," Kurama added.

"I agree with numbers Nine and Seven, if more reanimations come we'll just launch them above heaven!" Killer B rapped. "All we have to do is help the Alliance fight and survive, while your mom and pop make sure that Orochimaru bastard doesn't stay alive."

"Yeah, that's the plan," Naruto confirmed.

"By the way, Number Nine, can you check the position of our friends? Just to make sure we don't take any wrong ends," Killer B asked.

"Sure," Naruto said, as he sat with his legs crossed, closed his eyes, and stayed still as he began to gather nature energy. Orange marks started to appear around his eyes as Sage Mode manifested, granting him far sensing abilities. The more nature energy he absorbed, the further he could expand his senses. "Alright, I have them! Yeah, you were right, they changed position and... hey, wait a second..."

"Something wrong, Number Nine? It seems like there's something that's not fine," Killer B inquired.

"The chakra concentration that I felt before is nowhere near as big as this one," Naruto said, worry slipping in his voice. "I'm sensing quite a few familiar chakra signatures, like that of Hagane, Kaida, Hanabi, Sasuke, Itachi, Neji, Lee and Tenten but... there are a lot of people missing."

"Perhaps there was a battle while we were fighting Hashirama?" Fu suggested.

"No, that can't be right. The Alliance has been fighting for weeks against Akatsuki, and while they had casualties, they weren't nothing too worrisome. There's no way they could have lost more than half their ninjas in a single battle..."

"Perhaps you aren't sensing them right," Fu said, as she also sat in the lotus position, and stayed still in order to activate Sage Mode. After a few minutes, she managed to expand her sensing range in order to reach Kurotsuchi's division. "Wait... you're right... there are far fewer people than the last time I sensed them!"

"See? I told you!" Naruto worriedly said. "Also... their chakra seems to be pretty weak..."

"Naruto," Fu called him. "You said you sensed Neji, Lee and Tenten, and so do I. But I can't sense their sensei..."

Naruto realized then that he hadn't sensed Gai-sensei either, and much to his horror, he realized he could no longer find his presence. Beads of cold sweat started to trickle down his body.

"What the hell happened there... and what kind of enemy could have killed such a powerful ninja like Gai-sensei?"

Kurama didn't say anything, but he already imagined the answer.

...

Undisclosed Location

Obito looked at Madara's unconscious form, partially submerged under a sap-like green substance inside a hole that served as a makeshift bathtub. He could see that his breath was shallow, but steady. Obito didn't know what was that substance, but the Zetsu told him it was a balm made from Hashirama's cells that had regenerative properties and would restore Madara to full health in no time.

He was unable to repress yet another sigh of exasperation. Zetsu stood behind the younger Uchiha, fidgeting uncomfortably.

"And when did he get out of the cocoon?" Obito asked, his eyes still trained on Madara.

"A few hours ago, boss," the white half replied.

"Did he know about the war?" Obito asked, almost hissing with anger. "Did he know what we were doing?"

"Yes, sir. We told him everything that happened since he entered the cocoon, until now," the white half confirmed.

"And instead of seeking me, or going to hunt the jinchuriki, he goes to pick a fight with a random division of the Ninja Alliance?" Obito asked again. Despite his apparent calm tone, Zetsu could sense he was so angry, he wouldn't be surprised if steam came out of his ears.

"He said he wanted to test his new powers and abilities before continuing with the plan, and thought a large gathering of enemy ninjas would be an ideal target," the black half supplied.

"Not so ideal, given how badly he ended," Obito bitterly thought. "And who the hell was able to put Madara Uchiha of all people in such a sorry state?"

"From what we know, a Konoha ninja named Maito Gai," the white half replied.

"Maito Gai?" Obito repeated, this time turned around to glare at the plant-like, dual being. "That idiot with the ridiculous haircut? Maito Gai did this!?"

"He used some kind of forbidden jutsu that granted him an immense power," the black half explained. "Something called the Celestial Gates or something like that."

Obito felt his anger subside a little. He knew about the Eight Gates. They were great sources of power, but came at an equally great cost. He could imagine that if Gai opened all eight Gates, he'd had a power to match Madara's.

"I presume Gai is dead then?" Obito asked.

"Very much, yes. His body was burned to ashes by the very power he was wielding," the black half said.

"At the very least we won't have to deal with that again," Obito said.

Zetsu nodded but didn't reply, while Obito turned back, and went to watch the wounded Madara once again, followed by an uncomfortably long moment of silence.

"Um, boss..." the white half began. "What are we going to do?"

"Deploy all our remaining troops on as many fronts as possible. Tell Orochimaru to send whatever reanimations he still has left to those very fronts as well," Obito ordered. "The goal of this attack is to keep the Alliance occupied while we catch the jinchuriki."

"I see," the black half said. "And what is the plan for that, boss?"

"I'm tired of delegating. I'm going to catch those stubborn jinchuriki myself," Obito declared. "It's time to end this farce of a war."

...

Second Division Base Camp, Nighttime

"Resolute. I need to appear resolute," Kurotsuchi thought, fighting back the tears. "The troops can't see you crying like a baby. They're looking up to you to guide them, and you can't afford to look weak."

The Second Division, or what was left of it, was resting inside their new base, an underground cavern that had been dug by the Earth Release users, the young Tsuchikage included. After Madara's brutal attack, the survivors wanted something not in the open. The few sealmasters that had survived had placed privacy and camouflage seals around the area in order to mislead enemy scouts.

There were no bonfires due the little ventilation of the man-made caves, with a few torches and small campfires scattered around the area providing some light and heat. Unlike the aftermath of their previous battles, there was no noise, other than the small murmur of a few conversations here and there. The mood was understandably gloomy. While many of the survivors were veterans from the previous war who also experienced their share of losing battles, it was nothing compared to what had happened a few hours prior.

Right now, Kurotsuchi was in front of a ninja of the Yamanaka clan, wearing a special helmet that amplified his psychic powers, in order to create a mental connection between the young Kage and the HQ. Now more than any time, they needed to know what had happened here.

"Commander, I'm ready when you are," the Yamanaka ninja in front of her informed.

Kurotsuchi merely nodded affirmatively. She could feel how her mind was linked to a network of many other minds, all of them which she recognized.

"I was expecting for you to contact us, Kurotsuchi. I was fearing for your life," she could hear the voice of her grandpa inside her head. She could hear the worry in his voice, despite the fact that she hadn't said anything yet. "The sensor division detected a massive spike of chakra coming from your position, as well as a massive loss of chakra signatures. What happened? Did Akatsuki launched a second attack after that one? For some reason, we were unable to determine the size of the enemy force from our end."

Kurotsuchi gulped, as she prepared for what she was going to say. "It was one enemy, grandpa. One that claimed to be Madara Uchiha."

There was a moment of silence, before Onoki spoke again.

" Of course. Given that we knew Orochimaru had DNA samples of Hashirama Senju, it would be wishful thinking to think he didn't have those of Madara as well," Onoki said in resignation. "Even then, Madara alone couldn't-"

"Let me finish first, grandpa," Kurotsuchi cut him. "First of all, it wasn't a reanimation. It was Madara Uchiha in the flesh."

" What!?" Onoki yelled. "But... but that..."

" That can't be right, girl," Chiyo's voice interceded. "If Madara Uchiha was still alive to this day, he'd be more than a century old. No human being has ever lived that long."

"Well, he didn't look like a reanimation, given the lack of cracked skin and black eyes," Kurotsuchi said. "Then again, if he was a reanimation or not it's irrelevant. What matters the most is his power. Grandpa, you fought Madara Uchiha in the past, right? Did he have Wood Release, or the Rinnegan?"

" Of course not! He had that blasted Mangekyo Sharingan..." Onoki began, before catching on his granddaughter's implication. "Wait... are you telling me the Madara you fought had such Bloodline Limits?"

"Yes. In fact, I better start from the beginning so you can understand what we went through. You see..."

Kurotsuchi began to explain the battle against Madara. How he carved a path of corpses with taijutsu alone, before fighting the division's most powerful ninjas, only to reveal that he was toying with them and using them to test his powers, before finally deciding to finish them off with not one but several Chibaku Tensei at once.

According to the information gathered by the Uchiha brothers during their ill-fated battle against their elder clansman, Madara had undergone the same rejuvenation process Rin Nohara had gone through, gaining Wood Release as well as a potent healing factor. And on top of that, by mixing his Uchiha genes with Hashirama's Senju cells, he had managed to evolve his Sharingan to Rinnegan, effectively becoming the most powerful ninja who ever lived.

" There's something I don't understand, Tsuchikage-sama," Ao intervened. "If Madara Uchiha is so immensely powerful, how did you manage to defeat him?"

"A Konoha Ninja, Maito Gai, used a forbidden technique known as the Eight Celestial Gates, which granted him a massive power boost, big enough to match Madara, but at the cost of his life," Kurotsuchi explained. "However, despite managing to keep Madara at bay long enough for us to escape, and delivering a devastating final blow, we were unable to confirm if Madara is truly dead nor not."

" Yes, I know that technique," Ao said. "Another Konoha ninja, Maito Dai, also used that very same technique to fight all of our Seven Swordsmen at once, and kill four of them, also at the cost of his life."

" It's kind of poetic that his son went down the same way Dai did, isn't it?" Chiyo sadly reflected.

"Yes. The casualties my division suffered at Madara's hands have been catastrophic," Kurotsuchi said, unable to repress a few tears at the thought of her allowing so many of her troops dying. "If it wasn't for Gai's sacrifice... that monster would have wiped out my division completely."

" So we better prepare for Madara's eventual return, then," Onoki said, dreading the thought of facing that man again, especially now that his powers had increased so dramatically. "Perhaps our most powerful ninjas working together can take him down."

"Will that be enough?" Kurotsuchi asked, unsure.

There was a moment of silence before Onoki gave his answer.

" I don't know, but we'll have to try," the old man said. "As if we didn't have enough troubles with Kumo's secret island being attacked..."

"They attacked the secret island!?" Kurotsuchi asked, alarmed.
"When? How? Did they capture any of the-"

" A message reached us a few hours ago. We kept no communication between the island and the rest of our forces as not to give Akatsuki any lead to its location, but even then it wasn't enough," Onoki said.

" The Raikage said he had his mind scanned by a Yamanaka reanimation. It was only a matter of time that they found that island," Chiyo intervened. "Fortunately, word is that, despite leaving several casualties, Akatsuki was unable to capture the jinchuriki, and they escaped into the mainland."

"But that means that the jinchuriki are alone and unprotected," Kurotsuchi said. She then looked around. "I'd ask where they are, but my division is no shape to conduct an extensive search operation."

" We weren't expecting you to, child," Onoki replied. "Now if that's all, I suggest you to take some rest. We'll send you reinforcements and supplies as soon as we can."

"I will. Thanks, gramps,"

...

As said before, the atmosphere among what was left of the Second Division was gloom. Not only because of the crushing defeat at Madara's hands, not just because the sheer amount of casualties, but also because said casualties left friends and loved ones behind. And among those many unfortunate souls was a trio of Konoha ninjas who had just lost their Jonin-sensei in the battle against Madara.

Lee and Tenten broke down almost immediately after the underground shelter was set, and spent most of the time crying their eyes out. Even if Neji also shed a few tears, she managed to keep his composure. Perhaps because he wasn't used to display his emotions so openly, perhaps because, as the new leader of the Close Combat Squad.

"I can't believe that Gai-sensei is... is... gone..." Tenten said, not daring to say the word she meant to say.

"He was so strong... I never thought there was somebody capable of... of pushing Gai-sensei into sacrificing like that for us..." Lee cried.

"This is a war. People die. Shikamaru lost his dad not that long ago," Tenten said, still crying a little. "But... but you never think it's going to be somebody... somebody close to you..."

"No. You never do," Neji interceded. "Until you lose somebody, and realize how close death is to us. Especially when you're a ninja."

"You're talking about the Uchiha Insurrection, right?" Lee asked. "I know your clan was hit really hard during that tragic night."

"Yes. However, it happened almost a decade ago, and I didn't lose any of my close relatives, so I was among the lucky ones," Neji explained. "But even if I didn't know most of them, seeing so many of my clansmen die was a harrowing experience. I wasn't even out of the Academy, yet that day taught me what it means to be a ninja: to see your friends and loved ones die at any moment."

"Really? So... whenever we go to a mission... do you expect any of us to die?" Tenten asked.

"I prefer to look at it from a different perspective: what can I do to make sure all of us go home alive?" Neji rethorically asked. "And I can asume that Gai-sensei thought that way. That's why he sacrificed himself, so we could have another chance to fight. Another chance to live."

"And we'll use this chance to avenge Gai-sensei-" Tenten began.

"No. That..." Lee interrupted. "That's not something Gai-sensei would have wanted. Gai-sensei considered revenge to be mostly unyouthful."

"Not that we can do anything against somebody who wields such a monstrous power," Neji added. "If we want to honor Gai-sensei's sacrifice, the best thing we can do is to continue doing what we've been doing so far: keep fighting against the enemy to the best of our ability, and help end this war as best as we can."

Tenten wanted to protest. To shout, to yell, about how Gai's death was an injustice that needed to be punished. But as much as her emotional side wanted her to do that, her rational side couldn't help but agree with everything Neji was saying. Madara was way out of their league, and if he died, it wouldn't be by their hand.

So Tenten didn't say anything. Neither did Lee nor Neji. The group remained silent for the next few minutes, slowly absorbing the Hyuga prodigy's words.

"So... given that Gai-sensei is gone," Lee spoke, braking the silence. He looked at Neji. "That makes you the leader of our squad, given that you're the one of the greater rank."

"I guess so. But that's irrelevant now, since we're part of a much larger division," Neji pointed out, as he looked down. Then, he raised his eyes, and locked them onto his two teammates. "But like Gaisensei did before, as the commanding officer of this squad, I'll do my best to keep you two alive."

"And we will do our best to make sure you won't have to sacrifice yourself like Gai-sensei did," Tenten said energetically, as she clenched her hand into a fist. "This squad won't lose anymore members! Gai-sensei's sacrifice won't be in vain!"

Neji just crossed his arms and nodded, while Lee threw a fist in Tenten's direction, as a way to show his agreement. They would make it to the end of this war alive. They would make their sensei proud.

...

Not far away from there, Sasuke was sitting alone at the foot of another small campfire. He was shivering a little, as the underground cavern was cold, and the campfire didn't provide much heat, but it was better than nothing. He heard the steps of somebody who was walking towards him. He didn't turn his head around since he knew who he was.

"Hey," Itachi said, as he sat in front of him. "You okay, brother?"

"Yeah. A little exhasuted, but I'll live," Sasuke tiredly replied. "So... how is Natsu doing?"

"She's okay. The medics have already healed all her wounds. Nothing too serious. Thankfully," Itachi said, breathing out.

"And... how are you doing?" Sasuke asked.

Itachi visibly deflated. His eyes looked downwards, to the hard stone floor. "Physically, I'm okay. I'll need a day or two of rest before I'm at my best, so let's hope we get a little reprieve before we're called into the action again."

"You said 'physically'," Sasuke pointed out. "And mentally?"

"Mentally... not so good," Itachi honestly replied. He looked at Sasuke with tired eyes. "I keep replaying the battle in my mind, wondering what we could have done differently in order to beat Madara but... nothing comes to mind. The gap between us is too big."

Sasuke raised an eyebrow, and scowled at his older brother. "You don't seriously think it was your responsibility alone to end that maniac, do you?"

"If it wasn't mine, then whom?" Itachi replied.

"You aren't the only ninja in this division, Itachi. Nor the only one with a powerful Bloodline Limit. Many of them tried their luck against Madara, and all of them failed," Sasuke pointed out.

"True. Guess I'm not that used to failing," Itachi admitted.

"Really? I know you're strong, but even you must fail sometimes," Sasuke pointed out.

"Less than the average ninja. With the missions I usually get, failure isn't something that I can afford," Itachi said. "And when I fail, mass death follows."

Sasuke chuckled humorlessly. "Aren't you being a little overdramatic there?"

"Do I need to remind you of the Uchiha Insurrection?" Itachi pointedly asked.

Sasuke shot his older brother an unamused glare. "What? You think you could have stopped that by yourself?"

"I reviewed what happened in my mind quite a lot of times, and came up with at least five possible courses of action I could have taken in order to minimize the bloodshed of that night to a fraction of what it was," Itachi argued. "Then again, I don't blame myself for what happened there. I was even younger than you are now, so I think I did the best I could have done back then."

"I do think you -both of us- did the best we could. You said it yourself, Madara was too strong, so no point in moping about it," Sasuke said.

Itachi let out a sigh. "Guess I'm not that used to fight against enemies so superior to me either."

"You always told me not to let my power make me confident, and that there will always be somebody much stronger than you are," Sasuke reminded him.

Itachi chuckled sadly. "Guess I'm not that good at applying my own advice either, am I?"

"Probably because you were never in a situation when you needed to," Sasuke told him.

Itachi merely acknowledged Sasuke's point with a nod. Silence then befell between the two brothers, who stayed like that for several hours.

...

Sometime later, sunrise

Dawn came a few hours later, when the sun rose and bathed the entire continent in light, driving the night coat of shadows away. Of course, that isn't something the people of the Second Division would know, given that most of them were hidden underground.

Despite the lack of natural sunlight, a girl that had been asleep for hours woke up shortly after the sun started to rise. Hanabi Hyuga stirred in her sleep, as her consciousness slowly returned. She opened her eyes, blinking a few times to adjust to the light of the instance, which was rather dim. Slowly, she sat up, and turned around.

"Hey, look, she's awake!"

Hanabi was quickly surrounded by her two teammates, who looked at her with worried eyes.

"Oh boy, thank goodness you woke up! After the beating that Madara asshole gave you, we feared for the worst!" Kaida said, before her mood lightened up, and gave her twin brother a hard slap on the back. "Thank goodness my little bro is a superb medic!"

"What happened? Where... where are we?" she asked, looking around. "Did Madara win?"

"We're in an underground shelter made via Earth Release;" Hagane began to explain. "As for what happened..."

The white haired Senju told Hagane how Sasuke and Itachi took over from Hanabi, but even the Uchiha duo failed to make any significant damage to the Madara, and how Madara decided to stop fooling around and showcase his true power in the form of not one nor two, but six Chibaku Tensei. When Hagane was going to tell her about the second round of meteors and Gai's sacrifice, Kaida tugged her brother's sleeve, and nodded to a pair of Iwa ninjas that were walking by.

"... yes, I heard Tsuchikage-sama herself say it. The hideout of the jinchuriki has been attacked by Akatsuki," one of the Iwa ninja, a man, said. "Though I heard the jinchuriki escaped, at the very least."

"Let's hope the other divisions move out and secure them," his companion, a kunoichi, replied. "After all the ninjas that died to protect those three, especially today, they better don't let Akatsuki get their hands on them and make all of this in vain..."

They continued talking, but the trio didn't listen. They already had all the information they considered relevant.

"You heard that?" Hagane asked.

"Yes! Naruto-niisan is in danger!" Kaida said, her voice cracking a little. "We need to go out and help him!"

Kaida tried to stand up and run outside, but Hagane grabbed her by the arm.

"Kaida, no! You don't know where Naruto-niisan and the other two are," Hagane said. "And even if you were, neither of us are in condition to go out and fight."

Hanabi wanted to say something, until an idea dawned upon her. She sat down in the lotus position, and focused her chakra. The twins took notice of this.

"Hanabi? What are you doing?" Hagane asked.

"I don't think Sage Mode is going to help here," Kaida added.

"I'm not gathering nature energy. We may not be able to help, but I'm going to ask somebody who can," Hanabi said. "Now shut up, I need to focus."

...

Konoha, Hyuga Estate

Despite being an early riser, Hinata was still asleep. She had been sleeping for quite a lot of time since her return to Konoha. The fight against Toneri had left her drained, more than what she wanted to admit, so her body was soaking on all the rest it could gather.

" Hinata!"

Her nights were dreamless, given how deep her slumber was. This one, however was going to be an exception. Soon, Hinata found herself inside a weird but familiar place, the ancient temple of purple stone where she first met Hamura Otsutsuki. And then there was that voice calling her name time after time, each time more desperate.

" Hinata!"

"Uh..." Hinata groaned as she tried to get on her feet, only to realize that she was already standing. She blinked a couple times, before realizing that there was somebody in front of her. Somebody she knew very well. "Hanabi?"

"Finally!" the younger sister said, throwing her hands into the air. "What took you so long?"

"Sorry Hanabi-chan, I was asleep. My last fight left me a little exhasuted, but I'm almost back to my full strength," Hinata explained. She tilted her head, and looked at her little sister with worried eyes. "You seem agitated, it's something wrong?"

"Something wrong? Heh, you have NO idea."

Hanabi then explained Hinata Madara's mysterious appearance, how he wrecked the Second Division, and how Gai had to sacrifice himself in order to stop him.

"Gai-sensei is dead!? No!" she cried, covering her mouth with her hands. While she herself didn't have much relation with the green-clad Jonin save from that time she trained under him to increase her endurance and strength, that was her cousin's Jonin-sensei. "Neji-niisan and his teammates must be devastated."

"And that's not all," Hanabi cotnined. "I heard that they attacked Kumo's secret island. Naruto and the others managed to escape, but they're still out there. I hope you're well rested, because your boyfriend needs you. Like, right now."

Hinata nodded. "Yes. Thanks for telling me this, Hanabi-chan. In the meantime, stay safe. I sense that you aren't at your best either."

"Don't worry about me, sis. But thanks. Now go."

...

Hinata opened her eyes, and found herself in her room at the Hyuga estate. There wasn't much time to act. She quickly went to the kitchen and prepared herself a breakfast that would keep her going for a long time, which she ate as fast as she could.

Then, she raced back to her room, tossed her nightgown, and put on a thigh-length battle kimono, purple in color with dark blue trimming and tied with a white obi. Lastly, she put on a pair of blue knee-length boots, before grabbing her ninja tool pouch.

Once she was ready, she rushed out of her room, and once she was outside, she took off into the sky, flying upwards until she reached five hundred meters in altitude. Once she was high enough, she directed chakra to her eyes in order to increase the vision range of the Tenseigan.

"Come on Naruto-kun... where are you?" Hinata asked, as her eyes scanned kilometers and kilometers of land in front of her. She was starting to grow desperate, until she found a very powerful chakra signature, one that radiated with the strength of the sun. Accompanying him were other two signatures of similar strength, one she was familiar with, the other unknown. Her lips curved into a smile. "There you are!"

Wasting no more time, Hinata shot forward. Even at her fast speed, she'd take many hours to reach her boyfriend. She prayed that nothing would happen before she could arrive to his side.

...

Somewhere in the Forests of the North of the Land of Fire

Obito looked at the mass of green that extended before him. Among all that green, his preys awaited.

"You have evaded me for a long time, Naruto. This will be the last time I'll have to fight you. You and your fellow jinchuriki will fulfill your roles as the sacrifices that will allow a better world to exist," Obito said, as he leaped forward. "Let's go!"

Behind him, the reanimations of six former jinchuriki followed the Akatsuki, the tools Obito would use to catch his elusive foes.

Author's Note: I hope you enjoyed this chapter of relaxation, because it's the last one you're going to get until the epilogue. The pieces are set on the board, and the final part of the war is about to begin; Jiraiya and Tsunade are ready to face Orochimaru and put an end to the man they used to call friend and teammate, as well as to shut down the Edo Tense, while Obito is done relying on others and will try to hunt Naruto and the others himself. And of course, Madara is still out there, ready to rejoin the battle.

And thus Hinata rejoins the fight! I bet many of you were very eager to see her again, given that she's been absent for more than ten chapters. She will dive into the action soon, but not very soon. She's still far away from the main battlegrounds, and even if she can fly, she can't do so at supersonic speed.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

There's still one more chapter to wrap up the first half of the war, so to speak, and set up the pieces for the final battles, before the climax of the war, and thus the story, can finally begin.

And remember, don't forget to review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Moving Towards the Endgame

Author's Note: One last chapter to wrap everything up before we can dive towards the final battles. Enjoy:

Chapter 124:

Moving towards the Endgame

or

In with the cool stuff

The next morning, following Obito's orders, the remaining White Zetsu clones, a little less than half the initial numbers, launched a continent-wide attack on several areas in order to keep the Alliance occupied while the jinchuriki were vulnerable. Orochimaru also sent all the reanimations he had left to support the bulk of the Akatsuki army into the battlefield.

As the sun started to rise in the horizon, a new days of battles began. However, while few people knew it at the moment, this sunset also marked the end of the war, for this day of battles would be the last.

...

Ninja Alliance HQ

The Ninja Alliance HQ was in a state of chaos and confusion. Reports came in from the scouts, officers asked for orders, while Onoki tried to make a sense of everything that was going on while giving proper orders to make sure everything didn't fall apart.

The reason? Recent scout reports said that Akatsuki had launched multiple assaults at once on many points of the Land of Fire and the Land of Lightning, with a large amount of Zetsu and reanimations. Considering Obito's boast of having an army of one hundred thousand White Zetsu clones and the amount of Zetsu casualties among said clones, the numbers of this assault suggested that Akatsuki was sending everything they had left in one last desperate attack.

"... and tell the Mizukage to head south and stand her ground there. If she's in trouble, she can fall back and ask the Raikage's division for relief," Onoki ordered.

The ninja he just told his orders bowed his head, and disappeared from there, in order to transmit them.

"The fact that this multiple front assault came right after the secret island was attacked is no coincidence," Chiyo chimed in. "They want to stop us from retrieving the jinchuriki."

"I'm aware of that, but what else are we supposed to do?" Onoki said in exasperation. "Let those armies roam unopposed through the continent?"

"With some luck, the jinchuriki will meet with one of the divisions of the Land of Fire," Ao intervened. "Which would increase the power of said division while keeping the jinchuriki safe and monitored."

"We can't just depend on luck," Onoki argued.

"No, we can't. But what else can we do?" Chiyo replied. "The best we can do is direct the troops from here, and hope that they finish their fights quickly so they can move towards the jinchuriki's position."

"Do we know anything about Jiraiya and Tsunade?" Onoki asked.

"Nothing, sir. As far as we know, they must have reached the place where Orochimaru should be, if the information was accurate," Mabui said, as she checked a scroll. "Then again, we don't know how long it may take for them to force Orochimaru to undo the jutsu. Or if they can."

Onoki prayed that they would be successful. Getting rid of those undead was going to be critical if they wanted to win the war.

...

Land of Frost

"Poison Mist!"

Shizune exhaled a cloud of purple smoke at a group of incoming White Zetsu who were running into her. All of them were engulfed by the cloud, and they suffocated in a matter of seconds.

"I shouldn't waste my time with these small fries, but for some reason I keep attracting them like moths to a flame," the medic nin said. Thanks to her Sage Mode, she was able to sense every single one of the ninjas and enemies in the battlefield around her. She tried to find a suitable enemy, when she detected a powerful chakra signature coming at her. "Okay, this seems to be a much better opponent. Let's see who-"

"Wind Release: Razor Stream!"

Said enemy released a thin stream of super pressurized air at Shizune, moving it in an arc in order to slice her to bits. Shizune, however, already had a defense in place. She formed several hand seals.

"Sage Art: Water Release Maelstrom Shield!"

A torrent of water burst around the black haired medic-nin, which immediately began to spin around her forming a spiraling tower of water. The slicing attack hit the water column, but it failed to break through it. As the defensive jutsu receded, Shizune smiled at her opponent.

"Not bad, but as you can see, I- wait a minute..." Shizune said, as she could see now who the attacker was. A Konoha ninja in his thirties, with a pretty face -cracked skin and blackened eyes notwithstanding- and long, blue hair that fell down his back. "Uncle Dan?"

"Uncle...?" Dan replied, looking confused. He narrowed his eyes at the woman in front of him. "Wait... Shizune-chan? Is that you?"

"Yes, uncle, it's me," Shizune confirmed. She covered her mouth with her hands. "Oh Kami... I wasn't expecting to see you here... despite the fact that, with your reputation, I should have guessed that Orochimaru would have resurrected you."

"Oh goodness Shizune-chan... you've grown so much. You were nothing but a little girl the last time I saw you... it makes me happy to see that you've grown into such a pretty woman and skilled ninja."

Without further warning, Dan pulled out several shuriken and threw them at Shizune. Shizune's hands projected a pair of blue chakra blades as she activated her Chakra Scalpel jutsu, and used it to deflect all of them. While she was busy doing so, Dan weaved more seals for another jutsu.

"Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

Dan breathed a massive stream of fire towards his niece. However, Shizune was quick enough to jump backwards while making more hand seals for a counterattack.

"Water Release: Great Water Wall!"

Shizune expelled from her mouth a huge amount of water, forming a torrent that met Dan's fire attack in the middle. While both jutsu seemed to struggle against each other, in a matter of seconds Shizune's water attack overpowered Dan's fire jutsu, not only because of the elemental advantage, but also because of her jutsu carried more power thanks to Senjutsu.

When the gigantic wave was about to crush Dan, the blue haired man jumped into the air, letting the wave crash below him, while landing safely on the water.

"Incredible," Dan gushed. "I would never have imagined that you'd grow into such a powerful kunoichi. Not even Tsunade was that strong!"

"Thank you, uncle. That's Senjutsu to you," Shizune said. "And Tsunade-sama is still much stronger than I am."

"Wait, Senjutsu? How... how did you learn it?" Dan asked in shock, before he lunged at his niece, kunai in hand.

"It's... a very long story," Shizune replied, as she parried her uncle's blow, before pushing him back with a powerful kick. "One that I can't properly tell while I'm fighting for my life. As strong as I am now, I still need to be focused on the fight if I'm to beat a ninja of your caliber."

"I see," Dan conceded. "What about Tsunade then? Can you tell me what's she's doing?"

"Your death devastated her. Probably even more than me," Shizune revealed. "She spent a few years wandering around aimlessly with me as her only company, until she returned to Konoha for personal reasons. She then married Jiraiya, and had three kids, one adopted and the other two biological."

"Jiraiya? Heh... so that white haired pervert finally did it..." Dan said, sounding between happy and melancholic. On one hand, no one was happy to know that the woman you loved was with another man, and Dan was no exception. On the other hand, if Tsunade was happy, so was Dan.

Dan attacked once again, but his attack was oddly slower, which allowed Shizune to dodge easily. That moment, upon seeing the way her uncle was reacting, Shizune had a revelation, and remembered Jiraiya's tale about his fight with Minato and Kushina, how their spirits managed

"You'd like to know that I'm also married too, and have a couple of beautiful children," Shizune said sincerely. "If only you could meet them..."

"Really? That's-" suddenly Dan froze mid sentence, as if he was having a stroke, much to the medic-nin's confusion. Then, Dan's blue eyes turned white, and his mouth curved into an ugly smirk. "I'm sorry, but you aren't going to liberate his soul with some sob story!"

Shizune gasped upon hearing Dan speaking with Orochimaru's voice. So the snake had finally wised up and realized one of his justu's weak points. That means that Shizune had to defeat and seal her late uncle the old fashioned way.

...

Lightning Desert

Akatsuki had only sent a division made of five people in order to attack the Land of Lightning, and Rasa's Fourth Division had been dispatched to deal with it. Why a whole division for only a small squad, somebody may ask? The answer would be that those five people were the reanimations of five previous Kages: Second Mizukage Gengejutsu Hozuki, Second Tsuchikage Mu the Invisible Man, Third Raikage A, Third Kazekage Yoritomo, and lastly, the Second Hokage Tobirama Senju.

In front of the division stood Rasa, the Fourth Kazekage, as he watched the undead Kage quintet walking towards them at a steady pace.

"Here they come," Darui, who was a few steps behind the Kazekage, said. "How are we going to take them down, commander?"

Rasa used to wonder why the Kumo jonin seemed to shadow him like that. Sometimes even trying to strike up a friendly banter, as if pretending to bond. He found later that Darui was the current Raikage's right hand man, so being close to a Kage must be natural to him. Still, not that the grumpy Kazekage was going to complain, given that the Kumo swordsman's knowledge would be useful for this battle.

"For the time being, keep them occupied while my children enter Sage Mode," Rasa said, as he looked at his children, several rows back, sitting on the ground in the lotus position, drawing nature energy. "I know my predecessor and have a good idea how to fight him. I take you're familiar with the Third Raikage?"

"The Third Raikage was my Jonin-sensei," Darui revealed. "The only people who know him better than I do are his sons."

"Good. Then I suppose you'll be able to keep him at bay, at the very least," Rasa said, nodding. "The other three Kages are going to be a problem. We have information on them, but no one who had dealt with them in life. This battle won't end without a lot of casualties on our side."

"Maybe, but sadly wars aren't so dull as to leave with no deaths," Darui replied. His visible eye narrowed. "They're getting close."

"Yes. We better begin then," Rasa said.

The Fourth Kazekage made a single hand seal, kneeled down and placed both hands on the ground. Suddenly, a tsunami of golden sand made from the normal desert sand rose over the quintet of undead Kages, threatening to crush them under it.

However, the Third Kazekage took a step forward, and made several hand seals. From under his clothes emerged several clouds of iron sand, quickly growing in size in order to match Rasa's golden tsunami, and successfully blocking the attack.

"Golden sand... so you've been sent to deal with me, Rasa?" Yoritomo pondered, as he watched his successor in the distance, surrounded by ninjas of many villages. "Wonder how-"

"Aw come on, I can't believe that guy made me team up with this asshole again!" Gengetsu protested, cutting Yoritomo.

"The feeling's mutual, you eyebrow-less freak" Mu replied.

"Oh, the walking mummy is calling me a freak? Now that's rich!" Gengetsu replied with a mirthless laugh. "Hey, why don't you-"

"Enough you two!" the Third Raikage roared. "NONE of us are enjoying this situation, and your constant whining is only making it worse! Focus on making sure our opponents know how to fight and seal us."

"Well said. We can't afford letting Akatsuki win this battle, and we must do our part to ensure their defeat," Tobirama praised.

"You shut up as well!" the Third Raikage roared at the albino Senju. "This is your fault! Why the hell did you have to invent such a jutsu!?"

"I'm sorry to interrupt such an enlightening conversation, but our opponents are approaching," the Third Kazekage reminded them.

And indeed, the bodies of the five undead Kages began to move on their own once again. Mu took off into the sky, while the remaining earthbound Kages split in order to deal with a portion of the Fourth Division each.

The Third Raikage started to make hand seals. "Guys, you better have some good Wind Release users to counter this, or else you're going to be in a world of pain! Lightning Release: Black Tiger!"

Upon finishing the seal sequence, A brought his hands together, which began to crackle with pitch black electricity. A black lightning bolt shot from his hands, flying towards a large group of Allied ninjas. It grew in size as it moved forward, while taking the form of a black tiger with white stripes. The elemental tiger let out a roar as it prepared to pounce over its preys.

"Lightning Release: Black Panther!"

However, before the elemental tiger could lay a claw on any Allied ninjas, it was intercepted by an equally large panther also made of black lightning. The two electrical felines struggled against each other, until they destabilized and exploded into a mass of pitch black electricity. The Third Raikage was taken aback at first.

"Another Black Lightning user?" A asked in shock. "It can only be..."

"Sup, boss. Long time no see, huh?" Darui asked, as he landed in front of him, cleaver in hand. "Sorry for blocking your jutsu like that, but hey, can't let my comrades die, can I?"

"Darui," A said, and he smirked. "Good to see you boy. You seem in good health. And that Black Lightning jutsu was amazing! I knew I made the right choice by picking you as one of my students!"

"You flatter me, boss. Still, let's hope you don't find fighting me too dull," Darui said, as he started to make hand seals. "Storm Release: Laser Circus!"

Darui brought his hands together, a halo of light spreading around them, and shot from his fingers multiple beams. Said beams homed onto Darui's target, the former Raikage, all of them finding their mark, resulting in a chain of explosions. However, Darui didn't hold his breath for the result, and indeed, once the resulting clouds of smoke and dust dispelled, A was still there, completely unharmed as if the attack didn't have any effect.

"Tch. Just like I feared," Darui said, taking a step backwards, while placing his cleaver in a defensive stance.

"If you knew such an attack wasn't going to have any effect, why use it?" the Third Raikage asked.

"I still had to try," Darui replied.

That moment, A's body was engulfed by a cloak of blue chakra and lightning bolts. Then, in a fraction of a second, he was in front of Darui, and thrust his hand forward.

"Hell Stab: Four Fingers!"

Even if he was unable to match his speed, Darui was able to block the lethal attack in time with his lightning-enhanced cleaver, while also deflecting the finger jab aside, since taking the attack directly would have resulted in his weapon wrecked. Still, the hit produced a shockwave so powerful, it hurled the Kumo Jonin backwards several meters, falling on his back and dropping his cleaver in the process.

"Damn!" he cursed, as he tried to get back on his feet before his former leader would kill him then and there.

However, before the undead Raikage could continue his assault, a mass of kunai, shuriken and other weapons rained upon him, and while none of them caused any harm, they did hindered his charge. Darui then felt as if an invisible force pulled him backwards, but said force made him land on his feet.

"Hey, you okay, pal?" a new voice asked. Darui then saw that it wasn't an invisible force that had pulled him back, but a hooded Suna ninja who had used chakra threads to do so. There were a trio of puppets standing besides him.

"Yeah. Thank you, uh..."

"Kankuro," Kankuro said, before shooting another chakra thread at his fallen cleaver, and pulling it towards its owner, who caught it expertly. "You're quite brave for facing that guy alone. He looks to be quite the piece of work."

"I am one of the ninjas who know the Third Raikage the most, hence I must be among those to face him," Darui explained. "And you're right, 'piece of work' is quite the accurate term to describe-"

"Watch out!"

The two Jonin were alerted by a cry of warning as the Raikage charged forward, plowing through the mass of ninjas in front of him, either throwing them away or trampling over them, in his path towards Darui and Kankuro.

"Tamotsu, time to shine!" Kankuro said, as he motioned a hand, and one of his puppets, one carrying a large shield, jumped between them and the Raikage. "Mechanical Light Shield Block!"

The seals on the large shield started to glow with a blue light, as a shield of chakra spread outwards, covering not only the puppet, but also those close around it. The Raikage once again struck with a four-fingered jab. The blow carried so much force, the resulting shockwave almost made everybody else lose their balance, and the earth shook a little. But much to Darui's surprise, the puppet didn't break.

"What the...? What kind of puppet is able to withstand my strongest blows?" A asked in shock.

Kankuro smirked. "A puppet that's being controlled by a Sage!"

"Sage...?" Darui repeated, as a realization dawned upon him. "Oh, I see. I was told that after I was sealed by the Gold and Silver Brothers, a trio of Suna ninjas that were also Sages defeated them... this must be one of them... with his help, then we can defeat the Third Raikage with less casualties than I feared!" he thought.

With renewed resolve, Darui rejoined the battle against his former mentor.

...

Land of Fire, Southwest Part

Mei Terumi's Third Division had been assigned to intercept Akatsuki's forces into the zone that were heading to Konoha. Part of the reason behind their deployment was that the reanimations of the three remaining former Swordsmen of the Mist had been spotted there. And indeed, despite being reduced to just three and not even fighting together, they took no time into making themselves known with a high body count.

At least, Mangetsu was.

With a mere swing of Mangetsu's blade, a Konoha ninja and a Suna ninja both fell to the ground, dead, as a pool of their collective blood formed around them. The former leader of the Seven Swordsmen made it appear so easy, almost as if his enemies were untrained children. His fake Hiraekarei proved to be just as good as the real one still in Chojuro's hands.

He turned around, and saw a frightened Kiri ninja, his trembling hand gripping a kunai. He stumbled backwards when Mangetsu turned at him.

"You're a Kiri ninja, hence you must know who I am," Mangetsu replied. "In that case, you should try not to die uselessly against me."

The Kiri ninja seemed to heed Mangetsu's advice, and turned around to flee. However, Mangetsu aimed a finger at him.

"Sorry, you were too slow," Mangetsu said, as a blob of water started to form around the tip of his extended finger. "Water Release: Water Gun!"

"Water Release: Water Gun!"

Mangetsu fired a bullet of pressurized water from his fingertip at his target, but said water was intercepted by a second one, not as powerful, but enough to interrupt its trajectory, resulting in an explosion of water, forming a large puddle on the grassy ground.

That moment, Suigetsu, Sewing Needle in hand, landed in front of him.

"Hey there, bro," Suigetsu greeted him. "Ready for round two?"

"Suigetsu," Mangetsu said. "What are you doing?"

"Eh, felt like our previous battle ended in a rather inconclusive note," Suigetsu said, shrugging a little. "And you know how much I hate leaving a job half done."

"You didn't even get the job started. Despite having Chojuro's help, you were still unable to beat me and needed to call Ameyuri for help," Mangetsu said, as his body slipped into a fighting stance, his sword in front of his face. "You should leave and let somebody else with more suitable skills to deal with me fight me instead. I already hate how Orochimaru is forcing me to kill so many people, and I don't want one of them to be my brother and last member of our clan."

"My, my, I knew you were cocky, but even I know my limits," Suigetsu said, flashing his brother a toothy grin. "Okay, I admit you're right about that. But I'm somebody who learn from past battles, either be victories or defeats, and I've been preparing for this. I promise you this won't be like the last time."

"I pray you're right, Suigetsu," Mangetsu said.

And without further warning, the former leader of the Seven Swordsmen and head of the Hozuki Clan shot towards Suigetsu like a bullet, and swung his fake Hiramekarei at Suigetsu. The younger brother parried the blow with the Sewing Needle. That moment, Suigetsu released one hand from his sword's handle, curled it into a fist, and reared it back.

"Water Release: Water Arm Jutsu!"

Suigetsu's free arm swelled up with muscles just as he motioned it forward, punching Mangetsu's blade out of his hands, and then trying to impale his undead brother with the now free Sewing Needle. Mangetsu then jumped back, doing a backflip, while expertly catching the falling Hiramekarei with one hand. The sword started to glow as he channeled chakra through it.

"Hiramekarei: Release!"

Mangetsu threw his sword at Suigetsu, who ducked just in time, letting the sword pass above him. However, he then saw how the flying sword made a U-turn behind him as if it were a boomerang, ready to impale him as well.

"Water Release: Greater Water Gun Jutsu!"

Suigetsu started to run around, both to dodge the flying Hiramekarei and the large blobs of pressurized water his brother was shooting at him. While all the water blasts failed, one of them managed to throw him off balance, resulting in the younger brother tripping over his legs and falling to the ground facefirst. Just as Mangetsu recovered his sword. Suigetsu tried to get back on his feet, but wouldn't be fast enough to dodge Mangetsu's next move.

"I'm very sorry, brother," Mangetsu said, as he raised Hiramekarei over his head, glowing brighter as more chakra was being poured into it. "Hiramekarei: Release!"

Mangetsu slammed his sword into the ground, sending a blue underground shockwave, which looked like the glowing fin of a shark sticking out of the water surface, cracking the earth as it moved forward. As Suigetsu got to his feet, he hastily made several hand seals.

"Water Release: Water Wall!"

Suigetsu expelled a stream of water from his mouth at the incoming shockwave, causing the chakra and energy it was carrying to detonate prematurely. Still, Suigetsu was caught inside the explosion and was hurled backwards, the Sewing Needle blown out of his hands.

Even if Mangetsu could see that his brother had survived the explosion, he also saw that he had lost his weapon, and was now vulnerable.

"Foolish brother, why did you had to come and face me alone?" Mangetsu cried, as he rushed forward, ready to end Suigetsu's life. "I told the Sewing Needle wouldn't be of any help against me!"

"How about this sword, then?" Suigetsu replied.

Then, from within the cloud of smoke raised from the explosion, Suigetsu appeared, wielding the Splatter, much to the undead ninja's confusion, and used it to parry Mangetsu's incoming strike. Suigetsu smirked, as the edge of the Splatter started to glow with a white light.

"Boom," Suigetsu smirked.

Mangetsu was caught off guard by the sheer unexpectedness of his brother carrying a second sword on top of the Sewing Needle, and couldn't react in time, letting the explosion catch him, blowing Hiramekarei out of his hands while being blasted backwards, falling on his back.

"Kumori, now!" Suigetsu called.

Suddenly, several kunai with sealing tags attached to them rained from above, embedded themselves into Mangetsu's body. Kumori then landed behind Mangetsu, and made a single hand seal with one hand. The sealing tags started to glow, and the kunai started to crackle with electricity. As the electricity ran through Mangetsu's body, it started to degrade, turning it into something akin to jelly, making impossible for the undead swordsman to move anymore.

With a sigh of weariness, Suigetsu walked towards his brother. "I know I can be pretty cocky, but I even I know my limits. I wasn't going to fight you again alone, with a sword that proved ineffective. But I needed you to believe that."

"I... see," Mangetsu said. His lips curved into a small smile. "That was pretty clever of you, using a second sword."

"I got the idea from you, brother," Suigetsu admitted. "You mastered all seven swords, and I plan to do the same one day. And this battle seemed like a good opportunity to start."

"I'm glad that I inspired you so much, little brother," Mangetsu replied. "I'm sure you'll be an even better swordsman than I."

"That's my intention. Though, for the time being let's return this to its current owner," Suigetsu said, as he lazily tossed the Splatter towards Kumori. The masked ninja caught it with just one hand. "Thanks for the assist, pal. I owe you one."

"You owe me nothing," Kumori corrected him. "I'm also a Swordsman of the Mist, dealing with Mangetsu was as much as my responsibility as it was yours. However, given the special tie you had with him, we decided it was for the best for you to be the one to deal with him."

"Still, I appreciate that," Suigetsu replied.

"We need to look for a sealmaster in order to neutralize Mangetsu," Kumori said. "I presume you'll want to spend a few more moments with your brother in order to say goodbye and all that, so I'll be the one fetching the sealmaster then."

"I appreciate that too," Suigetsu said. "Heh, this almost makes up for all the time you made a fool of myself by making me think you were a mute."

"Worry not, Suigetsu," Kumori said, as he turned around. "I will find more ways to make a fool of yourself."

And with that, the masked swordsman vanished.

...

Back at the Lightning Desert, the fight against the reanimated Kages continued. While four of the Kages fought from the ground, Mu flew over the battlefield, bombarding the Allied Ninjas with his deadly jutsu.

"Dust Release: Atomic Dismantling Jutsu!"

Mu created a cube of white light between his hands, before said cube exploded into a beam of white light that fired towards a large group of Allied Ninjas. Seeing it was something they couldn't counter, they tried to run away, and smart enough, they fled in every possible direction. However, many ninjas were unable to avoid the beam of destruction, and their bodies were destroyed to a molecular level.

"Unless you call one of my successors, you won't be able to avoid my power! The only thing that can counter Dust Release is another user of Dust Release!" Mu warned from above, as he prepared to attack again.

"Sand Drizzle!"

However, before Mu could attack again, he was pelted by a storm of projectiles made of compressed sand. The Second Tsuchikage quickly flew away from the rain of deadly sand, his body slowly vanishing until it disappeared completely.

"Ah, that must be your famed Dust Bewildering Cover," a calm, stoic voice said. Mu could now see it was a redheaded boy with golden eyes and strange blue marks around them, floating on a cloud of sand. "That's where your moniker the 'Null Man' comes, doesn't it?"

"So you've done your homework, kid. You must be a very skilled ninja to catch me by surprise like that. Given the way you manipulate sand, are you from Suna?" Mu asked, as he floated around.

"Indeed. My name is Gaara, son of the Fourth Kazekage," Gaara said.

"Heh, the son of a Kage. Of course," Mu looked down, and saw Rasa, accompanied by other ninjas, fighting against the Third Kazekage, in a duel of gold versus iron. "Yes, I should have guessed it. However, being the son of a Kage doesn't mean that you can match a real Kage, kid. You should pick an opponent more suited to your experience."

As Mu talked, he quickly floated around Gaara in order to place himself behind the redhead. His Dust Bewildering Cover was the perfect camouflage. The boy couldn't see him, and even if he was a sensor, he couldn't sense his chakra either, since the jutsu erased his presence completely. All that could give away his position was sound, and he could use that to confuse Gaara even further.

"It isn't wise to underestimate an opponent, regardless of how young they may look. Yes, I am young, but, even if I don't want to sound arrogant, I can say I had surpassed my father, at least when it comes to sheer power," Gaara said.

"You're the one underestimating me, son, by being so confident in fighting me," the Tsuchikage said, as he quickly moved again.

"Perhaps you're right. Perhaps I'm being overconfident," Gaara conceded. "But then again, I am the only one suited to fight you. Not only I'm currently one of the few ninjas in our division that can meet you in an aerial battle, but among those, I'm the only one who can sense you."

Mu was tempted to call the redheaded child for his insolence, but a swift death would be a more appropriate punishment for such an insult. While he hated being forced to fight and kill fellow Iwa ninjas, he had no reservations ending the life of a Suna scum. Once he was behind him, he started to make hand seals for a Dust Release attack. His invisibility cloak dispelled as the jutsu took form.

"Did you sense this, then?" Mu shouted, as he prepared to fire. "Dust Rele-"

Before Mu could attack, "Gaara" burst into a torrent of sand, much to the Tsuchikage's confusion. The sand then wrapped around Mu, trapping him inside a cocoon, leaving his head exposed.

"WHAT? How...?" Mu asked, shocked, as he tried to futilely break free from the sand prison. "How did you know I was there?"

From the cloud of sand the Gaara Sand Clone was standing on, the real Gaara emerged.

"Easy. Sensors might not be able to detect you, but not even your famed camouflage can evade the enhanced sensing provided by Sage Mode," Gaara explained.

"Sage Mode...? Of course," the trapped Tsuchikage said in realization. "That explains those eyes, and the marks around them. Wait, then that means-"

"That I noticed that you used your Fission Jutsu, and that your duplicate is behind me as well, ready to strike me down?" Gaara asked, as another torrent of sand poured from the gourd on his back, covering an unseen shape, before it was revealed to be a second Mu. "Yes. I did notice."

Sealing tags carried by sand were slapped onto the sand cocoons. As Gaara activated them, chains of symbols started to wrap around the sand prisons.

"Heh, beaten by a mere child with such ease. Such humiliation... thank goodness I'm already dead..." Mu said with an unamused chuckle. "And thank goodness we didn't have to fight ninjas like you back in my time, other than that asshole Madara."

"And lucky for us, there are ninjas like me ready to fight against undesirables that threaten not just my village, but the world at large,"

Gaara said, as the seals finished taking effect, silencing Mu forever.
"One down, four more to go."

...

At the Land of Frost, Shizune continued her duel against her undead uncle. His irises kept that eerie white color as opposed to their usual blue hue. He also kept oddly silent, as "Uncle Dan? Uncle Dan, are you still there?" Shizune asked, as he traded kunai swipes with the blue haired man, to no response.

"Curses. Orochimaru must have suppressed his personality. Guess he realized the weakness of that jutsu of his."

"Earth Release: Sharp Rock Pillars!"

Dan slammed his hands into the ground, launching a row of stone spikes that protruded from underground towards Shizune, spreading in a cone. The medic-nin curled her fingers into a fist as she channeled chakra through it, covering it in a blue flame-like cloak of chakra. Shizune then threw a punch forward, shattering the incoming spikes into multiple rocky bits.

"The stone shattered under my fist, and I don't even feel pain. Senjutsu-enhanced strength is simply unreal... and I love it!" she thought with a smirk, as she looked at her held fist. "When this is over, I need to master Tsunade-sama's chakra-enhanced strength myself as well. It was a mistake giving up on it."

Dan, however, didn't give up, and made more hand seals, ready to reuse the remains of his previous jutsu to kill his niece.

"Earth Release: Earth Spine Grudge!"

The rock fragments still in the air were frozen in place, almost as if time had stopped for them. Then, after directing themselves towards Shizune, flew towards them at great speed. The medic-nin, however, already had the perfect defense, as she made more hand seals.

"Sage Art: Corrosive Cloud Armor!"

Shizune's body started to emit a thick purple steam that quickly formed into a purple cloud, covering the medic-nin completely, obscuring her from Dan's eyesight, as it slowly expanded outwards. The moment the rock bits flew into the cloud, they quickly decayed and eroded until they were nothing but dust, leaving her completely unharmed.

"You can't beat me when I'm using this jutsu. This cloud will corrode everything solid in a matter of seconds, meaning that you can't get close nor use Earth Release jutsu against me. And this poison in particular is fireproof, meaning that it also protects me from Fire and Lightning jutsu," Shizune explained. "There's nothing you can do to harm me."

"Ah, but that's where you're wrong, my dear Shizune," Dan replied, thought it was Orochimaru's voice that came from his mouth. The reanimation started to make hand seals.. "Because your beloved Uncle had a deadly jutsu that no cloud of poison will be able to stop. Spirit Transformation Jutsu!"

Once the chain of seals was complete, Dan's body started to float as it became translucent, completing its transformation into a spirit. Dan flew into the cloud of poison, which as expected, didn't have any effect on him, until he found the surprised Shizune, who could only yelp as Dan possessed her body. The cloud of poisonous gasses around her quickly dispelled as a result.

"You're dead, Shizune. The possession will-" But Orochimaru-as-Dan was interrupted when "Shizune's" body poofed, leaving Dan's spirit behind. "What the...?"

"Sakura, Karin, now!" Shizune called.

"Adamantine Sealing Chains!"

Several chakra chains shot from an unseen direction, and wrapped themselves around Dan. Despite being a spirit, the chains were able to touch him as if he was solid. And indeed, once the chains made contact, they bound Dan's chakra, forcing him to cancel the jutsu, making him solid again. That moment, Sakura landed in front of Dan, and started to make hand seals.

"Earth Release: Earth Style Prison!"

Suddenly, rocks of many sizes appeared above Dan, and started to land on top of him with loud crashes, until he was completely buried under the rubble. The moment the jutsu was finished, Karin quickly slapped several sealing tags around it. As the tags were activated, chains of symbols spread around the rocky prison, making sure that Dan wouldn't be able to either move or use chakra.

As Karin and Sakura cheered for their victory, Shizune walked towards the rock prison, and placed a hand on it, as if trying to feel the undead being inside it.

" You thought you could use my uncle's power against me, didn't you, Orochimaru? But after Tsunade, I was the worst opponent you could have directed Uncle Dan towards," Shizune thought. "It was great to see you again, Uncle Dan. Hope you can return to the peace of the afterlife that Orochimaru tore you from," she whispered, before turning around at her still celebrating students. "Come on girls, no time to celebrate! There are still plenty of enemies that need to be beaten, and ninjas that need to be healed!"

"Yes, sensei!" the two of them said at once, as they followed Shizune deeper into the battle.

...

Lightning Desert

The Second Mizukage, Gengetsu Hozuki, was surrounded by a multitude of ninjas from many villages. All around him were quite a lot of kunai, shuriken and other weapons that the Allied ninjas had thrown at him, to no effect, since they phased through him as if he were a ghost.

"Come on guys, I'm not even trying to fight back!" the exasperated Mizukage said, almost begging.

"And we're trying to kill you! But our attacks have no effect!" an Iwa ninja protested.

"Because I'm a genjutsu! In order to find the real me, you have to get rid of my Clam Summon!" the Mizukage pointed out.

"We tried to attack the clam and it didn't work either!" a Kiri kunoichi replied, just as exasperated.

"Because that's a genjutsu too!" the Mizukage yelled. "You have to get rid of... ugh, I don't know why I am even trying, you guys have to be the most useless, dumb lot of ninjas I had the displeasure of fight! And I've been married three times, so that should say something!"

Suddenly, a puddle of water mixed with oil started to form at Gengetsu's feet, while expanding outwards. As it did, bubbles started to emerge from the puddle, floating around the undead Mizukage. Gengetsu frowned upon seeing this.

"Guys, you better fight more seriously now, because this Orochimaru guy is going to make me go all out on you!" Gengetsu warned.

"We were fighting seriously!" an Ame ninja protested.

"Water Ballon Jutsu!"

The moment the balloons barreled towards the Allied ninjas, Temari landed between them and the incoming attack. Her normally teal eyes were golden, with small brown marks around them. Fast as lightning, she unfolded her War Fan and swung it once.

"Sage Art: Magnificent Sickle Weasel Jutsu!"

With a single swing of her fan, Temari created a gale force wind so powerful, it pushed all the incoming bubbles back, which detonated against the many rock pillars scattered around the area. However, the wind didn't have any effect on Gengetsu, as it didn't none of the other attacks.

"Hey, that's quite the arms you got here to blow such a wind!" Gengetsu complimented, as he gave Temari a thumbs up. "But no matter how hard you can blow, you won't be able to harm me until you defeat my Clam Summon, like I've been saying to these idiots all the time!"

"We've been trying to destroy the clam, but that's a genjutsu too!" a Konoha ninja repeated.

Temari nodded, closed her eyes, and expanded her senses. It took her only a few seconds to locate the source of chakra that was creating the insidious genjutsu. The sand blond kunoichi gestured towards a seemingly empty area. "There's the clam! Aim your attacks towards that spot!"

Temari's orders were followed by a moments of silence, as the Allied ninjas hesitated to attack that seemingly empty spot. They already made fool of themselves fighting the elusive Mizukage, and they didn't want to increase said ridicule. Some Suna ninjas, however, decided to trust the daughter of their Kazekage.

"Come on guys, let's do what Temari-sama asked!" a Suna ninja said.

The Suna ninjas started to throw kunai, shuriken, and ninjutsu towards the seemingly empty area. This prompted the rest of the ninjas of the group to follow their lead. And, to their surprise, their attacks connected with some sort of invisible mass. The invisible being quickly became visible, revealing Gengetsu's Clam summon, its shell starting to break under the pressure of the attacks, until it couldn't take it anymore, and it was forced to cancel the summon.

The fake clam and Gengetsu disappeared instantly, and the real Gengetsu was made visible. And, much to their confusion and irritation, started to clap.

"Not bad, guys, definitely not bad! You needed help from this extraordinary lass just to beat my clam, but hey, progress!" he cheered. "So let's hope you guys are ready, because the hard part of the fight comes now!"

"Wait... that was the easy part?" a Taki ninja asked, both astonished and a little frightened.

"Easy or hard, we won't give up until this guy is sealed! Come on, you guys won't fall prey to his trickery anymore as I'm with you!" Temari roused, her voice booming with confidence and boldness. "Now, let's show these Kages of past times what our generation has to offer!"

The group of ninjas around Temari cheered in response, as they prepared to attack the undead Mizukage at once.

...

Forests of the Land of Fire, Northeast zone

After a full of night of sleep, the jinchuriki trio were now completely rested and ready for the battle to come. By using Sage Mode, Naruto and Fu had noticed that there were many battles taking place at once. They deduced that Akatsuki must be going all out in order to keep the Alliance busy in order to catch them.

Not that they were going to let such a thing happen.

They simply decided to move towards the one who was the closest, and with their help, end that battle in no time. Then, they'd move towards another battleground, and repeat the process. They'd do that as many times as necessary, until every single reanimation and every single White Zetsu clone was destroyed.

Unfortunately, no plan ever survived contact with the enemy, and this one wasn't going to be an exception.

Naruto and Killer B were jumping from one tree branch to another, while Fu flew a few meters above them. Then, without any warning, Naruto suddenly stopped on his tracks, prompting his fellow jinchuriki to stop as well.

"What's wrong, Naruto, why did you stop?" Killer B asked. "Did you sense any enemies that are about to drop?"

"Yeah, I'm sensing a powerful source of negative emotions... right there!" Naruto said, pointing forward.

And indeed, that very moment, a spiraling vortex formed in front of them, and from said vortex, Obito Uchiha emerged, landed on a large branch in front of them. The jinchuriki trio quickly adopted fighting stances.

"Hello there, Naruto," Obito greeted the blond jinchuriki.

"So after so many days of war, you finally show up," Naruto said. "Let me guess, do you plan to capture us yourself, after so many failed attempts?"

"Such a sharp observation," Obito said in a mock praising tone. "But yes. You know what they said, if you want something done, you should do it yourself. Well, this is it. I'm done delegating. You and your friends are coming with me, whether you like it or not."

"And you think you can beat the three of us, all on your own?" Killer B asked. "Ha! Now that's quite an ego overblown!"

"Yeah, you might have a Rinnegan now, but Naruto here already has experience fighting against Rinnegan users," Fu said, placing a hand on Naruto's shoulder. "Plus, like B-sensei said, he has us helping him."

Obito laughed disdainfully at Killer B and Fu's words. "My chances are much better than you think, you trio of fools. And who said I was going to fight the three of you alone? Summoning Jutsu!"

Before the jinchuriki could react, Obito slammed his palm into the tree branch, producing a large burst of smoke. Naruto could immediately sense six more presences appearing out of nowhere. A cold chill ran down his spine.

When the cloud of smoke vanished, perched on several branches around Obito were six reanimations, three of them he knew, and other three that were unknown to him. All six of them, however, had a Sharingan and a Rinnegan on each of their eye sockets instead of their usual eyes.

"Yagura... Uzakata... Roshii," Naruto said, as he looked at the undead forms of the two jinchuriki he failed to save from Akatsuki.

"Hello, Naruto," Yagura greeted him, smiling warmly. "We meet again. It's so unfortunate that we must do so again as enemies. It seems that, even if my mind is my own, my body is now the puppet of Akatsuki."

"Hey Naruto! Good to see that you're still alive!" Roshii said, sounding a little relieved.

"Yes, and not only you," Uzakata added. "Even if I don't know your friends, I'm glad that at least some of us still remain."

Aside from Uzakata and Roshii, there was a very tall and broad man wearing a heavy red armor, a thin old man with a long, white beard and a moustache that wore robes of a monk, and lastly, a blond woman wearing a Kumogakure ninja uniform. Given the way she and Killer B were eying each other, it's obvious they knew the other.

"Yugito-chan," Killer B said in an oddly neutral tone, an unnerving contrast with his usual upbeat attitude.

"B! Thank goodness you're still alive," the woman, Yugito, said.
"Listen, you can't let this guys get their hands on you, you hear me?"

"Behold, my Six Paths Undead Jinchuriki," Obito announced, spreading his arms in a dramatic fashion. "Immortal, indestructible warriors with full access to the power of the Tailed Beasts. They will be the ones to finally put you annoying lot down! Now attack, my minions! Show them your power!"

Without further ado, the six undead jinchuriki quickly leaped towards their living counterparts, while Naruto, Fu and B prepared for yet another intense battle.

...

Mountain Graveyard, Outside Akatsuki's Lair

Jiraiya and Tsunade stood in front of a vast forest that spread into the horizon. Across said forest, there were gigantic bones of all kinds, such as skulls, ribcages, legs, arms and more, scattered around, most of them larger than the trees themselves. The blond Sannin let out a whistle.

"Well, no wonder this place is called a graveyard. Look at those bones," Tsunade pointed out.

"Rather fitting that Akatsuki choose a place with such an evil aesthetic for their secret base," Jiraiya said, chuckling a little.

However, the gigantic bones weren't the reason the two of them where there. A couple kilometers in front of their position, they could see a lone, massive mountain towering above both the forest and the giant bones. According to the information provided by the clone of their daughter, Orochimaru was somewhere inside that mountain.

"Alright, now time to see if that girl lied to us or not," Tsunade said, as she bit her thumb, as so did her husband. Then, the two of them made the same sequence of hand seals.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

The two of them slammed a hand into the ground, producing a small burst of smoke each. From each cloud of smoke, a creature emerged: in front of Jiraiya was the Toad Sage Fukasaku, while in front of Tsunade was a mini-clone of Katsuyu. The two summons looked around, taking a minute or two to see the scenery around them, as well as the lack of immediate enemies.

"So, I take it is time, then?" Fukasaku asked.

"We hope, at the very least," Jiraiya said.

"First, we need to check if Orochimaru is really there," Tsunade added.

"Understood, Tsunade-sama," Katsuyu said.

Both summons jumped onto their respective summoners' shoulders, and began to gather nature energy and funnel it into them. After a couple minutes, Sage Mode manifested in both of them in the form of golden eyes, and red marks around Jiraiya's eyes as well as teal blue marks around Tsunade's. They expanded their senses, and immediately got an answer to their question.

"I sense Orochimaru there," Jiraiya said.

"Me too," Tsunade confirmed. "Him and nobody else."

"You think this might be a trap, Tsunade-sama?" Katsuyu asked.

"Orochimaru letting us know about his location in order to have the Rinnegan within reach isn't something that we can't rule out," the Slug Princess admitted. "But we have no other options."

"Plus, if there was a trap, I'm sure the bastard would have more people with him," Jiraiya added. "And either he's very confident about his chances, or he is able to shield people from even the senses of a Sage."

"Okay, enough talking. Time to go there and give that asshole the pounding he deserves," Tsunade asked.

Jiraiya smirked. "You took that out of my mouth."

"No matter how hard the battle becomes, we'll be there with you the whole time," Fukasaku reassured.

"We will fight alongside you as much as possible," Katsuyu added.

Jiraiya and Tsunade nodded, and dashed forward, ready to fight for the final time the man they once called their friend and teammate.

Once the day was over, there would be at least one Sannin less in the world.

Author's Note: If the previous chapter was the last breather of the story, this chapter was the last "lower deck" chapter, so to speak. To wrap up the first half of the war, and squeeze a couple more battles I wanted to write, like Shizune vs Dan or the Suigetsu vs Mangetsu rematch. From the next chapter onwards, all the battles will be headed by the main characters (Naruto, Hinata, Fu, Killer B, Jiraiya and Tsunade) and will stay that way until the very end. As much as I love the secondary and supporting characters their time to shine, I think they already had enough.

That means that no, I won't plan to write the resolution of the Five Kage Battle. I know many of you wanted to see it, but I really didn't feel in the mood to write it, plus it would only drag the pace of the story even more (since it was going to be VERY long) .

And hell, I even included it because making it happen entirely offscreen would have been a bit too much of a disservice. Because trust me, there were many other fights that I had planned but I was forced to scrap because I didn't know where to insert them, and at this point the story demanded I got on with the main plot already. One of those battles would have involved Kuninotoko Uzumaki, which I would have used to air once again what I think of authors that turn the Uzumakis into a clan of complete Gary Stus. Another one would have involved Kurenai fighting her undead dad, and showing him the kickass kunoichi she had become, and that she's worth more than a baby factory ("you have to live long enough to give me a grandkid", seriously?).

Oh well, no point in dwelling on that.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Next week, Jiraiya and Tsunade will face Orochimaru for the final time. How will the battle unfurl? In the meantime, don't forget to leave a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Legendary Sannin

Author's Note: Well, here it is, the fight so many of you have been waiting for. Hope it meets your expectations:

Chapter 125:

Jiraiya, Tsunade and Orochimaru: the Legendary Sannin

or

Farewell to a former friend

Mountain Graveyard, Akatsuki Lair

When the wall behind him was blown to pieces from the other side, Orochimaru barely even reacted. He calmly stood up, and turned around to see the newcomers. Despite the ensuing cloud of dust, Orochimaru was able to tell who the newcomers were, since he could identify them by their chakra -and his chakra sensing had gotten especially good thanks to some of the DNA strands he had spliced with his own-. This brought a smile to his face.

"Well, well, well... if it isn't my old teammates, coming to pay me a visit," Orochimaru said, grinning. "Hello, Jiraiya, Tsunade. It's been a while since the last time I saw you. How have you been?"

"Small talk? Really?" Jiraiya asked, unimpressed. "Come on Orochimaru, your fake politeness is grating. Let's just get down to the business already."

"Always the impatient one, Jiraiya," Orochimaru said, shaking his head, before his yellow eyes rested on Tsunade. "I'm sure Tsunade will be more likely to catch up with me."

"Catching up? No. But I do plan to make you catch my fist with your face," Tsunade threatened. "I owe you one for kidnapping our children several years ago. And then cloning them like that. Not to mention using that horrible jutsu to bring my grandfather and granduncle as your undead slaves. Plus all the people you have indirectly killed."

"We also know how you killed Sarutobi-sensei when you attacked the Genbu Island," Jiraiya added.

"As well as Tenzo, our children's Jonin-sensei," Tsunade said, clenching her fist. While she hardly knew the man, she knew Kaida and Hagane would be devastated once they learned of his demise.

"So no, Orochimaru, as you can see, there won't be small talk. Nor we will try to convince you to change your evil ways or surrender peacefully," Jiraiya continued. "You won't live to see another tomorrow. We will make sure of it."

Orochimaru chuckled darkly. "I'm almost impressed, Jiraiya. And here I thought that Konoha was all about making friends and taking the higher road. It seems that you guys finally learned."

"We're ninjas, Orochimaru. We will kill if the situation demands it," Tsunade said.

"Though, have you considered that killing me won't cancel Impure World Resurrection?" Orochimaru asked. "If you kill me and the jutsu is still active, the reanimations will carry the last orders I give them."

"Let us worry about that, you slimy bastard," Jiraiya angrily said. "You aren't getting out of here alive. You will die by our hands."

"It seems you guys really are out for my blood. Then again, it's understandable, given your list of grievances against me," Orochimaru admitted. "However, before we begin, a question: how did you find this place?"

"A good ninja doesn't reveal their secrets to the enemy, Orochimaru," Jiraiya said, as he took a step forward. "You will die without having such knowledge."

"It was Hebiko, wasn't it?" Orochimaru asked, a scowl developing on his face. "I know about her betrayal, Kabuto told me about her. But I didn't know she'd go as far as to help my enemies. After rising her from infancy and turning her into a ninja most people would kill to be, this is how she thanks me. Ungrateful brat."

"Maybe you shouldn't have abandoned her brother when it wasn't convenient," Tsunade fired back. "As a parent, you leave a lot to be desired."

"Oh, right," Orochimaru said, seemingly forgetting about Hebimaru's existence. "So that's why she went to help you, right? She wanted her dear brother back. Now it makes sense."

"You developed a penchant for discarding people the moment they no longer are of any use," Tsunade said. "And sweet irony, said attitude lead you to your downfall."

"Downfall?" Orochimaru repeated, before laughing a bit. "Oh no. All what my treacherous daughter accomplished was to give me what I sought for such a long time. You see, the reason I regretably had to return to Obito's side and pledge my help to his silly cause was because he promised me a Rinnegan in return. More specifically, the Rinnegan you're wielding in your eye socket under that piece of cloth, Tsunade."

This made the blond Sannin to adopt a defensive stance.

"But now... you saved me a lot of trouble by bringing that eye to me, Tsunade," Orochimaru said, as his lips curved into a maniacal grin. "To show you that I'm not ungrateful, I'll make sure your death is quick and painless!"

"Enough talking! I'm tired of seeing your ugly mug and hearing your odious voice!" Tsunade said, raising an open hand at her former teammate. "Bansho Ten'in!"

Suddenly, as if yanked by an invisible hand, a great force pulled Orochimaru towards Tsunade's open hand, whose fingers wrapped around the black haired man's neck the moment he was within reach. She then moved her other hand towards the top of Orochimaru's head.

"Now-"

But before Tsunade could finish, "Orochimaru" burst into a mass of large snakes that quickly wrapped around Tsunade's body.

"Ack-"

"Tsunade-sama!" the Katsuyu mini-clone cried, as she started to spray acid around the snakes from her mouth.

Between Katsuyu's acid and Tsunade's own strength, they were able to get the snakes away from her, who quickly scurried away, hiding behind the many stone columns.

"Nice way getting rid of my surprise attack. Then again, I shouldn't have expect that a Sage like yourself would have fallen to that," Orochimaru's voice said. "Hmmmmmm... two Sages versus little old me... yes, I'd say the deck isn't stacked in my favor, isn't it?"

"You must be delirious if you think we're going to let you escape after how much it took us to find you," Jiraiya replied, as he tried to sense which of the snakes was the real Orochimaru.

"Hide? Weren't you hearing me, Jiraiya? Why should I hide, when everything I want is on this very cave?" Orochimaru asked, as he emerged from under the mouth of one of the snakes. "Do you think your chances against me are so good? Because Rinnegan or not, underestimating me would be a very poor choice."

Orochimaru completely emerged from the snake's mouth, wearing nothing from the waist up. His pale skin was now covered in what appeared to be reptilian scales, and several horns grew at the side of his head., as the four snakes seamlessly attached to his back hissed angrily at the two Konoha ninja. The Snake Sannin finally got up, and as his yellow eyes turned the red of the Sharingan, he flexed his chakra, and the entire cave shook .

"What the...?" Jiraiya asked, as he almost lost his balance.

"Yes, I'm sensing it too! His body is saturated with nature energy!" Fukasaku said. "He's a Sage too!"

"Ah yes, Senjutsu... that art always evaded my skill... but alas, I finally found the way to channel nature energy. And it's all thanks to your son, Jiraiya, Tsunade. I'm sure the poor boy is overshadowed by his sister's because of her Bloodline Limit, but being able to draw nature energy and mix it with your own chakra without any risk... plus being able to do it while you move... kukuku, let's say that I don't feel like I'm going to lose this battle."

"So you're a Sage too. So what? We're still going to pound you into bloody paste," Tsunade said.

"You don't get it, Tsunade. Nature energy isn't merely my ally. We're as one now. And that makes me a better Sage than you or sorry husband can hope to be," Orochimaru boasted, as he started to make hand seals. "But let my actions speak for me rather than my words! I have your daughter to thank for this ability! Wood Release: Deep Forest Emergence!"

The entire cave started to shake once again as large wooden roots emerged from underground and lunged at the pair of married Sannin. Jiraiya, however, was already preparing a counterattack.

"Pa, I need some oil!" Jiraiya asked, as he also started to make hand seals.

"You got it, Jiraiya-chan!" Fukasaku replied, as his dewlap swolled up, before releasing a deceptively large cone of oil at the incoming roots.

"Fire Release: Toad Oil Flame Bullet!"

Taking a deep breath, Jiraiya exhaled a huge stream of flames his mouth, which ignited the oil Fukasaku was expelling, resulting in a raging inferno that quickly burned the cimong roots to a crisp.

Orochimaru merely chuckled at his initial attack being countered, and made more hand seals. "Fire, huh? Alright then, let's fight fire with fire! Lava Release: Melting Apparition Jutsu!"

Orochimaru's cheeks puffed as burning lava build inside them, before releasing a huge cone of molten earth at the two Sannin. Tsunade, however, merely took a step forward and raised a single hand. From said hand, a barrier of white light was projected.

"Gakido!"

The moment the wave of molten earth touched Tsunade's barrier, it was quickly absorbed into it, before it was converted into pure chakra and funneled into the blond Sannin's body. Tsunade closed her fist, extinguishing the light produced by her barrier once she had absorbed the jutsu.

"So, aside from our children's DNA, you also got a bunch of Bloodline Limits there, huh?" Tsunade asked, as she placed a hand on her hip. "Well, as you just saw, all those fancy techniques aren't going to do shit against me, as long as I have the ability to absorb ninjutsu."

Orochimaru forced a smile. "So kind of you to make that clear," Orochimaru replied, as he formed three hand seals in quick succession, while his eyes were sealed shut and his ears closed completely. "Try absorbing this then! Sage Art: White Rage Jutsu!"

From Orochimaru's mouth emerged a chakra construct that looked like a serpentine dragon, with a solid looking, purple orb in one of its claws. The dragon then coiled itself around the orb, exploding into a blast of blinding light and an extremely loud and high pitched screech. The effect was immediate, and Jiraiya and Tsunade fell to their knees, their eyes closed, hurt by the bright flash, while gripping their pained ears, their summoned animals being on a similar predicament. With his enemies incapacitated, Orochimaru took the chance to strike.

"Sword of Kusanagi!" as a snake crawled from inside his mouth, the snake regurgitated the legendary sword, which the Snake Sannin was quick to grasp. "Thanks to my body modifications, I can completely seal my eyes and ears shut, thus becoming immune to the effects of the White Rage Jutsu, while I can use the sensing granting by Sage Mode to keep track of Jiraiya and Tsunade. Now, to gut Tsunade like a fish before claiming my prize!"

However, being as fixated as he was on Tsunade, Orochimaru didn't notice that, despite the pain, Jiraiya was forcing himself to make hand seals.

"Needle Jizo!"

Jiraiya's hair quickly grew in size and volume, and wrapped itself around both himself and Tsunade, forming a protective barrier, before the hair facing outward took the shape of very hard spikes, forcing Orochimaru to stop the attack.

"You're forgetting that we're also Sages, and thus we can't sense your movements!" Jiraiya reminded him, before making another hand seal. "And as long as I'm here, you won't put a finger on my wife! Needle Hell!"

Jiraiya then fired a multitude of hardened hair needles in every direction, forcing Orochimaru to jump backwards. Thanks to his Sharingan, he was able to predict the trajectory of the white needles flying at him, allowing him to dodge most of them and parry with his sword those he couldn't.

However, that attack served to keep Orochimaru busy while Tsunade healed their eyes and ears. Once the two of them were recovered, Jiraiya undid the protective hair barrier, allowing Tsunade to leap towards the retreating Snake Sannin. She generated a black chakra rod from one of her palms, and channeling chakra through it in order to increase its power, she delivered a mighty swing at Orochimaru.

Orochimaru managed to parry it in time, his sword resisting as he expected, but the Konoha traitor was unexpectedly hurt by the sheer energy that Tsunade's blow carried. Undeterred, Tsunade attacked again, but this time Orochimaru focused on redirecting her attacks to the sides rather than parrying them in full. Tsunade surpassed him in sheer power, but he was much better than her when it came to armed combat, and he was going to take advantage of that.

And indeed, during their exchange, Tsunade fumbled a swipe, leaving her completely wide open. Orochimaru's lips curved into a predatory grin, as he thrust his sword forward.

"You Lose Tsuna-"

However, before Orochimaru's cold metal could pierce Tsunade's flesh, Fukasaku's prehensile tongue wrapped around her waist, pulling her backwards. Given the lack of surprise on the blond Sannin's face, she was clearly expecting that move. And as Tsunade was moved to the back, Orochimaru's Sharingan saw how Jiraiya rushed towards him, with one of his hands holding a large sphere of chakra.

"Big Ball Rasengan!"

Having no time to dodge, all what Orochimaru could do was put his sword between himself and the large sphere of destruction Jiraiya was thrusting in his direction. The sword provided of little protection, as when the Rasengan exploded, it blasted the sword out of his hands while lunging the Snake Sannin crashing against the wall of the opposite side of the cavern, making the whole place rumble.

"You got a nice hit there," Tsunade praised, as he walked towards her husband. "You think that got him?"

"Not even close," Jiraiya said with a chuckle, as Fukasaku shivered. "We're going to need more than that to bring him down for sure. But that definitely help-ug, Pa? Is everything okay?"

"Don't you guys feel it's getting a little chilly in here?" the toad sage asked, hugging himself.

The moment he mentioned it, the two Sannin realized that he was right, and the temperature was rapidly falling. Then, they noticed a spike of chakra coming from Orochimaru, and much to their surprise, a sheet of ice started to spread around the entire cavern.

"What the... Ice Release!?" Jiraiya asked in shock. "When did he get his hands on Ice Release!?"

"Getting a sample of the Yuki boy's DNA was laughably easy, Jiraiya," Orochimaru laughed, as he slid on the icy floor towards the two Sannin.

Two additional pair of arms grown under Tsunade's arms, and opened up several compartments, firing a multitude of missiles from them. Orochimaru, however, was able to dodge all of them with the help of the icy floor. He then jumped into the air while making several hand seals.

"Lightning Release: Snake Thunder!"

One of the snakes on Orochimaru's back started to crackle with yellow electricity, before it opened its jaws, releasing a snake-shaped lightning bolt towards the blond Sannin. Tsunade, however, already moved to counter it, rising her two original arms towards the incoming attack.

"Gakido!"

Once again, Tsunade created a ninjutsu-absorbing barrier to protect herself. However, the snake-shaped electric bolt changed its course mid air, and forked downwards, striking the ice instead. The ice helped spread the electricity, zapping Tsunade and Jiraiya.

"You're mine!" Orochimaru said, as he prepared to strike Tsunade.

However, Tsunade wasn't down for the count, as she managed to extend one arm.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Once again, Orochimaru was blown away backwards by a powerful gravitational force, sending him crashing against a frozen stone pillar, which broke upon impact, making the cavern shake again. A few rocks and stalagmites fell from the roof.

"Jiraiya, you okay?" Tsunade asked, as she placed a hand on her shoulder, and began to heal him.

"I'll live," the white haired Sannin replied. "Thanks, good save there."

"Come on, we need to continue attacking. We can't let him drive us into fighting defensively," Tsunade urged,

There was another spike of chakra, and Orochimaru burst from the pile of frozen rocks he had been buried under, the force of his chakra sending the rocks flying away into every direction, before he slammed both hands into the ground.

"Ice Release: Certain Kill Ice Spears!"

Rows of gigantic frozen spikes shoot out from the ground towards the two Konoha Sannin. However, before they could impale them, Tsunade took a step forward and raised a hand, calling for the most versatile ability of the Rinnegan.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Releasing yet another repulsive shockwave, the ice spears shattered like weak glass, turning into thousands of ice shards. However, Orochimaru was already expecting that, and was already weaving more hand seals even before Tsunade destroyed his ice attack.

"I know you can't use that jutsu again until five seconds pass! Let's see if you can survive this until then!" Orochimaru laughed. "Ice Release: Thousand Flying Ice Needles of Death!"

The moment he finished the seal chain, the thousands of ice shards froze mid air as if time stopped for them. Then, they all pointed towards Tsunade, and lunged at her at insane speed. Jiraiya, however, stepped once again to shield his wife from harm.

"And you're forgetting that she isn't alone!" Jiraiya said, as he finished his own chain of seals. "Sage Art: Fire release Big Flame Bullet!"

Jiraiya expelled a massive cone of roaring flames, completely engulfing the hundreds of ice shards coming towards them, melting them almost instantly before they had the chance to touch them, as well as melting the sheet of ice that covered the floor of the cavern. However, there was something Jiraiya's admittedly impressive fire jutsu was unable to melt: the Kusanagi blade, which, as if being pulled by an invisible force, emerged from behind the wall of flames and drove itself into Tsunade's gut.

Tsunade was able to react in time and grabbed the sword by its blade in order to stop it, but she didn't break its momentum completely, and it managed to bury itself into her stomach. Tsunade choked out blood.

"Tsunade!" Jiraiya yelled.

"Tsunade-sama!" Katsuyu shouted.

"I'm... I'm okay!" Tsunade said, as she forced the legendary sword out of her gut, before tossing it away. "I can heal myself! Just... keep him busy while I do so!"

"Let me help you healing your wounds," Katsuyu offered.

"Got it!" Jiraiya said, as he took a couple step forward, in order to face Orochimaru. Right now, he needed to push him away from Tsunade while she healed from such a sneaky attack.

Orochimaru grinned, and extended his hand. As if the sword had life of its own, it floated mid air, before it shot back towards the Sanke Sannin, whose fingers firmly wrapped themselves around the handle, before pointing the blade towards Jiraiya menacingly.

"Do you plan to face me alone, Jiraiya? I already proved to be the better of the two in the past, and that was before becoming what I am now," Orochimaru boasted. "Without a Rinnegan wielder to help you, you have no chances to survive against me."

"Keep underestimating me, let's see how good it does to you," Jiraiya fired back.

Orochimaru chuckled. "Fine then. Let's fight in a way I know it's far from your favorite: in close quarters!"

Kusanagi in hand, Orochimaru basically blitzed towards Jiraiya, ready to impale his hated enemy like he did with Tsunade. Jiraiya, however, was faster than he anticipated, and prepared a counter attack.

"Needle Jizo!"

Once again, Jiraiya's size grew in size and volume, while also taking the form of sharp spikes that were as hard as iron. The Toad Sage shook his head, throwing his weaponized white mane at the incoming enemy. Orochimaru sidestepped and prepared to strike, but unfortunately, Fukasaku wasn't going to make the fight any easier.

"Sage Art: Toad Oil!"

Once again, Fukasaku expelled a huge stream of oil from his mouth, but he didn't aim it at the Snake Sannin, but at the ground below. Orochimaru immediately caught wind of what the small, elderly toad was planning, and broke his dash, opting instead to jump back and throw his sword at him. Jiraiya gritted his teeth.

"He knows I can't afford to dodge, or else that sword will fly towards Tsunade," thanks to his sensing, Jiraiya could tell Tsunade was still healing her wounds. She was almost done, but needed a few more seconds. "Let's try deflecting it then!"

Jiraiya held out a hand and formed a Rasengan as fast as he was able to, before driving the chakra sphere onto the incoming sword, which detonated the Rasengan upon piercing it. The resulting explosion harmed Jiraiya's hand and forearm a little, but he was able to deflect the sword blow, sending it flying away.

However, as Jiraiya did this, Orochimaru took advantage of his predicament and prepared to attack again. He bent over and rested his hands on the ground, while the four snakes on his back hissed angrily at the Toad Sannin. The snakes opened their jaws, and more snakes emerged from it. Said snakes also opened their jaws, releasing even more and more snakes. Soon, Orochimaru was buried under a pile of a truly staggering number of snakes, before all of them who lunged at Jiraiya, ready to sink their venomous fangs onto his flesh.

"Shit!" Jiraiya cursed, as he jumped back while wrapping himself with his chakra-enhanced mane. And while many of the snakes crashed against his spiked barrier, he saw that just as many passed by him and went after Tsunade, who was still healing herself. Panicking, Jiraiya's hands weaved hand seals as fast as he could. "Earth Release: Multiple Earth Style Wall!"

Jiraiya slammed both hands onto the ground, and several walls of rock and earth sprouted around Tsunade, protecting her from the mass of snakes

"And done! Thanks for the help, Jiraiya! Now better get out of the way!" Tsunade warned from within her rock shelter.

Several whistles alerted Jiraiya of what Tsunade was about to do, as a cluster of missiles flew out of the makeshift shelter. Jiraiya quickly jumped towards the shelter, while missiles rained upon the mass of snakes that covered the ground around them. Despite the number of snakes destroyed this way, there were many of them left. Tsunade then jumped out of the shelter, and scanned the area.

"Hey, where's Orochimaru?" the slug Sannin asked.

"I don't know, I can't sense him. His chakra is all around the place," Jiraiya replied.

"He must be using the snakes in order to hide his position!" Fukasaku pointed out.

"How so clever of you!" Orochimaru's voice said.

Suddenly, one of the snakes quickly tripled in size as it lunged at Tsunade. The enlarged snake opened its jaws, and Orochimaru crawled from under them, ready to strike Tsunade down. However, the Slug Princess was faster in the draw, and quickly raised a hand towards him.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Orochimaru was blasted backwards. However, as he did, another snake came from his mouth, lunging towards Tsunade again. Jiraiya was able to intercept it by wrapping his arms around them, but the snake regurgitated yet another Orochimaru, who lunged once again at Tsunade, while the snake wrapped its body around Jiraiya.

Raising a hand, the blade of Kusanagi flew back to it, and prepared to strike his former teammate.

Tsunade managed to generate another black chakra rod from her palm just in time to parry the blow of the legendary sword. Unfortunately, her makeshift weapon broke under the assault of Orochimaru's blade, forcing Tsunade to jump back.

"You're really out to get me, aren't you?" an annoyed Tsunade asked.

"What can I say, the Uchiha genes within this body makes me yearn for Senju blood!" Orochimaru said with a feral grin. "Now-"

Unfortunately for Orochimaru, a prehensile tongue wrapped itself around his ankle, pulling him back and tossing him backwards with extraordinary strength. As he was flung over, Orochimaru could see it was that wrinkled toad on Jiraiya's shoulder pulling him back, while the white haired man got rid of the snake with the help of a Shadow Clone, and was using its help to prepare his next jutsu, before the Snake Sannin was slammed against the ground, making the whole cave shake once more.

"Well done, Pa!" Jiraiya praised, as he held a Rasengan with both hands, while the clone infused it with elemental chakra. The Rasengan started to grow in size and change color, from blue with a white core, to bright red with an orange core. Though rather than a mere fireball, Jiraiya looked like he was holding a miniature sun on his hands.

"Now's your chance boy! While he's down!"

Nodding wordlessly, Jiraiya dashed towards Orochimaru, who just jumped back to his feet. However, he wouldn't be able to dodge the next attack, something was aware of as his red eyes shrank in horror upon realizing the sheer power Jiraiya's attack was packing.

"What kind of-"

"Fire Release: Spiraling Inferno!"

Jiraiya slammed the miniature sun onto Orochimaru's chest, the sphere of fire and heat tripling in size as its stored power was released at once, before it exploded in an infernal cone that bathed Orochimaru in a sea of orange flames, while being violently pushed backwards. The flames burned so bright, they illuminated the entirety of the cavern for a few seconds as if it was bathed by daylight.

As Orochimaru smashed against yet another wall, the cave shook again.

"You know, I'm tempted to say that there's no way Orochimaru survived that," Tsunade said as she walked towards Jiraiya. "But I still sense his chakra going strong."

"I know. Though even if you must be the one to kill him for the plan to work, I'm not even going to bother to hold back," Jiraiya told her. "Look, there he comes."

Once again, Orochimaru was back on his feet. As the cloud of dust raised by the impact dispelled, the Konoha ninja could see Orochimaru's smoking body was covered in burnt bone plates. The plates started to fall to the ground one after another, revealing sizzling charred flesh. Orochimaru then opened his mouth extremely wide and regurgitated a new body, shedding the charred one.

"Even with Kimimaro's Dead Bone Pulse to protect my body, that jutsu nearly killed me," Orochimaru said, as he got back on his feet. "It pains me almost as much to admit that you developed quite the killer jutsu, Jiraiya. But as you can see, not even that is enough to bring me down."

"Don't worry, I can perfectly settle for seeing you suffer," Jiraiya snarked. He then looked at Tsunade. "Ready to continue?"

"You can bet I am," Tsunade replied.

As Jiraiya and Tsunade closed in, Orochimaru's eyes narrowed as he started to rethink his plan of action.

" I think I underestimated these two. Tsunade's Rinnegan doesn't make her impossible to get close to, but gives her several ways to avoid my ninjutsu attacks. And Jiraiya is no slouch, either. I can beat either of them on their own, but by working together, they can always get in the way and help each other if they're in trouble... distract one while I focus on the other has proven to be an ineffective strategy... my many Bloodline Limits give me a huge advantage over them, so I better use those to overwhelm them. Time to test the limits of my new power..." Orochimaru pondered, just as his enemies were getting closer.

As Jiraiya rushed forward, he made several hand seals. "Earth Release: Swamp of the Underworld!"

The white haired Sannin slammed his hands on the ground, turning it into a muddy swamp, spreading towards Orochimaru's position. The Sanke Sannin avoided the attack by leaping into the ceiling, using chakra control to stick his feet on one of the stalagmites.

"Got you!" Tsunade said, as she cast her hand upwards. "Bansho Ten'in!"

"Dance of the Larch!"

However, Orochimaru already expected that, and he was flung towards his former teammate, he quickly grew multiple sharp bone spikes around his body. Tsunade's eyes widen in shock upon seeing he had been played with, and jumped backwards in an attempt to avoid being skewered, while Orochimaru landed on his feet with a thundering noise.

"And that's not all!" Orochimaru said, as he started to spin around his feet. "Dance of the Larch: All Killing Bone Spikes!"

Orochimaru fired the bone spikes growing from his body in every direction, forcing Jiraiya and Tsunade to put even more distance between them and his opponent, as well as between themselves. As the bones landed on the ground or hit a stone column, they could see that the spikes either burst into flames, were crackling with electricity, or melted the rock.

"ARGH!" Jiraiya screamed, as he failed to dodge one of the bones, who lodged into his shoulder.

"Jiraiya!" Tsunade screamed.

"Yes, I should better get rid of Jiraiya first. Unlike Tsunade, he has no way of healing himself," Orochimaru said, as his lips curved into an evil grin.

"Don't worry, Jiraiya-chan I'll get that out in a-" Fukasaku said, as he moved to remove the bone spike from the Toad Sage's flesh.

However, before he could do so, the wound was frozen in ice, as the ice started to slowly spread around Jiraiya's shoulder.

"Do you like that, Jiraiya? I can combine my many elemental Bloodline Limits with Kimimaro's Dead Bone Pulse attacks. This is nothing but the tip of the iceberg of all the possible combinations I can experiment with!" Orochimaru boasted, before sending a flurry of more elemental bone spikes towards Tsunade with a swing of his arm.

Even if Tsunade could absorb the elemental chakra the bone spikes were coated with, Tsunade couldn't absorb the bones themselves, at least not before they caused her damage, so she only had one way to avoid the attack.

"Shinra Tensei!"

The first wave of bone spikes was repelled. However, Orochimaru continued to fire them at a fast pace, to both at her and Jiraiya, forcing the two of them to continue running.

"I already lost count of how many times you have used that ability, Tsunade," Orochimaru mocked, as he continued his assault. "Did the Rinnegan degrade you into such a one trick pony? That's all you can do now?"

As she ran, Tsunade felt an arm, which then reassembled itself into a sleek looking cannon. Its barrel started to glow as chakra was gathered on it.

"Try on this then!"

After stopping and grabbing her cannon-turned arm with her free hand, Tsunade fired multiple bolts of chakra at Orochimaru, who was now forced to be on the defensive, stopping his attack and jumping away. The chakra blasts, while small, produced pretty big explosions when they landed on the ground or on any of the rock columns.

"Slightly better. But you still fail to grasp the potential that eye you have has to offer," Orochimaru replied, as he started to make hand seals. "While intelligent, you were always a blunt woman, Tsunade. You're an excellent medic, but when it comes to actual fights, you can't think in anything more complex than smashing your enemy with your fists or with something big and blunt. I can't stand seeing that Rinnegan being misused like you're doing right now! Wood Release: Deep Forest Bloom!"

Once again, Orochimaru summoned a multitude of large wooden roots and vines across the cavern. Said vines, however, had many large flowers growing on them. Tsunade's eyes widened upon realizing what jutsu was that.

"Jiraiya, stay away from the pollen released by the flowers! It will knock you out!" Tsunade warned, as she covered her mouth and nose with her forearm. "It's especially worse here since we're in a place with no air flow."

"I'll deal with them myself before they can turn into a problem!" Jiraiya replied, weaving hand seals of his own. "Sage Art: Fire Release Big Flame Bullet!"

"And you think I'm going to let you?" Orochimaru asked, his hands moving even faster than Jiraiya's. "Water Release: Great Waterfall Jutsu!"

Jiraiya breathed a massive wall of fire towards the pollen-pumping flowers, but unfortunately, it was met by a roaring vortex of torrential water, putting out the fire before it could incinerate the offending plants. Jiraiya gritted his teeth and growled in frustration, while Orochimaru grinned in triumph.

"I won't let you destroy the flowers. Now stop resisting, and let them put you to sleep," Orochimaru said as the yellow cloud began to expand. "At the very least, your deaths will be quick and painless."

"So, the complete opposite of what your death is going to be then!" Jiraiya said, as she made several hand seals. "Sage Art: Flying Needle Senbon!"

Jiraiya's hair stood on end, before he fired thousands of needles made of his own hair towards Orochimaru. The Snake Sannin was ready to counter the attack, when suddenly the needles changed their direction to the sides, crashing against the wooden vines and roots Orochimaru had summoned, as well as the flowers.

And without the flowers constantly pumping pollen into the air, the pollen cloud quickly began to shrink down in size instead of expanding, breaking down and dissipating.

"What the...?"

"Did you like that, Orochimaru? Thanks to Sage Mode, I have a degree of control of my hair senbons once I launched them!" Jiraiya boasted.

"Jiraiya," Tsunade as she walked towards her husband. "This enclosed space puts us on a disadvantage, limiting us to smaller jutsu and not allowing us to summon animals. We need to take this to open air."

"I'm with you, but I doubt Orochimaru will let us change the battlefield," Jiraiya replied.

"I have an idea. Do you have any jutsu to protect us if this cave where to collapse? Tsunade asked.

"Yeah. I have something that could shield us. But why are you asking that?" Jiraiya asked. "You aren't planning to bring this cave down while we're still inside, are you?"

"Brash as she is, I don't think Tsunade-sama would ever do something so recklessly stupid," the Katsuyu clone said, before looking at her summoner. "Right?"

Tsunade merely smirked, much to the white haired man's horror. Before Jiraiya or Katsuyu had the chance to speak any further, Tsunade began to smash every stone column she could see, while also stomping on the ground with as much force as she could, subjecting the cave to the equivalent of an earthquake. The effect was immediate, and soon rocks and boulders of every size started to fall from the roof as the cave started to collapse on itself.

"Are we getting that desperate?" Orochimaru asked in a jovial manner, almost unfazed by the cave being brought down on him, as large rocks landed around him. "Whatever suits you then."

"Jiraiya, prepare that jutsu, NOW!" Tsunade said, as she returned to him.

"You're batshit crazy, woman! Did anybody tell you that!?" Jiraiya shouted, as he scrambled to make the hand seals for the protective jutsu.

"You'll be thanking me when we win!" Tsunade replied, before the two of them were buried by an avalanche of boulders.

...

As the mountain collapsed, the Graveyard was shook by a powerful tremor, toppling down many trees, scaring birds into flying away and ground animals into running as far as they could from the epicenter of the man-made catastrophe.

While not with the same intensity, the aftershocks of the initial earthquake were felt in the rest of the continent as well.

...

After several minutes of thundering noises produced by rocks and boulders falling on top of each other, like a solid-rock storm, there was nothing but silence. One might have had the impression that no one survived the avalanche Tsunade had provoked. And in a way, they would be right, since no ordinary human, hell, even ninjas of above average power wouldn't be able to survive such catastrophe either.

Then again, the Sannin were no ordinary people. Or even ordinary ninjas for that matter. And indeed, after a few minutes of silence, several rocks started to rumble, as if something was under them. And, indeed, a toad statue made of solid black rock burst from under the pile of boulders, sending them flying away. The toad statue then opened its mouth, and spat both Tsunade and Jiraiya to the ground. Its job done, the statue disappeared, leaving a puff of smoke behind it.

"Next time you plan to do something like that, warn me with a lot of time in advance," Jiraiya began. "So I have enough time to get as far away from you as possible."

"Quit whinning. It wasn't so bad. I mean, we're alive, and we're not worse for the wear, aren't we?" Tsunade asked.

"What happened to Orochimaru?" Katsuyu asked. "Is he still alive?"

"I'd wish he wasn't, but I know this isn't enough to kill him. Not by a long shot," Tsunade replied.

"I hope he didn't run away. Because I can barely sense him," Jiraiya mentioned.

"He made it clear he won't run away when he has the Rinnegan within reach," Tsunade insisted. "I bet he's trying to disguise his chakra presence as to catch us by surprise. The fact that we can sense him at all should tell you as much."

More tremors, this time coming from multiple spots all around them. Rocks were sent flying in every direction one after the other as several gigantic snakes burst from under the piles of rocks, hissing loudly and angrily, before setting their eyes on the Sannin, and lunging at them.

"There's your answer to both questions," Tsunade said, before jumping right before one of the giant snakes could bite her. When the snake tried again, Tsunade knocked it out with a powerful right hook, making the snake to fall back. Tsunade then quickly grabbed the snake by its tail, and started to use it as a weapon against the other snakes.

"Yes, this is what I was talking about!" Tsunade gleefully said as he slammed the unconscious snake against another one. "I really need a wide open space to properly go all out!"

Jiraiya, meanwhile, bit his thumb and made several hand seals.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Slamming his palm on the ground, there was a huge burst of smoke, with Gamaken emerging from the resulting cloud, Jiraiya standing on his head. The Sannin didn't even have to say anything, since the moment the giant toad saw the equally large snakes coming, his battle instincts quickly kicked in and started to fight them off.

"Good job, Gamaken-chan! You're doing great!" Fukasaku praised.

"Thank you, esteemed elder. My training to curb my clumsiness is paying off," the soft spoken toad replied as he fended off a snake.

As Jiraiya oversaw the battle, he directed his senses towards tracking Orochimaru. This attack made it obvious that Tsunade was right in her assertions and their treacherous former teammate didn't plan to leave empty handed. And that moment, he sensed a spike of chakra: Orochimaru prepared to attack again now that Tsunade was busy and apparently, distracted.

"There!" Jiraiya said, having tracked the position of his former teammate, who was moving under the piles of rubble covering the ground, and leaped towards him. He held up a hand, as an energy sphere formed on it. "Rasengan!"

Jiraiya slammed the sphere of destructing where he believed Orochimaru was, producing a huge explosion that grinded the rocks it directly hit into pebbles, while sending more rocks and boulders away in every direction. Unfortunately, however, Orochimaru had evaded Jiraiya's attack. The moment Jiraiya attempted to strike again, he was attacked by a pair of giant snakes.

"Tsunade, watch out, he's going after you!" Jiraiya warned, while dodging the attacks of the giant reptiles.

However, Tsunade heard Jiraiya's advice too late, and when she sensed Orochimaru coming out from under the pile of rubble, riding on the mouth of yet another giant snake, the ex-Konoha ninja was already weaving hand seals at an imperceptible speed.

"Lightning Release: Wrath of the Thunder God!"

As he jumped out of the mouth of the giant snake, Orochimaru's body started to crackle with yellow electricity, before he thrust his arms towards the blond Sannin, and his entire body released a massive electric discharge in the form of a storm of lightning bolts that moved towards Tsunade in an arc. Tsunade, who was still using a giant snake to bludgeon other snakes, tried to drop it in order to absorb the attack, but wasn't fast enough, and the attack connected.

"AAAAAAAAAAGGH!" she yelled, as the powerful electricity coursed through her body.

Grinning triumphally upon seeing that a ninjutsu attack finally connected, Orochimaru decided to go for another before Tsunade had the chance to recover or Jiraiya could interfere.

"Wind Release: Great Breakthrough!"

Orochimaru blew a powerful wind current from his mouth, which thanks to Sage Mode was akin to an hurricane, and besides blowing Tsunade away, it cleared the area in front of him of rocks and boulders of all sizes, sending them flying as well. Once the wind attack subsided, Tsunade fell to the ground with a loud thud.

Despite the brutal impact, Tsunade was stirring on the ground, attempting to get back on her feet. Her chakra signature was faint, but it was still there. No doubt she'd try to heal the damage first. Fortunately, Orochimaru could sense that Jiraiya was still busy with the rest of the giant snakes. Yes, now it was the best chance to end her and claim the Rinnegan. Summoning the Sword of Kusanagi to his hand once more, the Snake Sannin rushed towards his fallen enemy.

"This is your end, Tsunade! No one can save you now!" Orochimaru said, as he leaped into the air, ready to sink his trusty blade onto the Sannin's gut. "Say hello to Dan and Nawaki when you see them in the afterlife!"

However, seconds before Orochimaru's blade touched Tsunade's body, Tsunade's chakra signature were from faint to exploding like a supernova, and the blond Sannin rolled to the side, narrowly avoiding the thrust. Tsunade then jumped back to her feet with a vitality that surprised Orochimaru, and stomped on the ground, causing a small tremor that made the black haired man to almost lose his balance. And that moment, knowing that he couldn't use the Sharingan to avoid it, Tsunade took the chance to deliver a savage punch to Orochimaru's face, sending her ex-teammate flying in an arc, before landing on the ground.

"You think that those two shitty jutsu were enough to put me down?" Tsunade asked. Then again, those jutsu did harm her more than she wanted to admit, but she was still good enough to keep fighting.

Miraculously, Orochimaru had survived the hit, having only his jaw dislocated, almost blown out of the rest of his skull. However, he was able to recover from the damage with his Shed Skin Body replacement. Then again, Tsunade wasn't fazed.

"That jutsu of yours is really annoying, didn't anybody tell you that? We work so hard to pound you to death, and there's not even a miserable bruise to show for it," Tsunade said, shaking her head. "Unfortunately for you, my next attack won't be something you will be able to heal so easily."

"Oh, is that so?" Orochimaru asked, sounding almost curious. "Now that's quite the bold and confident affirmation, Tsunade. If you have such a jutsu under your arsenal, why didn't you used it before?"

Tsunade smirked, almost expecting that question. "Because the battleground wasn't suited for it," she then aimed a hand at Orochimaru, who quickly tensed up. "CHIBAKU TENSEI!"

A black sphere the size of a marble flew out of Tsunade's hand and slammed into Orochimaru's chest with a deceptively strong force. Much to his surprise and horror, Orochimaru was then lifted into the sky as the gravity core began to pull all the rubble around it, burying the Snake Sannin under a ball of rocks. Just like it did when Pain used it with Jiraiya on Konoha, the forming planetoid slowly rose into the air as more and more rocks, rubble and chunks of earth were pulled into it, increasing its size.

Tsunade was sure the jutsu alone wouldn't be enough to bring Orochimaru down. Thanks to Sage Mode, Jiraiya was able to survive the crushing pressure the rocks exerted on his body, to the point that he only have a few broken bones that were easy to mend. And there was the fact that Orochimaru had more than likely made a lot of extra modifications to his body -born from extremely unethical researchs from a medical point of view, Tsunade could tell- to make himself harder to kill.

Not that it mattered, as Tsunade didn't want to kill Orochimaru with this attack, since it wasn't part of her and Jiraiya's plan. However, he was sure that the impact of the nascent asteroid would left Orochimaru within an inch of his life, too weakened to use that annoying Shed Skin technique. And then Tsunade would carry the final step of her plan.

But alas, it wasn't mean to be.

"GRAAAAAAAAAAAAAARGHH!"

Tsunade saw in shock how after the loud roar, like a chicken hatching from an egg, a massive monster broke out of the asteroid from the inside, destroying it completely. The monster appeared to be eight giant snakes with razor sharp white scales, but upon further inspection, she saw it was a single creature with eight snake heads and eight tails.

With the gravity core destroyed as well, the giant monster fell to ground below, producing a thundering noise upon hitting the ground, and sending nearby rocks flying in every direction.

"Tsunade!" Jiraiya shouted, as Gamaken landed behind her. Jiraiya jumped off Gamaken and ran towards his wife. Tsunade could sense the worry in the white haired man. "What the hell just happened? What's that thing?"

"I thought I already had him," Tsunade said, trying to repress her frustration. "I had him, and then he goes and pulls out this... bullshit..."

Humans, toads and slug watched the eight headed snake with a mixture of awe and horror. Each one of its heads was probably as big as Manda or Kurokiba, yet the chakra the monster radiated was way more powerful than that of those snakes. Even the large Gamaken looked puny compared to them.

"I... I think this enemy goes beyond my capabilities..." Gamaken noted, remaining calm even when fear bubbled inside him. "Then again, I'll stay and help you as much as I can."

"HAHAHAHAHA!" a laugh echoed through the place, as one of the snakes opened its jaws, and Orochimaru crawled from beneath it, Sword of Kusanagi in hand, reminding the Konoha ninjas and their allies that this wasn't a summon, but a transformation. "Behold, you filthy worms, the true extent of my power! Now perish so I can claim the Rinnegan!"

Five of the snakes opened their mouths, releasing a torrent of water, a mass of electrical bolts, a barrage of rocks, a powerful tornado and a stream of flames at the people and animals below.

"Shit, those elemental blasts are too far apart, I can't absorb all of them!" Tsunade thought, gritting her teeth in anger. "Scatter!"

They did as she commanded, with Tsunade jumped to one side, Jiraiya to another and Gamaken to another. The snakes, however, were relentless and continued to fire elemental streams towards them, leaving them no opportunity to attack. Two of them fired their blasts towards Tsunade, fortunately for her, close enough to absorb.

"Gakido!"

Tsunade held her arms towards the torrent of water and storm of electricity, creating the barrier of white light that converted the attacks into pure chakra and assimilated them into her body. And after how much chakra she had been expending, even with Sage Mode, a recharge was something she welcomed. That failed Chibaku Tensei had cost her a lot of chakra.

"Tsunade-sama, watch out!" the Katsuyu clone warned.

Unfortunately, Tsunade absorbing the attack was what Orochimaru was counting on, and while she absorbed the water and the lightning, a sixth snake head opened its jaws, releasing a torrent of molten lava to the ground, creating a flow of lava that moved towards her. Since the first two attacks came from above, Tsunade's barrier didn't cover the ground, and thus couldn't neutralize the lava. However, if she stopped absorbing the two basic elemental attacks, she would be hurt by them.

And she couldn't use two Rinnegan abilities at once. At least not from the same body.

"Earth Release: Fissure!"

Tsunade sighed in relief upon sensing a spike of chakra coming from her husband. The earth shook a little as a large crack spread across the path the flow of lava was taking, creating a deep rift. The lava then fell down the rift on the earth instead of following its course, leaving Tsunade unharmed. After a few seconds, she finished absorbing the streams of water and lightning fired from the other two snakes, and quickly jumped back in case the lava snake attacked again.

"Nice save, Jiraiya!" Tsunade told him.

"Anytime!" Jiraiya replied, while dodging a storm of razor sharp rocks and a wave of flames. "But we can't continue like this! This giant monster is pushing us into fighting defensively! We need to attack!"

"I know!" Tsunade said, as her one visible eye scanned what she believed was Orochimaru's strongest form. "Hmmm... that thing sure has a lot of range, but I don't remember seeing it move from that one spot. Perhaps it's stationary. In that case, I have the perfect jutsu to counter it."

"Not even your Rinnegan is a match for this form, Tsunade! Now die and let me claim it!" Orochimaru said, as he raised the sword of Kusanagi above his head. The other seven snake heads stopped firing elemental blasts at Jiraiya and Tsunade, and instead beams of purple and black chakra flowed out of their mouths and into the blade of Kusanagi, which absorbed the energy, as an aura of the same color engulfed it. "Try absorbing this!"

Orochimaru then threw his chakra-charged sword towards Tsunade. The sword flew down leaving a trail of purple light with black edges as it moved towards the blond medic. She knew Orochimaru was expecting her to use Shinra Tensei and attack her while she was wide open, so she had no option other than jump backwards. The sword missed her, but once it stabbed into the ground, it released all its stored energy in the form of a powerful purple and black explosion, ripping the ground apart, sending large chunks of earth and rocks flying away in every direction, and knocking Tsunade backwards.

"Ugh... !"

"Do you realize now how big the gap between you two and me actually is?" Orochimaru taunted. "Unfortunately for you, this is the kind of mistake you pay with your life!"

"Only one life will be come to an end today, and it won't be ours!" Jiraiya loudly replied. In front of him, there were six clones, preparing three Spiraling Infernos. "Take this, you monster! Fire Release: Spiraling Inferno!"

"Don't make me laugh, Jiraiya! That attack might have done something before, but countering it will be child's play!" Orochimaru said, watching the three spinning flaming orbs flew towards him. Five of the snake heads fired streams of the five basic elements towards Jiraiya's triple attack, detonating them prematurely.

However, much to Orochimaru's surprise, the three attacks merged into one, massive wall of fire that started expanding towards him, forcing the Sannin to pour more chakra into his attacks in order to counter them. Little by little, he was able to push the expanding wall of fire backwards.

"You almost got me there, Jiraiya, but once again-"

"Sage Art: Gracious Deity Gates!"

Orochimaru sensed the spike of chakra coming from Tsunade too late, as red torii gates started to fall from the sky onto him, pinning the snake heads to the ground.

"Weren't you watching when I used this jutsu to against Nagato's summoned animals, Orochimaru?" Tsunade asked. "Jiraiya, now!"

"You got it!" Jiraiya said, carrying yet another Spiraling Inferno on his hands. "You won't evade this one! Fire Release: Spiraling Inferno!"

Jiraiya threw the spinning fireball at the snake head Orochimaru was hiding in. However, Orochimaru revealed that he wasn't really attached to the snake head as it appeared, and like an actual snake, quickly scurried out of it before Jiraiya's attack made contact, and reduced the head to ashes in a spiraling dome of blazing death.

"You missed-"

"Bansho Ten'in!"

Orochimaru felt how his body was devoid of all weight for a split second, before being forcefully pulled towards Tsunade's open hand by an invisible force. He tried to anchor himself to the ground like he had done before, but thanks to Jiraiya's distraction, he didn't see what Tsunade was going to do, and couldn't plan accordingly. In a couple seconds, Tsunade's fingers strongly closed around his throat. Orochimaru was about to make the snakes on his back to bite Tsunade, but before he could Tsunade quickly placed her other hand on top of his head. Much to his horror, Orochimaru's body went rigid.

"I wish it didn't have to end like this, Orochimaru. But you brought this upon yourself," Tsunade said, her voice laced with a bit of regret. "Ningendo!"

Tsunade pulled her hand backwards, tearing Orochimaru's soul from his body, who was released from her other hand's grip, falling to the ground with a dry thud.

He didn't move. Neither she nor Jiraiya could sense any chakra coming from it.

Because Orochimaru's sordid life had finally come to an end.

Author's Note: And there you go, Orochimaru kicked the bucket, unlike canon, where the fucker got away with all his atrocities with a slap on the wrist. Yayyyyyyyyy!

Now, as for questions I know you guys are going to ask me: yeah, I noticed that they killed Orochimaru without forcing him to undo Edo Tensei first. Trust me, I haven't forgotten about that. They DO have a plan to undo the jutsu, but it won't be seen until a couple of chapters. I think you guys will like the solution I came up with.

And second, because I KNOW a lot of you are thinking the same thing: but what about Mitsuki? Well, the answer is, I don't care. The fact that Orochimaru was going to die was something I already decided to do even before I started writing the first chapter, because like I said before, I hate how the guy got away with all the shit he did in canon (the guy literally murdered babies, for fuck's sake). And while I think Mitsuki is one of the better characters introduced in Boruto, I don't like him enough to spare his absolute monster of a father.

Well, now that that's done, we can now move onto the chain of fights that will make the final battle, beginning with Obito and his Six Paths jinchuriki (many of you asked who was the sixth jinchuriki taking Fu's slot; the answer is Bunpuku, Gaara's predecessor) versus Naruto, Fu and Killer B.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

So, how did you find my take on the Sannin battle? Are you excited for the next battles? Whatever your thoughts are, share them with me in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Jinchuriki Brawl

Author's Note: Well, I certainly suck at predicting how people are going to react to a new chapter, because I wasn't expecting the last one to prove so popular. While I was writing it, I thought that the Sannin battle wasn't that exciting compared to other more plot relevant fights. Guess people really wanted to see Orochimaru getting his comeuppance.

Well, here's hoping this chapter proves to be just as well received:

Chapter 126:

Jinchuriki Brawl

or

Facing Past Failures

Forests of the Land of Fire

Following Obito's command, the six undead jinchuriki launched themselves at their living counterparts. Naruto and Killer B quickly activated their Chakra Cloaks, as the plates of Fu's Chakra Armor spread over her body.

"Naruto, watch out! I'm going to attack with a wide area jutsu!" Roshi warned as his hands flew through hand seals. "Lava Release: Scorching Rocks Jutsu!"

Roshi exhaled multiple blots of lava at the trio of living jinchuriki. Naruto and Killer B jumped in different directions, while Fu flew into the air. The lava splashed around, setting the trees on fire.

"This guy's attacking us with molten earth? We better give him a wide berth!" Killer B rapped, as he narrowly avoided a lava projectile.

"That's Roshi, the jinchuriki of the Four Tails!" Naruto told him. "He can use Lava Release! Be VERY careful with him!"

Before Naruto could plan his next movement, the red armored giant appeared besides him, his leg pulled back ready to give him a devastating kick.

"Boil Release: Eruption Kick!"

Propelled by a geyser of steam, the armored giant delivered a devastating kick to Naruto. The blond, however, was able to create a pair of chakra arms that, alongside his real ones, used to catch the leg before it could impact him. Naruto then spun the undead jinchuriki in a circle a few times before tossing him away. However, he managed to land on his feet on a large tree branch.

"Nice one, kid. I don't think anybody has been able to catch one of my steam-powered kicks," the red-clad jinchuriki praised. "Name's Han, by the way."

"Naruto Uzumaki," the jinchuriki of the Nine Tails replied.

Roshi then landed on a branch behind him. "You should be a proud, Naruto. Han isn't somebody to hand compliments that often."

"You know each other?" Naruto asked.

"We were Iwa's two jinchuriki, of course we do!" Han replied. "Roshi was one of the few people that made living in that shithole worth it. If he's a friend of you, then you can consider me one as well. Please ignore my unwilling attempts to kill you."

"So you have to be one of the jinchuriki dad was unable to find any info on," Naruto deduced. "Guess Akatsuki caught you with us none the wiser."

"Like I said, Roshi was one of the very few people that made me stay at Iwa, so when he left, so did I," Han explained. "Guess that made me an easy prey for those Akatsuki bastards. Also, watch out, I'm going to attack again!"

Han shot towards Naruto again, geysers of steam shooting from the gauntlets he was wearing.

"Boil Release: Propulsion Fist!"

Naruto jumped back just as Han brought his fist down, shattering the branch Naruto was perched on. As he moved backwards, though, he noticed that Roshi was about to strike him from behind, his fist coated in burning lava.

"Lava Release: Scorching Armored First!"

Naruto generated a giant arm of golden chakra to catch Roshi's lava fist before he could connect. Feeling that the lava was eating through the golden chakra, Naruto swung the golden arm around, throwing Roshi towards Han. However, rather than crash against each other, Han managed to grab Roshi and, spinning around his heels, redirected Roshi's momentum back at Naruto. While in mid air, the elder jinchuriki extended his leg just in time to deliver a powerful kick on Naruto's face, sending the blond flying away.

Naruto, however, created several chakra arms to hold onto nearby branches and regained balance, landing on his feet.

" How is that he armored guy has Boil Release? I thought it was a Bloodline from Kiri..." Naruto wondered.

" It's the power granted by his Tailed Beast, Kokuo," Kurama explained. "Just like how the smelly ape Son Goku grants Roshi Lava Release."

" Other Tailed Beasts can grant their hosts Bloodline Limits. Man, you seem kind of mediocre when you're put next to them," Naruto joked.

Kurama growled angrily. "Don't you dare compare me with those second rate animals! You should feel immensely lucky that you were blessed with my incredible power!"

"I never thought that we'd get to fight together again. Too bad it's under such awful circumstances," Han lamented.

"I feel that Naruto will be strong enough to deal with us. I mean, that golden cloak isn't just for show, is it?" Roshi asked. "You didn't have it the time I met you."

"A lot of things happened since the time we failed to save you, Roshi," Naruto told him. "This is just one among many."

Roshi chuckled. "Heh, I can imagine. I have the feeling they'd be great topics to write a book about!"

That moment, Fu appeared behind the two of them, her two arms morphed into long blades resembling the maws of a stag beetle. However, before she could skewer them, the two Iwa jinchuriki jumped aside, and the Taki kunoichi ended up cutting thin air.

"How...?" Fu asked, surprised at their reflexes. And to her increased confusion, many bubbles appeared around her. "Where did these bubbles come from...?"

Remembering the way Utakata used ninjutsu, Naruto's eyes widened. "FU! Get away from those bubbles now!" He yelled

"Water Release: Water Explosion Jutsu!"

The seemingly innocuous bubbles detonated like they were explosive tags. Naruto launched an arm of chakra into the chain of blasts, and managed to grab Fu, pulling her away from the danger. Thankfully, her armor was able to absorb most of the blasts, leaving only a few burnt marks here and there.

"You okay?" Naruto asked, as he gently put Fu down besides him.

"I'll live. Thanks for the save," Fu said, as she dusted her armor. She then looked at Roshi and Han. "What's with the geezer and the iron giant? I made sure to be extra stealthy."

"It's a power of the Rinnegan. All six of them can see what each other sees," Naruto explained, and gestured towards Uakata, perched on a branch above them. "And Uakata was watching you."

"I see," Fu acknowledged, before she saw yet another zombie coming at her, this one a short man holding a staff with glaives at the tip. "Oh damn, here comes another!"

"Yagura...?" Naruto asked, recognizing the zombie.

"Greetings, Naruto. I'm glad to see you again, even if it's under such circumstances," Yagura politely said, his hands making hand seals. "Water Release: Water Shuriken!"

The air's moisture condensed into water, which then took the shape of several shuriken. The watery stars then flew towards the two jinchuriki, who quickly started to weave seals. Rather than dodge, they decided to counter them with jutsu of their own.

"Wind Release: Great Breakthrough!"

"Wind Release: Cyclone Vortex!"

Naruto thrust his hands in the direction of the shuriken, releasing a powerful horizontal tornado, while Fu blew a strong wind current from her mouth. The combined wind attacks broke the incoming shuriken, as the water forming them dispersed into moisture once again. However, while the wind traveled forward, Yagura was already working on a counterattack. He motioned one hand in a circle, creating a perfectly circular mirror made of water.

"Water Release: Water Mirror Jutsu!"

Using the glaive at the end of his staff, Yagura turned the mirror around, revealing a copy of Naruto and Fu. The copies jumped out of the mirror, and formed the same seals the originals had weaved.

"Wind Release: Great Breakthrough!"

"Wind Release: Cyclone Vortex!"

The copies released the same attacks as the originals. The four wind jutsu clashed against each other, no attack pushing the other back, until all four of them ran out of power. The mirror copies then quickly vanished.

"Man... I need to learn that jutsu," Fu said in awe.

"It seems that Yagura hasn't lost his edge since the last time I fought him," Naruto said, glaring at the reanimation.

"You know that guy as well?" Fu asked.

"Yeah. That's Yagura, Fourth Mizukage and jinchuriki of the Three Tails," Naruto explained. "I had to fight him as part of Konoha's deal with Mei's rebellion in our mission to bring the Blood Misty to an end. Turns out the poor guy was mind controlled the whole time. Not only we were unable to break the mind control, but we couldn't even save him from Akatsuki either."

"Though in death my mind is once again my own," Yagura added, before chuckling sadly. "Not that it matters much, given that I have no control of my body. It seems that I'm doomed to be Akatsuki's puppet no matter what."

"Don't worry, Yagura. We'll make sure to send you back to the place you belong and make whoever's behind this pay," Naruto promised, raising a fist at him. "And I never go back on my promises."

This made Yagura smile a little. "It seems that you're as much tenacious now as you were back when you fought me. Yes, I know you'll do your best, Naruto. By the way, may I ask about my wife and my son? Do you know if they're okay?"

"They're fine. Your family and the rest of your loyalists surrendered once the news of your condition spread, and Mei, the current Mizukage, pardoned them," Naruto explained.

Yagura seemed to sigh in relief. "It's good to know that. If only I could see them one more time..." Yagura lamented, before his body tensed up. "Watch out, I'm going to attack you again. Water Release: Tsunami Glaive!"

Yagura then leaped towards the two jinchuriki, rearing his staff back, water started to gather around the glaive at the end of the weapon, forming a large blob around it. He then swung the staff towards Naruto and Fu, who jumped backwards in order to avoid the strike. However, the water gathered on the weapon was then released in the form of a watery blade. Fu deployed her wings and flew upwards, but Naruto couldn't dodge, and was forced to parry the attack with his Wind Blade as well as two arms made of Kurama's Chakra for extra help. Naruto was able to overpower the water blade, which broke down into millions of water droplets.

" Naruto, watch out!" Kurama warned.

Before Naruto could heed the fox's advice, two shadows fell upon him, revealing them to be the forms of Roshi and Han.

"Sorry, Naruto!" Roshi said, as he shot chakra coated fist at him. "Lava Release: Scorching Armored Fist!"

"Boil Release: Erupting Propulsion Foot!"

Naruto screamed in pain Roshi's lava covered fist and Han's steam powered kick connected, sending him flying backwards. Naruto, however, was caught by Fu, who placed him on a nearby tree branch. The blond hissed as he touched the scorched marks on his chest the two attacks had left. Fu looked at the Iwa jinchuriki, who, alongside Yagura and Utakata, were closing on them.

" Hey Chomei, think you can contact the other beasts and tell them to drop it already?"

" Sorry girl, but I can't sense them," Chomei apologized, sounding a little sorry. "Even if the jinchuriki have access to their powers, I can't sense my siblings inside any of them."

" That's because they aren't really there. If these six are like Mito, the rest of our siblings are still inside the Demonic Statue, and they're able to channel their power thanks to a chakra nail stuck on their bodies," the fox explained.

"Yeah, what Kurama said," Naruto agreed. "Right now, we should focus on finding where those nails are and remove them as soon as possible," Naruto said.

Meanwhile, as Naruto and Fu made plans, Killer B was fighting Yugito alone. The blond kunoichi assaulted Killer B with an onslaught of swipes from the claws growing from her fingernails, swipes that Killer B expertly parried with his swords. The rapper managed to swipe an arm aside, before smacking her with one of his tails, sending her flying backwards.

"I'm sorry, Yugito-chan, but I need to be tough, so, hope you don't-"

However, before Killer B could finish his line, he was assaulted by a large sand tornado, forcing the Kumo jinchuriki to jump backwards.

"Hey, what the hell's wrong with you, dude? Getting in the middle of my and Yugito's fight, that was pretty rude!" Killer B protested.

"Stay sharp, B! There's no time for polite gestures!" Yugito warned, as her hands started to form hand seals. "Fire Release: Mouse Hairball!"

Yugito expelled a single, large fireball made of blue fire that quickly split into many, mouse-shaped fireballs, all of them flying towards the living jinchuriki. Killer B's swords started to crackle with electricity as he channeled Lightning Chakra through them, and deflected all of them while jumping backwards.

" B, behind you, watch out!" Gyuki warned.

And indeed, another sandstorm formed in the direction Killer B was jumping to. Fortunately, he was able to change his course by wrapping one of his chakra tentacles around a nearby branch above him, avoiding the sand tornado. However, the bearded old man jumped from within the sandstorm, and raising his hand, formed a large spear out of sand, before engaging Killer B on hand to hand combat.

"Zzzzzzz..."

"What the... is this guy snoring!? Does he find fighting against me boring!?" Killer B shouted, taking offense at his enemy's flippancy.

That moment, the old man suddenly woke up, looking startled.

"Huh? Eh? W-Where am I?" the old man asked, sounding confused and scared. However, his body continued moving on its own and fighting with surprising skill. "H-Hey, sorry for fighting against you... my body seems to move on its own..."

"That's Bunpuku, B. He's the One Tail's first known jinchuriki," Yugito explained, as she jumped to join the fray. "Be careful with him, he might be a narcoleptic old man, but he's as much of a threat as I am," Yugito warned, before she quickly glanced back at Obito, who was still perched on the same branch as before, not having moved a centimeter since the battle began. "And be careful with that man. He has one half of the Nine Tails bound to his will."

"The fox won't be a problem anymore, we used his jinchuriki to wipe the floor," Killer B reassured his former fellow Kumo ninja.

"You did? Good. Still, don't lower your guard," Yugito insisted. "I underestimated that man, and it cost me my life. I'd hate seeing you making that mistake."

"Damn, fighting against Yugito-chan alone is quite testing, with the two of them, there won't be any time for resting!" Killer B distressingly thought, as he parried blows from Bunpuku's sand spear and Yugito's claw swipes.

"B, we should regroup with the others. Fighting individually against enemies of such caliber won't end well for us," Gyuki suggested.

"As much as I hate to run from a fight, I'm afraid you may be right, it's better to flee and fight another battle, than stay and be slaughtered like cattle!" Killer B agreed.

While fighting with one hand and several chakra tentacles, the jinchuriki of the Eight Tails dug into his ninja tool pouch, grabbing a couple of smoke bombs, and threw them at his feet, creating a large cloud of smoke, stopping Yugito and Bunpuku from attacking, and letting the ninja rapper some time to breathe.

"Now that they can't see, it's time for Killer B to flee!" Killer B thought -he was smart enough not to speak out loud when he was trying to be beneath notice- as he dashed towards where Naruto and Fu were exchanging blows with the other undead jinchuriki.

Or he would have, if he didn't find himself surrounded by chakra-charged bubbles.

"What the...?"

The bubbles detonated like bombs, resulting in a chain of blasts that shook the entire forest. Killer B was fast enough to dodge the explosions, but doing so pushed him back against the other two reanimations he was trying to flee from. Looking up, he could see a tall, brown haired man in a long kimono floating inside a large bubble.

"Hey, that's not fair! Why do I get three enemies going after my hair!?" Killer B protested.

" Guess the enemy sees you as the biggest threat," Gyuki said, shrugging a little. "And feels that his chances of winning are greater if he keeps you isolated."

"I see. If they aren't going to let me go to them, then I'll be the one to flatter this scum," Killer B said, as he raised a hand, his index and pinky fingers up. "Tailed Beast form, oh yeah!"

Killer B started to grow in size as his chakra cloak began to morph into Gyuki's actual form, toppling trees down as his body expanded, and forcing the other three jinchuriki back. From his new vantage point, he could see his fellow jinchuriki battling against the other three undead, not doing that good. Oh well, that was going to change soon. The two youths did notice the Kumo jinchuriki going into Tailed Beast form, and glanced at him inquisitively.

" Fu, take Naruto out off the ground, the fight is going to take a turnaround once I change the shape of the battleground!" Killer B said, as he coiled his tentacles around his body. The two of them nodded, and Fu grabbed Naruto and flew into the sky. The other jinchuriki tried to bring them down with powerful ranged ninjutsu, but Fu's speed allowed her to dodge them. Now that his friends were safe, it was time to make his move. "TAILED BEAST TWISTER!"

Killer B extended his tentacles as he began to spin around. The tentacles tore apart every tree and rock in the area, flattening the battleground into a complete and empty plain. The speed of the giant beast spinning, as well as the speed of such movement also caused a tornado to form around Killer B, which sent the six undead jinchuriki flying away, before they fell back into the ground with loud thuds.

Once the winds ceased and the clouds of dust raised by them settled, they could see that Killer B was now standing in the middle of a large crater, and that all the forest in a kilometer around him had been wiped out, leaving nothing but ground.

"Whoa..." Fu said from above, awed at the sight below her. "He made the entire forest disappear..."

"Yeah... though, this is for the better. We will do better fighting in an open field than around so many trees," Naruto said. "Let's go back to B."

Fu nodded, and descended towards their teacher, placing Naruto on one of his horns, while she was perched on the other.

" All right, the three of us are together again! Now we can cause the enemy even more pain!" Killer B cheered.

"Hey, I see the other jinchuriki," Naruto said, pointing at their seemingly unconscious forms, lying on the ground. "We should try to seal them before they get back-"

" Too late," Kurama interjected.

And indeed, the six reanimations quickly jumped back to their feet as Obito teleported in front of them. He looked at Naruto and Fu standing on top of Killer B's head, and scowled.

"It seems that fighting you normally isn't going to be enough," Obito said, shaking his head. "In that case, I'll have to have them use more power."

Obito made a hand seal, and an aura of chakra exploded around the undead jinchuriki, looking at first like a generic Tailed Beast cloak, but each of them began to take on a new shape of their own.

Bunkupu's chakra cloak appeared to be made of sand in constant movement, in the shape of an armor that looked like Gaara's Shield of Shukaku jutsu, complete with a wide conical helmet. On his hands rested a large spear made of sand. It was the Spear of Shukaku, another of Gaara's jutsu, a weapon powerful enough to pierce even a Tailed Beast Chakra Cloak.

Yugito's Chakra Cloak looked like Naruto's, giving her an appearance of being made of fire, except it was sapphire blue with black edges instead of golden, while her fingers being made longer and in the shape of claws. Yagura's, on the other hand, resembled more Fu's Chakra Armor, as it was a physical armor made of sharp maroon coral that covered every part of his body, leaving only the eyes visible.

Roshi's chakra armor was made of lava, so hot the air around him appeared distorted. Han's chakra cloak made him look as if he was made of clouds. But Naruto could tell that those clouds were both extremely hot and made of a very corrosive substance.

Utakata's chakra cloak was the only one who looked liquid rather than solid or made of flames, looking like he was covered in a light blue liquid cloak that was constantly producing bubbles, which burst almost as soon as they formed. Once again, Naruto knew that those were no normal bubbles. Plus, unlike the other jinchuriki, while Naruto knew what powers their Tailed Beasts granted them, he didn't know what was the Six Tails' abilities.

" The slug can secrete corrosive substances from his body, either in liquid or gaseous form," Kurama helpfully provided upon sensing Naruto's thoughts. "So you better watch out for that."

" I see... thanks, Kurama," the blond mentally replied.

Down below, Obito motioned his hand forward.

"Go!" he ordered.

As soon as that word left his lips, the six undead jinchuriki charged forward. While most of them merely ran, the three living jinchuriki watched in shock how Han leaped towards them like a rocket, propelled by a stream of pressurized steam coming from his feet.

"What the hell!?" Naruto asked.

"Don't look at me, I didn't know I could do this either!" Han replied, even more surprised than Naruto.

" Heh, that's quite the risky move to try, and thus I'm going to crush this guy!" Killer B rapped as he tried to swat the incoming Han with his hands.

However, the other jinchuriki weren't going to let him. Roshi stopped and, after making several hand seals.

"Hey big guy, watch out! Lava Release: Flower Fruit Mountain!"

After trying to warn them, Roshi slammed both hands into the ground, and suddenly, the spot Killer B was standing on suddenly turned into a pool of burning lava. It wasn't powerful enough to harm him much while in Tailed Beast form, but it indeed hurt a lot.

"Ouch! Ouch! Ouch! So hot!" Killer B complained, as he dragged his body backwards, away from the pool of lava.

Unfortunately, the lava distracted Killer B from Han, who was barreling towards him at high speed. The former Iwa ninja slammed into Killer B's face with a tremendous force, enough to knock him on his back. Fu managed to jump and fly into the air before she could lose her balance, but Naruto couldn't do such a thing, and fell to the ground below.

"AAAAAAAAAAHHH!" the blond screamed.

"Naruto!" Fu shouted, as she dived to catch the falling Konoha ninja.

However, before she could grab her distressed friend, she was intercepted by yet another jinchuriki, Yugito, who tackled her away from Naruto.

"Sorry, sis. I know that boy means a lot to you, but that man really doesn't want you to help him," Yugito sadly said.

"Don't worry, I know you don't mean to cause harm. So please don't take this badly either," Fu replied, as she grew several insect arms, pushing Yugito away from her. When Yugito tried to get back at her, Fu kicked her hard in her gut, sending him flying backwards.

The winged girl dived towards Naruto once again, but she was too far away from him in order to save him in time. But alas, Naruto wouldn't crash against the ground, since much to his luck, a large mass of sand formed beneath him, cushioning what would have been a very painful landing.

"Sand Coffin!"

Unfortunately for Naruto, that sand had been placed there by Bunpuku not to save Naruto but to capture him. The sand quickly rushed towards the blond, encasing him inside a cocoon of sand. After Naruto was completely covered, more and more layers of sand added on top of it, taking the shape of a large pyramid. Han and Roshi then landed at each side of the pyramid.

"You better get your friend out of there because Roshi and I are going to use our combination attack on him right now!" Han warned, as he and Roshi began to make hand seals.

Killer B and Fu shuddered. A combination attack between two of the most destructive elemental combinations couldn't spell nothing but pain for the now trapped blond.

"Lava and Boil Combination Release: Blast Furnace!"

Roshi expelled a huge amount of burning lava from his mouth, surrounding the pyramid with a moat of lava, while Han created a tornado of boiling steam around it, making the air around the pyramid as hot as an oven. Under the intense heat, the pyramid of sand began to turn into glass.

Killer B was dealing with Yagura and Utakata. The latter was sliding among Killer B's giant body, leaving a trail of corrosive acid behind, while the former Mizukage was covering one of his arms in hard coral, which spread around it. Still, the Kumo jinchuriki was able to sense that Naruto was in trouble, and that if he didn't do anything, the enemy would take him away.

" Get away from me, you fools!" in anger, Killer B flared his chakra with all his might, creating a pulse that pushed Utakata and Yagura away from his body. "NARUTO!" Killer B screamed, as he shot several of his tentacles towards the construct.

Killer B tried to dig into the burning sand, but the extreme heat quickly began to burn his tentacles. Growing desperate, he was about to use a small Tailed Beast ball to destroy the sand prison, however, it burst from the inside out, sending sand and chunks of glass everywhere, revealing Naruto surrounded by a powerful blue aura. Seizing the opportunity, Killer B wrapped a tentacle around Naruto and pulled him towards him.

" Hey, Naruto, you okay? Those guys got you belay!" Killer B asked.

"The chakra cloak protected me. If it wasn't for that, I would be a goner," Naruto replied. "Thank goodness I had Sage Mode to break out from that prison. Fu, maybe you should do the same."

The green haired girl nodded, and made a hand seal. Back in the makeshift shelter the trio had used to spent the night, there were a Naruto clone and two Fu clones gathering nature energy. One of the two Fu clones disappeared in a cloud of smoke, transferring all the nature energy to the female jinchuriki, allowing her to enter Sage Mode.

"Much better," Fu said, basking in the feeling of nature energy coursing through her chakra network. She then noticed Killer B's arm encased in coral. "Let me fix that. Sorry if it hurts!"

Fu started to fly around the coral-encased arm, punching it multiple times. Each punch was powerful enough to shatter a section to pieces, and after a few hits, the arm was completely free of coral.

" Thanks, Number Seven, you're a life saver! Let's see if I can return the favor!" Killer B replied.

"You can repay her right now! They're coming again!" Naruto warned.

" This time, don't let them split you apart! You're at your strongest when you fight together!" Gyuki sternly said.

Once again, Han was rocketing towards them, propelled by a stream of pressurized steam. Bunpuku was also flying towards them on a cloud of sand. On the ground, the other four undead jinchuriki were charging as well.

Fu flew in front of Killer B, deciding to attack them first. "So, you said that they have a shared visual field, right? Then, I'm going to end that advantage right now!" She made the Tiger hand seal, and started to release a cloud of sparkling powder from her open mouth.

" Guys, you better close your eyes now!" Chomei warned Naruto and Killer B through their mental link.

Fu clapped her hands. "Hiding in the Scale Powder jutsu!"

Just as Naruto and Killer B closed their eyes shut, the cloud of sparkly clouded exploded into an extremely bright flash of light, blinding their enemies.

That moment, the two youngest jinchuriki decided it was time to attack. The flash would only last a few seconds, but that would be enough for them. Thanks to the sensing abilities provided by Sage Mode they could still track their opponents. Fu managed to send Han crashing into the ground by delivering a devastating kick to his face.

When she moved to deal with Bunpuku, she was assaulted by a tsunami of sand, forcing her to fly back. She started to remember her match against Gaara during the Chunin Exams.

"Just like the redhead, the sand moves on its own to protect the jinchuriki," Fu recalled, as she started to make hand seals. "But I know the sand's weakness! Water Release: Great Waterfall Jutsu!"

Fu expelled a massive amount of water from her mouth towards the airborne Bunpuku. The sand quickly moved to protect him, but all it accomplished was absorb part of the water of Fu's attack, becoming much heavier and thus falling to the ground, leaving the still asleep old man completely defenseless.

And indeed, taking advantage of the situation, Naruto created a massive arm of golden chakra, and used it to deliver a devastating punch towards the old man, who, like Han, was sent flying downwards, hitting the ground with a loud crashing noise.

"Nice punch, Naruto!" Fu praised, giving her fellow jinchuriki a thumbs up.

"Thanks! But we aren't done yet!" Naruto said, as the light of Fu's jutsu began to banish. "B-sensei, I'm sensing the other four jinchuriki just below you! Swipe the ground in front of you with your tentacles!"

" You got it!" Killer B agreed, as he quickly delivered a swiping blow, raising a large cloud of dust, but most importantly, hitting the four remaining jinchuriki, knocking them backwards with a brutal strike. "Oh yeah! Four birds with one stone! If you mess with B, you will be blown!"

"Now that they're incapacitated, we need to remove the black rods from their bodies!" Naruto urged. "If we do, they won't be able to draw power from the Tailed Beasts and we'll beat them easily!"

Naturally, Obito wasn't planning to make things for the three jinchuriki any easier. He was growing more and more frustated and impatient with how his undead Six Paths of Pain were failing to beat his three elusive preys. Then again, he still had more cards to play.

"You're annoyingly persistent in your resistance," Obito said, though it was more like a growl. He made a hand seal. "Alright, let's see how well you do against THIS!"

That moment, Like Killer B before them, all the jinchuriki quickly grew in size as they transformed into their Tailed Beast forms.

" This... this is bad... very, very bad..." Kurama said, sounding worried, even scared.

" Come on, don't be such a downer! Didn't I beat you when I was less powerful than I am now?" Naruto replied. "Besides, you always boast about how you're the strongest of the Tailed Beast. Was all that bravado?"

" I AM the strongest of the Tailed Beasts," the fox insisted. "However, you don't have access to my full power. You won't have it until you're able to reach the Tailed Beast form, something you had failed to do."

" I didn't need that to beat you!" Naruto protested.

" Even ignoring the fact that you had external help, I was only one enemy," Kurama replied. "If you were to fight against a single Tailed Beast, my proverbial money would be on you. But six ? Unless you and bug girl get their shit together, I see a lot of pain in your future."

" Then I'll prove you wrong. Besides, I don't need to beat them per se. I only need to find the location of the black rods and pull them out," Naruto retorted, before turning his head at Fu and Killer B. "Come on guys, let's go!"

"Crush them!" Obito said. "Focus on the Eight Tails! That's the biggest threat right now!"

" Sand Coffin!"

Bunpuku raised his arms, and a torrent of sand formed around Killer B. The sand wasn't enough to cover him completely, but it was to impede his movements. While he was restrained, Han charged forward, lowering his head.

" Horn Strike!"

Han's horns stabbed into Killer B's flesh, drawing blood and pushing him backwards. Upon seeing this, Naruto realized that he needed to help his friend and mentor or else things would get ugly. He raised his arms towards Han.

"Leave him alone!" Naruto said, as he began to gather chakra into a spinning, dark purple sphere. "Tailed Beast Ball!"

Naruto fired the Tailed Beast Ball, and it hit Han squarely on the side. The resulting explosion lunged the Five Tailed Beast backwards, making him land on his side. However, before Naruto could have time to celebrate, he saw a shadow looming over him. Looking up, he saw the massive form of Roshi in his Four Tails beast form dropping on him. The blond was quick to leap away before he was crushed. Roshi's attack didn't end there, though. He took a deep breath.

" Monkey Flame Arson!"

Roshi expelled a stream of green fire at the still airborne Naruto, who quickly made several hand seals in return.

"Wind Release: Great Breakthrough!"

" Naruto, what the hell are you doing!? You won't beat this jutsu with wind!" Roshi protested.

However, much to Roshi's surprise, rather than aiming the wind blast towards the stream of fire, he aimed it upwards, making Naruto to barrel towards the ground, dodging the attack.

" Oh, I see... really clever, kid," Roshi said.

" Shadow Stroke!"

But once again, Naruto wasn't safe. He felt the ground shake as a chakra signature approached him at great speed. Turning around, he saw Yagura in his Three Tails form, curled into a ball that was about to roll into him at great speed.

"Naruto, watch out!" Fu yelled, as she dived down. "Takigakure Great Whirlwind!"

Fu punched the giant rolling turtle before it could steamroll Naruto, and managed to push it backwards as her strike generated a powerful gust of wind. However, she still hurt her hand a little with that punch, something she had never happened to her before. Even with Senjutsu, a Tailed Beast proved to be more than a match to her.

" Cat Flame Roaring Fire!"

Suddenly, Fu was hit by several large fireballs. The explosions didn't harm her much, but the kinetic impact threaten to destabilize her flight. Which was all what Yugito needed in order to land a clear blow.

" Sorry again, sister," Yugito said, as she leaped at the Takigakure kunoichi. "Cat Claw Attack!"

Like a cat lazily swatting a fly, Yugito's brutal paw strike send Fu crashing against the ground, opening a crater where she landed. While she was on the ground, she could sense Bunpuku sending a wave of sand to capture her. Fu, however, forced herself back on her feet, and once again flew into the air. Unfortunately, Yugito was once again ready to put her down.

" Cat Claw-"

"Wind Release: Rasenshuriken!"

A whirring noise filled the air, and Yugito was hit in the face by Naruto's most powerful jutsu. The chakra shuriken burst into a spiraling dome of razor sharp winds that pushed the giant feline away, allowing Fu some respite.

"Thanks, Naruto. Guess we're even now," Fu replied.

" Girl, you can't continue fighting like this!" Chomei said.
"Kurama is right! If you want to leave this battle alive, you need to fight as a Tailed Beast like they're doing!"

" But I can't do it! No matter how many times I tried, I just can't do it!"
Fu replied, her fists clenching in frustration.

" Then try once more! It's still better than what you're doing now!" Gyuki interceded.

" I guess we have no choice..." Naruto conceded. He tried to put on a brave face. "Come on Fu! Let's show our fellow jinchuriki the results of our training!"

"Alright!"

Both Naruto and Fu started to glow with chakra, while their bodies started to grow, taking the form of the Tailed Beasts they housed inside their bodies. Naruto and Fu could feel the power surging through their bodies, and it felt... natural. Like the pieces that they were missing had finally been found, and were now whole. Both Killer B and Obito held their breath as they watched in awe how the two young jinchuriki were about to accomplish what had eluded them for so long.

"No... it can't be..." Obito said in a whisper. Was he going to lose again now that he finally was on the verge of victory?

" Yes, yes! They're going to do it!" Killer B cheered. " They're-!"

... right after the transformation wavered before breaking apart, and the two jinchuriki returned to their previous forms.

" They didn't do it..." Gyuki said, letting his head down in defeat.

Obito, however, let out a mocking laugh. "Ha! For a moment, you made me believe that you greenhorns had mastered the power of the your Tailed Beasts in such a short amount of time. And while you have grown indeed very powerful, this is a battle you can't win. This ends right here, right now!"

"Naruto! The transformation failed!" Fu cried, panic seeping into her voice. "What the hell do we do now!?"

As Naruto watched the six Tailed Beasts closing in, the ground rumbling under their heavy footsteps, he tried to think what else he could do. Though, just like the Taki kunoichi, Naruto was unable to think properly due his panicked state. Something the Nine Tails noticed.

" Come on Naruto, you aren't going to let Akatsuki get their hands on me, are you? Tell me you don't plan to give up, after you went this far!" Kurama interceded. "What about that obnoxiously positive attitude you always have?"

" I'm trying, but I can't think anything! For some reason, I just can't pull the complete transformation!" Naruto snapped back.

" All that training, and this is the best you can do!? Unbelievable," the fox scoffed. "Didn't that loudmouth from Kumo give you any advice on what were you doing wrong?"

" He did, but he-" Naruto said, before interrupting himself. Suddenly a realization dawned upon him.

Jinchuriki are two being sharing a single body, the two need to agree, or the result will be shoddy. If you want to get the job done, the key to that is to work as one!

" But he what? What did he say?" Kurama nervously asked.

To work as one.

" To work as one," Naruto said. " Wait... maybe... maybe that's what I've been doing wrong? I've been trying to do the transformation on my own. Maybe... the two of us need to be synced in order for that to work?"

" Oh? So you need a little push from me then?" Kurama asked. The idea... didn't sound half bad.

" Wait, all this time..." Gyuki's voice said. "Where you trying the transformation on your own? Instead of working together?"

"..."

" Didn't B tell you that the key was to work together?" Gyuki asked again.

" Eh... whoops?" Naruto bashfully said.

Gyuki let out a defeated sigh. "You guys... I'm starting to wonder if it's not just B, but all of you who lack in the brain department..."

" You can insult the inferior species' intelligence later! We have a battle to win!" Kurama said. "Chomei, you hear that?"

" I did!" Came the giant beetle's reply. "I'm ready to help my girl!"

" Let's hope it works this time," Fu said.

"Alright Fu, one more time!" Naruto said out loud.

Once again, Naruto and Fu reached for the power of their Tailed Beasts and brought it out, triggering the transformation. And once again, when they reached a certain point, the transformation began to waver, threatening to break apart. This time, however, Kurama and Chomei pushed more chakra themselves, helping stabilize the process. Naruto and Fu felt how like a door that refused to open more than a little creak was slammed open, letting a huge stream of chakra flow free into their beings, which in turn, gave them the final push to complete the transformation.

" Yes, yes! This is such a blast! After so much struggle, they did it at last!" Killer B cheered.

While Fu had transformed into Chomei, Naruto was floating inside an avatar of Kurama made of golden chakra.

Upon seeing Naruto and Fu successfully transform on their second attempt, Obito's smile disappeared from his face. Still, he refused to back down. He still had the advantage. He still could win. Or that's what he wanted to convince himself of.

"Your transformation means nothing! Numbers are still on my side! Attack, my Tailed Beasts!" Obito ordered again.

"You might have the numbers, but as the saying goes, quality beats quantity! And there's no better quality than the three -no, the six of us!" Naruto boasted.

The six opposing Tailed beasts opened their mouths and started to gather chakra in the form of a sphere in front of them. Naruto, Fu and Killer B replied in kind, forming Tailed Beast Balls on their own. Nine spheres of destruction fired, six versus three, clashing in the middle in the form of a gigantic explosion that opened a large crater while raising strong winds in every direction.

The moment the blast subsided, Naruto in his Kurama Avatar and Killer B in his Tailed Beast form charged forward, the former slamming his tails against Han and the latter taking down Bunpuku in a single punch. Naruto and B then wrapped their tails around Roshi and Yagura, immobilizing them, before launching them into the air.

"Fu, your turn!" Naruto called.

" Got it!" the girl said, as she quickly flew towards the airborne Tailed Beasts. Her Y-shaped horn started to glow with a teal light as it doubled in size and length. "Horn Buster!"

The horn hit both the targets resulting in an explosion of chakra, sending them crashing down against the other Tailed Beasts, The impact left them momentarily stunned, and they would get back on their feet in no time. However, said moment was all what Naruto needed in order to end the battle here and there.

"Alright, found all the black rods!" Naruto said, as he clapped his hands. From the Kurama Avatar's back shot six arms of chakra which latched onto the parts of the Tailed Beasts' bodies that had the rods. Each of the arm had a Naruto clone that was grabbing each of the rod. "I got all of them! All I need to do now is to pull and... !"

...

Somewhere else

"... uh?" Naruto asked in confusion.

The noise of the ongoing battle had disappeared, being replaced by a welcomed but suspicious calmness and silence. The blond then he realized was no longer in the battlefield, but inside some kind of vast, empty room. Which wasn't a room, and more like the pocket dimension where Kurama was sealed.

Except, instead of just Kurama, there were six other Tailed Beasts there with him.

"What the... what is this place?" Naruto asked, looking around. He took no time to notice all the six enemy Tailed Beasts, and was startled upon seeing them. "UH!?"

" Relax, Naruto. They aren't your enemies," Kurama's voice said. The fact that the Nine Tails was with him kinda soothed him a little. "At least, as long as we're here."

"Oh... that's a relief..." Naruto said. Indeed, none of the Tailed Beasts -nor the jinchuriki, who were sitting on their heads- were displaying any kind of aggressive body language. "By the way, what is this place?"

" This is a pocket dimension that links every Tailed Beast with one another, young one," the Two Tails said. "Due to being sealed inside the Demonic Statue, we're barred from this place for the time being."

" But by touching all the chakra rods that bound us to the undead jinchuriki, we're allowed to temporarily reach this place once again," the Six Tails added. "It's little consolation given our due predicament, but you have our thanks."

"Oh... eh, you're welcome," Naruto said, as he rubbed the back of his head. "Wish I could do more for you guys."

" Really? Do you really want to help us?" the Four Tails asked, sounding skeptical. "A human wants to help Tailed Beasts? Ha! Now that's a good one!"

"Don't laugh at Naruto, you ungrateful monkey. This kid basically lives to help others. He tried to help me, despite being from an enemy village," Roshi replied.

"Yeah, what Roshi said! Uh..." Naruto continued, before losing trail of thought. "Hey, I don't think I know your names, do I? I know Shukaku over there because of Gaara, as well as your jinchuriki, but I don't think I know any of you."

The Four Tails looked at Naruto as if he had grown a second head. "You... you want to know our names? Thats-"

"Ha! Told you!" Roshi said with a smirk, crossing his arms.

" In that case, let us introduce ourselves," the Two Tails said. "My name is Matatabi."

" I'm Isobu," the Three Tails said.

" Kokuo," the Five Tails said in a soft, feminine voice that caught Naruto a little by surprise.

" Saiken," the slug added.

The Four Tails then cleared his throat. Shukaku rolled his eyes and groaned loudly.

"Oh god, here we go again..." the giant Tanuki lamented.

" I have many names and titles," the Four Tails began. "For I have lived a long live, committed many deeds, and mastered many arts. I am the King of the Sage Monkeys, the Handsome Monkey King, the Sage of-"

" Oh for fuck's sake! Son Goku! His name is Son Goku!" Shukaku yelled, while throwing his arms into the air.

" How dare you ruin my introduction, you filthy tanuki!" Son Goku protested.

"Naruto only asked for your name, not a detailed story of your life," Uakata deapanned.

" Silence, human! This doesn't concern you!" Son Goku growled. He then turned towards Naruto in defeat. "Well, that's my name. Son Goku."

Naruto smiled at all of them. "I'm glad to meet all of you. I mean, meeting in a way that doesn't involve you trying to kill me and my friends. Not that I blame you guys or anything."

" We know. However, the fact that you brought all of us here means that we may actually help each other," Saiken said.

"Really? How? What can I do to help?" Naruto asked. "And how are you guys going to help me if you're inside the Statue?"

" We will give you a portion of our chakra," Kokuo began. " With that chakra, we will be able to assist you with our wisdom and what little power we can gather."

" Not to mention, we will be able to experience some form of freedom, and be in the company of our siblings," Isobu chimed in.

"And they won't be the only ones," Han interceded. "We will also give you some of our chakra as well. You're going to need all the help you can get."

"Zzzzzzz..."

"All of us minus Bunpuku," Yugito corrected, rolling her eyes a little. "I doubt the sleepy old man will be of much help, anyway."

" Now, Naruto, extend your hand upwards," Matatabi instructed.

Naruto did as he was told, and the six Tailed Beasts began to slowly place their limbs above it, on top of each other. Once all six were done, Naruto could feel a rush of chakra as the power of the Tailed Beasts started to flood his chakra network.

" This power will allow you to use our special abilities, such as my Lava Release or Shukaku's Magnet Release;" Son Goku explained.

"And with our chakra, we will be able to teach you how to use your new powers, Naruto," Yagura said.

" Also, once you return to the real world, ask Chomei and Gyuki to share your chakra with you as well," Saiken requested. " That way, all nine of us will be in contact with each other through you."

"Don't worry guys... I will. And I will save you. All of you," Naruto promised. "And when this war is done, I'll make sure no Tailed Beast will have to go what Kurama or some of you had to go through."

As the connection finally broke apart, Kurama didn't say anything, but his lips curved into a small smile.

...

Real World.

Naruto and his clones pulled with all the force they could muster, and even if they resisted a little at first, the black rods slid out of the flesh of the jinchuriki-turned-Tailed Beasts, cutting the connection between undead and Tailed Beast. The effect was immediate, and all the undead jinchuriki quickly began to shrink back to their normal size.

" You did it Naruto, you removed the weird stakes!" Killer B cheered. " Now finishing them off will be piece of cake!"

" Chomei, Gyuki, I can't explain right now, but I need you two to share some of your chakra with Naruto," Kurama intervened. " You'll understand once you do."

The ox and the beetle didn't say anything. It was an odd and sudden request, but Kurama wasn't somebody to ask things nilly-willy, and the two of them wordlessly agreed. As the three living jinchuriki returned to their human forms, they walked towards Naruto, who was extending his fists towards them.

Both Killer B and Fu bumped their fists with Naruto, allowing their beasts to transfer some of their chakra to Naruto.

As Naruto's body absorbed the two remaining Tailed Beast chakras he didn't have yet, something happened. His body started to glow brighter, as white electricity started to crackle around it, before producing a burst of a very bright light that blinded Naruto and his fellow jinchuriki.

...

Ninja Alliance HQ

"Onoki-sama, we're picking up several powerful chakra signatures to the northeast of our position!" Ao informed. "We believe- no, we know it's Naruto, Fu and B! It appears that they've been found by Akatsuki and they're fighting once again!"

"We need to send them help as much as soon as we can!" the aged Third Tsuchikage exclaimed. "What's the state of our forces?"

"Unfortunately, all of them are still engaging enemy forces. They appear to be winning, but it will take some time until they can deal with all the reanimations," Santa Yamanaka informed.

Onoki grunted in annoyance. "Keep me informed of their status every fifteen minutes! Once they're done, I want them directed to the jinchuriki's position!"

...

Somewhere else

Naruto was once again back in the pocket dimension that linked all Tailed Beasts. The other beasts and their jinchuriki minus Bunpuku were there, in the very same positions. But they weren't the only ones there this time.

At Naruto's sides were Fu and Killer B, and behind them, flanking Kurama, were Gyuki and Chomei. However, there was one more individual in that mysterious place: in the center of the room, there was an old man, floating above the ground, in a sitting position. His appearance was rather unsettling, with his wrinkled gray skin, forehead that grew into a pair of horns, and a red circular mark with several concentric black rings on said forehead. He was wearing a white priestly robe with black magatamas around it, not unlike those used by the Moon Acolytes.

But the more fascinating feature of the man were his eyes: purple with concentric rings. Eyes that Naruto had only seen in one other individual: Nagato.

And even more fascinating than that, was the way the Tailed Beasts were reacting to the man. They looked at him in awe and shock. Not because they were afraid of him, but as if they saw somebody who they hadn't seen in a long, long time.

" Father...?" Gyuki asked.

"It's papa!" Chomei excitedly said.

" The old man? Here...? But..." Kurama began to mumble.

"Papa?" Fu repeated, looking at Chomei incredulously. "That man is your father, Chomei?"

" You can bet he is!" Chomei replied. " Oh papa, I'm so glad to see you again!"

The old man smiled kindly at the giant beetle. "I'm also happy to see you, Chomei. The same goes for your brothers and sisters as well."

"Wait a second! Just... who the hell is this guy?" Naruto asked, pointing at the floating monk. "And why does he have a Rinnegan?"

The old man seemed amused by Naruto's questions. He looked at the blond, and smirked a little. "Who am I? I'm sure you can tell. Because you told the kid about me, right, Kurama?"

" I did, father," Kurama said, before he looked down at Naruto, groaned, and slapped his hand against his face. " Seriously? Did you forget already everything I told you?"

"Father...? Then that means... you're the Sage of the Six Paths?" Naruto said in realization.

The Sage nodded. "Indeed, that's the title I'm known in your time. But that's not a title I was keen on having. My name is Hagoromo Otsutsuki, and I'd appreciate if you addressed me by my first name."

"Hey there. I'm Naruto Uzumaki," the blond awkwardly said. Not every day you get to speak with a legend who had lived a thousand years ago.

"Naruto. Yes, the name sounds familiar. You're the romantic partner of my brother's heiress, Hinata Hyuga, right?" Hagoromo asked.

"You know Hinata-hime? And yeah, I'm her boyfriend," Naruto said, smiling proudly of the fact. He then remembered that he didn't come alone this time, and was quick to introduce the other two jinchuriki. "Oh! These are my friends Fu and B."

"What's up?"

"Yo."

"A pleasure meeting you two as well," the Sage nodded. "I can sense a very strong bond between the two of you and Gyuki and Chomei. From what I could gather, not many humans have a meaningful bond with a Tailed Beast, so it's delight to be in the presence of not one or two, but no less than three."

Both jinchuriki didn't say anything, but smiled in return. The normally loud and talkative ninjas were too awed to say anything, being in the presence of a living legend. And the fact that said legend had sent a compliment their way did nothing but increase said awe.

" Not to sound disrespectful, father..." Kurama began, looking nervous, shaken even. It was odd for Naruto to see the usually haughty and arrogant fox being so humble. " But why are you here? Better said, how can you be here?"

"The answer is a simple one, Kurama. I'm here because of all of you," the Sage replied, spreading his arms towards the Tailed Beasts, much to the beast's surprise. However, he decided to elaborate. "I once held in my body the primordial Six Paths chakra that I used to create all of you, and thus my spirit is bound to it, even long after my death. When the pieces of your different chakra were sealed inside Naruto, they merged together, creating Six Paths chakra, and allowing me to manifest once again."

"I get it! It's like when Hinata saw Hamura! She told me he said that he was also bound to the Six Paths chakra that she and Hanabi have," Naruto said in realization.

"Exactly," Hagoromo nodded. "And you, Naruto, are the second person who was able to recreate Six Paths chakra and summon me."

"Second? Who was the first then?" Naruto asked.

"A man by the name of Madara Uchiha," Hagoromo replied.

Naruto could feel the sheer rage that was coming from Kurama behind him. Still, the Fox was doing his best not to lose his cool in front of the being he respected the most. Still, he ignored his tenant's anger and focused on the matter at hand.

"Madara Uchiha? How? When?" He asked. He couldn't think how Madara was able to manifest such chakra.

"To answer your first question... well, given that Madara has a Sharingan, that means he's a direct descendant of my oldest son Indra, who inherited the Yin Half of my Six Paths chakra, which I assume were passed to all his descendants as well," Hagoromo began. "He then took a bit of flesh from Hashirama Senju, whom I strongly believe is a direct descendant of my youngest son Asura, and integrated into his body, thus combining his Yang Half of my Six Paths chakra with his other half, thus making his chakra similar to my own."

Naruto nodded. This matched with what he had learned from the Moon Acolytes about the Sage and the Rinnegan.

"As for your second question... while my perception of time it's kind of muddy given the circumstances, I'd say it was... perhaps two decades ago? Give or take," the Sage said.

" No... that... that can't be right," Kurama said, trying to make sense out of his father's words. "He should have been dead by then."

"He was very much alive when I saw him, Kurama. That much I can tell you," the Sage confirmed.

" Then the Madara who tried to summon you wasn't a reanimation," Gyuki concluded. "How did that monster managed to survive for so long?"

"From what I had gathered, he used an Uchiha forbidden jutsu called Izanagi to undo his death. Then, he went into hiding, and spent the following years planning. He then used a complex jutsu to return his body to his prime over several years," Hagoromo said. Naruto then remembered Rin's story, and how there was a second cocoon next to hers. That had to be Madara's. "However, that doesn't matter right now. What does matter, however, is this: Madara Uchiha is the mastermind behind this war. He's the one who indoctrinated Obito Uchiha into following his ways. He's the true enemy that you have to defeat to put this war to an end."

"But... why is that Madara guy doing this? What does he want?" Fu asked.

"When Madara met me for the first time, he had... less than kind words for me," Hagoromo said, causing all the Tailed Beasts to scoff in indignation. How dare that filthy human disrespect their father like that! "He believed it was my fault the world was in such a sorry state, ravaged by wars, misery and death, and how I shirked my responsibilities. How I should have used my power to impose peace on the world."

"That's nonsense!" Naruto said. "Your mom already tried that and she failed! There's no peace through suppression by force!"

All the Tailed Beasts were quick to agree and nod, all expressing their support of Naruto and their beloved progenitor.

"My thoughts exactly. Unfortunately, Madara didn't share them. He said that, if I refused to create, and I quote, 'perfect world for mankind', then he'll do it with the new power he had awakened," the Sage explained.

Naruto, however, felt there was something he was missing. "That makes no sense. Madara was nothing but a warmonger consumed by bloodlust. And now he wants to create a perfect world of peace?"

"Madara Uchiha is... a little more complex than the way history books describe him," Hagoromo said.

The Sage then waved his hand, conjuring a large sphere of white light above him. Images could be seen on that sphere as if it was a screen. It was the image of a young Madara Uchiha fighting on a battlefield.

"Madara Uchiha was born and grew on very turbulent times. He had to watch his mother dying after delivering her sixth son. He had to watch how his father, and four of his five brothers died to the Senju one after the other. All what he had left was one of his younger brothers, Izuna."

The sphere of light then showed another battle, one where Izuna fell before Tobirama's blade. Naruto knew that this was the last battle between the Senju and the Uchiha, that preceded Konoha's foundation.

"Izuna's death affected Madara more than any of his other relatives. His death caused him so much pain, Madara refused to form any new bonds anymore, out of fear of experiencing the pain of loss again," Hagoromo explained. "However, Izuna's death also left a hole on Madara's heart, a hole that Madara refused to fill with new relationships.

"And if Madara couldn't fill that void with love, he would fill it with something else: war and power," Hagoromo continued. "That's why he sabotaged all of Hashirama's attempts at establishing peaceful relationships with other villages. His desire of making Konoha into a superpower was nothing but a excuse to allow him to bathe in the blood of his enemies once again, in an attempt to fill the painful void in his heart."

" Yeah, that sounds like Madara alright," Kurama scoffed.

"After his final argument with Hashirama, Madara finally left Konoha, a village he never saw as a home, no matter how hard he tried," the Sage continued. "After leaving Konoha, he journeyed the world, trying to find a place he could call a home, or trying to fill the existential pain caused by the void in his heart. After some time, and finding about the origins of his clan, he sought a plan to unite the world under a single nation, and for that, he needed to awaken the Rinnegan, for which he needed to fight Hashirama one more time."

Hagoromo told them the details about what Madara did after he lost against Hashirama and how he faked his death, how he stayed hidden underground for decades until he met Obito, how he turned Obito into an agent of his will, and what he planned to do once the Ten Tails was revived once more.

"It's rather sad, when you think about it. Madara thinks he's doing this to create a better world in honor of his fallen brother's memory, but in reality, all he wants is to soothe the pain of his heart, and thinks that absolute power is the key. I don't think even Madara himself is aware of this," Hagoromo shook his head. "In a way, he reminds me of my eldest son, Indra. Like Madara, Indra was also extremely gifted, and grew into somebody so powerful, his might could match my own. He could do anything he set his mind to. In fact, he seemed to take pride in the fact that he didn't need any help to do anything."

"Yet you didn't chose him as your successor," Naruto stated.

Hagoromo nodded. "No, I didn't. My youngest son, Asura, was born with none of Indra's talent. He needed to work ten times as hard as him to achieve a tenth on his accomplishments. This made him rely on friends and allies in order to even the odds. One may think that Asura would be an inadequate inheritor, but I realized that, by working together with other people, Asura's victories and accomplishments were also his friends' as much as his. This, in turn, helped create a sense of unity that fostered harmony and peace. Meanwhile... Indra would just follow my mother's footsteps, and bring peace through imposing his will on others. I knew that Asura's way was the key to peace an harmony."

The Sage then let out a weary sigh he had been holding.

"My biggest mistake was to naively believe that Indra would accept my decision and support Asura. I remember the last time I saw Indra, shortly before my death, when he swore that his hatred would live through his bloodline and wouldn't cease until everything Asura and I worked for were reduced to ashes. And when I met Madara, I could see that very hate in his eyes," the Sage recounted, sounding a bit disheartened. "Even if their reasons were different, both Madara and Indra refused to bond with other people, and that led them to a path of pain and suffering, for them and people around them.

"Such pitiful existence."

Naruto corssed his arms, and shot the Sage an unamused glare. "Yeah well, excuse me if I don't feel very sorry for him."

"I don't blame you if you don't. Like I said, Madara caused untold pain to countless beings," Hagoromo said, his gaze meeting

Kurama's. "But I felt it would do you good knowing a little more about the enemy you have to beat."

"Wait... that's it? That's all you're going to do?" Fu asked, sounding a little disappointed.

" Fu! Don't talk papa in such disrespectful way!" Chomei chided her.

"It's alright, Chomei," Hagoromo cast Chomei's concern away with a hand wave. "And what else do you expect me to do, young lady?"

"I don't know... maybe give us some sort of extra power? You know, so we would have an easier time beating Akatsuki?" Fu asked. "I mean, you're the Sage of the Six Paths! According to the legend, you created ninjutsu!"

For the first time since they met him, Hagoromo's pleasant disposition disappeared, replaced by an unamused scowl. "First of all, I did not create ninjutsu. Ninjutsu is a tool of war. I created ninshu, which is a way to use chakra in order to help human beings connect with each other. I'd really appreciate if you don't make such mistake again.

"And second... as if it wasn't clear before, even if I'm standing before you right now, I'm dead. I can't influence the world in any meaningful way. I can't give you new powers or enhance the ones you have. All I can do is share some of my wisdom with you."

"Oh, I see," Fu sheepishly said, rubbing her arm. "Well, thanks for that. And sorry."

Hagoromo's smile returned. "No harm done, young Fu," he then looked at Naruto. "And while I may not be able to increase your power, the chakra of the Tailed Beasts that is sealed inside you will. With your new Six Paths chakra, you will be able to take your Kurama Chakra Cloak to a greater level of power. Thankfully, it will be enough to put an end to Akatsuki and their nefarious goals.

"Now, it's time for you three to finish this once for all. My children will help you as well as they can," Hagoromo said, as he started to vanish. "Good luck in this endeavor. I know your victory will pave the way for a much better world."

...

Real World

When Naruto stopped glowing, both him and his fellow jinchuriki could see that his Chakra Cloak had changed. For starters, there were more black markings around it, including the whisker-like marks on his cheeks, which were much bolder. Rather than merely cover his usual clothes, the cloak now was shaped like a long haori, with nine magatamas on its back.

Then, a sphere of golden light appeared behind him. The sphere started to grow in size, before splitting into nine spheres, revealing to be Truth Seeking Balls once they stopped glowing.

"Damn! Now that's a power-up!" Fu said, surprised at both Naruto's new appearance and the sheer power he was radiating.

"Whoa, Naruto, you look so amazing! Now that's a jinchuriki form worth praising!" Killer B rapped.

"Heh, thank you guys. Yeah, this form feels pretty awesome," Naruto said, looking at his hand, flexing his fingers. He then looked at the now depowered undead jinchuriki, who were slowly getting back to their feet. Even if they no longer had their main source of power, Naruto knew they could still cause trouble. Oh well, not that it was going to be a problem now. "Though if you like the new cloak, you're going to like this even more. Observe."

Naruto motioned his right hand forward, sending six of his nine Truth Seeking Balls into the undead jinchuriki, lodging them inside their chests. Naruto then clenched his fist, and the orbs grew multiple sharp spikes that shredded the reanimations from the inside out. As expected, they didn't regenerate.

"Man, I wish we had that when we fought the tree guy..." Fu said, remembering the gruesome fight they had to endure against the legendary First Hokage, in contrast to how easy Naruto had defeated his enemies now.

"Also... sorry for killing you, guys," Naruto apologized.

"Don't worry, they weren't the real us," Yugito said from inside Naruto's head.

"Yeah. Those were mockeries of our true selves. Even existing as pieces of chakra within you is more dignified than slave zombies," Han added.

Meanwhile, in the background, Obito was looking with his eyes wide open, half amazed and half frustrated. Not only were Naruto and that dumb Taki brat able to pull the complete Tailed Beast transformation off, which allowed them to beat his Six Paths of Pain jinchuriki, but Naruto had somehow acquired Six Paths chakra himself, to the point of being able to summon Truth Seeking Balls.

"How...? How is he able to shrug everything I throw at him?" Obito wondered, gritting his teeth, and balling his hands into fists. "Why can't I do something so simple as beating a mere brat?" He took a deep breath. "No. I can't let any defeatist thoughts. And desperate situations call for desperate measures. Time to play my final gambit."

Obito made several hand seals, and slammed his hand into the ground.

"Summoning Jutsu!"

Obito's action drew the jinchuriki's attention to him once again. After a large burst of smoke, the Demonic Statue was summoned, with Obito standing on the tip of one of its fingers, looking down at his prey below.

" So, he plans to throw the Demonic Statue at us," Kurama mentioned, and chuckled confidently. "He's really getting desperate."

" This is it, guys! If we crack that statue open, we will liberate our siblings and put this war to an end in a single swopp!" Chomei cheered. "Come on, Fu, Naruto, Killer B! Just keep going for a little longer!"

" Still, it would be good not to underestimate that," Gyuki advised. "That statue is pretty powerful on its own, plus it has six of our siblings sealed there, as well as half of Kurama."

The three jinchuriki nodded, and prepared for what they believed was the final battle. However, they weren't counting on what Obito was going to do next.

"Sealed within this statue are the Tailed Beasts from one to six tails. There's also half of the Nine Tails that we captured some time ago, plus the Eight Tails tentacle that Killer B used to dupe us," Obito explained. "You see, I don't need every beast to revive the Ten Tails, just their chakra. Meaning that I only need to acquire a little of the Seven Tails' chakra, and the Ten Tails will be reborn!"

"Ha! If you think I'm going to let you get a piece of Chomei's chakra. You don't-" Fu said, but was interrupted by what Obito did next.

The Uchiha pulled out a sealing scroll from within his robes, and unsealed its contents, which caused Fu to shock her into silence: it was a pair of insect-like wings, identical to those she generates to fly.

"Remember these, Fu? Kakuzu tore them from your back when he tried to capture you. I guess he wanted to keep them as trophies or something. It doesn't matter," Obito said. "Turn out, his failure to catch you wasn't as complete as I initially believed."

" Quickly, somebody stop him! If he feeds those wings to the statue-" Gyuki yelled, panicking.

Too late. Almost casually, Obito tossed the wings into the statue's open mouth. The statue swallowed the wings, and closed its mouth shut. Its last remaining closed eye finally opened. The statue let out an ear-piercing scream, as power began to build up inside it. The earth started to shake, and chunks of rock were lifted into the air, as if gravity had no effect on them.

Naruto, Fu and Killer B's senses were overwhelmed by the sheer power the statue was radiating. It felt like what they felt when Naruto gained Six Paths chakra, except this time it felt a thousand times more intense.

Obito then teleported back to ground level, his mouth curved into a manical grin, and let out a malicious laugh upon seeing the state of his opponents.

"It seems that you finally realize what you're up against," Obito said, as he spreaded his arms out. "Now get ready... for the return of the Ten Tails!"

Author's Note: Did you guys remember when Kakuzu tore Fu's wings from her all the way back in the Taki arc? Were you expecting that such action would become so plot critical? Because I can assure you, I had planned that from the very beginning.

I really hated that Kishimoto kept the undead jinchuriki as mere attack drones. He had the chance to flesh out their personalities at least a little, given that most of them were captured offscreen, but nope. Well, not that I didn't commit the same mistakes with some of them. At the very least, I just hope that I did some justice to Yugito and especially Han, since I didn't use them that much when they were alive, as opposed to Yagura, Utakata and Roshi. Then again, despite their undead bodies being destroyed, they aren't going anywhere and will continue helping Naruto as much as they can. And yeah, Bunpuku was mostly a placeholder for the sixth Path of Pain, so I didn't feel like having him give his chakra to Naruto.

For those who complained about Naruto being too weak, I hope you guys are happy now that Naruto has unlocked Six Paths Sage Mode. That mode makes him at the very least as powerful as Hinata with a Perfect Tenseigan, but way more versatile since he has the abilities of all nine Tailed Beasts (which I plan to use way more than Naruto did in canon). But yeah, he's going to need all that power for the challenges to come.

We also expand on a little on Madara's revisit backstory. Like I said many times, I think my version of Madara's past is a little more consistent with his character than canon, and I hope you think the same.

Special thanks to W8W, who provided really good ideas about how the chakra cloaks of the other jinchuriki could look and what could they do.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

And with this chapter, the very final battle begins! Are you guys as excited as I am? So, what did you think about this chapter? What did you think it will happen next? Tell me your thoughts in a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Countdown to the Cataclysm

Author's Note: The final battle continues. Enjoy.

Chapter 127:

Countdown to the Cataclysm

or

The Final Battle's Here!

Mountain Graveyard

Once the battle against Orochimaru came to an end, the previous noise of the fight was replaced by a silence so intense it was almost deafening. Despite the situation was pressing, the two surviving Sannin needed a moment to catch their break, and were sitting on the ground, letting their pained bodies rest, at least for a little. Once the tension and adrenaline keeping them going on wore off, they felt like their bodies were about to break down into dust at any moment.

"Hey Jiraiya," Tsunade said

"Hey Hime... you okay?" Jiraiya asked, finally breaking the silence.

"Yeah. Relatively speaking," Tsunade replied. "I could use some sake right now. You aren't carrying any, are you?"

"If I had any sake, I would have drunk it myself," Jiraiya honestly replied.

"Asshole. I need it way more than you," Tsunade said, before shuddering a little. "I was inside Orochimaru's mind, you know. Ugh, I'll need to take a long shower after this. Or several showers."

"So... you got it?" Jiraiya asked.

"Rat, Ox, Monkey, Tiger, Dragon and Boar. And I doubt that, even with all his precautions, the bastard was able to protect his mind against the power of the Rinnegan," she then looked at Orochimaru's unmoving corpse. "Now, here comes the hard part."

Tsunade got back on her feet, and walked towards Orochimaru's corpse. She aimed her hand at him, and fired several black rods at him, embedding them on random parts of his body. Tsunade then made a hand seal.

"WHOA!" Jiraiya loudly yelped upon seeing Orochimaru's seemingly dead body sitting up.

It was even worse when he opened his eyes, and while one of them was its usual yellow color with a slitted vertical pupil, the other was a Rinnegan.

"Don't be afraid, Jiraiya, it's me, Tsunade," Orochimaru said in his original voice. "I'm using the power of the Rinnegan to remotely control Orochimaru's body."

Jiraiya was breathing heavily, trying to keep the whirlwind of emotions he was feeling -none of them pleasant- under control. Tsunade began to chortle, which caused him to shot an angry glare at his wife.

"I think you made me lose five years of my life with that stunt," Jiraiya told her.

"Oh come on, I'm sure it wasn't that bad," Tsunade said, before looking at the body she was remotely controlling. "Okay, here goes nothing. Rat... Ox... Monkey..."

As Tsunade verbally said the seals, Orochimaru's body started to making them.

"... and Boar. Release!"

...

Lightning Desert

In the Land of Lightning, the Fourth's Division battle against the reanimated Kages continued. Gaara had alleviated them of some pressure by getting rid of the Second Tsuchikage early, and joined his father and other ninjas in fighting the Third Kazekage, while his siblings lead the fight against the Second Mizukage, while Darui continued the battle against his former mentor the Third Raikage.

However, the Second Hokage, Tobirama Senju, didn't like to engage the same enemy or group of enemies for long. He used his extreme speed to blitz past numerous groups of Allied ninjas and strike them hard and fast, giving them a very narrow window to counterattack. This time, however, he was about to meet somebody who was prepared to match him.

"Water Release: Water Colliding Wave!"

Tobirama expelled a massive amount of water from his mouth, roaring into a torrent. The giant mass of water then exploded into a massive tsunami that threatened to crush and drown a large group of allied ninjas. Many of them tried to run away, but one stayed and prepared a counter jutsu, making hand seals as fast as his hands allowed them.

"Ice Release: Deep Freeze!"

Haku slammed his hands into the ground, sending a wave of cold chakra that covered the previously hot sand into a thin sheet of ice. And as the cold reached the gigantic wave, it too started to quickly crystalize into ice, freezing it completely only after a few seconds. But Haku's jutsu didn't end there; the last member of the Yuki Clan made more hand seals before clapping his hands together, making the giant iceberg to shatter into hundreds of sharp ice shards that gleamed with the sun.

"Ice Release: Hundred Thousand Killing Ice Needles!"

The sharp ice shards remained frozen mid air for a second, before they faced towards Tobirama, and launched themselves at him.

"Impressive," Tobirama said in a monotonous tone that doesn't make him look particularly impressed.

The Second Hokage started to move from one side to another at an almost imperceptible speed, dodging the ice shards as they stabbed themselves into the sand, while deflecting those he couldn't with his katana.

Haku cringed upon seeing that a jutsu of such scale was barely slowing down the terrifying Senju and took a couple step backwards as he got closer. Several adult ninja, Kurenai among them, quickly landed around him in order to protect him from the inevitable counterattack from the Second Hokage.

"Huh?" Tobirama grunted in confusion.

Then, much to Haku's shock, but mostly joy, several of the last remaining ice shards found their mark and embedded themselves into the Second Hokage's body, who tripped and fell to the ground facefirst.

"Well done, Haku!" Kurenai praised, as she started to make hand seals herself. "Now, attack at once before he can recover!"

The surprises didn't end there, because just as the Allied ninjas prepared to attack, Tobirama's body started to glow with a white light, causing many of them to flinch or to take defensive stances, bracing for whatever the fearsome Hokage was about to unleash on them.

"That won't be necessary," Tobirama said, as he slowly pushed himself back to his feet. "The battle is already over."

"Kurenai-sensei, look!" Yakumo called the raven haired woman, pointing in another direction.

The Third Raikage had also stopped fighting with the group lead by Darui, and was also glowing with the same white light. So were the Third Kazekage and Second Tsuchikage.

"Contrary to my expectations, it seems that somebody was able to force that madman to undo the jutsu," Tobirama said, as his body started to slowly crack and break apart. "Please send my thanks to whoever did such a magnificent feat."

Kurenai smiled. "We will, Hokage-sama."

"With this, the war is almost over," Haku said, full of hope.

...

Across the Lands of Fire and Lightning, all divisions of the Ninja Allied Forces were fighting against what was left of Akatsuki, which wasn't something to scoff at. Even if they had lost the Toneri's Moon puppets, the Zetsu and the remaining reanimations still proved to be challenging foes.

That's it, until all the reanimations suddenly stopped fighting, and their bodies began to glow with a golden light. After a moment of confusion for both sides, the zombies' bodies began to fall apart, breaking down into the ash and dust that formed them, as their spirits returned to the afterlife, where they belonged, while leaving the corpse of the sacrifice used to reanimate them behind.

Akatsuki had lost the strongest part of their army, leaving nothing but Zetsu to fight against the Allied Ninjas.

"Shit... this doesn't look good..." a White Zetsu clone said, gulping loudly.

...

Ninja Alliance HQ

"Tsuchikage-sama, news from every battlefield!" Santa Yamanaka informed. "There are reports of the undead reanimations dying on their own! All of them!"

"It seems that the Supreme Commander and Tsunade-sama not only succeeded in their mission of stopping Orochimaru, but they somehow even forced him to undo the jutsu," Mabui mentioned. "If I'm being honest, I wasn't so sure they'd be able to do it."

"That's the Sannin for you," Chiyo added, a little bitter, but mostly happy. This was a huge victory for the Alliance after all.

"Tell every commander to move their division towards the jinchuriki's position!" Onoki said. "I don't care about their state! No time to rest! This is the last battle of the war, and the one which will decide it!"

...

Madara Uchiha's Secret Lair

"Are you sure you're ready to go, boss?" Zetsu asked.

As expected, Madara had made a very quick recovery. Thanks to the regenerative properties of Hashirama's DNA helped by the special balm, his body had regrown all missing limbs and organs, and the former Uchiha Clan Head had finally recovered his energy.

Madara was now putting on a set of armor before once again diving into battle. Given that his old armor had been destroyed, Madara was now wearing the armor his Zetsu had crafted for him during the years he spent inside the cocoon: it was black in color instead of red, with the Uchiha Emblem emblazoned on the chest and on the back.

While the previous armor was rather clunky, this was more form fitting, restricting the user's movement much less.

Once his armor was ready, Madara then grabbed his trusty gunbai.

"Yes. I feel completely recovered," was Madara's reply. "If Obito is engaging the remaining jinchuriki, then I must be part of that battle. Take me to that place"

"As you wish, boss."

Zetsu then walked towards Madara, and grabbed his shoulder. The two of them began to sink into the ground, until they disappeared completely.

...

Site of the Final Battle

As the Statue screamed and trashed in place, waves of power were released in every direction. Their sheer magnitude not only raised chunks of rock from the ground, but it seemed to distort the laws of physics themselves, leaving those rocks floating around it as if gravity didn't have an effect on them. In fact, the three jinchuriki could feel their bodies were lighter than usual.

" Okay this is... bad. Very, very bad," Gyuki began. While he was keeping his usual deadpan tone, they could hear the panic seeping through his voice. "Astronomically bad. Catastrophically bad. Killer B's rhymes-grade bad."

"Hey!" Killer B protested.

"That bad?" Fu asked.

" Papa always said that the Ten Tails coming back to life would mean the end of the world as we know it," Chomei began to explain. "It's a being of untold power that can easily drive humanity to extinction."

" Despite his immense wisdom, not even our father knew where it came from," Kurama added. "And only somebody of his power was able to curb its rampage."

" That Obito is one crafty asshole," Son Goku said. "We believed that as long as one of our siblings would remain uncaptured, that aberration couldn't be released. But the bastard found a way..."

" At the very least, he won't be able to summon the Nine Tails by surprise," Yugito mentioned, remembering the battle that led to her capture. "Since it must be inside the statue."

" Still, that monster is lacking some of us, so even if it revives, it shouldn't be at its full power," Kokuo chimed in.

" Well, they can still destroy the statue before it fully transforms, right?" Han asked.

"That's a good idea," Naruto agreed, before smiling confidently. "Thankfully, Obito alone shouldn't be a match for all of us. Especially with my new power. So, here's the plan: Since I have experience fighting against Rinnegan bearers, I keep Obito distracted, and you guys destroy the statue. Got it?"

"Understood, Naruto!" Fu agreed, as she began to transform into Chomei once again.

"Leave that to us, there won't be any trouble! We shall reduce that ugly statue to rubble!" Killer B said, transforming as well.

"Now time to test my new power!" Naruto said, as he motioned his hand towards Obito. "Sand Coffin!"

"What?" Obito asked.

Suddenly, a torrent of sand poured from seemingly out of nowhere, and started to converge around Obito. Naruto clenched his hand into a fist, and the sand rushed him in a crushing motion. Obito, however, used Kamui to turn intangible in order to calmly walk out of the otherwise lethal attack.

"Man, I forgot how annoying that ability can be," Naruto said, as he prepared his next attack. "In that case-"

"Bansho Ten'in!"

This time, it was Obito who cast his hand towards Naruto, with the blond feeling his body becoming weightless for a second as he was pulled towards Obito by a powerful invisible force. Naruto, however, didn't merely let Obito drag him, and created multiple arms of golden chakra in order to anchor himself to the ground.

"Quickly, now that Naruto is keeping that guy at bay, let's attack without delay!" Killer B asked, as he prepared a punch.

"I'm way ahead of you!" Fu said, diving at the statue head first. Her frontal horn glowed with chakra as it grew in size and length. "Horn Buster!"

Obito, however, wasn't as distracted as the Kumo ninja believed, and quickly moved to counter the two jinchuriki's attacks.

"You won't harm the statue!" Obito said, as he slammed his palm, glowing blue with chakra, into the ground. "Sealing Art: Uchiha Flame Formation!"

The blue fire around Obito's hands turned crimson red. The moment his hand touched the ground, said crimson fire shot in a line towards the statue, forming a circle around it, which then projected a cylindrical barrier of the same color, just as Killer B and Fu attacked it. Not only did they fail to break the barrier, but got burned by the weird crimson fire in return.

"Ouch!"

"Oh shit! Hot, hot hot!"

"A little barrier won't be able to stop me!" Naruto said, and with a wave of his hand, he directed all his Truth Seeking Balls towards the statue. "The Ten Tails won't come back to life!"

Obito, however, appeared in the middle of the path of the Truth Seeking Balls, and used his Sharingan to open a spiraling vortex towards the Kamui dimension. Naruto cringed upon seeing all the Truth Seeking Balls being sucked in, as he failed to recall them.

"There. Those annoying balls won't help you anymore," Obito said.

"Damn, I can't believe I let him take away my Truth Seeking Balls like that..." the blond grumbled under his teeth, as he balled his hands into a fist. "As long as they're in that weird dimension, I can't recall them!"

"What's the problem, Naruto, can't you create more?" Utkata asked. "I do remember your girlfriend being able to create them out of nowhere."

"It's a bit complicated. I can only create new balls when the old ones have been destroyed. I'm still linked to them, even if I can't control them," Naruto explained. "Meaning that I won't have any access to them for the time being. Guess if we're lucky and Kakashi-sensei shows up, I can ask him to let them out."

That moment, Obito pulled out a scroll from underneath his robe, unfurled it, and dropped it at his feet. There were many seals, with a circle made of them in the middle.

Obito crouched down and started to make several hand seals. "May as well throw these in too," he said, before slamming his palm into the circle of seals.

Two very large bursts of smoke happened at Obito's sides, and much to the three jinchuriki's surprise, a Wood Golem appeared from each of them. Then, without having to be given any command, the Wood Golems charged forward and delivered the stunned Killer B and Fu a punch in their faces, making them fall to the ground with a loud booming noise, followed by a quake.

"Fu! B!" Naruto shouted, before glaring back at the green giants.
"The hell? Wood Golems? How is he able to summon them?"

Turns out, after losing the use of Susanoo, once Madara gained Wood Release through assimilating the cells from the piece of Hashirama's flesh he had bitten out of the man, Madara planned to create an army of Wood Golems to carry out his plan of an unified world. Unfortunately, despite their immense power, the lifespan of a Wood Golem was of a few days, and after that they'd break down and die. That's why Madara spent the next years perfecting a way to create Wood Golems with an indefinite, or at the very least, very long lifespan.

Unfortunately, it took Madara many decades to achieve such goal, and by the time he accomplished it, he had aged considerably, and thus he lacked the chakra and stamina to carry out his original plan, being only able to produce three golems, before the effort of creating the third one nearly killed him. Shortly after that, he awakened the Rinnegan, and he decided to experiment with this new power and abandoned his previous project.

But the golems remained there, hidden underground, ready to be used whenever needed. One of the things Madara did before entering the cocoon was to give Obito a scroll that could be used to summon those golems.

Obito was always reticent to summon them, believing in his own ability to carry out missions without them. Perhaps he should have use them sooner. Oh well, there was no point in mulling in the past.

" Tailed Beast Ball!"

Killer B fired the sphere of destruction towards one of the golems. The wooden giant, however, managed to catch the chakra ball with its bare hands, and keep it from exploding, before, with much effort, throwing it into the sky, where it detonated safely.

" What the...?"

" Those things are strong enough to match a Tailed Beast, B," Gyuki stated. "You won't defeat them with brute force."

" Naruto managed to destroy one when the First Hokage guy summoned it. Perhaps we should let Naruto deal with them, while we fight Obito?" Fu suggested.

"Alright, I'll keep these guys busy then!" Naruto said,

" Listen, I'll tell you all you need to now about the Rinnegan's power," Kurama stated. "Also, he won't be able to use Kamui, given that if he does, Naruto will be able to pull back his Truth Seeking Balls."

" Don't try to fight him in Tailed Beast form. His Wood Release will bind your chakra and leave you defenseless," Matatabi advised. "That's part of how he got me and Yugito down."

" Plus, I'm sure the bastard has more surprises in case Wood Release isn't enough," Yagura added.

Naruto flew above the two green colossi on a cloud of sand. He had both hands raised upwards, and with the help of four arms of golden chakra, Naruto prepared two rounds of his signature jutsu. "Wind Release: Rasenshuriken!"

Naruto threw the stars of wind chakra at each of the golems. However, before they could impact, the wooden dragons wrapped around their bodies breathed a stream of greenish-yellow flames at them, detonating them instantly. Then, one of the giants stepped forwards, and tried to swat Naruto away with a gigantic hand slap. The blond maneuvered the sand cloud around it, barely dodging it.

"Man, if one was already hard... well, no point in mopping. I know these guys aren't invincible," Naruto said, as his brain worked to come up with a good tactic to deal with his colossal opponents.

Meanwhile, Killer B and Fu shrank from their Tailed Beast forms into their chakra cloaks, as they passed by the giants and headed towards Obito. Killer B raised his hands towards him, and began to summon yet another chakra sphere of destruction. Not as big as if he were fully transformed, but it would do.

"Tailed Beast Ball!"

Killer B once again fired his most powerful attack, with Obito not even making an attempt to block it. Was Kurama's assesment wrong, and planned to use Kamui to let it phase through him? However, Obito was about to show that he didn't need it to negate his enemies' jutsu, and raised a hand towards the incoming projectile.

"Gakido."

Obito's hand generated a thin barrier of white light. The moment the Tailed Beast Ball touched it, it was converted into pure chakra and absorbed into his body.

"Foolish," Obito said, as he drained the attack. "Didn't Naruto tell you that ninjutsu is-"

"BOOT TO THE FACE!"

Obito was interrupted by Fu's armored foot being slammed against his face with so much force, it produced a sonic boom, interrupting the jutsu absorption, and sending him flying backwards, landing with a painful thud.

"Try absorbing that, dumbass!" Fu taunted.

While Obito was still on the ground, Killer B prepared to attack before he could get up. He rushed with two of his short swords on each hand, and several on his chakra tentacles. He jumped into the air, and threw several of his swords at him.

Despite the force behind Fu's kick, Obito could still move, the regeneration provided by his Zetsu body parts already kicking in. Shaking off the considerable pain, the fallen Uchiha rolled to the side just as the swords stabbed on the spot he had been a second ago. Upon landing, Killer B grabbed his swords and dashed towards him, while Fu flew from one of his flanks, and morphed one of her arms into a blade shaped like the one of a mantis. The Uchiha jumped to his feet, and spread both arms each in the direction of each attacker.

"Shinra Tensei!" Killer B and Fu lost all momentum to their attacks, and were violently pushed backwards, letting out yelps of surprise, with B losing some of his swords in the process. "Don't underestimate the power of the Rinnegan!"

"You're the one who underestimate the power of my sick rhymes!" Killer B said, as he made a mid-air backflip, landing on his feet before barreling towards Obito once again. He started to channel lightning chakra through the swords he still had. "And now it's time for you to pay for all your crimes!"

Knowing through Kurama that he had a window of opportunity of five seconds before he could use any gravity-related attack again, Killer B jumped into the air and curled into a ball, his electrified swords sticking out of his body. "Lightning Release: Lightning Spikeroll!"

While Obito dodged Killer B's initial attack, the jinchuriki didn't let up, and continue his attack with his electrified swords, delivering quick and wild swings, moving from one side to another, flipping and spinning, eventually landing a few cuts on the Uchiha. However, as expected, the five seconds quickly passed, and Obito prepared to use the Deva Path's abilities.

"Shinra Ten-

Before Obito could cast the jutsu, Killer B vanished all of sudden, and was replaced by Fu, ready to deliver a powerful punch to his face.

"-sei!"

Both ninja were blown away backwards, Fu by Obito's attack, and Obito because Fu's fist managed to connect his face. While she was blown away before all of the punch's force could be released, she still managed to land a solid hit.

"Fu!" Killer B called.

Fu made the force pushing backwards work for her by deploying her wings and, using her ongoing momentum, fly upwards and do a U-turn.

"Don't worry, I'm fine!" she said.

"You won't be fine after this," Obito said, as he started to make hand seals. "Wood Release: Deep Forest Emergence!"

The earth started to rumble, as large wooden roots broke through the ground surface and quickly lashed at the two jinchuriki. However, rather than being forced into the defensive, the two jinchuriki chose to actively fight against the attacking weeds. Fu turned her arms into blades shaped like the jaws of a stag beetle, and used them to slash the offending vines, while Killer B dashed around them, delivering precise cuts with his lightning-infused blades.

"Your attacks are weak, your moves are the same," Killer B rapped. "Do you plan to catch us with something so lame?"

"I don't need to catch you!" Obito angrily replied, as he started making hand seals. "I only need to keep you distracted until the Ten Tails is reborn! Then all I have to do is feed you to it! Fire Release: Great Fireball jutsu!"

Obito breathed an admittedly large fireball that flew towards the two jinchuriki, which burned so hot it left a trail of scorched earth underneath. Fu, however, wasn't intimidated, and made some hand seals of her own.

"Water Release: Great Waterfall Jutsu!"

Fu expelled a large amount of water from her mouth, moving forward with the force of a torrent. The two elemental forces clashed, the fireball quickly overwhelmed by the power of Fu's watery attack. Before the attack could reach Obito, the Uchiha leaped into the air, and began to jump around using the floating boulders as stepping stones.

" He's right. He might not be strong enough to beat us, but he's doing a good job stalling us!" Fu thought, a little panicked. Her eyes drifted towards the statue, hidden behind the crimson barrier. "I can feel that thing growing stronger with every second. We need to finish this as soon as possible!"

While Killer B and Fu dealt with Obito, Naruto was fighting the two Wood Golems as well as he could. While the golems were very big, Naruto moved faster, so he thought to use that as his main advantage. Not to mention being able to fly thanks to Shukaku's chakra.

" Hey, Naruto, I think you might want to use the Tailed Beast form," Kurama suggested.

" You said Hashirama used these to fight Tailed Beasts and Madara's Susanoo, right?" Naruto asked. " If I do that, then I'll be at a disadvantage. I'll do better fighting as a human."

" We can see your logic, but in this case it might be better if you change forms," Han said, as he winced by how narrowly Naruto avoided a hand slap from a giant. " It would be easier if you fought to their level."

" I think Naruto might be onto something. Just look how easily those monsters took down his friends when they were transformed," Yagura chimed in. " They hit hard, but a big enemy is also a big target."

"Heh, nice to see that somebody gets me," Naruto said out out. He started to make hand seals. "So, focused attacks won't work, let's see how wide area attacks do then! Lava Release: Scorching Rocks Jutsu!"

Naruto expelled a multitude of large projectiles made of molten rocks from his mouth. The dragons wrapped around the golems' bodies reacted as expected, breathing greenish-yellow fire at the incoming attack. They managed to neutralize about half the lava missiles, while the other half found their marks and hit the golems. Naruto could hear a sizzling sound as the molten rocks ate through the golem's wooden limbs and body, but sadly, it wasn't enough to cause significant damage.

Then, the golems decided it was their turn to attack. Each of them cast one hand towards Naruto, who felt a chill down his spine as multiple spikes started to grow from them.

"Shit, this looks awful... !" Naruto said with a loud gulp.

" Naruto-kun, use my chakra to counter that attack!" Kokuo suggested.

" Nice idea! You might not have my armor, but this jutsu should do just fine," Han said, as he told Naruto what he needed to do.

Naruto made the required the hand seals, and with Han's help, he molded the chakra the way he was told.

"Boil Release: Skilled Mist Jutsu!"

Just as the golems fired a barrage of wooden stakes at him, Naruto exhaled a huge cloud of corrosive mist towards them. The moment the storm of spikes entered the cloud, they quickly burned away, disappearing before even reaching the end of the cloud. Naruto poured more chakra into the attack, both to make the corrosive cloud stronger and to push it faster towards the golems.

The golems, however, weren't going to just stand there and take it. The two of them clapped their hands once, producing such a powerful shockwave it pushed the cloud back, while also sending Naruto flying backwards. The blond screamed as he spiraled down to the ground below. Fortunately, a cloud of sand formed below him, braking the fall, while lifting him upwards.

" And you're welcome!" Shukaku said, giggling a little.

" Heh. Nice save, Shukaku," Naruto told the Tanuki.

" We told you we'd have your back, didn't you?" Utakata asked.

" Naruto! You okay?" Kurama asked.

" I'll live," Naruto replied. " Though not for long if I have to endure another thunderclap from hell like that. Much less two."

" Hey, Naruto! Why don't you try me and Han's combo?" Roshi suggested. " It would roast those golems really good really fast!"

" I can attest to that. I would try it if there was just one golem, but with two, they can cover each other," Naruto replied.

" Naruto, you're trying to defeat the two of them at once, because one won't let you focus on the other," Isobu calmly said. " But you don't need to take them out permanently. Try to keep one's attention away from you while you deal with the other."

" Guess that could work, but what could I-" Naruto was about to ask, as an idea dawned upon him. A grin spread across his face. " I think

I have the perfect way to do that! Thanks Isobu!"

Once again, Naruto maneuvered his sand cloud towards one of the golems, flying around it like an annoying insect, hoping to get a reaction. Reaction that it came in the form of another gigantic hand swatt, something Naruto was expecting. He quickly jumped out of the cloud, landing on the giant's hand. Naruto then slapped the giant's hand.

"Coral Palm!"

The moment Naruto's hand touched the wooden surface, a coral formation appeared, and started to spread around it. Naruto then slid down the giant's body and right leg, creating more spots where coral appeared and started to spread. While unnoticeable at first, the coral quickly spread around the golem's right side of its body, slowly but surely impairing his movements. As Naruto touched the ground and ran away in the opposite direction, the golem's attention shifted from Naruto to the coral, and tried to break it with its other hand.

The other golem, however, continued to chase Naruto. The blond quickly created another cloud of sand to avoid being crushed under the giant's steps.

" Ingenious idea, Naruto," Yagura praised. "But that jutsu won't be enough to incapacitate a creature the size of that golem. He will be able to get rid of the coral in less than a minute."

" No... but less than a minute is all what Naruto needs," Yugito said, smiling and nodding, realizing what the Konoha ninja was going to do.

Naruto turned towards the incoming wooden giant, and smirked.

" Roshi, Han... pay attention, because you guys are going to love this..." Naruto mentally said, as he prepared his next attack.

Naruto created several arms of golden chakra and used them to form two Rasenshuriken, one at each of his sides. However, rather than their usual look, one Rasenshuriken was crimson red with black edges, and the other was pure white. Both of them were releasing so much heat, the air around Naruto appeared distorted. The blond wasn't perturbed, though.

"First, let's get rid of that annoyance!" Naruto said, looking at the serpentine dragon wrapped around the golem's body, as he started to make hand seals. "Fire Release: Mouse Hairball!"

Naruto exhaled a large, blue, mouse-shaped fireball from his mouth, which flew towards the serpentine dragon. Said dragon opened its jaws once again, releasing a stream of greenish-yellow flames. However, the large blue fireball then split into dozens of smaller ones, which flew around the stream of fire, and homed into the dragon's head, blasting it to ashes.

"Clever use of my jutsu, Naruto!" Yugito praised.

"Heh, thanks! Now to finish this big guy for good!" Naruto mentally replied. "Lava Release: Spiraling Eruption! Boil Release: Spiraling Geyser!"

Naruto launched the dual attack, one shuriken of chakra flying in an arc in the opposite direction of the other, before the two of them crashed against the golem from different sides. The attacks exploded into a dome of spiraling magma and a dome of spiraling burning, corrosive mist, which merged into a single dome of infernal heat. The golem was burned to nothingness by the sheer power of Naruto's combination attack, while carving a large crater when it once stood.

Roshi let out a whistle. "Wow, that was amazing! Something worthy enough to be written in a book!" Roshi praised.

"An admirable rework of our combo," Han said.

" Unfortunately, Naruto-kun can't celebrate just yet," Kokuo said. Indeed, Naruto could see that the golem was stomping towards him. "The other golem broke free of the coral, and it's getting ready to attack again."

" One golem won't be a problem for him," Kurama said, smirking confidently. "Say, Naruto, are you going to use the same jutsu you did the last time?"

" Not exactly the same. You'll see," Naruto said, as he started to prepare a Tailed Beast Ball. However, rather than shooting it, Naruto pulled out his Wind Blade, and channeled the Tailed Beast Ball through it. The sword projected a gigantic blade made of the chakra that formed the Tailed Beast's ultimate attack. "Disappear already, you overgrown pile weeds! Tailed Beast Blade!"

Like he had done during the fight with Hashirama, Naruto brought down his blade in a vertical downwards slash, cutting the golem in two as if it was made of soft butter. However, it didn't end there: upon cutting it, the blade of Tailed Beast chakra exploded in a gigantic, fiery blast, engulfing the golem, and reducing it to ashes as it happened with its "brother". When the explosion receded, there was nothing left of the giant creature, and a large crater had been opened when it once stood.

"And both of them down for the count!" Naruto said, pumping his fist as a sign of victory. He could sense Killer B and Fu still fighting against Obito. "Alright, better hurry and help them finish that asshole off for good!"

...

While Killer B and Fu continued their duel against Obito, the three of them saw and heard the explosion that heralded Naruto's victory over the wood golems.

"Ha! Look at that! Looks like your little wooden dolls were no match for Naruto!" Fu laughed, before suddenly growing concerned, as if she realized she said something stupid. "I mean, I said 'little' in a pejorative way, not in a literal way. I know they aren't little at all."

" You know a word as big as 'pejorative', yet you care about us not understanding basic sarcasm," Gyuki pointed out, as a drop of sweat slid through his head. "Yep, definitely not just B."

"Hey guys, sorry to keep you waiting!" Naruto said, as the cloud of sand slowly dispelled once the blond touched the ground. "Those overgrown bushes were pretty tough, but nothing I couldn't deal with, with the help of some of the new friends I made," Naruto boasted good naturedly, before his eyes were fixed on Obito. "Alright, now I'll keep Obito busy. See if you guys can bypass that barrier. Try to bombard it with-"

"Hey boss, we're here! Sorry for being late."

Naruto, however, was interrupted when something rose from the ground beneath Obito. The blond recognized Zetsu, the seldom seen Akatsuki from which those clones were produced from. Next to him was a long haired man clad in black armor that neither Naruto nor Killer B or Fu had seen in their lives. Still, they couldn't help but flinch when they sensed the sheer power the man was radiating, or when they noticed that his eyes were Rinnegan. Then again, there was somebody who did remember.

" It's... it's HIM!" Kurama said, trembling with anger. "MADARA!"

"Whoa, it's that Madara!?" Naruto asked out loud, much to Killer B and Fu's surprise, who were now looking at the newcomer with other eyes.

Madara couldn't help but smirk a little. "Oh? Do you know me? Did we- no, wait, it isn't you. It's that fox. It still remembers me, doesn't it?"

Naruto could feel Kurama's anger burning so fiercely, it felt like there was a small sun inside him. He worried if Kurama might explode at the presence of the man he hated the most.

"Took you long enough," an unamused Obito said, as he glared at his mentor. "Had you come earlier instead of fooling around, we would have won already."

"Do not fret, Obito. That was an insignificant setback. As you can see, I'm back and ready to show..." Madara trailed off, as he turned around, and saw the crimson chakra barrier that was hiding the transforming statue behind it. "Did you... did you start the Ten Tails transformation without capturing the remaining jinchuriki first?"

"I was left with no other choice," Obito rebutted. "If you had been here earlier, we could have done this properly. "

Madara let out a sigh of resignation. "Guess it can't be helped right now. Let's subdue them while the Ten Tails revives, then we'll continue with the plan," he then took a look at Naruto. "Given that you're the jinchuriki of the Nine Tails... you must be of Uzumaki descent, am I right?"

"Yeah. Naruto Uzumaki's the name," Naruto said. "Burn that name into your mind, because it's the name of the ninja that's going to kick your ass back into retirement."

"Look at that! A small ninja with big bravado and even bigger mouth! Breaking you will be fun," Madara said, before his Rinnegan rested on Killer B. "A Kumo ninja... you must be the jinchuriki of the Eight Tails and..." Madara finally looked at Fu, and his expression was that of mild disgust. "... a Takigakure kunoichi. I hated that Hashirama foolishly gave the Tailed Beasts to other villages, but the fact that he decided to give one to such a disgraceful village like yours nearly drove me insane."

"... disgraceful!?" Fu repeated, before her expression morphed into a scowl of anger. She punched her palm menacingly. "Sorry Naruto, but I'm going to be the one to pound him into the ground."

"Ah, more bravado, isn't youth something so precious?" Madara said condescendingly.

"Naruto, while I want nothing more than seeing you beating the living daylights out of this asshole, Madara is an extremely powerful ninja," Kurama advised. "Plus, just like the Old Man said, he has the Rinnegan. Which means that he must have Wood Release as well. As he stands right now, Madara Uchiha is currently the most powerful ninja who ever lived."

"Plus, he isn't even alone. He has Obito and that Zetsu creature to help him," Matatabi added.

Naruto, however, was feeling confident. "Don't worry guys, we have reinforcements of our own as well."

Then, as if on cue, Madara's attention was drawn elsewhere, as he sensed a new chakra signature coming their way. A very powerful chakra signature that for some reason, felt strangely familiar to the former Uchiha Clan head.

And then, she appeared. Flying high into the sky, covered in a shroud of flame-like lavender chakra, was no other than Hinata Hyuga. Obito frowned, while Naruto and Fu grew visibly excited, and while Killer B didn't know who this girl was, his fellow jinchuriki's reaction eased him into smiling. In no time, Hinata landed close to the three jinchuriki, and went quickly to greet them.

"Hinata!" Naruto said, so excited he didn't even use the usual honorific reserved for her. "You're here!"

"Sky sister!" Fu cheered as well. "It's so great to see you!"

"Hello, Naruto-kun. Fu-san," Hinata greeted. "I'm glad to see that I didn't arrive too late."

"You didn't. In fact, you arrived just in time," Naruto assured her.

Hinata nodded, and then looked at the one person she didn't know, the Kumo ninja that wore sunglasses. She walked towards him, and bowed before him politely. "Hello. I don't think we know each other. My name's Hinata Hyuga. It's a pleasure to meet you."

"Hey there, the name's Killer B, and I'm also a jinchuriki as you can see. So, you're the girlfriend Number Nine told me so much about. Once this is over, we should all hang out!" Killer B rapped.

"I'll be honored to," Hinata replied.

"Hey, as much as I'd like to see you here, how did you know we were here?" Naruto asked.

"Hanabi-chan told me. We can talk to each other through long distances thanks to the Six Paths Chakra we both possess. She told me how the second division was almost annihilated," Hinata said, before her expression hardened, and pointed at Madara. "By him."

That shocked the three jinchuriki. Did Madara nearly wiped out a division of thousands of ninja, all by himself?

"The massacre of that division... Gai-sensei... it was you?" Naruto asked, his chakra cloak flaring with his anger.

Madara's expression remained unchanged. "Yes, it was me. And I would have wiped them out completely, if it wasn't for that man and his self-sacrificing jutsu. They proved to be mostly unworthy adversaries. Even the two Uchihas. Even the girl with the Wood Release-"

"Kaida!" Naruto shouted, worrying and anger growing bigger. "If you did something to her or Hagane, I swear-"

Hinata, however, placed a hand on Naruto. "Don't worry, Naruto-kun. Hanabi-chan told me that your siblings are okay. So are Sasuke-kun, Itachi-san and Neji-niisan and his teammates."

That managed to calm Naruto down, but only a little.

Madara's eyes now rested on Hinata. "So, I presume that you're the older sister of that Hyuga little girl with the Tenseigan, aren't you?" he asked, chuckling a little. "Yes, you appear to be older and more experienced. You should have a much better hang on that power of yours than her. Perhaps you'll offer a better dance."

"Hinata, forget about that guy! We need to destroy the Statue before it transforms into the Ten Tails!" Fu urged. "Obito hid it behind that barrier. Try to break it with your black ball thingies!"

"Number Seven's right, these guys don't matter, go and make sure that barrier shatters!" Killer B agreed.

Hinata nodded, and after making the required hand seals, she summoned no less than eight Truth Seeking Balls, much to the jinchuriki's surprise. With a hand motion, she directed the black orbs towards the barrier.

" And Obito can't use his Kamui to send them to his pocket dimension like he did with mine," Naruto thought, as his mouth curved into a grin of satisfaction. "Or else he'll allow me to recall mine."

The moment Hinata's Truth Seeking Balls moved, Madara immediately activated his Susanoo, reaching the humanoid form. A sword appeared in one of its hands, and it moved to swat away the black orbs. However, rather than the orbs simply breaking through the sword, it was the sword who deflected the orbs away.

"What!?" Hinata asked in shock. "How...?"

"Wait..." Naruto said, as he narrowed his eyes. He could feel that Madara's chakra had changed, as so did his appearance. He now had green marks on his forehead and around his eyes. The exact same marks Rin and Hashirama had when they used Sage Mode. "The hell!? You have Sage Mode too?"

"How!?" Fu asked.

"Do you really think I'd have a hard time learning such a simple skill?" Madara mockingly asked, as his Susanoo started to vanish. He made a single hand seal. "Now, this is a jutsu I was unable to try against the Ninja Alliance, but your little group will make for a fine test. Limbo: Border Jail!"

Naruto and Hinata's eyes widened, and fast as lightning, they moved forward, placing themselves between the other two jinchuriki and the two rogue Uchiha and their plant man servant. There was a clashing noise, and much to Killer B and Fu's confusion, it appeared as if Naruto and Hinata were struggling to keep in place an invisible enemy each. Obito appeared to have trouble following what was going on as well.

"What the... what are you guys doing?" Fu asked. Despite her Sage Mode, she couldn't sense any chakra in front of Naruto and Hinata.

"Naruto-kun, can you see them too?" Hinata asked.

"No but... I can sense them!" Naruto replied, before, fast as lightning, pulling out his Wind Blade and use it to eviscerate whatever invisible enemy Madara had summoned.

Hinata followed suit, delivering a devastating combo of lightning-enhanced palm strikes. Madara scowled.

"The girl can see the Limbo clones, even if it should be impossible. Probably because of that Tenseigan of hers..." Madara wondered, before his eyes rested on Naruto. "And the Uzumaki boy... yes, it's unmistakable, he has Six Paths Chakra as well. But how?"

"Guys, stay close to us! We'll protect you from those invisible clones!" Naruto told his fellow jinchuriki.

"It won't be necessary," Madara said, taking a step forward. "Given that you proved to be the biggest threats, I shall take on you personally. Obito, Zetsu, deal with the other two jinchuriki. Wood Release: Nativity of a World of Trees!"

The earth started to rumble once again, as multiple cracks opened across the battlefield, caused by many gigantic wooden roots shooting from underground, spreading everywhere, covering the barren land with trees once again. Fu and Hinata flew into the air to avoid Madara's attack, while Naruto and Killer B jumped from one side to another as the roots lunged at them.

"Let's dance!"

Fast as lightning, Madara leaped towards Naruto, and assaulted the blond with a flurry of strong, fast paced punches. Naruto was able to block most of them, even if he needed to create additional arms to do so. A purple flash alerted Madara of Hinata's presence, who in turn attacked Madara with several lightning-enhanced Gentle Fist strikes, releasing purple bolts of lightning with each strike, forcing the Uchiha back.

Naruto took the initiative once again, this time attacking with his trusty Wind Blade. Madara generated a black chakra rod from each of his hands, and used them as improvised weapons in order to parry Naruto's blows, as well as to throw counterattacks on his own. As they traded blows, Madara was able to knock the Wind Blade out of Naruto's hands, and deliver a powerful kick to the chest that sent the blond flying. Madara started to make one handed seals while he reached for his gunbai.

"Fire Release: Great Fire Hurricane!"

Madara swung his gunbai while simultaneously breathing fire into the swing. The wind and fire attacks merged into a massive tornado of flames that threatened to engulf the blond. Naruto, however, raised a hand, and with the help of two additional chakra arms, began to form a Rasenshuriken, except he imbued it with water chakra instead of wind chakra as he usually did.

"Water Release: Spiraling Torrent!"

Naruto threw a gigantic spinning water shuriken at the incoming tornado of flames. Upon crashing, Naruto's attack exploded into a spinning dome of raging water, powerful enough to stop, and finally put out Madara's blazing attack. The water hissed as it was turned into steam by the intense heat of the fire, producing a large cloud that spreaded around the battlefield.

Hinata took advantage of the situation, and once again dived at Madara from the air, her palms crackling with electricity.

"Lightning Release: Double Thunder Palm!"

Unfortunately for the Hyuga, Madara saw the attack and used his gunbai to block the attack. The moment Hinata's hands slammed into the war fan, it began to glow with a white light. Madara smirked at her.

"Uchiha Return!"

The absorbed energy of Hinata's attack was reflected back at her, and the young Hyuga Clan Head was send flying backwards, painfully bouncing on her back a couple times on the ground.

"Hinata!" Naruto cried, before glaring at Madara. He started to make hand seals as fast as he could. "You won't be able to toss this back at me. Fire Release: Mouse Hairball!"

Naruto breathed a massive sphere of blue fire that flew towards the former Uchiha Clan Head. Madara dropped one of the chakra rods, and held a hand towards the incoming projectile.

"Fool. Perhaps not, but did you forget that I can absorb any ninjutsu?" Madara said, as a smirk spread across his face. "Gakido!"

Madara's hands projected a barrier of white light that extended in front of him. However, before the blue fireball could crash into the barrier, it split into dozens of smaller fireballs that arched around him, avoiding the barrier, before they crashed on Madara's back, which was engulfed by the resulting chain of explosions.

"Nice hit, Naruto!" Yugito praised. "You're getting the hang of mine and Matatabi's powers!"

Fighting off the pain of the unexpected attack, Madara flexed his chakra in order to blow the cloud of smoke that formed around him away, only to see Hinata in front of him, which quickly delivered a palm strike to his abdomen, knocking the air out of him and forcing him to bend over, before delivering yet another strike to his lower jaw, sending him flying backwards.

"Naruto-kun!" Hinata called him, while tossing him back his lost weapon.

"Thanks, hime!" Naruto said, as he caught the hilt of the sword, which projected a blade of wind chakra as soon as he touched it. "Keep attacking! Don't let him not even a second to breath!"

"Yes!" Hinata agreed.

Jumping back to his feet, Madara spread his arms open just as Naruto and Hinata converged on him from opposite directions, ready to strike him down.

"Shinra Tensei!"

The air shimmered for a fraction of a second, before the two Konoha ninjas were blasted away by a powerful, invisible force in opposite directions. Not wasting any second, Madara leaped towards Naruto, ready to continue the beating while he was down. However, even before he could get back to his feet, a giant golden claw shot from Naruto's body towards Madara, trapping the Uchiha within its strong grip.

Madara, however, immediately broke out of the hold by manifesting his Susanoo, first the ribcage, then the body, arms, and head, forming the upper half of his humanoid form. He brought down a massive blue hand to crush down the jinchuriki, but he managed to dodge it with a few well timed backflips.

"Lightning Release: Twin Lion Fists!"

Hinata rocketed at Madara from behind, her hands covered in an aura shaped like the head of a lion, with electricity crackling around it. The Hyuga Clan head slammed one of her lion fists onto the back of Madara's Susanoo, causing a crack and making the whole construct shiver. Madara glared at Hinata, and before she could deliver another strike, the Susanoo used one of its extra arms to swat her backwards.

While she was hit hard and the strike hurt, Hinata managed to stop herself mid air, and started to make hand seals, while her Truth Seeking Balls started to spin in a circle in front of her.

"Amethyst Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

The spinning black orbs merged into a single sphere of purple light, which exploded into a storm of lightning bolts that shot forward. Madara's Susanoo was pelted by a rain of powerful lavender bolts that began to crack chip away pieces of his Susanoo. Madara's eyes flashed for a second, and his Susanoo not only regenerated, but it reached the Perfect Form.

Naruto and Hinata, however, weren't intimidated. Naruto exploded into a mass of golden light that took the shape of Kurama, with him floating inside his head, while Hinata's Avatar of Kalika grew out of her body, leaving the Hyuga floating inside its head just like Naruto. Naruto and Hinata took a moment to notice the chakra avatar the other was able to manifest.

"I see that your time on that island was well spent, Naruto-kun," Hinata said, smiling at her boyfriend.

"I could tell the same about you and the Moon, hime," Naruto replied, returning her smile.

" Leave that for later, lovebirds! Madara! Focus on Madara! " an annoyed Kurama urged.

"You are powerful for two so young, but you're still beneath me," Madara said, as his Susanoo unseathed a katana. "Neither the Nine Tails nor that for armed avatar is something that I haven't beaten before. And that was before gaining the Rinnegan and Sage Mode."

"Did you beat the two of them together?" Naruto asked.

"No, but I'm always willing to welcome new challenges," Madara said, as his Susanoo held his free hand open, generating several shards of blue chakra. "Yagata Magatama!"

With a wide swing of its arm, Madara's Susanoo launched the barrage of magatama-shaped projectiles at Naruto. Too big to dodge them, Naruto used his chakra tails to deflect them away. He was unable to swat all of them away, with some finding their marks, exploding upon touching the avatar of golden chakra.

"You're mine, Nine Tails," Madara said, smirking in triumph as he started to make hand seals from within his Susanoo. "Wood Release: Wood Dragon Jutsu!"

A serpentine wooden dragon burst from the spot in front of Madara, which lunged towards the Kurama chakra construct and quickly wrapped around it, immobilizing it and binding its chakra. The construct tried to bite the dragon, but its bite simply lacked strength to make any dent on the wood. Then, the katana on the Susanoo's hand started to glow with a bright white light.

"Like I said before, you can't use the power of the Nine Tails to harm me, its true master," Madara boasted, as his Susanoo charged forward, ready to strike him down.

"Naruto-kun!" Hinata cried, as she moved her Avatar of Kalika to intercept Madara.

Just as the Susanoo brought its katana down, the Avatar of Kalika got in the middle, and used its two upper arms to block the blade with its hands. The energy behind the swing was still released in the form of a circular shockwave that slashed and shattered some of the trees Madara had summoned earlier, but Hinata's chakra construct managed to resist.

The Avatar's lower hands started to crackle with electricity, and before Madara could counterattack, the Avatar slammed both hands into the Susanoo's chest, making it tumble backwards, dropping the katana in the process. Forgetting about Madara for the time being, Hinata turned around, and making use of the Avatar's many hands, she managed to get the wooden dragon away from the Nine Tails-shaped construct, and tossed it away.

"You okay, Naruto-kun?" Hinata asked.

"Yeah," Naruto said. "Heh, guess this is why I was told not to use the Tailed Beast from when fighting against a Wood Release user."

"We can still avoid that if we work together," Hinata said, as she eyed Madara, whose Susanoo was getting back to its feet. "If I'm near you at all times, I can destroy any wooden roots created by Madara before they wrap around you and bind your chakra."

Another pulse of chakra from the statue behind the barrier shook the land. They were running out of time. They had to defeat Madara as soon as possible!

"Hey, I have an idea!" Naruto said, as he punched his open palm. "Hinata, ride me!"

The Hyuga was taken aback by Naruto's request, as her face began to redden. "Naruto-kun! This is not the time to-"

"I mean, have your avatar ride Kurama as if it was steed!" Naruto clarified, much to the Hyuga's relief. "That way, the two of them can fight as one!"

"That... might not be a bad idea after all. Alright, let's do it," Hinata said, as she moved her Avatar to ride Kurama. Once she was sit on the golden fox, two of its tails wrapped around the purple chakra construct in order to keep it in place. "I'm ready!"

"Me too!" Naruto said, as he got up. "Let's go!"

Like a knight riding a horse, Hinata's Avatar of Kalika charged forward while riding on Kurama's golden avatar. Madara, whose Susanoo was already back on its feet, looked at the combo with a smile of amusement.

"What do you plan to achieve doing that?" Madara asked, as he started to weave more hand seals. "Wood Release: Nativity of a World of Trees!"

The ground started to shake as more trees started to emerge from the ground, moving towards Naruto, trying to wrap around it like the wooden dragon had done so before. However, Madara wasn't the only one making hand seals, Hinata doing the same as well.

"Six Paths: Lightning Release Thunderbolt!"

The Avatar of Kalika's hands started to crackle with electricity, and shot multiple lightning bolts from its fingertips towards the incoming trees, blasting them into splinters and burned leaves. More and more trees kept coming, but Hinata continued to burn them to a crisp, firing lightning bolts from four different directions, keeping the Kurama avatar safe.

"Good work, Hinata! Keep it like that!" Naruto said. "We're getting close to him! Get ready to strike!"

"Yes!" Hinata said.

Naruto slammed the Kurama chakra construct into Madara's Susanoo with all his might, pushing it backwards, but not with enough force to make it topple down again. Fortunately, there was more to his tactic than a mere tackle. Using the tails wrapped around the Avatar of Kalika, he threw it into the air towards the blue Susanoo.

"Hinata, now!"

Hinata didn't have to be told anything else. While the Avatar was mid air, she made it raise its legs in order to dropkick Madara. And indeed, the moment its feet smashed against the tumbling Susanoo, it was pushed backwards, making it land on its back, producing a thundering, earth shaking boom. The Avatar of Kalika also had a similar effect when its feet touched the ground as well.

"Madara is out for the count!" Hinata said, before her eyes moved towards the crimson barrier. "Naruto, do it now!"

Naruto nodded, and began to prepare the biggest Tailed Beast Ball he could. He knew he had the power to blast that thing into nothingness.

...

While Naruto prepared to finish the statue off and Hinata kept Madara busy, Killer B and Fu also were on the verge of finishing their fight against Obito and Zetsu. While Fu engaged Obito, Killer B was dealing with his main minion. And while the former fight was more or less even, let's say that the dual plant creature was having a less than ideal time against the Kumo jinchuriki.

"S-Stay away from me, you freak!" the white half say, as he nervously weaved hand seals. "Wood Release: Underground Roots Jutsu!"

Multiple roots emerged from underground in an attempt to subdue the Kumogakure ninja, but Killer B easily cut them off with his lightning-enhanced shot swords while he advanced towards the Akatsuki member.

"Is this all what you can do, to csmmon some weed? If that's the case, you better concede," Killer B said.

"And stop with the damn rhyming!" Black Zetsu complained, as he made more hand seals. "Wind Release: Breakthrough!"

Zetsu blew a powerful gust of wind at Killer B, but once again, the Kumo jinchuriki's speed proved to be too much for the plant being, and easily dodged the attack, while getting even closer to him.

"You think that some breeze is enough to beat my thunder? Fool, fighting me to begin with was your biggest blunder!" Killer B said, as his whole body crackled with electricity. "Now get ready, this is a move only my brother can withstand! It's going to be awesome, it's going to be grand! THUNDER LARIAT!"

Killer B charged at Zetsu at, fittingly, lightning-fast speed. Still the plant-like beign was able to quickly sink underground, dodging the attack at the last minute.

"There's no way we can beat this man," the white half whimpered.

"Agreed. Let's stand back and bid our time. We won't be of any use to Obito and Madara-sama if we die..." the black half said, as the dual being sunk into the ground completely.

"So, the walking plant flees at the sight of my awesome power! All that chump could do was cower!" Killer B rapped, sounded a little disappointed to see his opponent leaving the fight like that. Oh well, it's not that there weren't enemies left to fight. He looked at Fu, still engaged in a fight with Obito. "Hmmm, decisions, decisions. Should I help Number Seven with the other guy with the wood, or should I go for the statue and break it for good?"

"Fu seems to be doing well against Obito, so you should better go for the statue," Gyuki suggested. "Naruto and Hinata should be keeping Madara busy, meaning that you should have a clear shot to destroy it."

"It's decided, then! In that case I better-"

BOOOOOOOM!

Needless to say, Killer B was stunned by the massive explosion that came from the spot where Naruto and Hinata were fighting against Madara. More specifically, the spot where the barrier holding the Statue was. Needless to say, both Fu and Obito also stopped their fight in order to gawk at the huge pillar of red chakra that shot into the sky. Once the pillar receded, there was nothing but a large, thick cloud of dust in its place.

"Hey, looks like Number Nine did it before me! Not that it bothers me, it fills me with glee!" Killer B cheered.

"I can no longer sense the statue's chakra! I think Naruto did it!" Fu said, sounding hopeful, before a realization dawned upon her. "No, wait a minute... that explosion didn't feel like Naruto's chakra... in fact, it felt like-"

A loud, high pitched roar, more like a screech filled the air. From the cloud of dust, a large single red dot of light could be seen. Wind started to blow from within the cloud, blowing it away, revealing what was inside it.

A titanic creature, probably four hundred meters in height, its skin dull brown in color. It had a bulb-like body, with long arms ended in claw-like fingers. It had no lower body, with ten tails as long as its body growing where the legs should be. There were many spike-like protrusions growing from its back, the bigger one looking like a conical conch shell.

It had an oval-shaped head that was connected to the body without anything resembling a neck. The head had a huge mouth filled with rows of sharp teeth. Above the mouth was a massive, single red eye that looked like a Sharingan with nine tomoe around it.

Fu paled. Killer B watched in horror. Obito smirked.

"Your time is over! Marvel and despair at the sight of the creature that will be both your end, and the harbinger of a new, better world!" Obito boasted. "The Ten Tails!"

The newly reborn Ten Tails let out another roar as if to emphasize Obito's introduction.

Author's Note: And after an agonizing wait, Hinata finally reunites with Naruto, as well as Fu and Killer B, ready to help them fight the final battle! Man, I was really dying for Hinata and Naruto to be together again. Now that everybody else had their time to shine under the spotlight, it's time for the fic's power couple to end this story with a bang.

Of course, Hinata isn't the only one to return. As you could see, Madara is back and ready to continue his rampage. Unfortunately for him, Naruto and Hinata together are completely able to match his power.

You know, I kinda hated how after Naruto got the abilities of all the Tailed Beasts, all he did was use a Lava Rasenshuriken (which didn't seem to be that different from a normal Rasenshuriken) again Madara, as well as, again, nine Rasenshurikens powered by each of the Tailed Beasts against Kaguya. I wanted to have Naruto use those abilities in a more creative ways. Seriously, Magnet Release, Boil Release, the spreading coral, Yugito's homing fire attacks... those powers could make Naruto into an incredibly versatile ninja, but all he ever did was Rasenshuriken of a different color. Even if I myself had Naruto use Tailed Beast chakra to power Rasenshuriken, at least I hope the effect was different from a normal one.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Next week, the battle against the Ten Tails. In the meantime, tell me what you think about this chapter in a review. Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Ten Tails: The Living Cataclysm

Author's Note: Up to this point, the final battle has been pretty close to canon, even if I tried to give it my own spin in order to stop it from being a direct copy-paste (you guys know how much I hate those), but from this point onwards, things will diverge more and things won't go the way you expect to.

Even then, I'm sure you'll enjoy what I have prepared:

Chapter 128:

The Ten Tails: The Living Cataclysm

or

Go go jinchuriki!

Konoha, Hokage Tower

For the past few weeks, the Hokage's office had been vacant. While the administrative staff continued work as usual without Jiraiya and most of the ninja personnel, none of them ever thought in using the office reserved for Konoha's highest commander.

Then, a burst of smoke happened seemingly spontaneously, and the office wasn't vacant anymore, as from the smoke emerged Jiraiya and Tsunade.

"Good, we're here," Jiraiya said, as he moved towards the desk, and started to look for something inside the drawers. "Okay, where is that thing..."

"Too bad we didn't think of telling the toads to create a gateway to the Allied Ninja Forces HQ," Tsunade said, as she rubbed her arms while Jiraiya looked for whatever item he was trying to find. "We're going to take a lot of time to reach Naruto."

Shortly after Orochimaru's final defeat, Jiraiya was again contacted by Kosuke. Turns out, after the attack on Genbu Island, Shima had been keeping an eye on Naruto per Jiraiya and Tsunade's request, and both he and his fellow jinchuriki had been ambushed by Obito and a bunch of reanimations. Needless to say, the two of them decided to join Naruto and the others in order to help them, but they were too far away from their position.

Fortunately, there was the Reverse Summoning Jutsu. Like he did many years ago, Fukasaku put a special temporary seal on Tsunade that allowed her to be summoned towards Mount Myoboku. Then, using Gamamaru's getaway to the Hokage's office, they returned to Konoha. And now, they would be heading towards the north, to help Naruto. They only needed his exact position.

"AHA!" Jiraiya said, pulling out what appeared to be a map of the Elemental Nations. Pushing some of the documents and office supplies to the side, he placed the map on the desk, and made a hand seal. Three symbols appeared on the map, all three of them in the Land of Fire. Two of them appeared to be together in the central part of the country, and the third one was in the northeast part, close to the border with the Land of Hot Springs. "Alright, here's Naruto. And these two are Kaida and Hagane. Nice to see that all three of them are still good."

"I had forgotten about those tracking seals you had placed on the kids before Naruto went on his first mission out of the village," Tsunade said, looking at the map. "Didn't you say you were going to remove them after they became Chunin?"

"I guess I did say that, but I kinda forgot. It's been quite a few busy years, you know," Jiraiya said, as he rolled the map and put it on a pocket. "Aren't you happy that I didn't?"

"Hurrah for convenient forgetfulness," Tsunade deadpanned. "Come on, let's go. Our children need us."

Jiraiya nodded, and the two of them left the office via the window.

...

Site of the Final Battle

Naruto, Hinata, Fu and Killer B watched in horror at the colossal abomination towering over them. Its massive size made the Tailed Beasts and Hinata's Avatar of Kalika look puny in comparison. Neither of them knew how they were going to fight against something so large, even with the power the four of them had together.

"So... that thing's the Ten Tails?" Fu asked, her voice quivering a little. "Wow... its size is a little worrying."

"That thing is the combination of several of our siblings, of course it was going to be big," Chomei replied. "And it isn't even at its full power, still lacking Gyuki, half of Kurama and me."

"I'm afraid this won't be like fighting a normal Tailed Beast," Hinata said, as she eyed the monster. "And Kami knows what kind of power that creature has..."

"What the hell? Why can't I sense anything from that beast?" Naruto asked. "Its chakra should be massive, but I'm sensing none!"

"You're right, its chakra is massive," the Nine Tails began. "And as for why it can't be sensed... think of it like Earth's curvature. The planet may appear flat from our point of view, but that's because we're so comparatively small our eyes can't see it. The same thing goes with the Ten Tails' chakra."

Naruto both deflated and shaken. "Geez... that fills me with so much confidence..."

That moment, Naruto felt something: his connection to his Truth Seeking Balls had been restored. Meaning that Obito had opened a gate to the Kamui dimension. And indeed, looking towards Obito's position, he could see the rogue Uchiha teleporting. Taking advantage of the opportunity, Naruto quickly recalled his nine Truth Seeking Balls, all of them flying out of the spiraling portal just as Obito disappeared.

"Yes! Come back to me!" Naruto cheered.

"Don't celebrate so soon, Naruto. That monster is not just a Tailed Beast, but a force of nature," Saiken warned. "That means that it's nature energy itself. So the Truth Seeking Balls won't be of much use against it."

Naruto deflated again. "Of course. It was much to ask that Obito had made a mistake," Naruto said, now realizing why Obito decided to use Kamui again.

"Still, I'd say it's still better than not having them. They can still be useful," Utakata said.

Obito reappeared on top of the Ten Tail's head, with Madara landing next to him. Madara then crouched down, and placed his hand on the bark-like skin. Then, two stalks of flesh shot from below them, and latched them onto the two Uchiha's spines, allowing them full control of the beast. Madara, however, grunted disapprovingly.

"Just as I feared," Madara said.

"What were you fearing?" Obito asked.

Madara turned at his disciple, and shot him an unamused glare. "Because of the haphazardly way you revived the Ten Tails, its chakra is mostly unstable and imbalanced. If either of us tried to become its jinchuriki, the imbalance would eventually kill us from the inside out. The Ten Tails needs to be complete before I can become its jinchuriki."

"That's just a minor inconvenience," Obito said in a dismissive tone, as he looked at the enemies below him. "Even if it's not at its fullest, the Ten Tails' power is unmatched. All we have to do is beat those fools down below, and have the Ten Tails devour its remaining pieces of power."

"Very well then. Let's do it your way, given that we have no other options," Madara said, as he turned his gaze to the three jinchuriki and the Hyuga.

"Don't act so disappointed. You want to see the Ten Tails in action, and this is the perfect opportunity to do so," Obito replied.

Madara smirked. "Yes, I admit that's a bright side to an inadequate situation, in my opinion at least. Well, let's see what this creature is capable of."

The Ten Tails let out another ear-piercing, screeching roar, before it dragged itself towards the Uchiha's enemies, causing the earth to tremble, and leaving a large trail of clouds of dust in its wake.

Of course, the sight of the titanic abomination charging towards them caused Naruto and his friends to panic even more.

" That thing's coming towards us ready to attack! Should we met it head on or better fall back?" Killer B asked.

" For the time being, run!" Kurama warned. "Let's see what it does, and when we find an opening, we launch a counterattack!"

Everybody seemed to be okay with Kurama's plans, as the four giants turned around and began to run away from the even larger giant chasing them, or, in Fu's case, fly away.

" Fu and Chomei, you better stay above us! We'll try to keep their attention on us, and once they're distracted, hit them from above!" Kurama said.

" Got it!" the transformed jinchuriki agreed.

Despite its lack of legs, the Ten Tails didn't take much time to bridge the gap between it and its preys. Reaching down, it brought a massive hand towards Kurama's form. Naruto managed to jump in time to dodge, but the titanic hand slamming into the ground produced a shockwave that sent the three earthbound giants tumbling away in different directions. Fortunately, they were able to regain their balance and turn against the incoming monster.

" Running away has no perk, no choice but to face that jerk!" Killer B said.

"Understood. Let me attack first, I'll try to create an opening for you to exploit," Hinata suggested, as her Avatar of Kalika charged forward.

The Ten Tails repeated the same action as it did before, and tried to crush Hinata under its massive hand. The Hyuga Clan Head, however, was prepared for such action, and made the Avatar spin in place.

"Six Paths: Heavenly Spin!"

Due to its size, the Avatar couldn't spin as fast as Hinata did, and thus couldn't produce a dome of protective chakra. Instead, blue streams of chakra quickly orbited around the spinning avatar, creating a lesser but still similar effect. When the hand slammed into the Avatar, the force of the spin pushed it backwards, but unfortunately it wasn't enough to negate the force behind Ten Tails' smack, and Hinata's Avatar was also violently pushed backwards as well, the chakra giantess falling on its back as it slid backwards.

"Hinata!" Naruto screamed.

" Don't mind her! Focus on the enemy in front of you!" Kurama reminded Naruto.

Before Naruto could attack, the Ten Tails balled its hands into fists, and slammed them into the ground with as much force as it could muster. The result was a shockwave that pushed the Eight and the Nine Tails backwards with even more force than the Avatar of Kalika, while shattering the ground around them, sending a multitude of rocks flying in every direction.

Their preys knocked down, the Ten Tails lunged forward, ready to consume them. There was, however, one more jinchuriki that hadn't made her move. Taking advantage of the fact that it wasn't paying attention to her, Fu dived towards the titanic abomination headfirst.

" Horn Buster!"

Fu's frontal horn glowed with a green aura and doubled in size and length, ready to gore both the Ten Tails and the two Uchihas riding its head. However, before she could reach it, one of its tails moved and slammed into the giant bug before she could have the chance to get any close, sending her tumbling back like a disoriented fly who had been swatted by the tail of a cow.

"Fu!" Naruto yelled, as the Nine Tails Avatar got back on its feet.

" The strength of that thing is massive!" Kokuo said in horror.
"There's no way we can survive against that thing in a close fight!"

" The eyeball looks like an obvious weak point. Perhaps you should aim your attacks on that spot?" Yagura suggested.

"Let's attack at once! He can't defend from three different directions!" Naruto suggested.

Both Naruto and Killer B prepared a Tailed Beast Ball each, while Hinata's Avatar of Kalika started to make hand seals.

"Sage Art: Twin Lion Assault!"

" Tailed Beast Ball!"

The Avatar of Kalika thrust its palms forward, releasing two large blasts of lavender chakra. The blasts took the shape of lions whose bodies were ended in large tails rather than back legs, looking like they were ready to pound on their prey, leaving a trail of purple light as they flew.

Obito and Madara, however, didn't look fazed in the slightest.

"Let's show these maggots how big is the difference in power between us and them," Obito said.

The Ten Tails opened its jaws wide, and like the Nine and Eight Tails before it, gathered chakra on its mouth in order to form a Tailed Beast Ball. This ball, however, was almost three times as large as a normal Tailed Beast Ball, crimson in color with black edges, and blue lightning crackled around it. The Ten Tails then swallowed the ball whole, before releasing it in the form of a wave of destruction. Making a wide sweep, the chakra beam not only nullified the incoming attacks, but it still carried more than enough power to blast its opponents.

Naruto and Killer B wrapped their Tails around themselves, forming a makeshift protective shell that took most of the blast. Unfortunately, Hinata's Avatar of Kalika had no such defense, and the lavender chakra construct was blasted into oblivion. Hinata managed to abandon it in time, but the resulting explosion sent her spiraling into the ground, landing with a loud thud.

"Hinata!" Naruto yelled again.

While the Ten Tails took care of its groundbound enemies, Fu decided to test her luck once again. Rather than melee, she decided to use a Tailed Beast Ball as well. In the case the Uchihes decided to absorb it, it would leave them vulnerable to other attacks.

" Tailed Beast Ball!"

As the ball of energy descended upon the Ten Tails, the two Uchihas noticed the attack getting closer each time.

"Oh, that annoying fly is still there," Madara flippantly said.

"She won't be there for much longer," Obito added.

Without deigning to look at her or her attack, the Ten Tails used one of its tails to almost casually swat the Tailed Beast Ball away. The attack landed somewhere far away, detonating upon crashing into the ground. Then, with another tail whip, the Ten Tails violently send Fu crashing against the ground near her fellow jinchuriki.

"Not Fu too!" Naruto shouted again.

"You have no time to worry about your friends, Uzumaki," Madara said, as he made a hand seal.

The Ten Tails once again opened its jaws to prepare yet another Tailed Beast Ball, much to their horror.

" The trick of using the tails as a shield won't cut it a second time!" Gyuki said. "We have to counter it with a Tailed Beast Ball of our own!"

" But our individual Tailed Beast Balls don't have enough power to match those of that monster!" Chomei whined.

" In that case, let's join our forces! Let's pour of chakra into a single Tailed Beast Ball!" Kurama suggested.

Shaking off the pain, Fu forced herself back on her feet, and joined her fellow jinchuriki. The three Tailed Beasts began to gather their chakra into a single point, quickly creating a Tailed Beast Ball much bigger than anyone they could produce on their own. The problem, though, is that it was still about half the size the one the Ten Tails was prepared.

" This is getting rough! No matter how hard we try, our power just isn't enough!" Killer B panicked.

"In that case, then let me try something!" Naruto said.

The Uzumaki motioned his hand forward, and his nine Truth Seeking Balls shot towards the forming Tailed Beast Ball. The nine orbs then sunk into the giant sphere of energy. As the Truth Seeking Balls dissolved into the Tailed Beast Ball, their power incorporating into it, it pulsated as it grew in size. It still didn't match the Ten Tails' power, but at least it was close enough.

"Enough of this nonsense. Disappear!" Madara yelled.

" Aim at the lower part of the opposite ball! That way, they will go upwards when they clash!" Yugito urged.

Both Tailed Beast Balls shot forward, meeting each other in the middle, pushing back and forth. And like Yugito had said, the balls started to move upwards as they tried to overpower the other one. After a few moments of struggling, both balls detonated at once, producing a massive explosion that cleared the sky of any clouds.

Even if the explosion happened far from the ground, the resulting shockwave shook the earth to the core, sending multiple chunks of rock into the air, and pushing the three jinchuriki and Hinata violently backwards, bouncing on their backs multiple times. Naruto, fortunately, managed to catch Hinata with a chakra arm before the poor Hyuga could be sent into the horizon.

The Ten Tails, however, wasn't affected by explosion, and was able to remain in place, unaffected by the gigantic blast.

The three jinchuriki felt their forces slowly disappear as they shrank back to their human forms. They weren't even able to use their chakra cloaks.

"I'm sorry, Naruto, but I've been spending a lot of energy, and those attacks didn't help," Kurama said, sounding a little apologetic. "I'm afraid I'll need some time to regenerate my chakra."

"I'm also at my limit. I need to rest for a bit," Chomei said.

"Same here. It pains me leaving you to your own devices against such a threat, but we have no choice," Gyuki added.

"Damn..." Fu cursed, as she looked at the one-eyed abomination in front of her. "How the hell are going to fight that thing without Lucky Seven and the others?"

"I don't know, but we will!" Naruto insisted. "We don't need to win right now, just buy them some time to rest and recover some of their chakra, and we can do that!"

"Quite the persistent fellow, isn't he?" Madara deadpanned, shaking his head. "Even in the face of certain doom, his confidence doesn't waver."

"You have no idea," Obito said, rolling his eyes. "That blond brat has been a thorn at my side since our mission started."

"I can imagine. But you know what they said," Madara said, as he issued a command to the Ten Tails. "Confidence is the fool's substitute of intelligence."

The Ten Tails opened its jaws again, and prepared to charge another Tailed Beast Ball, much to the Konoha, Taki and Kumo ninja's horror, as they began to panick, not knowing what to do do counter another of those monstrous attacks.

"Perhaps I'm overdoing it, but, this should be enough to beat any fight out of you without killing you or the Tailed Beasts within you," Madara said, as the Ten Tails prepared to attack.

Naruto desperately wracked his brain in order to find a way to avoid the incredibly destructive attack.

"I know! Let's fly into the air! Fu, grab Killer B!" Naruto said, as he summoned a cloud of sand beneath his feet.

"Will be able to fly high enough to avoid the explosion?" Hinata questioned.

"We have no other choice! Now let's-"

Before Naruto could finish talking, the Ten Tails fired the giant crimson sphere of chakra for the second time in a row. As Naruto and the others prepared to take off, he suddenly sensed a new chakra signature joining the battle, and indeed, an individual dressed in green and blue with silver hair blurred past him, drawing everybody's attention for a second.

"Kakashi...?" Fu asked.

Because indeed, Kakashi was now rushing towards the incoming attack. He jumped into the air, and touched it with one hand as his Sharingan transformed into its advanced stage.

"Kamui!"

Kakashi created a spiraling vortex that completely sucked the Tailed Beast Ball away, as well as himself, saving the jinchuriki and Hinata from being hit by the powerful attack. Naruto was left with his mouth agape, trying to process what had happened.

"Wait... did Kakashi-sensei just...?" Naruto stammered, fearing for the worst. That moment, he sensed Kakashi's chakra signature once again. Turning around, the silver haired Jonin was there, not any worse for the wear.

"Don't worry, Naruto, it was just a Shadow Clone," Kakashi assured, and he could see how a wave of relief washed over the son of his late mentor. "I needed to make sure that thing exploded in the Kamui dimension. Or else Obito could have tossed it back at us again."

"Naruto! Hinata!" Kurenai's voice called, as she and Haku landed besides Kakashi. "Good to see you two are okay!"

"Nee-chan!" Hanabi's voice said, and Hinata saw her little sister flying towards her. The two of them celebrated their reunion with a tight hug.

"It seems we arrived just in time," Haku said.

"And we haven't come alone!" Hanabi chimed in, as she broke the hug.

Suddenly, Naruto's senses were overwhelmed as thousands upon thousands of new chakra signatures entered the place, many familiar, while most others were unknown. Then, a few seconds later, many more ninjas, not just from Konoha, but from the other four Great Villages, and some of the minor ones as well, started to land all around them.

"The First Division is here!" A announced, as the Raikage and the ninjas under his command landed on the ground, Team Asuma among them.

"The Second Division has arrived!" Kurotsuchi said, floating above the battleground, as what was left of her battered division joined the battle, including the Uchiha brothers, as well as the remaining members of the Close Combat Squad.

"The Third Division is here as well," Mei stated, as she, followed by Zabuza and the other Swordsmen of the Mist, lead their troops, Anko's Assassination Squad among them.

"The Fourth Division is ready to fight," Rasa stated, flanked by the Sand Siblings.

"So is the Fifth Division!" Mifune said, as his troops followed him, Kakashi's students among them.

"The Medical Division is here to provide relief to the wounded!" Shizune said.

"The Sensory Division has arrived as well!" C stated.

"The Air Force is here!" Konan said, as a large group of ninjas riding flying animals covered the skies.

Thousands upon thousands of ninjas converged upon them. Everybody was here! Even he could sense Shisui, who had now joined Sasuke and Itachi in the Second Division, as well as Sai, who had reinforced the Air Force with several of his ink birds. There were, however, two people the blond couldn't sense.

"Hey... I'm not sensing Mom and Dad... shouldn't they be here as well?" Naruto asked, as a knot began to form in his stomach. He then felt Kurenai placing a hand on his shoulder. The Genjutsu Mistress smiled at Naruto.

"Don't worry, Tsunade-sama and Jiraiya-sama undertook the task to put an end to Orochimaru, once we were able to pinpoint the position of his hideout," Kurenai explained. "And given that all the reanimations in all battlefields were dispelled, I said their mission was a resounding success."

"Even if they may not be in condition to join us in battle, I'm convinced they're still alive," Kakashi added.

Naruto nodded. Yeah, they were right. Wherever they were, Naruto knew they were still alive. And now, he needed to win this so he could come back to them alive as well. He took a step forward, and looked at the titanic monster in front of him, feeling now much more confident than before. He punched the palm of his hand.

"Alright, time to take that monster down!" Naruto said.

"What's going to be the plan?" Hinata asked.

" Naruto, Hinata," a voice called them inside their heads. After a brief shock, they realized it was Ino using her telepathy. "The Alliance HQ devised a plan on our way here in order to take down the Ten Tails. You're the last ones to learn about it. I'll try to make it brief, so pay attention."

" Got it, Ino!" Naruto said.

" We're listening!" Hinata replied.

" First, we will blind the creature..."

Following the Raikage's directions, multiple Kumo ninja rushed forward, split into two groups, one led by C and the other lead by Darui. The first group moved a few steps ahead of the second, and began to make the same sequence of hand seals.

"Blind it!" the Raikage ordered.

"Lightning Release: Lightning Flash!"

The dozens of ninjas using this technique in tandem produced a pillar of incredibly bright white light. The Allied Ninjas were already expecting it and shielded their eyes in time, but Madara, Obito and their pet abomination weren't so lucky, and took the attack in full.

"Now that we disoriented it, destroy its eye!"

Darui nodded, as he and his clansmen started to weave the same chain of seals, before bringing their hands together, forming a finger gun.

"Storm Release: Laser Circus!"

Darui and his clansmen fired a barrage of chakra beams, which were all directed towards the Ten Tails' eye. The creature instinctively closed its one eye and reared its head back in order to avoid the barrage of bright beams, all of which crashed against its face, resulting in a series of explosions.

On top of the Ten Tails' head, Madara watched the ninjas below him attempting to cripple the beast under his and Obito's control, and seethed.

"We can't let them take the initiative. Let's wipe them out in one blow!" Madara said, as he ordered the Ten Tails to move forward and attack, even if it was temporarily deprived from the sense of sight.

Letting out a screech of agony, with its eye still closed, the Ten Tails was forced to follow Madara's mental command, and lumbered forward.

" The Ten Tails will attack us in retaliation, that's why the next part of the plan involves hindering its movements..."

Kurotsuchi flew above a large group of ninjas, about half of them from Iwagakure, including her father Kitsuchi, but there were many from other villages as well. She landed in front of them, and pointed forward.

"Okay, guys, our turn! Let's reshape the battlefield!" Kurotsuchi ordered, as she and her troops started weave seals for the same jutsu. "Earth Release: Moving Earth Core!"

Kurotsuchi and her ninjas slammed their palms into the ground at once, sending underground waves of chakra towards the Ten Tails' position. Suddenly, sections of the terrain under the titanic beast started to raise or lower seemingly at random, causing it to lose its balance and fall to the ground on its face. It attempted to push its body back with its arms, but the constantly changing terrain caused it to fail.

" And once the Ten Tails can't move, we will make OUR move!"

"Now, quickly! Everybody, attack! Ignore the monster! Take Obito and Madara out!" Rasa ordered.

The entirety of the Allied Ninjas rushed forward, hollering and screaming battle cries, while many of them firing various elemental ninjutsu forward. Unfortunately, the Uchihas riding on top of the Ten Tails weren't going to just let the enemies reach them so easily.

"It's insulting how much they underestimate us," Obito snarled, as he sent a mental command to the Ten Tails.

The Ten Tails screeched in response, and like it did before, raised a hand, clamped it into a fist, and slammed it into the ground with all the strength it could muster, shattering the ground even further, and sending a destructive shockwave that sent both the incoming Allied Ninjas as well as many chunks of rock flying backwards.

Naruto, Hinata and Fu were able to stay mid air, and Naruto created a multitude of sand clouds in order to catch other ninjas close to him. However, it was safe to assume that a frontal attack like that wasn't going to work.

"What the enemy doesn't realize, though, is that the first wave is only a distraction for the second one, that will come from above!"

And indeed, while the Ten Tails smashed its fists on the ground, the air force moved in, all of them diving towards the titanic beast, like birds of prey ready to dig their claws into their next meal. Konan was leading the charge.

"I'll attack first and create an opening! Attack after me!" Konan said, as she dived down.

Obito noticed the airborne ninjas that were upon them. Upon seeing Konan leading the charge, the last member of Akatsuki scowled in anger an irritation.

"Konan. Figured that traitor would be here," Obito seethed. Madara also looked in the same direction. "I'll make sure that bitch doesn't leave this battlefield alive."

"Paper Drizzle!"

From her wings, Konan rained a massive storm of razor-sharp paper sheets towards the two rogue Akatsuki. The two Akatsuki raised a hand towards her, and prepared their counterattack.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Thanks to the two gravitational blasts, Konan's paper rain was stopped on its tracks, and dispersed to the winds. The blue haired woman smirked, already expecting such attack to counter hers. In fact, she hoped for one of them to use Shinra Tensei, but the fact that the two of them used it at once was even better than she thought.

"Now, attack!" Konan ordered. "There's a five second interval until they can use that jutsu again! Don't use elemental ninjutsu, the two of them can absorb chakra! Engage them in close combat and overwhelm them with numbers! They can't move without detaching themselves from the beast!"

Like an angry swarm, the airborne ninjas descended upon Madara and Obito, who didn't look that perturbed upon realizing they fell into a trap.

"Look at those insects coming at us. Thinking they have a chance," Madara chuckled condescendingly. He turned at his disciple. "Shall we give them a reality check?"

Obito made a hand seal. "I'm way ahead of you. Wood Release: Thousand Cutting Sprigs!"

The Ten Tails raised three of its tails, aiming their tips towards the thick of the air force, and fired a storm of sharp wooden stakes. The first line of fliers were taken down almost in its entirety. Those behind them were able to move in time, but many of them were still unable to dodge the brutal attack.

"Shit! Fall back, fall back!" Konan ordered, as she tried to dodge the barrage of wooden spikes as best as he could.

Unfortunately, the attack wasn't just aimed at the air forces. Due the angle they were fired, the stakes flew in an arc, curving down towards the thick of the Ninja Alliance ground forces, who all watched in horror the rain of death that came from above. Most of the ninjas ran away trying to avoid the sharp projectiles, but others tried to counter the Ten Tails' attack.

"Wind Release: Rasenshuriken!"

Naruto, with the help of several of his clones, threw five shuriken of wind chakra upwards. They exploded into spiraling spheres of furious razor sharp currents, shredding some of the wooden spears to bits.

"Lightning Release: Heavenly Thunderstorm!"

"Fire Release: Heavenly Firestorm!"

Hinata and Hanabi flew towards the incoming barrage of spears, and started to spin mid air as they released elemental chakra through every point of their bodies, turning into spinning spheres of lightning and fire, respectively, blocking some of the spears while sending lightning bolts and bursts of flames to stop nearby ones they were unable to reach.

"Carapace Shield!"

Reactivating her Chomei Chakra armor, Fu also flew towards the rain of spears. She generated two large shields attached to her forearms in the shape of a beetle carapace, making them as big as possible, before facing them towards the storm of sharp wood. The spears broke upon hitting the extremely hard and durable shields.

Other ninjas protected themselves and their friends and allies like they could, Haku raised ice barriers, while Kakashi, Karin and other Earth Release users raised rock barriers and domes, though some of them weren't sturdy enough to resist the wooden spears. Fire, Wind and Lightning Release users launched elemental blasts into the air in order to destroy the wooden spears. Gaara tried to create as much sand as he could and use them to form barriers around the ninjas close to him.

However, despite their valiant efforts, it wasn't enough to counter the rain of spears in its entirety, and many of them ended up finding their marks. Not only did the sharp sprigs painfully pierced through the thickest of armors, once it impaled somebody, additional sharp branches grew inside their victim's bodies, skewering them from the inside out.

Soon, the battlefield was filled with screams of pain and agony from the ninjas unlucky enough to be hit by such a brutal attack. This prompted Naruto into creating more shadow clones, and besides Rasenshuriken, he also mimicked Gaara by creating walls of sand, while also shooting waves of lava and streams of corrosive mist towards the incoming attacks. But no matter how much Naruto pushed himself, he simply couldn't match the power of such attack.

"Shit, they're massacring us! If I could use the Tailed Beast form..." Naruto growled, as he sensed many chakra signatures around him being snuffed in an instant. But Naruto realized that not even with Kurama's full power he would be able to counter this attack in its entirety.

" Don't despair. We still have a chance. This was nothing but a distraction so the Uchihas won't see the true attack coming," he heard Ino's voice inside his mind.

"Huh?"

Then, the earth started to rumble, and Naruto felt a massive chakra spike coming from near the Ten Tails' position. A spike of chakra former by three people that he knew.

...

While the Ten Tails fought the thick of the Ninja Alliance's forces, three young ninjas sneaked past the titanic beast, getting as close to it as they could without raising any suspicion. So far, it seems that it was working, as neither Obito, Madara nor their pet monstrosity noticed them, despite their very unique chakra signatures.

"Man, look at that..." Kaida said, looking at the Ten Tails in a mix of awe and fear. "That thing is even bigger this close..."

"Will we be able to restrain it?" Rin asked, sounding unsure. "I have restrained Tailed Beasts with my Wood Release before, but that thing is on a completely different level..."

"We will have to," Hagane stated, as he glared at the titanic monster.

"Is this close enough? Or do we need to get even closer to that thing?" Kaida asked.

"I believe this is enough," Hagane said, as he narrowed his eyes at the two Uchiha on top of the Ten Tails' head. "Otherwise we may risk being spotted."

"I don't think they're expecting a trio of ninjas to make any difference against a foe of such power," Rin replied, looking towards Obito as well.

"In that case, let's prove them wrong," Hagane said. "Kaida, Rin, you ready?"

"Yeah, give me a second," Rin replied, as she clapped her hands together, and closed her eyes. In a few seconds, green marks appeared around her eyes and on her forehead. When she opened her eyes, they were yellow instead of their usual brown. "Okay, now I'm ready."

"Me too," Kaida said. "Do your thing, bro."

Hagane merely placed both his hands on each of the girls' shoulders, and channeled his senjutsu chakra towards them, vastly increasing their power. Such peak of chakra wouldn't go unnoticed to their enemies, but it will be too late for them to do anything. Both girls made the same sequence of seals.

"Wood Release: Nativity of a World of Trees!"

The two girls screamed as they tried to pour as much chakra as they could into the jutsu, a bright silver aura flaring out of their bodies.

The earth started to rumble, before multiple gigantic wooden vines burst from underground around the Ten Tails, wrapping themselves around its neck, arms and all of its ten tails, stopping the barrage of piercing wooden spears in the process. The Ten Tails screeched in confusion as the gigantic roots and vines slowly immobilized it and bound its chakra. It tried to fight the vines away, but they proved to be too much even for its seemingly infinite power.

With a mighty pull, the vines and roots pulled the beast down, pinning it to the ground, and stopping it from moving completely. It squirmed in the grasp of the mighty wooden hold, but the vines and roots resisted firmly.

"Hot damn... look at that, we did it!" Kaida cheered. "It's completely bound! We totally did it! We submitted that monster to our awesome power! We-UGH!"

Kaida suddenly felt her legs become like jelly, and if it wasn't for Rin grabbing her, she would have fallen to the ground face-first.

"Easy there, sis. You expended a lot of chakra on that jutsu. All of us did," Hagane said, looking at the immobilized Ten Tails. "I doubt we'll be able to do this again."

"Yeah," Rin agreed. She also felt a little feeble. Reaching into her ninja tool pouch, she pulled out a soldier pill and popped it inside her mouth. "Now it's on the rest of them to make the most out of this opportunity."

Hagane slung Kaida's arm around his shoulder, in order to help Rin to carry her. "They will. Now let's go to somewhere safer."

...

Back on the battlefield, both the Allied Ninjas and the Akatsuki watched with a mixture of surprise and awe as the gigantic wooden vines grew around the Ten Tails and immobilized it completely. Obito and Madara both mentally ordered the Ten Tails to break its bindings, but the colossal beast was helpless against the gigantic vines.

Madara was able to sense where that attack came from, and most importantly, who were the ones behind it. One chakra signature in particular annoyed him more than the other two.

"That little girlfriend of yours is becoming quite the headache," Madara hissed, narrowing in the direction of the chakra signature. "If you aren't able to rein her in, then somebody must put her in her place."

Such comment caused Obito to shot a glare at his mentor. "If Rin becomes a bigger problem, I will deal with her myself. Me. You got that?"

Madara was about to reply, when his senses alerted him of a mass of chakra signatures that was getting close, and indeed, turning his sight to the front, he saw a mass of ninjas leaping towards their position, Naruto Uzumaki leading the charge, with Hinata, Gaara and Fu flying besides him. The blond had a Rasenshuriken in hand, which he tossed towards him, while other ninjas around him cast various elemental ninjutsu towards them.

" Smart. Either we waste a Shinra Tensei on those attacks, or we try to absorb them and become sitting ducks," Madara thought in realization.

Then, a shadow was cast above the two Uchiha. Looking up, they saw three Susanoo, one purple, another red, and another green, diving towards them from above. Realizing they had been cornered, Madara and Obito detached the stalks that linked them to the Ten Tails from their spines and jumped away before they could be overwhelmed by the sheer numbers, just as the Allied Ninjas landed all around the Ten Tails' body. Well, most of them.

"Naruto!" Sasuke yelled from above. "Itachi, Shisui and I will keep Madara busy! Try to release the Tailed Beasts if you can, while that monster is down!"

"I'll take care of Obito!" Kakashi volunteered, as he pursued his former teammate.

"Don't worry guys, I'll do it!" Naruto said, giving Sasuke a thumbs up, as he watched both him and his fellow Uchiha flying after the fleeing Madara. He then looked down at the Ten Tails, and scratched his head. "Okay guys, I need to release your true selves from inside this monster... any ideas? Because I don't think cutting him up will work..."

" Our father and his brother separated the Ten Tails' chakra from its body once. If they could do it, it can be done again," Kurama said, sounding certain. "You have the same power as my father, and that girlfriend of yours has Hamura's power. Between the two of them should be able to do it."

" Err... right. I better call her and we will figure out... uh?" Naruto was snapped from his thoughts as thousands upon thousands of new chakra signatures appeared around him, none of them remotely close to human chakra. However, looking around, he didn't see anything.

At least, not at first.

Thousands upon thousands of tumor-like lumps started to grow around the Ten Tails' body, and from those lumps, creatures of all sizes and shapes came out from them. Some of them were humanoid, other more animal-looking. Some were just as big as a human being, while others were as big as a Boss Summon. They still had a few things in common, such as lack of any eyes, a large mouth full of sharp teeth, and spikes and blades growing all around their bodies.

Without further ado, these Ten Tails Spawns immediately charged towards all the ninjas standing on its parent's body. Many ninjas were taken aback by the sudden appearance of these new enemies, albeit the rest of them were able to defend themselves. Still, the thousands upon thousands of Ten Tails Spawns quickly outnumbered the ninjas standing on top of the Ten Tails.

"We're being overwhelmed!"

"Retreat! Fall back!"

"The Air Force shall cover your retreat!" Konan said, as she and the other airborne ninjas launched their attacks towards the Ten Tails miniclones, giving the ground ninjas some room to retreat.

Hinata and Fu grabbed a nearby ninja each and help them flee, while Naruto and Gaara summoned multiple sand clouds in order to help other ninjas escape.

As the vanguard attacking group fell back and rejoined the thick of the army, the Ten Tails Spawns continued to pour out of the titanic beast's body, quickly jumping into the ground, giving chase the fleeing ninjas.

Fortunately, the rest of the army was already working on helping them avoid their chasers and rejoin the main group. Kurotsuchi led a large group of Iwa ninjas towards them.

"Alright, step one, raise a wall! A big one!" the Tsuchikage ordered.

Dozens of Iwa ninjas weaved the hand seals of the same jutsu, before slamming their hands into the ground at once.

"Earth Release: Earth Style Great Wall!"

An extremely long and thick barrier made of rock and earth burst from underground, bisecting the battlefield in two. The wall, being ten meters in height, three in thickness and a few hundreds in length separated the fleeing ninjas from the Ten Tails Spawns that gave chase. The abominations weren't deterred, and began to quickly climb over the wall.

"Now, step two! Create a moat of lava at the base of the wall!" Kurotsuchi said, as she and other members of the Kinryuu clan began to weave hand seals, before once again slamming their hands into the ground. "Lava Release: Eruption!"

The combined power of the dozens of Kinryuu ninjas summoned a large moat of lava at the base of the wall. Just when the Ten Tails miniclones were done climbing the wall, they haplessly fell into the lava moat, burning to death instantly. The clones weren't completely stupid, and upon seeing what had happened, rather than blindly jumping into the lava, they began to tear pieces from the wall and dropped them into the lava, in order to build a makeshift bridge.

However, Kurotsuchi's tactic already accomplished its goal, and the ninjas that went to attack Madara and Obito returned safely to the main group.

" Naruto," Kurama called. "I already gathered enough chakra for you to use the Chakra Cloak. However, I'll need to gather more in order to use the Tailed Beast form, so try not to squander it."

"Good, because I'm going to need it," Naruto said out loud, as he and Gaara landed on the ground.

They were quickly joined by Fu and Killer B. The green haired girl looked at the army of the Ten Tails Spawns and let out a whistle.

"Man, look how many of those fuckers," the Takigakure kunoichi said. "Just when we thought we had won, the Ten Tails creates an army out of nowhere."

"I guess Naruto, you, I and a few others could bypass them by flying, but then we'd be alone and unsupported," Gaara said. "And we can't just carry the entire army flying."

"Yeah, it looks like we're in quite the plight. I guess there's no other option but to fight," Killer B agreed.

"Well, we've been doing nothing but fight this whole time, so guess we can endure another battle or two," Naruto said. Then, he noticed who was alongside him, and smiled. "And hey, for the first time, all four surviving jinchuriki are going to fight together! That has to count for something!"

Gaara, however, shook his head. "You three, sure. But I'm no longer a jinchuriki anymore. Remember that Shukaku was extracted from my body."

Naruto, however, placed a hand on the redhead's shoulder. "Even if that's true, that doesn't matter. You will be always one of us, Gaara. Never think otherwise."

Gaara was a little taken aback by Naruto's statement, but the Suna Jonin smiled and nodded.

"Hey, don't forget about us!" Yugito's voice said from within Naruto's head.

" Indeed. Just because we aren't alive doesn't mean that we can't contribute," Yagura added.

" All of us are in this together, Naruto," Roshi said.

" We will do our part, no matter how little it is!" Han said.

" Besides, we do have a score to settle with the bastards who killed us," Uakata added.

Naruto was going to say something, when suddenly an idea dawned upon him. It was kind of crazy and he wasn't sure if it would work, but he had to try it. He owed the jinchuriki sealed inside him that much.

"Thanks for reminding me that you're still there, guys," Naruto said, as he made the hand seal of one of his favorite techniques.

"Because I just realized how can you be even more involved in this battle! Shadow Clone Jutsu!"

From five bursts of smoke, five clones appeared around Naruto. However, said clones weren't of Naruto; instead, they looked like the five jinchuriki that whose fragments of chakra sealed inside him. It took a couple seconds to the clones to realize what had happened. While Fu and Gaara were only taken aback a little, Killer B was shocked to see Yugito back in the flesh.

"Y-Yugito-chan? Is that really you?" the rapper asked, shocked.

Yugito stared at her hands, then looked at him in confusion.

"I think? I don't know... Naruto?" she asked. The other jinchuriki looked at him equally confused.

"Sorry guys, but you aren't really alive. I converted some of my chakra into yours to create those clones, so you guys can control them," Naruto explained. "I also converted some of Kurama's chakra into the chakra of your Tailed Beasts and added them to your clones.

Though, with how little Tailed Beast chakra you have, I don't think you'll be able to use Tailed Beast Chakra Mode like Killer B, Fu or myself."

"It's okay, Naruto. This is way more than what we could have expected," Yagura thanked him.

"Oh, one last thing. Sealing Art: Hardening Seal!" Naruto said, as he made a hand seal.

In a flash, several seals appeared on the cloned jinchuriki, before they vanished.

"There! That way you won't dispel in one hit like a normal Shadow Clone," Naruto added.

"Guys, look! They're crossing the moat!" Fu pointed out.

And indeed, the Ten Tails Spawns had already created multiple makeshift bridges on the lava, and were now advancing towards the Allied Ninja army. Naruto, however, wasn't intimidated.

"Let them come," he said, punching his palm, as his Six Paths Chakra Mode flared back to life, covering him in a cloak of golden flames, a nine Truth Seekings Balls appeared behind him, floating in a circle. "So they can get a taste of what it awaits to their daddy! Let's go, everybody!"

"Yeah! Ready, Matatabi?" Yugito asked.

" Sure! I'ts great to fight against by your side!" Matatabi excitedly replied.

"Now that we're no longer puppets in either mind or body, let's fight for the right side at least just once, Isobu," Yagura calmly said.

" Akatsuki will pay for the suffering they caused to the two of us," the three tailed turtle replied.

"You're not the only one with a pending score to settle! Come on Kokuo!" Han claimed, as bursts of steam came from his armor.

" I'm with you, Han," Kokuo assured.

"Let's make the most of this brief second chance, Saiken!" Utakata said, bubble pipe ready on his hand.

" Yeah, let's!" Saiken agreed.

Roshi at first didn't say anything. He just closed his eyes, and breathed deeply. Son Goku wondered why didn't he follow the lead of his fellow jinchuriki, and let out a shout and show off, and was tempted to ask what was going through the old man's head, but bit his tongue. Roshi then opened his eyes, and his lips curved into a small smile.

"Let's go..." Roshi began, as he took a fighting stance. "... Son Goku!"

The four tailed monkey couldn't help but smirk. "Took you long enough, you stubborn geezer! But as your race says, better late than never!"

With that, spearheaded by the nine jinchuriki, the Ninja Alliance charged towards the incoming army of Ten Tails Spawns, the air filled with the rumbling sound of thousands of steps, as well as the battle cries of the Allied Ninjas and the inhuman, high pitched screeches from the Ten Tails miniclones. In no time, the two armies clashed, and the battle to reach the Ten Tails began.

Of the nine jinchuriki, Gaara was the one who made the first move. He set his sights on a group of miniclones that were charging towards him. Little did they know that they were running towards their impending doom.

"Hey, Naruto, I don't think you ever saw me fighting in Sage Mode," Gaara said, as he waved his hands, summoning a truly massive amount of sand from underground. "Take a good look at this. Sage Art: Wind Release, Demonic Sandstorm!"

Gaara created a huge tornado out of sand. The tornado quickly engulfed the incoming Ten Tails Spawns, who flailed their arms helplessly as they were blown away by the tornado. Once he had captured enough of them, the redhead made his next move, and clamped his hand into a fist.

"Imperial Sand Coffin!"

All the sand in the tornado suddenly compressed into a sphere of sand, instantly crushing the Ten Tails Spawns to death.

"Whoa! Such an amazing jutsu!" Naruto praised in awe. "Now I can't wait to see what your siblings can do with senjutsu!"

"You will have the chance to witness their prowess," Gaara said. "What about you, Naruto? Even if I couldn't sense the immense power you have now, your new appearance suggests that you're way more powerful than the last time we met."

"Hehe, indeed I am! Now, what could I do to..." Naruto began, before he noticed the Truth Seeking Balls floating behind him. "Alright, I barely got to use these last time, let's not make the same mistake! Now watch this, Gaara!" Naruto said, with a wave of his hand, he sent his Truth Seeking Balls forwards, towards a group of miniclones that was coming towards him. He reshaped the orbs into black spears, and impaled them through the creatures, killing them instantly. "What do you think?"

"Less flashy than the kind of jutsu I'm using to see from you, but it gets the job done," Gaara acknowledged.

"Well, there's still plenty of enemies here that I can use to show you my more flashier jutsu, hehe!" Naruto chuckled.

Meanwhile, another group of Ten Tails Spawns were closing on Yagura. The former Mizukage, however, was unfazed, as he created a large circular mirror of water in front of him, facing the incoming monsters, before using his hooked staff to rotate the mirror.

"Water Release: Water Mirror Jutsu!"

The miniclones' reflection on the mirror jumped out of it, colliding with the originals, and pushing them backwards. As this happened, Yagura started to make hand seals, before slamming his staff into the ground.

"Rising Coral Ripples!"

From the base of the staff, a gigantic row of corals rocketed towards the Ten Tails Spawns in the ground, and were covered in coral before they could even get up. Taking advantage of this, Yugito landed besides Yagura and rushed forward, making hand seals of her own.

"Well done! Let me finish them off!" the Kumo kunoichi shouted, as her nails grew into long claws, which were then coated in blue flames. "Fire Release: Flaming Cat Claw!"

Yugito delivered several swipes at the Ten Tails miniclones trapped by the coral, slicing them to bits while simultaneously setting them on fire.

"Good job, Yugito-san. Those won't get back again," Yagura praised his fellow jinchuriki.

"True. Too bad there are still many of them ready to take their place," Yugito mentioned, as she looked at the incoming horde of miniclones. "Fortunately, even on this body, I still have more than enough energy to bring up some heat!"

"Heat you say?" Roshi asked, as he turned towards his fellow jinchuriki and Iwa ninja. "Hey Han, let's show these kids some real heat! What do you say?"

Han smirked under his mask. "Do you really need to ask?" Han replied, as he shot forward towards a group of incoming Ten Tails Spawns, steam pouring from every exhaust of his mechanized armor. "Boil Release: Eruption Tornado Kick!"

Han jumped forward as he delivered a steam-propelled roundhouse kick. Thanks to the steam propulsion, he managed to quickly spin while mid air multiple times, almost turning himself into a living tornado of boiling vapor, delivering a series of kicks towards his hapless opponents. Between the force of the attack and the power of the corrosive mist, the Ten Tails miniclones were quickly killed.

Unfortunately for Han, several miniclones noticed that he was wide open while spinning, generated several sharp spears from their bodies, not unlike those the Ten Tails had used on them before, and tossed them at the Iwa jinchuriki. Fortunately for Han, however, Roshi was near him, ready to cover his back at any time.

"Watch out, Han!" Roshi said, as he started making hand seals. "Lava Release: Molten Petal Rock!"

Roshi slammed his hands into the ground, creating a row of pillars made of molten rock, which not only blocked the coming spears - they were sharp enough and carried enough force to pierce through the molten rock, but they definitely didn't resist the intense heat and burned to ashes- but also struck the Ten Tails Spawns, setting them on fire while sending them flying.

"Nice save, Roshi. Guess I got a little carried away there," Han replied.

"It's okay. It's not easy not falling prey to that, given how real these Shadow Clones feel," Roshi said, as he flexed his fingers a few times. "Still, try not to drop your guard again."

"Don't worry. You won't have to save my skin again," Han told his senior jinchuriki.

Meanwhile, near them, Uakata was also taking care of some small Ten Tails Spawns, having trapping them inside bubbles. The beasts furiously pounded with their fists and claws at the bubbles, trying to break them, but to no avail.

"Don't bother, those bubbles are as hard as steel. You won't break them with mere brute force," Uakata said, as he made a hand seal. "Water Release: Explosive Bubbles!"

The bubbles started to glow with a pale blue light, before they detonated in a chain of explosions, dropping the charred corpses of the clones to the ground.

"Alright, next-"

"Sensei!" a voice shouted behind him. A voice that was very familiar.

Uakata turned around, and saw no other than Hotaru running towards him. Unlike that violet kimono and black shorts she used to wear often, she was now dressed as a Kirigakure ninja, forehead protector included. Before he realized, Hotaru had closed the distance, and almost tackled him to the ground with the force of a hug.

"Sensei!" she yelled again, tears coming down her cheeks. "Oh sensei, you're alive! You're really alive! I thought I had lost you! But how-"

Even if it pained him deeply, Uakata forced his disciple to break the hug. It was better to dash her hopes now than let them grow even stronger.

"I'm sorry, Hotaru, but... I'm not really alive," Uakata confessed. "I know it looks like it, but this is only temporary."

"Uh? I don't understand-"

"It's a bit complicated, and it would take too long to explain, and this isn't the place nor the time," Uakata stated, as he looked at another wave of Ten Tails Spawns coming towards them. "Naruto will be able to tell you everything you need to know. Now, we have to fight these creatures!"

Hotaru was taken a little aback. Why was Uakata saying that he wasn't really alive? She had so many questions, she wanted to tell Uakata so many things... but if her sensei had told him that, she better trust his word.

"I don't understand very much what's going on," Hotaru admitted. "But even if this is only temporary, then I'll take the opportunity to fight at your side one more time, sensei."

Uakata nodded in approval, and smiled, as the two of them met the new wave of enemies head on.

...

Meanwhile, away from the thick of the battle, Obito landed on the ground. Turning around, he saw Kakashi landing in front of him. Obito dropped his head, and sighed.

"Why I am not surprised to see you coming after me, Kakashi," Obito said. "And don't try to use countering Kamui as a excuse. I know why you are here."

"If you're thinking I want to convince you to see the error of your ways..." Kakashi said, glaring daggers at Obito. "You're sorely wrong. Perhaps when I learned of your survival, I might have wanted for you to return to your senses and come with us back to our home. But that time... that time is already gone.

"Ninjas who don't follow the rules are trash. But ninjas who abandon their friends are even worse than trash. You taught me that, Obito, and I took it to heart. And you abandoned your friends when you joined Madara in his mad quest for power."

"Am I worse than trash? Perhaps you're right, Kakashi. No ninja that lives long enough avoids becoming trash," Obito conceded, chuckling as if he found the situation funny. "But tell me, Kakashi, if those who abandon their friends are trash... then what are those who let their friends die?"

"DON'T YOU DARE!" came the reply, but it didn't come from Kakashi's mouth. Turning around, Obito saw Rin landing behind him. Her golden eyes glared at him fiercely. "Don't you dare use my death against Kakashi. Not after you killed Minato-sensei and Kushina-san. Not after so many people died as a result of your plan. Don't. You. Fucking. Dare."

"All I ever did, Rin, I did it for you. I just wanted to create a world where neither you nor anybody else had to die pointlessly in absurd wars," Obito said, trying to justify himself. "Madara and I will put an end to this falling system, and put a new, better one in its place!"

"If in order to create that new world so many people have to die, then that world doesn't deserve to exist. I don't want it to exist," Rin replied.

"Great changes are impossible without equally great sacrifices," Obito rebutted.

"And who decides who get sacrificed? You? Madara?" Kakashi angrily intervened. "No, Obito. This ends here. I'll make sure of it."

"Fine by me, then. I'm done trying to justify myself to you," Obito replied. "Come at me with everything you have, then!"

With that, Kakashi and Rin rushed towards Obito from different directions, ready to fight, and possibly kill, the man who was once their cherished comrade and teammate.

Author's Note: And thus begins the first half of the fight against the Ten Tails. I tried to make it different from the manga/anime. It was kind of tricky given the sheep scale of the opponent, but in the end I think I came up with something good, so I hope you guys think I did a good job.

And here's another reason as for why I didn't have Bunpuku share his chakra with Naruto: so I could have Gaara as my part of the "All Nine Jinchuriki fighting together as a single unit" scene. Because Gaara might not be a jinchuriki anymore, but Naruto will always consider him one his people. Plus, now that I think about it, I didn't even write a scene in the story so far where Naruto and Gaara fight together, did I?

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Omnious warning: things will get worse before they get better.

So, the final battle against the Ten Tails and the evil Uchihas finally begins! What are your thoughts on it? Share your opinion with a review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Taste of Despair

Author's Note: Hey, look at that, an update much earlier than you expected! Yeah, I decided that, since we're close to the end, I might as well don't make you wait anymore and release the last batch of chapters over the course of this week and the next one.

Also, after many years postponing it, I finally went to chapter 1 and edited the part of Minato and Kushina's bodies disappearing. I made that as a part of a subplot to bring them back to life, but I ended up canceling it because it was way too much trouble. I also added a couple disclaimers to warn people which somehow expect this story to be an OP Naruto with 400 bloodline limits and a harem.

Remember when I said that things would get worse before they would get better? Yeah, this is the part where they get worse. Enjoy:

Chapter 129:

The Taste of Despair

or

Newcomers at the Eleventh Hour

Site of the Final Battle

Kakashi and Rin rushed towards Obito from different directions. Once they closed the distance towards their foe, the two of them opened the fight with a punch. Obito extended both his arms and caught their fists on his hands. Obito didn't bother to use Kamui to become intangible. Past battles made clear it was useless against Kakashi. Knowing his former rival, Kakashi probably had a clone in the Kamui dimension ready to strike Obito whenever he sent a part of his body there.

He was only half right, though. Aside from a Lightning Clone, there were several Rin Wood Clones as well, all waiting for him to become complacent and rely on his Mangekyo Sharingan once the fight became too difficult. But Obito Uchiha wasn't a one trick pony. Madara wouldn't allow him to become one. Especially not now that he had such a vast array of powerful abilities at his disposal.

Kakashi and Rin then pulled out a kunai each with their free hand, and attempted to slash at the Uchiha. Obito, however, was already prepared.

"Asurato."

Another pair of arms grew under Obito's original arms, and used them to catch their other arms. Then, a third pair of arms grew under those, and morphed into a pair of chakra cannons. The tip of their barrels started to glow as they gathered chakra, ready to blast Kakashi and Rin at point blank. However, before he could do it, the two Konoha ninjas delivered a powerful double kick to Obito's chest, pushing him backwards and forcing him to release them, while his chakra beams fired in random directions.

Obito retracted the extra arms back into his body, and regained his balance with a couple backflips. Before his enemies had any chance to counterattack, he cast his arms towards them.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Kakashi and Rin were blown backwards by an irresistible gravitational push, sending them rolling on the ground. Meanwhile, Obito's hands flew through hand seals.

"I know Rin will survive this, but I'm not sure about you, Kakashi!
Wood Release: Great Spear Tree!"

Multiple thick but extremely sharp roots emerged from underground, and lunged towards Kakashi and Rin, ready to impale them. Upon noticing this, Kakashi forced himself to regain balance. The sound of a hundred birds chirping filled the air as one of his hands was covered in electricity. Whenever any vine came close, Kakashi quickly sliced it off with a precise swing.

"Rin, behind me!" Kakashi ordered.

Rin nodded, and hid behind her larger teammate's body. Of course, she wasn't planning to spend the entire fight hidden behind the silver haired man. Taking advantage of her temporary cover, Rin made several hand seals for a counterattack.

"Wood Release: Wood Dragon Jutsu!"

The earth started to rumble, as a serpentine green dragon made of wood burst from underground behind Rin. The medic nin jumped onto the vegetal beast's head, and rode it as it plowed through the field of sharp roots summoned by Obito. The dragon was eventually torn to shreds, but it already filled its purpose of letting Rin close to Obito once again. She jumped into the air, while making a hand seal.

"Wood Release: Wood Clone Jutsu!"

Three wooden clones grew out of her body, and shot towards Obito, two of them delivering a flying kick, and the third one with a kunai in hand. The Uchiha, guessing that Rin was baiting him into using the Deva Path on the clones, opted to jump backwards and avoid the clones as they landed, and engaged them in close combat. Obito generated a black chakra rod on each hand and used them to parry the clones' blows and to attack them. The Wooden Clones were much weaker than the real deal, their strikes predictable and slow, and they easily fell once he impaled them with his improvised weapons.

The real Rin, on the other hand, was a completely different story. Thanks to Sage Mode, her punches and kicks hit like a truck, and moved so fast even his Sharingan was having trouble keeping up with her. When he tried to stab her with one of his black rods, Rin caught it with her bare hand and shattered it as if it was made of thin glass, before delivering a brutal kick to the chest that sent him flying backwards.

And that moment, Kakashi decided to make his reappearance, bursting from underground, one of his hands still coated in lightning. Kakashi was already aiming his electric hand thrust to pierce a vital organ, and Obito knew he wouldn't survive such stab.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Once again, Obito was forced to rely on the Rinnegan's most powerful ability. But rather than using it against Kakashi -which would leave him wide open against Rin- he used it against the ground, shattering the earth and propelling himself upwards, avoiding Kakashi's lightning stab at the very last possible second. The Uchiha then arched above Kakashi and landed behind him, putting the silver haired Jonin between himself and Rin, who was no doubt already moving to strike him down.

But not if Obito attacked first. As fast as he could, he made the hand seals of the Uchiha's signature jutsu.

"Fire Release: Great Fireball Jutsu!"

Obito breathed a massive fireball towards Kakashi, whose back was still facing the Uchiha. Kakashi, however, was fast enough to move aside and dodge the fireball, as it continued traveling towards Rin, leaving a trail of scorched earth as it moved.

"Water Release: Water Wall!"

Of course, Rin wasn't going to just stand there and take the attack. The brown haired Sage expelled a torrent of water from her mouth, which given the elemental advantage as well as its superior power, it quickly snuffed Obito's fireball the moment the two elemental attacks clashed against each other, while the water continued forward with the force of a tsunami. With no way to counter it and his Kamui unavailable, Obito only saw one way to dodge the attack.

"Earth Release. Headhunter jutsu!"

Obito sank into the earth as if it was water, letting Rin's attack harmlessly wash over the spot he was a second ago.

Rin smirked. "Not bad, Obito. You developed a knack for quick thinking you didn't have when you were a child," she praised, as she and Kakashi looked around, wondering where would Obito strike from. Then, she started running towards Kakashi, and jumped into the air.

That moment, Obito burst from underground, just behind Kakashi's back, ready to skewer the copy ninja with one of his black chakra rods. But the moment he reappeared, he found himself at the receiving end of a powerful dropkick, courtesy of Rin. Obito grunted in pain as he was sent to the ground, rolling backwards.

"You forget that I can sense you. You won't take us by surprise," Rin stated.

Kakashi turned around, and taking advantage of his former teammate being wide open, decided to end the battle there and there, and rushed towards him, ready to stab him with his electricity-wrathed hand. That moment, Rin's eyes widened in shock.

"Kakashi, wait!" she shouted, extending a hand towards him.

"What-"

Too late. One second, Kakashi was moments away from putting Obito out of his misery, and the next one he found himself trapped between the jaws of what appeared to be a massive venus flytrap plant. Upon closer inspection, the copy ninja realized it was Zetsu, who had emerged from underground just in the nick of time to save his master.

Pushing the pain away, Kakashi forced the jaws of the flytrap open and jumped away from the strange Akatsuki.

"Good timing, Zetsu," Obito said, as he got back on his feet, and used the sleeve of his cloak to wipe out the blood trickling from his busted lip, which slowly regenerated.

"Figured you'd need a hand," the black half replied, as he looked at Kakashi and Rin.

"Rin," Kakashi said, his sharingan glaring at the newcomer. "Do you know about that other Akatsuki? Because he looks very different from the rank-and-file Zetsu we fought during the war."

"I saw him a few times shortly after my rebirth, but I'm afraid I know nothing about him," Rin admitted. "I'd expect him to have similar abilities to the clones."

"Please! Don't compare me with those mooks! I'm on a completely different level!" the white half protested, as he started to make hand seals. "Wood Release: Jaws of the Forest!"

The earth started to shake once again as large venus flytraps emerged from underground, big enough to eat an adult human in a single bite, and lunged towards the two Konoha ninjas, their large maws snapping constantly. Kakashi and Rin jumped away in order to avoid being bitten in half by the undoubtedly dangerous plants.

"Okay, that's something none of the Zetsu clones was able to do," Rin was forced to admit, as she threw a kunai with an explosive tag at one of the carnivorous plants coming towards her, blowing it up into multiple green chunks.

"Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

Kakashi breathed a stream of fire towards the incoming venus flytraps, burning them to ashes before they could get any close to him or Rin, spreading flames across the battleground. However, the flames were the cover Obito needed to get close to the copy ninja. He lunged towards his former teammate, ready to sink one of his black chakra rods into the silver haired man's flesh. Kakashi moved to dodge, but for some reason, his body fell prey to a sudden feeling of paralysis.

"What?" Kakashi asked in shock.

Obito smirked cruelly as he sank his weapon into Kakashi's body. Even if he aimed for his heart, the Konoha Jonin was able to move a little and was stabbed in the shoulder instead. Kakashi grunted in pain.

"You can thank Zetsu for his Spore Jutsu! Good luck trying to move again!" Obito said.

" Spore? When did he...?" Kakashi tried to recall when did the plant Akatsuki had doused him with spores, and remembered when he was trapped between the jaws of the giant flytrap. "It was then! But how-"

Kakashi's thoughts were interrupted when Obito delivered a brutal kick to the lower jaw of the copy ninja. Kakashi's head was snapped backwards as his body was flung back, bouncing a few times.

"Kakashi!" Rin screamed. She jumped in front of her fallen teammate, shielding him from the two Akatsuki, as her hands weaved through hand seals as fast as she could. "Wood Release: Wood Clone Jutsu! Earth Release: Earth Dome Jutsu!"

Several clones made of wood grew and jumped out of the original's body, placing themselves between the original and the two Akatsuki, while multiple chunks of rock and earth gathered around Rin and Kakashi, forming a defensive shelter.

"Alright, that should buy us at least half a minute," Rin frantically said, as she turned towards Kakashi, who was lying down on the ground. "Kakashi, are you okay? Can you hear me?"

"Y-Yeah..." he weakly replied. He grunted in pain again as his body twisted. "Ugh! I think those spores are doing something more than just paralyzing my body!"

"I'm working on it!" Rin replied, as she placed both hands on Kakashi's body. A green aura surrounded her hands as she started to treat his teammate. Thanks to her Sage Mode, she could sense Zetsu's chakra inside Kakashi's body. Apparently, the spores were draining his chakra and spreading microscopic roots through his body, destroying his cells. If untreated, it could kill him in less than an hour. Fortunately, the brown haired medic knew what to do. "Alright, I'm healing your wounds while expunging foreign chakra from your body. This won't take long..."

As Rin worked, Kakashi could feel how mobility slowly returned to his limbs, as the constant pain started to slowly fade away.

The dome shook as it was hit by an unknown ninjutsu attack. Cracks started to spread around it, but it resisted. Rin diverted some of her chakra to the dome, in order to repair the cracks. Still, their makeshift shelter wouldn't last much longer.

"Rin, stop. You can't heal me and fight those two at the same time," Kakashi replied.

"Is that a challenge?" Rin asked.

Another ninjutsu attack that made the dome shake. More cracks appeared. This time, however, Rin didn't bother to fix them.

"Bravado doesn't suit you," Kakashi rebutted.

"Okay. How about a rational explanation then? If I don't force those spores out of your body, they'll drain your chakra, use it to multiply, and eat your body from the inside out," Rin explained. Despite Kakashi keeping his usual poker face, Rin could sense how his chakra wavered when she told him what she was stopping from happening. Then, her hands stopped glowing. "Plus I'm done already. Try not to get too close to that thing."

"Duly noted," Kakashi said, as he sat up, just as their shelter was blown away by another ninjutsu attack. A fire one, given the orange flash of light the two of them saw.

Fortunately, they were able to jump in order to avoid the next attack, another mass of vines that came after them.

"What the...?" the white half of Zetsu asked in shock. "That guy shouldn't be able to move!"

"Don't underestimate Rin. She's one of the best medics Konoha had the luck to have," Obito rebutted. "That's why I wanted to keep them separated. Though I doubt they're going to let us."

And thus the two Akatsuki resumed their duel against the two Konoha ninjas.

...

Meanwhile, on the main battleground, the thick of the Allied Ninja army continued their fight against the hordes of Ten Tails miniclones. Despite their power and seemingly unending numbers, the ninjas of the Alliance were able to slowly but surely push the army of abominations back and get a little closer to the immobilized Ten Tails.

Two ninjas on the vanguard were Kiba and Tamaki, both in their animlaistic forms, figthing tooth and nail, literally in this case, against the wave of incoming monsters.

While Kiba engaged the larger monsters in one on one duels, using a combination of strength, speed and the sharp claws he had in his new form to quickly tear them apart. Meanwhile, Tamaki engaged on several of them at once, confusing them with her blinding speed before swiftly striking them down.

Tamaki had just defeated a group of enemies, and saw that Kiba was still struggling with his. She was about to shoot him some mocking comment about not keeping up with her, when she noticed more of the smaller Ten Tails Spawns creeping up to him. With no time to waste, the cat kunoichi weaved seals as fast as she could.

"Fire Release: Multiple Blistering Firecat!"

Tamaki exhaled multiple fireballs in Kiba's direction. The fireballs took the shape of cats upon touching the ground, and the elemental felines quickly rushed forward, and slammed themselves against the Ten Tails miniclones that were going to ambush the wolf-man, exploding upon contact, engulfing the creatures in blazes of fire.

Both Kiba and the Ten Tails miniclone he was struggling with noticed what was going on and were briefly distracted. Kiba, however, was able to take advantage of his foe's distraction. He lifted the monster above him, and kicked it into the air, then jumped after it, and delivered a roundhouse kick that sent the Ten Tails Spawn crashing down against a group of its brethren that were getting closer.

"Good one, Kiba. That was quite the powerful move," Tamaki complimented.

"Thanks. For keeping my back, I mean," Kiba replied.

"Anytime," Tamaki said, smiling at him. "I mean, we're teammates and friends, right? That's what we do."

"I guess you're right," Kiba awkwardly replied. He then cleared his throat and swallowed, as if preparing to say something important and difficult. "Say Tamaki, with the war going on, and so many of our friends losing their loved ones, I've been doing some thinking, and there's something I'd like to get out of my chest..."

"You do?" Tamaki asked, flushing a little. "I mean... can it wait?"
Tamaki said, pointing behind Kiba. "We defeated quite a few of these critters, but more keep coming."

"I guess it can wait," Kiba said, as he turned around, ready to face the new wave of foes. "Just let's continue having each other's back so the two of us can make out of this mess alive."

Tamaki nodded. "You got it."

As Kiba and Tamaki continued their fight, the third member of their group was heading to meet his significant other, who was also in the heat of the battle, fighting Ten Tails miniclones left and right. Not that they were much of a challenge to her.

"HAAAA!" Fu cried, as she cut a Ten Tails Spawn down by delivering an upside down slash with a mantis-like blade that she grew from one of her arms. She sensed other two coming from the sides, but the jinchuriki jumped and delivered a roundhouse kick, sending the monster flying backwards, while forming a small tornado around her. "That's the best you can do, freaks?"

"Fu!" a voice called.

The jinchuriki the Seven Tails turned around, and much to her joy, she saw her boyfriend running towards her. Or running while he fought against the Ten Tails miniclones that swarmed the area. Fu deployed her wings, and barreled towards the miniclone that was fighting Shino, delivering a powerful punch, sending it flying into the sky.

"Shino!" Fu squealed. "I'm so happy to see you! Boy, I have soooooooooo many things to tell you!"

"I'm sure you do. The story behind how you acquired that armor promises to be entertaining," Shino replied.

"Oh, it is! It's an armor made of Chomei's chakra! Chomei is the name of the Seven Tails, by the way! Did you know that Tailed Beasts have names? Because they do! When you think about it, it makes sense that they have names, because why wouldn't they? Calling themselves by-

Fu was interrupted when Shino tossed a pair of kunai with explosive tags attached to them towards her. The kunai, however, flew past her head and embedded themselves into a coming Ten Tails miniclone. The Taki kunoichi instinctively braced for the explosion just before Shino detonated the notes, blowing the monster into multiple chunks of charred flesh.

"I would love to hear the tales about the events you experienced after leaving Konoha, but unfortunately, this isn't the time nor the place for such a thing," Shino replied in his usual unshakeable calm demeanor, though a little impatience could be sensed in his tone.

Fu was a little disappointed, but as much as she liked to catch up with her boyfriend, she couldn't help but agree with his logic.

"Okaaaaaaaaay," she admitted. "But we do get to fight together!"

Shino cracked a small smile. "Of course. That way, you can show me the new abilities you have developed during your training on that secret island. That armor appears to be nothing but the tip of the iceberg," Shino said, noting the organic blade protruding from Fu's forearm.

Fu smiled widely, and nodded enthusiastically. "Oh, you have no idea! Watch closely, because you're in for a treat!"

Fu's other arm then turned into a gigantic scorpion pincer, while two additional insect-like arms ending in sharp claws grew from her shoulders, just as more Ten Tails miniclones arrived.

Not far from there, another jinchuriki had reunited with one of his loved ones, and like Fu and Shino, the two of them were fighting together. Mostly because the two of them were known as one of the greatest tag teams of all the Ninja Villages.

As three Ten Tails Spawns surrounded Killer B, the jinchuriki quickly moved away between his foes, who were unable to land a single hit. They were bigger and hit hard, but their size also made them much slower than the agile Kumo ninja. And most importantly, their attacks left them wide open for counterattack. Just as one of the miniclones tried to smash Killer B with a double axe handle.

"These things are strong, and can cause a lot of pain," Killer B rapped, as he jumped onto the shoulders of the miniclone that tried to crush him, hitting the ground instead. The moment he touched the monster's shoulders, he sank his electricity-imbued swords into the creature's head, killing it instantly. Killer B jumped away as the creature fell on its back. "Fortunately for us, they lack a brain!"

"Do not get too cocky, B!" the Raikage, who was grappling with a Ten Tails Spawn twice his size, chastised his brother. He then lifted the monster, and delivered a lightning-enhanced suplex so powerful, it opened a crater upon impact, releasing lightning bolts in many directions. "Don't you dare underestimate the enemy! These creatures might not be much of a match for us individually, but there are too many of them!"

"Relax bro, I am no clown! I'm not going to let my guard down," Killer B replied, as he cut down another miniclone, who tried to slash him with its blade-like appendages. "Recently I've been fighting a lot, so I'm trusty! But you, on the other hand, may be a little rusty!"

"Rusty? Ha!" the Raikage laughed. "I may be cooped in that forsaken office more than I would have liked, but I still find time to stay in shape! Now watch this!"

The Raikage crossed his arms in front of his face, before thrusting them to the sides. Letting out a yell, his Lightning Chakra Armor flared with power as electricity crackled around his body. Then, the Raikage rushed towards a nearby Ten Tails miniclone, leaving a trail of lightning behind, smashing his elbow against it, killing instantly. Without even stopping, he then barreled towards another Ten Tails Spawn, this time choosing to end its life with a hand chop. He repeated the process multiple times, chaining multiple one hit kills, leaving a trail of corpses behind. All of this, in less than ten seconds.

"Does this look rusty to you!?" the Raikage roared.

Killer B merely chuckled, and shook his head.

"Ah brother, always so easy to provoke, all you need is a little poke!" Killer B rapped, laughing a little.

The Raikage and Killer B weren't the only fighting duo that had been reunited after an absence. In fact, theirs was almost nonexistent compared to two people who were now fighting together for the first time in years. The air around them started to get cold as the younger of the two started to make hand seals while gathering chakra for an attack.

"Ice Release: Certain Kill Ice Spears!"

From the cold air, multiple ice spears appeared above Haku, and with a hand flicker, he directed the cold weapons towards a group of Ten Tails Spawns. Before the monsters could realize, the spears had impaled them and pinned them to the ground. In the following seconds, frost spread around them until they were completely frozen.

A few meters from Haku, Zabuza was cutting down Ten Tails miniclones with his Executioner's Blade. He only needed a single swing with one hand to slice the monsters into two halves, then move onto the next target.

"Not bad, Haku," Zabuza said, his eyes focused on his current opponent, a particularly large miniclone covered in spikes. "Though I expected that after all this time, you have developed something new."

More monsters were rushing towards them. Haku slammed his hands into the ground, covering it in a sheet of ice, causing the miniclones to slip and fall on their backs or on their bellies. Then, multiple spikes grew from the sheet of ice, impaling the fallen monsters.

"Weren't you who tell me to stick to what worked, Zabuza-sama?" Haku asked his former master.

"Perhaps I did," Zabuza said, kicking the spiked miniclone backwards, before making several hand seals. "But it's always good to always have something new in reserve, in case the usual stops working. Water Release: Water Dragon Jutsu!"

Zabuza expelled a truly massive amount of water from his mouth. The water started to spin into a vortex, and from said vortex a serpentine dragon made of water emerged. The wayter dragon lunged towards the spiked Ten Tails Spawn, caught it between its jaws, and tore into the air. After spiraling a few times into the air, it then crashed into another group of incoming monsters, exploding into a massive torrent of water that pushed the beasts into many directions.

"Truly outstanding, Zabuza-sama. I've never seen such a huge Water Dragon from you before," Haku praised him.

"Hmpf. Even without Sage Mode, I may not be on Mei's level, but that doesn't mean I don't have to keep working to make sure the gap between us doesn't get any bigger. I do have a reputation to keep," Zabuza sneered.

"I did hear of your victory over the Akatsuki's Kisame, Zabuza-sama. I wish I was there to see it. From what I was told, it was an impressive battle. Ice Release: Ice Barrier!"

Haku slammed his hands into the ground once more, this time erecting a wall of ice in front of him, half as tall as Konoha's walls, just in time to block several wooden sharp spears several of the Ten Tails Spawns had chucked at him.

"Impressive doesn't even begin to describe it. That blue son of a bitch and his living sword had more tricks under their proverbial sleeves than I imagined. It was Mei who did most of the work, but I like to think I contributed to that bastard's downfall," Zabuza replied. "Water Release: Tsunami Sword!"

Water started to gather around Zabuza's Executioner's Blade, forming a massive, watery cover. Zabuza then swung his sword towards an incoming group of miniclones, releasing a crescent shaped blast of pressurized water. The water blade flew forward too fast for any of them to dodge, and cut them to pieces before they could even had the chance to react.

As they finished off their current opponents, master and apprentice noticed the earth trembling under their feet, as the sound of booming footsteps drew closer. Turning towards the source of the footsteps, they saw a giant Ten Tails Spawn, probably more than ten meters tall and with an impressive bulk, lumbering towards them. Aside from its size, something that set it apart from the other miniclones was the number of mouths that covered its body.

"Now that's a big one," Zabuza commented, letting out a whistle. "Cutting that thing down is going to be a challenge."

"Perhaps we don't need to cut it up," Haku said, as he started to make hand seals.

"What are you thinking, Haku?" Zabuza asked.

The boy finished his sealing sequence, and smirked towards his former master. "This is a great chance to show you a little something I've been working on. After all, didn't you want to see something new from me?"

"Cheeky brat," Zabuza said, smirking back.

"Let's see how well do you like this, Zabuza-sama," Haku said, as he prepared to release the jutsu towards the incoming monster. "Ice Release: Wrath of the Yuki-Onna!"

Once he finished the seals, Haku clapped his hands together, before thrusting them forward. From his hands, a powerful blizzard blew with the force of a gale, the cold being so intense it froze the air's moisture into chunks of ice, while also freezing the ground. The blast of frigid wind hit the giant monster square, and as frost started to cover his body, his movements began to slow to a crawl, until there was so much frost, he couldn't move anymore.

Zabuza then leaped into the frozen giant and slammed his sword against it. The force of the impact shattered the giant into a dozen frozen chunks.

"Not bad, definitely not bad," Zabuza complimented, upon touching the ground again. "Do you think you could do that again twenty more times?"

Haku was going to ask what did he meant by that, when he was alerted by an even bigger rumbling. Looking in the direction of the Ten Tails, he saw that the monster he just take down was just a vanguard, and many more just as big, were stomping their way towards them.

"I'm afraid not. I don't believe my ninjutsu can affect so many enemies of such size," Haku admitted.

"Yeah. These enemies are a bit outside our pay grade," Zabuza said. "Fortunately, some of your friends might be able to match them blow by blow."

As soon as Zabuza said that, Haku saw two gigantic chakra constructs come to life, both of them taking the shape of a four armed woman. One of them was soft lavender in color, while the other was a bright magenta. The two of them quickly stomped forward in order to meet the horde of giant beasts.

"Are those..." Haku narrowed his eyes to see the figures floating inside the chakra giantesses' head better. He was taken aback when he realized who they were. "... Hinata and Hanabi? When did they learn to do that?"

"Hinata? Isn't that one of your teammates?" Zabuza asked. "Didn't you know she could do that?"

"She certainly couldn't the last time we fought together," Haku said. "Then again, I knew her Tensiegan wasn't fully developed. Heh, the two of us will have a lot of catching up to do once this war is over..."

...

"I believe that talk between you and I once the war is over is going to be a little longer than I had anticipated," Shino mentioned, looking up.

" Because how cool and awesome I am?" Fu replied, smiling widely. Or she would be smiling if she wasn't transformed into a giant seven tailed beetle that had no human mouth.

Because Hinata and Hanabi weren't the only ones who had ushered giant forms in order to face the new threat. Fu teased Shino by asking "do you want to see something amazing?" and before he could answer, the Taki kunoichi grew into her Tailed Beast form. Naruto and Killer B mimicked her, their Tailed Beasts already recovered enough energy to allow such transformation.

"Guys!" Hanabi called, sounding agitated. "The Ten Tails is breaking free of the vines!"

"What!?" Naruto shouted.

Hinata directed her expanded eyesight towards the trapped Ten Tails, and indeed, many of the Ten Tails Spawns were working tirelessly to destroy the thick vines and roots that kept it immobilized and pinned to the ground.

"She's right!" Hinata confirmed. "If we don't do something, the Ten Tails will be free again in no time!"

"We can't afford to let that happen. I guess we'll have to take a more aggressive approach and head to the Ten Tails as soon as possible," Naruto stated. "We'll cut a path through them! Fu, can you provide us some aerial cover?"

" You got it!" Fu replied, as she took into the sky. As she ascended, many of the Ten Tails Spanws noticed her, and started to throw sharp wooden spears at her from the ground. She started to quickly move around in order to dodge the storm of wooden stakes aimed at her. Despite her current size, she was able to maneuver around the flying spikes easily, while gathering a sphere chakra in front of her mouth. "Tailed Beast Wave!"

The ball of chakra exploded in the form of a beam of destructive energy, directed towards the mass of miniclones in front of her in a straight line. After a couple seconds of delay, it was followed by a chain of explosions that carved a path across the conglomeration of monsters.

"Alright, let's go!" Naruto said, as his Kurama avatar stomped forward, followed by Hinata and Hanabi's Avatars of Kalika, and lastly B in his Gyuki form. "Hinata, Hanbi, cover my flanks! B, cover our backs!"

"Understood, Naruto-kun! You can count on us!" Hinata replied.

" You can trust Number Eight and I to cover the rear! None of this monsters will get even close, that's much as clear!" Killer B rapped.

And thus began the charge through the path Fu had carved from above. Naruto tried not to use the Tailed Beast Ball much, since he wanted to conserve energy. Fortunately, the physical power of his Tailed Beast form proved to be enough to deal with his similar sized attackers. When a giant miniclone came to him from the front, Naruto punched it in the face with as much strength as he could, and the abomination was sent flying backwards, landing on his back and sliding on it.

When more than one monster tried to attack him from the same side, Naruto wrapped some of his tails around their necks, and first slammed their heads against each other, before tossing them away in opposite directions. And when they tried to overwhelm him with numbers, Naruto simply charged a Tailed Beast Ball to blow many of them at once.

" These guys are big and scary, but despite their size they aren't a match for us!" Naruto thought.

" Of course! Powerful as it is, the Ten Tails can't mass produce minions with the power to match a Tailed Beast," Kurama agreed. "Plus, with its chakra currently bound, the Ten Tails can't expend that much energy on these things. Still, don't underestimate them."

"I wasn't planning to," Naruto replied out loud, as he slashed an incoming giant Spawn.

While Naruto worked to open a path in a straight line, the Hyuga sisters, each of them with their respective Avatar of Kalika, protected Naruto's flanks from the same horde of monsters. Their four arms proved to be exceptionally useful for dealing with them, especially those with multiple limbs. Unlike Naruto's Tailed Beast form, though, they lacked any kind of destructive, wide area jutsu that could be used to wipe out large quantities of enemies. So they had to use their own jutsu for when their giant chakra constructs weren't enough.

Which was almost all the time.

"Sage Art: Lightning Release Thunder Blast!"

Hinata's entire body crackled with purple electricity, electricity that she directed towards the enemies in front of her with a thrust of both of her arms in the form of massive pillars of lightning that travelled outwards, leaving a trail of scorched earth behind. The giant Ten Tails Spawns shook in pain as electricity coursed through their bodies, and while they were paralyzed Hinata's Avatar dispatched them with powerful palm strikes.

Given that she was given a brief respite, the Hyuga Clan head allowed herself to check on the others, more specifically, her little sister covering the other flank. Like Hinata, Hanabi was bombarding the Ten Tails Spawns with Elemental Ninjutsu of her own before delivering the finishing blow with her Avatar of Kalika.

"Hanabi-chan, how are you doing?" Hinata asked. "Do you need some help over there?"

"I'm fine!" Hanabi replied. "Though my Truth Seeking Balls don't hurt them as much as they should!"

"The Ten Tails and its spawns are pure nature energy!" it was Naruto who replied. "Truth Seeking Balls did okay against the smaller ones, but I doubt they'd do much against these behemoths!"

"In that case, I'll need to stick to brute force then!" Hanabi said, as her Avatar of Kalika smashed its palm into the face of a giant miniclone leaping at her, followed by a roundhouse kick to another one. Looking at the fallen creatures, she got an idea. "Alright, this should clear some of them out."

Hanabi then grabbed the knocked out monsters, and dashed forward, drawing even more Ten Tails Spawns towards her, just as she expected. Without letting the miniclones she was grabbing go, she made the Avatar spin on its feet.

"Six Paths: Heavenly Spin!"

Hanabi's Avatar of Kalika started to spin around itself. As it picked speed, a small tornado started to form around it. It spread its arms, using the miniclones she had grabbed to extend the range of her jutsu. As the Ten Tails Spawns dumbly charged at her, they were smacked with the bodies of its fallen brethren, knocking them on their back. Hanabi eventually let the ones she was grabbing go, sending them flying against a cluster of Spawns, making them tumble with a loud crash.

" Nice one, girl, such a move! You got quite the groove!" Killer B rapped, as he lifted a giant minicloner over his head, and tossed it against another group of them.

While Hinata also wanted to compliment her little sister, she felt it was no time for such things, especially since they were still so far away from the Ten Tails. The Hyuga Clan Head directed her sight towards the bound monstrosity, and gasped loudly upon seeing what was going on around it.

"Hinata-hime?" Naruto asked.

"Many of the wooden roots and vines bounding it to the ground are about to break!" Hinata warned. It seemed the miniclones were working much harder and faster than they had anticipated. "We need to-"

Hinata was interrupted by a very loud snapping sound, followed by one of the tails of the Ten Tails being released.

"Oh shit!" Hanabi yelled.

" I'll fly ahead and see if I can slow those guys down from releasing their daddy!" Fu said from above as she took off. "You guys keep pushing forward!"

With no other options, they decided to follow Fu's suggestions, and continued to fight with as much vigor as they could.

...

Not far away from there, Kakashi and Rin continued their duel against Obito and the original Zetsu. While Rin was engaged with their former teammate, the two duos still unable to beat the other, waiting for that decisive opportunity to reap a swift victory. Though, as they traded blows, there was something that dawned upon Rin's mind. Something she was deadly afraid to ask, but now that thought had invaded her mind, she needed an answer for.

"Wood Release: Great Spear Tree!"

A multitude of sharp roots emerged from the ground, threatening to impale the medic-nin, and forcing her to jump backwards, while making several hand seals.

"Water Release: Water Severing Wave!"

From her mouth, Rin expelled a thin stream of super pressurized water that cleanly cut the growing roots coming at her, and the jutsu still had enough power to reach Obito, who was the one forced into the defensive this time. While his Sharingan marked him the oath he needed to follow in order to avoid the enemy jutsu, he wasn't fast enough, and the water current grazed his cheek. Obito winced as a small cut formed on his face.

"Obito," Rin called before the Uchiha had a chance to counterattack. "I was told of the Nine Tails' attack on Konoha. And how you were the one behind it."

"What about that, Rin? It's ancient history. Why are you bringing up now?" Obito asked. There was a sizzling sound as the cut on his face slowly healed and closed.

"Not even getting into all the lives lost during such a tragedy... how could you do such a horrible thing to Minato-sensei and Kushina-san?" Rin asked, her voice cracking a little. "Didn't their lives mean anything to you at all? You were like a son to them! All of us were!"

This question seem to give Obito some pause, but if he was taken aback, he quickly recovered, as his mouth curved into a sad smirk.

"What lousy father he was, letting two of his children die. It's almost a surprise that Kakashi didn't follow the two of us into the grave, " Obito spat back. "Looking back, I may made Naruto a favor."

"You... you... !" Rin began, losing her composure, as her grief was slowly turning into anger. "How can you say such an horrible thing about Minato-sensei!"

In her anger, Rin pulled out a kunai and dashed forward, closing the gap between her and her opponent in a blink. Obito generated a black rod from one of his palms, and used it to block Rin's diagonal slash. More slashes kept coming, but thanks to his Sharingan and Rin's lack of skill in armed combat, he was able to parry or deflect most of her blows.

"Why do you defend him!? Minato-sensei did nothing but sending us to our deaths! You'd think after my loss, he'll take a better care of you two!" Obito replied, his own anger slowly rising to match Rin's own. This gave him a small boost in strength in order to counterattack and even push Rin back.

Obito's outburst brought Rin back to that conversation he had with Kakashi at the gate of Konoha's general hospital, and how he felt their Jonin-sensei was at least, guilty in part of how the team turned out. If Kakashi had it in him to blame Minato, no wonder Obito's anger towards the Fourth Hokage was so big.

"You know, I never blamed him for my apparent demise when it was just me. I did blame him for yours, thought, at least at first. How can that man pretend to be Hokage, when he can't even keep his own students safe?" Obito angrily snarled. "And that fateful night on Konoha, I was proven right. One man in the right place at the right time was all what was needed to show the world that man's incompetence. He failed to protect his wife, son and village just like he failed to protect you and me!"

"What happened to us wasn't Minato-sensei's fault!" Rin countered. "There was a war! People die in wars! Minato-sensei had other responsibilities! He couldn't just babysit us the whole time!"

"I know. That's why I said that I only blamed him at first. It wasn't his fault that there was a war, no. But it was somebody's fault, right? We ended that way because there was a war, a war neither of us started," Obito asked, leaving Rin a little confused. "That's why I'm doing what I'm doing, Rin. This is the only way to create a world with no wars or conflict. And if Minato-sensei and Kushina-san had to die for such world to exist, then so be it."

"And if I had to die?" Rin retorted. "If I had to die for such world to exist, would you sacrifice me!?"

This question seemed to stump Obito, albeit only for a moment. He averted her eyes, and let out a sad chuckle.

"Perhaps you had to," Obito said, his shoulder sagging, as the memory replayed once again in his mind. He had revisited that moment so often, it only made him a little numb now. "Since it was when I saw you taking Kakashi's Chidori when my eyes were opened to the ugly truth that it's the reality of this world."

While Obito and Rin's exchange happened, Kakashi continued his fight against Zetsu. However, the two of them had been listening to Obito and Rin's conversation. And more importantly, their reaction towards it.

Because thanks to his Sharingan, Kakashi had noticed that, the moment Obito admitted that he needed to see Rin die, the Zetsu's white half's mouth twitched into what appeared to be a smirk. Kakashi's eyes narrowed at the plant being as the gears of his mind started to turn.

"Something wrong, copy ninja?" Zetsu's black half taunted. "Can't stand hearing your teammate's fall from grace?"

"Yes. It was quite the tragic day, one I will never forget, especially now that I know the far reaching consequences such events had on the world at large," Kakashi replied, as he started making hand seals. "Water Release: Water Dragon Jutsu!"

Kakashi expelled a large amount of water from his mouth. The water took the shape of a serpentine dragon, and after letting out a roar, it lunged towards one of the last two remaining Akatsuki. The dual being merely smirked as he made his own hand seals.

"Wood Release: Deep Forest Emergence!"

The earth started to shake as large underground wooden roots broke into the surface, surrounding the battleground. Zetsu then merged his body with one of the roots, avoiding Kakashi's water jutsu, which crashed harmlessly against the strong roots.

"You can't beat us, copy ninja," the white half said, as Zetsu appeared for a second behind him.

"We are one with nature. Can you beat nature itself?" the black half taunted, as Zetsu appeared for a brief moment from a root to Kakashi's side, making the copy ninja to turn around.

"Not even your Sharingan can predict when will we appear next!" the white half said, as he appeared behind Kakashi, making several hand seals. "Wood Release: Leaf Hurricane!"

Zetsu cast a tornado of large green leaves towards Kakashi, which looked normal at first sight, but Kakashi could see they were as sharp as kunai. Kakashi jumped backwards while making several hand seals as well.

"Fire Release: Great Dragon Fire!"

Kakashi exhaled a cone of flames that engulfed the leaves of the tornado, burning them to a crisp. However, when the fire disappeared, Zetsu had disappeared once again.

"You know, the more I think about that day..." Kakashi began, hoping to lure his opponent out. "I can't help but think the extraordinary bad luck that led to Obito getting to us just when I accidentally killed Rin. The timing couldn't have been worse."

Zetsu once again appeared behind Kakashi, who summoned a mass of smaller wooden roots to impale him with. Kakashi, however, was already expecting this, and turned around as his hands blurred through hand seals.

"Wind Release: Wind Scythe Jutsu!"

Upon finishing the sealing sequence, Kakashi spread his arms outwards, releasing several blades of compressed air that shredded through Zetsu's attack. However, before the attack could reach his foe, the plant being already hid within the large wooden vines.

"You know that attacking somebody from behind is the most obvious choice, and thus the one I'll be expecting the most?" Kakashi asked, almost in a mocking manner.

That moment, two pair of gigantic venus flytrap jaws appeared from below him, ready to crunch him between them. Kakashi, however, managed to jump back just in time, before delivering a brutal kick in the face to Zetsu as he emerged from underground, which sent him backwards, skidding against the ground.

"Going for the second most obvious choice isn't that much better," Kakashi boredly said, as he watched the angry Zetsu merging once again with one of the vines. The copy ninja then started to make hand seals at a leisure pace. "By the way, I hope you enjoy this jutsu. It was created by my father. Lightning Release: Forked Lightning!"

Kakashi's hands were coated in electricity, as he threw them to the sides, releasing a storm of lightning bolts. The lightning bolts then began to bounce around the wooden vines, covering the area in electricity. And naturally, several of those bolts managed to hit Zetsu the moment the plant-like creature emerged once again to attack.

This time, Kakashi didn't give his enemy time to flee. Using the Body Flicker Jutsu, the silver haired Jonin appeared in front of the Akatsuki, and lifted him into the air by his neck.

"I already had my suspicions, but you gave me additional reasons to believe that Rin's death wasn't the unfortunate tragedy I always believed it was," Kakashi said, his eyes narrowing in anger.

"You... you bastard..." the white half choked, as he tried to futilely break from Kakashi's grip.

Suddenly, there was a tremor that shook the entire battleground. Both Kakashi and Zetsu turned towards the source of the disturbance, and saw, to one's horror and the other's delight, that some of the Ten Tails' tails had been liberated from their wooden bindings, and probably more to follow. Zetsu smirked.

"You have lost. You won't be able to bind the Ten Tails a second time. Everybody in this place is living on borrowed time! You won't-" the black half boasted, before he and the white half were silenced as Kakashi trapped them inside a Sharingan genjutsu.

"In that case, let's have a chat at a more private place, shall we?" Kakashi suggested. The form of the Mangekyo Sharingan appeared on his left eye. "Rin! I'm going to take this scumbag to the Kamui dimension! Keep Obito busy!"

Rin, still engaged with Obito, quickly looked at the vanishing Kakashi, and nodded.

"Undrestood!" Rin replied, before facing Obito again.

"What is Kakashi going to do? Does he think he can accomplish anything by separating me from Zetsu?" Obito asked, trying to sound confident, but unable to hide how Kakashi's tactic was unnerving him. He then looked at the slowly breaking free Ten Tails. "Even if he kills Zetsu, his death won't accomplish anything."

"I don't know. But I trust him. Kakashi isn't somebody to act without reason," Rin replied.

...

Kamui Dimension

As the two newcomers entered the pocket dimension, Kakashi gracefully landed on his feet, while Zetsu landed painfully on his back. He was already regaining mobility, breaking out of the genjutsu already. Not that Kakashi cared that much.

"Alright," Kakashi said, as he forced the plant being back into his feet. He once again focused his Sharingan onto the creature's eyes, reinforcing the genjutsu. "I have a few questions regarding Obito that you're going to answer. And no, that wasn't a request."

...

Back in the real world, the Allied Ninjas continued their charge against the sea of Ten Tails miniclones of all sizes and shapes, lead by Naruto, Hinata, Hanabi, Killer B and Fu. Unfortunately, they were only halfway done when the Ten Tails managed to break free completely. With the help of its arms, the titanic beast raised to its full height, and let out a deafening roar.

"NO!" Naruto screamed.

" Shit! Too late!" Fu yelled. "What are we going to do now!?"

" It isn't obvious? We bind it again! We have to keep going, or else all this will be in vain!" Killer B said.

"We need to find Hagane, Kaida and Rin," Hanabi said, as she started to scan the battleground. She was able to find Rin easily enough, engaged in a match against Obito. Her two teammates, meanwhile, had returned to the rear of the army. Their chakra appeared to be weak. "Though I don't think they're in good shape enough to pull a jutsu of that size a second time..."

The Ten Tails roared again, making the earth tremble once more, as a powerful wind blew in every direction from its body. Naruto, Hinata, Hanabi and Fu shivered as they felt a massive wave of nature energy washing over the area.

"What... what was that...?" Naruto asked.

" This... this isn't good Naruto..." Kurama replied, sounding worried. "It plans to do the Cataclysm!"

"Cataclysm... !?" Naruto repeated. He didn't know what was that, but he could tell it wasn't something good.

...

Meanwhile, not far away from there, the three Uchihas loyal to Konoha continued their fight against the man who was once their Clan Head, all four of them using their Perfect Form Susanoo. While Madara proved to be more than a match for Itachi and Sasuke, Shisui's addition proved to be what they needed to maybe not tip the scale in their favor, but bridge the gap between them to the point that it could be called an even fight. Even if Shisui's presence didn't make victory a certainty, they didn't need to win: all they needed to do was to keep Madara away from the Ten Tails while Naruto and the others dealt with the Ten Tails.

Given the scale of their battle, the Uchihas had pushed their rogue clansmate away from the bulk of the army, so their fight wouldn't cause any collateral deaths.

Their tactic involved the three of them surrounding Madara and attacking them from different angles, limiting the rogue Uchiha's ability to block or parry their attacks. Still, Madara wasn't considered the strongest Uchiha who ever lived for no reason, and he was more than able to maneuver his Susanoo in order to move in time to block or dodge his enemies' attacks.

"Look at that, it seems that I'm not the only Uchiha who's a master of Senjutsu," Madara said, as his Susanoo parried a blow from Shisui's drill spear with its sword. "The clan might be down to a few members, but it warms my heart to see how talented you are."

That moment, Sasuke fired several Susanoo arrows coated the black flames of Amaterasu, while Itachi shot several matagama-like projectiles at him. Madara, however, sensed the attack coming and was already preparing a counter.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Madara cast a powerful repulsive way in every direction that not only stopped Sasuke and Itachi's attacks, but also managed to push Shisui's Susanoo backwards. Despite tumbling, Shisui managed to regain balance.

"So, you know about the Uchiha insurrection," Shisui said. "And don't you feel anything over the fact that our once mighty clan is now down to single digit numbers? Nor that we helped to its downfall."

Madara merely shrugged. "Why should I? What's important about a clan is the strength of its members, not its numbers. I prefer the Uchiha clan reduced to a single digit numbers like you said, as long as the remaining members are strong and skilled, than have the Uchiha be composed by a thousand weaklings. If the other Uchiha died during that coup, then they were weak and their deaths were deserved."

Itachi's face twisted into a grimace of disgust. "Disgraceful."

"And you're the one who's going to lead us to a world without conflict?" Sasuke asked, incredulous.

"Why of course. Power is the only thing that can shape this world into something better. That's why wars happen, because what are wars but struggles for power? And this war... this war is no different, at least on that regard. But it will be the war to put an end to all wars. With the Ten Tails, my power shall be unmatched. I'll have the power to shape the world as I see fit," Madara explained. "And with that power, I shall create a perfect world. A paradise for all to live. I shall fulfill the role the Sage of the Six Paths should have filled one thousand years ago!"

However, before any of the Allied Uchihas could offer a retort, Shisui felt a wave of nature energy washing over the battlefield as it flew into the Ten Tails. Given Madara's expression, he was already expecting it.

"Oh it's already happening," Madara casually said, as he looked in the direction of the Ten Tails. "It's been quite the fun spar, but unfortunately, as much fun as I'm having with you three, I'm afraid I must stop the battle here. Duty awaits. Besides, you might want to find a place to hide from what's going to come next."

And with that, Madara dispelled his Susanoo, and fell to the ground. The moment his feet touched the solid floor, he ran away from the other three Uchihas.

"Don't let him escape!" Sasuke said, as his Susanoo stomped forward.

Unfortunately, it was unable to take another step.

...

As the Ten Tails gathered nature energy, a white aura started to glow around the colossal monster's body, shining brighter by the second. Then, for a fraction of a second, the air shimmered as silence reigned absolute. And following that, the Ten Tails released all the nature energy that it had been stored in the form of a single, uncontrolled burst.

The effect was immediate. First, a massive hurricane formed from the Ten Tails, blowing everybody near it away, either be friend or foe. Not even the jinchuriki in their Tailed Beast forms nor the Hyuga sisters' Avatars of Kalika were unable to resist such a powerful gale of wind, and were blown away as if they were as light as little birds.

That hurricane, however, was only the first, as many more formed around the battlefield. Lightning bolts rained from the dark clouds above without pause, while hail the size of a fist pelted the ground with fury. The very earth was teared apart by a powerful quake, sending large chunks of rock everywhere, as plumes of lava erupted everywhere, creating red rivers of fire.

Even if the cataclysm lasted less than two minutes, it felt like hours for the hapless ninjas -and the Ten Teails miniclones, who weren't spared from their "father's" wrath, but they weren't smart or even aware enough to understand what was going on- who tried their best to survive the localized natural disaster that fell upon them. Many of them used their abilities to protect both themselves and those close enough to them, while others weren't so lucky and perished under the wrath of nature.

When the cataclysm ended, the battleground had changed completely. There were small mountains and depressions where it was completely flat before. Rivers of lava crossed the ground. There were many rocks of all sizes scattered around.

And most importantly, there were thousands of bodies laid across the battlefield. Many of them still alive, others not so lucky.

"Well, that should have cleared out most of the rabble," Madara said, as his Susanoo, which he used a shield against the cataclysm, slowly dispelled. He then watched the Ten Tails, and smirked. "Good. Time to move into the endgame."

...

Naruto groaned as he pushed himself from the ground. His Kurama Avatar had been destroyed in the ensuing cataclysm. The blond could feel something wet and sticky trickling down his temple, but he didn't pay it any attention. There were more important things to take care of. As he slowly got back to his knees, Naruto expanded his chakra sense in order to see how bad things were.

He felt his heart sink he noticed how the amount of chakras in the battlefield had been cut in half. Fortunately, it seemed that most of his friends had made it. Hinata hadn't landed that far away from him. Hanabi appeared to be okay too. Fu and Killer B were also away from him, but not only they appeared to be alright, if a bit beaten down, but unlike Naruto, they had managed to maintain their Tailed Beast forms. He started to feel a little more relieved as he identified the chakras of those who had survived: Kurenai, Haku, Shizune, Karin, Ino, Shikamaru, Choji, Kiba, Shino, Tamaki... hell, even the jinchuriki shadow clones were still there. Guess those hardening seals were more durable than he thought.

"Huh?"

Naruto's thoughts were interrupted when he felt a tremor shaking the earth, followed by another, and another, and another. Pushing himself back to his feet, he realized that the source of his tremors was the Ten Tails, who was dragging its body, making the ground quake whenever one of its arms hit the ground.

"No... no!"

While the Ten Tails moving was bad, it wasn't the worst part. It was where it was headed.

"No!" Naruto shouted, the adrenaline jolt as a result of his fear allowed him to get back to his feet and start running forward, towards the Ten Tails' target. "Fu, get out of there!"

Fu, still in the form of the Seven Tails, stirred, as she tried to get back. Naruto didn't even know if she was aware of the danger she was, given that the Ten Tails had locked onto her as its next target. However, no matter how much the blond was trying to run, he knew he wasn't going to reach her in time before the Ten Tails did. He tried to activate Kurama Chakra Mode once again. Calling for his tenant's chakra, a golden shroud quickly formed around his body, before it flickered and put out like a candle drawing its last breath.

And reach her it did.

"NO!"

Naruto couldn't help but watch impotently how the Ten Tails' massive hand grabbed Fu, and brought her close to its face. The titanic monster opened its jaws, and began to suction air inside it. Streams of red chakra started to flow from Fu's eyes into the Ten Tails' mouth, thin and small at first, but growing thicker and larger over time. And as the Ten Tails drained Fu of Chomei's chakra, Fu started to shrink back to her human form. Once the Ten Tails finished, it carelessly dropped Fu's lifeless body to the ground, while the monster moved towards somewhere else.

Naruto couldn't sense Fu's chakra anymore. She was dead.

"NOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO!"

This time, however, it wasn't Naruto the one who screamed. Naruto didn't recognize the voice, until he saw somebody running towards where Fu was. It was Shino, explaining why the blond didn't associate the normally quiet young man to the heart-wrenching scream of anguish. The Aburame, followed by his teammates, desperately rushed towards their friend's fallen body.

" Naruto, the Ten Tails is going to absorb Gyuki now!" Kurama warned him.

This time, Naruto didn't have to use his chakra sense to locate Killer B, all he needed to do was follow the direction the monster. Naruto could see that, just like Fu before him, Killer B was lying on the ground, beaten and bruised, probably barely even conscious and thus unable to defend himself. The blond began to run again, his wobbly legs threatening to make him fall. Naruto didn't seem to care why the Ten Tails was targeting the Kumo jinchuriki when he was closer. The only thing in his mind was to save his fellow jinchuriki.

However, the events from less than five minutes ago replayed before his very eyes: Naruto simply wasn't as fast as the colossal abomination. He tried to draw Kurama's power once again. This time, he could feel the Chakra Cloak's power manifesting with greater strength, forming a golden shroud around his body. This was followed by a feeling of strength returning to his legs, which allowed him to run faster.

But once again, it proved to be useless. The Ten Tails grabbed Killer B with one of its enormous hands, and brought it close to its face. It then opened its mouth wide.

"NO! NO! STOP, PLEASE!" Naruto begged, as he tripped on his feet and fell on his face.

But the Ten Tails didn't hear nor care about Naruto's pleas. Once again, red streams of chakra flowed from Killer B's eyes and mouth into the Ten Tails' mouth. As Killer B was drained of his Tailed Beast chakra, he began to slowly shrink into his human form just like Fu only a few minutes before. And once the Ten Tails was done, it carelessly dropped Killer B's body onto the ground.

And just like with Fu, Naruto couldn't sense any chakra coming from his body.

"BROTHER! NO!" another voice yelled, this one Naruto recognized as the Raikage. The blond barely noticed the leader of Kumo, followed by Killer B's students, rushing towards the man's inert body.

There was a rumble as the Ten Tails shifted its body, and locked its giant, red eye onto its final prey: Naruto himself. Or better said, the nine tailed fox sealed inside him.

"Naruto, it's coming for us! You need to move NOW!" Kurama urged. But much to the fox's surprise, and growing horror, Naruto didn't make any attempt to move. "Naruto, what are you doing!?"

And much to the fox's shock and bewilderment, not only did Naruto not move, he even fell to his knees.

...

The moment Kakashi's Animal Squad reached Fu, Shino instantly knelt before her and started to heal her body. In her unconscious state, the dying jinchuriki grunted uncomfortably as Shino introduced several of his own beetles into her body in order to analyze how bad was her situation,.

The answer: very .

"Her heartbeat is very weak!" Tamaki said, while holding Fu's wrist.

"I know. All the organs are on the verge of failing, and her chakra network is almost empty as well," Shino said, as he continued working. Apparently, he was able to rein in his desperation and keep the stoic and logic driven demeanor his clan was known for. "My beetles are converting my chakra and transferring it to her as well."

"Is that going to work?" Kiba asked, panic and insecurity evident in his tone. "I remember when Naruto told us about his mission with Gaara that only using the Nine Tails' chakra was he able to save him!"

"In that case, we need Naruto here as soon as possible," Shino stated. "I'll try to keep her-"

"WATCH OUT!" Tamaki shouted.

A few of the Ten Tails miniclones, the ones on the small side thankfully enough, suddenly appeared around them, prompting Tamaki and Kiba to jump to their feet in order to engage them, while Shino continued keeping Fu alive.

...

Not far away from there, another similar situation took place, with Killer B instead of Fu, his own students instead of Kakashi's, plus the addition to the Raikage. Unfortunately, it seemed that the results were very much the same.

"It's no use!" T cried, as she applied the Mystical Palm jutsu on her sensei's body. "No matter what I do, he keeps getting worse!"

"Keep trying! Don't even dare to stop, you hear me!?" Karui yelled. "I don't want to learn that our sensei died because you gave up too soon!"

"Come on sensei, you can't go down like this!" Omoi begged.

"T won't help my brother on her own," the Raikage said, sounding as if he was admitting defeat, even if it was far from the case. "To save B, we need a transfer of Tailed Beast Chakra. And right now, there's only one jinchuriki left."

All of them looked to their left, and a few hundred meters away, they saw Naruto, down on his knees, with the Ten Tails rapidly approaching him.

"What's that idiot doing!? He's going to get himself killed!" Karui screamed in horror.

"Come on, we need to protect that Konoha ninja from the Ten Tails!" the Raikage said as he got on his feet. "Follow me!"

However, before the Raikage could take another step, a giant Ten Tails spawn landed in front of them. Several of the smaller variants were clinging to its body, but dropped to the ground the moment its feet touched the floor.

"You won't get in the way!" the Raikage said, as he charged forward. "I'm going to get Naruto! You two protect your teammate while she keeps B alive!"

...

Naruto continued on his knees, not realizing, or maybe not caring, that his impending doom was dragging itself towards him, its red eye looking at him with hunger. His whole body being felt numb. He could swear he could hear a voice that sounded like Kurama's, but he wasn't really sure. Did it matter anyway?

As the deaths of Fu and Killer B replayed in his mind, he couldn't help but recall his failure at trying to save Utakata and Roshi. He had the feeling that it would be different with Fu and Killer B, but alas, it wasn't the case. It seemed that all the jinchuriki were fated to die to feed Akatsuki and Madara's immense ambitions. And now, all that was standing between them and the rest of the world was Naruto himself.

And Naruto felt too tired to continue fighting. He simply wanted the suffering to end.

The world around him darkened as a gigantic shadow loomed over him. He didn't need to look up to realize it was the Ten Tails. A part of his brain, one that sounded like Kurama, told him to run, but why bother? The monster would chase him to the end of the world if necessary, killing even more people in the way.

So he didn't resist when the Ten Tails lowered one of its hands to grab him...

"Amethyst Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

"Turquoise Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

A massive storm of purple lightning bolts and a huge stream of teal flames came from different directions, crashing at once against the Ten Tails' only eye, which being so focused on Naruto, it didn't notice the new pair of interlopers. With its only eye damaged, the Ten Tails let out a loud screech of pain as it recoiled.

That moment, Hinata and Hanabi's Avatars of Kalika landed between the colossal beast and Naruto with a loud thud, standing protectively in front of the former.

"Good, we managed to blind it. But I'm afraid it won't last long," Hinata said.

"What the hell's wrong with Naruto!?" Hanabi asked. "Why is he like that, all catatonic?"

"I don't know, but I plan to find out," Hinata said, before her Avatar of Kalika crouched, and with a swift hand motion, scooped Naruto with one hand and placed it inside its head, alongside Hinata. "Naruto-kun! What's going on? Please, answer me?"

"Hi... Hinata...?" the blond weakly replied.

"Yes, it's me, Hinata! What happened!?" Hinata frantically asked.

"I... I failed. I failed them, Hinata," Naruto said, his voice almost a whisper. It appeared as if he wanted to cry, but was unable to.

Hinata remembered how badly Naruto took their failure to save Uakata and Roshii from Akatsuki, especially the later -albeit in that one, Hagane's close call was probably a factor as well- and they were practically strangers to him. Killer B and especially Fu were people Naruto had known for far more than a couple days, and thus his bonds with them were far more meaningful, so their deaths must have affected him even worse.

"Their demise is... something tragic," Hinata had to choose her words carefully, not to make Naruto's situation any worse. "But we can't afford to mourn them now. Not until that beast, and Madara and Obito, aren't done with. So please Naruto-kun, please stay with me and let's fight together."

"There is no hope. That thing's too powerful and it won't stop at anything until he gets its claws on me," Naruto said in a depressed monotone, refusing to make eye contact with Hinata.

"No, it's not! We can fight, we can win! No matter what kind of obstacles life throws at us, we will always overcome them, even if not at first, and this one is no exception!" Hinata insisted, desperation growing inside her as she watched her boyfriend becoming more and more an empty shell.

"Just... take your sister and the others and leave. That thing only wants me. I don't want you to die pointlessly like-

SLAP!

It took a couple seconds for Naruto to register the pain on his left cheek. He wordlessly brought his hand to Hinata's face still resting on his face, and for the first time, he made eye contact with Hinata. Her Tenseigan eyes flared with a mix of anger and sadness.

"Did you just tell me... to abandon you!?" Hinata seethed. "So... are you telling me that if our roles were reversed, you'd had to no trouble leaving me to my fate? Is that what you're saying!?"

"W-What? No! I would never... !" Naruto stammered, but Hinata didn't let him finish.

"No. Because you're Naruto Uzumaki, the boy who wants to be Hokage, who wants to become the best ninja there is while helping others becoming the better version of themselves as well. You would never abandon anybody. And thus, none of us, much less me, are going to abandon you in return!" Hinata shouted.

"Hinata..." Naruto whispered.

"I'm not going to abandon you! And you can't abandon us! You never would!" Hinata said, her voice growing louder. "Because if you abandon now... Fu-san and Killer B... all the people who lost their lives in this war... then they would have died for nothing!"

Those words felt like a cold splash of water against his face, shaking him off of his quasi-catatonic state. Which in turn, allowed him to finally listen to somebody else.

" Don't forget about me, you brat!" Kurama yelled from the seal inside Naruto. Kurama. The blond suddenly remembered that he still was there. "You weren't going to let that thing turn me into its dinner, were you!?"

" Kurama..."

" Your jinchuriki friends weren't the only ones who died to the machinations of Akatsuki! Your birth parents... they sacrificed their lives to save you from me! And that's how are you going to honor them?" Kurama asked. "And what about my siblings? You said you were going to save them! Did you forget about that too?"

" I... no, of course not," Naruto replied, shaking off the feeling of numbness completely. "I still plan to."

" Then do it! Prove me that those weren't just empty words to get on my good side!" Kurama added.

Naruto smiled. He then grabbed Hinata's hand, and lowered it down.

"I'm sorry, Hinata-hime," Naruto replied. Hinata smiled upon hearing her boyfriend using the usual honorific. "You're right. We can't stop fighting, not after going so far. Even if we're doomed to lose and we can't stop Akatsuki's victory from happening, we still need to do everything in our power to stop them."

"However, we aren't going to lose," Naruto said, filled with determination as he turned towards the Ten Tails. Apparently, the monster had now recovered, and his damaged but still functional eye was focused once again on the blond. But it was expecting an easy prey, it had another thing coming. "Let's go, Hinata! Together!"

"Yes!"

Naruto and Hinata shared their chakra with each other, merging their power. And all of sudden, they were blinded by a very bright flash of white light. Aside from being blinded, they couldn't hear the noise the Ten Tails was making as it dragged towards them, of the battle going around them between the Allied Ninjas and remaining Ten Tails Spawns. Naruto couldn't sense anybody anymore either aside from Hinata, much to his shock.

"What the... WHOA!"

When Naruto and Hinata opened their eyes, they were no longer on the battlefield in front of the Ten Tails. Instead, they were in space, floating just above Earth's orbit. In their shock, neither of them realized that they were able to breathe just fine.

"Greetings, child of Hagoromo, and child of Hamura," an unknown female voice made the couple realize that they weren't alone. It sounded stoic and monotone. "We finally meet at last."

Naruto and Hinata turned around, and saw a woman. Or what appeared to be a woman, since she didn't look to be human to begin with. She had chalk white skin, ashen hair that went down to her feet. She had two white eyes not unlike those of the Hyuga, plus a third eye on her forehead that resembled the eye of the Ten Tails. A pair of horns crowned her head. She was wearing a long regal kimono decorated with magatamas and golden and purple trims.

The two teens gasped. While they never met this woman before nor heard her speak, they had seen pictures of her and were told about her before. And if what they knew about her was true, her presence didn't spell good omens.

"Do you know who I am?" the woman asked.

Two words left Naruto's mouth.

"Kaguya Otsutsuki..."

Author's Note: So yeah, Fu and Killer B are- ducks behind a table to dodge a barrage of sharp objects, some of them on fire, that angry readers throw at me yeah, I'm terribly sorry about that, but I needed something to truly drive how dire the situation is, and nothing else would do the trick. I know it's a decision that it's not going to leave anybody indifferent. Though, all I'm asking is for you to wait for the next chapter before you decide that this story is ruined forever and deleting it from your favorite and alert list.

And if that wasn't enough to alienate the readers, here comes Kaguya Otsutsuki, whom was somehow summoned by Naruto and Hinata (the "somehow" will be explained next chapter, don't worry). But what does this mean for our heroes, and the story as a whole? I can assure you, though, her role isn't what most of you are imagining.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Next chapter will be up in two days, because I know you guys are dying to see what's going to happen next. At least those who still plan to continue reading. So if you're still there, don't forget to leave a review, even if it's to tell me how much I suck and you wish I die in a fire. Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Love VS Power

Author's Note: Well, I'm kind of surprised at the last chapter's reception. I expected the reaction to be more negative given what happened. Oh well, I'm not going to look a gift horse in the mouth. Let's hope the chapter is just as well liked:

Chapter 130:

Love Versus Power

or

When Grandma Shows Up Unnanounced

Site of the Final Battle

"It's over. There's no need for us to fight anymore," Obito stated.

Both Obito and Rin had been forced to interrupt their fight when the Ten Tails broke free and unleashed the cataclysm. Thanks to their augmentations, the two of them were able to weather the localized natural disaster with much more ease than their peers. Once it stopped, Rin was ready to continue their battle, but given what Obito had just say, the feeling wasn't mutual.

"What are you talking about? Maybe the Ten Tails just broke free, but we can still fight it! We can still fight you as well!" Rin protested.

Obito merely shook his head, but he didn't mock her nor laugh at her.

"Look," was all what he said.

Rin then saw how the now free Ten Tails dragged itself towards the fallen Fu, still in her Tailed Beast form, grabbed her with one of its immense hands, brought her towards its mouth, and started to drain her of her Tailed Beast chakra.

"NO!" Rin yelled, as she instinctively ran forward. While she wasn't terribly close with Fu, she got to know better the Takigakure kunoichi after she moved to Konoha, and she was somebody the young medic-nin would call a friend.

However, the Ten Tails took no time to drain her dry of her chakra, before callously letting her drop to the hard ground below. Rin fell to her knees as she could no longer sense Fu's chakra.

"Do you understand it now? Nothing can stop the Ten Tails now," Obito stated. "It will now consume the Eight and the Nine Tails, and once it becomes complete, Madara will seal it inside his body, becoming its jinchuriki, and the new Sage of the Six Paths will be born. I was hoping I would be able to do that myself before Madara awoke, but guess fate didn't smile upon me."

That moment, an spiraling portal opened besides them. A dazed and almost catatonic Zetsu fell from the portal, followed by Kakashi, who landed on his feet. Obito turned towards his other former teammate, and smiled widely.

"Ah, Kakashi. I see you just defeated Zetsu," Obito said, looking unmoved by his fellow Akatsuki member's predicament. He spread one of his arms towards the Ten Tails, who was closing on Killer B. "However, your victory is meaningless. Look! The Ten Tails is free and on the way to become complete! Nothing can be done to stop it!"

"Perhaps I'm too late. Or would have been late, if I was able to do something to stop that monster. But I felt that before this ended, I could find the truth," Kakashi cryptically said.

This seemed to draw Obito's attention, making him a little annoyed. "Truth? What truth?"

"The truth about you. About me. About Rin. About the day when everything changed," Kakashi said, as he lightly kicked Zetsu on the side, making it groan with pain. "Come on, aloe vera, tell Obito how you and your pal Madara planned Rin's death."

Obito's right eye shrank, as he felt a chill creeping down his spine. "What? What did you just say!?"

"After we learned more about both you and Rin, there was something that always bugged me: how convenient it was. When Sensei was busy with another mission, one of your teammates, the one you had a crush on, gets captured by Kiri and is turned into the jinchuriki of the Three Tails, prompting her to kill herself. And you arrived just in time to see such a tragic moment. Such an incredible coincidence, don't you think?"

Obito started to shake, as his mind wrestled with the implications of Kakashi's words. One side wanted to believe his silver haired former teammate, as what he said made sense. But another, more emotional side of his refused to accept such possibility because of what it implied.

"That's why I decided to take your pal over here to a more private place for some interrogation," Kakashi stated. "And io and behold, my suspicions were correct."

"No... no! You lie!" Obito replied, as he pointed an accusatory finger at him. Kakashi and Rin could see how much his hand was trembling.

As this happened, Rin saw how the Ten Tails drained thr Eight Tails out of Killer B's body.

"You have a way to see if I'm lying or not," Kakashi continued. "If I'm not mistaken, one of the Rinnegan's powers is interrogation. Why don't you use it on this fella, hm?"

Obito looked at Zetsu, still rather dazed and confused.

"... or are you afraid of what you might discover?" Kakashi asked.

Obito's eyes moved between Kakashi and Zetsu as he struggled with indecision. Was his former teammate right, or was he playing a trick on him? And if it was a trick, with what purpose? What would Kakashi gain by having Obito use the Naraka Path on Zetsu? It wasn't like the Human Path, which would kill him. And even if it was the case... Zetsu's death wouldn't change anything. Not this late into his and Madara's plans.

In the end, Obito took a decision. He stomped towards Zetsu, and lifted the dual being by its neck, until the two made eye contact.

"Jigokudo!"

Kakashi and Rin couldn't see it, but Obito had summoned the King of Hell behind him. Its mere sight was enough to snap both halves of Zetsu out of their confusion.

"Wha-what are you doing?" the white half asked. They tried to break out of Obito's hold, but their entire body was paralyzed.

"Shut up! I'm the one making the questions here!" Obito yelled. "Now answer me this: was Rin's death part of a plan to manipulate me!?"

"I... I... I don't know!" he replied.

The King of Hell opened its maws, releasing a tendril like arm, just as a stream of energy flowed out of the plant being's mouth. The arm caught the stream, and pulled it towards the King of Hell's own mouth.

Obito narrowed his eyes in anger.

"Liar."

Both halves of Zetsu panicked. As they felt mobility returning to their shared body, they attempted to break free, but Obito didn't give him the chance. He was once again paralyzed as Obito placed one of his hands on top of his head, and began to scan his memories. He had to dig very deep, given that the memories were almost two decades old, but in the end, he found them. Or at least, a memory that confirmed Kakashi's

...

Many years ago

"It is done, boss. The girl has been kidnapped and it's being taken to the Kirigakure outpost as we speak," White Zetsu said to Madara.

Obito realized he was watching the scene from Zetsu's point of view. Madara was in his makeshift study, where he used to spend most of the time, even if right now he wasn't reading any book or scroll.

"How about the Konoha ninjas? Are any of them in pursuit?" Madara asked.

"Just one. Kakashi Hatake. Though he did use those dog summons of his to ask for reinforcements to Konoha," Zetsu informed.

"That's no cause of concern. The only one who could reach them in time is the Yellow Flash, and we made sure he's busy elsewhere," Madara said, not worried at all. "The only thing we should be concerned with is that the sealing process is uninterrupted. Only then must the silver haired brat be allowed to rescue the girl."

"Uh, yes boss. I'll make sure me and the others see to that," White Zetsu replied.

Zetsu's tone didn't fly over Madara, who scowled at his creation. "Is there something in your mind, my minion? Something you might want to share with me?"

Zetsu gulped a little, as he shifted uncomfortably. "Well, it's just that... please don't mistake this for insubordination, boss, but, uh..."

this whole plan seems rather complicated just for that brat alone. There are so many things that can go wrong..."

Madara's withered lips curved into a smile. "It certainly does, doesn't it?" he asked. "The brat might not look like much, but I can see there's a lot of potential deep inside him. However, before said potential can be brought to the surface, he needs to be broken, so we can rebuild him to do my bidding.

" Besides, this will also ensure he will awaken the Mangekyo Sharingan. He will need it if he plans to carry out my will."

...

Obito didn't need to see more. He gritted his teeth in anger as tears welled up inside his eyes.

"NINGENDO!"

Obito pulled his hand away, tearing the souls of both the white and the black halves from their shared body. Zetsu stumbled backwards, before he fell on his back lifelessly, while the black half broke down into a puddle of black, ink-like liquid. The rogue Uchiha watched at the being that was once his right hand man.

Then, he realized he wasn't looking at Zetsu's corpse. Instead, it was Rin, with a bloody hole in her chest, the one he was looking at.

"No... NO!"

Obito stumbled backwards, and his foot tripped onto something. The Akatsuki turned around, and saw two more corpses, of two people he knew really well: Minato and Kushina. Next to them, wrapped in a blanket, was baby Naruto, crying profusely. Such sight startled Obito, and tripped again on another corpse. This time it was Biwako Sarutobi, the Third Hokage's wife, whom he personally had killed on his quest to release the Nine Tails and use it to destroy Konoha.

Obito found himself surrounded by corpses, all of them of people he knew. Of people he either killed personally, or helped to kill: Hiashi Hyuga, Inoichi Yamanaka, Yugito Nii, Yagura, Uzakata, Roshu, and many, many more. No matter where he looked, there were nothing but corpses as far as his eyes could see. He fell on his knees, shut his eyes down, and clutched his head with his hands.

"No, no! Stop! Make it stop!" he cried.

" Great changes are impossible without equally great sacrifices."

" And who decides who gets sacrificed? You? Madara?"

After joining Madara, Obito had been a follower of that idea. Sacrifice a few for the wellbeing of the many. How could anybody be against that? There was no system that made everybody happy, so humans always looked for one that at the very least made the largest number of people happy instead. And he wasn't any different.

Yes, sacrificing a few to benefit the many sounded really good. Until you're one of the few that is chosen as sacrifices.

Madara had decided that Rin needed to be sacrificed in order for his perfect world to exist. Needless to say, Obito didn't consider any world that didn't have Rin on it to be perfect by any stretch of the imagination. And now that Obito finally had reached such realization, he was now forced to come to terms with all the people he had killed, plus many more he made miserable, in his and Madara's mad quest for an apparently utopic world.

"What have I done? What have I done!?" he repeated, still clutching his head. He then felt a hand touch his shoulder. He dared to open his eyes, and saw Rin, alive and well, looking at him with a serious expression, her mouth a thin line.

"There's no time to lament for past actions, Obito," Rin said. She then smiled a little. "Come on, it's not too late. With your help, we can still fix this."

"It is. There's no stopping the Ten Tails now," Obito dejectedly said.

"I wouldn't be so sure, Obito," Kakashi intervened. "Look."

Obito turned around. His eyes widened once they saw what was going on.

"What the...?" Obito said, his mouth agape.

"That Naruto is truly something, isn't he? Then again, he is Sensei and Kushina-san's son," Rin said longingly. Her expression hardened when her eyes drifted towards somebody else. "However, he won't be able to do it alone. Come on, he needs our help!"

Obito didn't say anything. He merely nodded, got back on his feet, and followed the ones they used to be his teammates.

There was one last mission for Team Minato to fulfill before everything ended.

...

A place beyond time and space

"Kaguya Otsutsuki..."

"So you know who I am. Good. That shall allow me to skip introductions," Kaguya said with a nod. "Not that there's any hurry. We can stay here in this dimension for hours, yet only a couple seconds will pass in the real world," she said, albeit it appeared that she was mostly talking to herself.

"Wait... how the hell are we talking with you?" Naruto asked.

"Neither Hinata-hime nor I have your chakra!"

"You are correct, neither of you have my chakra. However, my sons inherited a half of my chakra's power each. The same power that you now possess. And the moment your respective chakras merged, it finally allowed me to contact you," Kaguya explained. "I do imagine that you already met my sons, didn't you?" Kaguya asked. However, neither teen replied. They instead looked at each other, almost if silently asking each other if this woman could be trusted, given their past. Something Kaguya herself seemed to grasp. "First, however, I want to assure you that you have nothing to fear from me. I'm not your enemy. But even if I was, I would have no power to cause you any harm."

"Well, that's reassuring," Naruto said out loud.

"We heard of you from your sons. They told us what you did, and what you wanted to do with the world," Hinata said, looking at the pale skinned woman with a critical eye. "And maybe you can't harm us physically, but people underestimate how words, especially dishonest words, can be used to cause harm."

"Yeah. Are we supposed to believe that you saw the error of your ways, or something?" Naruto asked. "You used to be the Ten Tails. Maybe you were the one behind Madara's plan, and you're using him to come back to life."

If Kaguya took offense at the pair's skepticism, she didn't show it. "You don't need to believe me. But to answer your doubts, it is impossible for me to return to the world of the living, even if, like my sons, my spirit is still linked to this world thanks to the force of my chakra. I died the moment Hagoromo drained the Ten Tails of its chakra, even if the creature itself still lives. And yes, I did see the error of my ways. I did have, after all, almost a millennia not just to think about my past actions, but to observe the world my sons have created.

"However, there's still something that needs to be done. Even if my sons were right to stop me from subjugating the world, they didn't have the entire context of my actions. And such knowledge needs to be passed. Whatever you choose to do with such knowledge, it will depend entirely on you."

Once again, Naruto and Hinata silently looked at each other, and reached a decision without the need of trading words.

"Alright old lady, we're listening," Naruto said. His tone, however, also carried an unsaid warning.

Kaguya nodded, seemingly unperturbed by Naruto and Hinata's lack of trust in her. She waved her hand, the surroundings around them abruptly changed. They were no longer on Earth's orbit, but inside some sort of castle with many people inside it. They had chalk white skin, ashen hair, and wore similar clothes to Kaguya. Naruto and Hinata guessed they were her people.

"This is the Otsutsuki clan," she began, confirming their guess. "We have existed for eons, and for all our existence, we have traveled the cosmos looking for planets that were teeming with life," their surroundings changed once again, this time showing an alien planet. Said planet had a purple sky, tall trees with blue and white leaves, as well as plenty of animals that looked nothing like the animals from Earth. "Once we found a planet suitable for our needs, we planted a seed on it. From said seed, a special tree would germinate," the image changed once again, this one to show a tree so thick and tall, it disappeared into the sky, making the other trees look like mere blades of grass. "You know this kind of trees as the Divine Tree."

Both Naruto and Hinata gasped at the revelation.

"So the Divine Tree... it was you who planted it?" Hinata asked. "Not even Hagoromo nor Hamura knew where the tree came from. It simply... existed."

"Because I never told my sons what was the true purpose behind those trees," Kaguya continued. "The Divine Trees, once completely mature, would extend their roots through the entire planet, and would start to drain it of its nature energy little by little. Once it had stored nature energy over a thousand years, it would use it to produce a single chakra fruit. Then the Otsutsuki tasked with watching over the planet would collect the fruit and send it back home. Then, the fruit would be used to produce many special pills that are distributed among the rest of the clan. By consuming said pills, we Otsutsuki are able to gain immense power, and extend our lifespans for more than a millenia."

"Wait, didn't you eat the fruit raw?" Naruto interrupted. "Or at least, that's what I heard you did."

"You are correct, yes. I will get to that shortly. Please refrain yourself from asking anymore questions until I'm done telling my tale," Kaguya replied, shooting Naruto an icy look, making the blond shiver a little. "We have to keep consuming those pills in order to maintain our power and immortality, so we have to harvest fruits constantly, and once a chakra fruit has been produced, the cycle begins anew, and the tree starts gathering more nature energy for another fruit. And after several cycles..."

The image changed again, showing the planet losing both fauna and flora little by little, until it is reduced to a barren, empty wasteland. Naruto's mouth was left agape, and Hinata covered her mouth with her hands in horror.

"So... that's what would have happened to the Earth if the Divine Tree wasn't removed?" Hinata asked, horrified.

"It would have taken several millenia to reach such state, but yes, your assessment is a correct one," Kaguya confirmed. He then looked at Naruto. "You asked me about eating the fruit raw before. Doing such a thing is forbidden by the clan under penalty of death. Eating a fruit raw makes one completely immortal, and gives a permanent power boost far greater than a mere pill," Kaguya said, and sensing Naruto about to ask another question, she continued. "However, eating a fruit raw also permanently binds you to the Divine Tree, making you unable to leave the planet. And once the Divine Tree is done draining a planet of its nature energy and dies, so does anybody bound to it."

"That means that you would have eventually died," Naruto said.

"Yes, you are correct," Kaguya confirmed.

"Then why did you do that? Plus, you wouldn't be able to return home. Did you like the Earth so much?" Naruto asked, crossing his arms.

"Yes," was Kaguya's reply.

The blond was taken aback. "Really?"

"Two thousand years ago, I was sent to this planet to plant the seed of a Divine Tree, and to oversee its growth. And while I did, I realize that this planet has something no other planet we harvested ever had: intelligent lifeforms. Lifeforms which shared an uncanny resemblance to our species," Kaguya continued. Then, for the first time since they met her, Kaguya smiled, even if only a little. "At first I didn't think much of humans. They were short lived, short sighted and brutish. Unaware of how small they were compared to the rest of the universe.

"However, despite their flaws, I saw that humanity had something we Otsutsuki lacked: creativity without limits, and the ability to change and grow with each new generation. That made me realize the flaws of my own people," Kaguya said. "We Otsutsuki existed for eons, and for eons we remained unchanged, doing nothing but harvesting chakra fruits in order to maintain our power and immortality. We aren't even allowed to have children, since more Otsutsuki would force us to harvest more fruits or to reduce our ration of pills.

"Soon I fell in love with your species, and tried to find a way to save you from your inevitable doom. I realized that I wouldn't be able to carry such task without incurring into the wrath of my brethren, so I took a decision: once the tree produced a chakra fruit, I would eat said fruit. With my newfound powers, I would then unite humanity under my leadership, and use my knowledge to lift them into a proper civilization. One that would be able to defend itself from the inevitable retaliation that was to come. I even seduced a human emperor into marrying me, and from such union, my twin sons were born. They would help me unite the world and fend off the Otsutsuki invasion.

"Given that I was bound to the Divine Tree, I commanded it to gather nature energy at a much slower rate as to slow down the planet's death, while I prepared its people for the battle to come. And once the Otsutsuki Clan would no longer be a threat, I would destroy the Divine Tree, as well as myself. Leaving the world into my sons' care.

"I don't think I need to say that my plan didn't work out as expected. I'm sure you already know what happened next from my sons," Kaguya said, seemingly finishing her tale.

"Great. So even if we beat Madara, there's an even bigger enemy that's bound to drop onto our doorstep sooner or later," Naruto groaned, rolling his eyes.

"Yes. But now, Madara Uchiha and the revived Ten Tails are the more immediate threats, threats that you must put down post haste," Kaguya urged.

"You want us to stop Madara? Given that he's following your footsteps, I thought you'd approve of him," Hinata observed.

Kaguya glared at Hinata, unamused. "I would have approved of him in another time, but like I said before, I saw the error of my ways. Humanity has a great potential, but for such potential to manifest, freedom is a must. Yes, humanity is prone to conflicts and infighting, but that's an inevitable side effect of your diversity of thought. But conflicts can be solved, if all parts can reach an understanding, if there are people willing to do so.

"Like me before him, Madara is somebody who committed terrible actions for the sake of a noble goal. But terrible actions can only lead into terrible outcomes, no matter how righteous your intentions may be. Hence, he must be stopped, and the Ten Tails broken back into the nine beings Hagoromo split them into."

"And... can we really do that?" Naruto asked.

"Yes. You both have the same power my sons used to wield. Naruto, the chakra of all the Tailed Beasts lies within you. You must use said chakra to bind the Ten Tails' own," Kaguya then looked at Hinata.

"And just like the Moon pulls the seas to form the tides, you, Hinata, must use your power to pull the Ten Tails' chakra from its body once Naruto has bound it."

"So grab the chakra, and pull it out. Got it," Naruto said with a nod.

"Good. I have no more knowledge to share with you. Now you must go. Use what you've learned today to protect the world I love so much, so you can succeed where I failed," Kaguya asked. "May fortune smile upon you."

"Thank you. We'll do our best," Hinata stated.

"Don't worry, we won't fail, Naruto assured her.

And with that, the two Konoha youths left Kaguya's dimension.

...

Back in the Real World

Naruto and Hinata found themselves once again back inside the head of the latter's Avatar of Kalika. They were still holding hands, which glowed with a white light as they merged their power with each other.

"Naruto-kun, let's channel our power into the Avatar of Kalika. I believe it will be our best chance to win."

"You got it!" Naruto agreed.

As Naruto and Hinata funneled their combined power into the latter's chakra avatar, it quickly began to undergo a transformation. The Avatar started to grow in size, as its color began to change from lavender to golden-orange as Naruto's power spread through it. Its hair grew both in length and volume, splitting into nine locks that resembled the nine tails of Kurama, so long they reached the Avatar's ankles. And lastly, pieces of armor started to form around the Avatar, on its chest, forearms, forelegs, and the upper half of its face was obscured by a kitsune-styled helmet.

"Sage Art: Golden Avatar of Kalika!"

The Ten Tails let out a roar of anger, as it fixed its massive eye on the newly formed golden chakra avatar, and once again, it extended one of its arms, its long fingers ready to wrap themselves around the golden giantess.

"Sage Art: Twin Lion Assault!"

The golden avatar thrust two of its palms forward, releasing two blasts of golden chakra. Said blasts took the shape of two maned lions, and crashed into the Ten Tails' hand. The force of the jutsu pushed said arm backwards, almost yanking the Ten Tails with it. However, the colossal beast wasn't going to give up so easily, and decided to use its many tails to grab its prey instead. Not that they were going to be of much help either.

When the first tail came, the Avatar easily deflected it with a palm strike. Another strike came from a different direction, but Hinata's Tenseigan caught it and acted accordingly. The Ten Tails then began to attack with two or three tails at once, forcing the Avatar to actually move while it deflected the attack. Seemingly running out of patience, the Ten Tails decided to attack with all of its tails at once. Unfortunately for him, Hinata had the perfect defense for such a wide attack.

"Sage Art: Protection of the Eight Trigrams, One Hundred and Twenty Eight Palms!"

The golden avatar started to move its four palms forward in a pushing manner, so fast they almost became blurry, while releasing thin streams of golden chakra, deflecting each of the tails that got close to them. The Avatar increased the speed of the defensive jutsu, building up so much power that it pushed the Ten Tails backwards.

"Well done, Hinata!" Naruto praised. "Now it's my turn!"

The Avatar's four hands were brought together, and chakra particles started to gather in the space between them forming a dark purple sphere, the four hands moving further from each other as the sphere increased in size.

"Take this, asshole! Sage Art: Tailed Beast Wave!"

The Avatar thrust all four of its hands forward, releasing the energy stored inside the sphere in the form of a golden-yellow energy wave. The energy wave hit the Ten Tails square in the face, making it to screech in pain as it was pushed backwards. However, that was nowhere near enough to put it down, and the monster still had plenty of fight on it. Deciding that Naruto had the right idea, the Ten Tails opened its huge jaws and started to charge a Tailed Beast Ball of its own.

"Oh no, you won't!"

But before the crimson sphere of destruction was fully charged, the Avatar dashed forward and leaped, just as it delivered a brutal roundhouse kick to the titanic monster, causing the still forming attack to prematurely detonate inside the monster's mouth.

"That was for Killer B!" Naruto cried.

The Avatar jumped again in order to reach the Ten Tails' face, and during the brief time they were eye to eye, the chakra construct delivered a series of fast and powerful palm strikes, each of them carrying so much power, it produced a gust of wind to burst outwards. Once the brief but painful assault was over, the Ten Tails let out a screech of agony as it slumped over.

"Do you think we softened it enough?" Hinata asked.

"I think so. Alright, now time to bind it!" Naruto said.

Several locks of the Avatar's hair raised as if they had life of their own, and wrapped themselves around the Ten Tails' head and arms. However, before they could bind its chakra, the Ten Tails suddenly got up, and lunged forward, delivering a brutal headbutt to the Avatar, pushing it backwards, and releasing the Ten Tails from the locks of hair.

"AAAAAHHH!" Naruto and Hinata screamed in unison as the force of the impact dragged their Avatar through the ground, carving a large furrow, and sending chunks of rocks and earth everywhere.

The Ten Tails dragged itself forward once again, making the earth rumble, ready to claim its elusive prey. Its red eye glinted, and once again, extended a single arm in order to catch the golden Avatar. However, in its fixation, it once again failed to account for external threats.

"Sage Art: Spiraling Inferno!"

When the Ten Tails saw what appeared to be a spinning sphere of flames flying directly into its eye, it was too late to dodge. The missile hit the Ten Tails squarely in the eye, before it exploded into an even larger sphere of revolving flames. A loud screech of pain filled the air once more as the searing pain made the titanic beast recoil.

A gigantic toad Naruto recognized as Gamaken landed with a thundering noise besides the Avatar of Kalika. And on top of that toad, Naruto could see his adoptive parents, the two of them in Sage Mode, with Fukasaku on one of Jiraiya's shoulder, and a fragment of Katsuyu resting on one of Tsunade's shoulders.

"Mom! Dad!" Naruto cried in joy.

"Hey there, kid," Jiraiya greeted him. "Sorry for being late. We got a little tangled up during our reunion with Orochimaru. But we're finally here!"

"And it seems that we got just in time," Tsunade said, as her single visible eye focused on the Ten Tails. "I take you two know how to beat that thing for good?"

"We believe we will be able to drain it of its chakra and split it back into the nine tailed beasts," Hinata began. "But we can't do it as long as it keeps moving!"

It seemed that the Ten Tails, or better said its eye, had finally recovered from the damage caused by Jiraiya's attack, and charged forward once again. Tsunade, hopped off of Gamaken, and smirked at the abomination.

"You need that thing to stay still? Lucky for you, I have the perfect jutsu for that," Tsunade said, as she cracked her knuckles. She made a hand seal. "Sage Art: Gracious Deity Gates!"

Suddenly, massive red torii fell from above, landing on top of the Ten Tails' tails, pinning them to the ground. The beast growled in confusion as the torii gates left it rooted in one spot, unable to move. It tried to pull its tails free, but the torii didn't budge.

"Naruto, now, before it breaks free!" Tsunade urged.

Naruto and Hinata nodded, and commanded the Avatar to rush towards the Ten Tails. Once again, four locks of the Avatar's hair wrapped themselves around the arms and the head of the titanic abomination as if they were tentacles. This time, however, the Ten Tails was unable to break free, and its chakra was bound, leaving it unable to move or retaliate.

"The chakra has been bound!" Naruto announced.

"Let's pull it out then," Hinata said.

Other four of the Avatar's long locks of hair forced themselves through the mouth and down the throat of the Ten Tails, who could still do nothing to fight back.

"I have it!" Hinata cried.

"Great! Now, PULL!"

...

A few minutes earlier

Madara watched in worry the battle before him. One moment, Naruto wasn't even attempting to defend himself from the Ten Tails -not that it would have helped much if he did-, then that annoying Hyuga came and... something happened. The two of them had combined their chakra, creating a completely new kind of power, something Madara had never sensed in his life. Something that, he dared to admit, surpassed his own Six Paths chakra.

And that new power allowed the chakra construct of the Hyuga combined with the Nine Tails' chakra to fight back against the Ten Tails. Despite the fact that the power the two Konoha youths had now was still inferior to that of the Ten Tails, his instinct told him to intervene before things spiraled out of control.

"Better step in and put down those impudent brats once and for all," Madara stated, as he began to move forward. "I'm too close to achieve my goal to-"

"Bansho Ten'in!"

Madara was unexpectedly pulled back by an invisible force, making him fall on his back and roll on the ground.

"What the...?"

"Wood Release: Wood Binding Jutsu!"

The second Madara stopped rolling, and was left lying on his back, a mass of wooden roots sprouted around him and wrapped themselves around his body, immobilizing him and pinning him to the ground. The sound a thousands birds chirping alerted Madara that something was coming from above, and looking up he saw Kakashi leaping down at him, one of his hands coated in blueish-light electricity.

"Lightning Blade!"

"Shinra Tensei!"

However, seconds before Kakashi could impale the old Uchiha, Madara released a kinetic shockwave from his body in all directions, destroying the roots binding him while also blasting Kakashi upwards. As Madara jumped back to his feet, he saw "Kakashi" bursting into a poof of smoke, realizing that what he blasted was a shadow clone.

Madara was able to sense a faint tremble beneath his feet, and jumped back in time to avoid what he assumed was the real Kakashi bursting from below, another Lightning Blade formed in his hand, barely missing his mark for a few centimeters. And it was that moment when Rin chose to attack, since the Deva Path was still recharging, and Madara couldn't move while mid air, delivering a flying kick to the long haired Uchiha's face, sending him flying sideways. Still, Madara was able to regain his balance by doing a backflip, landing on his feet.

"Wood Release: Cutting Jutsu!"

Madara turned around just in time to see Obito ready to impale him with a sharp spear made of wood. Madara was able to grab the spear before it could touch him, reducing its momentum enough so it wouldn't be able to pierce his armor. The older Uchiha looked at who used to be his protégé and right hand man, and scowled in disgust.

"Obito... you dare betray me, when we're so close to victory?" Madara asked, struggling with the wooden spear against the younger Uchiha. "After I saved both your and that pathetic girl's live..."

"Shut up, you liar! I read Zetsu's mind! You didn't save anybody! Her abduction and her death, it was all your doing! Those Kiri ninjas were under your control the whole time!" Obito yelled.

"Oh... so you found about it," Madara said, as anger slowly disappeared from his tone. "And on such a critical moment. Such a pity... you could have enjoyed a safe long life with Rin on the new world I'm about to create, but I guess that you won't stop until one of us lays dead on the ground, will you?"

"I don't want anything from you! Much less a world of your own doing!" Obito angrily replied.

"Come on Obito, until a few minutes ago, you were on board with my plan. I understand you must be hurt and angry after finding how I manipulated you, but you'll surely agree that creating a better world is more important than all of that, right?" Madara asked, as his lips curved into a smirk. "Besides, you should be thankful to me. I opened your eyes to the harsh realities of the world. That's why you never doubted any word from my mouth that reached your ears. That's why you were so eager to carry on my plan, even without me to watch over you."

"Open my eyes...? No, you blinded me, with your promises of an impossible world!" Obito replied. "Yes, I used to follow you, I drank every word you said like a desert dweller drinks water from an oasis. And like you, I used to believe that no great change is possible without equally great sacrifices. But believing that is much easier when is somebody else's the one getting sacrificed."

"Lightning Release: Lightning Beast Running Jutsu!"

Kakashi launched a lightning bolt at Madara, which took the shape of a hound, which began to run towards him. Madara then pulled the spear and Obito with it, grabbing his former minion and throwing it against Kakashi's lightning attack. The lightning hound, however, maneuvered around Obito and jumped towards Madara.

"Gakido!"

Madara raised a hand towards the elemental dog, creating a barrier of white light. Upon crashing against the barrier, the hound was converted back into our chakra which was absorbed into Madara's body. That moment, Rin decided to make her move, and started making hand seals.

"Wood Release: Wood Binding Jutsu!"

Before Madara could finish absorbing Kakashi's attack, multiple wooden roots emerged around him. However, before they could wrap themselves around the Uchiha's body, the blue ghostly ribcage of the Susanoo manifested around him, acting as a shield from the roots, which wrapped around it. The Susanoo developed into its humanoid form, destroying the roots in the process.

"You might have grown in size, but deep down you're still that immature brat I saved during the Third War," Madara said, shaking his head in disappointment. "In this cruel world, born of the imperfect dream of Hashirama, nobody is safe from a sudden death. Tell me Obito, were the deaths of all the people who perished during the Third Ninja War my fault as well? What about the two previous wars? How many did die, hundreds? Thousands? If you could save all those thousands of lives by sacrificing less than a dozen, isn't it our moral duty to do so?"

"Regardless of what you did to Obito and me," Rin interceded. "Your plan is destined to fail! You think that by becoming all powerful, you will bring peace to the world? Power alone can't lead to peace!"

"Power is the key to everything, little girl. People with power can do whatever they want, while powerless weaklings can't do nothing of note. That's why we need to ensure that only those those who are benevolent have power," Madara countered. "In my world, no wicked men will have the power to spread evil or start senseless war."

"That's rich, coming from the most wicked man in history that started the biggest war we ever saw!" Rin angrily replied.

Madara scowled. A sword formed on one of its Susanoo's arms as it raised it. "I'm done listening to you lot."

The Susanoo brought the sword down. Rin squeaked as she jumped just in time to avoid the giant blade striking the ground, opening a crack, and raising a cloud of dust. Obito snarled, and charged at Madara.

"Don't you dare lay a finger on Rin!" the Uchiha growled.

"Very well. Do you volunteer to take her place, then?" Madara mockingly asked, as he crossed his arms.

The Susanoo prepared to strike again, this time at Obito. But much to Madara's initial shock and later frustration, the blade of his Susanoo phased through him as he were an illusion. Obito was also able to phase through the Susanoo's body, reaching a hand towards Madara, who took a step back.

"That body of yours isn't immortal! All I need to do is send you to the Kamui dimension, and just wait until you die of dehydration!" Obito said, just as his index finger grazed Madara's armor. "There! Ka-"

"Shinra Tensei!"

Unfortunately, before Obito could teleport Madara to the pocket dimension, he was blasted away from him and out of the Susanoo, landing painfully on his back, as his body skidded on the hard ground.

"Obito!" Rin screamed.

"And you forget that your Kamui doesn't make you immortal either," Madara said. "You need to stay tangible in order to send something to your pocket dimension, and that window of time is more than enough for me to strike back," Madara then turned around, and saw the Ten Tails struggling against Naruto and Hinata. As a feeling of worry crept up his back, the Uchiha mastermind scowled. "That doesn't look good. Alright, no more wasting time with you lot."

"And you think we're going to let you escape?" Rin asked, as she leaped towards Madara, kunai in hand.

Madara let out an irritated sigh, as he generated a black chakra rod through his palm, and used it to impale Rin through the gut just as she leaped at him. However, "Rin" quickly lost all color, faded into the dull brown of tree bark.

"A Wood Clone. How original and unexpected," Madara deadpanned, as he shook the lifeless clone off his chakra rod and tossed it away.

"Don't let him go! Naruto and Hinata are almost done with the Ten Tails! We need to keep him at bay for a little longer!" the real Rin replied from the opposite side of him.

"It seems that I'll have to crush these annoying insects with my overwhelming power," Madara said, as he held a hand up. "Chibaku Tensei!"

A marble-sized black gravity core formed on Madara's hand, and shot into the sky. The ground started to shake as chunks of rock and dirt were torn from it, and pulled towards the gravity core.

"Kakashi, Obito!" Rin called her teammates, horror seeping from her voice as she remembered the last time Madara used that attack. "You can't let Madara finish that jutsu! You need to interrupt no matter how!"

"Leave that to me!" Kakashi said, as he focused his Sharingan on the nascent planetoid. The silver haired Jonin also remembered when Pain attempted to use that jutsu to destroy Konoha. That time he didn't have the chance to stop it, but he would do it now. As his Sharingan morphed into its advanced form, Kakashi made a hand seal. "Kamui!"

A spiraling vortex appeared on the forming planetoid, which began to slowly suck it into the Kamui dimension, much to Rin's relief.

And, unaware to Team Minato, that was the opportunity Madara was waiting for. He directed each of his hands towards Obito and Rin, respectively.

"Bansho Ten'in!"

Obito was able to sense the attack and activate Kamui in order to avoid it, but Rin wasn't so lucky, and was yanked towards Madara. The long haired Uchiha's hand gripped her neck with such force, she was unable to breathe.

"Rin!" Obito yelled, as he rushed towards her and his former master. "Don't you dare touch her!"

"You know, I had many chances to kill this girl, but I exercised restraint for your sake. But given that we are no longer allies, I have no more reason to hold back," Madara said, and much to Obito's horror, he placed his other hand on Rin's head. "Ningendo!"

Pulling said hand back, Madara teared Rin's soul out of her body, killing her instantly, before disdainfully tossing her lifeless body to Obito, who caught it. It was cold to the touch. He couldn't sense her chakra, nor hear her breathing.

"No... no... !" Obito sobbed, as he fell to his knees, cradling Rin's body. The worst day of his life was happening again. Except this time it wasn't a nightmare or an hallucination. "NOOOOOOOO!"

"Rin... !" Kakashi said, after sending the Chibaku Tensei to the Kamui dimension, he had just caught Madara killing Rin in cold blood. He just stood there, with his eyes wide open in horror.

"Let this be a lesson of what happens to those dare to betray me," Madara hatefully said. "Once I decided you've suffered enough, I shall kill you next."

With that, Madara leaped away, and headed towards the Ten Tails, leaving Obito and Kakashi.

Obito didn't hear Madara's threat, nor registered him leaving. All he could think of now was Rin. He had failed her again. He had gone for such lengths not only to bring her back, but to create a world where she could live happy and safe. And now, all his efforts, years of work, were crumbling in front of his eyes. Was Rin's immutable fate to die before she could ever reach adulthood? Was Obito's crusade pointless from the very beginning?

"Everything I did, I did it for you..." Obito sobbed. "Yet in the end... in the end it was for nothing..."

" You never asked me if I wanted you to do all of this," Rin's voice replied.

"I thought... I thought I knew better..." Obito continued. "I thought... you'd eventually see things my way..."

" All you and Madara ever did was to carve a path of death. Is it that surprising that I ended up as one of his victims?" Rin angrily asked.

Obito didn't have an answer to that. Or perhaps he did have, but was too afraid to say it out loud. That question brought to his mind once again the memory of all the people he had killed, either directly or indirectly. At the time, he just dismissed them as necessary sacrifices to build a better tomorrow. But now... they were people whose deaths didn't accomplish anything.

" There's still a chance to fix this," a voice said. It wasn't Rin, nor Kakashi. He recognized the voice as his own past self, the goggle-wearing boy who was Kakashi's rival and wanted to become Hokage. "But you know that the price is a big one."

"That price is nothing but a fraction of what should I do to atone for all my sins," Obito replied to his younger self. "No world that doesn't have Rin on it can be called perfect. And I don't want to live in a world where Rin doesn't exist anymore. I will gladly pay this price in order to give her another chance."

Carefully, Obito laid Rin's lifeless body in front of him. He then knelt down, and made the Ram seal. His body started to glow with a white light.

"I may not be able to undo most of my crimes. But at least, I will be able to correct my most recent ones," Obito said, as the Ram seal turned into the Snake. "Outer Path: Heavenly Rebirth!"

A beam of white light shot from Obito into the sky.

...

"Come on! Keep pulling!" Naruto encouraged. "Just a little more!"

The four tentacle-like golden locks were wrapped around a teal colored mass of chakra which they were trying to pull out of the Ten Tails' body. However, despite being immobilized and most of its chakra bound, the colossal beast still resisted, and the two youths were unable to separate the chakra from the body.

"Nggggh... ! No matter how hard we pull, the monster keeps pulling the chakra back!" Hinata cried. She tried to stay positive and remind herself that, if Hagoromo and Hamura were able to do this in the past, so could they. But a part of her mind reminded her that they weren't Hagoromo and Hamura. "I'm afraid we might not be strong enough to do this!"

Rather than sharing her panic, Naruto simply smirked, much to her bemusement. "In that case, let's ask more people to help us!"

The remaining golden lock of hair shoot backwards, where most of the Allied Ninja survivors were. The lock split into multiple threads as it spread around the battelfield.

"Everybody! Grab onto the chakra threads!" Naruto commanded. Nobody asked any questions, and the ninjas not currently fighting the few Ten Tails miniclones left did as he commanded. Naruto could sense how their chakras were added to his and Hinata's. Most of them unknown, but many of them familiar. Yes, with their combined power, they would put an end to this nightmarish monster! "Now PULL!"

They all pulled in unison. And, unlike the previous tries, it seemed that the Ten Tails was unable to swallow the chakra back. More and more of the chakra blob was forced out of its body, and with a final pull and a loud snapping sound, the Ten Tails' chakra was completely separated from its body. The backlash of such colossal effort caused the Golden Avatar of Kalika to break down and vanish, but it no longer mattered.

The mass of chakra then split into nine blobs, and each blob taking the form of one of the nine Tailed Beasts, all of them landing on the ground with a booming noise. And just like the nine Tailed Beasts reformed, the Ten Tails shrieked as its form twisted and shrank until it regressed to the Demonic Sature form, before disappearing in a cloud of smoke, returning to its sealing place within the moon.

" YES! You did, Naruto! I knew my trust in you wasn't misplaced!" Kurama cheered.

" Thank you, Kurama. But it wasn't just me. I would have never done this alone," Naruto mentally replied.

Kurama chuckled, and shook his head. "Always have to play the part of the ideal, humble hero, huh Naruto?"

Naruto was going to reply, when he heard Hinata gasp, and look up into the sky.

"Naruto, look!"

...

Like it had happened in Konoha months back, the sky flashed white for a brief moment, and beams of white light started to descend from above. When the beams of light touched the corpses that littered the battlefield, they miraculously returned to life. Even those whose corpses were far too mangled or slaughtered had their bodies completely restored before they were returned to life.

As the sensor ninjas started to sense all the new chakras appearing around them seemingly out of nowhere, the dead returned to life.

...

Away from all the action, Shino continued to try to keep Fu alive as he waited for Kiba and Tamaki to bring Naruto. But they were taking way too long. Fu's vitals kept deteriorating. His medical jutsu wasn't working. None of the chakra he transferred to her was of any help.

"Come on Fu, don't leave me!" he cried, at a louder volume than he was used to speak, as tears started to stream down his cheeks. "I know you're strong! You're the strongest person I ever met! You can't let this be your end!"

Then, all of sudden, a beam of white light hit her body, and almost instantly, Fu's eyes snapped wide open, and flung herself up, breathing heavily.

"Fu... !"

"Sh-Shino...?" the green haired girl stammered. "Shino! I... I dreamt I was dead! What the hell just happened!?"

Shino, however, didn't say anything, and simply hugged his confused but very much alive girlfriend, as more tears rolled down his face. Except this time, they were tears of joy rather than sorrow. However, much to his confusion, Fu gently pushed him back, breaking the hug, and looked into his eyes with a dazed gaze.

"Something... something's wrong..." Fu mumbled, as she started to look at her own body, until she finally noticed the missing piece. "Chomei! Where is Chomei? Why I can't feel Chomei!?"

...

Not far away from Shino and Fu, Killer B's students were gathered around him, watching how T was futilely trying to keep him alive long enough for the Raikage to return with Naruto. But no matter how hard the blond haired medic tried, it simply wasn't enough.

"He has no heartbeat!" Omoi said, placing his fingers on B's wrist.

"Come on T, we're losing him! I know you can do better!" Karui shouted.

"I'm trying my best, but it's not enough! No medic on earth can save a jinchuriki whose Tailed Beast has been extracted!" the braid-wearing girl protested.

"We can't lose sensei, you hear me? We already thought we lost him once, and I don't plan to go through that again! Not unless we've done everything in our hand! So you better-"

"Hey, what's that?" Omoi asked, looking up into the sky.

The two girls did likewise, and had to shield their eyes from the bright beam of light that was falling upon them. The beam of light hit B's body, and the rapper ninja instantly sat up, and started coughing.

"S-sensei...?" Karui asked.

"W-Where am I? What's going on? What does it feel like I've been gone?" he asked, as he confusedly looked at his students, who were crying tears of joy. However, despite his return to life, B felt that something was missing from him. Something very important. "There's something amiss, wait... where is Number Eight?"

...

Yugito was watching in awe how the dead were returning to life. Those who did were a bit confused, looking around, trying to understand what was going on. The friends and loved ones of the resurrected didn't question what was going on, and jumped to hug them, many of them crying tears of joy.

She couldn't help but smile at such a heartwarming sight.

" You know, Kurama told me about this happening in Konoha," Matatabi chimed in. "But seeing it with your own eyes... it's something completely different."

"It certainly is," Yugito agreed. "Despite all the people who died in this war, this battle at least will end up with zero casualties on our side."

Distracted as she was by the miracle happening around her, Yugito didn't realize that one of the falling beams of light was heading towards her. The jinchuriki of Matatabi screamed and fell on her butt in shock as the beam of light hit her, sending a jolt through her body.

" Yugito! What happened!?" Matatabi's shard within her asked, worried. "Are you okay?"

"I... think?" Yugito asked, confused. "I don't know, I feel... different," Yugito said. For some reason, her body didn't feel like a Shadow Clone anymore. In fact, she felt almost like she did when she was alive. Moved by a hunch, she pulled out a kunai from her ninja tool pouch, and made a cut on her thumb.

It started to bleed.

"Blood... my blood..." Yugito said, her voice barely a whisper, as she watched a thin thread of blood trickle down her finger.

" But... Shadow Clones don't bleed, right?" Matatabi asked.
"Then... it can only mean..."

"I'm alive..." she said in realization. Then, her lips curved into a wide smile, as she began to leap in joy. "I'm alive! I'm alive! Oh yes! Everyone, Yugito is back!"

...

Yugito wasn't the only one who underwent a rebirth, as the other jinchuriki that had temporary Shadow Clone bodies were also hit by the resurrecting beams of light.

Such as Han and Roshi, that were making sure that all the Ten Tails Spawns were truly done and accounted for.

Or Yagura, who had reunited with his wife and son, and was using the chance to say a proper goodbye before his artificial body finally disappeared.

Or Utakata, who was telling Hotaru about how he ended up raised as a zombie, before part of his chakra ended up in Naruto, while Hotaru was telling him about her battles in the war, and how she had met and fought Utakata's former mentor Harusame, and how, misguided as he was, the man never betrayed Utakata, but wanted to help him.

...

The last of the beams of white light fell upon Rin. As her body was revitalized and her soul returned to it, the medic-nin's eyes were opened wide, and quickly sat up, breathing heavily, while looking around, confused.

"W-What... where am I...? I am alive?" she asked, before she looked at Obito, kneeling next to her.

"Rin..."

"Obito...?"

Obito didn't say anything. He simply smiled, and much to the medic's shock, he dropped on his back, lying on the ground.

"Obito, what's wrong?" Rin asked, as he quickly went to check him.

"Nothing... nothing's wrong..." Obito weakly said. "At least... not anymore..."

"Your heartbeat is so weak... and you're so cold!" Rin said in horror. "What-"

"Rin, Madara killed you," Kakashi said, as he walked towards the two. Albeit dragging himself was probably a more appropriate term to use, since all the battling was finally taking a toll on his body. "Obito then used the Rinnegan to revive you, as well as the ninjas who died during the battle against the Ten Tails, to life."

"What? But how... wait a minute, isn't that what that Pain guy did after the battle of Konoha?" Rin asked. "But... that jutsu claims one's life after using it!"

Kakashi merely looked at Obito with saddened eyes. "I think he was aware of such outcome."

"No! Obito, why did you do it?" Rin said, as he grabbed his shoulders. Her eyes started to water. "Why? Now that you finally saw the light! Now that the three of us were finally together!"

Obito chuckled sadly. "Rin... one way or another, there was no future for me," he was interrupted by a coughing fit. "But you... you do have a future, Rin. You deserve it. I sacrificed plenty of lives for you,

Rin... and look how it ended. My life is the only life I have any right to sacrifice... so... let me do this for you..."

"Obito..." Rin said, as tears ran down her cheeks.

Obito then turned his head towards Kakashi.

"Kakashi... I asked you to protect Rin once... and you failed. Then again... I wasn't any better, was I?" he asked, laughing a little, before his laugh was cut by another coughing fit. "So now, make sure you don't waste this second chance," Obito said, before his eyes rested on Rin once again. "And you Rin... make sure you keep Kakashi alive as well. It's a miracle that this idiot made it alive so far."

Rin wiped her tears, and forced herself to smile at Obito's jab. "Yeah, hehe... and yes, don't worry. I always kept you guys in check, didn't I?"

"Good..." Obito coughed again. "Now... I also want to say that... for all what's worth... I'm sorry... for the hell I put you through..."

"It's okay Obito. You suffered a lot yourself as well. But don't worry, your suffering is about to end," Rin said, as she helped Obito to lie down. "You can rest now."

After taking one last look at the girl he used to have a crush on and the man who was both his rival, enemy and best friend, Obito closed his eyes, and never opened them again.

Rin hung her head, and started to weep, while Kakashi pulled her into a hug.

...

With the Ten Tails defeated and Obito dead, there was only one Akatsuki left. One who, despite his immense power, still couldn't match the combined might of the Ninja Alliance on his own. However, said Akatsuki was about to pull one last, desperate gamble to achieve victory. Because many things could be said of Madara Uchiha, but being a quitter wasn't one of them.

As the Tailed Beasts were celebrating their newfound freedom with Naruto and Hinata, Madara leaped towards them, landing in the middle of the Tailed Beasts. Given his body language, it was obvious he wasn't going to surrender.

"This isn't over yet!" he hollered.

"I'm afraid it is," Naruto replied. "The Ten Tails is no more and your army has been destroyed. All what's left of Akatsuki is you, Madara."

"Yeah. Don't complicate things any further and surrender peacefully," Jiraiya stated. "Strong as you are, you can't defeat all of us."

"Especially not when we have all Tailed Beasts here to help us as well," Hinata added.

Madara chuckled condescendingly at the Konoha ninjas. "You're forgetting about an important detail," Madara then tapped the side of his head. "I still have the Rinnegan. Meaning that I can still summon the Demonic Statue and seal the Tailed Beasts again myself!"

" And you think we're going to let you?" Gyuki asked, as he lumbered forward.

" Naruto, you and the other humans, please stand back," Chomei said, as she menacingly hovered over the rogue Uchiha. "This is our fight."

"I'm afraid you won't be fighting anybody, you filthy animals," Madara snarled, looking at the beasts closing on him with contempt. "Your fate is to disappear within the Ten Tails."

"Well, unless you can seal all nine beasts by yourself in a matter of seconds, you're pretty much screwed!" Naruto said.

There was a moment of a very uncomfortable silence. Naruto turned towards his parents.

"He can't do that, right?" Naruto asked, looking at Tsunade, who shrugged, not knowing the answer either.

"Even for one as powerful as I, such feat would be ludicrous. It would be as impossible as manifesting Susanoo without eyes," Madara admitted, much to Naruto's relief. "However, I can still do the next best thing. CHIBAKU TENSEI!"

Madara shot his hands to the sides, throwing nine gravity cores to a Tailed Beast each. The Tailed Beasts were unable to dodge the attack, and as the core latched onto them, they were lifted into the air as chunks of earth and rock were pulled towards them, trapping them inside small planetoids.

"First order of business, secure the Tailed Beasts," Madara replied.

"Release them! NOW!" Naruto demanded, as he and Hinata angrily ran towards him.

"Do you want your precious little animals?" Madara asked in a mocking tone, as his Susanoo manifested around him, going all the way to its Perfect Form. "Then come and get them!"

Naruto and Hinata didn't say anything. Nodding to each other, they held hands once again, merging their chakra and forming the Golden Avatar of Kalika.

The final battle of the Fourth Ninja War was about to begin...

Author's Note: Well, a lot to unpack here. Let's begin!

And thus, Fu and Killer B have been brought back to life! Yay! Come on guys, did you REALLY expected me to kill those two, after how often I gushed about them, and how much readers like them? Yeah, no, in the list of characters that I'd permanently kill, those two rank close to the bottom. The previous jinchuriki are back as well, this time for good. Consider this my apology for the way I handled their capture arcs, which ended up being way too dark with Akatsuki winning time after time.

While I said many times that Kaguya was going to appear, I said just as many times that she wouldn't be an antagonist, and that the final boss of this story was always meant to be Madara, given that he's the mastermind behind the plot of the story. It would make no sense for a new guy (or gal) to show up out of nowhere and hijack his position. Anyway, what do you think of my take on Kaguya? I hope you found it a little more interesting than her canon self. She's a character that desperately needed some more depth to her character, and since she sucked as a villain, perhaps she could do better as a good guy.

Also, the lore about the Otsutsuki clan and the Divine Trees is inspired by canon but with my own spin on it, since not only the canonical lore on those subjects is vague as hell, in some cases it makes very little sense. I hope you find my version more coherent.

Many people wanted a combination between Kurama and the Avatar of Kalika, and here it is. While most of you were thinking in something close to Kurama with a Susanoo armor, I decided to go in the opposite direction and have the Avatar be the base infused with Kurama's power. If the appearance of the Golden Avatar sounds familiar to some of you, that's because I used Sakuyamon as inspiration for this new form.

Though, despite many characters coming back to life, one dies for good. Well, two, since Zetsu finally kicked the bucket as well (three? since Zetsu is two people). I know many of you wanted Obito to be killed like the villain he is, but I needed him to die using the Rinner Rebirth in order to bring all the fallen jinchuriki to life. Then again, at the very least this time around Naruto didn't have him switch sides with Talk no Jutsu (seriously, while Naruto had reasons for wanting to redeem Neji, Gaara and even Pain, there's nothing that would make him want to extend the same courtesy to Obito, which is why I had Kakashi and Rin being the ones to deal with him in his final fight rather than Naruto).

Some readers in past reviews mentioned that it would made more sense for Naruto and Hinata to defeat the Ten Tails rather than Naruto and Sasuke, since it was defeated the first time by Hagoromo and Hamura, not Indra and Asura. Needless to say, not only I agreed with them (Hamura has no relationship with Sasuke), but it was one of the driving forces behind Hinata's role as deuteragonist.

Yeah, that was a Take That at one of the many ways Madara bullshitted his way into Marty Suedom in the manga, one I've been DYING to write, and boy, did it feel cathartic. That means that there won't be Ten Tails Madara (or Ten Tails Obito for that matter), mostly because if there was, I just can't think how the hell the good guys can beat him (because unlike canon, I wasn't going to have Madara hold back and purposefully use weak moves). But don't worry, I'm sure you guys will love what I have planned with him for the final battle.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Now, we head into the story's very final battle, Naruto and Hinata vs Madara Uchiha! Are you guys as excited as I am? And of course, don't forget to leave your thoughts on this chapter in a review while you wait for the story's climax! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Last Battle

Author's Note: Man, I'm so happy how well received the previous two chapters have been. A number of reviews not seen in quite a lot of time. Let's hope this chapter can draw just as many. Enjoy:

Chapter 131:

The Last Battle

or

The part where we blow up our budget for pure spectacle

Site of the Final Battle

"HAAAAAAAAA!"

With a mighty cry, Madara made his Susanoo deliver a vertical sword strike at his golden hued enemy. The Golden Avatar of Kalika caught the blade with its two upper hands, while it moved to deliver a double palm strike with its lower ones, as it had done before.

Madara, however, wasn't somebody who was easily caught with the same trick twice. He made the Susanoo drop its sword, and jumped backwards, causing the earth to rumble, dodging the double palm hit just in time. As he did so, the Susanoo brought his hands together, summoning several magatama-shaped projectiles between them.

"Yasaka Magatama!"

Taking advantage of the Golden Avatar being momentarily wide open, the Susanoo threw the chakra magatamas at it. Madara, however, wasn't counting with the Avatar's nine long golden lock of hairs that could be used like the tails of Kurama. They raised as if they had life of its own, and quickly whipped the incoming projectiles, deflecting them with well timed strikes and avoiding the subsequent explosions.

Not bothered by the fact that his attacks were not having any effect on his enemies, Madara simply unsheathed his other sword, and charged forward, this time opting for an horizontal swipe once he reached the melee range.

The Golden Avatar, however, managed to deflect the sword strike to the side with a well aimed palm strike to the Susanoo's wrist, before countering with a few more palm strikes to the chest and the head, cracking the Susanoo's armor on each spot it struck, before finishing with a roundhouse kick, which packed so much force, Madara's Susanoo was launched backwards, falling on its back.

"Incredible... such power..." Madara said in awe, as he channeled chakra towards his Susanoo in order to repair its cracked armor, and had him get back on his feet, as the Golden Avatar approached. "I never thought I'd find somebody who would entertain me as much as Hashirama! And unlike that green clad fool, your power won't burn out after just a few hits."

"Don't you dare insult Gai-sensei!" Naruto yelled.

"Why not? He was a weakling," Madara said in disgust. "And weaklings shouldn't be mourned."

"You have no right to call Gai-sensei a weakling when he was close enough to kill you," Hinata rebuked.

"He was unable to match me unless he had to exchange his whole life for a temporal power boost," Madara rebutted. "Yes, he was close enough to kill me. And a ninja truly powerful would have another chance to finish the job given enough time. But not him. He put his life on the line for a desperate gamble, and he lost!"

Naruto's glare pierced Madara. "Be sure to enjoy this fight then, Madara, because I can assure you it's going to be your last."

"You can trust I will," Madara said, as his Susanoo extended his free arm, generating another sword of chakra. The chakra construct then crossed his blades in front of its face. "Susanoo: Twin Blade Dance!"

The Susanoo spread its crossed blades in opposite arcs, releasing a barrage of giant chakra crescents towards the opposing chakra construct.

The Golden Avatar started to spin around its feet.

"Six Paths: Golden Heavenly Spin!"

The Avatar's spinning speed continued to increase until it turned into a golden tornado of chakra, just in time to deflect the incoming projectiles, which were redirected elsewhere. Once the danger passed, it stopped spinning.

"Our turn," Naruto said, as he started to make hand seals. "Lava Release: Flower Fruit Mountain!"

The Golden Avatar crouched to one knee and slammed the ground with a single palm. Suddenly, a pool of lava formed at Madara's Susanoo's feet, and the blue chakra construct started slowly sink into a pool of molten rock, while the intense heat began to melt its armor. Then, the Golden Avatar rushed towards the Susanoo, the earth shaking with each footstep, as it clenched its two upper fists. Lion heads made of golden chakra formed around them.

"Six Paths: Twin Lion Fists!"

The Avatar of Kalika slammed one of its lion fists onto the Susanoo's stomach, making it to double over, before delivering a devastating left hook to its face, pushing it upwards. It finished with another punch to the Susanoo's face, which packed so much force, it produced a sonic boom, sending Madara's Susanoo flying backwards.

Despite the brutal attack, Madara channeled more chakra to regenerate his Susanoo, while it forced it to get back on its feet once more.

"Just how much fight is there in this man?" Hinata asked, part astonished and part frustrated at how much punishment the rogue Uchiha could withstand.

" You have no idea, girl. Madara loves to fight against strong opponents, so he's having the time of his life right now," Kurama answered. "He won't stop until either he or his enemies are dead, whatever happens first."

"Then let's make sure it's actually him," Naruto stated.

...

Meanwhile, to the sidelines, from a safe distance, a group of Allied Ninjas, mostly from Konoha, were gathered in order to watch the final battle. Chief among them were Jiraiya, Tsunade, and most members of the Konoha 15.

"Guys!" a familiar voice called.

The group turned towards the direction of the voice, and much to their joy, they saw Shino and Fu coming towards them. Fu looked a bit sick, with her face looking pale and her eyes looking tired, and one arm slung around Shino's shoulder, who was helping her walk. But other than that, she appeared to be okay.

"Fu!" Kiba and Tamaki cried in unison, as they went to greet their friend from Taki.

"Oh man, I can't believe you're awake! I thought you were a goner," Kiba said, with Akamaru barking happily.

"Guess whoever revived all those people revived you as well, huh?" Tamaki asked.

"Chomei," Fu said, ignoring Tamaki's question, as her eyes drifted towards the sky, where the nine planetoids containing one Tailed Beast each were resting. "We need to free her. As well as the others."

"Don't worry, Naruto and Hinata are already on it," Neji said. "Once they defeat Madara, I'm positive the Tailed Beasts will be released."

"By the way, why are we just watching?" Sasuke asked. "Shouldn't we go there and help?"

Jiraiya shook his head. "As they are right now, Naruto, Hinata and Madara are on a completely different league from us. If we intervened, we'd be more of a burden rather than help. But don't worry, I can sense that Naruto and Hinata's combined power is much greater than Madara's. This fight will end soon."

While they didn't like the idea of just being mere observers and let Naruto and Hinata do all the work, they decided to heed Jiraiya's work, and wait until the inevitable victory came. That's it, all of them except Shikamaru, who watched the battle with a critical eye, analyzing every move each of the two chakra colossi made.

"Shikamaru?" Choji asked, noticing his teammate's demeanor. "Something wrong?"

"Yes," was the Nara's reply, his eyes fixed on the seemingly one sided battle. "But right now, I can't discern what."

"What do you mean?" Ino asked, growing a little worried. If Shikamaru saw trouble ahead, it was better not to dismiss his concern. "Don't you believe that Naruto and Hinata can win this?"

"The way the battle is going, yes, I do believe they are on their way to victory, and that's what worries me," Shikamaru said. "This looks way too easy."

Choji's eyes glanced towards the two titanic battlers. The ground shook again when the Golden Avatar parried a double blow from Madara's Susanoo, as cracks started to spread around their feet. "Well, I wouldn't call fighting that thing 'easy'. Even if I used Super Multi Size Jutsu-"

Shikamaru shook his head. "What I mean is, Madara looks rather confident in his chances to win, despite the fact that he's getting his ass whooped. I'm afraid he knows something we're ignoring. He may have one last ace in the hole that we're not considering. Such as..."

Shikamaru's eyes drifted towards the nine planetoids floating high in the sky.

...

The battle of giants continued, with Naruto and Hinata's Golden Avatar of Kalika still dominating the battle. However, no matter how much they battered Madara's Susanoo, the rogue Uchiha continued to fight. In fact, it seemed as if the beatings gave him additional energy.

"Such power at such young age... I get chills to imagine what will you become in a decade..." Madara said with a manic grin.

"Unfortunately, neither of us will have the chance to see your progress."

"Why are you talking as if you're winning?" Naruto asked, annoyed.

"Because I have won. You simply haven't realized of it just yet," Madara smugly replied.

"We already defeated the Ten Tails. Beating you will be far less challenging," Hinata confidently added.

"Good! Try to keep that aplomb! Or else, this fight will be boring," Madara said, as he started making hand seals. "Wood Release: Deep Forest Emergence!"

The ground around the Golden Avatar quaked for a second, before a large mass of green wooden roots burst from underground, and began to wrap around its legs, body, and all four arms. The chakra giantess tried to break free through brute force, but the roots' pull was strong.

"Now stay still while I deliver the next blow!" Madara said, as his Susanoo started to flap its wings, flying into the air.

The Golden Avatar continued to struggle against the mass of roots as Madara's Susanoo gained altitude. Once it was high enough, Madara commanded it to dive into his golden enemy, both swords aiming downwards. Unfortunately, Madara seemed to forget about the Golden Avatar's tail-like hair locks, which Naruto and Hinata used in time to break the roots immobilizing the Avatar, freeing it in time to block the Susanoo's onslaught.

Despite breaking free, the Golden Avatar was unable to stop its foe or dodge in time, and the blue chakra construct slammed into it. Then again, it managed to use its four arms to grab the Susanoo's wrists while also protecting itself from the impact, even if the slam pushed it backwards.

His attack not having the desired effect, Madara tried to pull back, but the Golden Avatar was still holding onto the Susanoo by its wrists. Then, like Hinata had done with Toneri's giant statue, the Avatar started to spin in place, building momentum. Unlike the aforementioned battle, it only built enough momentum just to toss Madara a couple hundred meters into the sky, and while the blue Susanoo was in the air, the Avatar brought its four hands together, gathering red and blue chakra in the form of a purple sphere.

"Tailed Beast Ball!"

The Avatar thrust its four hands towards the airborne Susanoo, launching the purple sphere at him. After just regaining balance, the Susanoo was unable to dodge the projectile, and was engulfed inside a massive explosion.

"Yes! Direct hit!" Naruto cheered, pumping his free fist.

Unfortunately, he realized that the battle wasn't over when Hinata's expression didn't change, her eyes focused on the cloud of smoke created by the explosion. And indeed, the moment the smoke cleared, Madara's Susanoo was still there. It was far from unharmed, having several chunks of its armor tore off, including half its helmet, while only half of its wings remained.

"What an impressive display of power. I never had this much fun since Hashirama. In fact, I'd say that the two of you together are more powerful than I am right now," Madara admitted. "Should this battle continue as it is, I would inevitably lose."

"Then why don't you surrender?" Naruto asked, even if he knew that Madara would never do such a thing. "Or are you the type of ninja that prefers to go down fighting?"

"You are correct on that regard, boy. I only surrendered once in my life, and it's a moment that will haunt me forever," Madara admitted. "Yes, I would fight you to the bitter end even if I knew that I have no chances of beating you. Unfortunately for you..."

Madara made a hand seal, and both Naruto and Hinata shivered upon sensing the sheer amount of chakra that was being moved.

"... I don't plan to lose today."

The nine planetoids with the Tailed Beasts inside them started to crackle with white electricity. Then, the perfectly round asteroids fired a beam of bluish-white chakra each, the nine beams converging into their shared target, Madara's Susanoo. The blue chakra construct started to swell as the power of the Tailed Beasts was pushed into it, quickly regenerating into its complete form. Fire-like chakra of the same color poured from the Susanoo's eyes and mouth.

"What... what the hell is he doing!?" Naruto asked.

"His Susanoo... it's using the Tailed Beasts' chakra to power it up!" Hinata said in realization. "Its power... it's so massive..."

" Yeah... this doesn't look good..." Kurama interceded, sounding positively worried. "If the chakra of the nine Tailed Beasts is combined into one, you produce pure Six Paths chakra, and he's using that chakra to empower his Susanoo"

"So, it's like my chakra... but on a much larger scale?" Naruto asked, before gulping.

They continued to watch in horror as Madara's Susanoo absorbed all that power, triggering yet another form, this time looking as if a being made of pure fire and light was growing out of the armor, with the armor changing its shape in order to adapt to it. Lightning bolts shoot from the Susanoo's new form, as the air around it shimmered. Lastly, two swords which appeared to be made of pure lightning appeared on its hands.

"Ahhhhh... the feeling... it's even better than I could have imagined!" Madara said, spreading his arms, basking in the feeling of power of his new form. He then looked down at the Golden Avatar, and smirked. "Do you understand now? You've lost from the very beginning. I might not be able to become the jinchuriki of the Ten Tails right now, but the power of this Susanoo is a pretty close facsimile... at least, it is to wipe you and those other fools trying to oppose me.

"Thanks to the power of the Tailed Beasts, I managed to break the limits of the Susanoo, creating a form that could crush even Hashirama at his strongest. Now, all it needs is a name. Let's see... given the source of its power... how about Six Paths Perfect Susanoo? A bit of a mouthful, but it will do for the time being."

Naruto and Hinata didn't reply, as they came to terms with the fact that their battle was about to turn around. The two of them could feel the sheer power of Madara's Six Paths Perfect Susanoo, and they were painfully aware that the Uchiha's boasting wasn't undeserved. Still, the two of them were not going to give up.

"Naruto, Hinata... that thing might not be as powerful as the Ten Tails, but Madara will use its power much more efficiently than that monster did. You two better fight like you never did before!" Kurama warned, making the two humans tense up.

The streams of energy began to thin until they disappeared, apparently charging Madara's Susanoo completely. The newly empowered Susanoo flexed its limbs, sending a pulse of chakra that crossed the entire continent. It was felt by pretty much every human being, including those that weren't sensory ninja, leaving all of them with a feeling of dread, as if a cold hand grasped their hearts.

Madara's lips formed a deranged smile, as his Rinnegan eyes focused on the Golden Avatar of Kalika. "Shall we dance?"

Despite its sheer size, Madara's Susanoo crossed the distance between it and its opposing chakra construct in little more than a second, and delivered a brutal backhand. The Golden Avatar was flung back as if it was a mere ragdoll, slamming against a rock formation that was shattered into pebbles. The two humans inside the construct didn't experience the whole power of that single move, but they didn't come out of the impact unscathed.

"Uh-Ugh..." Hinata croaked.

"Hinata! Are you okay?" Naruto asked in concern, holding her straight.

"Y-Yes... I wasn't just prepared for that..." Hinata replied, as she watched the Six Paths Susanoo walking towards them at a leisure pace. "I'm not confident the Avatar can withstand many more of hits of such force."

"Agreed. That's why we better go on the offensive," Naruto suggested. "Ready to go?"

Hinata simply nodded.

With their combined effort, the Avatar got back on its feet, and before the Susanoo could deliver another blow, it dashed towards it, using its building momentum to deliver a palm strike so powerful, it produced a sonic boom followed by a strong gust of wind.

Too bad it failed to cause any harm on Madara's Susanoo, who didn't even move. Naruto and Hinata were taken aback, and they had the Avatar deliver more palm strikes at the blue and white chakra construct, each hit having the exact same effect as the one before. It was like watching an ordinary man trying to bring down a steel wall with his bare hands.

The Susanoo then smashed the hilt of one of its lightning swords on the Avatar's head, making it double over, following with a brutal kick to the face, sending the Avatar flying away. Naruto and Hinata screamed in unison, before they shared chakra construct slammed backwards onto the ground. Madara laughed upn seeing how easily he was dominating the fight.

"Does it sink yet, how inferior you kids are to me?" Madara taunted. "Or do I need to beat such reality into you for a bit longer? Normally I'm not one to ask for the enemy to surrender, but I don't enjoy facing enemies that can't fight back."

The Golden Avatar of Kalika got back on its feet once more, its wounds slowly closing down as Naruto and Hinata channeled more chakra into it. Then, the Avatar brought two of its hands together, making Naruto's favorite seal, and four more Avatars popped into existence. Madara simply laughed at the new developments.

"You think that multiplying the number of losers is going to change anything?" Madara asked. "If that's the case, then come and try to strike me down."

Two of the Clone Avatars rushed forward, and flanked Madara's Susanoo before delivering a palm strike each, and like before, it had no effect. The Six Paths Susanoo sank one of its lightning swords into the gut of one of the Clone Avatars, while vertically slicing the other one in half, making both of them disappear. And while he was busy doing this, the other two clones rushed forward, grappling an arm each with their arms and locks of hair, leaving the Susanoo seemingly immobilized.

The real Golden Avatar cupped its four hands together, and started to form a Tailed Beast Ball between them.

"Tailed Beast Ball!"

The Golden Avatar launched the sphere of destructive energy at the Six Paths Susanoo, who wasn't even attempting to break free from the clones keeping it in place. Perhaps Madara was confident none of Naruto and Hinata's attacks could harm his Susanoo in its new form. The Tailed Beast Ball found its mark, resulting in an explosion that, unlike the Golden Avatar's previous attacks, managed to at least make the Susanoo flinch and stumble backwards.

"Look! That caused some harm!" Hinata pointed out excitedly.

"I saw it! Let's do it again!" Naruto agreed.

More Tailed Beast Balls came, each one of them hitting the Six Paths Susanoo, which reacted to the explosions, but leaving only minimal damage. And once again, it appeared that Madara was purposefully testing the limits of his Susanoo's toughness, as once he grew bored of letting his foes play target practice with him, the Susanoo brought its arms together, slamming the two Clone Avatars against each other, before casually tossing them aside.

"Tailed Beast Ball!"

"Yasaka Magatama!"

The Golden Avatar launched yet another Tailed Beast Ball at Madara, while the rogue Uchiha summoned several magatama-like projectiles, and launched them forward. The magatamas slammed into the Tailed Beast Ball, breaking it apart without losing almost any momentum. The Avatar covered itself with its tail-like locks of hair just in time as the magatamas hit, resulting in a chain of explosions that blew said locks into chunks that quickly dissipated into the air, while pushing it backwards.

The Six Paths Susanoo then stabbed one of its swords of light into the ground, sending an underground energy shockwave that traveled in a line towards the Golden Avatar, cracking the earth in half and blowing up chunks of rock and dirt everywhere. The Avatar was unable to regrow its locks of hair to use as protection in time, taking the brunt of the attack and being blasted backwards.

"His attacks are so brutal..." Hinata lamented.

"I know. We can't let him put us on the defensive, or else, he's going to kick our asses really bad!" Naruto said, as he and Hinata commanded the Avatar to get back on its feet again.

"The Tailed Beast Ball appeared to cause some harm. Let's try that again" Hinata suggested. "This time, I'll add to the Ball's power!"

"Got it!"

Once again, the Avatar cupped its four hands together, as it began to form the Tailed Beast Ball. Meanwhile, Hinata's hands formed several hand seals as her Truth Seeking Balls merged into a single, purple glowing orb of chakra.

"Tailed Beast Ball!"

"Amethyst Wheel Reincarnation Explosion!"

As the Avatar fired the sphere of destruction, Hinata released a mass of purple colored lightnings that wrapped themselves around the ball, giving it a cloak of electricity. The two youths held their breath as their combination attack sailed towards Madara's Susanoo. The Uchiha smirked once again.

"A combination jutsu. Nice. I'm really fond of those myself," Madara replied, as his Susanoo delivered a vertical swipe, slicing the incoming attack in two, the two pieces sailing upwards in opposing angles, before they detonated in the sky. His grin grew wider upon seeing his foes' hopes being crushed once again. "Unfortunately, it won't be enough. Nothing that you do will be enough to defeat me as I am right now!"

"Bullshit! You still haven't seen the best we can do!" Naruto angrily retorted. "Hinata, follow my lead!"

The Avatar brought its hands together once again, except instead of another Tailed Beast Ball, it created a Rasengan, which started to slowly become a Rasenshuriken as Naruto added wind chakra to it, while Hinata added lightning chakra of her own. The air was filled the sound of loud whirrings as well as thunderclaps, while the Avatar held a large spinning shuriken of wind chakra coated with lightning.

"Take this! Sage Art: Double Elemental Release, Spiraling Tempest!"

Madara watched once again as the whirring shuriken of chakra sailed towards his Susanoo. For some reason, he felt this attack packed a meaner punch than the standard Tailed Beast Ball.

"My my, such an interesting jutsu!" Madara said, amused. "That might do some harm to my Susanoo after all. That is, if I allow it to reach that far!"

Naruto and Hinata shivered as they felt the Six Paths Susanoo gathering chakra, lightning bolts firing from its body in every direction, before it slammed both its swords into the ground, launching a vertical slash of chakra as long as the Susanoo was tall, carving a deep crack on the earth as it sailed forward. The two attacks met, and for a few seconds they struggled against the other.

But much to the Konoha ninja's horror, Madara's attack was the one to win the push, breaking their special Rasenshuriken in thousands of tiny shards of chakra, before it slammed against the Golden Avatar flinging it backwards, landing on its back, the impact causing a tremor.

"I imagine that jutsu was your last resort, right?" Madara asked, as he made his Susanoo to move forward, closing the distance between the two titans. "I could see it was quite powerful. Had you used it against my usual Susanoo, it would have destroyed it completely. However-ug?"

For some reason, Madara's Susanoo started to shrink, returning back to its previous form. The confused Uchiha took only a couple seconds to realize what was going on.

"I see," he said, sounding annoyed, as he made a hand seal. The planetoids floating above the ground fired a beam of chakra each into Madara's Susanoo, recharging it, allowing it to return to its empowered form, before it resumed its walk towards its downed enemy.

It seemed that Naruto and Hinata still had some fight in them, as they poured more chakra into the construct in order to regenerate it, while they commanded it to get back on its feet. Except Madara didn't appear to be in the mood to continue the fight, and once it reached them, the Six Path Susanoo kicked it down with great force.

"Sorry, but no," Madara's grin had disappeared, replaced by an unamused scowl. The Susanoo started to brutally kick the golden Avatar while it was down. "I'm tired of this charade. You two will die NOW!"

...

A few minutes earlier

"That's it, I've seen enough!" Sasuke immediately shot forward, ready to assist Naruto and Hinata before Madara could end them for good -and wondering how is that nobody thought in doing so earlier-, but much to his surprise and annoyance, a firm hand kept him in place. Turning around, he saw it was his brother Itachi. "Itachi! What the hell are you doing!?"

"Saving your life, brother. Think for a second! If you went and fought Madara, he would kill you instantly!" Itachi said.

"Then come with me!" Sasuke retorted. "Between all of us, I'm sure we could bring him down!"

"Madara already proved in the past that he's beyond mere numbers," Shisui added, much to the youngest Uchiha's growing annoyance.

"Then what are we supposed to do? Watch how Madara beats Naruto and Hinata down?" Sasuke asked, his Sharingan locked on Madara's Six Paths Susanoo, as he lumbered towards the downed Golden Avatar. "There must be something we can do!"

"I thought in a way that we could provide some support to Naruto and Hinata, but I don't think if it's going to be enough to..." Shikamaru began, but trailed off upon seeing the Susanoo briefly shrinking back to its previous form, before Madara directed more Tailed Beast chakra towards it, reversing the regression. The gears inside Shikamaru's head began to turn once again as a plan, a much improved version of his original idea, formed inside his head, now that he has this new piece of critical information. "Actually, scratch that. I think we may still win this."

"Yeah, I also noticed that Madara's new Susanoo form has a glaring weak point," Jiraiya said, as he walked towards the Nara. "Do you know a way to take advantage of such weakness?"

"I do," was Shikamaru's response. "I'm going to need two things: first, all my former classmates to follow me and do what I say. And two, somebody to keep Madara distracted while we get ready."

"That can be done," Jiraiya said. "Who's going to distract Madara, thought? Because even as a Sage, I'm afraid I don't have the power to even make a scratch on that thing."

"Leave it to us, Hokage-sama," Itachi said, as Shisui nodded behind him.

Hanabi took a step forward. "There's no way I'm standing in the sidelines while my sister and her boyfriend risks their neck for us, I have a Tenseigan too, for Kami's sake!"

"I'll go too. Somebody needs to remind that asshole that he isn't the only one with a Rinnegan," Tsunade said, cracking her knuckles. "Besides, Naruto isn't the only one of my children that son of a bitch has hurt."

As they all moved out, Shino gently helped Fu to sit down.

"I wish I was able to go with you," Fu lamented.

"Don't worry, girl, he has Kiba and I do cover his back," Tamaki confidently stated. "I promise you we will come back in one piece."

Fu forced herself to smile, and nodded. "I know. Please give that guy a punch or two on my behalf, okay?"

The three younger members of the Animal Squad nodded, before they followed the rest of their former classmates.

...

"If it wasn't for you two, I would be the new Sage of the Six Paths, and I would be leading this world to a new golden era of peace," Madara seethed, as his Susanoo continued to stomp on the Golden Avatar. "Resealing the Tailed Beasts on my own may take me weeks... months even! Making sure your deaths are as slow and painful as possible will be a very small consolation..."

The Susanoo lifted its foot, ready to vent Madara's anger on the screaming teens once again. The chakra came down, and then...

"Shinra Tensei!"

Suddenly, the Six Paths Susanoo was pushed back by a gravitational shockwave. Normally, a shockwave of such power wouldn't be enough to move it, but given its precarious balance, it tumbled back several steps, but didn't threaten to fall down. Two emotions filled Madara, the first one being confusion at who else besides him and Obito had access to the power of the Rinnegan. The second being anger, at being interrupted when he was about to finish his prey off.

Enraged, Madara tracked the source of chakra of such attack, and saw a blond woman who placed herself between him and the fallen golden chakra construct.

"Don't you dare lay another finger on those children!" the woman bellowed.

Madara's glare pierced her, unamused. "And who are you supposed to be? Their mother?"

"Of one of them, yes," Tsunade said. "But that's not all what I am. My name is Tsunade Senju, and I am Hashirama Senju's granddaughter! And just like my grandfather did in the past, so shall I protect both my loved ones and Konoha from scum like you!"

Madara narrowed his eyes at her. Thanks to the Rinnegan's enhanced vision, he could make most of the woman's facial features despite how far she was from him. And one thing that drew his attention were those light brown eyes of her. They weren't Hashirama's, but for some reason, they felt familiar to the rogue Uchiha. Then, a memory of the two white haired kids that tried to fight him a few days ago sprung to mind, and the connection was made.

"Oh, I see. So you're the mother of that pair of brats as well, aren't you?" Madara asked. "The ones with white hair. Tell me, woman, do you have any of your kids extraordinary abilities?"

"No, but I don't need Wood Release or an extreme affinity to nature energy to fight you," Tsunade confidently said, as she placed her hands on her hips. "Especially when I'm not fighting you alone."

"Yasaka Magatama!"

"Susanoo: Tsukumo!"

A barrage of green chakra needles as well as red magatama-like projectiles crashed against Madara's Six Path Susanoo. The impact and subsequent explosions didn't do much, but the red and green Susanoos that tackled it in tandem after that managed to push it back, much to Madara's surprise.

"You two again?" Madara said, glaring at Itachi and Shisui, as a look of irritation spread across his face. "You already had your chance to prove your mettle against me on multiple occasions. This fight goes beyond your pathetic level of power and skill!"

"Yeah, excuse us if we disagree on that," Shisui snarked.

Madara snarled, and made his Six Paths Susanoo to slam its fists on each of the opposing chakra constructs, forcing them to release it. Itachi and Shisui's Susanoos stumbled back, but remained firm. The Six Paths Susanoo created a sword of lightning, and swung it down towards Shisui's Senjutsu Susanoo. Shisui's Susanoo summoned its trusty drill-spear while Itachi's Susanoo unsheathed its Sword of Totsuka, and the two of them parried the incoming blow at once.

There was a sonic boom when the chakra weapons clashed, and the Uchiha cousins winced as they felt how their chakra constructs sunk into the ground a little. Madara lifted the lightning sword again, though rather than parrying, Itachi and Shisui decided to dodge by jumping to the sides. The sword hit the ground instead, releasing yet another slash of chakra that cracked the earth as it traveled forward.

"Regardless of my bravado, Madara is right. We're way above our heads trying to fight him. Then again, we aren't fighting to win," Shisui thought.

While Madara was focused on the Uchiha cousins and Tsunade, he didn't notice Hanabi flying just above him. The young Hyuga cancelled the flight, allowing gravity to get a hold of her as she quickly manifested the Avatar of Kalika, the magenta chakra construct landing on the back of the Six Paths Susanoo, wrapping two of its arms around the Susanoo's neck while using its two free hands to smash its head open. Or trying to smash it open.

"This is for the beating you gave me before! And the beating you gave my teammates!" Hanabi shouted, as she vented all the anger she had gathered inside her. "And my sister too!"

"So you've decided to come out at all once. Very well then! If you're so eager to die, then I'll be more than happy to oblige!" Madara said, as he tried to get Hanabi out of his Susanoo's back, while Itachi and Shisui's Susanoos continued to attack him from the sides.

...

Naruto and Hinata watched as the Tsunade, the Uchiha cousins, and Hanabi engaged Madara, buying them some reprieve from the brutal beating they were getting.

"What... what are they doing?" Hinata asked in horror. "They're not match for Madara! He's going to kill all of them! Hanabi-chan, get out of here!"

"Hinata, calm down!" Naruto said, squeezing Hinata's hand with his own, in an attempt to reassure her. "I don't think they're trying to fight him for real, just buying us some time to recover."

"But-"

"There's no time to protest. We can't waste anymore seconds hesitating, or else they will be risking their lives in vain," Naruto told Hinata. The Hyuga clenched her jaw, but ultimately nodded. "Good. How much chakra do you have left?"

"Sadly, not much," Hinata said, looking down. "I believe between the two of us we could rebuild the Golden Avatar one last time."

"Alright, in that case, let's make sure that-"

"Hey, lovebirds, make some room!" a new voice said.

Much to Naruto's shock, Sasuke leaped inside the downed Golden Avatar, followed by Sakura and Karin. Then, Shikamaru, Ino and Choji joined them, as well as the rest of their former classmates, and Team Gai.

"What the... what are you guys doing here?" a confused Naruto asked.

"What do you think, dumbass? Lending you a hand," Sasuke replied. "Because it surely looks like you need one."

"Besides, Shikamaru has a plan to defeat Madara. But he needs all of us to work together," Sakura explained, before her green eyes drifted towards the people fighting Madara. "They're buying us time for us to get ready, so let's make it count!"

"Indeed. This chakra construct can be the key to beating Madara for good, but it needs some reinforcement first. Let's begin. Ino, link all of our minds!" Shikamaru ordered.

Ino nodded, and made a hand seal. Everybody could feel how their minds were connected towards each other, as if they were sharing a single brain.

" Done!" Ino said, their voice sounding inside everybody else's head.

" Good. Now we don't need to talk out loud and we can coordinate our movements much better," Shikamaru mentally said. "Sakura, your turn!"

Sakura nodded, as she brought her hands, forming the Tiger Seal.
"Ninja Art: One Hundred Healings!"

Naruto couldn't help but gape in shock upon seeing his former classmate using one of his mom's most powerful healing jutsu like that. Sakura's body started glow with a red aura, and black lines started to spread around the Golden Avatar, regenerating its missing parts and closing down its wounds.

" With this jutsu active, you won't have to use your own chakra to repair it any time it takes damage!" Sakura mentally said.

" But we're still going to need more chakra as well," Shikamaru added, as he looked at his hand. He smiled upon seeing the small cuts and burns he had gotten over the course of the previous battle quickly closed on their own. "As I imagined, the chakra of the Nine Tails also heals us as well. In that case, Neji, Tenten, Lee! You should be able to open the Celestial Gates without being afraid of the usual backlash! But open only up to the seventh one, we can't risk you guys dying."

Team Gai nodded in unison, and the three of them crossed their arms in front of their face before thrusting them to the sides in one swift motion.

"Gate of Wonder: Open!"

A bright green aura flared around their bodies as chakra poured from them like a torrent, channeling it towards the Golden Avatar, who was starting to get back on its feet.

" Good! Now, Choji, your turn! Use the chakra Neji, Lee and Tenten are releasing!" Shikamaru commanded.

" You got it!" Choji said, clapping his hands together. "Super Multi Size Jutsu!"

Choji, however, didn't grow any bigger. Instead, it was the Golden Avatar who was starting to slowly increase in size. While it was previously a head shorter than Madara's Six Paths Susanoo, it grew until it was now a head taller, about one hundred and twenty meters in height.

" Sasuke! Let's give the final touch!" Shikamaru said.

Sasuke merely nodded, and made a hand seal. His eyes glowed with a red glint as the Mangekyo Sharingan formed, and a deep purple aura washed over his body. "Susanoo: Majestic Attire!"

Purple flames burst at several parts of the Golden Avatar: the legs, its four forearms, its chest, waist and head, the fire quickly coalescing into pieces of armor, partially covering it in Susanoo. Aside from the armor, the Susanoo added an additional pair of arms, each of them holding a sword of chakra each.

Six Paths: Almighty Avatar of Konoha!

" Maybe Naruto-kun and I alone weren't able to beat Madara," Hinata thought, as her Tenseigan focused once again on the rogue Uchiha, who had finally gotten rid of Hanabi, her Avatar of Kalika lying on the ground, and was now pounding Itachi and Shisui's Susanoo with its bare fists. "But with all our friends fighting alongside us... we might have a chance!"

"Itachi, Shisui! Get the hell out of there! We're finished here!" Sasuke warned his fellow Uchiha.

"You too, Hanabi-chan! Thanks for your help, but now you should try to find a safe place to stay!" Hinata added.

It seems they heard the warning, as their chakra constructs disappeared, and the three of them, as well as Tsunade, vacated the battleground. At first Madara attempted to give chase, but his attraction was drawn to the Avatar of Konoha. He smirked in amusement.

"Look at that. You saw me, and decided to add some power to your own construct. The Susanoo armor looks really good on it, I must admit," Madara complimented. "Unfortunately, it will do you no good."

" Alright, here it comes. First phase of the plan: gauge how strong we are compared to Madara," Shikamaru said.

As the two colossi lumbered towards each other, the young Konoha ninjas braced themselves as the Six Paths Susanoo raised one of its lightning swords, and brought it down in a vertical slice. The Avatar's Susanoo arms crossed their swords in front of its face just in place to parry the blow, which produced a shockwave followed by a gust of wind and a tremor, but the Avatar stood in place.

The Konoha ninjas felt a little relief wash over them as they managed to past their first test. But it was only the first of many to come.

" Allow me to deal the first blow," Haku said, as he started to make hand seals. "Ice Release: Freezing Wave!"

One of the Avatar's feet started to glow with chakra, and from it a row of sharp ice as tall as the Avatar itself rocketed towards the Six Paths Susanoo, pushing it backwards and covering it in frosts, slowing its movements down.

" Yes, we did it! We finally caused that thing some harm!" Hinata cheered.

" I call dibs on the next move!" Tamaki said.

The Avatar spread its middle arms to the sides, and three long claws made of chakra grew from the back of its hands. The armored chakra construct then rushed forward, delivering a multitude of swipes at the Six Paths Susanoo, each swipes pushing the half frozen Susanoo a little back.

Madara, however, decided he had enough. With a flex of all the Tailed Beast chakra stored inside his Susanoo, he instantly repelled all the frost covering it, while pushing the Avatar of Konoha backwards. The Susanoo then slammed the opposing chakra construct, before rushing forward and deliver a series of punches, forcing the Avatar of Konoha to move backwards.

"Your steps are a bit better than before. But not enough to beat me in this dance!" Madara boasted.

"You haven't seen nothing yet!" Naruto said out loud, as he extended the two lower pair of arms to the sides, using their hands to form two Rasenshurikens, and mentally commanded Hinata and Haku to infuse them with elemental chakra. One of the Rasenshuriken took the shape of a spinning shuriken made of pure purple lightning, while the other appeared to be made of ice. "Lightning Release: Spiraling Thunderstorm! Ice Release: Spiraling Blizzard!"

As the two elemental shuriken barreled towards his Susanoo, Madara simply smirked.

"Impressive. But once again, you fail to realize the difference in power between you and me," Madara boasted, as his Susanoo started to make hand seals. "Susanoo: Fire Release Majestic Destroying Flame!"

The Six Paths Susanoo exhaled a gigantic stream of flames, that moved towards the Avatar of Konoha, incinerating the ground it touched to a crisp, until the wall of fire met the two elemental shuriken, both of them exploding into spheres of spinning ice and lightning. While the elemental spheres threatened to overpower Madara's attack, the Uchiha merely empowered his attack with more Tailed Beast chakra. The flames roared, burning brightly, as they finally managed to overpower the dual elemental attack, and continue its travel towards the Avatar of Konoha unimpeded.

" Water Release users, protect the Avatar!" Naruto commanded.

The command proved to be unnecessary, as Sakura, Ino and Haku were already weaving the seals of the same water jutsu.

"Water Release: Water Colliding Wave!"

A second before Madara's torrent of flames could torch the Avatar of Konoha, a massive vortex of water appeared around it, covering it in its entirety. The flames were put out the moment they crashed against the watery shield, but their heat was so intense that most of the water was instantly vaporized into steam, leaving nothing but a few puddles at the feet of the chakra giantess.

Deciding it was their turn to attack, Naruto used the Avatar to channel yet another Tailed Beast Ball. And just when he was about to toss it, the Susanoo arms launched a pair of chakra slashes at the sphere of destruction, combining with it.

"Tailed Beast Chaos Dance!"

"Another combination," Madara said, rolling his eyes. The Six Path Susanoo held up a hand, and lightning gathered on it, forming a very long spear. "Tell me, kids, did you know I was the one who pioneered that combination? You surely don't think you can use my own weapons against me." The Susanoo then hurled the spear towards the incoming attack, piercing it completely, and keeping enough momentum to continue forward.

"Shit!" Sasuke cursed, as he quickly summoned his Susanoo's shield-bow on the left arm, and used it to intercept the attack. The lightning spear connected, blowing up the shield completely, as well as the hand and part of the Susanoo's forearm, making Sasuke wince.

Fortunately, Sakura's jutsu also affected the Susanoo, which began to slowly regenerate its missing limb.

Rather than another ranged attack, Madara has his Susanoo barrel towards the Avatar of Konoha, tackling it backwards with a powerful shoulder slam, before summoning another sword to one of its hands, and delivering a diagonal upwards swipe.

"What the...?"

But much to Madara's shock, before the sword could connect, the Susanoo was frozen in place, being rendered completely immobile. Looking down, Madara could see that the shadows of the two colossi were now linked by a dark thread.

"Come on guys... !" Shikamaru urged, his voice sounding strained, as beads of sweat ran through his temples, as he struggled to keep his hands forming a hand seal. "I can't hold him for much longer..."

They didn't need to be told anymore, as the Avatar quickly lunged forward and delivered a set of punches and palm strikes with its six arms, pushing the Six Paths Susanoo a little back with each blow.

"Fire Release: Great FireBall Jutsu!"

"Sage Art: Lightning Release Thunder Blast!"

"Ice Release: Freezing Wave!"

From within the chakra construct, Sasuke breathed a massive fireball, while Hinata cast a storm of lightning bolts from her extended hands, while Haku did likewise with a wave of ice. The tri-elemental attack managed to cause some harm on the Susanoo, but nothing that actually lasted.

Madara glared at the teens inside the Avatar of Konoha. "I seriously hope that wasn't the best you have."

"Guys... I think he has a point. None of our attacks are leaving much of a mark on that monstrous Susanoo of his..." Hinata inwardly lamented.

"Just as I feared. Our power simply isn't enough to match him in direct combat," Shikamaru gravely said, However, his lips curved into a smirk that hinted this was something he had already anticipated. "That means that we will have to beat him through indirect means then. Everybody, let's flee to the sky!"

"On it!" Sasuke replied, as two purple wings appeared on the Avatar's back.

The chakra construct then turned around, began to flap its wings, raising powerful gusts of wind and started to fly into the sky, seemingly fleeing away from Madara. Or at least, that's what the rogue Uchiha was led to believe.

"You dare to oppose me, and now that you find yourselves outmatched, you think you can escape from my wrath!?" Madara asked, scowling deeply. His Susanoo leaped into the air, and started to give chase. "I DON'T THINK SO!"

Exactly as Shikamaru had predicted. In his rage and lust for blood, he didn't realize he was being led away from the trapped Tailed Beasts.

"Alright, he's following us!" Karin informed the others.

"But his speed is much greater than ours. He will catch us before we can reach the upper atmosphere," Neji added.

"Not good. We need to be as high as possible for the plan to work," Shikamaru said. "We need to do something to delay him a little!"

"I believe this is the moment when I step up to offer my assistance," Shino offered, as a swarm of beetles poured from under his clothes.

He made a single hand seal. "Aburame Secret Art: Giant Beetle Growth!"

The jutsu followed by a multitude bursts of smoke, and from the smoke emerged beetles as large as Akamaru, covered in a golden chakra cloak not unlike Naruto's Kurama Cloak, and dived towards the Six Paths Susanoo.

The swarm of giant golden beetles latched onto Madara's Susanoo, and bit on it viciously, slowly draining it of its chakra, forcing it to slow down.

"Do you think an Aburame trick is going to save you from me?" Madara asked, growing more and more angry with the way these impertinent brats were insulting him by using such ineffective tactics and skills. "Think again!"

Once again, the Six Paths Susanoo flexed its chakra, releasing a powerful pulse that violently pushed all the giant golden beetles away, allowing Madara to continue his chase. Of course, the beetles already did their job, even if Madara was unaware of it.

Eventually, the Avatar of Konoha reached the edge of the atmosphere. All its occupants gasped in shock at the breathtaking view of the Earth below them, and took a second to admire and appreciate how beautiful their planet looked from such an altitude. Of course, a second was all they could afford, as Madara's Six Path Susanoo quickly caught up to them.

"End of the chase, children," Madara said, already tasting victory. "Though, I must wonder, where did you plan to go? Were you thinking in fleeing to another planet? Not that it would be that bad of an idea, since there's no place on Earth where you could escape from my wrath."

"There were plenty of people next to the site we were fighting on," Naruto stated. "Here we can go all out without having to worry of collateral damage."

Even if that wasn't the reason behind the battlefield change, it wasn't a lie either.

"Of course. It shouldn't come as a surprise that ninjas indoctrinated in Hashirama's school of thought would care about saving unworthy lives," Madara said, rolling his eyes. "I guess I forgot about how Obito was the first time I met him."

"Saving unworthy lives?" Tenten repeated, her face morphing into a grimace of disgust. "And we're supposed to believe you want nothing but peace and good for the world?"

"Ignore him, Tenten, and focus on the fight," Shikamaru mentally told her. "Now that we have him where we want, let's bait him into expending as much chakra and power as possible!"

The Avatar of Konoha rocketed towards Madara's Six Paths Susanoo at the same time it generated a pair of swords on its purple Susanoo arms, ready to deliver a double vertical slash. Madara's Six Paths Susanoo created yet another lightning long spear on one of its hands, and raised it to parry the dual strike, which was unable to break through the parry.

While the two chakra constructs struggled against the other, the Avatar of Konoha cupped its four remaining hands together, summoning yet another Tailed Beast Ball. Madara, however, noticed this and had his Susanoo swat the nascent ball away with its free hand, before pushing the Avatar of Konoha back with a brutal kick, followed by a swing of the lightning spear, which broke the great swords when Sasuke attempted to parry it.

"Yeah, hand to hand combat is definitely not a good idea. Let's keep our distance," Shikamaru suggested, as the Avatar of Konoha floated away from the blue Susanoo.

Madara then made a single hand seal. "Limbo: Border Jail!"

While the jutsu seemingly didn't do anything, Hinata gasped as her eyes widened.

" Those invisible clones again... and he has summoned four of them this time!" the Hyuga said.

" Invisible clones?" Choji asked.

" An ability of Madara's Rinnegan, it seems," Naruto interceded.
"Those clones are as powerful as he is, and can't be seen nor detected through normal means. Hinata can see them with her Tenseigan, and I can sense them thanks to my Six Paths Chakra."

" While that sounds worrying, I don't know how those clones can be of any help in a fight like this," Ino mentioned.

Suddenly, four additional Susanoos appeared seemingly out of nowhere, flanking Madara. Fortunately, those were Complete Susanoo rather than Six Paths Susanoo.

Ino facepalmed. "Me and my big mouth..."

" Forget about it! Focus on the fight" Shikamaru told his blond teammate. "Here they come!"

And indeed, the four Limbo Clones, each inside a Complete Susanoo, barreled towards the Avatar of Konoha, each of them carrying a sword on one of its hands. Lion-shaped chakra shrouds that crackled with lightning appeared on the middle hands when they curled into fists, and three long claws sprouted from the back of its lower hands, mimicking Tamaki's bladed gauntlets.

When the first Susanoo arrived, sword ready to skewer it, the Avatar merely moved aside and decked it on its faceplate with a chakra lion-coated fist, sending it sprawling down. Immediately after that, a second Susanoo appeared, delivering an upwards diagonal swift. The sword strike was parried with one of the Avatar's lower hands, while it stabbed the three blades on the Susanoo's face, before sending it backwards with a kick to the chest.

Unfortunately, the Avatar was unable to dodge the third Susanoo, who slammed its shoulder against the Avatar's chest, reeling it backwards, while the fourth Susanoo delivered a powerful kick to the face, sending it flying backwards.

While the Konoha ninjas panicked upon taking not one but two fairly powerful hits, Karin saw an opportunity to help. She commanded the avatar to dispel the lion fists and to aim its hands towards the two Susanoos.

"Adamantine Sealing Chains!"

Two golden chains shot from the extended hands, and arced towards the two nearby Susanoo, wrapped themselves around them, pinning their arms to their bodies, and dragging them with the Avatar. Meanwhile, the rest of her friends worked on regaining balance, and once they did, the Avatar propelled forward, while the two Susanoo limbo clones were still dragged towards it.

Sasuke once again summoned two swords to the Susanoo arms, while some of his teammates channeled elemental chakra to the blades in order to increase their power. Once the two blue Susanoo were in range, the Avatar delivered a dual horizontal chop, leaving a trail of flames and lightning as they moved, obliterating their targets the moment the swords made contact in a storm of elemental fury.

" That takes care of those," Naruto said.

The blond could sense how his girlfriend panicked a little. "Yes, but now we need to take care of THOSE!"

Hinata pointed upwards, and they saw several perfectly round meteors falling towards them. Now they realized the Limbo Clones were just a diversion, and while they were fighting them, Madara used Chibaku Tensei to pull several nearby asteroids into several large meteors.

"Don't worry guys, leave them to me!" Kiba said, excited to finally getting his time to shine, as he commanded the Avatar to move towards the incoming meteors. "Fang Passing Fang!"

The Avatar of Konoha started to spin, slowly at first, but progressively faster, until it turned into a blurry drill of gold and purple. The ninjas inside, however, didn't spin with the chakra construct, remaining completely stationary, much to their relief.

As the meteors came closer, the spinning Avatar drilled through them, grinding them into small rocks and pebbles that burned up when they reentered the atmosphere. Despite the number of meteors the rogue Uchiha had created, the Avatar didn't lose any momentum and destroyed all of them completely, before it stopped spinning once there were no more.

Madara gritted his teeth, and clenched his fist in anger. Images of the green clad Konoha fool who nearly killed him destroying his meteors replayed in his mind, and felt his blood boil with rage. What happened next didn't help either.

"Is that all you have, old man?" Naruto taunted. "You're making me feel kind of bad over the fact that Hinata and I alone couldn't beat you on your own if you're so weak!"

Not happy with being the one responsible to undo his decades-long plan for world peace and unity, this impertinent brat dared to mock him? To call him weak? It was about time for somebody to give that loudmouth blond a lesson. With an angry grunt, Madara extended his hands upwards, creating a single marble sized gravity core.

"CHIBAKU TENSEI!"

The gravity core shot upwards, and began to draw asteroids floating around them towards it, forming yet another meteor. This gravity core, however, had been empowered with the combined Tailed Beasts chakra of all nine beasts, and thus its strength was much greater than the normal Chibaku Tensei, to the point that Naruto and his friends could feel the gravitational pull.

In a few seconds, the nascent planetoid drew enough asteroids to reach the size of the standard Chibaku Tensei, but it didn't stop there and continued to increase its mass and size at a continuous pace, as more asteroids kept slamming against it, much to the Konoha ninjas' growing discomfort and worry. It was growing so big that Madara needed to hold it together with multiple thick wooden vines created by Wood Release.

Once it was done, the Konoha ninjas were looking up to a meteor that could easily house the entirety of Konoha inside it.

"Naruto-niisan..." Karin stammered, as beads of sweat trickled down her face. "I think you did a too good of a job taunting him into going all out..."

Madara grinned savagely. "Maybe I should have done this from the very beginning and be done with it. NOW DISAPPEAR, YOU MEDDLESOME INSECTS!"

And with an arm motion, he send the gigantic meteor towards the Avatar of Konoha.

" Is that guy insane!? If a meteor that size hits the Earth from this altitude, it will wipe out the entire continent at the very least!" Sakura said in horror.

" That means we can't just dodge it then," Hinata added, trying to stay calm.

" It's okay, we don't need to!" Naruto said, trying to instill his friends with confidence. "Because we're going to stop it! This is going to be our winning move, guys! Now do as I say!"

Using the Avatar of Konoha, Naruto started to create another Tailed Beast Ball between its hands.

"Now, pour elemental chakra into the ball, quickly!" Naruto commanded.

Shikamaru, Choji and Tamaki added fire. Sakura and Ino added Water. Shino, Kiba, Neji and Karin added Earth. Hinata, Tenten and Sasuke added Lightning, with the latter also adding Amaterasu flames for good measure. Haku added Ice. On top of Wind, Naruto also added Lava, Steam and Magnet which he still had from the Tailed Beast shards within him. Eventually, the Tailed Beast Ball was bursting with elemental chakra, creating an incredibly unstable mix.

" And now, the final touch!" Naruto said, as he sent his own Truth Seeking Balls into the massive combination.

The black orbs merged with the mix, stabilizing it completely, resulting in a huge black sphere with a golden core, with blue sparks of lightning crackling around it, before it was finally fired towards the incoming meteor.

" Six Paths: Almighty Spirit Blast!"

The comparatively tiny sphere of destructive chakra slammed against the colossal meteor, struggling against it while slowly digging into it. At first, the meteor didn't appear to stop anytime soon, but little by little, it started to reduce its speed, until it stopped completely. Then, to the sheer joy of the Konoha ninjas, the sphere of destruction, now deep inside the meteor's crust, began to push it back towards Madara.

"Yes, yes!" Ino cheered, and clapped in joy. "We're going to do it!"

As the combined jutsu dug even deeper into the meteor, the gigantic mass of rock started to turn red, as streams of lava shot across the surface, forming small volcanoes, forming rivers of molten rock.

Meanwhile, Madara couldn't do anything but watch in both horror and sheer incomprehension how his ultimate attack was pushed back at him. And in his disbelief, he hadn't noticed that he had already spent most of the chakra he had drained from the captive Tailed Beasts, and his Susanoo was slowly reversing back to its Complete Form.

"How...?" Madara asked, as the burning meteor slammed into his Susanoo. "How can a bunch of brats could-"

The sphere of destruction inside the meteor finally detonated, producing a blast of fiery burning death twice as big as the mass of rock it was buried under. However, the joy of Madara being finally defeated was short lived as they realized that the explosion continued expanding, and in a few seconds, it would engulf them as well.

Fortunately, Shikamaru had already foreseen this as well.

"Hinata, quickly! Pull all of us towards you, and then form a protective shell around us with your Truth Seeking Balls!" he commanded out loud.

Hinata didn't have to be told twice, and did as Shikamaru asked, with Naruto using his chakra arms to help as well. As the fifteen teens were smashed against each other in a ball of tangled bodies, Hinata's Truth Seeking Balls began to form a sphere around them. They would be extremely uncomfortable for a while, but needless to say, if they survived it would be worth it.

...

Earth

Meanwhile, back on the site where the Ninja Alliance had fought the Ten Tails, the remaining members of the Alliance had their eyes locked into the sky, trying to discern the battle between Madara and the Konoha 15. However, all they could see were brief flashes of light of different colors, which they could assume were jutsu being thrown at each other.

Needless to say, the fact that they couldn't see if the Konoha 15 were winning or not was quite frustrating.

Then, the ninjas on Earth were blinded by a flash of light so bright and potent, the entirety of the sky turned white for a few seconds, blowing every cloud in the sky away. It was then followed by a pulse of chakra, and a deafening thunder.

"What... what the hell was that...?" Jiraiya asked, praying to whatever deity could hear him that it meant that Naruto and his friends had finally won.

"Hey, Fu, wait!" Jiraiya heard Rin's voice said.

Turning around, Jiraiya saw the former jinchuriki of the Seven Tails running away. Looking in the direction he was running for, he realized her reasons to do so, and chased after her.

Author's Note: And thus, the final battle is here! And yeah, I had Madara do the same thing with the Tailed Beasts Sasuke did in canon (the fact that he also trapped them inside planetoids should have been a pretty big hint), mostly because I liked it a lot. In fact, a good chunk of the final battle was also inspired by the final Naruto vs Sasuke duel as well, since it was a really good fight, at least in a vacuum.

The fact that the final battle would be Konoha 15 vs Madara was something I already decided even before I started to write the first chapter, and boy, you have no idea how happy I am to see this idea finally out of my mind. I know most of you expected the final battle to be between Naruto, Hinata and Madara exclusively, but I wanted to include the rest of the Konoha 15 as well. Not just because for the sake of it, but because it fits with the theme of love versus power. Besides, I wanted the two sides of the final battle to be as much foils to each other as possible: Madara is the last member of a generation long gone that stayed alive by unnaturally prolonging his life, the Konoha 15 are part of the youngest generation of ninjas; Madara fights alone, the Konoha 15 fight as a group; Madara only saw his associates as either minions or pawns, the Konoha 15 are genuine friends

Did you expect the Golden Avatar of Kalika to have yet another upgrade? Given the swell reception the Golden Avatar got, what do you think about the Almighty Avatar of Konoha? Did it improve even further, or did it ruin a perfectly good jutsu?

Those who played Ultimate Ninja Storm 4 can tell that the last clash between the heroes and Madara is inspired by the game's take on the final fight between Naruto, Sasuke and Ten Tails Madara.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

So, what did you think of the final battle? Are the Konoha 15 going to be ok? Is Madara really dead? Find out next Monday! In the meantime, don't forget to review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

The Konoha 15

Author's Note: I'm glad you guys liked the final battle so much. Though those who were wanting for more, you might be for a treat here. Enjoy:

Chapter 132:

The Konoha 15

or

The Last Dance

Site of the Battle against the Ten Tails

As Fu ran towards the falling Tailed Beasts, she couldn't help but feel weirdness at her inability to fly. Those wings might have not been part of her body, but for somebody who learned how to fly before she could learned how to walk, not being able to soar the skies felt...

... wrong.

She felt empty. Incomplete. As if something had been stripped off of her. Something very important. And in a way, she was right.

Thankfully, she wasn't foreign to running either. Even if she usually flew to any place too far away to simply walk, she was no foreign to running, given that running was the best way to build stamina up. And if there was something the green haired girl had in abundance, it was stamina.

The Tailed Beasts finally crashed down, producing a huge thundering noise, followed by a small tremor, while raising a huge cloud of dirt and dust. Fu's heart clenched, worrying for the worst. Could Tailed Beasts survive a fall from so high into the air?

However, as the cloud of smoke slowly dispelled and she could see some movement, she started to ease up. And then the calm turned to excitement and joy when she could finally see the form of Chomei, shifting along her siblings.

"Chomei! Chomei!" Fu cried.

Alerted, the giant beetle turned around, and saw her former human host.

" Fu!"

"Chomei!" she repeated.

Once she was close enough, Fu pumped chakra onto her legs, and leaped towards the Seven Tailed Beast with her arms spread wide open, as a few tears dropped from her eyes. Chomei spread her four upper arms as well, catching Fu in a hug just as she came close to her.

"Oh Chomei!" Fu cried, as she hugged the giant beetle. "I was so worried! I thought I had lost you forever!"

" You were worried?" Chomei asked, incredulous. "Girl, I'm immortal! What about you? I thought I had lost you ! You got me extracted out of your body, yet here you are, alive and kicking!"

"It's... well, I'm not really sure of what had happened, but I'm sure somebody can explain to me later," Fu said.

They stayed like that, just enjoying each other's company, as the rest of the Allied Ninjas started to gather and get close around the group of Tailed Beasts. Albeit not too close, given that many of them harbored some well founded fear that the Beasts might attack, even if they looked passive right now. Few of them, moved by curiosity, but still keeping some distance, dared to get closer to the almost mythical and powerful monsters.

" You know... even if we've been apart for less than an hour..."
Chomei began. "It felt like an eternity since I saw and heard you, girl."

"Y-Yeah, me too," Fu cried, her lip quivering. "Hey, Chomei... you probably will say no given that you're finally free, but..."

" Go back with you so we can stay together?" Chomei finished Fu's line. "Say no more, girl!"

Fu gasped, and looked at Chomei with sparkling eyes full of joy.
"Really!?"

" Of course! What are you going to do without me and my lucky charm?" Chomei said, and the two of them laughed.

" Unbelievable," Son Goku said, as the giant ape shook his head.
"For the first time in almost a century we're completely free, and you want to go back to that human girl?"

" Don't be so quick to turn humans down, Son," Chomei replied.
"I know our history with them isn't that great, but hey, maybe you just need to find the right human!"

" I think I'm going to pass," Son Goku said. Chomei merely shrugged.

"Son Goku," a voice said.

The Four Tails, surprised, looked down and saw the familiar redheaded old man that had been his living prison for more than four decades.

" Roshi," Son Goku said, trying to keep a maybe not friendly, but still calm demeanor. "What do you want?"

"If you're worried that I might want you inside me like that girl with the bug," Roshi began, and allowed himself to show a taunting smirk. "Well, I'm here to dispel all of your fears. I can assure you, the idea of having you inside my body again isn't something that I seek to."

" Heh," the red furred beast chuckled. "What do you seek then, old man?"

"This will be the last time we're going to see each other," Roshi stated. Son Goku didn't make any remark about how he's not going to miss the old man. "Our relationship was, to put it bluntly, awful. Except, perhaps, this final battle, when we finally fought as a team for the first time. Looking back, I realize that I could have made some things much better, but that's irrelevant now. I was given a second chance, and I don't plan to waste it."

" You're rambling old man. Can you stop fooling around and get to the point?" Son Goku impatiently asked.

"So rude," Roshi said, shaking his head. "Anyway, I just wanted to say goodbye, and, at least part on good terms. Or at least not on bad terms. So, what do you say?"

" Well..." Son Goku began. "Guess I could make you this concession, provided that you're being honest about not seeing each other again."

"You can trust me on that, Son Goku."

Son Goku nodded. "Very well then. Goodbye, Roshi. Hope you enjoy what years you still have left."

As Roshi and Son Goku talked, Gyuki appeared to be in deep thought. He blinked once before suddenly growing excited.

" I found Naruto!" said Gyuki's voice all of sudden. "I sense him to the west!"

" Yeah, me too!" Chomei added, followed by the rest of the Tailed Beasts agreeing as well.

"What about the others? Like Shino? Can you tell me if they're okay too?" Fu asked.

" I'm sorry girl, I can only sense Naruto, and that's because of a piece of my chakra inside him. I can't tell about the others," Chomei apologized. "Wait, can't you enter Sage Mode to try and sense them?"

"Hey, you're right! Thanks for reminding me of that!" Fu replied, as she jumped out of Chomei's embrace, landing on the ground, before sitting in the lotus position and closed her eyes. "Alright, let's go..."

As Fu gathered nature energy, her ability to sense chakra began to span little by little. She focused her attention to the west, and indeed, she found them. Naruto and Hinata were the easiest ones to sense, followed by the rest. And much to her relief, all of them were alive, even if they appeared to be close to total exhaustion, given their low chakra levels.

"Yes, I found them! And they're all right!" Fu cried out loud. "They survived the battle!"

Naturally, her good news were met with a round of loud cheers.

"Come on people, let's go and find them! They're heroes of this war, and need to be treated as such!" Jiraiya energetically stated, to another wave of cheers.

Fu was about to stand up and rejoin the group, until she sensed something that felt her blood freeze in her veins.

"No..."

...

Valley of the End

From the sky, an unidentified object fell. It was black with a slight purple gleam, perfectly spherical, of about ten meters in radius. Its falling speed was fast, almost looking like a meteor that threatened to wipe out the entire valley once it smashed against the ground. However, the closer it moved towards the ground, the slower its descend became, almost as if some invisible force was controlling it.

The sphere's velocity continued to decrease, to the point that the damage a violent impact would cause would be minimal. However, the falling object didn't even touch the ground, but stopped completely mid air, just a few centimeters above the ground, and stayed like that for a few seconds. Then, for seemingly no reason, cracks started to form and spread around the object, almost as if it was an egg ready to hatch.

But rather than cracking like an egg, it burst like a balloon, dropping its contents, fifteen teenagers, to the ground, resulting in a pile of entangled bodies and limbs.

"Ughhhhh..."

"Move! I can't breathe with all of you on top of me!"

"You guys are crushing me!"

"My leg!"

Little by little, the human pile of bodies slowly untangled themselves from each other, as they weakly crawled away. Some of them laid on their backs, and started to breathe heavily. Others sat down, and checked themselves for possible injuries. Others checked on their friends. And one of them found the strength to stay up, and check their surroundings.

"The Valley of the End," Sasuke said, his eyes locked onto the Hashirama and Madara statues that flanked the waterfall, the unmistakeable hallmarks of the place. Good, that means they weren't far away from Konoha or the Ninja Alliance HQ.

Another ninja stood up, this one Naruto. Though rather than checking the place, he was making sure his friends were okay. They appeared exhausted, and their levels of chakra were pretty low - especially the members of Team Gai, who were sprawled on the ground, as if they were in constant pain- but none of them appeared to have serious injuries.

Naruto sighed in relief. "Good, it seems they're all fine. Good job, Hinata-hime! You saved us from that explosion!"

Hinata was among those lying on the ground, breathing heavily. Upon hearing her boyfriend praising her, she merely raised a hand and gave a thumbs up, before dropping the arm again.

Naruto opened his mouth to speak or ask something, but was interrupted when a loud noise came from the sky. Almost like a thunder, but not quite.

"Naruto-kun, look!" Haku said, as he pointed to the direction the noise came from.

The blond turned around, and far into the distance, he saw the nine planetoids Madara had locked the nine Tailed Beast inside falling to the ground. They broke apart as they fell, revealing the Tailed Beasts inside them. The fall would probably be pretty painful, but nothing they wouldn't survive. A smile spread across his lips. If the Tailed Beasts had been released, it could only mean one thing.

Madara was finally dead.

They did it. They finally did it. The war was finally over.

Naruto let out an immense sigh of relief he didn't know he was holding, and plopped down as a wave of exhaustion washed over his body.

"Finally..." the jinchuriki said.

As the group caught their breath, Kiba dragged himself towards Tamaki.

"Hey," Kiba said, wincing a little. Even talking proved to be a little painful.

"Hey," she replied, sounding tired. Even then, she smiled at him. "What's up? You okay?"

"I little tired and sore, but that's expected. I'll live," Kiba said, trying to sound tough. His demeanor then sobered up. "Hey, Tamaki, remember when we were fighting those Ten Tails clones, and I said I needed to tell you something important, but you told me that it wasn't the moment?"

"Yeah, I do remember that," Tamaki said, smiling good naturedly, as she dragged herself towards him as well. "And I think this moment is much better."

Kiba chuckled awkwardly. "Well, that's nice to-"

The Inuzuka was suddenly silenced when Tamaki lunged at him and planted a kiss on his lips. While it only lasted a couple seconds, but it felt much longer for them. They finally broke the kiss, and stared at each other, their faces reddened, and breathing heavily. Kiba just started at her with wide eyes.

"So..." Tamaki began, wiping a strand of hair from her face. "Was that what you wanted to talk to me about?"

Kiba dumbly nodded.

Shino, who had watched the exchange from afar, merely turned their back at them, and adjusted his glasses.

"About time," he said, low enough for nobody else to hear.

While those who had witnessed the birth of a new couple congratulated Kiba and Tamaki, others meanwhile wondered what they were going to do now that the war was finally over. One of them was Haku, who turned to their unofficial leader for answers.

"Naruto-kun?" Haku repeated, as he walked towards him. "What are we going to do now? Should we return to Konoha? Or should we make our way back to the main army?"

Oh, right. They probably shouldn't stay much longer there. They all have friends or family wondering about their wellbeing. The fact that the Tailed Beasts have been released should tell them of their victory, but they should know that all of them were alive and well. With a little effort, he managed to get back on his feet.

"Okay, first of all... let's rest for a bit. A medic should check on Tenten, Neji and Lee, they appear to be pretty beat up," Naruto said. Karin quickly went to help her boyfriend and his teammates, followed by Ino. "If somebody can lend a hand to Hinata-hime it would be okay."

"No, no, I'm fine. No medic need to waste their attention on me," Hinata protested. "My body aches and I'm a bit exhausted, but I'll pull it off."

What Hinata said made Naruto realize something. "Oh, I almost forgot! If you guys need a refill of chakra, just ask! Remember that I'm an universal chakra donnor, and I still have plenty to spare!"

"Maybe you should come and give us a hand with these three, nii-san," Karin asked, before shooting her boyfriend a disapproving glare. "Even with the fox's regenerative power, opening up to the seventh gate and keeping it like that for so long did a number on their bodies."

"There were too much at stake, Karin. WE couldn't hold back," Neji protested.

"What he said," Tenten added. "Besides, if you want to blame somebody, blame Shikamaru. It was his plan after all."

"Hey!" the young Nara protested.

"Come on guys, Shikamaru's plan lead us to victory. To victory over one of the most powerful ninjas who ever lived," Ino said in defense of her teammate, before giggling. "That's going to look so great on our resume."

"Stop wasting time with pointless babble," Sasuke said, shooting a harsh glare at them. "We aren't done yet."

"We aren't done yet?" Sakura asked, confused. "Sasuke-kun, what do you mean? We've won! Madara is dead. The war is over."

Sasuke, however shook his head. "There's something you don't know. We need to find Madara's body and destroy it completely. Only then the war will be truly over."

"Madara's body?" Kiba asked, and snorted dismissively. Akamaru, lying besides him, whined a little. "I doubt that there's a body to begin with after that giant ass explosion."

"Yeah. Unlike us, he didn't have Truth Seeking Balls to use as protection," Tamaki said. "He's nothing but ashes now."

As Naruto spread some of his chakra around and the medics healed everyone, they started to get back on their feet little by little. Soon they would be ready to leave.

As Karin helped Tenten on her feet, she suddenly gasped, her eyes opened wide, almost dropping the girl on the ground.

"No way..." the redhead said, as her face turned pale.

"Karin? You okay, girl?" Tenten asked, raising an eyebrow. "You're worrying-"

"Everybody, ru-"

Karin was silenced when something exploded in the lake, producing a brief rain that showered over them, just as something leaped out of the water and landed on the ground with the force of a meteor, raising a cloud of smoke and producing a booming thunderclap.

Everybody turned around to the source of the disturbance. However, the other sensors followed Karin, looking at the cloud of dust with a mix of awe and terror, already aware of who was there.

"Did you really think... that I would be defeated... BY A BUNCH OF BRATS!?"

When the cloud dispelled, the members of the Konoha 15 could see a heavily wounded and exhausted, but very much alive Madara Uchiha. His Rinnegan eyes pierced them with an intense and hate filled glare.

"What?" Choji asked in shock, trembling a little. "How can he...?"

"There's no way! No fucking way!" Kiba protested. "You were engulfed by that giant explosion! No one can survive that!"

"Why can't this guy just die already!" Ino said, as she angrily stomped on the ground.

"I have to admit, that stunt you pulled on me was pretty clever. And for a group so young, you're unexpectedly powerful. For a moment, I believed I was truly gone. And that's the second time in a way too short span of time that somebody makes me feel fear for my life," Madara said, gritting his teeth. "But like that green clad fool, you also failed to kill me. And you will pay for it with your lives."

"Don't you dare insult Gai-sensei!" Lee angrily protested, as tears began to stream from his eyes.

"Yes! We will finish what he started, right here, and right now!" Tenten added, as she unsheathed a pair of longswords from a sealing scroll.

"Ah yes... the man had students..." Madara said, remembering Lee. "Don't worry. I can assure you, you'll be seeing your beloved sensei really soon."

Neji didn't say anything, and just scanned the Uchiha from head to toe, assessing his state. "His chakra is dangerously low. But it's slowly building up. I believe that with a cautious approach, we can kill him."

However, Neji himself and everybody else were also low on chakra as well. Naruto sharing his had been of help, but they didn't have enough for a prolonged battle. This needed to end as quickly as possible.

"He'll try to use the Rinnegan to steal our chakra in order to replenish his own," Sasuke informed, as he unsheathed his shoto. "That means you should be extremely careful with ninjutsu."

"The Preta Path also allows to steal chakra directly from the victim through physical contact," Naruto added. "So, let's try not to let him touch us for long."

Naruto tried to activate his Kurama Chakra Cloak, but when he tried, a wave of pain washed over his body, making him double down, as the chakra cloak flickered for a couple seconds, before it vanished.

"Naruto-kun!" Hinata quickly went to check on her boyfriend. "Are you okay?"

"I'm fine... just... shit, I have even less chakra than I thought..." Naruto said, as he stood up once again. "Kurama! I need some help here! Kurama! Can you hear me?" Naruto mentally asked, but got no answer. He could sense that the fox was still inside him, and he wasn't ignoring the blond. However, just like his, Kurama's chakra level was dangerously low. Naruto deduced he must have passed out. "Heh. Guess even a Tailed Beast can run out of chakra. We're on our own now."

"No plan you make, or any precaution you take will grant you victory over me. I can sense how exhausted and sore you are. And unlike me, your wounds won't close on their own and your chakra won't regenerate," Madara said, as he felt his confidence being boosted by those words. He brought his hands together and weaved multiple seals at a blinding speed. "Fire Release: Great Fireball Jutsu!"

Despite his low chakra, Madara cast a deceptively large fireball at the group of Konoha ninjas, forcing all of them to jump in different directions in order to avoid it, scattering across the area. Just as he expected. Now, he only needed to capture somebody with potent chakra to drain and replenish his own. Naruto was the most obvious target, and thus the one they would expect him to target. Fortunately, there was another Uzumaki among them, even if her chakra wasn't as powerful as Naruto's.

Pinpointing her position with his chakra sense, he aimed his hand at her, and let the jutsu bring it to her.

"Bansho Ten'in!"

Karin squeaked in shock as an invisible force quickly pulled her towards Madara's outstretched hand. More as a reflex rather than a deliberated action, a chain of chakra shoot from Karin's back, the redhead praying that somebody would grab it.

Fortunately for her, her prayers were answered as Choji and Tamaki managed to grab the chain and pull backwards with all the strength they could muster, yanking the redhead back, giving her an admittedly painful whiplash. Though not that she was going to complain about that.

"T-Thank you guys!" Karin stammered, as she adjusted her glasses.

Meanwhile, Madara saw how a green blur barreled towards him, raising his hand just to catch a powerful fist covered in bandages. Rock Lee continued his assault, delivering a flurry of punches and kicks that were either parried and blocked by the Uchiha. Despite this, Madara was being pushed back and was given no chances to attack.

Rock Lee fainted, but much to Madara's confusion, he didn't attack, but vanished before his very eyes. And just behind Lee was a living drill shooting right at him.

"Fang Passing Fang!"

All Madara could do in such short notice was to cross his arms in front of his face in order to block the Inuzuka's signature ability, which grind his arms drawing blood, while violently pushed him backwards, landing on his back. And as soon as he did, a large shadow was cast over him. The Uchiha watched how the bloated form of Choji Akimichi was about to crush him under his weight.

"Meat Bullet Tank!"

Madara rolled to the side just as Choji's spherical shape slammed into the group, opening a crater onto the ground. Choji, however, continued rolling at the long haired Uchiha, who continued onto the defensive. That's it, until a sudden feeling of paralysis washed over his body.

"Mind Disturbance Jutsu!"

"What...?" Madara asked, as his body freeze, as he sensed the source of the jutsu to a nearby blonde he recognized as a Yamanaka.

"I got him!" Ino announced. "Everyone, attack now!"

Not just Choji, but those who were close to Madara, being Kiba, Lee and Sakura lunged at him now that he was finally immobilized and defenseless. Or so they believed.

"Shinra Tensei!"

Madara released a powerful repulsive shockwave that not only pushed his attackers backwards, but Ino as well, breaking the annoying psychic jutsu. Some of those caught by the attack had been landed on the ground, while others had been launched into the water. Though, they were very much still alive.

"Five seconds until he can use Deva Path abilities again!" Naruto reminded his friends, as he lunged himself at Madara, Wind Blade in hand. "Attack now! Don't give him any time to breathe!"

"Of all the bullheaded fools I've met in my lifetime, none compares to you lot," the Uchiha said in disgust, as he generated a black chakra rod from his hand, and raised it just in time to parry a blow from Naruto.

"Well, these bullheaded fools are the one who are going to put an end to your reign of terror for good!" Naruto fired back.

As he and Madara continued to trade blows, he could see and feel small cuts opening on his skin, trickling with thin trails of blood, despite the fact that he wasn't being hit.

"That blade is made of wind chakra, which gives it a range greater than that judged by the eye. An interesting weapon. Did he create...? Oh, of course, I can't believe I didn't think in that immediately!" Madara thought, as a savage grin spread around his face, making Naruto uneasy.

They traded a couple more blows, until Madara feigned a fumble, allowing Naruto a clear opening to strike, which the blond naturally took advantage of. Just like Madara expected, as he held a hand protectively.

"You fell for it, fool! Gakido!" Madara said, as he created a wall of white light. "Even if it's not ninjutsu, I can absorb the chakra you're channeling through your sword!"

But Madara's face fell when, much to his confusion, he didn't absorb the sword of wind, but it phased through him harmlessly.

"What the... a genjutsu!?" Madara hissed, now tracking the source of the illusion towards Haku, standing at a safe distance from the battle.

"And you think I'm so stupid I didn't realize of that?" Naruto said, as he jumped backwards. "Hinata-hime, Neji!"

As Naruto disengaged Madara, the two Hyuga cousins appeared seemingly out of nowhere, and prepared to launch a flurry of palm strikes at their enemy, just as a thread of shadow quickly crept behind him. However, Madara expecting such an ambush and his fine chakra sensing allowed him to notice Shikamaru's jutsu.

"You're not catching me with the same trick twice! Asurato!" Madara yelled, as he jumped into the air, avoiding Shikamaru's jutsu. Two pair of arms burst from under his real ones. The new arms opened up, revealing a myriad of mechanical weapons. "DIE!"

The sound of shots being fired filled the air as a barrage of missiles and chakra blasts rained towards the Konoha ninjas, once again, forcing them to scatter in order to avoid the shower of death. A chain of blasts ensued as the missiles and chakra beams crashed against the ground, sending pebbles and pieces of rock everywhere, while raising clouds of dust and ash.

A barrage of shuriken flew out of said clouds towards Madara, filling the air with a high pitched whirring noise. The Uchiha, still airborne, used his black chakra rod to parry and deflect the incoming steel stars, but the lack of mobility meant that some of them managed to at least graze his skin, making even more cuts that would consume more of his chakra to close.

The moment Madara's feet touched the ground, his Rinnegan saw Sasuke rocketing out of the already dispelling clouds of smoke, gripping his katana with both hands, the blade pointed at the older Uchiha as he ran.

"Lightning Release: Thunder Blade!" as Sasuke channeled his power towards his sword, it started to crackle with electricity. "Try to absorb the chakra of this sword and see what happens!"

In response, Madara ran towards the incoming Sasuke, ready to meet him head on. Sasuke lunged his lightning sword forward, while Madara sidestepped, and let Sasuke's own momentum carry him closer, before Madara sank his improvised weapon into Sasuke's heart.

"One less pe-"

Madara's triumph was short lived, as "Sasuke" smirked, before exploding into a mass of beetles, buzzing angrily as they flew towards the rogue Uchiha, forcing him to fall back once again. However, before he could move any further, he sensed a little tremor at his feet, just a second before Sakura burst from underground, one of her fists winded back and glowing with chakra.

"TAKE THIS!"

In his compromised position, the Uchiha was unable to dodge and the fist connected. While Sakura's current low chakra meant that her punches were nowhere near as strong as when he was at her one hundred percent, the punch still packed enough power to send him flying into the air, leaving a thin trail of blood behind..

" Shit! Those insects were messing with my sensing ability!" the flying Uchiha realized, given that he should have noticed that Sasuke wasn't the real one and that Sakura was hiding underground.

Despite the pain that gripped his lower jaw, Madara tried to regain balance while mid air in order to fall on his feet. Unfortunately for him, his enemies didn't plan to leave him a single moment to catch his breath.

"Lightning Release: Multiple Thunder Palms!"

Guessing Madara's trajectory, Hinata flew into the air and intercepted the flying Uchiha before he could fall to the ground, and delivered a flurry of lightning-enhanced palm strikes to him, forcing to move her sore arms as fast as she could, before finishing the combo with a palm strike to the Uchiha's gut, which sent him barreling down towards the ground, pushed by a lightning bolt.

"Keep attacking! Don't let him not even a moment to rest!" Hinata urged.

Madara pushed through the pain and jumped back to his feet just to see Neji and Rock Lee charging towards him.

"Adamantine Sealing Chains!"

Before he could do anything, a chain of chakra appeared from behind and wrapped around his neck, leaving him unable to breathe.

"Well done, Karin!" Neji praised, as he and his teammate, now subordinate, reached Madara.

"This is for Gai-sensei!" Lee cried.

Madara tried to activate the Preta Path in order to absorb the chain made of chakra, but between Karin yanking him backwards and Neji and Rock Lee delivering a storm of punches and finger strikes, he was unable to. Pain started to build up as each of Lee's punches and kicks created a new bruise, and each of Neji's finger strikes closed a tenketsu down. He tried to fight back, but between Karin cutting his breath and Lee and Neji's merciless beatdown, he was helpless.

"SHINRA TENSEI!"

Once again, Madara was forced to resort to one of his most powerful Rinnegan jutsu to get those pests away from him. He didn't need his eyes or chakra sensing to realize that his enemies were expecting that, and were going to take advantage of the five second window in order to come at him with all what they had. That's why he needed to be faster and attack before they did. In less than a second, his hands blurred through several hand seals.

"Wood Release: Deep Forest Bloom!"

Large green vines burst from both the ground and the water, covering a good chunk of the battlefield in green -albeit Sasuke could notice that this attack was much smaller in scale as the one Madara had used against the Second Division, probably due his lower chakra levels-. Flowers quickly sprouted around the vines, and began to pump clouds of yellow pollen into the air.

"Don't breathe that!" Sasuke warned, as he covered his mouth with his forearm. "You'll be knocked out if you do! Destroy those flowers!"

Sasuke channeled chakra through his sword, setting it on fire, before dashing towards a nearby flower, and destroying it with a vertical slash. The others also focused their attention on the flowers, following Sasuke's advice, and tried to destroy them as fast as they could.

"No matter the time or the situation, people always seem to think that mere flowers are something more dangerous than me," Madara said, as he dashed towards Shino, who was directing his swarm to a nearby flower.

However, before Madara could reach the Aburame, he was intercepted by the least likely of adversaries: two small balls of fur that attempted to slash his exposed skin, before he swatted them back.

"What the... cats?" the rogue Uchiha asked in confusion, upon seeing the two small felines in front of him, one dressed in a blue kimono, the other in a red one, hissing angrily at him. "I see. Ninja cats. But who-"

"Feline Aerial Bomber!"

That moment of distraction was all what Tamaki needed, who leaped towards Madara, ready to smash him with her rear. However, Madara was able to catch her by her legs just before the attack could connect, and tossed her back. Tamaki made a backflip mid air, landing on all fours, before lunging at Madara, ready to slash him with her bladed gauntlets.

"And a girl who fights like a cat," Madara deadpanned, as he parried her blows with his black chakra rod.

All of sudden, Madara disengaged Tamaki and backflipped away from her just in time to avoid Akamaru leaping at him, ready to bite his throat off, as well as Kiba, who attempted to skewer him with a pair of kunai.

And while Madara fought, another of the Konoha ninjas was preparing a way to counter Madara's latest jutsu in a single blow.

"I think can counter this attack on my own! Brace yourselves, though!" Haku said, as he started to make hand seals. "Ice Release: Walking Winter!"

A white aura flared around Haku. Cold wind started to blow from Haku's position, a layer of frost started to spread around him, while the air started to condense into a frigid fog. His friends shuddered as the cold wind started to spread, but they endured. Soon, the vines and flowers fell victim to the ever spreading cold, as frost gathered around them, killing them, and stopping the stream of pollen before they could build up into something harder to deal with.

"And I'm not done yet!" Haku said, as he kneaded more chakra, this time in front of him. "Ice Release: Crushing Glacier!"

Haku slammed his foot down, creating a row of rising large chunks of ice with very sharp edges in Madara's direction. While one would have expected Madara to try to absorb the jutsu, the Uchiha wasn't somebody that didn't learn from experience.

"I know what you expect me to react! And it won't work!" Madara shouted, and much to everybody's surprise, he actually ran towards Haku's attack instead of trying to dodge it.

Madara jumped towards the row of ice chunks, carefully avoiding its sharp edges, and run across them towards the surprised last member of the Yuki clan. However, before Madara could bridge the gap, a flying Hinata dived to intercept him, spinning on her feet as she moved.

"Heavenly Spin!"

Madara was about to jump over the spinning sphere of chakra, however, he felt a pang of pain inside his head as his body was paralyzed. Realized it was the Yamanaka again, he flexed his chakra to break the jutsu. However, Ino had already achieved what she wanted to do, and Madara didn't have enough time to get out of the way before the spinning sphere slammed into him, blasting him backwards, bouncing several times on his back, before he landed into the water.

Taking advantage of the situation, Haku quickly ran towards the lake's edge, as he started to make hand seals.

"I'll freeze him in solid ice and let him die of both sheer cold and lack of oxygen!" Haku claimed, as he slammed his hands onto the shore of the lake.

A sheet of ice started to quickly spread out as Haku began to freeze the water. However, before he could finish the jutsu, Madara burst from underwater with great force, raising a wave, sending chunks of ice everywhere, and knocking Haku backwards. The Uchiha glared at the Ice Release user with hate filled eyes, and dashed towards him.

"Haku!" Tenten cried, as she unsealed a pair of axes from one of her many sealing scrolls, and intercepted Madara in time, parrying his black chakra rod with one of her axes while delivering a swing with the other one, which the Uchiha grabbed with his free bare hand, drawing some blood. If the pain bothered Madara, he didn't show it.

Tenten released the axe Madara was holding before suddenly disengaging him and jumped backwards. Madara also jumped back just in time to avoid a guillotine kick from Rock Lee that came from above, hitting with such force it opened a small crater on the ground.

A spike of chakra alerted him from another attack. While he was mid air, he backflipped, landed on his hand, and twisted his wrist to spin his body and propel himself even further backwards, allowing him to dodge the shuriken covered in Amaterasu flames Sasuke had tossed in his direction. However, that was as far as he could dodge.

"Rasengan!"

In his compromised position, he was unable to dodge the blond's attack, who close the gap between them at an imperceptible speed, charging a sphere of destructive chakra in his right hand which he slammed against Madara's gut. The Rasengan exploded, blasting the rogue Uchiha backwards, his body spiraling mid air until it violently crashed against a rock wall with a loud boom, before finally dropping to the ground with a dry thud, alongside several chunks of stone that had broken from the rock wall.

The rest of Naruto's friends all landed besides him, their eyes fixed on the spot Madara's body had fallen, watching expectantly the result of the attack. Naruto didn't need to see them to realize that they were all close to their limits.

"Is he dead?" Choji asked.

Hinata shook her head. "If that was the case, his chakra would have disappeared completely."

And indeed, with a primal yell, Madara crawled back to his feet, pushing away the rocks that were half burying his body.

"Oh come on! What does it take for this guy to drop dead!?" Karin screeched, clearly at her wits' end.

"He can't be human... no normal ninja can withstand so much punishment, and still be able to go on!" Tamaki despaired.

"Human? Normal ninja?" Madara snarled, as he dragged his feet forward, while grabbing an injury on his side with one arm, the other falling limply besides his body. "You insult me, brat. Do you have any idea of everything I did, the risks I took, the lengths I went, to achieve all this power? The culmination of a work of several lifetimes! Do you really think that I'm going to let all that work be destroyed by a bunch of naive kids like you!?"

Naruto looked at Madara with pity, and shook his head. "Is power that important to you? To the point of sending the world into chaos and ruining the lives of thousands of people? Just so you can claim the ultimate power?"

"Spoken like a true child with no experience of the world's cruel nature," Madara spat in disgust. "You probably see yourselves as heroes, protecting your home and loved ones from the big bad villain. But here's the thing, brat: Good, evil, heroes, villains... none of those exist! The only division that exists is between the powerful and the weak! The former shape the world as they see fit, and the latter do nothing but lower their heads and follow what they're told. Power is the only thing that matters in this world."

"Well, I have to admit, that all the extremes you went for power paid off," Naruto said, earning a few odd glares from his friends. "You're, by far, the most powerful ninja who ever lived. Though I'm not sure how you'd measure up against Kurama's old man... I mean, the Sage of the Six Paths. He was a pretty tough guy from what the furball told me.

"Anyway, I'm getting off track. What I mean is... for all that power you managed to get, it isn't doing you any good. What do you have? A home? A country? Friends? Family? Anything to call your own? For all our weakness, every single one of us have all those things. And that's why you will never win against us, Madara. We fight for something greater than us. You fight only for your own. Hell, you might not even know what you're fighting for anymore."

"Ah, the virtues of love and friendship. You sound so much like Hashirama, you make me want to hurl," Madara seethed. "Yes, you probably have a lot of things you cherish. And one day, you will lose all of them, because somebody stronger than you will come and take them away from you, while all you can do is watch impotently. "

"Such thing already happened. I had to fight against people much stronger than I was who threatened to take away my friends and loved ones. And in some cases, they succeeded," Naruto admitted, as his gaze grew a little sadder. "But you know what? I'm not afraid of people stronger than I am. Because I know that I won't have to face them alone. And just like how I beat them, I will beat you too. Love might not be able to be used like a weapon, but it does bring people together. Because we might be weak on our own, but together, we can do anything."

Naruto wasn't expecting to convince Madara with his admittedly corny speech about love and friendship, but he definitely wasn't expecting to anger the rogue Uchiha to such point. His breathing was starting to become heavier and louder as his anger reached critical point.

"Hearing your words... makes me want to rip your tongue out and make you eat it!" Madara bellowed. "Love!? What's love worth!? Nothing! The love I felt for my clan didn't stop them from turning their backs on me! The love I felt for Izuna didn't save him from Tobirama's steel! BANSHO TEN'IN!"

Madara thrust a hand forward, and the blond was overtaken by a feeling of weightlessness, before being yanked towards the older Uchiha at an extremely fast speed. Despite the suddenness of the moment, Naruto was able to react, if barely, and made his favorite hand seal.

"Shadow Clone Jutsu!"

Several bursts of smoke obscured Naruto for a couple seconds, and when the smoke disappeared, a foursome of clones was around the original, all of them sharing the same momentum created by Madara's Bansho Ten'in. The clones managed to use said momentum to their advantage, and prepared to attack Madara. Muttering a curse, the rogue Uchiha took a few step backwards as the clones arrived. He grabbed the first one by the neck, and tried to absorb his chakra before another one reaching him, forcing the Uchiha to destroy the first clone, as he created yet another black rod from his palm, and used it to stab the second clone in his face, destroying it as well.

While he was doing this, Naruto and his two remaining clones launched themselves at Madara from different sides. Madara, however, was already prepared.

"Asurato!"

Under Madara's arms grew an additional pair, and with his four arms, he grabbed Naruto and the clones by the neck, choking them.

"Now give me that chakra of yours! Gakido!"

As Madara prepared to drain Naruto of his chakra, he noticed too late a small tremor under his feet. Just as Naruto and his two clones disappeared, the real Naruto burst from underground, and delivered a savage punch on Madara's chin, sending the evil Uchiha tumbling backwards. With his concentration broken, the extra arms disappeared.

" They were all clones!? How I didn't sense-" Madara began to angrily ponder, before he noticed something wrong with his chakra. A very small disturbance created by a genjutsu, so small he hasn't noticed it. He tracked the source of chakra towards the ninja with the Ice Release.

"Tenten, now!"

Gritting his teeth and ignoring the pain of his lower jaw, Madara regained his balance by making a backflip, and focused his Rinnegan eyes forward. And said eyes opened wide in shock upon seeing a mass of shuriken flying towards him, way too close for him to dodge. He instinctively crossed his arms in front of his face. Several shuriken embedded themselves into his arms and shoulders, while others passed by him leaving gashes that quickly began to bleed.

"Konoha Whirlwind!"

Madara felt a foot smashing against the back of his head, forcing his upper body to snap forward and dropping his guard. And as he did, his eyes saw Neji and Hinata in front of him, and rained a storm of palm strikes and finger jabs upon him, the attack perfectly coordinated so they wouldn't get on each other's way.

"Ice Release: Rising Ice Pillar!"

Hinata and Neji disengaged and jumped backwards as the ground around Madara quickly froze, before a column of ice shot upwards, launching the Uchiha high into the sky, screaming in pain. Choji rushed forward as he made a hand seal.

"Partial Multi Size Jutsu!"

Choji's arms grew to giant size, and used them to crush Madara as if he was going to kill a fly. Despite the pain, however, Madara was able to regain balance mid air, and prepared to counter Choji's attack.

"Asurato!"

Madara summoned the Asura Path's additional arms again, and used them to stop Choji's enlarged hands before they could crush him. Choji struggled to crush Madara, but the Uchiha's strength still matched his own.

"You'll have to do better than that. It seems that you also have quite a lot of chakra left, Akimichi. Gaki!"

"Fire Release: Great Flame Jutsu!"

"Water Release: Water Wall!"

As Madara prepared to absorb Choji's chakra, he was unable to stop the dual streams of fire and water launched by Shikamaru and Ino, respectively. The combo hit him squarely, once again sending him backwards. Karin took a step forward, deciding it was her time to act, and aimed a hand at the flying Uchiha.

"Adamantine Sealing Chains!"

A single chain of chakra shot from Karin's hand, quickly reaching the last remaining Akatsuki and wrapped itself around his body. Using her chakra-enhanced strength, Karin gave a mighty pull, sending the Uchiha flying in the opposite direction.

"Sakura, get ready!" the readhead said.

Sakura merely nodded, as she clenched her fist, a fire-like coat of chakra enveloping it. When Madara was about to reach her, the pinkette delivered a devastating haymaker at the Uchiha, slamming it against the ground with such force, it opened a crater. Before he had the chance to get up, Kiba rushed forward, followed by Tamaki, Shino and Akamaru.

"Our turn! Come on guys! Fang Passing Fang!"

"Cross Flash!"

"Insect Clone Jutsu!"

Kiba, Tamaki and Akamaru blurred past Madara, leaving even more wounds and gashes on his body as they slashed him, pushing him into a different direction with each strike. Shino and his two insect clones would also deliver punches, kicks and kunai stabs just before and after his teammates attacked. Then, they disengaged and jumped away as the sound of crackling electricity reached their ears.

"Lightning Release: Thunder Blade!"

Madara was so dazed and his senses completely numb by the constant pain that he didn't sense nor see where did Sasuke came from, before the Konoha-loyal Uchiha ran his electrified sword through his body, the steel piercing his flesh and the electricity paralyzing his muscles.

"URK!" Madara gurgled, as he choked on his won blood rising up his throat.

And finally, taking advantage of Madara's predicament, Naruto ran towards his hated enemy, Wind Blade in hand.

"Madara... your reckless pursuit and lust for power has caused untold misery and suffering to thousands of people across the continent... but you won't cause anymore pain! We will make sure of it!" Naruto said, as he channeled most of his remaining chakra into his Wind Blade, which glowed with a bright white light, before delivering an horizontal swipe at Madara's neck.

Madara's head was separated from his body, and fell to the ground, rolling for a couple meters before it lost all momentum. Sasuke then stopped channeling Lightning chakra through his blade and pulled it out of Madara's body. His headless body stayed on his feet for another moment, before it, too, slumped on the ground like a puppet whose strings had been cut, lifeless.

For a moment, an absolute silence reigned supreme, with only Naruto's heavy breath disrupting it. Naruto's grip on his Wind Blade faltered, dropping the weapon to the ground, before he himself fell on his knees. Sasuke dropped his sword and rushed towards the Uzumaki, quickly catching him before the blond could hit the ground. The rest of the Konoha ninjas ran towards him as well.

"Naruto!"

"Naruto-kun!"

"You got him, man! You got him good!"

All his friends quickly piled upon him, wrapping their arms around him -and eventually, around each other-, finally being allowed to revel on the sweet feeling of victory.

"Heh, thanks, guys. And hey, I may have delivered the killing blow, but I wouldn't have done it own my own. It was a team effort, " Naruto weakly said. "But, um, could you lessen on the hugs? You're making me kind of hard to breathe."

They muttered quick apologies as they removed themselves from the blond, until only Hinata was close to him -though in her case, Naruto wasn't bothered by her close presence for obvious reasons. As they moved away, the adrenaline of the fight slowly disappeared as pain and exhaustion made their way to their bodies, prompting most of them to just lie down and rest.

Surprisingly, Shikamaru was among the few with enough energy to still stand. He basically dragged himself to where Madara's decapitated body lied, though he didn't dare to get way too close to it.

"So, just to make things sure," Shikamaru began, shooting the headless body a cautious look. "The guy's really dead this time, isn't he?"

"Come on, there's no way he can survive decapitation," Kiba said, raising his hands into the air for added emphasis. "What's he going to do, regenerate a head? Or is his head going to regenerate a whole body?"

"Kiba, please, don't tempt fate," Tamaki begged, pinching the bridge of her nose.

"No, I can tell the guy's dead," Karin assured. "I detect zero chakra coming from his body. The fucker's death for good."

"My Byakugan can confirm that as well," Neji added.

"Yeah, I know the guy seems dead for good, but I wanted to make sure. After all, the bastard survived that gigantic explosion and falling back to Earth from so far into the sky..." Shikamaru said, shaking his head. "Anyway, we should seal his body inside a scroll for-"

"Amaterasu!"

Shikamaru yelped and jumped back as Madara's body burst into black flames. Turning around, he saw Sasuke, slowly walking towards him, wincing in pain at each step.

"Why the hell did you do that?" Ino asked, as she indignantly stomped towards Sasuke. "Didn't you hear Shikamaru? We could have learned a lot of things by doing an autopsy on his body!"

"Tell me, did you guys know how Madara cheated death the first time, despite the fact that Hashirama killed him, and Tobirama realized a months-long autopsy on his body?" Sasuke asked. All of them looked at him in confusion, as if expecting the Uchiha to explain. "Because the guy told me and Itachi when we fought him," Sasuke said, as he grabbed Madara's head, and tossed it to the black flames, to be destroyed with the rest of his body. "The bastard's waiting for us to make the same mistake. Except this time he isn't going to have a body he can return to," Sasuke said, before he abruptly fell to his knees, and winced. That last Amaterasu had taken the last of his chakra.

"Sasuke-kun!" Sakura said, as she rushed towards him, ignoring her own aching body.

"Don't worry, I'm okay," Sasuke wheezed. "Besides, there's nothing new we can learn from Madara's body that we didn't learn from Rin. They both went through the same rejuvenation process."

"I'm with Sasuke on this one. Hell, even if we could learn something new, it wouldn't be worth the risk," Naruto chimed in. "Let all of Madara burn away. He already came back from the dead once, and the less chances we give him, the better."

That seemed to finally put an end to the discussion.

...

For the next few hours, the members of the Konoha 15 stayed on the Valley of the End, resting, since they were too exhausted and sore to move.

Fortunately, they didn't have to. Eventually, Karin and Ino alerted that a large mass of chakra was heading towards them. Everyone assumed that it was the rest of the Allied Ninja Forces, assumption that proved to be correct as many ninjas wearing different uniforms started to appear on the edges of the valley, looking down at them. And much to their surprise, they could also see the much larger silhouettes of the Tailed Beasts as well.

As a multitude of medic-nin rushed towards the group of teenagers lead by Tsunade, they could heard a few murmurs coming from above, first an almost inaudible buzz, which became louder and clearer with each passing moment, making them realize they were cheering for them.

The medic-nin treated their wounds and restored some of their chakra, before loading them into stretchers and taking them away, prompting the rest of the Allied Ninjas to vacate the place as well.

The Fourth Ninja War had officially come to an end.

...

Despite the war was over, there were a few things to do before they could all go home.

The first issue was the last living Akatsuki member, Konan. While everybody agreed that her help had proved to be invaluable for the Ninja Alliance, others still wanted her to be punished. Eventually, while a full pardon wasn't going to be possible, everybody agreed for Konan to be extradited to Konoha, where she was sentenced to ten years of village arrest. Needless to say, Konan was more than surprised to see such a light sentence, given the magnitude of her crimes.

Next were the Tailed Beasts. It was decided that they would be the ones to choose their own fate. Matatabi, Chomei, Gyuki had a strong bond with their jinchuriki, they chose to be resealed inside them once again, as well as Kurama's other half. Shukaku, Isobu, Son Goku, Kokuo and Saiken were granted freedom to go where they pleased.

The same thing went for the resurrected jinchuriki. Yugito Nii rejoined her village, and so did Han. Utakata decided to move to Kiri for Hotaru's sake, while Roshi decided to continue his travels. At the very least, to complete his books. Then, he hinted he might return to Iwa permanently.

In Yagura's case, it was a little more complicated. Despite it was known that the way he ruled Kirigakure was due mind control, Mei was afraid that many people wouldn't be too happy with the idea of the former Mizukage returning to their village as if nothing had happened. Yagura himself seemed to agree with the sentiment, and told Mei that he would leave Kirigakure on a self imposed exile. His wife Aiko decided to accompany him. His son Dagura also wanted to go, wishing to take advantage of this second chance to connect with his father, but Yagura told him to stay in Kirigakure and focus on his career as a member of the Seven Swordsmen of the Mist, promising him to stay in contact and they would see each other from time to time.

With the last loose end tied up, Jiraiya's last act as the Supreme Commander was to dissolve the Ninja Alliance and return the villages that formed it into the independent powers they were before.

...

The next day, a mass funeral was held in Konoha to mourn for those who died heroically during the Fourth Ninja War.

Choji, Ino and Shukamaru were huddling together, crying for the deaths of Shikaku and Choza - the latter was a huge blow to Choji, since the now Akimichi Clan Head thought his dad would be safe on the Turtle Island.

Next to them were Hagane, Kaida and Hanabi, crying for the death of their beloved sensei, Tenzo, whose death was just as unexpected as Choza's.

Asuma, Konohamaru, and the rest of the Sarutobi Clan were crying for the death of Hiruzen, the former Hokage, who had died in the same battle as Choza and Tenzo. They tried to take a little comfort in Naruto's tale of how it was thanks to him that he and his two jinchuriki friends managed to escape from the Turtle Island.

And there was also Maito Gai. While his three students were crying plenty of tears for him, so was Kakashi, surprisingly enough. Not because he wasn't grieving for the death of his old friend, but because the silver haired Jonin had such reputation of a flippant that hardly cared about anything but his beloved dirty literature, it came as a shock to see him shedding tears, even if he did in a more silent way.

The war was over, yes, but it left many scars that would never heal completely.

...

A few days later, Gates of Konoha

Like it happened a few months back, Jiraiya was once again ready to depart for the Land of Iron, as another Kage Summit had been summoned. This time, by the Toad Sage himself. The reason for this was to plan the future of the Ninja Villages in order to make sure the Fourth Ninja War would be the very last Ninja War ever fought. This time around, however, he felt like only taking Tsunade with him, given that tensions were nowhere near as high as they were back then.

Speaking of her, Tsunade was not wearing the cloth patch that covered her left Rinnegan eye anymore, revealing not a Rinnegan, but a hazel eye, the eye that Tsunade had extracted and replaced with a Rinnegan. And true to her word, once the war was over she had the Rinnegan removed and her original eye re-implanted. The Rinnegan, alongside that of Obito's, was then swiftly destroyed.

Obito's body was still preserved in ice under one of Konoha's secret scientific research sites.

And just like then, many people had congregated on the gate to bid the Hokage a safe trip. Though there was a certain somebody who didn't look particularly pleased.

"You know, Hokage-sama, I must protest this decision," Kakashi began. "I'm sure there are other people better qualified and better motivated than me to fill your seat while you're away."

"Nonsense, you'll do fine," Jiraiya said, waving his hand dismissively. "I plan to use the Reverse Summoning and the Toad Portal to return to Konoha once we're done, so you won't even be filling my seat for that long."

"Why don't you appoint Naruto instead?" Kakashi suggested. "He's the one who wants to be Hokage. Plus that way he'd get some experience for the position."

"I asked him the same, but he said that I'm still 'too young'," Naruto said, making air quotes.

"That, and that you don't have enough patience to sit down and do paperwork," Tsunade interceded in a chiding tone.

"Plus I don't want to be accused of nepotism, you know," Jiraiya added, but his tone betrayed that that wasn't exactly a big reason behind his decision.

"I'm not going to win this, am I?" Kakashi asked, sighing in defeat.

"Come on, sensei, you'll be a great Hokage!" Tamaki tried to cheer him, as she slapped his back.

"I'm with Tamaki here," Rin added. "Besides, our sensei used to be Hokage as well."

"I don't want to be Hokage. I never wanted to. That was Obito's dream, not mine," Kakashi protested. "You two better not take any detours once the summit is over."

Tsunade smiled cheekily at him. "We won't promise anything. Ready to go, Jiraiya?"

The white haired man nodded, and he and his wife turned around and rushed into the forest that surrounded the village. Once they were out of sight, the crowd started to disperse.

"I'm sorry you weren't appointed as substitute Hokage, Naruto-kun" Hinata said, as she and her boyfriend walked back into the village.

"Thanks, but don't worry. It's not that big of a deal. Like dad said, he isn't going to be out that long," Naruto replied.

There was a moment of silence as the two of them continued to walk, holding hands. Until Naruto decided to continue the conversation.

"So... how's your sister doing?" he asked.

"A little better now. She's going to need more time to completely move on, but she's getting there, little by little," Hinata softly said. "Your siblings?"

"Same," Naruto said. "I think they're doing a little better since they rely on each other. I was thinking in talking with Kakashi-sensei about their new Jonin-sensei, but I think they need more time before such thing can happen."

"I think that's the best to do for now," Hinata said. Then, an idea dawned upon her. "Say, Naruto-kun, while Hokage-sama and Tsunade-sama are out, would you like for you three to stay at the Hyuga Estate in the meantime? It would be good for Hanabi and your younger siblings to stay with each other."

"Are our respective younger siblings the only ones you're thinking about?" Naruto asked, shooting Hinata a sly smile.

Hinata blushed, but didn't avert his gaze, and met his smile with one of her own. "I admit I would greatly enjoy to have your constant company as well, Naruto-kun."

Naruto's smile broadened, and placed his arm around Hinata's shoulders. "I thought as much. Let's go!"

All of them would have an enjoyable and memorable stay at the Hyuga Compound, which would help them heal the wounds of the war.

And once the pain of those wounds finally subsided, a new era could finally begin.

Author's Note: Were you surprised that Madara survived the space battle? I mean, I did say that the final battle was inspired and modeled after the manga's final duel between Naruto and Sasuke. Said battle began with Naruto and Sasuke trading continent-destroying jutsu and taking their giant combat avatars to new limits, followed by the two of them sluggishly punching and headbutting each other in a rather unrefined fashion, and I wanted to do that as well with the final fight.

Though, worry not people, Madara is deader than dead for good this time, and he isn't coming back again.

Also, in case it wasn't clear, I'm going to say it again: just because Kakashi is filling in for Jiraiya while he's absent doesn't mean he's going to become the next Hokage. I never liked nor understood the point of Kakashi being Hokage, it added nothing to either his character or the story as a whole. Jiraiya will continue being Hokage until Naruto is ready to take the hat.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

Even if the plot is done, the war is over, the heroes are victorious and the villains are dead, Son of the Sannin isn't over just yet! We still have to see what the future has in store for Naruto and co. in the epilogue! In the meantime, don't forget to review! Reviews make me really, really, really happy!

Epilogue

Author's Note: And here we are. The very last chapter. Man, it feels so weird to be writing this knowing that this is where the story ends. It feels like yesterday when this story just began and I was planning (just planning, not writing) the stages of the Chunin Exams, and thinking about all the arcs that were going to come after that. Yet in the end, we went through every single one of them.

It was a fun ride, wasn't it? Now, let's end this story with style, and enjoy the epilogue:

Epilogue:

The New Era

or

So Long, and Thanks for all the Reviews

Thirty Two years after the Nine Tails attacked

Uzumaki Residence

Hinata blinked as the light that filtered through the windows slowly forced her awake. Suppressing a yawn, she looked at the clock on her bedside to check the hour. She scowled a little, before turning to the other side, where Naruto, her husband of more than a decade, was sleeping, seemingly unperturbed by the growing light.

"Naruto-kun, wake up," Hinata said as she gently rocked her husband, who stirred in return.

"Five more minutes..." the blond grumbled, as he rolled around, giving her his back.

Hinata sighed, and rocked him again, this time less gently. "Naruto-kun, come on!"

This seemed to work, as the blond finally opened his eyes, the lighting making him wince a little, before he looked at Hinata.

"Good morning dear," Hinata smiled, as she kissed Naruto on the lips, a kiss he happily welcomed. "Slept well?"

"Not as much as I wanted, but I'll manage," Naruto said, letting out an unnecessarily loud yawn.

"Today's the graduation day, so you better be ready," Hinata reminded him. She began to undress, removing her nightgown, and started to put on her underwear and her usual clothes.

Naruto mimicked her as well. "Hey, since dad's Academy reform, we had a one hundred percent team approval rate, so I don't expect any problems."

"Perhaps, but it never hurts to be ready, don't you agree?" Hinata asked. "Anyway, can you start preparing breakfast? I'm going to wake up the kids."

Naruto walked towards the kitchen-dinning room, passing a chest of drawers with multiple framed pictures. The oldest one was the picture of Naruto and Hinata with Haku and Kurenai from the day their team was formed. There was also a large photo of Naruto and Hinata the day of their wedding - Kami, Hinata was so beautiful that day, Naruto would always think upon seeing the picture-, pictures of their children, and lastly, a picture of Naruto with three young teens no older than twelve: two girls and a boy, both girls being black haired, one of them having spiky hair and red eyes, and the other having straight hair and onyx eyes, with the boy having short purple hair.

A few minutes later, breakfast was already on the table, with Naruto and two other kids sitting at the table. The first kid was a boy of twelve years old, who looked nearly identical to Naruto, blond and blue eyed, except that he had only four whisker marks on his cheeks instead of Naruto's six. Next to him was a girl, no older than ten, with dark blue hair, blue eyes, and four whisker marks as well.

"So, today's your graduation, Boruto. Nervous?" Naruto asked the boy, Boruto.

"Why should I be?" the boy asked, trying to sound flippant. "It's not that I'm going to start doing A-rank missions, right? Not that they'd be that difficult to me," he haughtily claimed, before deflating a little. "But I know what I'm going to be doing for the next few weeks."

"I know the first weeks of being a ninja aren't that great. I was talking about meeting your future teammates and Jonin-sensei. I certainly was nervous about meeting mine," Naruto confided.

Boruto just shrugged. "Whoever my teammates are, they're people I already know, so no big deal."

"Yes, but your teammates are more than just classmates!" the blue haired girl chimed in. "After all, mom and dad fell in love after they were put in the same team!"

"Exactly, Himawari," Hinata said, as she entered the kitchen-dinning room. She was carrying a toddler of a year and a half, a little girl with pale skin, the Hyuga pale lavender eyes, and most strangely, vivid red hair. She was happily sucking on a pacifier. "Though I was already in love with your father back in the Academy. Then again, I admit that being put on the same team helped the two of us come together," she said with a pleasant smile.

"Eh, I think we would have ended up together even if we were in other teams," Naruto rebuked. "Because I can't see myself being in love with anybody else."

Boruto rolled his eyes. "Come on, it's way too early for you to get mushy. Can you guys wait at least until I'm out?"

"Awww, look at that Urara-chan, your big brother doesn't like when mommy and daddy get loving with each other," Hinata said to the baby, as she sat her on a high chair. "But you don't mind, don't you?"

Barely understanding a word of her mother, Urara giggled at Hinata.

After the Uzumaki family finished their breakfast, Boruto quickly got dressed, grabbed his things, and headed for the Academy.

"Do you want me to give you a lift, son?" Naruto offered.

"Eh, pass. I feel like walking today," Boruto said, before leaving the house. "See you guys later!"

"Goodbye, big bro!" Himawari happily said.

Naruto looked a bit slumped by Boruto's rejection at first, but he quickly pushed those feelings aside, and got up from the table, and gave a kiss to the three girls. "I think I'll be heading to the office as well. See you later!."

"Goodbye, daddy!" Himawari said goodbye to her father in the same cheerful tone.

Naruto's body flickered for a second, before it suddenly vanished.

...

Uchiha Clan Compound

Inside one of the rooms of the large compound, a black haired girl of twelve years of age got out of the bed and began to get dressed. As she put on her glasses, the door of her room was opened, revealing a girl about two years older than her, with pale skin, long staright green hair than fell down her back, and the same onyx eyes at her.

"Hey, Sarada, time to- oh, you awake already?" the older girl asked. "And already dressed no less."

"Of course I am. Did you expect me to be late on such an important day, Naoki?" Sarada fired back.

The older girl, Naoki, just shrugged. "Hey, I just wanted to make sure you didn't miss your big day," Naoki defended. "Everybody else is already awake and having breakfast, so I wanted to check on you. Anyway, let's go."

As the two girls walked, Sarada couldn't help but shoot the older girl, her cousin, a glance of uncertainty. Naoki was Itachi Uchiha's daughter, and fate had her inherit not only most of his sheer talent, but she was also the wielder of two Bloodline Limits, a fact she often loved to remind everybody. Because even if Naoki had the same onyx eyes as Sarada's, the green haired girl's weren't the same: while Sarada had two Sharingan, as every other Uchiha, only Naoki's right eye had a Sharingan; her left eye hid a Byakugan, inherited from her mother Natsu.

Between her sheer talent and two Bloodline Limits, it was no surprise that Naoki's ninja career had been on the rise since the day she graduated from the Academy, becoming a Chunin only a few months after graduation on her first Chunin Exam, and successfully completing lots of B and A-ranked missions afterwards. This made Sarada wonder how would she compare against her older cousin.

" Don't think that. You already have your path set ahead of you," the youngest Uchiha reminded herself.

A few minutes later, the two girls arrived at the large dinning room, where true to Naoki's words, everybody was already there, having breakfast. Sarada took her usual seat, between her mother Sakura and Naoki herself. Next to Sakura was Sarada's father Sasuke, and next to Naoki were her parents, Itachi and Natsu. Next to Natsu was Shizune, Shisui's wife and Sasuke and Sakura's former Jonin-sensei. Finally, Shisui and Shizune's children, Shiro and Shizuka, were sitting next to them.

While they were much older than her, and thus less prone to comparisons, Shiro and Shizuka also had glowing ninja careers. The two of them were already Jonin, with Shiro working alongside his father Shisui as a high ranked officer of the restored Military Police, and not only Shizuka was an ANBU Captain, but her Jonin-sensei was no other than Naruto Uzumaki, the current Hokage.

"How lucky one has to be to have such a legend as your instructor?" Sarada wondered.

"Ready for today, sweetheart?" Sakura asked, smiling brightly at her. "Today you finally become a ninja!"

"And about time! She was the only one in the family so far who wasn't one!" Naoki laughed.

"Naoki, that's not a kind thing to say," her mother chided.

Naoki merely rolled her eyes. "Come on mom, I was just being happy for her. Now she'll experience the joy and thrill of what being a ninja feels like. Well, once she gets through a couple months of D-Rank missions, hehe."

"Even then, it's probably for the better if you don't put more pressure on Sarada. I'm sure she feels nervous enough already," Itachi added.

"Anyway, I heard that your father is going to be one of the Jonin-sensei," Shisui intervened, trying to change the topic. "Maybe you'll get him as your instructor."

"Highly unlikely," Sarada replied, as she adjusted her glasses. "Since it's forbidden to place an Academy graduate under a Jonin-sensei that's related to them." Sarada said almost as if she was reading from a book. Shizune opened her mouth, but Sarada didn't give her the chance. "And before you say how you were with uncle Shisui when you became papa's Jonin-sensei, you weren't married to him, so it doesn't count, aunt Shizune."

Shizune closed her mouth.

"I already know who my students are going to be, and Sarada isn't among them," Sasuke interceded. "Though, it's not that she needs me to be her instructor. I already give her plenty of training at home."

"Agreed. Nothing against you, dad, but I already see you enough at home," Sarada said, smiling a little so she didn't sound like she detested spending time with him.

"Since I'm going to the Academy today, do you mind if we go together?" Sasuke offered.

"Sure thing, dad," Sarada replied.

...

Hyuga Estate

In one of the rooms of the large compound, there were a pair of adults surrounded by a small army of children, no less than six of them, ages from two to nine. The man was tall, good looking to the point of being pretty, with long brown hair that fell down his back, and the usual Byakugan eyes. The woman was a redhead with long spiky red hair and eyes of the same color, sporting a rather large pregnant belly.

All the kids had the same eyes as the adult man. Some had the same red hair as the woman, while the others had brown hair.

"So, how are you feeling, dear?" Neji asked his wife. "Does your body still ache?"

"Ughhhhh..." Karin groaned, as she slumped on a rocking chair. "What do you think, asshole?"

All the kids gasped in shock.

"Mom said a bad word!" a little girl said.

"You'll have to excuse your mother. Her back was in a lot of pain tonight, and she didn't get much sleep," Neji explained their children. She then looked at Karin and smiled at her.

"Everything's okay here?" a new voice asked. Everybody turned to the door, and saw the Clan Head, Hanabi Hyuga, peeking her head through the door.

"Nothing you should worry about, Hanabi-sama," Neji reassured her. "Karin spent a bad night due her aching body."

"Oh. Sorry to hear that," Hanabi said, looking at the redhead with sympathy. "I'm kind of busy, but if you want, I can ask mom to take the kids away from you for a few hours?"

"That would be a blessing," Karin said, letting out a deep sigh. "Sorry kids, mommy loves you, but right now mommy needs time for herself."

Neji held her hand. "Don't worry, it will be over soon. I promise you this will be the last one."

"That's the same thing you said when Osamu was born, before making me another one," Karin huffed. "Once I get this thing out of my body, I'm grabbing the shears."

Neji laughed at her joke. Or at least, he was hoping it was a joke.

...

Yuki Residence

Inside the kitchen of a small but very cozy home, two girls and two women were having breakfast as well, each of the young girls looking like a much younger version of the two women, one who had her long hair loose, and the other had it styled in two buns. Though one of the alleged women, the one with the long hair, was actually a man, most people wouldn't be able to tell given his feminine appearance.

"Ah, last day of academy, finally," the older of the two girls said, as she ate her bowl of rice. She was twelve years old, and looked like an identical younger version of her father. "This day couldn't reach soon enough."

"Do you want to become a ninja that badly, Miyuki?" the only man asked.

"She wants to get me out of her sight, Haku," the woman replied, though she didn't sound resentful.

"What? Is not that you're too tough on her, are you, Tenten?" Haku asked his wife.

"No, she isn't," Miyuki was quick to point out. "But come on, do you know what it feels to have your mom as your homeroom teacher?"

"Was I really that bad? I always made sure not to say anything that would embarrass you in front of your friends," Tenten softly said.

"I'd love to have you as my teacher, mom," the other girl, the one who resembled Tenten more, happily said.

Tenten smiled at her youngest daughter. "I know you do, dear."

Miyuki gave her little sister a stinky eye. "You say that now, Fuyuko, but you'll change your tune once it happens."

...

Lee-Kurama Residence

When Yakumo woke up from her bed, she saw that her husband wasn't there. When she went to check on her children's rooms, they weren't there either. In fact, their beds were even made. Normally, such situation would cause no small amount of distress to anyone, but for the brown haired woman, it was normal. Her husband and children were early risers. Very early risers. Like, "waking up a full two hours" before her early risers.

Seeing the hour, she just went to the kitchen and started to prepare breakfast. After that, she peeked her head out of the window, as if expecting somebody to arrive. If her calculations were right -and they often were- her family would arrive soon.

Heralded by a trail of dust raised by the speed he was carrying, Yakumo's husband, Rock Lee, running on his hands arrived in front of the house, before leaping to his feet.

Rock Lee was always a source of inspiration for Yakumo, somebody who was able to make his dream of becoming a fine ninja in spite of overwhelming odds. After the war ended, the last bearer of the Kurama clan Bloodline Limit tried to befriend him in order to get to know him better. She first asked him help to train her body -even if Tsunade's treatments improved her physical condition just enough to pass the required medical exam, her physical condition still had a lot of room for improvement-, something the green clad ninja was more than happy to oblige.

As she trained under him and became stronger little by little, Yakumo and Lee started to grow close. She found how incredibly earnest and sweet guy he was, and romance quickly bloomed between them. Said romance was disapproved by the clan elders, since they felt that a man unable to use ninjutsu nor genjutsu would father defective children.

Not that Yakumo listened to any of their complains, and in a few years, the two of them were happily married.

Their son Metal Lee, wearing the same green jumpsuit as his father - but without the torn sleeves- quickly arrived, also running on his hands, looking much more exhausted. The boy was twelve years old, and had a very similar hair to his father, in both color and style.

A few seconds later, a girl, Yakumo and Lee's daughter, Tetsuko Lee, also wearing the same outfit as her brother and running on her hands, joined her father and older brother, and looked just as exhausted as her brother. She was three years younger than Metal and also had short hair, but it was brown rather than black.

None of her children had inherited her Bloodline Limit, but that didn't bother her. After all, said Bloodline Limit only appeared once every few generations. Besides, in her own experience, that was more a burden than a blessing, and she was sure that her children would be happier without it.

"Yosh! Today was a really good morning light training!" Lee loudly gushed. "Now, time for some breakfast!"

"Yes!" the two of them said at once.

"Also, Metal, since starting from today you're finally going to be a real ninja, your training will be more serious now!" Lee announced.

"I'm ready for it, father!" Metal excitedly said.

"If you're going to increase Metal's training, you should also increase mine!" Tetsuko protested. "Or else the gap between the two of us will get even bigger!"

Watching her husband and children's antics, Yakumo just shook her head, and chuckled. Yes, no matter what others might said, she would never trade this for anything else.

...

Inuzuka Clan Compound

Kiba and Tamaki stood in front of the compound's many kennels, the latter holding the former's arm. Behind them was Akamaru, laying at their feet, looking half asleep. The two humans were looking at one of the kennels expectantly.

Inside the kennel was a girl of ten years old, with long dark brown hair and red fang-shaped tatoos on her cheeks, and, strangely enough, a black and white kitty resting on one of her shoulders, checking the cream-colored puppies around her one by one. She would grab a puppy, watch it, touch it, even smell it, before putting it down and move to the next.

She did this many times, until she finally found the one she thought it was the one for her. Nodding to herself, she grabbed it and exited the kennel.

"So, did you finally choose, Tamiko?" Kiba asked the little girl.

"I did, dad," Tamiko said, proudly showing the puppy she choose to her father, then to her mother, before she placed it on her free shoulder, opposite of the cat.

"Congratulations, squirt! You just didn't choose a pet, but a partner that will fight alongside you during all your battles!" Kiba said, ruffling the girl's hair, who giggled in return.

"It really looks healthy," Tamaki smiled at her daughter. "Did you choose a name?"

Tamiko grew pensive, and hummed as she placed a hand under her chin. Then, her face lit up as a name dawned upon her. "How about... Riku!"

"Riku... that's a cute name," Tamaki said, nodding.

"Yes! Between Riku and Sora, no one will be able to stop us!" the little girl cheered, as she hugged her two animal companions.

...

Akimichi Clan Compound

Inside the compund's main building, a dark skinned twelve year old girl with spiky auburn red hair and a hefty build got ready for the day.

"Mom, Dad, I'm going to the Academy! See you later!" the girl said, and as she headed out, she grabbed a couple bags of chips, put them on her backpack.

Karui entered the room, saw the girl grabbing the bags of snacks, and shook her head.

"Chocho, we're going to have a feast later. Do you really need to take those to the Academy?" Karui asked.

"Yep! I need to eat to cope with stress, and today's going to be super stressful," Chocho replied.

"But the exam was yesterday. Today they're only going to announce the teams," Karui said, placing her hands on her hips.

"Exactly! That's why I'm so nervous! Who knows whose my teammates are! They could be a pair of jerks that make fun of my weight?"

"If you're so concerned about your weight maybe you should watch what you eat then," Karui deadpanned.

"Come on honey, let her," Choji said, as he entered the room. "Besides, if you're worried about the feast, I can assure you that she's going to still have plenty of space."

"See? Daddy gets me!" Chocho said. "Anyway, I better get going!"

...

Nara Clan Compound

Just like with the Akimichis, at the entry of the Nara Clan Compound a young boy with black hair styled in a ponytail and big teal eyes prepared to leave.

"Alright, time to go to the Academy," the boy said. "I'll see you in the afternoon."

"Shikadai, wait!" the boy's mother, Temari, called. Besides her there was a nine year old girl with shoulder length sand blond hair, wearing a purple dress. "You're forgetting your backpack."

"He doesn't need it," Temari's husband and Shikadai's father, Shikamaru, walked to his wife. "There's no coursework on the last day, they'll simply tell them the team formations, and then they spend the rest of the day getting to know his new teammates and Jonin-sensei."

"My teammates will be two of my classmates, so I don't need to get to know them," Shikadai pointed out.

"Shikadai-niisan also says that he knows who his teammates are going to be," the girl stated.

"Exactly, Kazane-chan. So no need to make a big deal out of it," Shikadai said with a shrug.

"Perhaps. But not your Jonin-sensei," Shikamaru rebutted. "I was pretty nervous to meet mine."

"Also, remember not to come too late. Tonight the four of us going to celebrate you finally becoming a ninja

"I won't. Anyway, I better get going," Shikadai said, before leaving the house.

...

Yamanaka Clan Compound

Just like her former teammates were doing at the same time, Ino was also bidding her child a good day at the Academy.

"... and remember Inojin, don't get too upset if you're put with somebody you don't get along with," Ino advised her son. "I'm sure that, as you work together, you'll eventually be on better terms."

"And if not, you can always ask the Hokage to put you on another team," a smiling Sai supplied.

"It's okay. I'm not worried. I get along with everybody in class," Inojin said. "Well, I should get going!"

...

Maito Gai's Park of Youth

Inside a large park surrounded by lush green trees, bogs and bushes, as well as many benches to sit down and swings and seesaws for children to play, a lone man stood, in front a statue in the middle of the park. A statue of the man the park was named after, giving a thumbs up and smiling energetically. Normally, there would be plenty of people enjoying the peaceful place, but given that it was early in the morning, nobody was there.

Nobody, except Kakashi Hatake. After the war was over, he no longer visited the Memorial Stone, but as soon as the park was made to honor the late Gai, he would spend a good chunk of his time there, just standing still in front of the statue.

"Figured I'd find you here," a new voice said from behind.

Kakashi turned around, and saw the only other living member of Team Minato. Rin Nohara had grown into quite a beauty. While still on the short side, she no longer looked like the young teen he remember unwillingly killing, but an actual woman.

Kakashi chuckled under his mask. "You talk as if you just unearthed a deep secret about me."

"Very funny," Rin said, crossing her arms.

"Though, I'm surprised to see you here," Kakashi said, turning his sight back to the statue. "Shouldn't you be in the Academy?"

"I still have time," Rin said. She then grew a little uneasy, and rubbed her arm. "Though... that's why I wanted to talk with you."

"Still doubting yourself, I see," Kakashi said. "I'd say that you're worrying over nothing and that you'll do fine, but I already told you that several times and it didn't work. Perhaps some reverse psychology should do the trick this time? Rin, you're an awful teacher, and you are going to become the laughing stock of all of Konoha's Jonin if you take a team of Genin, so save yourself the embarrassment."

Even if she wanted to protest, Rin couldn't help but giggle at Kakashi's jest.

"Is it working?" Kakashi asked.

"A little. I'm slowly feeling a fire inside me just to prove you wrong," Rin replied, still giggling.

"Glad I could help," Kakashi said. "But in all seriousness, you'll do fine. All of us worry over how well are we going to teach a new team, and in the end, we find our way. I mean, if Anko or I were able to do it, I'm sure you'll have no problem."

"Oh, right, Anko. I keep forgetting that she used to be a Jonin-sensei too. And to a trio of foreign ninjas!" Rin said in realization. "Hell, if Anko can do it, so can I!"

"That's the spirit," Kakashi said, smiling under the mask.

Rin turned around, ready to leave, but then he turned back at Kakashi, and with a sheepish expression said: "Please don't tell Anko I said that about her."

"My lips are sealed," Kakashi assured her.

...

Sarutobi Clan Compound

On one of the compound's several training dojos, a middle aged black haired man with tan skin was sparring with a teenage girl, also black haired, but with paler skin tone and crimson red eyes.

Watching them from afar, sitting on a bench was a middle aged woman, with long raven hair and the same red eyes as the girl.

Both the man and the girl were armed with trench knives, which they channeled wind chakra through in order to increase their cutting power. Their fight consisted almost exclusively in trading swipes and parrys with the aforementioned weapons.

Upon noticing the man's breathe becoming a little heavier, the girl smirked a little. "Tired, dad?"

The man smirked. "Yes. Tired of how you think you still beat me when you're so green, Mirai."

"Come on Mirai, don't underestimate your father," the woman from the bench said. "Your father might not be what he used to be, but he still has a lifetime of battles worth of experience."

"Are you calling me old, Kurenai?" the man asked in a taunting manner. "Because I need to remind you that we're the same age."

The woman smirked. "Women don't get old, Asuma, they mature."

...

Ninja Academy

Tenten was standing in front of the class, taking a look at the young ninjas who had been her students for the past year, as a small feeling of sadness gripped her soul over the fact that she wouldn't teach them again. She sighed, pushed that feeling to the back of her mind, and began speaking.

"First of all, let me congratulate all of you again for passing yesterday's final exam. It has been great to have all of you as my pupils, but from today's onwards, the ninjas behind me," she spread her arms to emphasize the adult ninjas around her, their future Jonin-sensei. "-will be the ones to continue your formation and development. As you probably know, you'll be organized into four man cells, three of you under the supervision of a Jonin. Without further ado, here are the team formations..."

Tenten unfurled a scroll and started to read the names of the teams, followed by the Jonin-sensei they were assigned to. As she read the names, those called would get up from their seats and walk to their respective sensei, and follow them out of the class. Little by little, the class was starting to grow empty as the teams were announced.

Despite looking cool on the outside, Sarada was feeling a little nervous. She knew all the people in her class, but there were some she would prefer to have as teammates over others. Her ideal teammates would be her friends and deskmates Chocho Akimichi and Sumire Kakei, but she knew the chances of them being in the same team were slim.

From time to time, she couldn't help but shot a glance at her father, who was standing among the rest of the prospective Jonin-sensei, and wondered who would be the lucky or unlucky Genin placed under him.

"... Close Combat Squad: Namida Suzumeno, Wasabi Izumo, and Metal Lee! Your Jonin-sensei will be Hagane Senju!" Tenten announced.

The two girls mentioned, one with brown eyes and hair of the same color styled in two long pigtails, and another, taller than the first, with short spiky dark brown hair and green eyes that looked like those of a cat got up from their seats and cheered.

"Yes! We're in the same team together, Wasabi-chan!" the girl with the pigtails said, as she hugged her friend.

"Guess they saw how well we work as a team, Namida!" Wasabi replied.

The two of them, as well as Metal Lee, walked towards their sensei, a man in his late twenties with brown eyes and short spiky white hair, before the four of them left the classroom.

" Lucky. The son of the Fifth Hokage, with a powerful Bloodline Limit, and a war veteran when he was my age," Sarada thought, as she quickly reviewed Hagane's record.

"Tactical Squad: Shikadai Nara, Chocho Akimichi and Inojin Yamanaka! Your Jonin-sensei will be Kaida Senju!"

"Called it," Shikadai said, as he and Inojin got up from their seats.

"Ughh..." Chocho groaned, as she dropped her forehead on her table. "Ino-Shika-Cho again. Do these people have any imagination?"

Sarada, who was sitting besides her, patted her on the back sympathetically. "Guess they're sticking to what it works. Sorry we can't be together in the same team."

"It's okay, girl. We can still hang out when we aren't on the job," Chocho said, as she got up from her seat.

"Look at the bright side. You know Shikadai and Inojin very well, so you won't have problems working with them," Sumire, sitting at Sarada's other side, tried to reassure while smiling weakly at her.

The newest generation of Ino-Shika-Cho walked towards their sensei, Hagane's sister Kaida, who like him also had brown eyes and white hair, except hers was much longer and styled into a single ponytail.

" Lucky Chocho, Kaida's record is as impressive as her brother's. Plus not everybody can have a Jonin-sensei with Wood Release," Sarada thought as she watched her friend greet her new Jonin-sensei.

Once they vacated the classroom, Tenten continued.

"Medical Squad: Sarada Uchiha, Hako Kuroi, and Mitsuki! Your Jonin-sensei will be Rin Nohara!"

As the three of them got up, Sarada eyed her two new teammates. She didn't know too much about Mitsuki, other than he was the son of a high ranking Otogakure ninja, and used to hang out with Boruto a lot. However, he was a pleasant individual and competent ninja, so she didn't have any worries about working with him.

Her other teammate, Hako, was a goth girl who wore a long, dark purple dress with a cape, and carried a rather creepy pink stuffed doll with her at all times. Sarada knew that Hako could animate the doll and make it fight for her. She was also proficient in medical ninjutsu, so her choice for the team wasn't that surprising.

Then there was their sensei, Rin. She was a Sage and a good medic, but her reputation as a girl who was brought back from the dead with Wood Release and a healing factor by the infamous Obito Uchiha overshadowed that. Well, Chocho wasn't the only one whose sensei was a living legend with Wood Release anymore.

Before they could leave, Tenten continued reading from the list of teams.

"... Assault Squad, Boruto Uzumaki, Sumire Kakei, and Miyuki Yuki! Your Jonin-sensei will be Sasuke Uchiha!"

"Aw yeah!" Boruto cheered, as he shot up and pumped a fist into the air.

" So, they assigned my dad to Boruto? Funny," Sarada thought, as he watched the excited blond walk down the stairs to meet her father. Following him was the purple haired, sailor fuku-wearing Sumire, and the brown haired Miyuki. Sarada guessed that, after the incident with the Nue, they wanted a powerful Jonin to keep an eye on her in case something similar happens.

Well, Sarada was happy for her friend. Sasuke was a tough but fair teacher, so she'd learn a lot under him. Plus she'd appreciate being in the same team as the boy she had a crush on. As for the other girl, Miyuki, Tenten's daughter, Sarada knew that her Ice Release made her a fearsome ninjutsu specialist, hence her choice as a member of the Assault Squad. Though she couldn't help but think how the fact that her father Haku and Boruto's father Naruto were on the same team, the very first iteration of the Assault Squad, wasn't a coincidence.

Sarada looked at her father, who introduced himself to his new students, and waved him goodbye before she followed her new sensei and teammates out of the classroom.

...

Uzumaki Residence, a few weeks later

As the door closed behind them, Naruto and Hinata got ready for an important day. They left Himawari and Urara under the care of one of the newly minted Genin teams for the rest of the day, given that they would be busy at least until nighttime. Even then, Naruto and Hinata were looking forward what they were going to do next, given that they were going to see a lot of people that they didn't have the chance to see that often.

While Naruto often favored more casual clothes for his everyday life, he was now wearing what he had dubbed his "Hokage Costume", which was essentially a long white cloak with red flames over his usual clothes -a look inspired by his biological father- plus the official Hokage hat. Hinata was also wearing a more formal attire: a light purple kimono blouse with dark blue floral patterns, combined with a dark purple knee-length skirt tied with a red obi.

"You ready, hime?" Naruto asked, offering his arm at her. "Our friends from outside the village awaits us."

"Of course," Hinata replied, wrapping her arms around his.

Naruto and Hinata flickered for a fraction of a second, before they vanished, reappearing somewhere else.

After the war, Naruto and Jiraiya had embarked on a lot of projects regarding fuinjutsu, making a lot of breakthroughs in the art. One of them was the rediscovery of Minato's Flying Thundergod Jutsu. It took them many years of research and trials, but they eventually managed to do it. Though given the power of the jutsu and the advanced knowledge in fuinjutsu required to use it, for the time being Naruto and Jiraiya were its only users.

They reappeared inside a domed building with a single room. Said room had a multitude of circular sealing arrays painted on the floor, similar to the seals that made the Moon Portal. And indeed, those arrays were bidirectional portals to another villages, born out of Naruto and Jiraiya's efforts in reverse engineering the Moon Portal. After that, they created a portal network that linked most ninja villages between each other, making traveling between villages much easier.

They still had noticeable downsides that stopped them from widespread use, such as needing to infuse them with a huge amount of chakra any time they needed to be used, hence they could only be used sparingly, and they were often saved for diplomatic visits and events. Such as the one that was going to happen in Konoha that same afternoon.

"Oh, it seems we're last," Hinata said, looking around. "Everybody else is here."

Aside from ninjas guarding the place, there were also many other people as well, who were waiting to greet the foreign ninjas. Among them, their former teammate Haku.

A portal started to glow with chakra, and from it, the Fifth Raikage, Darui, followed by Omoi, T and Killer B stepped out. Naruto and Hinata went to greet the foreign Kage, as well as Choji and Karui. Karui was wearing both a Konoha and Kumo forehead protectors, identifying her as Kumo's ambassador in Konoha.

Given the lack of tension between ninja villages as well as the Village Portals making traveling much safer, many Kages and Village Heads didn't feel the need to bring bodyguards with them. However, many, like Darui, brought some people with them not as a security detail -even if they were officially- but so they could see the friends they were now living in other villages, such as Karui.

"Raikage. Welcome to Konoha," Naruto greeted him with a smile.

"It's an honor to see you, Raikage-sama," Karui said, making a slight bow. She then went to greet her former sensei and teammates, engaging them in conversation.

"Thanks," Darui replied, tipping his Kage hat. He started to look around. "So, I'm the first to arrive?"

"So it seems," Naruto said with a shrug.

"Hey there Number Nine! I can see you're pretty fine!" Killer B rapped, as he fist bumped Naruto. "And Hinata, as you can tell, I'm pretty happy to see you as well!"

"The feeling's mutual, B-san," the Hyuga replied.

" And hello to you too, Gyuki," Naruto mentally greeted the Tailed Beast sealed inside his Kumo friend.

" Nice to see you as well, Naruto," Gyuki replied. Upon noticing that a certain somebody remained silent, he added: "Hey, Kurama, aren't you going to greet your beloved brother?"

" No. Now let me sleep in peace," Kurama grumbled.

" Heh, classic Kurama," Naruto thought, sweatdropping a little. He then addressed Killer B. "By the way, didn't Yugito come this time around?" Naruto asked.

"Sadly, Number Two is busy with a mission, since you know how she likes such expeditions," Killer B said with a shrug.

After exchanging greetings, the Raikage and his small entourage went with Choji and Karui to the Akimichi compound, where they would spend the few days they were staying in Konoha.

A few minutes after that, another portal glowed. From this one, Kurotsuchi, the Tsuchikage, emerged, followed by a couple of Iwa ninjas that Naruto didn't recognize, and one he did: a very tall man wearing a red heavy armor. He and Hinata went to greet them, as well as a kunoichi with short black hair in an Iwa uniform, wearing both a Konoha and Iwa forehead protectors, marking her as Iwa's ambassador in Konoha.

"Welcome to Konoha, Tsuchikage," Naruto greeted her.

"We hope your stay here is a pleasant one," Hinata added.

"Thanks. I'm sure it will be," Kurotsuchi replied.

"And hey, good to see you, Han!" Naruto said, shaking hands with the towering man.

"Likewise, Naruto," Han replied, nodding. "Roshi sends his regards, and laments that he wasn't able to come. A man his age tends to have health problems."

"Hey, no big deal. I can always pay him a visit once the Summit is done," Naruto replied.

"Then again, he's still in better shape than grandpa," Kurotsuchi interjected, sounding a little dejected.

"Honestly, it's amazing that that old coot managed to live that long," Han replied, earning a glare from the Tsuchikage. "What? I'm just saying what everybody is thinking. You know I'm somebody who minces his words."

Before Kurotsuchi could say or do something that he might regret later, she decided to get out of there and head to her hotel room, with her small entourage trailing behind.

Another portal activated. This time, it wasn't a Kage that appeared, but Shino, Fu, and a pair of children: a ten year old boy with spiky green hair, and a seven year old girl with black hair tied in two low pigtails.

Given how powerful she had grown during the Fourth War, Shibuki decided to step down and appoint Fu as the new Village Head of Takigakure. Shibuki's plan was to make Fu into the face of the village in order to improve its standing, while he took care of the administrative side of the job. His plan worked, and Taki received an unprecedented amount of customers, which brought much needed money to not only repair, but also improve the village.

Once the war was over, Shino and Fu continued their long distance relationship, though they put more effort into seeing each other in person. When Jiraiya started to appoint ambassadors to other villages, Naruto was quick to suggest Shino's name for the position of Konoha's ambassador in Taki, much to the Aburame's silent delight. Shino gave up his position as the Aburame Clan Heir and passed it to a younger cousin, and a year later, he and Fu married.

Shino survived the honeymoon without any broken bones, but he spent the next weeks walking with a limp.

Even if Fu wasn't a Kage, she was invited to the Summit. Given that ignoring the minor villages is what caused the walking nightmare that was Pain, the five Kages decided that the minor villages deserved to have a voice in matters that affected them, even if they didn't have as much influence as the great villages. Hence the Kage Summit was changed to Ninja Summit.

Naruto also extended an invitation to the Land of Iron, but the samurai politely declined, claiming not to want to get involved in the affairs of ninjas unless it was strictly necessary.

Naruto and Hinata, as well as Kiba, Tamaki and their daughter Tamiko walked towards the newcomers.

"Hello. Welcome to-URK!"

"Little bro!" Fu interrupted Naruto's greeting by pulling him in an almost literal bone breaking hug. Then, after noticing Hinata, she dropped Naruto, and gave Hinata another bear hug. "Sky sister!"

"Fu... can't... breathe..." Hinata wheezed.

" Your brat is just as a nuisance as an adult as she was as a kid, Chomei," Kurama chastised, annoyed at the commotion going outside of his seal that perturbed his rest.

" Fu is a very lively girl, and that's the best part about her! Why should I want that to change?" Chomei asked.

"Oops, sorry!" Fu sheepishly said, placing Hinata on the ground. "You know how happy I am to see you guys again!"

"We can tell," Naruto said, still wincing in pain, as he pulled himself back to his feet. He then saw Shino engaged in conversation with Kiba and Tamaki, while Tamiko was talking to the two kids. "Boy, Daisuke and Sawako have grown a lot since the last time I saw them!"

"Of course they have grown! They have a big mommy after all!" Fu laughed. "And their daddy is no slouch either."

While Shino had grown into quite the tall man, his wife still had a few centimeters on him. In fact, even if Naruto himself had also grown quite a lot, he had to still to look up to the green haired woman. Though, much to the blond's relief, the Taki leader hadn't grown any bigger since the Fourth Ninja War.

"So, where are Boruto and Himawari? I can't wait to see them!" Fu excitedly said.

"Boruto is on his first mission outside the village," Hinata said, making Fu deflate a little. "Though Himawari and Urara are at home, so you can drop by later to tell them hi."

"Oh, yes! I forgot you guys had another baby! I can't wait to see her!" Fu gushed. "In fact... Daisuke, Sawako, come here!"

Her two children quickly did so.

"Hey, did you hear that Boruto and Himawari have a little sister? Why don't you take Tamiko go and meet her?" Fu suggested. "I'll drop by once Naruto and I are done with all the boring grownup stuff."

"Alright, mom," Daisuke said.

He and his sister grabbed each of Tamiko's hands, quickly run out of the bulding, jumped into the air... and grew two insect-like wings out of their backs, allowing them to soar into the sky while carrying the Inuzuka girl. While it was obvious that Chomei had something to do with this new Bloodline Limit, others thought that their Aburame genes also played a role.

Once the greetings were over, Shino and Fu left the domed building, followed by Tamaki and Kiba. The Takigakure family would spend their stay in Konoha at the Aburame Clan Compound.

Another portal came to life. From this one emerged a trio of women decked in Amegakure uniforms. Naruto and Hinata moved to greet them, as well as Konan.

After Konan's sentence was finally over, she asked the new Amegakure leadership to grant her the job of ambassador so she could continue her work of better relationships between the great and minor villages, something that was granted without much fuss.

After the Fourth Ninja War, Amegakure sadly entered in a period of unrest and instability due Konan not being there to put order. The rest of the villages tried to help, but they didn't dare to interfere too much with their internal affairs, hoping that they could reach a solution on their own. During the first few years, Amegakure went through a multitude of leaders that didn't last very long in the position, most of them retiring.

"Greeting, Ajisai," Naruto told her. "I hope you find your stay in Konoha to your liking."

It seems that things finally were starting to get better when Ajisai, a woman Naruto's age who was one of Amegakure's most promising ninjas, was made its new Village Head.

Ajisai was a pretty woman with purple hair that she often wore tied in a messy bun. Her two escorts were also her former teammates: Fuyo, a girl with black hair styled in a bang so long it covered half of her face, purple eyes, who carried an umbrella strapped to her back, and Suiren, a woman with long, green spiky hair that emerged from beneath her bandanna, whose lower half of her face was covered by a dark blue mask, similar to Kakashi.

"If it's going to be like the other times, I'm sure it will be," the purplette answered. Then, she looked at Konan, and bowed. "We're honored to meet you again, Angel-sama."

Konan was tired of telling them not to call her that anymore, but they would never listen. So she simply replied with a mere "thank you, me too," and offered to lead them to the hotel rooms she had reserved for them.

Once the foursome of Ame kunoichis were out of sight, another portal activated. From this one emerged Mei Terumi, her husband Zabuza, and a truckload of children, making one hell of a racket as soon as they stepped out of the portal.

"Keep your mouth shut, you noisy brats!" Zabuza bellowed, and the kids instantly grew silent.

Unsurprisingly, Mei's clan wasn't happy when her firstborn daughter, Kasumi, was only born with Lava Release. Her first son and second kid, Satoshi, was born with both Lava Release and Boil Release. But just one kid with both Bloodline Limits wasn't enough for them, and they kept pressuring her to have more children, until finally her sixth and youngest kid, a little girl named Haruka, was also born with both Bloodline Limits.

The clan elders pointed out that one in each three children of Mei would manifest both Bloodline Limits, so if she had three more children, at least one of them was bound to have both powers.

Mei's response came in the form of a surgery to ligate her fallopian tubes.

Naruto and Hinata quickly moved to greet them. So did Haku and Tenten, who were patiently waiting for the Kirigakure leaders to show up.

"Hey there, Mei, Zabuza!" Naruto greeted. "It's so great to have you here!"

Mei smiled at the blond. "The feeling's mutual, Naruto. Hinata, it's a pleasure to see you too."

Hinata smiled and made a small bow.

"So, wasn't Utakata able to come this time?" Naruto asked.

"Hotaru-san is almost due any day now, so I don't blame him for wanting to stay close to her," Mei explained. "And before you ask, we got another letter from Yagura and Aiko a couple weeks ago. They just left the Land of Demons, and they're now planning their next destination."

"Good to see that they're doing well," Naruto said, nodding in satisfaction.

Haku then took the chance to greet his former master and his wife.

"Mizukage-sama. Zabuza-sama. Welcome to Konoha," Haku greeted them with his usual politeness.

"I'll never miss a chance to see you again, kid," Zabuza said, patting Haku on the shoulder.

"Uncle Haku!" Mei and Zabuza's oldest, Kasumi, quickly ran to her honorary uncle. "It's so great to see you!"

"The feeling's mutual, Kasumi. You look strong. Have you been training?" Haku asked.

"You bet! I told Kumori-sensei to increase the pace of my training. While mom and dad are busy with the summit, let's have a spar! I want to show you the new jutsu I've been learning!" the young woman excitedly said.

"I can't wait to see them," Haku said. "Perhaps you could also show them to Miyuki, given that she recently became a kunoichi herself."

Haku and Tenten lead the Kirigakure family out of the domed building. Normally, Haku offered Mei and Zabuza to stay at his house whenever they came to Konoha. However, the more and more children they had, the less of a viable option it became, and in the end, they had to resort to hotel rooms like other foreign leaders.

Once again, another portal glowed up. From this one, a small contingent of Otogakure ninjas emerged, lead by a white haired man that looked almost identical to Naruto's adopted brother Hagane: his clone created by Orochimaru, Hebimaru. While most of the Oto ninjas appeared to be escorts, there was a kunoichi with light green hair styled on two long bangs that framed her face, deep blue eyes, and a somewhat gloomy disposition who had her arms wrapped around his.

And once again, Naruto and Hinata went to greet the new party, along with Hebimaru's sister Hebiko, who was accompanied by Dosu, Zaku and Kin.

After Orochimaru's final defeat at the hands of his former teammates, Hebiko and Hebimaru took over the remnants of the fallen Sanin's forces, and they turned them into a legitimate ninja village in the Land of Sound. After a few years, Hebiko was sent to Konoha to act as Otogakure's ambassador. Dosu, Zaku and Kin started to work under her to make sure the alliance between the two villages remained strong.

"Hebimaru. It's great to see you. Welcome to Konoha," Naruto greeted the white haired man. "Looking good, Kagero."

Kagero Fuuma, Hebimaru's wife, merely acknowledged the compliment with a nod.

"Thank you, Hokage. I'm glad to be here," Hebimaru said, before turning towards Hebiko. "Hello, sister. I'm happy to see you. As well as you, Dosu, Zaku, Kin. May I ask where is your sensei?"

"Can't you guess? She went to Kiri to visit her boyfriend," Zaku answered with a snort.

"However, I'm sure she'll return before you'll have to depart to Oto, in the case you want to greet her as well" Dosu told him.

"Then again, if she's late, she can always come to visit. That's what the portals are for," Hebimaru said with a shrug. "By the way, Hokage, how's my son doing?"

"Mitsuki's doing great. He graduated with the rest of his class a few weeks ago," Naruto explained.

"Can we see him?" Kagero asked. "It's been quite some time since the last time we spoke to him."

"I believe he hasn't left the village, so I can't see why not," Naruto said. Kagero nodded once again, pleased with the answer.

"Come. I'll show you where you'll be staying for the duration of the summit," Hebiko said.

Hebimaru nodded, and he and his ninjas followed his sister out of the domed building.

And then, another portal activated. Naruto beamed upon seeing Gaara, the current Kazekage, accompanied his entourage, emerged from the portal. Of course, Naruto and Hinata wasted no time to greet them. So did Shikamaru and Temari -though Temari had to wake up her husband first, who had fell asleep slouching against a wall while they waited.

"Gaara!" Naruto excitedly said, as he greeted his old friend and formerly fellow jinchuriki with a warm hug. "Heh, I was worrying you weren't going to come."

"I may be a little tardy, but you you know I'd never miss such an important event. Besides, I always appreciate a chance to visit Konoha, and its wonderful people," Gaara said.

"Not to mention the hot springs!" one of Gaara's escorts, Yukata, happily chimed in.

"Yukata..." Matsuri groaned.

"It's okay. I'm sure there will be time for all of us to enjoy the hot springs once the summit is over," Hinata said.

Aside from his wife Matsuri, oldest adopted son Shinki and biological twin daughters Asashi and Kairi -who looked like small versions of Matsuri with red hair instead of their mother's brown-, they had also brought Matsuri's old teammates Mikoshi and Yukata, as well as his brother Kankuro and his wife Sari. Sari was a friend of Matsuri that she introduced to Kankuro while playing matchmaker. Much to her joy, the two of them hit it off and got married after a couple years of engagement.

"Hey there, little brothers," Temari greeted Gaara and Kankuro. "Ready to spend some time with your beloved big sister you don't get to see anymore?"

"No, but it's not like we're getting a say in that," Kankuro replied, making Temari fume.

Shikamaru let out a sympathetic sigh. "Man, he's going to pay for that comment so badly..."

After a few more exchanges of greetings, the Suna group followed Temari and Shikamaru to the Nara Clan Compound, where they would stay, while Naruto and Hinata stayed there to greet the leaders of the remaining villages that hadn't arrived yet.

...

Hokage Tower, Afternoon

Naruto walked at a hastened pace as he headed towards the Council Room, where the Ninja Summit was going to be held. He had tried to get some work done before it began, and didn't realize how much time he had spent swamped by the cursed paperwork. He tried to remind himself that it wasn't that late.

"So, you finally show up."

Slouched besides the double doors to the Council Room was Naruto's adoptive father and previous Hokage, Jiraiya. Despite a decade and a half had passed since the ending of the war, the Toad Sage didn't look a year older than he did back then, almost as if the Sannin was frozen in time. The reason, though, is that Tsunade was worried that if Jiraiya continued to age while she kept her true age hidden, the fact that she masked her age would be even more noticeable, so she pretty much forced him to use the same variation of the Transformation Jutsu she used to maintain her looks. Jiraiya wasn't a vain man, but he decided to humor his wife.

"You know, all of them are already there, and they're wondering when do you plan to show up," Jiraiya said.

Naruto cringed a little, and felt a bead of sweat trickle down his temple. "Oh boy... I didn't realize it was this late."

Naruto walked in front of the door, but didn't open it. He just took a deep breath, and stared at the door without making an attempt to open it.

"Nervous, kid?" Jiraiya asked. "This is going to be your first Ninja Summit as Hokage, so it's natural if you are."

"I know. Doesn't make it any better," the blond replied.

"Do you want me to go with you?" Jiraiya offered.

Naruto shook his head. "I'm the Hokage now. I have to do this on my own. Anyway, let's go."

Naruto entered the Council Room, greeted the foreign leaders, apologized for being late, and officially began the meeting. Seeing that he was no longer needed, Jiraiya left the place via Flying Thundergod.

...

Hokage Tower, Rooftop

Jiraiya appeared at the top of the Hokage Tower, where there was already somebody there. His wife, Tsunade, leaning against the railing, watching the village that sprawled in front of her. The place that has been their home for such a long time.

Wordlessly, Jiraiya walked towards her, and leaned on the railing as well.

"So, how did it go?" Tsunade asked.

"I think he has this under control," Jiraiya asked. "I wanted to help him, but he wanted to fly alone."

"He doesn't need us anymore, huh? Good for him," Tsunade softly said.

The two of them fell into a comfortable silence, as they admired the village beneath them. Most of the old buildings were now obscured by shiny, silver-white, tall skyscrapers. Asphalt roads covered what used to be pure dirt pathways. Airships slowly flew above the village below. Tsunade let out a sigh.

"I just don't get used to how much the village changed..." Tsunade began. "Remember the sorry state the village was when we arrived after the Nine Tails attacked? It's hard to believe that this is the very same village as before."

"The village? Heh, if that was the hard part," Jiraiya snorted. "I still need to remind myself that Naruto is a married man with children, and not that hyperactive brat we raised and trained."

Tsunade turned around, and looked at the Hokage monument, Naruto's face carved besides Jiraiya's. "Me too. It still feels weird to see his face on that mountain."

"And the same thing goes for Kaida and Hagane. I never pictured them as having their own Genin team," Jiraiya added.

"Yes. Everything changes and moves forward. And look at us. Looking the same way we did so many years ago," Tsunade said, with a chuckle. "Everything changes except us. The old fossils of a bygone age."

"Perhaps on the outside. But on the inside, I think we did change as well," Jiraiya said, placing an arm around her shoulders. "Remember when we first arrived? Neither of us were in a very good place. Until we got our heads out of the gutter, and started to work to make things better. For us and for everybody."

He then waved his other arm at the village.

"And this is the result," Jiraiya said, smiling at Tsunade.

"Still, I don't feel like this is our village anymore," Tsunade said with some sad nostalgia.

"Because it's not. Now this is the village of Naruto and the younger generation. Which, just like we did before, they will nurture and protect it before passing it down to their own children," Jiraiya explained.

"And where does that leave us?" Tsunade asked.

Jiraiya's smile was a savage one now. "That's the best part! We now get to enjoy the fruits of a job well done in our retirement! We play with our grandkids during the day, get wasted on the afternoon, and have plenty of bedroom fun at night!"

This drew a laugh from Tsunade, who grabbed Jiraiya's hand on her shoulder, while she rested her head on his own. Jiraiya laughed as well. "So, what we've been doing since the war ended? Well, it sounds like a good retirement plan. Say, how about if we drop by Naruto and Hinata's house and take their kids for a ride? I feel like spoiling them a little."

"You know, Hinata forbade us from taking the kids to casinos again," Jiraiya reminded her.

"Hey, there are plenty of ways to spoil kids. Plus, we need to do something with all the money we have, and I think it will be better spent on them than in slot machines," Tsunade replied.

"Guess I can't argue with that."

Jiraiya made a hand seal, and their bodies flickered for a second before they vanished from there.

The End

Author's Note:... and that's a wrap!

As you can see, the epilogue was split into two parts: the first one, which focuses on the Academy and the formation of the new teams, is to show what the Konoha characters have been up to since the war ended, and the second part, focused on the coming Ninja Summit, is to show how the other villages are doing. I wish I could have included more characters rather than merely mentioning them (like Anko or some of the revived jinchuriki) but the chapter was getting a little cluttered and I wanted to cover most of the bases.

I remember sometime ago that a reviewer suggested the idea of Naruto and Hinata to have a redheaded child on top of Boruto and Himawari, and I said, sure, why not?

Hey, remember how I said that my original plan for Yakumo was to introduce her as Kurenai's replacement, before I ended up scrapping it? Well, as part of her character arc, Yakumo was going to befriend and bond with Lee when the latter offered to help train the former in taijutsu, as well as their similar predicaments. Unfortunately, by the time I introduced Yakumo, there was no more time for such a subplot to happen. Still, I wanted to keep the couple, so I put an abridged version of what Lee and Yakumo's romance would have been had I written it into the story.

Since Shino no longer lives in Konoha, Tenten takes his place as an Academy teacher. Truth be told, I hated how both Shino and Tenten were treated post-war, with Tenten having a failing weapon shop and Shino having a job he sucks at. I always thought that Tenten could be a pretty good Academy teacher, at least when it comes to the practical side like hand to hand combat, shuriken throw and all that jazz. Plus hey, there's the whole thing with her mentoring Konohamaru in the Hanabi Gaiden.

Is it any surprise that I also ended up changing the teams of the new generation (minus Ino-Shika-Cho)? I don't know if I ever mentioned it here, but Sumire is my favorite character introduced in Boruto, so of course I'm going to put her in the same team as him. Though unlike Sakura, I actually like Sarada a lot, and if it wasn't for Sasuke being Boruto's Jonin-sensei, I would have placed her with Boruto and Sumire as well. I guess there's no surprise here that Konohamaru, Udon and Moegi aren't Jonin-senseis, given that the former is only mentioned a couple times in the story and the latter two not even that, so it wouldn't make any sense to give them such roles. There's also Hanabi, but I preferred other characters to be Jonin-sensei.

I hope you liked the little tribute to Gai's sacrifice in the war. He might be gone but won't be forgotten.

Now, a few things you may feel the need to ask about:

-Yes, Naruto still has Six Paths Sage Mode and a piece of chakra of the other eight Tailed Beasts, and both halves of Kurama merged into one. Hinata and Hanabi still have the Tenseigan.

-In case you're wondering, Naruto's students are Mirai Sarutobi, Shizuka Uchiha and Seiichi Gekko (Hayate and Yugao's son). Originally their sensei was going to be Hinata, but I felt that Naruto being a Jonin-sensei would make more sense (I had this idea that Jiraiya would task him to train a team first as a requirement to become Hokage, given that every previous Hokage minus Hashirama trained a team).

-Yeah, in the end I managed to salvage Mitsuki despite killing Orochimaru off. He's now the biological son of Hebimaru and Kagero Fuuma.

-Yes, both Haku's daughters can use Ice Release even if I only mentioned one of them having it.

-All of Neji and Karin's children have the Byakugan, but only some of them have Karin's ability to heal others by being bitten. Urara has the Byakugan as well.

-Iwabee Yuino and Denki Kaminarimon still exist and were in Boruto's class, but I didn't feel like featuring them since I'm not that big of a fan of them.

-If it wasn't clear, the stuff with Sumire Kakkei happen exactly as in canon.

-While some characters weren't shown to be in a relationship (like Hanabi) their status is more a "Schrodinger's Cat" kind of thing; just because I haven't mentioned a significant other doesn't mean that they don't exist.

-If you're worried about any character I haven't mentioned like, say, Iruka (again, I couldn't cover everybody), rest assured that they are doing okay and they didn't die offscreen.

And given that the story began with Jiraiya and Tsunade, I felt that it would be appropriate if it ended with them. Plus, since the chapter begins with one of the two main couples, Naruto and Hinata, it would be fitting if it closed with the other main couple as well.

Thanks to Ookami88 for betareading this chapter.

FINAL AUTHOR'S NOTES

And thus, after a long process that lasted more than four years, this story finally comes to an end. On one side, I feel relieved that this monster of a story is finally over, and I can now rest for a little. Seriously, I don't even remember what's to sit down in front of the PC and being able to relax without any writing commitment gnawing at the back of my mind. Though on the other side, I'm a little sad, given that I spent so much time working on this, and for the most part, I had a lot of fun writing it.

Looking back, I see many things that I'm very proud of (like Hinata's character arc), others that I could have done better (like the jinchuriki arcs) and others that I lament I wasn't able to do at all (like the aforementioned Yakumo arc). Though, if there's one thing I didn't regret doing, is the team formations. Or at least, putting Naruto and Hinata in the same team. Had I left the teams untouched (and put Haku, Karin and Tamaki on the same team) I would have to come up with something to switch Hinata and Sakura, because man, I REALLY love to write Hinata, especially with Naruto, while writing Sakura was always such a chore that filled me with dread.

Now, before you ask, I want to get this out of the way: no, I don't plan to write anything else related to this story, or even Naruto in general, so don't ask if I'm going to adapt Boruto, given that I exhausted my last Naruto creative juices writing this. Hell, I was basically writing the last arc while running on fumes, because I didn't want to leave this story unfinished when I was so close to the end.

When I began writing this story, I had many goals that I wanted to accomplish, such as a fully fleshed out relationship between Naruto and Hinata, patching many plotheoles from canon, Hinata getting the Tenseigan, saving Fu and giving her a big role, making Sasuke more likeable and giving him the kind of relationship with Itachi he never had in canon... and while looking back, I can see I could have done some things better, in the end I'm satisfied with the final result, so I don't feel the need to write anymore Naruto.

I know many of you wanted to see more things, like maybe this version's story of Naruto and Hinata's wedding, or the battle against Momoshiki and Kinshiki, but no, the story ends here, at least on my part. As you know from Hanabi Gaiden, I allow other writers to write oneshots/sidestories of this fanfic, so if you want to see the above mentioned events or even write a sequel, you can write it yourself. Before you discuss the details with me first, of course.

Even if I'm no longer going to write for Naruto, I do plan to keep on writing, since it's something I enjoy a lot. My next fanfic more than likely will be about the Pokemon Anime (Amourshipping FTW!), though I'd also like to write stuff for Star Wars, My Hero Academia and Miraculous Ladybug. Though, one thing is sure, even if I do plan to update my stories regularly, I'm not going to keep a regular schedule like with this story. Not only did it cause me a lot of stress and some friction with the betareaders, but I think I spoiled the readers updating so often and always on schedule. I don't want my stories to be taken for granted.

Thanks to my betas Grimlock987, gio08 and especially Ookami88, who betaread more than half the chapters of this story.

Also thanks to FoxBlueReaver, Darth Caesar, Gamemaster and Kagetsuki88 at TVTropes for keeping the TVTropes page of this fanfic always updated, as for their work on the amazing character page (I know other people contributed to the page as well, but those four are the ones that do more often and thus their names stand out the most).

Of course, thanks a lot to all the people who left a review on this story. Seriously, the fact that this story has literally thousands of reviews makes me super happy. When I started writing this, I considered getting more than five hundred reviews a success, so this went beyond my wildest dreams.

And lastly, even if the chances of him reading this are close to zero, thanks to Mashashi Kishimoto for writing Naruto. I know I criticized him a lot regarding plot holes, plot decisions, characters and the like, but even with all its flaws, I still think that Naruto was a great story and I wouldn't have written this fic (which I consider deep down a huge love letter to Naruto) if I didn't like and enjoy Naruto to begin with (and that's part of the reason of why I won't write a sequel covering Boruto).

I guess that's all. I know that some of you expressed sadness of seeing this story ending, but hey, it was inevitable. No story can last forever. It was either that, or being abandoned. Instead, take joy it was the former (I'm sure all of you already know how frustrating it feels when a writer stops updating their story for whatever reason). So I hope once you finish reading, you find at least some satisfaction and closure. Plus hey, I'm going to take your sadness as a compliment: it means that this story didn't outstay its welcome. At least nobody's saying "ugh, thank goodness it's finally over", which was my reaction to the Naruto manga finally ending.

Now, I bid all of you goodbye. Until we meet again.

SON OF THE SANNIN

Written by Ander Arias

October 11th, 2016 - March 24th, 2021

THE END

Thank you for reading!